Tornado victims recover; clouds threaten region

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

Perryton residents have begun efforts to aid family victims of a Wednesday tornado as more severe thunderstorms were expected over much of West Texas and Northwest Texas tonight and Saturday.

A severe thunderstorm watch covered northern portions of the Panhandle early today, and the National Weather Service said intense thunderstorms were moving toward Texas from southern Colorado and western Kansas.

Low clouds and high winds swept over the northeastern Panhandle region early today, with Pampa residents dodging blowing dust before rains came at mid-morning today.

Pampa meteorologist Darrell Sehorn said this morning that the storms should clear the area by late morning, but others could reform this afternoon. He said storms could continue through Saturday.

Heavy rain, hail and high winds were reported in storms north of Pampa this morning, with the storm systems sweeping southward.

In Perryton, residents have started a Vela Family Benefit Fund to help with expenses incurred by the family whose mobile home about a mile northwest of the northern Panhandle city was destroyed by a tornado about 6:20 p.m. Wednesday.

The tornado killed one young girl in the family and left three other family members hospitalized at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

Elizabeth DeAnn Vela, 18-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ramon Vela Jr., was killed as the tornado struck the isolated home. Services are pending with Boxwell Brothers Funeral Home in Perryton.

The girl's mother, Christina Vela, 38, was listed in critical condition this morning at Northwest Texas Hospital with internal injuries. Raquel Vela, 10, was listed in serious condition while Jose Vela, 12, was reported in satisfactory condition, a hospital nursing supervisor said this morning.

Another son, Rafael Vela, 8, was injured slightly and kept overnight Wednesday at Ochiltree Memorial Hospital in Perryton but was released Thursday morning.

Both Perryton banks — Perryton National Bank and First National Bank — have set up accounts to handle contributions to the family benefit fund. The money will help defray medical costs since the Vela had no medical insurance, a family friend said.

After the tornado struck, there was some confusion over whether it had actually been a tornado.

Ochiltree County Sheriff Joe Hataway said this morning that the National Weather Service in Amarillo had initially called it a straight, shear wind, based on its first reports.

"As far as I'm concerned, it was a tornado," Hataway said. He added that he had talked with Laurence Smith, chief meteorologist with the NWS, who said the weather service's equipment had not indicated the storm was strong enough to have produced a tornado.

After their talk, Smith said he wouldn't argue or disagree with the assessment.

When the twister hit, the mobile home "just exploded into thousands of little pieces," Hataway said. He said the debris was scattered up to a half a mile away in a narrow band. Neighbors and friends were out Thursday sifting through the rubble to find salvageable items.

Hataway said he has talked with three women who saw the twister. The women said the twister had no clearly defined funnel shape, instead being "jagged and rough looking," the sheriff said. But the women said they could see dirt being drawn up into the funnel, indicating it was more than just a shear wind, Hataway said.

The sheriff said an oil drum sitting near the mobile home, located outside the city limits, contained burning trash when the storm struck. The trash barrel was still sitting up, with the trash still burning, after the tornado struck.

Hataway said all the evidence convinces him it was a tornado.

The sheriff said there are still no value estimates of damages yet. He said town residents are trying to locate another place for the family to live, adding that "everybody wants to help."

Elsewhere in the state, forecasts called for fair to partly cloudy skies statewide with a chance of thunderstorms.

Lebanese official pleads for release

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The defense minister today asked religious leaders and Syrian officials to help free his son and U.S. journalist Charles Glass, whose abduction brought to nine the number of Americans held hostage here.

Glass, a 36-year-old Los Angeles native, was kidnapped Wednesday along with Ali Osseiran, the 40-year-old son of Lebanese Defense Minister Adel Osseiran. Their abduction was disclosed Thursday.

The two men were riding in the younger Osseiran's chauffeur-driven white Volvo sedan in a suburb of Syrian-policed Moslem west Beirut when 14 gunmen stopped the car, grabbed Glass, beat him and stuffed him into the trunk of another car, police said.

They said Osseiran tried to intervene and was also abducted, along with car's driver.

The gunmen, who were traveling in four cars, staged the kidnapping only 350 yards from a Syrian army checkpoint, police said.

Adel Osseiran, 79, "stayed up all night on the telephone, urging that no effort be spared to gain the release of the two unharmed," and won pledges of "unlimited assistance" from commanders of Syria's peacekeeping contingent in Moslem west Beirut, said an aide to the minister. The aide spoke on condition of anonymity.

Glass was the first Westerner kidnapped in west Beirut since Syria sent 7,500 troops there Feb. 22 to quell anarchy.

Most Pampans ignore Juneteenth celebration

From Staff and Wire Reports

The 112th celebration of Juneteenth finds rural and city blacks in Texas both fighting new battles with old roots.

For Dallas, which has been experiencing racial tension since police shot two elderly black residents in separate incidents, Juneteenth has taken on special meaning and has brought hope that strength will spring from unity, community leaders said.

In Pampa, the battle is one of recognition. Only one local Juneteenth program has been reported to The Pampa News. Macedonia Baptist Church, 441 Elm, will host Juneteenth services featuring the Rev. L.H. De-grate, chairman of the West Texas Baptist District Association and vice president of the association's Christian Education Conference.

Tonight is game night at the Southside Senior Citizen's Center, with festivities starting about 8 p.m. But every Tuesday and Friday nights are game nights at the center.

A spokesman for the Pampa Parks and Recreation Department said he's not aware of any Juneteenth celebrations in Pampa parks.

Sharp cites great potential

By PATT RICHARDS
Special to The Pampa News

Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp said during a Pampa visit Thursday night that the Panhandle has the economic potential to mirror the boom of the Houston area.

Sharp spoke at a $100-per-plate appreciation dinner intended to help retire his debt from the November election.

Dave Warren, a member of the dinner's coordinating committee, introduced guests, who included state Reps. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, and Dick Waterfield, R-Canadian, and state Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon.

In his speech to a crowd of more than 100, Sharp said the Texas economy is looking up, adding that oil prospects have improved.

He said the Panhandle has the potential to become the state's next Houston in terms of development, because of the area's huge reserves of natural gas. He urged drillers in the room to produce more gas because of the profits available.

Sharp also said the RRC needs to get out of the way of oil producers because petroleum products don't benefit anyone while still in the earth. The lengthy waiting time for gas contracts to pass the RRC also will be reduced to get full potential and price out of contracts, he said.

The nation could be headed toward a gas shortage, the commissioner indicated. The Texas Panhandle can help alleviate that potential nationwide problem, he said. People from "Boston to See SHARP, Page 2

Canadian teachers get $50 pay increase

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — In a time when pay raises are not too popular among taxpayers, Canadian school trustees have raised teachers' and principals' salaries by $50 a month.

Canadian ISD Superintendent Jim Pollard recommended raising teachers' and principals' salaries because he feels it would help keep "quality" teachers in the district.

Trustee Kenneth Thrasher agreed. "You're not going to have quality teachers without paying them," Thrasher told the board Tuesday at its regular meeting. Two members were absent.

Trustee Jay Godwin was cautious but still supportive.

"This means a raise in a time when pay raises are not popular with the taxpayers," Godwin said. "But are we tinkering with the quality of the teaching at this point by not offering teachers more money?"

Pollard answered, "In my opinion, we are."

The superintendent noted that Canadian lost two teachers who left for larger districts in Pampa and Dumas.

"I think it's going to start catching up with us," Pollard said.

Thrasher said that "we have to pay more than what Pampa and Dumas pay to get teachers out here."

Pollard said he has not heard any complaints from teachers about their pay.

Trustee Diane Praeger asked if $50 would make much difference.

Pollard said it would help.

He added that with 65 professional staff members on 10-month contracts, 16 on 11-month contracts and one on a 12-month contract, the pay raise would total $41,900. Add the 8 percent teacher's retirement to that, and the school pays $45,000 to $50,000, Pollard figured.

Starting teachers at Canadian receive a monthly salary of $1,882 with $1,520 coming from the state base and $362 coming from the local increment.

The school had to decrease its local increment last year, but Trustee Elise Krehbiel explained that the state increased its base salary so the teachers' salaries remained the same.

After approving the salary increase, trustees made no changes to the salary schedule for auxiliary personnel. Trustees agreed the district could save money by not replacing a grounds worker who is retiring.

Despite the $50,000 budget increase, which trustees hope will "preserve the quality of education," the district is facing a tight budget squeeze.

In a letter to the trustees, Hemphill County Chief Appraiser James McCarley estimated that taxable value in Canadian ISD will drop to $611 million for 1987. The current school tax rate is 65 cents per $100 valuation, with 52 cents going to maintenance and operation and 13 cents for the interest and sinking fund.

In a budget proposal showed board members Tuesday, Pollard estimated that if McCarley's estimate holds, it would take a 62 cents per $100 general fund tax rate to maintain local tax support at the current $3.6 million for maintenance and operation.

The figures look harsher for 1988-89, when property values could drop to $500 million; Pollard figured the district may need a total tax rate of 75 cents per $100 to keep its $3.6 million general fund tax base. Interest and sinking fund tax rates could also rise, to 18 cents for 1988 and 23 cents for 1989.

Pollard figured that if the tax rate remains as is, the total local collection could drop from $4.1 million estimated for 1986-87 to $3.79 million for 1987-88. State revenue, however, could increase from $181,500 for 1987 to $192,000 for 1988.

Pollard estimated that the total revenue supply could drop from $5.5 million for 1987 to $5.1 million for 1988.

Sharp

Austin will be cold this winter unless more gas is drilled, and the "Northerners" will blame the Texas RRC for the shortage, Sharp said.

The commissioner also said the United States should impose an oil import fee.

"There's no way domestic oil can compete with OPEC oil. They can produce oil for $1 a barrel, when it takes us $10," Sharp said. Import fees would thus put a "floor" on the foreign oil, he said.

The RRC is now considering a proposal by Commissioner Mack Wallace that would make it easier to sell gas immediately after it's drilled, Sharp said. The measure also would permit more gas wells to be drilled, he said.

Sharp campaigned on the promise to try to pass legislation to allow the members of the RRC to talk to anyone about issues pending before the agency. The commissioner said the proposal failed, so he declined to discuss current disputes involving "white oil" or the Red Cave Fields.

Independents who promoted the $100-a-plate fund-raiser for the commissioner had supported Sharp's campaign last year, said Miles O'Loughlin, of the dinner coordinating committee. O'Loughlin said major contributors from the area organized the dinner to help retire the commissioner's campaign debt.

Ignore

Isn't suprised at the lack of awareness in Pampa.

An East Texas native, Johnson was raised in New Mexico, where residents overlook the holiday.

"I never realized its importance," Johnson said. "To me, growing up, June 19 was just another day. But it is important because it was a day set aside for freedom for black people."

Johnson said his church has nothing scheduled this year, although many church members are going to Dallas for the celebration there. A former member of the church is getting married there, Johnson said.

Still, he said, residents here set Juneteenth aside for family barbecues and get-togethers. "I pray it will be a safe and restful day," he said.

Downstate, descendants of a freed slave who are suing to regain thousands of acres of Freestone County land they say was stolen from him have enlisted the support of the widow of Martin Luther King at their annual family reunion.

Coretta Scott King's visit today in Butler, a small community near Fairfield, was to coincide with announcement of the trial date in a lawsuit filed three years ago by the heirs of Anderson Willis.

Other Juneteenth celebrations are scheduled across the state; organizers say the holiday is an important step toward keeping black heritage alive.

With the Jan. 1, 1863, Emancipation Proclamation, President Abraham Lincoln freed the slaves in those areas of the Confederacy still in rebellion against the Union. But Confederate states including Texas ignored it.

U.S. Gen. Gordon Granger, landed at Galveston June 19, 1865, and he declared that all slaves were free. Texas blacks mark their freedom from slavery on that date.

About 1,000 people are expected to converge upon the Willie B. Johnson Recreation Center in Dallas during one of the many citywide celebrations of Juneteenth this weekend.

Staff Writer Cathy Spaulding and The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Auction to fund outdoor artwork

An art auction to benefit Pampa Area Foundation for Outdoor Art will be held at 8 p.m. Saturday in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

A preview showing with refreshments will be held from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Saturday, and each person attending is asked to donate $10. There is no admission charge for the auction at 8 p.m.

Proceeds from the auction will go toward the purchase of artworks to be displayed at public outdoor sites in the Pampa area.

Art objects from area, Texas and international artists will be included in the auction. Williams-Webb Auctioneers will conduct the sale.

Items to be auctioned include oil paintings, a Tiffany lamp, signed prints, pastels, sculpture, a woven Egyptian handbag and Egyptian lanterns.

Since Pampa Area Foundation for Outdoor Art was organized in 1985, two wall modules have been erected in the park area southeast of M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Additional walls and panels will be designed and erected as funds become available.

