Syrian commander vows to free U.S. hostage

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria's military intelligence chief in Lebanon was quoted today as vowing to free kidnapped American journalist Charles Glass and the son of Lebanon's defense minister "at all costs."

"I am here in Beirut to free them," Brig. Gen. Ghazi Kanaan was quoted as saying by the state-run Beirut Radio. "The problem will be resolved at all costs and I believe that will be accomplished soon."

But the Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio said that the kidnapers were demanding a guarantee that West Germany would not extradite Mohammed Ali Hamadi to the United States. Hamadi, a Lebanese, is accused of hijacking a TWA jet to Beirut in 1985 and killing a U.S. Navy diver.

The broadcast said the Hamadi guarantee was the kidnapers' main condition. But Lebanese police and sources close to the Syrian command in west Beirut denied that such a demand had been made.

Hamadi, who was arrested at the Frankfurt airport on Jan. 13, is wanted in the United States on charges of murder and air piracy.

West Germany has not announced its decision on the extradition, but the newspaper Die Welt of Bonn quoted unidentified sources today as saying the government had decided not to grant the U.S. extradition request.

Two West Germans were kidnapped in Beirut in January by Moslems who have demanded Hamadi's freedom.

Kanaan was quoted today as saying Syrian President Hafez Assad was "particularly concerned" about the abduction of Glass, Ali Osseiran and their driver in a south Beirut Shiite Moslem district Wednesday.

Brig. Gen. Saeed Bairakdar, commander-in-chief of Syria's 25,000 troops in northern and eastern Lebanon, and Maj. Gen. Izzat Zeidan, commander of the 7,500-strong Syrian army contingent in Moslem west Beirut, attended the meeting.

Fourteen kidnapers grabbed Glass, 36, Ali Osseiran, 40, and his driver Suleiman Salman, a policeman who doubles as a bodyguard, on a coastal highway in the Shiite suburb of Ouzai, a Hezbollah stronghold in a southern sector of west Beirut.

Thunderstorms pound Pampa and state during the weekend

From Staff and Wire Reports

The normally dry Texas Panhandle summer still hasn't had a chance to take hold as thunderstorms continued to sweep across the area over the weekend.

Two storms packed with wind, lightning and rain pounded Pampa early Sunday morning and late Sunday night, adding nearly two more inches of moisture to a ground already used to being soaked in the past few months.

Sunday's early storm, arriving around 5:30 a.m., brought a brilliant lightning display awakening many residents from their sleep with crashing and rolling thunder. A brief but heavy rainfall added 0.80 inch of moisture, with a touch of fog after the sun rose.

Then late Sunday night another thunderstorm system swept in from Hutchinson County and other eastern areas, again accompanied by lightning, wind, rain and some pea-sized hail around midnight. That storm dumped 1.15 inches, making a total of 1.95 inches in less than 24 hours.

Local meteorologist Darrell Sehorn said the area was not under any severe thunderstorm watch during the period. He forecast a slight chance for evening thunderstorms today, with the low reaching into the low 90s.

Tuesday's forecast calls for fair and hot weather with a high in the mid-90s. Sunday's high was 87, with an overnight low this morning of 62.

Elsewhere in the state, winds gusted to 116 mph early today when a severe thunderstorm roared through an area near the town of Quemado in northwest Maverick County in South Texas, the National Weather Service said.

There were no reports of injuries or significant damage.

Another severe thunderstorm spawned a tornado funnel cloud near Clarendon in the southeast Texas Panhandle, the NWS reported. That storm also triggered marble size hail between Amarillo and the Oklahoma border, primarily in Hemphill and Wheeler counties.

Forecasts called for scattered showers and thunderstorms to spread over most of the state east of the mountains through Tuesday. Otherwise, skies will be mostly fair in extreme West Texas and partly to mostly cloudy through tomorrow.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s although some readings in the mountains of Southwest Texas may dip into the mid 50s.

Highs Tuesday will be mostly in the 90s except in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas where readings will be slightly above the 100-degree mark.

Showers and thunderstorms were reported early today over the Rio Grande plains between Laredo and Del Rio and were spreading northward into the Hill Country near Junction.

