Iran threatens to attack U.S. targets

By ED BLANCHE Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iranian Prime Minister Hussein Musavi on Saturday threatened "crushing blows" against U.S. targets in the Persian Gulf after Iraqi planes attacked an Iran-bound oil tanker to end a one-month lull.

Iran has evidence that Kuwait provided the facilities for an air strike at dawn Saturday against the tanker in the northern gulf, Musavi said in a Tehran Radio broadcast monitored in Nicosia.

He did not elaborate, but the Iranians have charged in the past that Iraqi warplanes regularly fly through Kuwaiti air space on their way to attack ships and that Kuwait aids Iraq in its 61/2-year war with Iran

"Following this provocative move, insecurity in the Persian Gulf will be much greater than in the past," Musavi said. "Everyone should know that we will not shirk making America's military prestige in the region a target for our crushing blows.

Musavi said the attack on the tanker was designed to "pave the way for America's presence in the region.

Gulf-based shipping executives told The Associated Press in Bahrain that the vessel was the 74,000-ton Liberianregistered Tenacity. Tehran radio said the ship was sailing from Bandar Abbas in the strait of Hormuz to Iran's Kharg Island terminal in the northern gulf.

The Iraqi raid was the first against shipping in the gulf since one of Baghdad's fighter-bombers fired a missile into the frigate USS Stark May 17, killing 37 crewmen. Iraq has said the Stark was mistaken for an Iranian warship and apologized

The first of 11 Kuwaiti tankers being registered in the United States to give them protection from Iranian attacks is expected to reach the gulf by the end of

Vol. 80, No. 66, 4 sections, 44 pages

Iran has warned the reflagging will not deter its forces from attacking Kuwaiti vessels or those trading with the emirate.

Baghdad Radio announced that Iraqi fighter-bombers hit "a large maritime target," which usually means a tanker, off the Iranian coast at 5 p.m.

Quoting a military spokesman, the state radio reported an "accurate and effective hit," indicating the vessel was probably hit by a missile.

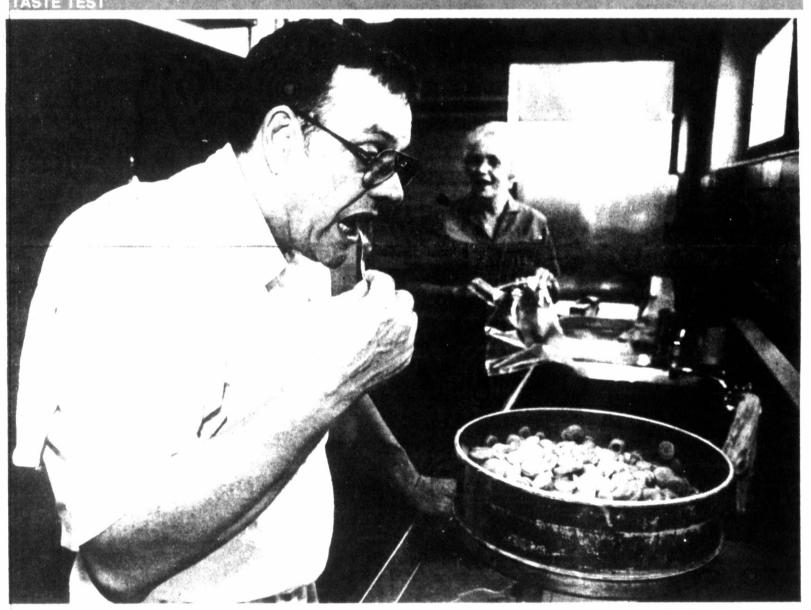

Baghdad Radio also reported a "violent and daring" air raid on Kharg. The gulf-based shipping executives, who confirmed the terminal had been raided, said a pumping station was hit but the extent of the damage was unclear.

The Tehran broadcast made no mention of casualties or damage.

The official Iraqi News Agency quoted a military communique as saying that "today's two strikes are in line with the implementation of Iraq's resolve to deprive the Iranian regime of all wicked means that enable it to continue the war.

Iraq imposed a sea blockade on Kharg three years ago, seeking to choke off Tehran's oil exports.

Assistant Superintendent Cathey winces over batch of cold canned carrots.

School taster chews ice-cold canned peas

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

Clad in a cook's apron, Tommy Cathey stares at the spoonful of cold green peas before him and shoves it into his mouth

A grimace crosses his face, and he promptly spits the vegetables into a nearby garbage

Cathey doesn't like peas all that well. Especially cold. And certainly not when they're for breakfast. "I tell you, that's got to worst thing in the world is peas at 9:30 in the morning," he says, placing a distasteful emphasis on the word "peas. Breakfast for Pampa's assistant superintendent of schools generally consists of orange juice, milk and cereal and perhaps some toast

But on one particular day each year — usually in mid-June - breakfast is a smorgasbord of cold vegetables and fruits that would curdle the stomach of all but the strictest vegetarian

Cathey is the school district's "official taster" each year when bids come due for canned cafeteria foods that will be fed to roughly 2,400 Pampa students every day next year. His job is to test each bidder's product for color, weight, texture, taste and, of course, price. Each product is ranked on a scale of 1 to 5

It's a day Cathey and his palate greet with mixed expectations

By 10 a.m., inside the Baker Elementary School cafeteria, he has sampled the best and worst of the year's canned peas (green and blackeyed), peaches, pears, corn, pineapple, fruit salad, carrots and applesauce. Cathey is spared having to sample the apricots this year because only one bid received

"I think it's a poor year for carrots," he proclaims after sampling a spoonful from a dull, yellowish batch. "That's a one if there ever was one; it might even be a zero. If all of 'em are like this, go with the cheapest.'

The fruits get better reviews. "The peaches were good this year - and the pears, all the pears were good," Cathey says. 'Must've had a good year on

A can of applesauce ranks a high four, but then Cathey discovers it costs $7 more a case than the next-closest competitor. He breathes a sigh of relief, though, when the next can tastes just as good at a more

April sales hit rebound

By LARRY HOLLIS News Editor

Larger sales in April than in the same month last year pushed Pampa's sales tax collections up more than 3.4 percent from the totals recorded through March, but overall sales are still down more than 16 percent from last

In area towns levying the 1 percent city sales tax, only Mobeetie retained higher sales than a year ago, according to the latest monthly sales tax reports from State Comptroller Bob Bullock. Bullock sent checks this month totaling $52.6 million in local sales tax to 1,039 cities that levy the 1 percent city tax. The Comptroller said 1987 payments were down 6 percent statewide compared to payments to date made in June of last year.

June checks represent taxes collected on sales made in April and reported to the comptroller by May 20.

Pampa had a check this month for $83,834, representing retail sales and related services of approximately $8.83 million in April. The April 1987 sales are up about $956,000 from the April 1986 total of about $7.43 million. The city received a sales tax payment of $74,274 a year ago.

Total payments for the year to date stand at $595,690, representing sales of nearly $59.57 million. That's down 16.69 percent from the $715,018 in payments reported at this time in 1986 for total sales of $71.5 million, indicating a drop of nearly $12 million in sales over the past year

Agency says doctors

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

AUSTIN — In an effort to wipe the villain's mustache from their faces, Texas Medical Foundation officials said Friday that substandard medical care, not bureaucratic paperwork, has prompted the Medicare sanctions of 22 Texas doctors

At a joint press conference with representatives of the American Association of Retired Persons Friday, TMF Quality Assurance Committee Chairman Charles R. Cain said there's more to Medicare sanctions than lack of documentation. Cain presented five case studies of what he said was substandard medical care given to Medicare patients in Texas hospitals.

Cain said in a Saturday telephone interview that the five case studies were not the worst cases found by the TMF, but were

"representative of the lack of basic medical knowledge shown by these physicians.

Cain also denied accusations from Canadian physicians that the TMF is unfairly singling out rural doctors for sanctions

Agency rules of confidentiality kept Cain from revealing the names of the patients, doctors or hospitals cited in the case studies. The cases ranged from a man who died of heart failure — apparently caused by excess fluids and medications that were inadequate and inappropriate — to a man suffering heart disease who was not given cardiac medication, diuretics or a follow-up chest X-ray.

Cain refused to say whether any of these cases involved Dr. Claude Betty of Perryton who was sanctioned in December and cannot treat Medicare patients for four years, or Dr. Teddy Darocha of Canadian, who has been recommended for a sanction by the TMF. The Office of Inspector General, which acts on TMF sanction recommendations, is expected to decide within the month if Darocha will be sanctioned

Darocha and his three fellow Canadian physicians, Drs. Valerie Verbi, Malouf Abraham and William Isaacs, have threatened to stop sending their Medicare patients to the Hemphill County Hospital if Darocha is not cleared or if there is no progress toward sanction reform

In his Friday speech, Cain said that when a physician is not willing or able to provide quality care to Medicare patients, the TMF physician reviewers work with the physician to find some method of resolving the quality issue through corrective action.

"One action is recommending that the physician attend medical education programs," Cain said. "When the problem cannot be resolved by corrective action, or if the

Dr. Charles Cain of the Texas Medical Foundation listed the following five medical cases as examples of incompetent care by physicians. The cases were among those that caused physicians to be sanctioned, or denied Medicare funding, in their treatment of pa-

To protect confidentiality, Cain did not disclose the names of the patients, physicians or the hospitals at which each patient was treated. Nor did he specify from what parts of the state these cases came. A 74-year-old man had sudden severe chest pain and a history of deficient blood supply to the heart. An EKG showed rapid and irregular heart beat, new damage to the heart muscle and scarring to the heart. A chest X-ray showed fluid in his lungs.

He was placed on a general medical floor rather than a special unit with heart monitoring equipment and was given sugar and sodium at a rapid rate, which Cain said tends to cause fluid to accumulate in the lungs of heart patients.

The patient was given several "inappropriate" doses of cardiac medications. The doctor did not order any of the standard blood tests that are usually used to monitor a patient's medical status, particularly sodium and water concentrations.

An 80-year-old man was admitted to the hospital for acute chest pain. After being admitted to a "general medical floor" with no heart monitoring equipment, the only treatement the patient received included fluid administration through the vein and injections with pain medications. improvement in development since Bullock was listing Pampa with a 20.12 percent decrease from 1986 in his May report. The April sales pushed Pampa's percentage up 3.43 percent.

Elsewhere in Gray County, Lefors received no check this month (some smaller cities only have to make quarterly pay ments). That leaves its yearly total of payments to date at $2,584, down 32.88 percent from the $3.850 recorded a year ago.

McLean had a June check for $1,008, up only slightly above the $1,007 payment received in June 1986. Its yearly total to date is $8,687, dipping 14.89 percent below the $10,207 reported a year

In Wheeler County, Mobeetie also received no payment this month. Its yearly total to date remains at $1,921, up 1.35 percent from the $1,896 registered at the same time in 1986. Even though Mobeetie had no check this month, it managed to be the only surrounding city to show an increase in Bullock's monthly report.

$6,576, up more than $380 from the June 1986 payment of $6,191. Its yearly payments to date total $47,410, a decrease of 14,49 percent from the $55,441 recorded a year ago.

and died within five days.

An 82-year-old man with known cardiac disease was admitted with shortness of breath and increased fluid build-up in the lungs due to insufficient pumping of blood to the heart. He received fluid administered in the vein despite already excessive fluid in the lungs. There was no administration of cardiac medications, diuretics, followup X-ray or intensive care monitoring. The patient died within 48 hours.

An 84-year-old man was admitted for treatment of fluid build-up in the lungs and was known to have chronic lung disease and possibly pneumonia. Treatment included the administration of cardiac medication, known to cause toxic effects on the heart, without checking the blood levels or monitoring the heart.

The patient complained several times of nausea and was treated with anti-nausea medication without investigation of the cause.

During the hospital stay, the patient's blood oxygen level and potential infection in the lungs were not evaluated and respiratory therapy and monitoring of blood levels were not conducted. The patient died within five days.

■ An 83-year-old woman was admitted with a possible heart attack. No usual special care was provided, and no heart monitoring equipment was used. Antibiotics were administered without documented reason. There was no uninalysis or blood test done to identify a possible infection.

The patient died within five days.

physician has committed a gross and flagrant violation ... the TMF reviewers are required to consider the possibility of a sanction recommenda-

Cain explained that the physician review process takes "several months of development and assessment of medical records by the TMF."

"When a sanction recommendation is made, it is the action of last resort," Cain said. "and the TMF has two options for that sanction recommendation: A monetary penalty (fine) or excluding the physician from the Medicare program for some period of time.

The TMF recommendation then goes to the Office of Inspector General, an agency of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Health Care Financing Association

Darocha said Saturday that he had never met with TMF officials until they threatened the sanction late last year. Darocha said he does not know which of his cases the TMF is questioning. "They didn't think to correct me or ask, 'Why did you do this," "Darocha said. "They think if it (medical procedure) is not documented, it is not "I don't know what cases they are looking at, Darocha added. "It is a confidential case, and I don't want to talk about it yet.' Darocha said he was not aware of Cain's press conference or about the five case studies. He doubts if any were his.

"Out of 700 admissions I had, two patients have died," Darocha said, noting that one death was from an incurable disease while the other had pneumonia and gastro-intestinal bleeding.

"The rest of them were well and went home," he said, declaring that he has the highest admission and lowest mortality rate of the Canadian doctors.

"The TMF picks up on a case, and they reverse it," Darocha said. "They say the patient had heart failure when the patient was admitted for a back injury.

Cain did not directly address the Canadian doctors' threatened boycott or the perceived singlingout of rural doctors in his Friday speech.

"The question is not the availability of sophisticated equipment at the local hospital," Cain said Friday. "The issue is basic medical knowledge and the physician's ability to apply that basic medical knowledge to his patient's medical needs. I believe the case studies clearly demonstrate that the concerns relate to the physician's unwillingness or inability to provide medical care, not his access to medical equipment or the documentation of his Father's Day takes spirit of forgiving

Father's Day has taken on new meaning for me during the past few years. It wasn't always that way.