Funds raised by the foundation will also be used to place sculpture on public lands in the Pampa area. One of the planned outdoor sculptures is "Grandfather's Vision," by Pampa bronze sculptor Gerald Sanders. Plans are to place it at the southwest corner of the grounds surrounding M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Phoebie Reynolds is auction chairman. Thelma Bray is president of the foundation.

Police to fingerprint kids

Plenty of free food and prizes are on tap when the Pampa Police Department sets up its Ident-a-kid booth Saturday at the Sonic Drive In, 1418 N. Hobart.

Pampa police Cpl. Bruce Denham said he will fingerprint youngsters from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at the restaurant. He said the Ident-a-kid program is aimed at identifying children who may become lost or missing.

Fingerprints are given to parents, and not retained by the Police Department, Denham said.

"We really encourage parents to bring their kids out and get them fingerprinted," he said.

Sonic Manager Bradley Walker said youngsters who get fingerprinted will be treated to free ice cream, balloons and Sonic bumper stickers. Also given away will be gliders and Father's Day gift certificates.

Walker said the event will feature an all-day entertainment by Sonic Dog, the walking, talking frankfurter.

"It should be a real fine thing," Walker said. "I hope everyone comes down and just has a good time."

Davis jurors appear stuck

FORT WORTH (AP) — Jurors in the civil trial of industrialist Cullen Davis appeared deadlocked today, raising the specter of a mistrial in the $16.5 million wrongful death suit.

State District Judge Claude Williams summoned the panel from the jury room shortly before 10 a.m. and issued the Allen charge, a so-called "dynamic charge" designed as a final step in imploring jurors to arrive at a verdict.

Attorneys for Davis vehemently opposed the action and demanded a mistrial. Williams overruled the motion and instructed jurors to resume deliberations.

For the second time in two days, the jury interrupted its secret deliberations while jury foreman Kenneth Pool huddled in chambers with the judge and attorneys for both sides. He emerged after 11 minutes and the panel resumed its third day of deliberations at 9:36 a.m.

A judicial gag order barred lawyers from discussing specifics of the problem, but an attorney acknowledged that the jurors were deadlocked.

Jurors got the case late Tuesday after nearly three weeks of testimony.

Plaintiffs Priscilla Davis, the defendant's ex-wife, and her second husband, Jack Wilborn, maintain in their consolidated civil suits that Davis was the gunman who shot their 12-year-old daughter Andrea and left her to die in a basement utility room at the mansion.

Mrs. Davis, then 34, and a young mansion visitor, Bubba Gavrel, then 22, were wounded during the midnight shooting spree, Stan Farr, 30, Priscilla Davis' boyfriend, was killed.

Hundreds join archaeology dig near Perryton

PERRYTON (AP) — Archaeologists who descended on Ochiltree County by the hundreds have unearthed new insight into the largest — and perhaps oldest — prehistoric Indian community in Texas.

The Panhandle site is one of the most significant in the nation, but little was known about the lifestyle of the people who left the buried city 800 years ago, Oklahoma freelance archaeologist David Hughes said.

With 340 participants in the Texas Archaeological Society's annual field school working last week under the supervision of experts led by Hughes, the pieces of the puzzle have started to fit.

The students — ranging in age from 6 to 89 — crawled over, under and around dig sites to gain practical field experience. "I was in shock when I heard how many people would be here," Hughes said. "I was expecting about 150 people at the most."

Keeping hundreds of men, women and children organized was no easy task, he said. But pandemonium has its payoffs.

"In the last eight days, we nearly matched what we accomplished in eight weeks last year," Hughes said.

"What we have here is an archaeological site that's not duplicated in North America, with the possible exception of Chaco Canyon in New Mexico, a national monument," he said.

"We estimate there were 30 village complexes on this site and all were little towns with 300 people each."

All the villages might not have been inhabited at exactly the same time, Hughes said, but he's fairly certain he knows what kept the Indians in residence from about 1150 A.D. to 1450 A.D.

"There's an important resource here that they looked for and it wasn't the abundant water and it wasn't the buffalo. It was the trees," he said, pointing to the still-plentiful cottonwoods lining what is now Wolf Creek State Park.

"It's a culture we've had no understanding of until now," said Bob Malouf, Texas' state architect. "It appears, because of their trading and migrating, that these people were influenced from the north to northeast, not the south like we had thought."

Artifacts found at the site came from the Pacific Ocean and Montana, which were major trade contacts for sedentary buffalo hunters who inhabited Ochiltree County, he told the Amarillo Globe-News.

Other finds include pottery with designs not seen before in this region — a bison skull, sea shells, fish bones, corn, beans, hunting and knapping tools and jewelry.

This was the third consecutive summer archaeologists have combed the banks of Wolf Creek searching for clues to unravel mysteries behind the artifacts owned by the ancient dwellers who inhabited the Texas Panhandle.

The sites were explored in 1907 and 1920, but five years ago, Harold Courson of Perryton bought most of the land and the digging became intense.

Courson, who owns an oil company, granted archaeological easements and financed previous digs on the property. This year he supplied wells, generators, pressure tanks, booster pumps, pipes, hoses and air conditioned trailers for the group.

"We're trying to apply a little oil field technology to the dig site," said Kirk Courson, Harold Courson's son.

The society field school will be held at the site again next year, and the Coursons hope to have constructed a museum on or near the site by then for people to view the findings.

"The Coursons are some of the strongest supporters in archaeology we have in the state," Malouf said. "They not only appreciate what they have but want others to enjoy it too, it's a very altruistic way of doing things."

Clements sets special session's 10-item agenda

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawmakers formally summoned back for a special legislative session next week will work from a 10-item agenda that includes proposed income tax bans along with a still-missing state budget.

Gov. Bill Clements issued the official call for a special session to begin at 2 p.m. Monday.

"The primary issue before us is to maintain the current level of spending with budget increases only for selected priority programs," Clements said Thursday.

The 140-day regular session that ended June 1 without a 1988-89 budget was the first since 1961 in which lawmakers failed to pass a spending plan for state government.

Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis have met since adjournment to search for a compromise plan. Hobby proposed a $39.3 billion budget, Lewis a $38.4 billion budget and Clements has indicated support for a plan totaling approximately $38.1 billion.

Clements, who vowed during the regular session to veto any tax increase greater than $2.9 billion, said he still opposes substantial increases in government spending.

"We not only must agree on a responsible budget for the next two years, but we also must be vehement in our commitment against tax-and-spend philosophies," he said.

Clements also listed on the session's agenda consideration of proposed constitutional amendments that would place before voters a ban on corporate and personal state income taxes.

He said such prohibitions are vital to the continued economic growth of the state.

"One of the strongest aspects of the Texas economy is the fact that we do not have a state corporate or personal income tax. We must protect and enhance this advantage that we enjoy over most other states," Clements said.

"The people of Texas want their elected officials in Austin to take decisive and definitive action to ensure that state corporate and personal income taxes will be prohibited," he added.

Under the constitution, a governor sets the agenda for special sessions. Besides the budget and tax bans, Clements listed seven other issues, including legislation that would:

- Create a select committee to study judicial reform in Texas, including examining the way judges are selected.

- Give the governor and a panel of other officials "budget execution authority," or increased power to shift funds between agencies during times of fiscal trouble.

- Require full financial disclosure to the public by governmental subdivisions.

- Form a state personnel office.

- Create special committees to study the effectiveness of state government management and to look at state and local retirement systems.

- Consolidate some state and federal funds coming into state government.

Reggie Bashur, the governor's press secretary, said other issues are under review.

Open meetings law revisions bill signed

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements signed into law legislation that strengthens the Open Meetings Act, saying it will help make government more accountable to the public.

Clements said the legislation he endorsed Thursday has benefits for both the public and governmental officials.

"This bill will force governmental bodies to think twice before going into closed sessions, while at the same time protecting them from frivolous lawsuits," he said.

Signing of the bill, which Clements' aides said takes effect immediately, capped efforts begun in 1977 to close the law's loopholes.

The current law allows governmental bodies to meet in private, "executive" sessions to discuss a variety of matters, including personnel matters, litigation and property acquisition. The bill would require them to keep certified agendas or tape recordings of such closed meetings.

Under the bill, the tape or agendas could be made available to members of the public who challenge action by a governmental body, and any action taken by public officials who violate the law could be voided.

The bill also guarantees that television news crews can take their cameras into government meetings and videotape the sessions. The original act guaranteed that meetings could be covered by reporters taking written notes or using tape recorders or by still photographers.

The moment that fatherhood begins

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

Father's Day took on a new meaning for me in 1986. It marked the very first time I could celebrate the occasion as an official father.

This Sunday, I will be eligible for my second pair of black socks. Daughter Jennifer turns 17-months-old on Father's Day.

Many people are under the misconception that a man becomes a father on the day his first child is born. But fatherhood really begins at the precise moment the doctor tells you and your wife that a new addition to the family is right around the corner.

I remember well when the doctor told us we were pregnant.

As soon as I regained consciousness and got some color back in my face, I had to take care of my nervous wife Karen until Jennifer arrived. (By now, you're probably saying to yourself, "Yeah, I'll bet he took care of his wife.")

Really, though, for the remaining weeks of pregnancy, the expectant father is both dad and husband to his nervous wife.

And then, the little one makes the grand entrance into the world.

If you are not yet a father, I can tell you that as soon as you become one, life will never be the same.

It gets a heckuva lot more fun. If you can accept the bad with the good.

There are several little habits babies have that will test your abilities as a father. Throughout the last 17 months, I have noticed some of them:

- ♂ Babies will only cry in the middle of the night. When you are sound asleep. In the middle of a good dream.

- ♂ Babies will only throw-up or spit-up when they are on the carpet, on an expensive couch or standing over you.

- ♂ Babies will scream like there's no tomorrow when you are on the phone trying to get a new job or talking to an important client.

- ♂ After a year or so, you will think you have an exceptional child when she begins to form unusual words on her high chair tray with mashed potatoes and orange juice.

- ♂ If you have lost your keys, set the baby down to search for them. She will find them instantly.

Many newborn parents can't wait to get their baby to church for the first time. As important as this is, if you take the baby too soon, there undoubtedly will be problems.

Everything will go fine until the opening prayer. It is then when baby will begin an all-out assault on the congregational ears.

How to avoid the problem of kids crying in church began long ago. Adam and Eve's son, Cain, was likely the first baby in history to have a crying spell in the middle of a sermon.

It is on record that such famous figures as Napoleon, Joan Collins, Richard Nixon, Tammy Bakker and Jennifer Patterson cried in church — and most of them when they were infants.

Madolyn Murray O'Hair would probably suggest that the ideal solution to this problem would be to leave the baby at home and for the parents to stay there with the child.

If you have not yet taken your newborn to church, be prepared for the following:

- ✓ Babies will cry mostly during prayers.

- ✓ Babies will remain quiet during hymns and at other times when people couldn't hear them even if they did cry.

- ✓ The minister will probably look your way during one of your child's outbursts with a noncommittal glance. (If this happens, it is your signal to get up and leave.)

- ✓ Several other congregation members will look your way, but their stares will have more meaning.

- ✓ It is essential to bring a bottle — not for you, but for the baby.

Putting all of these quirks aside, I will say that being a father is an experience with which there is no comparison.

One day, we hope to add to our family, but for now, my daughter's hugs, kisses and attempts at putting together a complete sentence will do just fine.

Have a Happy Father's Day and remember, it is the only day of the year that you will be able to watch a sporting event on television without feeling guilty about it later.

NRC subpoenas Texas attorney

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas attorney is fighting a Nuclear Regulatory Commission subpoena because she wants an independent investigation into allegations of safety violations at the South Texas Nuclear Project.

On May 20, a subpoena was served by NRC Operations Director Victor Stello on Billie P. Garde, a Government Accountability Project attorney who represents a group of more than 35 workers at the plant.

The workers had come to her with concerns ranging from charges of harassment and intimidation to violation of federal and state laws by certain individuals.

Opinion

Donovan deserves a public explanation

The most eloquent comment on the acquittal of former Secretary of Labor Raymond J. Donovan on larceny and fraud charges was a silent one. According to news reports, Assistant District Attorney Stephen Bookin, who had spent 3½ years developing and presenting the case (and who had been charged with political motives or reasons of personal advancement), left the court without comment.

You would think that New York taxpayers would have a passing interest in comments from Bookin. How much taxpayers' money was spent in pursuing what appears to have been a vendetta against Donovan? Why was a case carried on so relentlessly when it was so weak that the defense did not bother to make its own case? Why wasn't case dropped long ago? Is there any way to control the sometimes arbitrary actions of prosecutors in the future?

It may be difficult or impossible to discover exactly how much the case cost the taxpayers. A lawyer for the Schiavone construction company, of which Donovan was co-owner, says that company executives had to spend about $13 million in legal costs. The company, disqualified from bidding on New York state project since an indictment in 1984, may have lost hundreds of millions in contracts. Can Bookin be sued to collect any portion of these losses? Or would the taxpayers end up paying if he were sued?