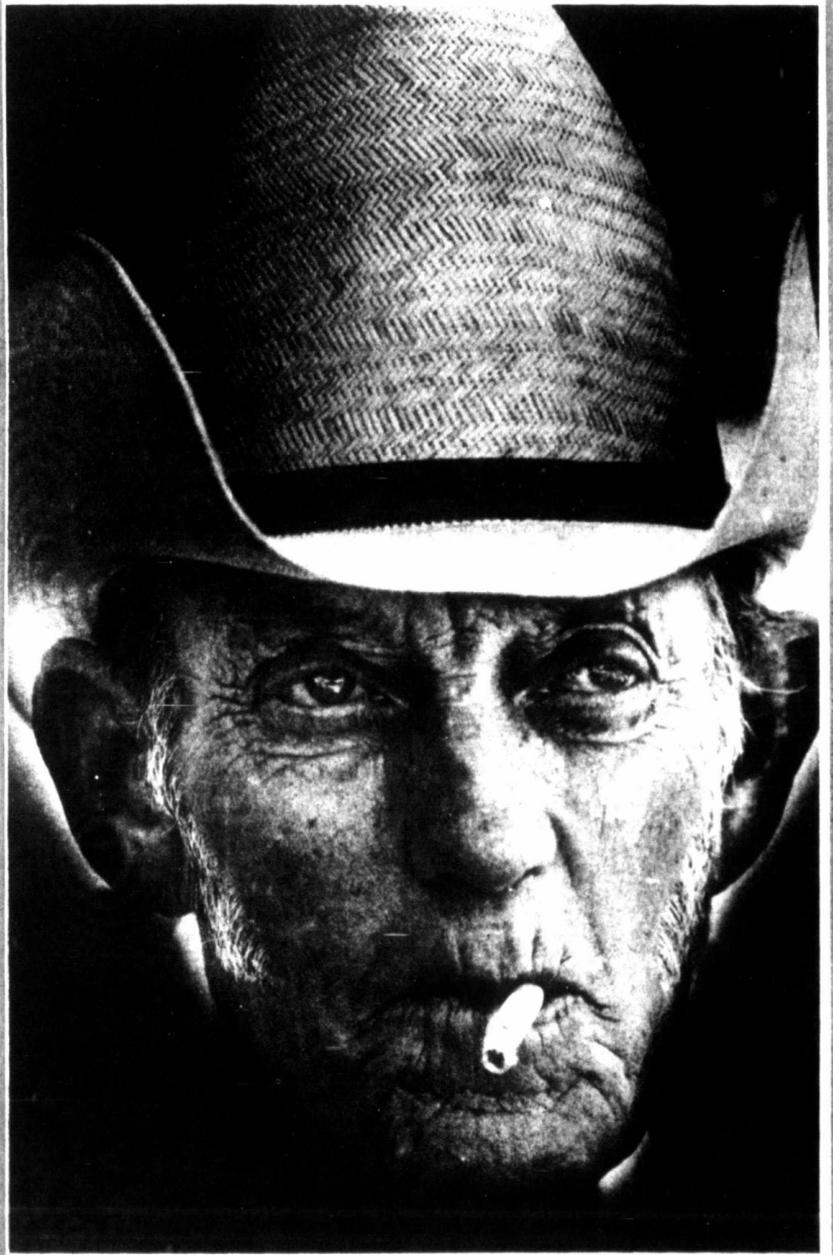

Other widely scattered showers were reported over the Permian Basin and South Plains.

The thunderstorm activity reported earlier this morning in the Panhandle moved eastward into Oklahoma before dawn and the activity in South Texas decreased in intensity as it moved to the east.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 60s and 70s, ranging from the 50s in higher elevations of Southwest Texas to the 80s along the coast. Extremes ranged from 57 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 83 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 63 at Amarillo, 74 at Wichita Falls, 77 at Fort Worth, 78 at Waco, 76 at San Antonio and Houston, 77 at Brownsville, 66 at San Angelo, 64 at Lubbock, 65 at Midland and 66 at El Paso.

Commission sets final action on city telephone service tax

The City Commission will consider on second and final reading Tuesday an ordinance permitting some telecommunications services to be taxed under city sales tax provisions.

With only three commissioners present at the June 9 meeting, the ordinance was passed on its first reading by a 2-1 vote.