My father's drunken rages — and the dark, ugly bruises that often enough resulted on my skin made it clear to my sixth-grade mind whom I would side with when my parents' 15-year marriage ended in a bitter divorce in 1970.

No more would I have to endure the enraged fist landing squarely on my back and knocking me off my chair for smiling the wrong way at the supper

No more would I have to face the sight of my mother or sister cowering in fear.

No more would I be awakened in the middle of the night by flashing red and blue lights from a police car that Mom had been forced to summon to our suburban New Jersey home.

As far as I was concerned, Dad and I weren't even related anymore.

We were through.

When a judge tried to enforce Dad's visitation request, I told him I wasn't going and nobody could make me — and I remember thanking God when the judge said I didn't have to.

It took me until my senior year in college to realize that the hate I had built up over 10 years was destroying me. And it took a sermon by a favorite minister on Christ's words that even sinners love their friends to realize that the true measure of forgiveness comes with regard to one's

I was nervous as I scanned the phone book, and more nervous when I dialed my Dad's number. Here was a man I had totally rejected, and when he answered the phone, I suggested simply, almost coldly, that perhaps we could meet somewhere.

What I found when we finally did meet was a father I could love, as only a son could. He had licked his drinking problem, tamed his temper, and he took me back with open arms extended — as

Lawmakers depart to Austin for special session Monday

AUSTIN (AP) — While introducing a Mexican official to reporters last week, Gov. Bill Clements let slip an indication of the continuing frustration over Texas' long-running money troubles

As cameras flashed and tape recorders whirred, Clements directed questioners toward Tamaulipas Gov. Americo Villarreal and warned: "Don't ask him about our budget, now. No one did.

But Villarreal was about the only visitor to Clements' office in recent weeks who hasn't been asked about the projected state government deficit, the need for higher taxes and the Legislature's failure to pass a budget during its 140-day regular session.

It was the first time since 1961 that lawmakers couldn't write a budget. In a special session that summer, they created the state sales tax. Legislators return to Austin Monday to try again, and pressure is mounting because the state's fiscal year ends Aug. 31.

Treasurer Ann Richards says $1 billion to $1.5 billion in short-term notes must be sold to guarantee an adequate cash flow. A budget should be passed by Aug. 1 for the sale to proceed, she says. The state's 1,100 public school districts, trying to figure out their own spending plans, are waiting on the Legislature to decide how much state money will go into public education.

Despite news at week's end of another idea for balancing the budget — diverting highway money to other uses and selling bonds for road-building legislative leaders said a final answer to the budget dilemma hasn't been found.

"What we're looking at is proposals," House Speaker Gib Lewis said after his most recent meeting with Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who presides over the Senate.

Lewis, frequently the most optimistic-sounding of the three, nonetheless refused to say lawmakers were near agreement.

"You're always a little closer. We've been working here in the last few days trying to get what we think is a realistic budget and trying to get together some type of proposal to pay for it," he said.

Clements, insisting that a "tax-and-spend mentality" threatened to take over Texas government, vowed throughout the regular session to veto a tax increase larger than $2.9 billion, and that helped deadlock the Legislature.

He said last week that $2.9 billion still is enough

'I think the $2.9 (billion) ... will cover the tax picture," he said. "The rest of it will have to do with adjustments of various kinds.

Museum wants items from Canadian school By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

CANADIAN — The school's trash — discarded wall clocks, timeworn desks, outdated textbooks and obsolete supplies - could become the community's treasure now that the River Valley Museum is setting up a school display.

Museum officials have asked Canadian school officials to help them set up the school display in time for the museum's grand opening, set for Canadian's Centennial celebration on July 4.

Among the items the museum is seeking are a science tacher's desk from Canadian Middle School, student desks and chairs, and old middle school wall clocks that were replaced when the middle school was remodeled.

According to museum curator Pam Spencer, the museum wants to recreate a turn-of-the-century Hemphill County classroom.

Spencer explained that the exibit will be a semitemporary exhibit which would change every three months.

"If it is popular, we will keep the exhibit longer," she said, adding that future displays will feature each of the "country" schools that used to dot the county in the 1900s.

"There were nine schools in the River Valley area," Spencer said. "They were all one-room schools that went up through the eighth grade. High school students went to the Canadian academy,' which was once a boarding school."

Trustees voted last week to loan the museum whatever it needs to set up the changing display. The middle school science teacher's desk, however, stays put.

"The teacher's desk is attached to the floor, has running water and is still in use," Superintendent Jim Pollard told the trustees.

'I think the middle school is a museum itself." said trustee Diane Praeger, referring to the historic building with intricate brickwork, arches and Spanish tile roof.

'It would be valuable to have something about the school," Pollard said.

Museum secretary Al'Louise Ramp said the museum has "had a fantastic response from the people in the community.

She added that although the museum's grand opening is set for July, the building is already open

"We have someone working there every day," she said. "Visitors can come by and take a look." Spencer said the museum will open at 1:30 p.m. July 4 and will include displays on ranches, churches, saddle-making and Indian artifacts.

Wanted Pampan nabbed

BUFORD, Ga. (AP) - A Twiggs County escapee and a Texas fugitive, a Pampa man, were arrested Friday at a Buford apartment.

Gwinnett County sheriff's deputies made the arrests after being alerted by Twiggs County authorities that Jeffrey Nathan Hardin was believed to be living in Buford. Hardin, 28, of Columbus, escaped in March from the Twiggs County jail in Jeffersonville, where he had been convicted of

Also arrested was Houston Roy Mullinax, 30, of Pampa, who was wanted in his home state for parole violation. Mullinax was paroled after serving time for attempted murder and illegal possession of a firearm, authorities said.

Kitchen adds finishing touches to Pampa Community Building

By LARRY HOLLIS News Editor

Nine months after its official opening, the Pampa Community Building hosted its first breakfast meeting featuring food prepared in its completed kitchen facili-

In the past, meals in the building have been catered. Now meals can be cooked in the kitchen facilities adjacent to the M.K. Brown Meeting Room, or caterers can use the equipment to make final preparations or to keep their foods hot.

Attending the buffet breakfast at 8 a.m. Saturday were guests invited because of their support and contributions in making the community building a reality.

"There will be no speeches today," said Ed Myatt, president of the Pampa Area Foundation, the organization formed in 1984 to solicit funds for the building.

But that didn't stop Myatt from making a few comments, nor others from praising Myatt's efforts in spearheading the drive and his labors leading to the Myatt said the building is distinguished by those who attended the breakfast, giving his thanks and appreciation for their work, contributions and efforts. "I do thank you for coming," he said.

Referring to the first meal prepared in the kitchen facilities, Myatt said, "We also wanted to use you as guinea pigs.'

Myatt said he also wants people to know that the kitchen facilities are now available for general use for the various meetings and activities held in the Pampa Community Building

"We must start educating the people that this is their building,' he stated, stressing that it is not the "Pampa Chamber of Commerce Building.

The chamber has its offices in the building and handles the scheduling of building use. "But it's not their building," Myatt said.

Other non-profit organizations having their offices in the building are Clean Pampa Inc., Pampa United Way, Pampa Board of Realtors, Pampa Fine Arts Association and Big Brothers - Big Sis-

But the building has the M.K. Brown Meeting Room and the Nona Payne Conference Room available for public use, ranging from-committee meetings and seminars to small conventions, from chamber luncheons to family reunions, from church gatherings and wedding receptions to dances - "a variety of activities," Myatt noted.

Myatt said that since the building opened Sept. 1, some 11,700 people have used the facilities for the various meetings and activi-

Myatt also took time to thank building custodian James Taylor for all his work and assistance in keeping the building maintained for all its uses and for putting in 'many hours every week'' keeping the building open for all the groups that use the facilities.

Chamber President Norman Knox noted Myatt wanted Saturday's breakfast kept simple, without any speeches or presentations. But Knox said he felt one presentation had to be made.

Taylor and Chamber Manager

Bruce Barton then wheeled in a large bronze plaque listing the building's name, date of opening, and the officers and directors of the Pampa Area Foundation.

Chamber Director Bob Wilson gave a brief tribute to Myatt and a history of his efforts in turning his dream of a community building into reality.

"This is the result" of Myatt's dream, Wilson said, referring to the building in which the meeting was being held

The Pampa Community Building "is a facility that the whole town can be proud of," he said. adding that it resulted from Myatt's dreams and labors.

"Thank you, Ed, for a great job." Wilson said, noting that the plaque will go on an outside corner of the building.

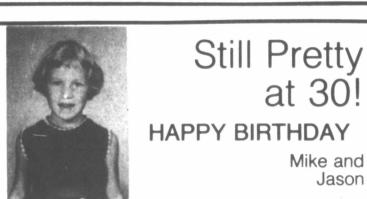

Though the building is open, with the facilities receiving large use, Myatt said more contributions are still welcome since there are still some finishing touches left to do. In addition, there are plans in later years to further utilize the upstairs section to add more office spaces and meeting rooms

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion Hidden excise taxes hit the poor hardest

If you thought last year's tax "reform" would mean lower tax payments, guess again. The income-tax rates are indeed lower, but everything else, if some congressmen get their way, will be higher. Much

In fact, the congressional budget bill now wending its way through a Senate-House conference committee contains $19 billion worth of tax increases. A substantial portion of the proposed increases are in excise taxes, which, unlike income and sales taxes, go largely unnoticed by taxpayers because they are hidden in the cost of goods and services.

No matter how innocuous, excise taxes still take a huge bite out of the taxpayer's wallet and may take an even bigger one. According to a study by the Coalition Against Regressive Taxation, an excise tax of the magnitude now under consideration would be a staggering 479 percent greater than the 1986 reduction in the income tax.

That's bad enough. But the real problem with excise taxes is that they hit hardest at the poor, who are forced to give a substantially larger portion of their income to the government than the rich. According to a study by The Policy Economics Group of Peat Marwick & Co., the $10,000-and-under income class pays from 10 percent to 13 percent of the burden for each of the five excise taxes, whereas the $200,000-and-up class pays just 1 percent of these taxes.

Despite the inherent unfairness of excise taxes, politicians love them because they are fairly easy to sell. Consider the so-called "sin" taxes: Taxes levied on cigarettes, wine, beer and liquor. All you have to do to avoid paying the tax is not buy the product, and plenty of people are eager to tell you that you shouldn't.

Of course, if the taxes actually discouraged people from smoking and drinking, government tax revenues would drop. The trick for the politicians is to find just the right amount of tax to raise revenue without eliminating vice. Makes you wonder who the real sinners are in this scenario.

Then there are the federal excise taxes on gasoline These are supposed to represent a user fee, with motorists supplying the money for road maintenance and construction. But with each penny increase in the tax representing $1 billion in government revenue, several in Congress are drooling at the prospect of committing the money to the general fund

And there are the telephone taxes and the taxes on airline tickets. These taxes, too, hit hardest at those with the least money, but airline travel and longdistance calling are privileges granted by the government, are they not?

Of course not. And neither is driving, or drinking, or smoking, even though the tax code tends to treat them

The solution is to convert non-essential government programs to an honest user-fee system, in which people pay directly for the goods and services they need and want. Were that to happen, the need for an increase in excise taxes would likely disappear.

Reduce government slavery

Here's a question to ponder as we celebrate the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution. Who owns you? Does Congress? What about Ronald Reagan? Does he own you? Or does God own

Maybe you never thought about this ownership question, but who owns what and whoms is very important in providing answers to other very important questions.

Let's start out with the trivial. What determines whether I can burn a tie, or where I can bury it? That's easy. We just ask: Whose tie is it? And whose land am I going to bury it on? If it is my tie and my land, then it's my choice. That concept is what is known as private property rights, the rights held by an owner to keep, acquire and dispose of his property as he sees fit. I have the right to cremate and inter my tie on my land, but not your tie - unless I have your permission. In fact, this is the test of ownership rights: Can I dispose of, or use something, so long as I do not violate the ownership rights of

Now, let's back up to the original question: Who owns you and me? I think I should own me, and you should own you. That seems to be the very essence of freedom: Each person owns himself and cannot belong to another. I never met anyone who would disagree with that proposition. But the next step is more contentious, so you'd better sit back and have a gin and tonic, beer, coffee or whatever calms you down.

I say that in order to own yourself you must be able to own what you produce. We derive this proposition from reducio ad absurdum, which is just a four-dollar way of using an extreme example to prove an argument.

If someone else owned all that I produced, owning myself would have no meaning. In fact, owning all of what another produces is a good definition of slavery: A condition where a person works and does not have rights to what he produces. Are you a slave? You can't answer that with a simple yes or no. A more realistic question is how much of a slave are you?

To answer that you must establish how much of what you produce belongs to others. According to statistics compiled by the National Taxpayers Union, the average American works from January to mid-May to pay federal, state, and local taxes. That means four-and-a-half months worth of what you produce does not belong to you.

Somebody might say, "Hold it, Williams: People must pay their fair share for what the government provides. After all we get national defense, police, enforcement of constitutional order, and adjudication of disputes." I agree. We haven't reached the state where men are angels so we need government to protect us, and we're going to need taxes

But most government activity is that of forcibly using some people to serve the purposes of others. In my book, that's at least partial slavery. In fact, a full two-thirds of the federal budget consists of congressional confiscation of the property of one person to give it to another to whom it does not belong. Examples? Aid to Dependent Families, Aid to Dependent Farmers, Aid to Dependent Banks, Aid to Dependent Old People, ad nauseum.

Restoration of self-ownership might be a good resolution to emerge from this year's Constitution bicentennial celebrations. That means we should work toward government taking 10 percent of our incomes. Why 10 percent? I figure if 10 percent is good enough for the Mormons, and good enough for the Baptists, it ought to be good enough for government.

Fliers should check bags

I haven't missed very many days this year without flying on somebody's airplane. I have more frequent flier points than Peter Pan.

I hate delays like everybody else does, and I worry if the federal government doesn't fork over some money for the air traffic controller system, airplanes are going to start running into one another.

But there's something else that also bothers me about air travel. Doesn't anybody check his bags anymore?

Carry-on luggage has gotten out of hand. Each time I fly, I see at least one idiot walk onto the plane with enough baggage to send a fully grown mule to its knees under the weight.