Donovan has been dogged by allegations and legal problems since he was first nominated as secretary of labor back in 1980. His confirmation was held up until an FBI investigation failed to corroborate allegations linking him to organized-crime figures. A federal special prosecutor decided there was insufficient evidence to prosecute. But prosecution (persecution?) continued at the state level. Donovan took an unpaid leave of absence and finally resigned from the cabinet to defend himself against the charges.

The problem is that our system provides few effective checks on a prosecutor who is out to make a name for himself or to punish somebody for whatever reason. An acquittal by a jury is the ultimate check, of course, but such vindication can come at a high price. The money and time spent on defending against baseless charges are gone. And even an acquittal may leave a residue of suspicion.

Making government employees personally accountable — open to suit against them as individuals, for example — for actions taken while on a public payroll may be an effective idea.

The problem is that it might open conscientious people to the same kind of frivolous and arbitrary legal harassment some prosecutors seem to dish out.

At the least, Bookin and others who continued to pursue such a weak case against Donovan should answer — in public, and not just privately to their superiors — some of the questions this case raises.

It appears that these "public servants" used the judicial system to pursue a vendetta.

Doctrine stifles broadcasts

In America, the press is supposed to be free of government control, and thus free to examine subjects and advocate ideas that the government may dislike. In fact, the press is only half-free, since broadcasting outlets are licensed and regulated by the federal government. At the first sign of emancipation, Congress has acted to make sure freedom doesn't break out on the nation's airwaves.

The Federal Communications Commission, acting on the belief that it can't dictate what stations should broadcast without violating the First Amendment, wanted to lift one crucial regulation — the innocuously named Fairness Doctrine, which requires licensees to air programs dealing with public issues and present different opinions about them. Last year, a federal appeals court ruled that the FCC could repeal the rule without congressional approval.

But on June 3, the House of Representatives voted to make the Fairness Doctrine a law, as the Senate already had done. Those supporting the measure tried to deny the obvious: That they were restricting freedom of speech and freedom of the press. The measure, said Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., actually would "protect the public freedom of speech."

This is a familiar bit of sophistry. The idea is that the rule promotes diversity by forcing broadcasters to provide access to a variety of opinions. But like most government regulations, this one has consequences that diverge from its stated purpose.

The main effect is to discourage radio and TV stations from providing forums for discussion of controversial subjects. If you let one opinion be heard, or two, then you may be compelled to provide additional time for still other viewpoints. It's easier to just avoid such topics whenever possible, or to keep coverage bland and inoffensive.

This is not just a theoretical danger. University of Texas law professor Lucas Powe Jr., in his valuable new book, American Broadcasting and the First Amendment, notes that New York and Chicago used to have stations that exclusively promoted socialist and pro-union sentiments. Those stations infuriated regulators, who decided that "there is no place for a station catering to any group. ... All stations should cater to the general public."

That declaration was the origin of the Fairness Doctrine. Now a station can editorialize in favor of (or against) socialism or unionism only if it furnishes its opponents with air time to voice their beliefs.

As some presidents have found, the regulation can be used to deter criticism. In 1964, the Democratic National Committee forced conservative broadcasters to provide nearly 1,700 hours of free airtime to respond to attacks on President Lyndon B. Johnson. An administration official said that the real success of the program was its "effectiveness in inhibiting the political activity of these right-wing broadcasts."

When Richard Nixon was president, a conservative group angry at CBS' coverage of his defense policies tried to get the FCC to punish the network for violating the Fairness Doctrine. After a long legal battle, CBS won. Had it lost, the network could have been stripped of its five local stations.

This regulation is just one part of the government's control of broadcasting, which serves to stifle the sort of aggressive, daring journalism that distinguishes the best newspapers. As Powe notes, the dangers presented by government control aren't lost on broadcasters. It's no accident, he says, that "every network was offered the Pentagon Papers, and each turned down the opportunity to air them."

Likewise, The Washington Post exposed the Watergate scandal with scant help from TV journalists. During the entire 1972 presidential campaign, NBC devoted just 41 minutes to all news about Watergate. The Post uncovered the Nixon administration's crimes only at considerable risk to its financial interests. At one point, Nixon told his aides that The Post eventually would have to get the licenses renewed on several broadcasting properties it owned. At that point, he vowed, The Post "is going to have damnable, damnable problems."

Given the risks of government control of broadcasting, and the unintended consequences of the Fairness Doctrine, we're better off if broadcasters have a free hand in accommodating the desires of their audiences — whose power to turn the dial is best protector of the public's interests. With 10,000 radio stations and 1,300 TV stations operating in the United States, diversity will be better served by letting different stations serve different needs, instead of making each station serve the same need.

An independent press is the surest foundation of democracy, and the experience of broadcasters shows that independence is impossible within the confines of regulation. In upholding the Fairness Doctrine, Congress is doing little good for fairness but considerable harm to freedom.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, June 19, the 170th day of 1987. There are 195 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 19, 1953, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, convicted of passing U.S. atomic secrets to the Soviet Union, were executed at Sing Sing Prison in Ossining, N.Y., after the Supreme Court vacated a stay granted by Justice William O. Douglas, and President Dwight D. Eisenhower refused to intervene.

On this date:
In 1586, English colonists sailed from Roanoke Island, N.C., after failing to establish England's first permanent settlement in America.

In 1862, slavery was outlawed in U.S. territories.

In 1867, Mexico's deposed emperor, Maximilian, was executed.

In 1910, Father's Day was celebrated for the first time, in Spokane, Wash.

In 1934, the Federal Communications Commission was created.

In 1961, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down a provision in Maryland's constitution requiring state officeholders to profess a belief in the existence of God.

Steel tires draw lightning

Mike Carter, a husky 6-footer, drives a dump truck for the J. Smith Coal Co. in Providence, Ky.

The pit is on a midlin' hill that's still high enough so you can see 20 miles to the north, but it is not the highest hill in the area.

For years now, Mike has worked for Smith Coal, recent years driving a rear dump truck.

I mean his truck is big! Just the tires on this thing stand 7 feet tall. Each tire costs $4,000 and weighs half a ton.

Mike climbs seven steps just to get into the cab. Big truck.

The Providence mine is a gash in the ground most of a mile long and more than a 100 feet deep.

On a Saturday this spring, Mike was dressed as usual in hard hat, T-shirt, work shoes and Levis. He was driving his truck up the ramp inside the dig — going 10 miles an hour, maybe 15. When out of the rainy sky, a bolt of lightning hit the truck. A charge of energy so enormous that it lifted that 85-ton truck off the ground.

Three of those gigantic thousand-pound tires exploded. It sounded like dynamite going off. One of the tires on the driver's side was torn loose, hurled 30 feet where it landed inside out!

Mike reached for his CB and began shouting, "I've been hit by lightning!"

Then before anybody could respond — lightning struck again!

This time it blew the windshields out — front and back. It bulged out both steel doors.

The engine smoking, Mike cut the ignition, pulled on the parking brake.

And climbed down and walked away from it! Unhurt. He got scared later.

I've talked with Mike Carter a couple of times since that fateful day. He suffers no ill effects.

He says his faith in God is stronger than it was; he's not sure why he was spared. But he says he will be eternally grateful.

And we have all learned from his experience. We have reconfirmed that lightning does, in fact, strike the same target more than once.

And we have learned that lightning does not always seek the "highest point" in an area. In this instance there were shops and office buildings many feet higher than Mike and his truck. There were other vehicles on the up-slope ahead of him; a crusher and power towers — all higher.

And we have learned that since we began belting our tires with steel — since we began using steel-belted tires — they cannot give us the lightning protection that rubber used to afford. Not anymore.

Germany must hand over Arab terrorist

By William A. Rusher

This month marks the second anniversary of the hijacking of TWA 847 — the American 727 that was taken over by three Arab gunmen on a flight from Athens to Rome. After holding the plane for several days on the ground at Beirut, the hijackers released the passengers and crew and disappeared into the Middle East's hospitable underground.

While the plane was in Beirut, however, the hijackers killed one of the passengers — Robert Stethem, 23, a member of the U.S. Navy who had the bad luck to be on board. There was nothing in Stethem's behavior to explain, let alone excuse, this. He was marked for death merely because he happened to be a member of the armed forces of the hated United States. He did not resist: One of the hijackers simply put a gun to his head and blew him away.

In their press conference after the passengers were released and before they themselves melted away, the hijackers proudly wore hoods over their own heads. Proud of their conduct as they seemed to be, they evidently weren't eager to step up and take personal credit for it.

In the months that followed, the reason for their reluctance became clear. The Reagan administration was on their trail, and in due course all three were identified. Before the year ended, moreover, the Justice Department had quietly obtained federal murder indictments against all of them.

That was where matters stood all during 1986. My own discreet inquiries reassured me that the U.S. government had not forgotten the murderers of Robert Stethem. It was simply a matter of locating them and acquiring jurisdiction over them.

Then, early this year, there was a dramatic development in the story. One of the killers, Mohammed Ali Hamadei by name, was arrested by the West German authorities. My information suggests that they acted on a tip from U.S. sources, who had discovered that Hamadei had a girlfriend in West Germany and was in the habit of visiting her there.

The United States moved promptly to extradite Hamadei on the federal indictment for murder, but was met by a West German objection. Under U.S. law Hamadei would, if convicted, be subject to the death penalty; under German law, the maximum penalty is life imprisonment. Bonn demanded that the United States pledge that Hamadei would not be put to death. Very reluctantly, Washington agreed.

But now a further problem has arisen. Shortly after Hamadei was arrested, his Arab friends in Beirut thoughtfully kidnapped two West German businessmen to hold as hostages for bargaining purposes. The threat, plainly is that the two will be killed if Hamadei is extradited to the United States. According to rumors, there is support in Germany for convicting Hamadei of minor offenses committed in Germany and then releasing him after a short jail sentence.

One can sympathize with the West German government, and even more with the relatives of the kidnapped businessmen, but there cannot be — there must not be — any equivocation on this matter. The American people have not forgotten, and will never forget, the coldblooded murder of Robert Stethem. The West German government has the killer in its hands. He must pay in full for that specific crime.

Pentagon to reassess escort duty risk factor

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Pentagon will review its Persian Gulf plans to make sure U.S. servicemen and ships are safe from terrorist attacks in the face of CIA warnings that such strikes are likely, congressional sources say.

The reassessment was promised during an informal meeting Thursday between top administration national security officials and a group of senators worried about President Reagan's plan to protect 11 Kuwaiti tankers starting next month, the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"It is clear that the risks are larger than the administration is willing to concede at this point," said Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., one of the participants in the closed-door, two-hour session.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence

Committee, said, "We need to get all the intelligence together. I want to see an integrated analysis of the threat, one that includes not only military risks, but also the capabilities and intentions of carrying out the threats."

In recent days, differences have developed between the CIA and the Pentagon over the threat from Iran. The Pentagon says the risk is low to moderate from direct military-type attacks.

But the CIA says the risk is higher because Iran may use a terrorist-style attack such as an explosives-laden speedboat, either against U.S. ships or against oil tankers that won't be protected by the United States.

The controversy surrounds Reagan's plan to put U.S. captains and flags aboard the Kuwaiti ships and have them escorted by Navy ships. Kuwait is an ally of Iraq, leading to congressional fears that the United States may be drawn into the 6½-year-old Iran-Iraq war, particularly since Iran has threatened to attack the tankers.

The worries were heightened by Iraq's May 17 attack on the Navy frigate USS Stark, in which 37 U.S. seamen were killed. Iraq said the incident was a mistake and U.S. officials agree.

Thursday's meeting involved William H. Webster, the new CIA director; Frank C. Carlucci, Reagan's national security adviser; and Adm. William Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Among the senators were Sasser and Sen. John Warner, R-Va., ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee.

During the meeting, the administration officials said they would review the threat assessment contained in a Pentagon report sent to Congress earlier in the week, according to one source.

"There's not much disagreement on the short-term risk, which is fairly low," said the source, who spoke only on condition of anonymity. "But the Pentagon is in the process of revising their estimate of the longer-term threat, which they don't feel is quite as high as other agencies."

Sasser said later, "As far as intelligence goes, I don't think everybody's saying the same thing."

"Our military planners view this in terms of rationality — that is, what a rational opponent would do," he said.

"But if we learned anything, it's that the Iranians aren't rational. And the unexpected does happen, such as the attack on the Stark."

"I think the administration has now acknowledged that there should have been closer coordination among the intelligence agencies in preparing these assessments," Warner said.

One of the prime topics discussed Thursday was the threat from mines, the sources said.

At the Pentagon, administration sources who declined to be identified said a team of Navy experts has been sent to the region to determine the threat from Iranian mines placed near the Kuwaiti coast.

The evaluation isn't finished but military officials believe Iran's use of mines is a "manageable threat," the sources said.