Supporters indicate the inclusion of telephone and related services under the 1 percent sales tax will add approximately $21,400 to city coffers to help make up some of the falling sales tax revenues. The tax would amount to only about 10 cents a month for most customers.

Its detractors complain that the ordinance only adds an additional tax burden to city residents.

In other matters at the 6 p.m. meeting in the City Commission Room, the commission will consider acceptance of a release of a lease agreement with Rural-Metro Corporation concerning Memorial Park.

Rural-Metro had previously obtained a lease from the city for use of the old Pump Station No. 1 building for its local paramedic-ambulance service. But the company offered to give up the lease for a museum being proposed by the Pampa Army Air Field Reunion Association.

The reunion group has proposed turning the building into an aviation museum dedicated to the former World War II air training field located east of the city. The group also has indicated it would like to place a B-25 airplane on the park site, along with a memorial to Gray County war dead being proposed by veteran John Tripplehorn and the local Veterans of Foreign Wars post.

In other business Tuesday, commissioners will consider:

- approval on first reading of an ordinance relative to amending personnel policies and procedures to include driving record criteria for city employees;
- authorization for an indemnification agreement with Creco Inc. for use of city property for a "swap meet" as part of the local Fourth of July Celebration;
- authorization for waiving of penalties and interest on property located in the Overton Heights Addition;
- appointments to the Lovett Memorial Library Board and the Main Street Advisory Board;
- ratification of the contract with the Gray County Appraisal District; and
- approval of accounts payable.

The commission also has scheduled an executive session to discuss the purchase of groundwater rights.

Northeast-Midwest senators poised to fight oil import fee

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of Northeast and Midwest senators are poised to try to block a possible new oil import fee they say would benefit oil-producing regions at the expense of such states as Pennsylvania and Ohio.

The Senate is expected to consider the oil provision this week as part of a trade bill. The provision would empower the president to take corrective action as he deems necessary if oil imports are projected to rise to 50 percent of U.S. consumption within three years.

One of the instruments at his disposal would be an import fee designed to curb the nation's appetite for foreign oil.

The size of the fee would vary according to the degree to which imports needed to be reduced. For example, it has been estimated that a $5 per barrel fee would be needed to reduce imports from 55 percent to 50 percent of U.S. consumption.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is pushing the bill. A plunge in oil prices caused by a stepup in production by Saudi Arabia last year hammered the Texas economy and prompted calls from domestic producers for a fee on imports.

The prospect of an oil import fee sent Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., and other Northeast and Midwest lawmakers scrambling last week to come up with a way to defeat the idea. Their strategy hinges largely on figures suggesting that an import levy would directly benefit a small minority of states.

"You'll notice that producers' windfall would exceed consumers' burden in just 10 states," said a letter distributed around the Senate by Heinz and Sen.

Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

"Five of the states — Alaska, Texas, Louisiana, Wyoming and Oklahoma — would account for 93 percent of the windfall," the letter said. It said the other states that would gain are Kansas, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota and Utah.

Bentsen said last week that the measure was needed because the danger of a cutoff of Mideast oil made it critical to encourage exploration for domestic oil supplies.

But Heinz and Moynihan said the fee would drive up consumer costs and take a special toll on the Northeast and Midwest, which produce only 2.6 percent of the nation's crude oil but account for nearly 40 percent of its gasoline consumption.

Imports represented as much as 46 percent of American oil consumed in 1977. The figure steadily dropped, and stood at 30 percent in 1984 before climbing back up above 32 percent last year, according to figures supplied by Heinz's and Moynihan's staff.

Among other senators opposing the fee are Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y.

South Korean leader agrees to talk with opposition leaders

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — In a major turnaround, President Chun Doo-hwan has agreed to meet with the political opposition to try to end fierce anti-government protests, a top official said today.

The official said the president also promised to consider the release of political detainees.
 Roh Tae-woo, chairman of the governing Democratic Justice Party, said after a meeting with Chun that the president had agreed to meet with Kim Young-sam, head of the Reunification Democratic Party.

"I recommended it is desirable that the president meet political elders and opposition leaders to work out settlements," Roh told reporters.
 Kim said he would meet with Chun if all those detained since the nationwide protests began earlier this month are released. He also demanded freedom for fellow opposition leader Kim Dae-jung, who remains under house arrest in Seoul.