I see people with huge hang-up bags, suitcases, briefcases and their company's entire computer system attempt to walk down a crowded airliner aisle without hitting somebody in the head with all that equipment and giving them a concussion. Others attempt to put what wouldn't fit into a Ryder truck into one of those tiny compartments over their seats

You had to do that sort of thing back when you had to ride a bus or train. On the way to college, you lugged your suitcase to your seat and put it into the rack above your head.

That's also where you put your guitar and the box lunch your mother prepared for your trip. You don't have to do that anymore. You can give your bags to an occasionally friendly person at the airline ticket gate and your bags will be stashed in the bottom of the airplane and you won't have to fool with them again until you land in Peoria. True, from time to time airlines do lose checked baggage. Better to risk that, however, than to risk a hernia hauling all those bags onto and off

'Passengers seem to think they can save a great deal of time by carrying on their luggage and not having to wait for it at the baggage claim," a Delta employee was telling me. I fully expect somebody will get on an airplane one of these days with a crate full of live chickens and a goat on a rope.

It can't be safe to have all that luggage and whatever else people bring onto airplanes stacked all over the passenger compartment.

I don't want the plane to hit sudden turbulence and a lugs-and-bolts saleman's sample case fall on my head Airlines are crowded enough with human beings to bring all that stuff into the passenger compartment. I get on airplanes today and I feel like I'm riding on the back of Jed Clampett's truck with Jethro Bodine.

I think you could cut down on some of the delays if you didn't have 80 percent of the passengers aboard a flight taking 15 minutes to find a place for all their junk before sitting down.

On second thought, it's OK to bring aboard a box lunch your mother prepared for your trip, airline food being bland as it is. Just leave the chickens and goats at home or put them on Greyhound or Amtrak

More than likely they'll be waiting for you when you get off the plane.

Teach first about America

The myth of the ugly American dies hard. Many educators, for example, continue to believe that their students graduate with shamefully ethnocentric views.

Hence the recent popularity of 'global education' classe Yet perhaps this belief has finally been rocked to its heels. A recent report, endorsed by everyone from the secretary of education to the heads of the two major teacher unions, takes no prisoners in its assault on "valuefree" instruction.

As the "Education for Democracy" report emphasizes, our students' chief weakness is not ignorance of foreign lands - widespread though such ignorance may be.

Far worse is that many American youngsters don't know much about their own heritage. Not only aren't they taught to cherish democracy above other political systems, many aren't provided the basic facts that might allow them to conclude this on

One reason: Few states require more than a year of history in high school. Thus many students "are unaware of prominent people and seminal ideas and events that have shaped our past and created our present.

Those are charitable words. As Education Secretary William Bennett noted not long ago, a 1985 survey revealed that two-thirds of all 11thgraders "could not place the Civil War in the correct half-century. Onethird of them failed the same test for the Declaration of Independence, for Columbus and for World War I. Nearly a third could not say which two nations were our principal enemies in World War II. And to half of them the names Winston Churchill and Joseph

Stalin were unfamiliar. If half of all 11th-graders could mistake one of this century's greatest statesmen for one of its darkest criminals, they can't possibly understand the central political conflict of our time. If they don't even know who we fought in 1941, or why, then all mention of Hiroshima, the division of Europe and the rise of totalitarianism must echo as so much babble.

In the past, when someone demanded that schools return to basics or affirm our Western heritage - even someone as urbane as Bennett - he was often branded a yahoo by the educational establishment

Now it seems to be having second

Perhaps the educational establishment has noticed that the true yahoos are those who walk through life prey to political manipulation because they don't have a clue about their country's past. Most pliable of all, in fact, are those young people who suc-cumb to what Bennett calls "the grandest shibboleth" - the idea that we must never judge other societies or political systems because this is primarily a neutral matter of taste.

Don't laugh. Not only do many students apparently accept this notion, some curricula promote it.

To cite one example: A test designed by the National Assessment of Educational Progress equates the freedoms of China with those of the United States because the Chinese enjoy free medical care, guaranteed jobs and (supposedly) never go hungry

As the report caustically observes, by that standard "many of history's slaves and today's prisoners would have to be called 'free

The remedy for this relativism needn't involve crude indoctrination. Yet it will require a healthy dose of American and European history and literature, with a view toward understanding democracy, its basic ideas and its long struggle to survive.

It will also mean the unembarrassed teaching of facts.

Let's learn about ourselves first.

Witches meet at Texas lake

LAKE TAWAKONI (AP) Witches from across the United States gathered on the shores of Lake Tawakoni this weekend to celebrate the summer solstice and attend seminars on tarot card reading, healing with stones, reincarnation and sundry metaphysical subjects.

As many as 200 people, some from as far away as North Dakota, were expected at the private campground an hour's drive east of downtown Dallas, where several rituals were planned.

Spending God's money

Texas guest columnist

"We need not do great things. It is how much love we put in the doing that makes our offering something beautiful for God," - Mother Teresa, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize and minister to the world's oppressed.

By JOE MURRAY The Lufkin Daily News

The mission that Mother Teresa is opening in Dallas won't have carpet or air conditioning. She urges that the staff of nuns have a more simple lifestyle to identify with the poor people whom they

Tammy Faye and Jim Bakker no doubt would disagree, having spent some $4,000 of PTL funds for an air-conditioned doghouse. (You may or may not find fault with that kind of extravagance, but the dog evidently did. The Bakkers were of the opinion that he refused to sleep there because the hum of the air-conditioners kept him awake. More likely, it was his conscience, something that probably wouldn't have occurred to them.)

But I don't suppose it's reasonable to suggest, or hope, that Mother Teresa's example of practicing what you preach should become the standard of conduct for our various clergy - those who not only do good but do well.

Perhaps it's not such a problem in the small, community churches. But money is a temptation. A big bunch of money is a big bunch of temptation. Moreover, those good Christians who give their money with the intention of helping the needy aren't always getting their money's worth. I recently received a letter from a professor in a theological seminary who provided an insight into how funds are used in some of the large religious organizations. I'll not mention his name or the seminary. But I was most impressed by his objectivity, in that he was evaluating his own particular

To keep it in round figures, let's say the church has budgeted $100,000 under the heading of good works - missions, ministries and benevolence of all kinds, including housing for the elderly.

How much of that amount would you expect to go to administrative costs? I don't mean salaries and benefits for local staff, but those in the hierarchy? Maybe 50 percent doesn't surprise you, but it did me. Included are pensions, supplementary salary, insurance and hospitalization, $30,000, and other general administration funds, $20,000.

Further, when you add up all other mandated commitments, the total grows to $87,000, most all of which is going somewhere else other than where you live. (It was noted in the theologian's letter that payment or non-payment to these funds is often viewed as a reflection on the pastor by his peers and his highers-up.)

Let me stress that many of those commitments are obviously worthwhile projects — housing for the elderly, for instance. But of the $100,000, that worthwhile project would receive less than $800.

As for local and other charities, about one-eighth of the original budget, $13,000, is left over for good works at home.

I won't say there's anything particularly wrong with splitting up the money that way. It all depends on where you want to place the emphasis.

But it's important that you know where your money is going, and if it's going to be used in a way that agrees with your concept of Christian charity - whether to expand your own church facilities, to provide food, clothing and shelter for the needy, to spread the gospel at home and abroad or, indeed, for pensions, insurance and administration.

These scandals among the televangelists may well serve a good purpose in making all of us, congregation and clergy alike, more sensitive and more concerned about spending God's money in a way to achieve the greatest blessing for the greatest number.

In doing so, that's not to ignore consideration for the preachers. But neither should they fail to give consideration to the lilies of the field

Davis jurors still deadlocked

FORT WORTH (AP) - With the prospect of a mistrial still looming, jurors in the $16.5 million wrongful death trial of oil heir Cullen Davis are taking the weekend off and plan to resume deliberations Monday

State District Judge Claude Williams overruled a defense motion for a mistrial Friday and ordered deadlocked jurors to resume their efforts to reach

The split was 8-4 in favor of the plaintiffs, according to sources who asked not to be identified. Jurors, in a note to Williams asking for the weekend off, said they had considered some witnesses' testimony but there were others they wanted to discuss and consider further.

"I want to congratulate you on the diligent effort you've made here today," said Williams, granting the request to recess Friday afternoon and noting jurors faced a difficult task

Jury foreman Kenneth Pool indicated moments before the noon recess that the jury was closer to breaking the impasse than earlier Friday. 'We are discussing it,'' Pool said in open court.

"We're closer to making a decision.

WOODVILLE (AP) — A Jeep and a chartered bus carrying teen-agers from church camp collided head-on Saturday, killing the two men in the Jeep and injuring 32 people aboard the bus, officials said

The men were killed instantly in the accident, said Department of Public Safety dispatcher Sheila Swan. They were identified as James Arthur Bell, 34, and Marvin Edward Stubblefield, 32, both of Lufkin, officials said.

Authorities said the accident happened at about 6:45 a.m. on U.S. Highway 69, five miles south of Woodville. The 31 bus passengers and the bus driver were taken to Tyler County Hospital in Woodville.

Most of those taken to the hospital had only minor injuries, and the bus driver was the only one to suffer a broken bone, administrator James Molsbee said All of the injured expect the bus driver were to be released Saturday afternoon, and about seven of them were to be transported by ambulance or private vehicles to Baton Rouge where doctors will determine if they should receive any further treatment, he said.

"They want to go back to their home," Molsbee said. The bus driver suffered a fractured leg and will remain in the Woodville hospital for a a few days, he said.

The chartered bus was returning from a church camp in Glorieta, N.M., where the youths had been for the past week, said Wilton Wall, pastor of the Red Oak Baptist Church in Livingston, La.

World Korean police battle rioters

Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea - Tens of thousands of riot police hit, kicked and fired tear gas at demonstrators Saturday in a major show of strength after the government threatened "extraordinary" measures to stop nationwide protests.

Special martial arts attack squads and riot police hurling tear gas grenades charged into thousands of protesters demonstrating in Seoul. They also beat and tear gassed pedestrians and onlookers

The unusually rough police tactics came after a government warning that protests that have swept the country for 11 days must end and after a riot policeman was killed in disburbances on Friday

"Down with the military dictatorship," chanted protesters, some of whom hurled firebombs and rocks at attacking police in a clash around the Bank of Korea in the city center. Similar running clashes erupted elsewhere.

Police firing tear gas clashed with a procession of Buddhist monks who tried to march in Seoul after calling a "Save the Nation" rally. Thousands of police surrounded Chogye Temple to prevent the protesters from getting through, and some of the monks fought with officers.

Regiments of police in green combat uniforms and black, visored helmets lined main streets and intersections as columns of officers in buses and trucks patrolled the capital. Officials said the entire 120,000man national police force was fielded to halt protests.

But the protests themselves appeared smaller and less violent than the vicious street battles that have flared in Seoul and other cities since opposition groups launched a drive June 10 to oust President Chun Doohwan and force democratic Clashes were reported Saturday in at least eight cities. Police blasted protesters and sympathizers in the southern port of Pusan, quickly moving in to break up crowds when they tried to form.

Chlorine gas leak kills Indian woman

NEW DELHI, India (AP) - A chlorine gas leak from a water tank Saturday killed one woman and injured 56 other people in the northern Indian city of Meerut, All-India Radio reported.

The radio said 45 of the injured were discharged from local hospitals after treatment. It said the gas leaked from a large cylinder used in purifying water in the tank. Meerut, 45 miles northeast of

New Delhi, was recently the scene of fierce Hindu-Moslem clashes that left at least 99 people dead.

DALLAS — High-ranking Southern Methodist University officials participated in an elaborate scheme to conceal the fact that Gov. Bill Clements approved illicit payments to student athletes while the school was under probation for similar activities, a bishops' committee reported.

The cover-up included misleading a university faculty member charged with investigating the SMU athletic program, lying to the NCAA and approving generous termination agreements with head football coach Bobby Collins and Athletic Director Bob Hitch to avoid lawsuits and publicity, the committee reported Friday.

Details were released in a 48-page report from the special committee of United Methodist Church bishops, who have spent the past three months investigating a $400,000-a-year slush fund provided by SMU boosters.

The play-for-pay scandal prompted the NCAA in February to suspend SMU's 1987 football season with the so-called "death penalty" in the harshest collegiate football penalty ever: A total of $61,000 was paid to 13 football players, the NCAA said. The SMU Board of Governors was content to "win football games, trust the leadership and look the other way," the bishops' report said. The board of governors, which was abolished in March, previously served as an executive committee to the larger SMU Board of Trustees.

"Clements maintains that ev y member who knew of the payments prior to August 1985 must have known of the payments after," said Bishop Louis W. Schowengerdt. "That is his conclusion, and that is our conclusion."

Clements told reporters when he emerged from his office at the state capitol late Friday night that he feels the bishops' report will clear the air.

"I think it will put SMU into a new phase and on a new plateau to move forward, which is what they should do," the governor said.

should do," the governor said.

Clements said he hadn't seen the report, but added, "I'm glad that they made the report, and I'm sure it's a good report."

Named as knowing of payments before August 1985 were Clements, Dallas banker Robert H. Stewart III, Dallas businessman Edwin L. Cox and former Dallas Mayor Robert Folsom, all former members of the board of governors; former SMU

President L. Donald Shields, who resigned last November, and board of trustees member O. Paul Corley.

Besides confirming that several members of the SMU board had knowledge of the slush fund, the bishops' report detailed how Cox and Corley, working with William L. Hutchison, an oil company executive who succeeded Clements as chairman of the Board of Governors, set up and carried out the cover-up to protect Clements.

Clements was elected Texas governor last November and resigned from the Board of Governors in January.

"It is clear that, beginning in November 1986, Clements, Cox, Corley, joined by William Hutchison, engaged in a concerted effort to protect Clements and to prevent disclosure of his participation in the decision to make payments to ... athletes and ... to protect others who had knowledge of the payment scheme," the report said.

Clements and other board members became aware as early as 1983 that SMU was under investigation by the NCAA for recruiting violations. That investigation was completed, and sanctions imposed, in the summer of 1985.