Cheney: North's refusal to testify privately puts his patriotic image on the line

WASHINGTON (AP)—The ranking Republican on the House Iran-Contra committee says if Oliver L. North refuses to cooperate with Congress, even his supporters would recognize him as a man in legal trouble instead of a "pillar of patriotism."

Republican Dick Cheney of Wyoming joined House panel chairman Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., on Thursday in a strong denunciation of North's refusal to testify privately this week prior to appearing publicly in mid-July.

House and Senate lawyers were told to forge an "ironclad agreement" with North's attorneys to assure his appearance at the hearings.

The Senate panel scheduled a meeting today to hear reports on the lawyers' discussions regarding the fired White House aide who managed the secret arms sale to Iran and the private resupply program to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Hamilton said he hoped there would be an agreement by early next week, when the panels resume public hearings after a two-week break.

Hamilton made it clear that the congressional position had toughened on the matter of North's private testimony, telling reporters that if Congress gave in on the issue, North "would be dictating the procedures" for the hearings. He said North's attorneys had shown "some flexibility" that might lead to a compromise. He did not elaborate on what the attorneys had said or what the compromise might be.

Hamilton said he had spoken about the matter to Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Warren Rudman, R-N.H., chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the Senate panel.

"My impression is the House and Senate are together on this now. They recognize the benefit of having him in private session," said Hamilton.

Cheney said he hoped North's tactic was simply an attempt by his lawyer to safeguard his rights, not a prelude to avoid testimony altogether.

"If it's the latter ... then it seems to me ... the colonel would move in the eyes of many of us from the posture of a man who was trying to serve his country and his president ... to a figure who is ... a man with serious legal problems and obviously not the pillar of patriotism that he would like to have portrayed," Cheney added.

In other Iran-Contra developments: —The Washington Post reported today that former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane was recalled this week by the committees to clarify some conflicts of his testimony with that of other witnesses. The testimony had to do with an unspecified 1985 document, the Post said, and the committees appear satisfied that the conflict has been resolved.

—Former Air Force Lt. Col. Richard Gadd, an associate of retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, said Secord told him he was going to the White House in late 1985 for approval of a plan to airlift military supplies to the rebels fighting Nicaragua's Sandinista government. Secord ran the Contra re-supply operations at North's request, during a time when official U.S. government military assistance was banned. Gadd's testimony, given to the committees in closed session, was released Thursday.

Gadd also testified that North had told him about an effort in the fall of 1985 to buy used transport aircraft for the Contras from the Venezuelan air force.

Gadd said North told him he had contacted the U.S. Embassy in Venezuela to ask for help in effecting a sale. The aircraft apparently were never sold.

Committee sources said investigators had been unable to confirm that North contacted the embassy.

Study: Low cholesterol opens vessels

WASHINGTON (AP)—A study showing that reducing blood fats actually opens up some clogged blood vessels offers hope that drugs and a low-fat diet can decrease the risk of heart disease in millions of people with high cholesterol, researchers say.

A major study of heart bypass patients published today in the Journal of the American Medical Association contains the first solid evidence that past blood vessel narrowing can be reversed with a combination of cholesterol-lowering drugs and low-fat diets, the scientists said.

Previous smaller studies hinted that sharply lowering blood fats might reverse some effects of atherosclerosis, the narrowing of blood vessels caused by a buildup of fatty deposits or lesions, they said. But the new study is the first providing definitive evidence of such an effect, they said.

Dr. Claude Lenfant, director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, said the Cholesterol Lowering Atherosclerosis Study has major implications for hundreds of thousands of people with heart and blood vessel disease and millions more at risk because of high blood fats.

Studies sponsored by the National Institutes of Health indicate half of all adults have cholesterol levels higher than desirable and 25 percent have moderate to severe elevations.

Restricted vessels deprive the heart of oxygen-rich blood and can lead to painful angina or heart attacks. When heart arteries become clogged, doctors can bypass them with transplanted veins to carry blood past the blockage.

The two-year study by University of Southern California Medical School scientists found that in 162 bypass patients, 16.2 percent of those getting the combination treatment showed regression in their restricted vessels, versus only 2.4 percent of control patients.

In the treated group, total cholesterol levels fell 26 percent and other blood fats called triglycerides were down 22 percent.

Reagan tries rhetoric on budget

WASHINGTON (AP)—The budget dispute between President Reagan and the Democratic-controlled Congress is blossoming into a full-fledged fight, with Reagan firing his rhetoric and lawmakers maneuvering to force him to the bargaining table.

The president issued a harsh statement and sent forth his aides Thursday to denounce the fiscal 1988 budget the Democrats produced. The $1 trillion plan envisions a $19.3 billion boost — $64.3 billion over three years — and attempts to put Reagan on the spot by tying that to a modest increase in defense spending.

"Their price for meeting our national security needs is this: for every $1 of defense it will cost $10 in new taxes," the president said in a statement. "That's an offer I can refuse."

"Our national defense is at risk, and we simply cannot agree to a plan that will plunge us into another decade of neglect," Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said in a statement.

Reagan, seeking to turn public attention away from his administration's scandals in foreign policy, plans to begin a series of road trips next week. He's asking the public to pressure Congress to give him more control over the budget.

But Democrats blame the huge federal deficits on Reagan's unwillingness to work with Congress.

Prosecutor: Woman killed in ride accident wasn't in seat harness

JACKSON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP)—Authorities investigating the death of a young woman who fell from a roller coaster said the ride took off before she could put her safety harness on.

Karen Anne Marie Brown, 19, of Chester, Pa., fell out of the car and was run over by the Lightin' Loops roller coaster at Great Adventure amusement park Wednesday afternoon, police said. She plunged 75 feet to her death.

"She was apparently attempting to (secure the harness) when the ride began its downhill run, causing her to fall between the cars," Michael Murray, spokesman for Ocean County Prosecutor James W. Holzapfel, said Thursday. Great Adventure spokesman Mark Brass said the computer-operated ride will not move unless harnesses are locked. He said attendants are supposed to check the harnesses but he was not sure whether that was done Wednesday.

Ms. Brown's boyfriend, Richard de Prince, was sitting next to her when the 90-second ride began. He said the safety bars were not in place when the ride began.

"They were still coming down. The bar snapped right behind her. I screamed for them to stop the ride, but it kept going. She was struggling to stay in, he said. "Right before she fell, she looked at me and said, 'Oh, my God! Rick.'"

Authorities said to ponder use of military against protesters

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — About 3,000 students hurling rocks and firebombs battled police through a haze of tear gas again today, and the government was said to be considering use of the military to quell relentless anti-government protest.

State-run radio said emergency measures were "inevitable" in light of ten straight days of violent clashes in the streets of Seoul and other cities.

Riot police in black armored cars opened fire with multiple-barrel tear gas launchers on the students attempting to march out of Korea University.

"Down with the military dictatorship!" the students shouted as a hail of gas canisters exploded amid their ranks.

AIDS said of major concern to teen-agers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Becky Adler is only 17, but she has talked to a teen-ager who is worried about contracting AIDS from her college boyfriend and a man who's afraid his sexual past may have led to his pregnant wife being infected.

Adler, a high school senior, spoke with those people while taking calls on the "Teen AIDS Hotline," which is staffed by teen-agers for teen-agers in the greater Washington, D.C., area. She said the line received 4,100 calls last month.

"If there is such a thing as a high-risk group, it is teen America. And we at the Teen AIDS Hotline are working to save our generation," Adler told the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families at a hearing Thursday on teen-agers and AIDS.

Adler said other AIDS efforts in her suburban Washington community, all financed by contributions and candy sales, include weekend teen and family conferences on AIDS sponsored by churches and synagogues; AIDS nights for parents, teachers and students; a video discussion guide for parents, teachers and clergy; and "The AIDS Movie," the first AIDS prevention film for adolescents.

"Teach your children the facts on AIDS and how they can protect themselves," Adler urged the committee. "Then help us show other teens throughout the country how they can stop the AIDS epidemic in their communities."

The hearing, chaired by Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., examined the AIDS risk to teen-agers. Many witnesses noted that teen-agers are particularly vulnerable because they are prone to experimentation with sex, drugs and alternative lifestyles.

Surgeon General C. Everett Koop said younger children should be taught by their parents and teachers to abstain from sexual relations until they are ready for marriage. "It's entirely possible to raise a whole generation of adolescents who will be abstinent until monogamous," he told the committee.

But Koop said during questioning that youngsters who have reached puberty must be taught that condoms used correctly can help protect them from AIDS. He said 70 percent of teen-agers are sexually active and it is not realistic to expect their behavior to change.

"If you tell that 70 percent to just say no, they laugh. And if they try to say no, they find it very difficult," Koop said. "I was talking to some teen-agers about long-term monogamy and this one girl said, 'How long? A semester?'"

Under questioning by committee members, Koop predicted AIDS testing of surgical patients soon would be a widespread practice and he said health officials should know within several months whether there will be an explosion of AIDS among heterosexuals.

"The day is not far off when the testing of surgical patients in hospitals becomes much more routine," he said.

Students threw firebombs, stones and chunks of pavement in their effort to break through the ranks into the surrounding streets.

Faculty members issued a statement demanding the government respect the national will and usher in full democracy.

"The peoples' will has been confirmed," said the statement.

Thursday was the most violent day of widespread demonstrations against the authoritarian government of President Chun Doo-hwan, a former army general.

Tens of thousands of students supported by like numbers of onlookers seized for about an hour the heart of this capital, capturing about 80 riot policemen.

Jewish leaders say meeting with Pope being threatened

MIAMI (AP) — Jewish leaders said they may follow the American Jewish Congress in boycotting a meeting here with Pope John Paul II because of the pontiff's plans to receive Austrian President Kurt Waldheim at the Vatican.

"It might endanger our visit to Miami," said Rabbi Gilbert Klapperman, president of the Synagogue Council of America. "Everything is an option. We will be considering the matter very seriously."

On Thursday, the 50,000-member American Jewish Congress said its leaders will boycott the Sept. 11 conference. Waldheim has been accused of taking part in Nazi war crimes during World War II.

The Vatican "must have known that a meeting with Waldheim would outrage anyone with a memory of the Holocaust," said Henry Siegman, executive director of the congress. "Their disregard of such predictable reactions is utterly incomprehensible."

"For Jewish representatives to meet with Pope John Paul in these circumstances would be a desecration of the memory of the victims of the Holocaust in whose destruction Kurt Waldheim has been accused of complicity," he said.

The congress sponsored the research on Waldheim's war record and produced the charges, which Waldheim has vigorously denied.

The Greater Miami Rabbinical Association said it would meet with other Jewish leaders in New York today to discuss whether the conference should still be held.

Timothy Dolan, a secretary to Archbishop P. Laghi, papal representative in the United States, said it's unlikely the Vatican will reconsider the Waldheim visit.

"(The Vatican) would hope that the meeting with Mr. Waldheim and the Holy Father would not threaten the September meeting," he said. "If anything, the controversy might show the need for continuing dialogue and discussion with Jewish leaders."

Jewish-Vatican relations already were troubled because of the pope's meeting with Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat and the Vatican's refusal to recognize Israel.

Waldheim, former secretary-general of the United Nations, was elected president of Austria last July. In April, the U.S. government barred him from entering the United States, citing accusations that during World War II he aided in the deportation of thousands of Jews and partisans who later died in Nazi death camps.

"There really is a deep sense of outrage, almost betrayal, in the Jewish community," said Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, director of international relations for the American Jewish Committee.

Some Jews, especially Orthodox rabbis, have opposed meeting with the pope during his U.S. tour all along, Tanenbaum said.

Bill would put nuclear waste in Tennessee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several senators are criticizing a bill drafted by the Reagan administration to authorize a $3.2 billion facility in Tennessee for interim nuclear waste storage.

In addition, other parts of the Energy Department's long-range program for disposing of spent reactor fuel rods and other lethal radioactive wastes also appear to be unraveling after years of planning.

Donna Rice won't say whether she slept with Hart

NEW YORK (AP) — Donna Rice refused for reasons of "dignity" to say whether she slept with Gary Hart in the relationship that scuttled his White House bid, and said she now knows to "stick with a single man."

In an interview broadcast Thursday on ABC's "20-20," she also said that Hart hadn't contacted her since he withdrew from the campaign last month, and that a one-time friend "sold Donna Rice" by selling a photo of her in Hart's lap to the National Enquirer.

"Everybody wants to get a piece of me," she said in her first TV interview about her relationship with the former candidate for the Democratic nomination. "They see dollar signs and that's been as much of my turmoil in recent weeks."

Interviewer Barbara Walters asked Rice if she had slept with Hart on a yacht trip to Bimini or at Hart's Washington townhouse, which was being watched by reporters for The Miami Herald.

"I don't want to answer you," the 29-year-old Miami woman said. "The reason is because it's a question of dignity. Whether I did, whether I didn't, with Gary Hart or anybody else, I wouldn't answer it one way or another."