A number of players, who had received promises of monthly payments from SMU boosters, remained on the team, and Clements and other board members decided to continue the illegal payments as part of a "wind-down" program, the report said.

The bishops said SMU officials concluded that key players would quit the football team and reveal additional violations if the payments were stopped.

Hitch testified he was doing only what he was told. He said he talked with Clements on the SMU campus in August 1985 and Clements asked him if the payments could be continued. Hitch replied affirmatively. Clements told him, "Then do it," the report said.

The panel also urged new university President A. Kenneth Pye to begin an immediate investigation into all other university-supported sports—specifically track, basketball and tennis.

The bishops said Friday they concentrated on the football program and uncovered no conclusive evidence about improprieties in other sports during their investigation. They said their recommendation grew only out of "comments and rumors" from witnesses who appeared before the committee.

Rodeo barbecue

The Top o' Texas Rodeo Barbecue Committee finalizes plans for the free barbecue to be served at the opening night of the rodeo on Thursday, July 9. Discussing which plate to use are, from left, Rodeo Office secretary Kathy Topper, Michael Craig, Royce Henderson, committee chairman Neil Fulton and J.R. Baggett. Fulton reported that 3,000 pounds of meat has been donated, adding that he anticipates feeding a crowd of 5,000 people this year. Local merchants have donated items to help with the meal, free to Thursday ticket holders. Rodeo tickets go on sale Monday, July 6, at the Rodeo Office in the Pampa Community Building.

Scandal reportedly broadens at SMU

DALLAS (AP) — The improper payments scandal at Southern Methodist University may reach beyond the football program, the Dallas Times Herald reported Saturday

Sources who appeared before the bishops' committee investigating improper payments to football players told the newspaper that a former track athlete received monthly payments in violation of NCAA rules.

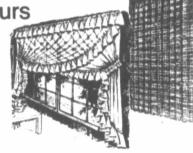

The committee's report released Friday recommended that officials look at all sports programs, specifically track, basketball and tennis

Greyhound to buy Trailways for $80 million

Associated Press Writer

DALLAS - Greyhound Lines Inc. maintains plans to buy out rival Trailways Corp. won't squelch competition, but analysts say they don't know what would happen with one national intercity bus company.

Greyhound Chairman Fred Currey said the $80 million proposed acquisition won't stop competition because the company still has to vie with discount airfares and private automobiles.

'We had two choices. To sit back and wait for Trailways to go bankrupt or to step in and save as many jobs and as much service as possible," Currey said at a news conference in Washington.

Analysts said they didn't know what prompted Greyhound's move.

"I'm sure they're not doing it for a salvation to humanity type of thing," said Katherine M. Stults, an analyst with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. in New York

Currey, who headed Trailways Corp. from 1975-79, predicted quick approval of the deal by the Interstate Commerce Commission despite possible concerns about the merger's effect on competi-

The proposed acquisition won't result in a monopoly because of the air and automobile competition, said vice chairman Craig R. Lentzsch, who held a simultaneous news conference in Dallas, where Greyhound and Trailways are based.

'Additionally, the industry is deregulated with respect to entry and exit and so if there were any attempts to utilize any form of monopolistic behavior, other carriers would instantly jump into the marketplace," he said.

'It's not a monopoly in the sense that there are an awful lot of regional companies," Stults said. Analysts said the outlook for the intercity bus business continues to be poor.

"It's hard to see how anyone can arrest the decline (of ridership). Depending on how the airlines continue to price their product, the bus lines are for the very young and very old," said transportation analyst Dudley Heer of Duff & Phelps in Chicago. "It's a declining business ... intercity bus travel repsents a very small portion of intercity traffic. The airlines have been eating into that.

He said that Currey may be waiting for air fares to go up, but "I wouldn't hold my breath on that." One question raised was why Greyhound chose to act now, rather than waiting for a better price if they believed Trailways would collapse.

don't think cheaper is the issue," Lentzsch said. "I think the issue is that it would have been a significant burden on the traveling public, it would have been a disaster for the Trailways employees and it might have been economically disadvantageous to us because of the long-term revenue

Lentzsch said Trailways representatives approached Greyhound after a Dallas investment group headed by Currey purchased Greyhound Lines Inc., from its Phoenix-based parent, Greyhound Corp., for $350 million.

Greyhound, the country's largest bus company, operates in the 48 contiguous states. Trailways serves 38 states, with its greatest concentration across the South. In 17 states Trailways provides the only bus service to some communities.

Under the agreement, Greyhound will pay $80 million to buy 450 of Trailways' 1,200 buses, some of its terminals and garages and undisclosed other assets, according to Currey. Some of the remaining Trailways buses will be operated under leasing

The deal also includes purchase of three Trailways subsidiaries: Eagle International Inc., a bus manufacturing company in Brownsville, Texas;

Trailways Food Service Inc., which operates restaurants in its terminals; and Trailways Commuter Transit Inc., which operates more than 300 commuter and transit buses in Texas.

The purchase involves only Trailways Corp. and does not affect dozens of local or regional bus companies that have used the Trailways name but are not part of the Dallas-based corporation.

There may be some work force reductions as a result of the merger, but cutbacks probably won't include drivers, middle managers or supervisors, Currey said. Greyhound has about 8,500 employees and Trailways 4,000.

Lentzsch said Greyhound plans to continue to cleared in defense fraud

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The government has dropped charges against General Dynamics and four current or former executives accused of defrauding the Pentagon of an estimated $3.2 million on the canceled Sgt. York anti-aircraft gun.

'It is clear that the allegations of the indictment are not supported by sufficient evidence," the Justice Department said in a statement Friday.

Among the four cleared of allegations they illegally overcharged the government was former NASA administrator James M. Beggs, who resigned his space agency post after the indictment was handed up in 1985.

Prosecutors acknowledged General Dynamics was correct in its interpretation of the contract, which the company said simply required it to make its best efforts to stay within the $39 million development cost for the prototype weapon.

It has been a long and difficult year and a half, especially for the individuals involved," General Dynamics chairman Stanley C. Pace said in a statement Friday.

"We are happy for them and their families that the government has withdrawn the allegations against them and that the long, emotional travail for them is now over."

Beggs headed the company's Pomona division when the problem-plagued weapons system was under development, later joining the National Aeronautics and Space Administra-

The other executives named in the indictment, Ralph E. Hawes Jr., David L. McPherson and James C. Hansen Jr., are still employed by the company.

The contract arose out of a decision by the Army in 1977 to build an air defense system that would accompany tanks.

Development costs were estimated at more than $330 million over at least eight years. Congress awarded prototype development contracts to both General Dynamics and Ford Aerospace, one of which would eventually be awarded the final development

The indictment alleged that General Dynamics used illegal accounting techniques to hide the true costs of the weapon, charging off many of the contract costs to research and development accounts.

Here's a fun way to learn about safety...

Sparky the Safety Mouse Comic Book

We are offering a comic book that stars the same cartoon character that appears on all of our television safety spots. We call him "Sparky the Safety Mouse." This is a light-hearted approach to a very serious subject: safety. We want to give children a safety message they will read, understand and remember. This is the time when youngsters are most apt to be playing around power lines. So, it's the best time for them to think about safety. Pick up your free comic book now.

Golf standouts suffer collapse

By BOB GREEN AP Golf Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lennie Clements took advantage of a mass collapse by some of golf's top players and moved into the lead halfway through Saturday's third round of the 87th U.S. Open championship.

Clements, a 30-year-old nonwinner in seven years on the PGA Tour, played the front side in 2under-par 33 and reached the turn on the Lake course at Olympic Club in 173, two under par.

That was one shot better than second-round leader Tom Watson, who is seeking to end a three-year non-winning streak, and Keith Clearwater, who matched the course record with a 6-underpar 64 to move from well back in the back.

Watson lost two shots to par with a front-side 37 but stayed close with a 10-foot par-saving putt on the ninth hole.

Clearwater was the clubhouse leader with a 54-hole score of oneunder-par 209.

Watson and Clements were among the seven men who led or shared the lead over the front nine, played in alternating sunshine and shadow.

The rest — including Jack Nicklaus — slipped back.

Nicklaus was tied at even-par 175 with Ben Crenshaw, Bernhard Langer of West Germany, Tommy Nakajima of Japan and Mark Wiebe.

Wiebe, who held the lead after six holes, bogeyed three holes in a row and reached the turn in 38, three-over for the round.

Nicklaus lost a couple of shots with a struggling 37 that included a three-putt bogey on the seventh. Nakajima and Langer also required 37 shots over the front. Crenshaw was out in 36.

Clearwater, a winner in the Colonial National Invitation earlier this season, fired a bogeyfree, 6-under-par 64 that put him through 54 holes at 209, one under

His score, one stroke off the Open record, tied the course record set by Rives McBee in the 1966 U.S. Open.

Seve Ballesteros, who has won two Masters and as many British Opens, moved up with a 68 that put him at 211, one over par with 18 holes to go in the championship he has called "my No. 1 career goal."

But while Clearwater and Ballesteros were moving to the front, defending U.S. Open champion Ray Floyd and PGA titleholder Bob Tway were finding nothing but trouble.

Floyd thrashed his way to a 40 over the front and was at 182.

Olympic Club's unlucky No. 7
By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Masters champion Larry Mize and PGA winner Lanny Wadkins had bogeys. Dan Pohl and 1978 PGA champion John Mahaffey each took six. They all were victims of the tender trap—hole No. 7.

Measuring 288 yards on the Olympic Club's Lake Course, site of the 1987 U.S. Open, No. 7 is one of the shortest par-4s in pro golf. Straight from tee to green, it invites players to go for birdies. More often, it yields disaster.

"It's a Pandora's box, ready to open," said Mac O'Grady, who birdied the hole in the first two rounds. "You stand up there on the tee and you feel omnipotent and omniscient looking at the flag. But you can make six or seven there.

"It's not long, but it's very subtle. You have to be careful there. It's a sensitive little hole."

In the first round of the U.S. Open Thursday, Greg Norman had consecutive bogeys on the fifth and sixth holes.

In trouble now, Norman arrived at No. 7 with an ill-conceived idea. He is one of the longest hitters on the tour, and if a long hitter can avoid the bunkers that guard the front of No. 7, he can reach the three-tiered putting surface with one swing.

Norman figured this was a good place to reclaim at least one of those strokes he had lost to bogey. So, he listened to the siren's song and went for the green. His drive wound up in one of the bunkers, and No. 7 had claimed another victim.

Norman was lucky to survive with par, which is more than many of his colleagues could manage. There were 34 bogeys and seven double bogeys on the hole in the first round, a signal that danger lurks in that seemingly harmless layout.

No. 7 was the last hole Corey Pavin played in this tournament. He took a six there and then withdrew with a muscle problem in his lower back.

The worst score on the hole went to Steve Gotsche, a University of Nebraska graduate who is the assistant pro at a private club in Great Bend, Kan. He put his tee shot into the trees, got stuck on the second of the hole's three tiers and wound up 3-putting the hole.

That added up to a triple-bogey seven, ruining an otherwise productive day in which Gotsche shot 72. A simple par at the hole, and he would have been among the first-round leaders, right up there with the other 69s, like the one Denis Watson shot.

Watson birdied No. 7 in the first round but remained wary of what could happen there. Comment: "Number seven is one of the hardest par fours I've ever seen."

Winners with winless record

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

They play hard. They play tough. The only problem is they just haven't quite been able to win yet.

Yet they are winners.
Last week, the American

Last week, the American Bambino League's Chase Oil tried hard to win its first game of the year. They were ready to play Citizen's Bank and Trust.

Chase was 0-12 at the time. That's 12 losses and no wins if you want to turn it around and at least make it sound better.

The attitudes were positive that night. The Chase players knew this just might be the night they would win their first game of the season.

"We've got the stuff, but its just not going our way," head coach David Sellers said before the game. "But, we're having a good time. We're having fun and that's all that matters."

After he spoke with me, he turned to his team and talked to them.

Coaches have a tough job. For Sellers, perhaps the toughest part is pumping up a team that is winless. He tried to inspire his team anyway.

"We've been coming on strong every game," he told them "You've got the talent to win."

Chase batted first in the game. With one out, 12-year-old Chase pitcher Jamie Smiles was the second batter against Citizens. Smiles laid down a sharp grounder into right field and was the first runner aboard. Running on guts, Jamie later came home on a passed ball and Chase jumped out to a quick 1-0 lead.

t to a quick 1-0 lead. With bat in hand, Brett Johnson then hit a towering foul ball over yet. the Chase dugout.

Pointing to the right field fence, a Chase-coach looked at Johnson, still standing at the plate, and said, "I told you, hit it over that fence, not this one."

Brett finally fouled out and Josh Nix struck out. Chase, though, had taken that ever-so-important first inning lead.

Citizens came and went 1-2-3 in the bottom of the first. After one inning of play: Chase Citizens 0.

 In the top of the second, Eric Kilpatrick and Brandon Johnson each drove in a run for Chase.

In the bottom of the second, again, Citizens was retired in order.

Citizens was blanked once again in the bottom half of the inning.

After three, Chase 8, Citizens 0.
As if an eight-run lead weren't enough, Chase struck for five more runs in the fourth inning, and after the final out of the frame, Chase held a commanding 13-0 lead.

Citizens then came to bat in the bottom of the fourth.

It had to happen. It always does for Chase. Three singles, 11 walks, one hit batsman and three outs later, Citizen drew to within two runs of Chase.

As the Chase players dejectedly returned to the dugout, heads

"That's the way ball games go," Sellers said, not completely dissatisfied. After all, he had had fun and he knew his players had too.

And, he was right.

"It doesn't really matter if you lose or win," 12-year-old Josh Nix said after the game. "Winning's part of it, but I just like to have

"Because we get down, we start messing up," Jamie Smiles said. "We just keep encouraging each other. I enjoy it and I like to

essons learned from my dad

If it weren't for my father, chances are I wouldn't be able to write this today.

That may sound like a bit of an overstatement, however true it actually is.