During the interview, which was taped on Tuesday, she alternated between anger about what she considered invasion of her privacy to tears about the hurt she said the publicity had caused her parents.

She said she thought Hart's withdrawal from the race was "a tragedy."

"I mean, it's awful to see someone that you care about being ripped apart by the press and being sensationalized and exploited," Rice said.

Rice, an actress, model and pharmaceutical saleswoman, said she met Hart at a party at the home of rock musician Don Henley in Aspen, Colo., and later ran into him on a boat in Miami. He later invited her on the trip to Bimini, she said.

Rice said Hart told her he was married, but the two "didn't discuss it."

Asked what she would say if her younger sister was about to become involved with a married man, Rice replied: "Big sister would say, Cathy — that's her name — there's a lot of single men out there. Stick with a single man."

Walters said Rice was not paid for the interview. ABC paid for her transportation and accommodations in New York, said Maury Perl, a "20-20" spokeswoman.

Hart withdrew from the campaign less than a week after the Herald reported that he spent part of a weekend with Rice at his townhouse while his wife was in Colorado.

Rice said after Hart and a campaign adviser, William Broadhurst, discovered reporters staking out the townhouse, Rice was ushered "out the back door" to Broadhurst's house.

Student designs plans for AIDS hospital

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Designing a place to die was no easy matter, says a Texas A&M University graduate student who has come up with plans for an AIDS-victim hospital.

"Most hospitals are places to get well, but an AIDS hospital is a place to die," said student David Liao, whose specialization is in health facilities architecture. "Since curing is impossible, I had to emphasize the caring."

Liao's design of the AIDS hospital, a semester-long project, involved intense research that took him to New York in December to meet with Dr. Gerald H. Friedland, leader of an AIDS care team at Montefiore Medical Center in New York. Friedland was his medical consultant for the design.

Liao said Thursday that existing hospitals have been remodeled to accommodate AIDS patients, but the facilities have not completely satisfied the special needs of AIDS victims.

Liao said his goal was to create an environment appropriate for AIDS patients, their family members and medical staff.

He approached the project with the intention of creating a home-like atmosphere in the hospital, he said. Each patient's room has space for one family member so relatives can spend time there, alleviating the feeling of isolation many AIDS patients have, Liao said.

Nature played an important role in his design. He chose a heavily wooded site overlooking Lake Austin, and the hospital was integrated into that environment.

"I wanted to put the facility on a human scale, so I broke the hospital into several different buildings, all with easy access to nature," he said.

Interior gardens and natural lighting also contribute to the design.

Probation for mother who threw children in bayou

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman accused of throwing six of her seven children into a downtown bayou has been sentenced to 10 years probation after pleading no contest to charges of murder and attempted capital murder, attorneys say.

Juana Leija, 30, entered the pleas Thursday in the death of her son and the attempted capital murder of a daughter. As part of a plea bargain arrangement, three remaining charges of attempted capital murder were dismissed, said her attorney, Dick DeGuerin.

Visiting State District Judge Jimmy James then sentenced Mrs. Leija to 10 years deferred adjudication, meaning her record will be cleared if she successfully completes the probation terms.

Two of Mrs. Leija's children, 5-year-old Juana and 6-year-old Judas Dimas, drowned in the muddy waters of the bayou on April 18, 1986, but nearby workers heard the children's screams and rescued four others.

Their mother said at the time that the world was a terrible place and she thought her children would be better off dead.

The only provision of Mrs. Leija's probation is that she remain under the care of Harris County Mental Health and Mental Retardation officials, DeGuerin said.

"They agreed that she was mentally ill at the time that it happened," he said. "She knows that at the time it happened she thought what she was doing was right."

Prosecutor Carol Davies said probation was too light a sentence.

"There are a lot of women out there in difficult circumstances with children, and I would hate to think that anyone would think that this is an appropriate way to solve your problems," Ms. Davies said.

Mrs. Leija lives at a home for battered women, has a job and visits her surviving children regularly, DeGuerin said.

She will return to court in August to seek a divorce from her husband, Jose Luis Leija, and try to gain permanent custody of her five surviving children, he said.

Grand jury clears police department

SHERMAN (AP) — After 20 days of testimony from 85 witnesses, a special grand jury has found no evidence of alleged criminal activity in the Sherman Police Department.

The Grayson County panel did suggest ways to improve the force.

The findings ended five months of controversy in this city near the Texas-Oklahoma border.

A group of officers had accused Police Chief J.D. Pickens of discrimination and favoritism, and alleged one detective was involved in drug trafficking.

They claimed two officers were hand-picked for promotion by Pickens and suggested the two cheated on a civil service examination.

Global Energy Society sets sights on Africa

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Scientists waging an international battle against poverty claim important gains in India and China, where remote villages now have access to electric lights, fresh water and gas stoves.

The battle line will next move to Africa. Leaders of the Global Energy Society for Eradication of Poverty and Hunger hope to establish 10 African energy villages within five years.

"What is happening is that the world is sending millions of dollars to Africa to fight hunger, and the society feels that something should be done in Africa that will lay a foundation for a permanent solution," says Chaman N. Kashkari, the society's founder.

The Global Energy Society was incorporated three years ago in Ohio, turning Kashkari's dream into reality. Born in India, he knew poverty in his youth and sought a way to make modern energy tools available to parts of the world which need help the most.

He became the society's first president and set a goal of providing sources of renewable energy and, it is hoped, self-sufficiency, throughout the Third World by the year 2000.

"We are now saying we are certain that extreme forms of poverty and hunger will be eradicated. We are now seeing what we can do. But you will not see Utopia," says Kashkari, still the society's director.

Kashkari, 53, first concentrated on his homeland, where other scientists took his concept and formed a Global Energy Society research and development center in New Delhi.

A big city like New Delhi has power systems, but much of India is too far from the city to get electricity or natural gas, Kashkari says.

"There are villages in India where people live with the energy of the sun above them and fresh water underground, and they have never had the means to use these resources," Kashkari says.

Scientists chose the village of Khandia, with about 900 inhabitants, for development. They persuaded the government of India to put up $90,000 to assist the village in a transition to self-sufficiency through sources of energy the villagers could control.

Nanu B. Amin of India, the second president of the society after Kashkari, filed a report for the society on the 1985 Khandia project.

Superintelligent robots may control world

EDITOR'S NOTE — The computer-generated image known as Max Headroom may one day prove more than mere TV fantasy. He just may be the prototype of a new form of immortality for his viewers. So says robotics expert Hans Moravec.

By MICHAEL HIRSH
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — If you can survive beyond the next 50 years or so, you may not have to die at all — at least, not entirely.

That's one vision of the future being fashioned on the frontier of robotics and artificial intelligence research, where many of the nation's experts are talking in terms once reserved for the wildest science fiction.

Hans Moravec, 39-year-old director of the Mobile Robot Laboratory at Carnegie Mellon University's Robotics Institute, believes that computer technology is advancing so swiftly there is little we can do to avoid a future world run by superintelligent robots.

Unless, he says, we become them ourselves.

In an astonishingly short amount of time, scientists will be able to transfer the contents of a person's mind into a powerful computer, and in the process, make him — or at least his living essence — virtually immortal, Moravec claims.

The blond, Austrian-born Moravec laughs giddily — somewhat like a movieland mad scientist — as he expounds his more bizarre notions. But his ideas are thought chillingly sane by many of his colleagues.

"I have found in traveling throughout all of the major robotics and artificial intelligence centers in the U.S. and Japan that the ideas of Hans Moravec are taken seriously," says Grant Fjermedal, author of "The Tomorrow Makers," a recent book about the future of computers and robotics.

Along with Stanford University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, CMU is considered part of a "holy trinity" of leading American research centers into robotics and artificial — or machine — intelligence, says Fjermedal.

MIT's Gerald J. Sussman, who wrote the authoritative textbook on artificial intelligence, agrees that computerized immortality for people "isn't very long from now."

Moravec's futuristic scenario has already come true on the big screen, as well as the small. In creating Max Headroom, the "cyberpunk" computer personality who "stars" in a weekly television series and recent Coca-Cola commercials, and computer fantasies like the movie "Tron," science-fiction writers have "picked up on some real possibilities," Moravec says.

The notion of artificial intelligence also has its detractors, including some of the key researchers who are battling the myriad problems of how to teach machines to think.

CMU's Alan Newell, one of the so-called founding fathers of artificial intelligence, cautions that while little stands in the way of intelligent machines, the transfer of a human mind into one is "going down a whole other path."

"The ability to create intelligent systems is not at all the same as saying I can take an existing mind and capture what's in that mind," he says.

In Moravec's forthcoming book, "Mind Children," he argues that economic competition for faster and better information-processing systems is forcing the human race to engineer its own technological Armageddon.

Natural evolution is finished, he says. The human race is no longer procreating, but designing, its successors.

"We owe our existence to organic evolution. But we owe it little loyalty," Moravec writes. "We are on a threshold of a change in the universe comparable to the transition from non-life to life."

Moravec's projections are based on his research showing that, on the average, the cost of computation has halved every two years from the time of the primitive adding machines of the late 19th century to the supercomputers of the 1980s.

Since the turn of the century there's been a mind-boggling trillionfold decrease in computing costs, figured in "bits" — or basic units of information — processed per second, Moravec says.

Applied warranty applied to services

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court on Wednesday, for the first time, applied the theory of implied warranty to services such as repairs.

The court said the caveat emptor—or buyer beware—rule "as applied to services such as repairs is an anachronism patently out of harmony with modern service buying practices."

"It does a disservice not only to the ordinary prudent purchaser but to the industry itself by encouraging the purveyor of shoddy workmanship," said the majority opinion by Justice Franklin Spears.

The Supreme Court ruled in a Tarrant County lawsuit filed by Lonnie and Donna Barnes against Melody Home Manufacturing Co.

The Barneses sued after the modular pre-fabricated home they purchased from Melody developed puddles and dampness over the years.

Coast Guardsmen landlocked in sea of Air Force blue

By CHAD HUNTLEY
San Antonio Light

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It is perched like a lonely lighthouse on the shoals in a sea of Air Force blue. Two sea buoys mark the Coast Guard's home in San Antonio — in the middle of Brooks Air Force Base.

The tiny three-room beige building — not even Coast Guard white — is occupied by a solitary regular Coast Guardsman, but is home to a 75-person reserve unit that operates along the Texas Gulf Coast.

"It's lonely here," said Machinery Tech. 2nd Class Claude C. Youngblood, the station caretaker. "And I've got another year to go."

Lt. Cmdr. Charles T. Barrett Jr., San Antonio Coast Guard Reserve unit commander, said: "We don't operate like other reserve units. We provide manpower, not hardware."

Barrett's sailors man Coast Guard cutters during drill periods relieving the regular Coast Guard.

Therefore, their home in San Antonio is almost always vacant.

"We have teams in Port Aransas, Port O'Connor and Corpus Christi," Barrett said. "We perform search and rescue missions, waterfront facilities inspections and marine environmental protection."

"We're ready in case of mobilization. We train with firearms, normal missions and by correspondence courses."

Other missions performed by the Coast Guard include manning weather stations and lighthouses, providing navigation aids and ice-breaking.

The Coast Guard falls under the Department of Transportation and is the smallest of the Armed Forces, numbering 35,000 active and reserve members.

"We're smaller than the New York City Police Department, but have responsibility for policing the entire U.S. coast — including Alaska and Hawaii — federal lakes and some overseas locations," Barrett said.

Guitar students never too old for rock'n'roll

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Gary Botello believes a person never gets too old to rock 'n' roll — although some individuals may need to slow down the beat.

So without a fret, 34-year-old Botello has taken it upon himself to help people twice his age add some harmony to their lives by learning to play the guitar.

The city Parks and Recreation Department employee developed a program in which he teaches four music classes on Friday mornings for senior citizens who participate in activities at the Commander's House on South Main Avenue.

"I am probably learning a lot more from them," Botello said. "I have learned to relax because most of them are pretty mellow. But, I try to tailor the lessons to where their interests lie."

Botello, who has worked with the Parks and Recreation Department for 10 years, said beginning and intermediate students usually take guitar lessons to enjoy the companionship of other musicians their age. Ambitious advance students learn to read music.

A guitar player since 1964, Botello said many of his students at the Commander's House are progressing. But, he admits none plays well enough to become the next Eddie Van Halen.

"Van Halen. I don't think most of the people here would even know who he is," Botello said, referring to the famous rock 'n' roll guitar player. "But, a song like 'Kansas City' is pretty heavy metal to them."

Even though he may not be molding future musical super stars, Botello said it is rewarding to know that his classes have enabled his students to enjoy their lives on a brighter note.

"Some of them have told me it helps their arthritis," he said. "One lady said she used to get bad attacks in her fingers. They have gotten better since she's been playing the guitar."

But then again the future could hold some surprises. For example, Botello never intended to learn to play the guitar. When he was attending the fifth grade in Fairfield, N.J., he and some friends decided to get some instruments and mimic The Beatles and the Dave Clark Five in an elementary school talent show. But the show was canceled and they never had a chance to lip sync for their childhood fans, so they learned to play the instruments for real.