My dad has a love for sports. No. let me rephrase that - my dad has a love for baseball. All other sports, well, they're just around to pass the time from October until April.

My dad taught me everything I know about baseball, and a lot about the other sports as well.

I vividly remember sitting on a grassy hill in the outfield of Turnpike Stadium watching Elliott Maddox and Wayne Garland trying to win a game for the Dallas-Fort Worth Spurs.

I remember later when Turnpike became Arlington Stadium and watching the Texas Rangers win their first home game as Frank Howard belted a towering home run. When Texas won that premier game over California 7-6, I thought what a great team the Rangers would soon be.

I remember trips to Tulsa and Denver to watch the Oilers and Bears play minor league ball.

I remember how lucky I was to see games in Yankee Stadium,

In My Corner

Jimmy Patterson

the Astrodome, the Kingdome, Memorial Stadium in Kansas

City and the Big A in Anaheim. I remember fondly dad's stories about how he, as a teenager in Springfield, Missouri, played catch with another teenager -Joe Garagiola.

I remember how, just a few years ago, we were able to go to a Dallas Cowboys mini-camp and how excited he was to stand there next to Tom Landry and Tony

I remember watching the Cowboys when they played in the Cotton Bowl. They weren't very good back then, but because I was a kid going to a football game with my

I remember watching the Cowboys in Texas Stadium one freezing winter. My dad used to say that if you stuck your feet in a paper sack you could keep them warm during the game. I thought that was wierd. But, it worked.

I remember how my dad was glad that beer wasn't bought or sold at Texas Stadium.

There were other unforgettable moments: ★ Watching the Cowboys win two

would beat the Cowbovs ★ Asking my dad why the ABA's basketball was red, white and blue. He didn't know either. ★ Watching one of the greatest tennis rivalries of all time: Bjorn Borg and Jimmy Connors at Wimbledon and Forest Hills. * Watching the Dallas Black-hawks at Fair Park Coliseum. Hockey never quite made it in Dallas, but except for the beer drinkers and drunken brawls at a hockey game, it was even fun. ★ Chomping at the bit when our preacher talked past noon. Even a church-going man like my dad didn't like to miss the early Cowboy kickoffs. One thing sticks out in my mind perhaps more than any other,

I remember proudly carrying home a foul ball from a minor league game one time. To hear my dad tell it, I made a good stab and pulled the ball in for the catch. I think what really happened, though, was that my dad caught it and then gave it to me.

All of these memories are made possible because my dad thought it important for his son to appreciate sports.

Largely because of what he taught me, I am able today to make a living at writing about it. Some dad, that dad of mine.

state crown In most instances, it is great to see the Dads (and Moms) give their children all that support, making all the games, sometimes the workouts, providing encouragement (and equipment). That's the way it was for me, with my Dad. Despite starting an interest in athletics just as the Great Depression hit, my Mother and Dad always encouraged my involvement in sports activity. In a town of 1,100 most of it was unorganized, self-created, unsupervised. Despite the financially hard times, I always had a football, baseball, glove, basket on the garage, bike, roller skates. Dad dug horseshoe pits along the side of the house and hours on end were spent there There was ping pong, card games. We always golfed together. Our backyard and the friendly neighbors yard became a large football and baseball field for the neighborhood as both families gave up gardens to our athletic space needs. The side wall of a stucco garage quickly started crumbling as rubber balls rebounded off it for fielding practice and golf balls and tennis balls did likewise When winter hit, I never lacked for sled, skis and ice skates. The b-b gun on which I learned the dangers of firearms turned into a .22 rifle and then a shotgun, much to Mother's consternation. But there was never an interest in hunting, only target shooting, and somehow there was always ammunition to do that.

When organized school and summer sports developed, Dad was always there, providing necessary equipment, attending the games, providing transportation. He provided much of the necessary equipment for our high school boxing team, and for two seasons even provided the gymnasium in which to play when a slow-moving school construction project would have left us without a facility. A building he owned was converted. Seating was minimal, the ceiling was low, and players had to avoid a red-hot glowing coal-fired stove along one sideline. But we got the seasons played.

Most of all, he nurtured my interest in sports by taking me to various events. Travelling the 225 miles to Chicago to see the Cubs (and sometimes the Sox) play was a summer ritual. Occasionally it was the College All-Star Game. It necessitated a 4 a.m. departure to drive to Green Bay to see the Packers, and mid-Saturday morning to get to Madison as the Badgers took on Pitt or the Golden Gophers or another national powerhouse.

I'm sure I never appreciated enough all the things he did for our family, and for me personally. I regret that his untimely death robbed him of two things he would have truly enjoyed: His grandchildren and sports on television! But as I reflect back on the impact his support in all my athletic endeavors had, I am reminded of another story.

I had watched this fine young man's successful sports career evolve through little league, Babe Ruth, junior high and high School programs here in Pampa. Late in his senior year we were visiting before a game one day. With tears in his eyes, he said: 'You know something, Mr. Hasse, my Dad has NEVER come out to watch me play, EVER."

Saturday's Braves-Reds game erupts into brawl.

Braves win fight-marred game

ATLANTA (AP) — Dale Murphy's three-run homer highlighted a five-run third inning, during which both benches cleared in a brawl, as the Atlanta Braves defeated the Cincinnati Reds 8-6

The Braves trailed 4-2 when Dion James walked with one out in the third. James went to third on a single by Ken Oberkfell and scored on a double by Gerald Perry before Murphy connected against

Bill Gullickson, 7-5, for his 22nd home run. After Ken Griffey followed with his 10th homer, Gullickson hit Andres Thomas in the back with a pitch. Thomas charged toward the mound but was restrained by Reds catcher Bo Diaz just as Thomas and Gullickson met. Gullickson landed one punch before players from both teams ran onto the field. Thomas and Gullickson were ejected from Right-hander Doyle Alexander, 4-1, allowed just six hits in seven plus innings, but four of the hits were home runs. Gene Garber earned his seventh

Mavericks in unique situation

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks don't expect to get an immediate impact player with the 20th pick in Monday's NBA

It's a unique situation for the Mavs, the champions of the Midwest Division, to be drafting so far back

"In the past, we've always picked in the top 10," said Rick Sund, director of player personnel. "There's a big deck that will be shuffled this time before it gets around to us playing our hand." Trades were unlikely for the Mavericks and new Coach John MacLeod, who spent 14 years with the Phoenix Suns before he was fired. MacLeod was hired by the Mavs after Dick Motta abruptly resigned. "John really likes our team and we'll probably stay with our 20th pick," Sund said. "Of course, it will be difficult for us to get anybody who could break into the eight player rotation.

The Mays are a team built on draft choices except for center James Donaldson who was obtained in a trade two years ago.

Marty Blake, the NBA director of scouting, said that in the team's seven years it has "one of the best draft track records in the NBA. Picking Roy Tarpley in the first round last year was the pick of the decade

Tarpley of Michigan became a rebounding force for the Mavericks late in the season and was a part-time starter.

'That was a tribute to Sund and the expertise of the Mavericks in the draft," Blake said.

The Mavs, who also have the third pick of the second round at the 26th position, will likely get some depth at guard.

'There are some good guards in the draft," Sund said. "But we're not necessarily looking for a specific need because we have so much depth on the team.'

Some good guards expected to be available are Tony White of Tennessee, Tim McCalister of Oklahoma, Jim Farmer of Alabama, Freddie Banks of Nevada-Las Vegas and the intriguing 5foot-3 Tyrone "Mugsy" Bogues of Wake Forest.

"Bogues is in our picture quite a bit," Sund said. "He's probably smaller than 5-3 but he made a big impact in the workout camps

"He's super at pushing the ball up the floor. He's a solid point guard. It might make some sense to have a guy like that on the club.

Look at the impact Spud Webb had on Atlanta. Bogues is great at penetrating and dishing the ball off like Webb. He's a quarterback type of player for your offense.

MacLeod said the team hopes to get a player who "can make a contribution next year, but certainly not somebody who is going to start.'

Ex-Ranger considers himself one of players

AP Sports Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Toby Harrah sits in the third base dugout at All-Sports Stadium, props one foot up on the bench and spits a stream of tobacco juice onto the dugout floor.

"Managing is the next thing to playing," he says, looking out at the Oklahoma City 89ers, Triple A farm club of the Texas Rangers. "I consider myself really one of them.'

For 16 years, Harrah was one of them. He started his career with the Washington Senators, who later became the Texas Rangers. He then spent time with Cleveland and the New York Yankees before finishing his career with the Rangers

'I've played in 2,000 games in the major leagues. I have about 7,000 at-bats," he says. "I feel I have some knowledge I can share to make them better-

"It's so important to keep these guys in a positive frame of mind. It's such a long season, with a lot of ups and downs ... if your attitude is positive and you feel good about yourself, you get through those stretches a lot better.

The ups and downs have been commonplace so far for the 89ers, who have stayed around the .500 mark most of the season. While the hitting has been sufficient, the pitching has been spotty.

"It's a challenge," Harrah says. "That's what it's all about, the challenge of it all.

"We have a lot of guys here that other teams have given up on. But you give me some guys who want to play and have that desire, and we've got a

HOUSTON (AP) -- It was a thoroughly confused and uncomfortable Phil Garner who appeared in list this season. 'He's been a very good player for us and I'm sure he'll have some more playing days." Astros General Manager Dick Wagner said. "But we needed to make room down the line for some or our younger people. After taking the short walk from the Astros lock greeted by manager Tommy Lasorda.

'Phil Garner's prayers have been answered," Lasorda shouted as Garner fielded a telephone call. "All former Dodger haters become Dodger lovers after they get here. Phil, you must have prayed to the same God that (Alex) Trevino prayed

Reagan vetoes permanent 'Fairness Doctrine' rule

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan on Saturday vetoed legislation to make permanent the nearly 40-year-old "Fairness Doctrine" rule that broadcasters have condemned as a violation of their First Amendment rights.

This type of content-based regulation by the federal government is, in my judgment, antagonistic to the freedom of expression guaranteed" by the Constitution, Reagan said in his veto message, and he noted the Federal Communications Commission had found against its own rule.

'In any other medium besides broadcasting, such federal policing of the editorial judgment of journalists would be unthinkable," he said. "The framers of the First Amendment, confident that public debate would be freer and healthier without the kind of interference represented by the 'Fairness Doctrine,' chose to forbid such regulations in the clearest terms," he said.

Reagan pointed to the constitutional language ordering that Congress "shall make no law ...

abridging the freedom of the speech, or of the press.

More recently, he noted, the Supreme Court struck down a "right-of-access" statute - a sort of fairness doctrine for newspapers. Reagan said the court had spoken of "the statute's intrusion into the function of the editorial process."

The Fairness Doctrine requires radio and television broadcasters to cover issues of public importance and present opposing views.

The doctrine has been on the books as a Federal Communications Commission policy since 1949, but a federal appeals court last fall ruled that it was not a law and could be repealed by the FCC.

The FCC, which has been studying the possibility of scrapping the doctrine, says the policy is constitutionally suspect because it gives the government a measure of editorial control over the broadcast media. The agency also says the policy inhibits coverage of controversial issues because broadcasters fear lawsuits and license challenges.

Stark skipper relieved of duty

WASHINGTON (AP) - The detached (from duty) based on his skipper of the USS Stark and two of his top officers have been relieved from duty, and Pentagon sources say the three may face courts-martial stemming from the deadly attack May 17 on the frigate.

The Defense Department, in a brief statement issued late Friday, said Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost, the chief of naval operations, ordered Capt. Glenn R. Brindel, the Stark's captain, and Lt. Cmdr. Raymond J. Gajan and Lt. Basil E. Moncrief Jr. relieved of their duties immediately.

Gajan and Moncrief recently received the Navy and Marine Corps Medal for heroism for their roles in directing fire-fighting efforts that saved the Stark from sinking after the attack, in which 37 sailors died and 21 were in-

The Pentagon said that Trost had acted on a request from Gen. George Crist, who commands all U.S. forces assigned to the Middle East. The Pentagon said Crist 'requested that these officers be lack of confidence in their performance."

Trost's order followed the submission of an investigative report to him and Adm. William Crowe. chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, assessing the ship's performance when it was attacked by the Iraqi warplane.

The attack, in which two Exocet missiles were fired, occurred while the Stark was on routine patrol in the Persian Gulf. One of the missiles detonated

Jackson says Angola to release U.S. pilot

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who grabbed headlines in 1984 when Syria released a downed U.S. Navy flier to him, says Angola plans to free an American pilot held for two months in the African nation.

Jackson said late Friday that he was willing to comply with a request from Angolan officials and make a trip there to be on hand for the release of Joseph Longo of Greensburg, Pa. But such a trip now appears unneces-

State Department officials said they have no independent verification of the claim, but added, 'We certainly hope it is true.'

Longo's father, Bernie, 66, a retired draftsman, said at his Ligonier, Pa, home that Jackson called him Friday to say his son's release was imminent.

'He was real positive. We're ecstatic," said Longo.

He said a State Department official told the family that an Italian delegation had seen his son, gave him packages from the family and reported that "he looked fine and he seemed to be all right psychologically and phywas that I would go to Angola to bring him back.

'It appears now that the American pilot is going to be released, maybe by week's end without our having to go," said Jackson, a Democratic presidential hopeful who has not formally declared his candidacy

State Department spokeswoman Deborah Cavin said Jackson told U.S. officials Friday morning of the Angolan statement.

When we have learned, believed and obeyed the gospel in becoming servants of Jesus Christ, opportu-nities are afforded us each day of our lives. What we do with these opportunities will determine whether we will be classified as

Women's museum opens

By DONNA CASSATA Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Wilhelmina Cole Holladay, perfectly coiffed and elegantly reserved, recently described the effort to bring her concept of a women's museum to fruition like a confident pugilist recalling the path to the championship title.

"I haven't found anything difficult," said the iron-willed philanthropist and president of the National Museum for Women in the Arts. "It's been a wonderful challenge.