New survey finds America has moved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Empire State Building and the Seattle Space Needle, already at opposite sides of the nation, have moved even farther apart, a new government report shows.

The Space Needle moved 312.22 feet west-southwest, while the Empire State Building was heading 120.5 feet northeast.

At the same time the Sears Tower in Chicago edged 19.1 feet northeast, the Washington Monument relocated 94.5 feet in the same direction and the Liberty Star at the Texas state capitol headed 117.1 feet northwest.

And much of the rest of the nation shifted a bit also, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration reports.

While all this movement may seem both improper and unlikely for massive structures, the scientists say it's nothing to worry about — the relocations are only on paper.

The buildings are, for all practical purposes, in the same places they always have been.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

BEACHED... and forgotten!

This old forgotten boat is almost buried in the reeds. Can this boat in any way be compared to our talents? What of these talents that God has given us? Have they been beached, forgotten, buried?

Heaven expects us to help in this matter of creating a better world where brother helps brother by using to the fullest extent the talents He has bestowed upon us. God always provokes and prods mankind to do good works, and accomplish great things. And He says that if we dedicate ourselves to this matter He will help. But the decision to use our talents and develop them is our choice.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: These commandments that I give you today are to be upon your hearts. Impress them on your children. Talk about them when you sit at home and when you walk along the road, when you get up. (Deuteronomy 6:6-7 NIV)

One of my church friends and I took our young daughters for a summer evening walk.

The girls spied a high mound of dirt that had been recently dumped on a vacant lot in preparation for the building of a house. As everyone knows, a pile of black dirt is an irresistible playground.

All four of the little girls made a squealing dash for the hill to see who could climb to the top first. They scrambled upward, monkey style, hindered only by occasional slips that would send them sliding back down on their tummies.

My friend's older daughter was the first to the top. She raised herself upright, threw her hands in the air and shouted triumphantly, "Sermon on the mount!"

Her Christian teaching was so second nature to her it spilled over into her play.

Another friend is a director of a child development center. She overheard two preschoolers who were playing in the home living area.

They were playing house, with the little girl taking on the character of mother and the little boy serving as daddy. Mother said to Daddy, "Do you want to get married or do you want to just live together?" The children were parroting the confusion they heard at home or saw on television.

Children believe what they hear, see and experience. Christian parents have the privilege and responsibility to saturate our children with Biblical truths and spiritual guidance.

By teaching them from birth through Christian actions, attitudes and education, we permeate our children's thinking, anchor their characters, weave their moral fiber, open the door to salvation and bathe them with an awareness of God's love.

Hi-Land Christian Church sets Vacation Bible School

Hi-Land Christian Church, 1615 N. Banks, will hold its annual Vacation Bible School next week with the theme of "Hallelujah, Jesus Is King!"

Classes will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon Monday through Friday for young people ages 4 through the fifth grade.

Serving as school director is Christy Drake. Assisting will be co-director Terri Jenkins, with Gerald T. Jenkins as minister.

Drake said Vacation Bible School, more than any other church program, "makes learning fun!"

She said the school will include exciting Bible lessons, creative crafts, lively singing and refreshments.

Drake said VBS offers children the chance to make new friends and to have "nice teachers who love the Lord and who love kids." The school also provides "exciting new things to see and do and become," she added.

VBS provides concentrated learning on a single theme, with the study introducing God's Word and His Son to some children for the very first time, Drake explained. "Students will learn to know and love Jesus in a richer and deeper way," she said.

The school's result is to give children "a challenge to follow, love and serve God's wonderful Son, who teaches us how to live," she stated.

Unitarians go to summer hours

AMARILLO - The Unitarian Universalist Fellowship of Amarillo has announced its new schedule for the summer months.

Programs will be held at 10 a.m. on Sundays at the fellowship's church building, 4901 Cornell Street in Amarillo.

Religion Roundup

MONTICELLO, N.Y. (AP)—A Jewish fraternal group at its annual convention called on all Jews to refrain from visiting Austria and to boycott all products made there in protest of the presidency of Kurt Waldheim.

"By electing Waldheim, Austria has shown its identification with all that is beastly, all that is horrible in the world's history," said Ernest Zelig, president of Bnai Zion, based in New York City.

BEIJING, China (AP)—Xiu Rui-juan, a once persecuted Christian and now a world-recognized scientist and physician who for the last three years has been named "Woman of the Year" by the Chinese government, says:

"I never denied my faith or my background, a fact that has caused me many difficult moments and suffering. Now the difficult times are over, and we thank God for freedom and for our country's openness to the world."

Expert claims TV religion deformed by television itself

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—By buying into television, the "electronic church" is victimized because TV presents a distorted version of biblical faith, a noted church communication expert says.

Analyzing the predominant preachments and appeals of TV ministers, the Rev. William F. Fore says they play up self-interest.

They make religion the "key to maximizing self-interest," he says, obscuring the biblical demands for community, justice and service.

In a new book, "Television and Religion," published by Augsburg Press, Fore says:

"This corruption of the fundamental biblical concept of conscience into self-interest is perhaps the most serious of all the electronic church's distortions."

With it comes a variety of others, he says, including:

- The "give-to-get ploy," promising contributors will get back more than they give, sometimes called "seed faith," planting dollars to get more in return.

Fore calls it a kind of "heavenly lottery."

- A "strong dualism" that separates everything into light and darkness, spirit and matter, good and evil — an ancient Christian heresy.

"It is rampant on TV religion," Fore says.

- Highlighting of belief by celebrities and successful people, implying that if viewers believe things also will be wonderful for them, and when it isn't, pushing them into self-doubt and alienation.

"The 'successful people' approach is bad psychology as well as bad theology," Fore says.

- Promises of earthly rewards for believers, suggesting they have power to get whatever they desire, so long as they have faith, akin to another ancient heresy.

- The "fallacy of nominalism," that simply to affirm the name of the Lord Jesus Christ is to be saved.

This "fits in nicely with the electronic church's emphasis on the individual," Fore writes.

"At almost every point the underlying theology of the electronic church is at odds with the theologies of the mainline churches," he says.

Fore, a United Methodist minister and long-time communications executive of National Council of Churches, blames the biblical distortions mainly on the demands of television itself.

Television has cultivated a "taste and expectation for instant gratification and simple answers," Fore says, adding:

"The electronic church has had to fall in line, providing trivial and superficial religion, a quick fix to people's anxieties."

He says the TV preachers also have had to succumb to the industry's requirements of effective techniques, whatever psychological or other selling gambits will work and draw audiences.

TV religion also pulls out all the accompanying techniques such as slogans, pop songs, the bandwagon, "glad names" and "bad names," Fore says.

Fore exempts evangelist Billy Graham from the criticisms of the electronic church, pointing out that Graham uses television critically, only bringing in cameras to cover some of his crusades.

"He has always kept his distance from the television mold," Fore said in an interview. "He's done that either intuitively or otherwise, not letting it swallow him up. He also has handled his finances completely differently."

Despite the faults Fore sees in TV ministries generally, he credits them for bringing out the "spiritual hunger of millions" that regular churches generally have not reached.

Sister Beverly Spencer, president of the Matron's Association, has helped to organize the program.

Degrate also will lead services at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, June 24-26, with concluding services scheduled for 3 p.m. Sunday, June 28.

Degrate also is vice president of the Associational Christian Education Conference.

A field worker, Degrate works through the association to help worthy students in the district with scholarship awards. He conducts youth workshops and evangelistic services in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado and California.

Communion bread kept secret

By MARTA W. ALDRICH
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—When Barbara Reynolds tastes a batch of her company's Communion bread fresh out of the oven, she views the pill-sized loaves as a product to be packaged, promoted and sold.

But when she raises her company's bread to her lips each Sunday morning in church, the businesswoman calls the product a symbol of the body of Christ.

"There is a complete line of demarcation in my mind between tasting a batch in our kitchen and taking Communion in church," said Mrs. Reynolds, whose company sells billions of the tiny loaves each year to churches and church bookstores throughout the nation.

"To me, when I'm taking Communion, that is very religious. It's as though I never knew how the bread was made at all," she said.

Mrs. Reynolds' business, the S&M Communion Bread Co., has been making the loaves for 50 years and bills itself as "the largest bread maker of the smallest loaf in the world."

Mrs. Reynolds, 42, whose grandmother began the business in her kitchen, has been learning the trade ever since she was big enough to mix the batter and fold the dough onto a rolling machine.

She is careful, however, not to divulge any trade secrets about what goes on inside the firm's small white brick plant, formerly the home of a Nashville chili business.

"Asking how we make the bread would be kinda like asking Colonel Sanders the formula for his herbs and spices," she said.

"There's only about a half dozen Communion bread companies in the country so there are some things none of us ever tell. It's a very competitive business," she said.

The company's only product is the unleavened bread that has been churned out there since the business got started — no special sizes, no extra flavors, no new-and-improved recipes — just the same portions of flour, vegetable shortening, salt and water used by Mrs. Reynolds' grandmother when she began baking the bread for her church in 1937.

S&M, which stands for "Son & Mother," does not produce the matzo bread eaten in the Jewish faith during Passover, or the disc-shaped wafers served during Communion at most Catholic, Lutheran and Episcopal churches.

But many other Protestant churches do use the little loaves.

About a dozen employees at S&M make and hand-pack the bread "like fine chocolates" in boxes shipped to a variety of customers, ranging from mainline Methodists to black churches to charismatic groups.

"They're just Christians — anybody who has a belief in God and wants a small piece of Communion bread," Mrs. Reynolds said of her customers.

Mrs. Reynolds says there are no specific guidelines in the Bible about how to make Communion bread, except for one reference to "unleavened bread" in the book of Deuteronomy. Therefore, her recipe does not include yeast.

However, many churches simply buy a loaf of french bread at the grocery or open a box of crackers for Communion, she said.

Mrs. Reynolds, a former marketing analyst for Eastman Kodak and college economics professor, says S&M's stringent, two-day process yields a product that is uniform in size and color, although admittedly bland in taste.

Grandfather's abuse weighs heavily on victim

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I've been struggling with for years. During my childhood I was sexually abused repeatedly by my grandfather — he's my mother's father. I realize that I was a victim, but I still carry a lot of guilt and shame. Although my mother and I have always been very close, I never could bring myself to tell her. I know that Mom thinks the world of her father so I kept it from her to spare her feelings. (How do you tell your mother that her father molested you? He is still alive.)

I think I may need counseling to get over my feelings of anger and guilt. But should I involve my mother? Would it make me feel better or worse? I am terribly confused. What should I do?

CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR CAUGHT: You need counseling. Perhaps the person who should be confronted is your grandfather. He needs to know that you are still hurting and feeling guilty for something that he did. It's also possible that there are others in your family who were also abused by your grandfather, and need help as much as you. Call a social service agency in your area and inquire about counseling. There are also support groups for adults who have been sexually abused as children. Please get professional help today, and then decide who should be involved.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I saw a young woman slip a pack of cigarettes into her purse while shopping at a market. She did this quite openly, so we thought she intended to pay for them, but after she unloaded her groceries, she didn't bring out the cigarettes. The cashier rang up her groceries, dog food, etc., which she paid for with food stamps, then she left with the cigarettes in her purse — unpaid for. We asked the cashier if that woman shopped there often, and she said, yes, she had seen her before. Then we told her about the cigarettes and she said we should have said something to the woman before she got to the checkout counter.

Dear Abby

Abby, if we had said something to her before we got to the checkout counter, she could have said she intended to pay for them. Or should we have told the cashier about it before the woman got to the checkout counter? What would you have done?

HUNTINGTON BEACH COUPLE

DEAR COUPLE: I would have quietly "reminded" the absent-minded shopper to pay for the cigarettes as soon as I saw her put them in her purse.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to marry a man (I'll call him "Tex") who was hospitalized many years ago for a mental illness. I am really afraid to marry him without knowing more about his mental illness. Tex told me it included depression and some kind of schizophrenia, which he managed to overcome with treatment.

I wrote to my fiance's psychiatrist asking if I could talk to him about my fiance's history of mental illness. My fiance not only approved of my doing this — he encouraged me. I stated this in my letter. The psychiatrist ignored my letter. What do you advise?

NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: Ask Tex to arrange a consultation for both of you with his psychiatrist. Of course the doctor is entitled to be paid for the time he spends to answer your questions. And by the way, ignoring your letter was inexcusable.

DEAR ABBY: Does the American Cancer Society have a hot line where a person can call and ask questions concerning cancer and cancer treatment?

A family member has just been diagnosed as having cancer of the colon and there are so many questions I would like to ask, but I cannot ask that person. Thanks for any help you can give me. You may print this (without my name) because I'm sure many other people would also like to know.

NEEDING INFO

DEAR NEEDING: Call the National Cancer Institute. The toll-free number is 1-800-4-CANCER. You will be able to speak directly to trained personnel who can answer most of your questions. Free pamphlets are also available upon request. Callers can even be referred to experimental treatments for special types of cancer.

Mouse house keeps kids busy

By BETH COTTEN

Kids are a lot like mice — there's no such thing as having only one around the house. With summer vacation upon us, they seem to multiply by magic. There may be only three in the yard, but turn your back and the three become 10.

The question is, what to do to keep them busy in a constructive way? One answer is, set them to work furnishing a mouse house.

This four-room, fold-up house is a treat to make and play with. Two rooms are occupied by Morton and Millicent, the city slickers; and the other two by Maryann and Zeke, their country cousins.

The mice, their clothing, the house and furnishings can be made quite easily, using cardboard and scraps of fabric and felt. It's a terrific project for parents and children to work on together. Our step-by-step plans include materials lists, full-size patterns and illustrated cutting and assembly instructions.

They are included in our doll house and furniture pack, including complete plans for the mouse house, plus a colonial doll house and furniture, a doll house with gingerbread trim, a miniature schoolhouse, a Victorian mansion doll house, eight rooms of furniture, and several furniture projects for larger dolls.

To order, specify the doll houses pack, No. 4004, and send $19.95. Mail to: Makin' Things with Kids, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008.

Fold-up mouse house is a creative project for parents and children to work on together.

The folding mouse house has fabric wallpaper, made by stitching up four connected pockets. Insert cardboard into each pocket, so you can fan out the walls to form the four rooms of the house.

The furnishings are very simple. The country kitchen has a cardboard fireplace covered with red brick fabric, a white felt mantel, black felt andirons, and a felt clock and candlesticks on the mantel. Cut the shapes and draw details with a marker.

On the other country kitchen wall there is a felt plate rack with decorated felt plates. To make a kitchen table, cut a 3 x 4-inch piece of cardboard for the top. For legs, use rolled cardboard or short pieces of dowel rod. Cut a small fabric tablecloth.

To make a window, cut a square of white or yellow felt and glue to a wall. Cut and glue on narrow black cross-strips for the pane dividers. Glue eyelet trim along the sides and top as curtain. Imagination is the only limiting factor. Use seam binding as baseboards, and glue decorative trim along the tops of the walls. Make paintings by glueing together small pieces of felt or fabric. The mice are made from gray fur fabric, with felt arms, ears and tails. Use sequins for eyes, pompons for noses and thread for whiskers. The clothing is very simple: Zeke, for instance, wears only a calico bandanna.

Some counties have two courthouses

School vacation and family trips for the summer can be a terrific time to add to the family tree. Plan your trips around the various courthouse hours, checking to see if the office is open on Saturday but closed on Wednesday, as is the case in many of the Georgia counties.

Watch for those counties with two districts and two courthouses. HINDS County, Mississippi, with records in Jackson and Raymond, is an example of the dual districts. Raymond has the older records, and the staff is very friendly and cooperative to the genealogy researcher.

When writing for a marriage license, you need to specify whether you want a photocopy of the actual page in the marriage book or a duplicate of the marriage on a printed certificate.

Gena on Genealogy

Gena Walls

The photocopy will be certified and is important in proving parentage if the father is giving permission for his child to marry. This permission is usually for a daughter that is under age, but in some cases is for a son.

The fee for the photocopy is $10 per copy. The duplicate certificate is $5, certified, and contains the name of the groom, the name of the bride and the date of the marriage. If all you need is proof of marriage, this would be acceptable and could save you some money.

The dual district causes problems for genealogists when it is not listed in the reference books, as is the case with HINDS, and should be considered as a possibility if you write a county for a record and receive a negative response when you have other sources listing that county as the origin.

When traveling, remember to check the local telephone books when you stop for meals or for the evening.

Another possibility is the local libraries, with many having at least one evening a week with later hours. Ask for assistance. A genealogy department, a family surname exchange, a local history section, old newspapers or an obituary-cemetery file are some possibilities.

If you are really lucky, perhaps the local genealogical or historical society will be meeting during your visit. Watch for items for this column! Share your findings and Happy Hunting!

The masses prefer glasses

DALLAS — Seeing the world through spectacles hasn't lost its market appeal. Results from a recent survey revealed that the masses still prefer eyeglasses over contact lenses.

According to an informal survey of 250 optometrists affiliated with Pearle Vision Center, 80 percent of their patients choose eyeglasses as their primary source of vision correction.

"Eyeglasses are still the choice of the people," said Dr. Michael Simons, vice president of professional affairs, Pearle Vision Center. "But with the wide variety of contact lenses now available, the number of lens wearers may double within the next three to five years," he said. "Especially younger consumers."

The survey also revealed that: —More than 70 percent of contact lens wearers are between the ages of 18-45.

—Of their patients who choose contact lenses, 70 percent are women and 30 percent are men. —The reason most often cited for choosing contacts over eyeglasses is appearance.

Crenshaw takes early lead in U.S. Open

Open golfers attack trees

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The trees are taking a beating at the U.S. Open.

The assault hasn't led to any complaints yet from environmentalists but it has brought a few sympathetic smiles from duffers in the gallery who have clipped a few branches themselves.

The Open began on a chilly, Bloody-Mary Thursday morning as the branches of towering cypress trees hugging the skinny fairways poked menacingly into the fog. Fans sipped their drinks and tramped into the tall, wet rough to see how the pros get out of trouble.

Joey Sindelar gave a fine example on the 10th hole after his drive knocked off some leaves and plunked down five yards outside the ropes on the right of the fairway, about 175 yards from the green.

Sindelar lifted his next shot over the branches of a 50-foot cypress, and got enough distance to reach the green and make par.

Gary Hallberg was equally fortunate on the eighth, where a tree played a critical role in changing the leadership of the 1955 U.S. Open.

Hallberg hit a cypress on the right of the green, but the ball dropped onto the friendly carpet below and he two-putted for par.

Thirty-two years ago, San Francisco amateur Harvie Ward wasn't so lucky. He was near the lead in the third round when he hit into the tree and the ball didn't come down. He took a penalty stroke on the way to a double bogey and never threatened again, finishing the round at 76 and the tournament in seventh place.

The ball, incidentally, fell out of the tree a week later.

There are 40,000 trees on the Olympic Club's Lake Course, and dozens of them were victimized on Thursday. A 25-foot branch behind the 15th green crashed down, apparently from the wind, although there were some suspicions that it might have been loosened by a wild shot.

Ben Crenshaw moves into U.S. Open lead

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ray Floyd began the defense of his U.S. Open title with a dream round of golf.

But, still, he fell one stroke short of matching Ben Crenshaw's 3-under-par 67, a score which was posted early in Thursday's first round and remained atop the leader board at day's end.

"I set a target of 70. But when I went to the practice tee and the wind was light, I knew I had to take advantage of an early starting time," Crenshaw said. "I was three ahead of my target."

He did it with the help of two monstrous birdie putts, from 60 and 35 feet, on the back nine and despite a double-bogey 6 at the 14th hole.

Crenshaw labeled both big putts "no-brainers" and added, "You don't expect those things in a U.S. Open. They negated my double bogey."

The 35-year-old Texan, who won the 1984 Masters title, got off to his best start ever in a U.S. Open. The closest he's come to winning was a third-place finish in 1975.

He begins the second round over the Olympic Club's 6,709-yard Lake Course with a one-stroke lead over Floyd, Spain's Seve Ballesteros and Japanese star Tommy Nakajima. Foreign golfers Denis Watson (Zimbabwe), Nick Price (South Africa) and Bernhard Langer (West Germany) were at 69, and four-time champion Jack Nicklaus was with Bob Tway, Scotland's Sandy Lyle and six others at 70.

"I played the kind of round you dream about in a U.S. Open. I reached 16 greens in regulation," Floyd said.

"I went out there with the idea that, no matter what, I was going to enjoy my walk around the Olympic Club as the defending champion."

"It was more enjoyable than I could have imagined, because I haven't played as good a round of golf since last year's Open."

The weather, cool and calm, remained virtually unchanged through the opening round.

"The course was very forgiving, after those practice rounds in the wind and sun. We got lucky with the overcast and fog," Floyd said.

Neither Floyd, 44, nor Nicklaus, 47, have come close to winning a tournament this year.

A three-putt bogey-5 on the closing hole prevented Nicklaus from joining the group under 70.

"I didn't really object to that much. I had made my fair share of putts," said Nicklaus, who in hope of regaining his winning touch on the greens switched recently to a putter he'd put away a few years ago.

He made several birdie and par-saving putts ranging from five to 20 feet Thursday.

"After I made a 15-footer for a birdie at the 15th, I said, 'This is someone I'm not familiar with.'"

Crenshaw's 67 was his fourth consecutive Open round under 70. He opened with a 75 on a stormy Thursday last year at New York's Shinnecock Hills, then posted 69s the last three days to finish in a tie for sixth, four strokes behind Floyd.

Crenshaw had never seen the Olympic layout before arriving over the weekend to begin practice.

"I'm still trying to get to know the course. It's a very stern test. Gosh, it's difficult," Crenshaw said Thursday.

Those finding it a lot more difficult were such former Open champs as Johnny Miller, Tom Watson, Lee Trevino and Fuzzy Zoeller. Miller had two double-bogey in a round of 71 while Watson came in at 72, Trevino 73 and Zoeller 78.

Australia's Greg Norman, the reigning British Open champ, opened with a 72.

Crenshaw has won over $2.5 million in 15 years on the pro tour, but the Masters title is his only one in one of golf's major championships.

"I couldn't describe how important it would be to me to win another," he said Thursday. "Doing it once was tremendous, but I'd love to do it again."

Pampa tracksters avoid trouble spot

Pampa tracksters Andrea Hopkins and Laquita Brown have spent the past few days in one of the world's trouble spots, but both were reported to be out of the danger zone, PHS track coach Gary Cornelsen learned Thursday.

Since Sunday, the two girls have been in Seoul, South Korea, site of several violent confrontations between students and police. They are among 140 American high school athletes who will be competing in the International Sports Exchange meet Saturday in Canton, China.

"The parents have been worried after reading about the trouble over there, but both girls called Thursday and said they were okay, but they've been pretty tense about the situation," Cornelsen said. "I think they're both anxious to get the track meet over and done with."

Both girls graduated from Pampa High School this spring. "They'd had to watch where they go since they've been in Seoul and that's taken something away from the trip," Cornelsen said.

After the meet is over, the United States team will be flying to Honolulu, Hawaii for a two-day layover.

"I think the girls will be excited about getting back to familiar territory," Cornelsen said.

The U.S. group has been traveling back and forth from Seoul to Hong Kong, China on sightseeing trips this week.

Cornelsen feels the overseas trip has been a sobering experience for both girls after hearing their comments on the conditions in South Korea and China.

"They've found educational opportunities and the quality of life pretty poor compared to the United States," he said. "I don't think they realized how different things are over there."

The girls have also had trouble adjusting to the rice-chop suey diet of the Far East.

"They've complained about the food, but they've found some McDonald's to eat at," Cornelsen said.

Hopkins will be competing in both the discus and shot put while Brown is entered in the hurdles, long jump and 200-meter dash at the Canton meet.

"They've been working out quite a bit," Cornelsen added.

Hopkins is the state's Class 4A shot put champion while Brown was a member of the state championship 440-meter relay team.

Bankers hand NY Life first setback

First National Bank cashed in on clutch mound performances by Mike Cagle and James Bybee Thursday night to set up a possible playoff for the Babe Ruth (13-15) regular-season championship.

The Bankers held off previously-unbeaten New York Life 3-2 to gain a first-place tie for the league leadership.

First National finished the regular-season with an 11-1 record while New York Life (10-1) has one game remaining. A New York victory over Grant Supply tonight would set up a playoff Monday night.

The Bankers suffered through some trying moments last night before pulling out the victory when Bybee struck out Jayson Williams with the bases loaded in the bottom of the seventh.

Cagle started on the mound for First National and allowed just four hits while pitching four consecutive scoreless innings. But he needed help from Bybee in the seventh inning when he walked the bases loaded with one out and the Bankers hanging onto a 3-2 lead. Bybee came in and struck out both Paul Brown and Williams to end the game.

Losing pitcher was Quincy Williams, who also surrendered only four hits before he left in the fifth inning.

The score was tied at 1-all at the end of the first inning, but the Bankers moved ahead 3-1 after single runs in the third and fourth innings. Two of the three FNB runs scored on infield grounders by Cagle and Tony Bybee while the other scored on an error.

New York edged closer at 3-2 in the sixth inning when Jessie Hernandez knocked in Brown with a single to right field.

At the plate, the Bankers collected a triple from both Bybee and Guy Savage and a double from Cagle.

Mark Aderholt and Brown slashed base hits for New York Life while Tim Davis knocked in a run with a fielder's choice grounder.