The museum, dedicated to the contribution of women to the arts, opened recently with assets of $17 million, a six-story renaissance revival building, a growing membership roll of 66,000 and a woman with business acumen at

The concept of a women's museum, though, was born in disbelief. Mrs. Holladay, and her husband, Wallace, were traveling in Europe in the early 1960s when they discovered the works of 17th century Flemish artist Clara Peeters at Austria's National Museum and Spain's Prado Museum.

ıpa,

For many individuals, summer is a time to catch up on that sewing you've been longing to do, or to try to get ahead budget-wise by making some of those great vacation fashions, or maybe even starting now for fall! If sewing is in your game plan for this summer, consider some of these sewing shortcuts to save time and energy!

Being organized with sewing and pressing equipment and sewing tools can save much time in the construction process. Know what supplies you have, where they are, and what condition they are in. When beginning a project, fill several bobbins so they are ready as you run out. Tape the machine foot to the floor with carpet tape to keep it from slipping.

If you need to sew when you have a child to care for, make a special sewing box for him that has empty spools, a ruler, tape measure, bits of ribbon and pieces of trim in it to be played with only during sewing time. It serves as a special "toy" that he looks forward to, and is good for about 20 minutes of play for him and 20 minutes of uninterrupted sewing for you!

Sewing step savers start with a 'sew-as-much-as-you-can' before clipping threads or pressing idea. Then press as much as you can at one time. This technique is useful for staystitching, underlining and all short seams, especially on fabric.

Learn to work in units, and complete as much of one section of a garment as possible while it is flat. For example, apply pockets to the garment before sewing side or shoulder seams. Sew in the zipper before sewing side seams. In many cases, you can complete the neckline before sewing side seams. Also, some sleeves can be sewn in before underarm seams are sewn.

When two rows of topstitching are required, use twin needles and two spools of thread for this operation.

When gathering large areas, zigzag stitch over a length of buttonhole twist or a few strands of thread, using a medium-stitch width and medium-stitch length. Pull the buttonhole twist or thread to gather.

Attach facings, cuffs, tab fronts, waistbands and collars to garments by "stitching in the ditch" and hem garments by machine, if fashion or pattern suggests it, to avoid timeconsuming handwork

Fusibles save time, also. When appropriate, fuse interfacings to garment sections and fuse layers

Homemakers' News

together. Before fusing, always pretest - some fabrics are more sensitive to heat and steam than others, and a few will not fuse satisfactorily.

To eliminate basting, consider using adhesive or glue designed to hold fabric layers together for

To avoid breaking threads when starting a new seam, lower the machine needle into the fabric 1/2 inch from the edge of the seam; holding threads to the side, lower pressure foot and backstitch to edge, then stitch forward.

Mark buttonhole ends and placement with transparent tape you can write on. Remove tape after buttonhole is made. Test on a scrap of fabric first to make sure the tape does not damage the fibers in the fabric.

Prevent cutting through ends of a buttonhole by placing a straight pin at each end. Tape buttons in place, too. Take one or two stitches through the holes and remove the tape. Sew buttons on by machine whenever

At the same time you sew buttons on a garment, sew any extras to a scrap of the garment's fabric and toss it into your button box. If and when a button needs to be replaced, you can easily locate the right match.

Whenever you need to use shoulder pads in blouses or dresses, interchange them. Instead of sewing the pads into the garment, sew self-gripping fasteners on both the garment and the pads. Two sets of fasteners are needed per shoulder pad.

Some ironing board covers are screen printed with a measuring guide broken down into inches and metrics. This could help you measure, mark and press hems, seam allowances, etc.

These are only a few suggestions for shortcuts to sewing. Keep in mind there is no one correct method for sewing, and there are many different quick-sewing techniques. With experience, you are suitable for your pattern, fabric and level of sewing skill. For more information on clothing construction, contact your Gray County Extension Office.

Flowering vines enhance landscape

By JOE VANZANDT County Extension Agent

Don't forget to bring your problem plants and insects to the Sick Plant Clinic, 1:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday in the Pampa Mall.

This will be the best opportunity to get help with your "problems". Two Extension Specialists will be on hand to diagnose and advise you on control recommendations.

ANNUAL VINES FOR LAND-SCAPE

Annual flowering vines are often very useful in the home landscape. They can add interest to the landscape when grown on a fence, arbor or trellis, growing rapidly to form an attractive mass of foliage and flowers.

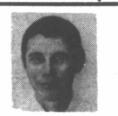

Annual vines climb by twining around a support or by clinging with tendrils. A wooden lattice, woven wire fencing or string is all that is needed. They may be used to provide shade along a porch, give new charm to a fence or add color and interest to the side of the garage.

The morning glory is one of the most colorful vines available. The flowers may be 4 to 5 inches across and are borne freely on vines which often grow to a height of 12 to 15 feet. Pure, brilliant colors are available in white and shades of blue and red.

Morning glories must be grown in a well-drained soil in a warm, sunny location. Avoid a rich soil and excessive fertilization, which would produce vigorous vines with few flowers.

The plants are tender to frost. Start seed indoors in pots and plant outdoors two or three weeks after the average last frost date in your area. Soaking the seed in water overnight will speed germination.

Cobaea scandens, sometimes known as Cathedral Bells, or cup and saucer vine, grows rapidly to a height of 20 feet or more. It rough surface by tendrils at the end of the leaves.

This vine will grow in a sunny or shady location. The plants are free of insect and disease prob-

The flowers of Cathedral Bells are bell-shaped and about two inches long. They are green at first, becoming blue or violet when fully open. They will open from midsummer until killed by frost.

The Moonflower produces pure white, fragrant flowers nearly 6 inches across. The vines grow rapidly to a height of 20 feet or

The large, heart-shaped leaves overlap to provide dense shade when used on a pergola or on a lattice along a porch. The flowers open during evening and remain until about noon the next day.

Moonflower plants should be started indoors in small pots. Nick the tough seedcoat with a file and soak in water overnight. Nasturtiums are available either in low bushy forms or as vines which grow 4 or 5 feet tall. They bloom profusely, producing fragrant flowers in shades of red and yellow. Plant in well-drained soils of average or low fertility. In rich soil, they will produce mostly leaves and very few flowers.

The Canary Bird flower is closely related to the nasturtium. This tender vine grows to a height of about 8 feet. The flowers have two large, fringed petals, three smaller ones and a green spur.

Gourds have rather inconspicuous flowers, but produce colorful fruit which are ornamental on the vine during late summer. They may then be dried fall and winter arrangements in the home

Two other annual vines you may want to consider are cypress vine and thunbergia or Black-Eyed Susan. Sometimes Kudzu vine as well as Japanese hops are grown as annual vines, but use these with caution as they can become pests in the yard.

Now I'm going to tell you some-thing you won't believe. Unless there is cigar smoke around, I can't get excited about the man. I had a boyfriend who smoked cigars just to please me, but cigars made him sick and that ended our romance.

Now I think I should try to overcome this cigar mania. Would hypnosis help? Or should I see a psychiatrist? With so many people complaining about pollution and the evils of smoking, it's hard to find a cigar smoker these days. CIGAR LOVER

Foster dads give special love

By MARILYN POWERS Lifestyles Editor

Any man can be a father, but it takes someone special to be a

This saying may be seen on needlecraft kits, plaques and other items. Some might add that it takes someone really special to be a foster daddy - or mommy.

Foster parents offer a secure home for children who have been removed from their original homes by the Texas Department of Human Services. These children may be separated from their "real" families because of abuse, neglect or some trouble the family is having, making it difficult to meet the child's needs.

The children may have mental, emotional or physical problems. Some have siblings who are also removed to foster care.

These conditions may sound daunting to anyone wishing to help these children, but a group of Panhandle area families don't let that stop them from opening their doors - and hearts - to the kids.

Rural County Foster Parent Association, based in Pampa, was formed four months ago as a support group for foster parents in an eight-county area. Johnny Platt, manager of Freeman's Flowers in Pampa, currently serves as president of the organization.

"We are a support group for foster families. We help each other on problems with the children," he said.

Platt has been a foster father for eight years, and he and his wife currently have four foster children, in addition to their own adopted two. The four foster kids have been with the Platts for about a year, and all are about to be adopted out.

'One of the reasons we're a foster family is to help provide a these kids don't have any religious background whatever, and we try to provide that.

"We try to provide a stable home and lots of love. It's rewarding for me to be able to provide a little security and love that they haven't had," he said.

The Platts have had ample opportunity to dish out love and security. They have sheltered 16 children in their eight years of fostering, some staying as long as two years. The average length of stay for a child in a foster home is six months to a year; some may stay only a few weeks.

We get a lot that are termed 'failure to thrive' and are malnourished. We've also had some that were sexually abused. We've sheltered mainly siblings. We had one teenage victim of sexual abuse," Platt said.

Foster parents must be trained through the Texas Foster Parents Board and must receive 15 hours of training each year. The training covers topics such as child development.

Training is provided by the Rural County Foster Parents Association as part of its monthly meetings. The group meets at 7 p.m. on the third Monday of each month at Children's World Day Care Center, 500 N. Ballard.

The non-profit organization, a branch of an Amarillo foster parents group, has a board of directs, including one worker from Texas Department of Human Services. It assists foster families with clothing and other items not covered by the countyor the state.

"They're not able to fund certain things; we take up the slack." Platt said.

A clothing room is maintained at White Deer for area foster families; needy families request-

programs received the Gold Link

Award. A third place award was won for Service hours. The Pampa chapter also received the

Turner tied for second place in the state for Most Outstanding stable home environment. A lot of ing help would also be given access to the clothing, Platt said.

Children who are placed in foster homes may be returned to their families at a later time. If this isn't feasible: placement with a relative is attempted; then the next step is adoption by an outside family.

Steve and Marla Sleeker of White Deer have been foster parents for one month. They have three foster children, two sisters and a brother, in addition to their own two daughters.

"We had thought about doing this several years ago, and then when we heard on the radio that they had a shortage of foster families, we thought about it and contacted them. After the three orientation meetings, we decided to do it," Sleeker said.

Those who contact the Rural County Foster Parents Association are sent a packet of information on the subject. A worker contacts the interested party and meets with them. Training and orientation follow, along with health and fire inspections of the potential foster family's home.

If all is in order and the couple or individual completes the training, they become foster parents. There are currently 10 foster homes in Pampa

We are in desperate need of foster homes. We usually don't have enough," Platt said.

"There is a big need for foster parents that will take teenagers. For example, there are probably three homes in all of Potter County that will take teenagers. They're a little more difficult to work with and take a special kind of people to handle," he said.

Foster parents can specify what types of children they will accept, such as what age, how many and what kind of problems. They will be expected to help the children with problems.

"One of the neatest experiences I can remember is that we received a baby that was malnourished. It was 5 months old and weighed 5 pounds. It was nearly gone. We (my wife and I) worked and did therapy for four months strenuously, like being up all night. The doctor said if the baby had been in that condition one more week, it would probably have died.

'We worked for four months. and the baby came out of it. That was one of the most rewarding children I've had. The baby was later adopted out and is now doing well," Platt said.

Not every encounter has been so rewarding.

"I had one experience with one boy I wasn't able to control. I tried everything I could. He had a lot of psychological problems. He was probably the only one we couldn't do anything with," Platt

"There is so much that a foster home could provide for these kids that could be a turning point in their lives. Most of them have a very low self-esteem. We try to help them have a better outlook on everything," he said.

Sleeker said the most rewarding part of being a foster parent for him is "showing love and getting it in return.

"I feel a foster home is vital to these children. A short period of time can do a lot. It is a very needed thing," Platt said. Anyone interested in becoming a foster parent or donating money or other items may contact Platt at Freeman's Flowers, or write to Rural County Foster Parents Association, P.O. Box 838, Pampa 79066-0838.

Will Platt and Sleeker continue to be foster dads? Both said a definite yes.

Dye helps track down, monitor tiny cancer cells

DALLAS (AP) — Researchers have made a major breakthrough in cancer treatment by developing a special dye that helps find and monitor tumors as tiny as a pinhead, medical offi-

Currently, cancer doctors usually use X-rays to tell whether chemotherapy has helped shrink tumors, but they must wait three or four weeks before any changes can be detected, said Dr. David Ranney, who led the University of Texas Health Science Center research team.

'When they get to the size when you can tell if they've regrown after treatment, they're too big,' he said. Use of the newly developed dye should allow doctors to assess several weeks earlier the effectiveness of cancer treatments, Ranney said. That speed could enable doctors to change treatment plans quickly before tumors begin spreading, he added. Just one or two thimblefuls of tumor can overwhelm a patient's disease-fighting white blood cells, leading to the spread of cancer. Ranney said Monday.

The dye, tested so far only in mice, enhances the results of magnetic resonance imaging, or MRI. MRI uses magnetic impulses and radio-frequency electromagnetic waves to generate high-quality images of internal

The researchers have studied the dye in mice injected with malignant human melanomas, a lethal form of skin cancer. One group of mice was treated with an anti-tumor drug, while the other group was left untreated.

Ranney said the dye improves detection of tumors because malignant tissue contains blood vessels that are more porous than surrounding tissue. As a result, the dye leaks out of the bloodstream and into tumors, which show up brighter than healthy tissue on MRI scans.

OOPS!! Last week's column had a mix-up on the trip Bernice and Raymond Maddox had taken. First, apologies to Bernice for misspelling her name. Also, the column reported that they had taken an island-hopping Jamaican cruise with 78 others, where they were the only Texans. The accurate part is that they really were the only Texans on board. But the ship was an 88passenger vessel, and the trip started from Tahiti and islandhopped its way across the French Polynesian Islands, which include Bora Bora and Moorea, for a total of five bow landings. It's an exciting story of a pharmacist who developed a wrinkle cream for which women all over the country are clamoring for.

Robert Heldfond is making cosmetic history with his EB5 Cream. His dream since Pharmacy School has resulted in a wrinkle cream which is enjoying record sales in department stores and is praised very highly among cosmeticians and customers.