Pampa Hardware held off Cree Companies 9-8 in another close Babe Ruth contest Thursday night.

Winning pitcher was Scott Lucas while Mark Wood picked up a save.

Phillip Sexton, Mark Bridges, Wood and Lucas had two hits each to lead the Hardware hitting attack.

Scott Hahn was a perfect four for four at the plate to lead Cree. Chuck Jones and Kenny Eppison had two hits each while Kyle Gauger had a single and double.

In National League Bambino action, Glo-Valve Service clinched a tie for the second half of the season with a solid 6-0 win over Cabot Corporation Thursday.

Jeff Tidwell scattered three hits, struck out eight and did not walk a batter to pick up his fifth win and second shutout of the season. Tidwell threw only 66 pitches in the entire game and did not allow a runner past second base.

Tidwell aided his own cause at the plate with three hits and three runs batted in to lead Glo-Valve in hitting. Chad Dunnam scored three times for Glo-Valve and had two hits and a run batted in. Brad Smillie hit his fifth home run of the season and now leads the league in home runs. Michael Gandy, who scored twice, and Mitch Spence also had hits for Glo-Valve.

Tarin Peet had two hits to lead Cabot. Losing pitcher Matt Edgar also had a hit.

Edgar struck out five, walked five and gave up eight hits.

Glo-Valve moved a half-game ahead of Dunlap Industrial, who played Duncan Insurance at 8 p.m. today in the final game of the regular season in the National League.

Dixie came from behind in the bottom of the sixth inning to hand OCAW an 8-6 loss in the other NL game last night.

Both teams finished the regular season with 8-6 records and tied for third place.

Dixie's big blow was a two-run homer by Danny Hendricks in the sixth to win the game.

Hendricks, Jimmy Fossett and Dennis Graham had two hits each to lead Dixie's attack.

Chris Gilbert topped OCAW in hitting with two hits while Greg Moore, Matt Winborne, Michael Foote and Dan O'Dell had one hit each.

10. (For experts only.) There have been nine players in baseball history to win back-to-back Most Valuable Player Awards, and they just happen to fill out all nine positions on the playing field. Name them.

AND THE ENVELOPE PLEASE...

1. California defeated Yale for the first CWS title in 1947 at Kalamazoo, Michigan, that All-American City.

2. Prior to becoming an all-star shortstop for the Cubs and later managing the White Sox, Don Kessinger was a three-year starter and leading scorer for the University of Mississippi in basketball. He was a high school all-American in both sports as well as an all-stater as a football quarterback.

3. They would drive veteran Cub sportscaster yrrah yarrC, who likes to pronounce last names backwards, crazy as their last names are spelled the same both ways. Caray, recently returned from a light stroke, got thousands of get-well cards and letters including one signed by every member of the Houston Astro organization EXCEPT broadcaster Milo Hamilton, who told me "that man stabbed me in the back over the Cub job", and continues the feud today. Caray's return also caused the dismissal of WGN-TV sports anchor Bob Hillman, who failed to cover Caray's return-to-work press conference, the final straw for WGN brass.

4. Paul Schaal hit .244 in an 11-year career as an infielder with the Angels and Royals, and now helps Brett stay in condition as he works as a chiropractor in suburban Kansas City.

5. Al Oliver got 209 hits, 117 RBIs for the Texas Rangers in 1980 and 204 hits, 109 RBIs for Montreal in 1982.

6. Al Downing, also wearing No. 44, threw that historic pitch to Hank Aaron, who also wore No. 44, and incidentally, hit 44 home runs in a season four times in his career.

7. The now-disabled and probably retired Steve Garvey played the entire 1984 season errorless for San Diego.

8. Trying to turn Baylor pitchers into talents comparable to the original Baylor Bearcat, Ted Lyons, is 72-year old Sid Hudson who compiled a 104-152, 4.28 ERA major league record.

Indians on verge of snapping long slump

By The Associated Press

Tony Bernazard's season has mirrored that of the Cleveland Indians. The second baseman has struggled at the plate and his teammates, who batted an American League-high .284 last year, have followed suit.

But things might be turning around for both Bernazard and the Indians. Bernazard went 4-for-4 and Cleveland got home runs from Carmen Castillo, Chris Bando and Cory Snyder in a 7-5 victory Thursday night over the Boston Red Sox. The Indians have scored 60 runs in their last 10 games.

"Once you've hit .300, you want to keep doing it," said Bernazard, who had two singles, a double and a triple and scored a run. "How can you be happy with .216 — which was what I was hitting going into this game — especially after the season I had last year and the year before?"

Bernazard batted .301 last season and .274 the previous year. He's now hitting .231.

Elsewhere, it was New York 6, Baltimore 3; Milwaukee 6, Toronto 3; and Kansas City 10, California 4.

Bernazard singled before Bando's two-run homer in the second. His single also helped build a run in the fourth. Castillo homered in the sixth for a 5-3 lead and Snyder finished Cleveland's scoring with a solo home run in the eighth.

Wade Boggs had three hits for Boston, extending his hitting streak to 19 games and upping his major league-leading batting average to .364.

Yankees 6, Orioles 3

New York moved within four percentage points of first-place Toronto in the East by winning its sixth of seven games since being swept by the Blue Jays and falling from the top spot.

Henry Cotto had a double and home run and knocked in three runs. Rick Rhoden got the win even though he crumpled to the ground after Mike Young's hard-hit ball leading off the fourth inning caromed off the inside of his left knee. Rhoden left after five innings.

Scott McGregor, 2-7, allowed all of the Yankees' runs and eight hits in 3 2-3 innings. McGregor hasn't won since May 16. In his last five starts, McGregor is 0-2 with a 10.70 earned run average and has allowed 34 hits in 17 2-3 innings.

Baltimore has lost 14 of the last 15 games and its pitchers have given up six runs or more 17 times in the last 22 games.

Royals 10, Angels 4

Mark Gubicza, who hadn't won in a month, pitched a six-hitter and Frank White had three RBI for the visiting Royals. Danny Tartabull hit a two-run homer and Willie Wilson had a solo shot for the Royals.

Gubicza, 4-8, went all the way for the second time this season, walking four and striking out five.

Dodgers edge by Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Los Angeles' Steve Sax got four hits, including a game-winning 2-run single in the 11th inning for a 6-4 victory over Houston.

But it was Astros reliever Dave Smith who drew most of the comments following Thursday night's game.

"I think Dave is scuffing the ball, I'd bet my house on it," Dodger catcher Mike Scioscia said. "The sad thing is, Dave is a great pitcher, he doesn't have to do that. He's a master at it."

Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda also believes Smith was scuffing the ball.

"Yes we do, we saw it," Lasorda said. "But we don't want to talk about it. What happens on the field should stay on the field."

Sax did enough on the field to beat the Astros.

His 10th inning double scored Dave Anderson, ending Smith's string of 27 2-3 innings without yielding an earned run.

After Houston tied the score in the 10th on Kevin Bass' single,

Sax drove in two runs with a single in the 11th to finally win it for the Dodgers.

But Sax would not join the scuffling controversy.

"He has quite a fork ball," Sax said. "I've never said Dave Smith scuffs the ball. He has an outstanding sinking ball."

Smith said Dodger requests to check the game balls did not bother him.

"It doesn't bother me what they do," Smith said. "It's not a distraction to me."

The Astros led 3-0 after three innings on a wild pitch by Dodger starter Bob Welch in the first inning and a 2-run homer by Glenn Davis in the third inning.

Los Angeles got solo home runs from John Shelby and Mike Marshall of starter Bob Knepper in the fourth and tied it at 3-3 in the sixth on Shelby's sacrifice fly.

The Dodger victory followed an early morning speech from Lasorda, followed by a workout.

Elia replaces Felske as Phillies' manager

CHICAGO (AP) — Lee Elia, promising no miracles and delighted at getting a second chance to manage, has taken the reins of the slump-ridden Philadelphia Phillies.

"There will be no miracles or changes of consequence," Elia, beneficiary of the first managerial change in the major leagues this season, said Thursday after the dismissal of John Felske. "I'm happy to get a chance to manage again."

The debut of Elia, who served Felske as a coach, was spoiled by the Chicago Cubs. They beat the Phillies for the third straight day, 9-7.

Elia thought it was "ironic" that the change came in Chicago where he managed the Cubs in 1982.

"Maybe it's fitting," he said. "I was first hired in Chicago and first fired in Chicago."

Elia had a 73-89 record with the Cubs in 1982 and was dismissed during the 1983 season, shortly after a tirade against Chicago fans.

At that time he said, "Eighty-five percent of the people in this city work and the other 15 percent are out here booing my players."

Elia, 49, said he is probably better equipped to run a team than he was with the Cubs.

"Maybe I was too impatient the first time," he said. "I am more mature now."

The 45-year-old Felske, a Chicago native, had managed the Phillies since 1985, compiling a 190-194 record.

Picked by many to be contenders this season, the Phillies were 29-32 and in fifth place in the National League East when the change was made. The loss Thursday was the sixth in their eight games.

Howser's courage noted at service

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Never once in his losing battle against brain cancer did Dick Howser ask, "Why me," says an official of the Kansas City Royals.

"He said, 'Why not me?'" Royals president Joe Burke told about 1,300 mourners Thursday who gathered for a memorial service to the former Royals manager. Burke, who named Howser as Royals' manager in 1981, said he spent his final months counting his blessings, not cursing his fate.

Howser died Wednesday at 51, almost 11 months after doctors partially removed a malignant tumor from the left side of his brain.

"Dick said, 'I have lived a good life. God has blessed me,'" said Burke, one of several speakers at the 45-minute service. "He said, 'I have so much to be thankful for, God has blessed me.'" As Howser neared the end, Burke said, "He once told me, 'Joe, keep laughing. Keep smiling. I am not afraid to die.'"

American League President Dr. Bobby Brown; Howser's widow, Nancy, and twin daughters Jana and Jill; and Royals' co-owners Ewing Kauffman and Avron Fogelman were among those in attendance.

Funeral services and burial will be Saturday in Howser's hometown of Tallahassee, Fla. "Dick's fight is over," said Paul Splittorff, a retired Royals' pitcher who represented the players. "We can all take comfort in knowing that tonight, our skipper is safe at home."

Several speakers noted the courage Howser showed in his ordeal, which began last July 22 when doctors partially removed a malignant brain tumor. The operation was just one week after Howser, suffering persistent headaches and memory lapses, guided the American League to victory in the All-Star Game in what turned out to be his final appearance.

"Dick Howser learned in these last eleven months what life and life's priorities are all about," Burke said. "He went from baseball, family and God, to God, family and baseball. Burke noted that Howser became deeply religious in his final months.

"He was ready for the final road trip," Burke said. "He was tired. He was ready to go home."

Serving as pallbearers for Thursday night's service were Royals broadcaster Fred White; public relations director Dean Vogelaar; general manager John Schuerholz; trainer Mickey Cobb; Howser's neighbor Gerry Winship and Burke.

"There is no doubt that Dick left us too soon, and that's very difficult to understand," White said. "God, we commit to you the soul of a precious friend."

Howser's casket is carried from church.

Panel criticizes MHMR facilities

AUSTIN (AP) — Some patients in Texas' community facilities and eight mental hospitals are not getting adequate care and treatment, a member of a court-appointed mental health panel says.

Texas is 47th or 48th among states in mental health funding, "and it's difficult to do a great deal when you're that far behind. I think we have been attempting for years to develop an adequate program with just minimal resources," David Pharis said Thursday.

Pharis summarized a three-volume report to U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas on the state's compliance with a 1981 settlement of a lawsuit filed by parents of mental health patients.

The report for the period December through April is the 10th since the three-member R.A.J. Review Panel began monitoring compliance in 1982.

MHMR's budget request for 1988-89 is only "minimally adequate" for compliance with the settlement agreement, Pharis said.

"The problem is still very bad because you have conditions in the hospitals where people are not getting decent care, and there are programs in communities that are inadequate to meet the needs in terms of numbers," he said.

"Texas patients not getting adequate care, and this public system is particularly aimed at providing services to the poor, so it is Texas poor who are being underserved," he said.

W. Kent Johnson, director of legal services for the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, said many of the report's criticisms "deal purely with questions of professional judgment."

"Mental health professionals will differ on their approach to various issues and such differences are to be expected," Johnson said.

"The panel and its consultants have not only attempted to substitute their professional judgment for that of department staff, they have attempted to substitute incorrect judgments."

Pharis, a social worker and panel coordinator, said two issues concerned him most — individual care in the hospitals and long-term community care.

"We're not trying to prevent people from being discharged to appropriate facilities in the community, but we feel it is necessary that there are adequate standards and program descriptions in place and mechanisms in place aimed at protecting people's rights," Pharis said.

The report said the panel and consultants had found that Austin State Hospital, Big Spring State Hospital, Kerrville State Hospital's geriatric section and Wichita Falls State Hospital are providing acceptable levels of individualized treatment.