Research lab tests show that by daily use of EB5 Cream, morning and night, facial lines around the eyes, on the forehead, and around the mouth are smoothed. Thousands across the country are so pleased to find that EB5 is 5 creams in one jar... EB5 is a wrinkle cream, a day and night cream, a moisturizer, an eye cream, and a make-up base...all in one. Pharmacist Heldfond's EB5 Cream is greaseless and leaves the skin soft, velvety and younger looking. It contains Liprogen and other effective ingredients. If you are concerned about your skin appearing to be aging too quickly, hurry and find some EB5 Cream. One 4 OZ. jar lasts for months and is sold with a money-back guarantee.

Note: EB5 Cream is available in most JCPenney Stores with cosmetic departments.

RECORD BOOK HELP

Anyone who needs help preparing their record book for County Record Judging can come to the county Extension office all day Tuesday, June 30.

Donna Brauchi and Jeff Goodwin will be available to help you with your record books all day.

If you need help but cannot come in on that day, just call for an appointment and we will work with you

We will also have a day to work with McLean 4-H'ers from 1-5 p.m. Friday, June 26 at the McLean Library 4-H IS FOR FAMILIES

4-H is a youth development program for youth through the involvement of parents, other adults and volunteers who organize and conduct learning experiences for youth in a community setting. It is important for the parents to participate, because successful 4-H'ers have the interest and support of their parents.

Parents can help by assisting their sons and their daughters in choosing 4-H projects. They can provide transportation to local meetings and county activities. provide refreshments for their children. In addition, they can keep informed about 4-H through 4-H newsletters.

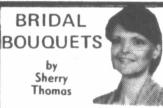

Parents can become 4-H boosters, support their local 4-H leaders and get acquainted with them. Above all, parents can let 4-H leaders know how much their efforts are appreciated.

Parents also can become 4-H leaders. 4-H leaders can be organization leaders, project leaders, activity leaders, teen advisors, recruiters, organizers, resource persons, and on and on.

Any parent can become a leader. All it takes is an interest in young people. If you like young people and are willing to learn from experiences, and if you want to share your talents, skills and hobbies, you have the qualities of becoming a 4-H leader. You, the parent, are needed to help youth become better citizens.

For more information on 4-H and becoming a 4-H leader, contact the county Extension office at 669-7429.

IT MAKES SCENTS You're going to be so beautifully dressed for your wedding day! Don't forget that most subtle of accessories fragrance. Here are some sweet smelling hints for brides.

Your flowers will, of course, provide some of your special bridal fragrance, depending upon the varieties you choose. You may wish to coordinate your personal fragrance with your flowers, so they don't conflict or cancel each other out.

To avoid worrying about unpleasant odors, you'll want to use a good deodorant or antiperspirant. An unscented one will be less likely to con-flict with your perfume. You may also want to get dress shields sewn into your gown.

Perfume is the strongest and most long-lasting fragrance form. Cologne is the weakest - good for touchups, but not lasting. If you have dry skin, fragrance may evaporate more quickly on you than on women with oilier skin; carry a small atomizer or sample to renew your scent.

• Europe - "Rock The Night" It's easy to see why this pop metal band has become such an immediate commercial success. The music is a carbon copy of the Scorpions — with all the muscle and menace removed. The video is early Ratt. The song's hook is a note-for-note rip-off of David Essex' 1973 hit, "Rock On." And the lead singer is a dead ringer for Heather Locklear. The only thing remotely original about this band is...is.... There's nothing remotely original about this band. Rating: Mundane.

• Heart - "Alone" Take an overblown power ballad and throw in an enormous budget, and this is what you end up with. The only interesting thing on the screen is the Wilson sisters' makeup. Rating: Mundane.

• David Bowie — "Day In Day Out" Film auteur Julien Temple shot this in downtown Los Angeles between theatrical gigs, and it is the closest a music video has come to being a true mini-movie. There's too much sexual violence (enough to get the clip banned in Britain), but it's an integral

The drippy ballad - a surprising and undeserved chart-topper — is an insult to rock 'n' roll; the yideo is an insult to women everywhere. Consign the record to the waste bin and confine the video to the porno house. Rating: Horrid.

• Fleetwood Mac - "Big Love" The Big Mac is back, and back on top. What have the years wrought? Well, Stevie Nicks hasn't changed a bit unfortunately. John McVie looks like her father. Wheat program announcement held up

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is holding up announcement of the 1988 wheat program because of a disagreement within the Reagan administration over how much land should be taken from production next year.

Under the Food Security Act of 1985, next year's program was supposed to have been announced by June 1, including the percentage a farmer must idle in order to qualify for price supports and payments.

Deputy Secretary Peter C. Myers acknowledged in a telephone interview with farm broadcasters on Wednesday that the program announcement has been delayed because of fighting between USDA and the president's Office of Management and Budget.

The USDA view, held by Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng, is that wheat farmers should have to idle no more than the 27.5 percent of their wheat base, while OMB wants a 30 percent acreage set-aside in order to reduce federal spending.

Myers, who was reluctant at first to respond to wheat program questions, said a larger acreage reduction would indicate to foreign wheat producers that "we're willing to back off and let the rest of the world take over our markets"

"We think just to save a very questionable amount of dollars to increase the set-aside is the wrong signal to send to the world," Myers said. "It's the wrong policy direction, as far as we're concerned."

Myers, a Missouri farmer before joining USDA, said the United States shouldn't give up any more hard-won foreign markets than necessary, especially at a time when projections show some progress in trimming the huge U.S. wheat stockpile.

"Why should we continue to raise the set-aside and penalize our own producers?" he said. "We're going to go forward with what we think is right."

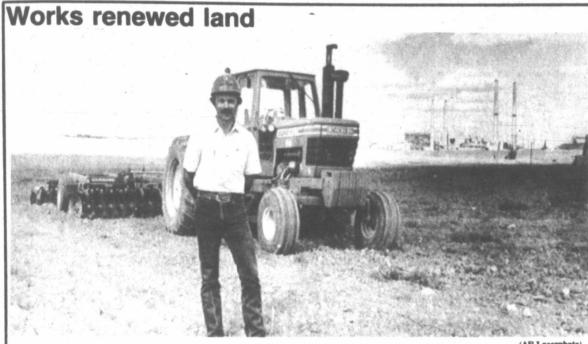

Carl Schwensen, executive vice president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, said he agreed with the USDA view when told of Myers' remarks.

But Schwensen said there is still another reason for holding the line on the size of the 1988 wheat acreage setaside

Raising the requirement to 30 percent "is just cutting too deep into (farmers') efficiencies, and it causes them to idle so much land their return is going to be affected," he said in an interview.

Bill Schwarzkoph, reclamation superintendent at Western Energy's Rosebud strip mine operation at Colstrip, Mont., poses in front of a tractor on reclaimed land. He claims victory in his fight to renew the land. "We're like farmers plowing, only we just plow a little deeper," Schwarzkoph said.

USDA seeks 100 research scientists

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has renewed a recruiting campaign in hopes of attracting 100 young scientists to work on research projects for up to two years.

Terry B. Kinney Jr., administrator of the department's Agricultural Rsearch Service, said Monday the agency "will be selecting scientists who have expertise in biotechnology and other research priorities that our laboratories are pursuing."

Candidates sought by the agency are those who have earned a doctoral degree in the last three years and are U.S. citizens. Those chosen will be appointed as research associates at salaries ranging from $27,172 to $32,567 per year.

The $4 million-a-year program began in 1980 to attract scientific talent to agricultural research.

Farmland values are bottoming out, USDA reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — After five years of brutal decline, the nation's farmland values apparently are bottoming out, the Agriculture Department says

But officials are cautious about making predictions, indicating that no boom is in sight and that what happens through 1988 also depends of a host of economic factors including commodity prices and federal programs.

"A May 1 survey of rural appraisers and several surveys by Federal Reserve banks in April noted a leveling in values in areas where values were still falling late last year," the department's Economic Research Service said in a report Tuesday.

Bill Heneberry, the principal author, said the number of farmland transfers also has started to rise for the first time since the early 1980s. Although voluntary sales and estate sales account for most of the transfers, foreclosures made up an estimated 26 percent of the total, up from 22 percent last year, he said.

"We think that 26 percent is a conservative figure, that it probably does not include some farms where it was a voluntary (sale) to avoid foreclosure," Heneberry said.

Other farmers continue to

of farmland buyers, he said, accounting for 56 percent of the purchases so far this year, compared with 57 percent in 1986 and 63 percent in 1985.

make up the largest category

No new dollar figures were available, but Heneberry noted in an interview that two months ago that the agency published national and state figures showing the average value of U.S. farmland and buildings on Feb. 1 was at a 19-year low of $548 per acre, down from $595 a year earlier.

Farmland prices rose to a peak of $823 per acre in 1982 before starting their five-year

"Optimism about the land market stems from expectations of another year of high net cash income and low interest rates," the report said. "Net cash income (the difference between cash receipts and expenses) is expected to rise mainly because of reduced expenditures and higher government payments, which will offset lower commodity receipts."

The report added: "Higher net cash income and reduced interest rates on farm mortgages will enable more farmers to finance land purchases. Also, high rent-to-value ratios may attract non-farm investors into the farm real estate market."

Feedlots show gains from higher prices, but beef production believed headed down WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher market Further, bad weather in late winter and states totaled 7.52 million head, up 6 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher market prices spurred farmers and feedlot operators to boost grain-fed cattle production this spring, but Agriculture Department analysts say consumers will have less total beef than they did last year.

"Beef production in 1987 is expected to decline 5 percent to 7 percent from a year earlier, because continued large fed-cattle slaughter will be more than offset by sharp drops in non-fed slaughter this spring and summer," the department's Economic Research Service says.

Further, bad weather in late winter and reduced inventories in feedlots resulted in fewer animals sent to market, pushing up prices of grain-fed cattle. On the Omaha, Neb., market, for example, choice-grade steers are selling for more than $70 per 100 pounds, up from the low $50s a year ago.

Encouraged by these returns and low grain prices, producers are putting more cattle into feedlots.

On Monday, the USDA reported that the number of cattle being fed for the slaughter market as of June 1 in the seven major beef states totaled 7.52 million head, up 6 percent from a year ago and 1 percent more than inventories of two years ago. The states produce about three-fourths of the nation's beef.

The placement of new cattle and calves in fattening pens last month was reported at 1.95 million head, up 11 percent from a year ago and 17 percent from two years ago. Officials said the May placements were the most for the month since 1978.

Marketings of fed cattle in May totaled 1.52 million head, down 7 percent from a year ago and 5 percent below two years ago.

CONSERVATION TILLAGE CONFERENCE

Conservation tillage and how it fits into a farming operation will be the focus of the regional conference hosted by Texas A&M University July 1-2.

"Conservation Tillage: Today and Tomorrow" will be the theme of the Southern Regional No-Till Conference at the College Station Hilton Hotel and Conference Center. The Extension Service, along with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and various soil and water concervation agencies and organizations are cooperating in hosting the conference.

The conference is aimed at promoting conservation tillage practices through an exchange of the latest technology and information related to this method of tillage.

Addressing theme sessions will be Dr. Neville P. Clarke, experiment station director and interim Deputy Chancellor for agriculture at Texas A&M, and Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, Extension Service director The first theme session will focus on implementing conservation tillage systems in Texas. Staff with state and U.S. Department of Agriculture agencies will provide an overview of conservation tillage, fertility requirements, water management, the economics involved and tillage practices on highly erodible soil. Several farmers will be on hand to tell about their experiences with conservation tillage in a subhumid climate and in a semi-arid climate.

Another session will be devoted to advances in conservation tillage farming systems. Discussions will deal with maintaining soil productivity, planter requirements for soils with surface residues, irrigation, weed management, tillage effects on microbiological release of soil organic nitrogen, and effects of crop residues on pests, soil water and temperature.

The day-and-a-half program will also feature a session on research and findings and results of new technologies as applied to conservation tillage farming systems.

Producers, agribusiness representatives and individuals involved in research and education programs are invited to attend. Complete details are available at the Gray County Extension office.

VACINNATE HORSES FOR SLEEPING SICKNESS, TETANUS

Though sleeping sickness is no longer a major problem in the horse industry, it still exists and all equines should receive a protective vaccine each year.

Losing horses to sleeping sickness is unnecessary. Last year cases of the disease were reported in Florida, Georgia, South Carolina and Alabama, probably due to an unusually high mosquito population during the summer months.

Equine encephalitits (sleeping sickness) is carried naturally bay several species of birds. When mosquitoes bite an infected bird, the disease can then be transmitted by the mosquitoes to other

Early signs of the disease include fever, loss of appetite and depression. The animal is usually restless, may walk aimlessly in circles and be sensitive to sound and touch.

One common symptom is a horse that stands with his head hung low like he's sleeping. He doesn't fully chew hay or forage, and as the disease progresses, the tongue may actually hang out of the mouth.

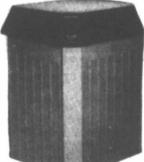

Once a horse is infected, treatment is generally unsuccessful. That's why proper immunization each year is so important.

The disease can also be transmitteed to humans and some other animals. The virus has been found in dogs, goats, pigs and domestic birds. All equines should be vaccinated each spring before mosquitoes become prevalent. This should give them the protection needed for another year.

Consult your veterinatian regarding available vaccines to combat sleeping sickness.

Q: My 4-yr. old shephard is really having trouble getting up and down due to "arthritis", according to our vet. He's been giving "cortisone" shots, but isn't there something else we could do?

A: Apparently your dog has a disease call "Hip Dysplasia". This is most common in shephards and St. Bernards, but is seen in many other breeds as well. You have several options: namely, "Banamine" granules or aspirin are very helpful in cases that are not too severe. Next, is, surgery, and here, we offer two options: there is a muscle which contributes to most of the pain called the Pectineus. When this is removed, the pain is alleviated in most of cases. However, if the arthritis is severe, more involved surgery is called for, i.e. occasionally the ball-and-socket of the hip must be either removed and a "false joint" formed, or the latest method is Total Hip Replacement. This seems to be very successful, although it is the most expensive method. Prior to having this done, a complete workup must be done and any parasites, dental work, etc. must be taken care of first. I would strongly recommend getting an insurance policy which covers pets before going much farther, to help get the best care for your pet and to help defray some of the costs which will be forthcoming. There are many companies which offer this type of insurance. Ask your veterinarian for details.

Austin man gains his independence in program to help disabled live alone

By JOE VARGO

Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP) - By his own admission, Russell Weatherford was full of bitterness and hatred after an attack 41/2 years ago that left his neck broken and his body confined to a wheelchair.

The 26-year-old Austin man is reminded every day that the assault has changed his life forever, but things are looking up. He has his own specially modified apartment, a job with a future and the responsibilities that come with managing his time, money and

For the next two years, Weatherford languished in several nursing homes, waiting for the day when he could get a place of his own and in a sense, get back on his feet.

The opportunity came in November 1985. That's when Weatherford heard of the state-supported Shared Attendant Program, funded by the Texas Department of Human Services and operated by the Austin Resource Center for Independent Living. An attendant is available around-the-clock to look in on Weatherford and the five other people in the program, all of whom are severely disabled. The attendant helps with dressing, cooking laundry and housekeeping.

Everything else is up to Weatherford. That includes paying rent, utilities, furnishing his apartment and making arrangements to get to and from work. Last year, he had to arrange trips to Austin Community College, where he studied radio, television and film. Writing remains difficult for Weatherford, but he said he has learned to adjust. "I can read my handwriting. I suppose that's what's

"We've always argued that handicapped people have every right to be as independent as possible. To go back to a nursing home would be a death sentence for him.

Weatherford's day begins around 6 a.m., when he readies himself for work. He began training earlier this month for a job as a financial planner and must take a specially equipped bus to northeast Austin every morning.

"Ever since he got a job his morale has been boosted tremendously," Ms. Crowther said. "Russell's had to overcome a lot of problems. It seems every time he was making progress, he'd get bedsores and be stuck in bed for another two months. But he's coming along now.

When he's not working, Weatherford says he enjoys entertaining friends, and going to barbecues on Lake Travis or Lake Austin. He was given a special wheelchair for racing, and participated on one race last year, finishing near the top. He may try his hand at other races in the future, he says. He is waiting for one of his therapists to rig up a fishing pole so he can cast a line from his wheelchair.

Although it took Briano 40 hours to hand make the pope's boots, he said a pair for California Gov. George Deukmejian presented the greatest challenge.

Texas citrus crop less than half 1983 level

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) - The amount of Texas land devoted to grapefruit and orange production remains at half the level it was before a devastating 1983 freeze, according to a new survey

Before the hard freeze hit the area in December 1983, there were about 69,000 total acres of citrus planted in the Rio Grande Valley, according to the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service. This year, there are 30,400 acres of citrus, primarily oranges and grapefruits, according to the service, a branch of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which performs the survey every two years.

The USDA's Agriculture Research Service, the Texas Department of Agriculture and Texas Valley Citrus Committee also cooperated in the survey. In 1985, there were 30,600 acres of citrus in the state's citrus region."The acreage that's there looks good," said Dennis Findley, state statistician for the TASS

This year's citrus acreage consists of 18,500 acres of grapefruit, 11,800 acres of orange, and 100 acres of assorted trees, including lemons, limes, tangeloes and tangerines, according to the survey. Texas' citrus industry is concentrated in Hidalgo, Cameron and Willacy counties.

Along with the stunted citrus groves, evidence of the hard freeze that hit the subtropical Valley can still be seen in the thousands of tall, withered palm trunks with no leaves.

The freeze reduced the state citrus industry's value by more than half the pre-1983 total of $100 million, said Ray Prewett, executive vice president of the Texas Citrus Mutual trade association.

But he said prices have since improved for citrus producers, and oranges and grapefruits are bringing more income per acre.

This year's total crop was 18 percent the size of the pre-freeze crop, Prewett said, but producers benefitted from an increased demand for fresh fruit, rather than juice.

"It's worth more in the fresh fruit market than it is for juice," Prewett said.

While farmers were paid about $5 per 40-pound carton before the freeze, he said a carton went for as much as $15 this year with the increased fresh-

"We approach being 50 percent recovered in terms of the total value of the fruit crop prior to the freeze," Prewett said.

About 5,000 of the 18,500 acres of grapefruit are the product of re-planting after the freeze, and remain too young to produce, according to the survey

Citrus is not considered productive if less than four years old.

Some 3,500 acres of orange trees are still too young to produce, the survey found.

Findley said 13,700 acres appear to have been left alone since the freeze.

It's citrus acreage pretty much standing out there abandoned," Findley said.

Other former citrus groves, he said, have been converted into other crops, as well as subdivisions and trailer parks.

The total number of trees is estimated at 3.8 million, including 2.3 million grapefruit and nearly 1.5 million orange trees.

Gardener opens gate to those who want flowers without fuss

Associated Press Writer

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Bashful men who have quarreled with their wives and small children clutching pennies are some of Betty Burns' favorite customers.

She opened her back-yard garden for business four years ago, allowing passers-by to come inside her white picket fence and wander among her 17 flower beds, cutting their own bouquets.

"I thought, 'I'll bet there are a lot of people who would like to have garden flowers as opposed to florist flowers," recalls Mrs. Burns, a retired Xray technician with a square jaw, short hair and boundless energy.

A florist flower, she explains, is one grown in a carefully controlled environment to preclude any flaws, while a garden flower "is grown willy-nilly and if it has a bug hole in it, well, that's all right.'

It's probably not the bug holes that draw folks to The Cutting Garden, a half-block expanse of shade trees and flower beds in various stages of bloom that spreads out behind Mrs. Burns'. Norman home.

More likely it is the opportunity to stroll through beds of larkspur, asters, coneflowers, tiger lilies, cosmos, snapdragons and zinnias, to name just a handful currently in bloom.

"Every season it's something different," Mrs. Burns says. Before opening for business, she perused seed catalogs, and ordered "everything anyone could conceivably want in a flower garden," she says.

Customers enter through an arched gateway in a white picket fence that borders the garden on its street side. At a wood gazebo, they can get pails and scissors to gather their bouquets, and it is there that purchases are totaled up, usually 25 cents a stem, and carefully wrapped in green flor-

Throughout the garden are several sturdy tables and chairs, where friends and neighbors sometimes gather for impromptu picnics A smaller bed located front and center by the gazebo is for children. 'What are children always told in a garden?'

Mrs. Burns asks. "Don't touch! It's a shame." So she installed a flower bed where children can not only touch, but pick the flowers, for a penny a

"I ask that it be a penny that they've earned not that someone's given them. If they spend it to buy a flower to give their mother, they're really giving something of themselves," she says.

'I've had nursery school classes come over here clutching their pennies," she says.

"Kids are the cutest" of her customers, she says but she also has quite a few young men selecting bouquets for their girlfriends, or husbands picking flowers to punctuate an apology to their wives after a fight.

"Many of my customers are fellows just wanting to get out of the dog house," she says. "A lot of times they'll say they don't know anything about flowers. I just tell them, 'All you have to know is if you like them," she says.

Mrs. Burns knows considerably more. When neighbors have questions like which plants to use as groundcover, or what herbs make a good border, they're likely to come to her, and they are just as likely to get more information than they bargained for.

Despite her knowledge, Mrs. Burns was a latebloomer herself when it comes to gardening. 'My husband liked to putter in the garden, but not me," she says. When she retired from hospital work following a heart attack, "my husband decided I needed a greenhouse to putter in," Mrs. Burns recalls.

Aid flowing to Saragosa from neighboring states

By The Associated Press

Aid for victims of a tornado that devastated Saragosa last month is flowing in from both ends of Northeast Louisiana residents have sent five 18wheelers loaded with food, clothing and furniture and are sending more this weekend. Meanwhile, the Roman Catholic Diocese of Las Cruces, N.M., has raised $25,000 for the West Texas community.

An air-conditioned mobile home which tentatively will be used as a community center in the stormravaged town is to be transported from Monroe. La., to Saragosa this weekend, said organizer Garland Shell.

Shell said the "Operation Our Turn" drive was prompted by aid that came from Pecos County, where Saragosa is located, during Monroe's devastating flood in 1982. "Now it's our turn to pay them back," he said.

Helicopters give cattle roundups a new twist

By HECTOR F. GARZA-TREJO The Brownsville Herald

BROWSVILLE (AP) - Modern-day technology is changing the way people do things - even cow-

While rounding up cattle is probably the most cowboyish thing cowboys do, the horse-riding, yeehaw-screaming, rope-swinging activity may be starting to vanish from the list of tests the macho, country boys must pass in order to get their real-cowboy status.

Like the horse-pulled fire carriages of yestery ear or the legendary tree-chopping character Paul Bunyan, cowboys and horses seem to be partially — and gradually — losing ground to modern tech-

Fire carriages lost their ground to faster fire engines. Paul Bunyan was eventually replaced by more wood-cutting devices. And cowboys and horses are beginning to be replaced by helicopters. That's right, helicopters.

"But the things (helicopters) make so much noise and blow so much wind that cows get scared and run away from them ... wherever they are," said Frank Pozas, the 29-year-old cowboy foreman who runs the Yturria Ranch, a vast piece of land located north of Raymondville on U.S. 77, which is owned by Frank Yturria of Brownsville. But the tasks involved in rounding up the cattle are basically the same whether it's done in the traditional cowboy fashion or by helicopter, Pozas

In both cases, the men doing the roundup have to find the cows, get them out of wherever they are, and herd them on to clear, open spaces where they can be led in masses somewhere else, he said. It's the method that varies. And that's where helicopters seem to have the advantage. Spotting cattle at a horse's eye level may be difficult in thick brush areas. And it is just about as difficult to ride a horse into the bushes to get the calves out, Pozas said. In helicopters, however, spotting the animals is easy from the air. And "the helicopters usually scare them so much that they (cows) come out of the bushes trying to get away," he said. Once the cattle are out in open spaces, the roundup practically continues by itself. The cows usually follow a leader and then they move all in the same direction most of the time, he said. "Helicopters make rounding up cattle easier, more efficient and cheaper," said Jim Tiller, who runs Tiller Helicopter Service in Alice, Texas, and does the roundups at Yturria Ranch. "It may take days for a group of cowboys to round up cattle on large ranches, but it only takes a few hours to do it by helicopter," he said. Two, three or more helicopters can join in the operation, making it possible to cover large extensions in a fraction of the time it takes cowboys on horseback to do, he said.

"Helicopters can cover areas of up to 1,000 acres in one hour," he said. "And that makes a difference when you are talking about 5,000 or more acres - like the Yturria ranch.' Pozas said that the time cowboys spend in the roundup may increase depending on the area.

'If there are a lot of brush areas it is going to take longer," he said.

But the nature of the area does not seem to make much difference for the helicopters, he said.

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) -Cosmopolitan readers may do a double-take when they see the July issue this week with singer Madonna on the magazine's cover, cast from England at which usually features models with little fame.

"Madonna just seemed to have many of the Cosmopolitan girl qualities,'' said editor Helen Gurley Brown.

"There's really no statement being made and we don't have any juicy details about her personal life," advertising director Seth Hoyt delays. said Thursday. "I think Helen just felt like doing

Since 1969, Elizabeth Taylor and Brooke Shields have graced Cosmo's cover, Hoyt said.

The National Pork Producers Council has named the coach of the National Football League's Chicago Bears its Pork Restaurateur of the Year. The council will present the award at his restaurant, Ditka's, on June 29.

"He has established the pork chop as the premier item on his restaurant's menu," said Tom Miller, council president.

The Chicago eatery's menu features Ditka's Chops, a meal big enough for a linebacker. It consists of three 8ounce chops, 2 inches thick

WACO (AP) — Contrary to what most people believe, Waco has an

Not only that, it's one of the state's oldest fields. It was first discovered in 1902, a year after the gusher at Spindletop, but most Texans are more familiar with its more famous East Texas counterpart.

But oil there is, though not in the quantities pumped in famous fields. This is a field of "stripper" wells, which produce only a small amount of oil annually

But some believe that the small field is a sign of a much larger oil field in the McLennan County area - one that no one knows about. The South Bosque Oil Field is located off U.S. Highway 84 and stretches northward to Texas Highway 6 near the Speegleville Store and Bait House in a strip about 1,000 feet wide.

Oil had been encountered in water wells in the area for a number of years before the discovery well was drilled. The field never has been a major producer, but it has spurred a lot of interest throughout the years. According to a report in 1949, 123 oil wells had been completed in the field. About 60 were producing in 1933. but that figure dwindled to as few as two in 1949. Many of the oil wells were abandoned because it was not economically feasible to operate them because of the small amount of oil they pro-

Eager fishermen stay right behind trout stockers' truck

NEW CREEK, W.Va. (AP) - "Real" anglers shun fishermen who follow stocking trucks and stand elbow-to-elbow trying to catch stunned trout just dumped in the water, state fishery workers

"I've seen real trout fishermen leave when we come by with the stocking truck," says Rick Baccus, superintendent of the state trout hatchery in Petersburg. "They don't want to be around when the truck followers come. They say, 'Who wants to fish with these what-cha-ma-call-ems around

"Real" trout fishermen wait a day, or even three, from the stocking date before fishing the stream, the fishery workers say. The elite even avoid freshly stocked streams, preferring to hike into the woods in search of secluded pools.

Truck followers, as a breed, tailgate the stocking truck, marking where fish are released and even trying to snag them as soon as they hit the water. Sometimes, in their haste, they hook the stocker

They have no shame, says Bob Livingston, who makes daily runs from the Petersburg hatchery, depositing trout in counties from the eastern panhandle westward to Parkersburg.

At the same intervals, fishermen hopped out, poles baited for a hasty bout of trout angling before jumping in the car again to pursue the truck to its

Most of the state's trout stockers simply dump their fish at a few spots, and the truck followers there are a greater problem, the two Department of Natural Resources employees say. "I've seen them hanging onto trees with one arm while fishing with the other when the bank is too steep to hold them all," Livingston says. Granted, the trout are bred to be caught. "This is a put-and-take program," Baccus says

"We put them in, you take them out. They're not Even so, Baccus and Livingston would like to see the fish get a fighting chance.