Thousands of students clashed with riot police today near college campuses in Seoul in the 13th day of large-scale protests.
 Students hurled firebombs and rocks at police in vicious street battles around at least four major Seoul colleges. Police fired volley after volley of tear gas.

 About 2,500 students clashed with police in the central city of Chonju and stormed a police station. Hundreds of students clashed with police in the streets of the southern city of Kwangju and about 1,000 students briefly seized part of a highway on Cheju Island off the south coast.

In recent days, the opposition has demanded direct talks between Kim and Chun as a precondition to negotiations on calling off the protests that began after the Democratic Justice Party nominated Roh as its presidential candidate.
 The opposition began a drive to force direct elections.

Roh said nothing today about the key opposition demand that the government repeal its April 13 decision to suspend talks on political reform until after the 1988 Seoul Olympics. Chun contends the delay is necessary to safeguard national stability and the games. He has said elections later this year will be held under the electoral college system, which opponents charge favors the government party.

Fred Astaire, 88, dies of pneumonia

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred Astaire, whose debonair elegance and flowing, graceful style made him the most acclaimed dancer in movie history, died today of pneumonia. He was 88.

He died at Century City Hospital, said spokesman Stan Otake.

"I never thought a funny-looking guy like me would be suitable for pictures," Astaire once said, and a studio executive once dismissed him with the curt words: "Can't act ... can't sing ... balding ... can dance a little." His only Oscar, in 1949, was honorary.

But he enchanted movie-goers for generations, dancing with firecrackers, coat racks and beautiful women from Ginger Rogers to Cyd Charisse with an ease that made ballet stars envious.
 Ballet choreographer George Balanchine called him "the greatest dancer in the world." Ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov praised his "perfection," and songwriter Irving Berlin said, "I'd rather have Fred Astaire sing my songs than anyone else."

For his part, the lean hooper from the Midwest who was famous for white tie and tails but hated formal attire was likely to credit producers or his sister — his first dancing partner — with his success.

"I'm not trying to be modest, but I never thought about myself as No. 1," he told The New York Times when he turned 80. "I'm cold-blooded about dancing. I wanted to make it good, then make it better."

"I never cared for my singing voice," he said, and he added that there was no secret to his style — "Just practice, sweat, rehearsal and worry."

Audit, financial report explained

To alleviate confusion concerning the difference between an audit and a comprehensive annual financial report, I am taking this opportunity to explain a little about the two.

A comprehensive annual financial report is just an enhanced audit. It contains all of the audit plus footnotes, a management letter and all of the city's statistical information. All this information is required for bond ratings.

We now have this one document to present to the rating companies instead of several. This is one of the reasons that we were rated higher on our last rating.
 Also, a comprehensive annual financial report is presented in the same format as our budget, which makes it easier to follow.

There is an open position to be filled on the Traffic Commission. This position will be filled sometime in August, with the names of potential appointees brought before the City Commission in July.
 Interested persons may send a letter of interest to either Police Chief Robert Eberz or myself at P.O. Box 2499, Pampa, Texas 79066-2499.

1987 marks the city of Pampa's 75th year of incorporation. We'll be celebrating the event during our Fourth of July Celebration. Pampa and its surrounding area was settled before the year 1912, but records show that official government recognition of our city by the name "Pampa" took place in 1912. This may clear up any questions some may have as other area communities are celebrating their centennials.

Our Fourth of July Celebration starts Friday, July 3, at 2 p.m. with the talent search in M.K. Brown Auditorium. To end the day, three local bands will be playing from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. for a free dance in the parking lot.

Saturday starts up with a great big outdoor chuckwagon breakfast at 6:30 a.m. and a parade beginning at 8 a.m. Continuation of the talent search inside the auditorium begins at 9 a.m. and runs throughout the day.

Other enjoyable events and activities, all of which begin at 10 a.m. and fold at 6 p.m., are food and game booths, a swap meet, a Classic Antique Car Show, an Ole Time Medicine Show and a band contest for local and area bands. The band contest has a $1,200 pot of cash prizes.
 The talent search contest wraps up the day at 7 p.m., with more than $13,000 in cash prizes to be awarded to the winners.

Police seek motorcyclist who injured boy Sunday

Police continued to search this morning for the owner of a black motorcycle that sent a Pampa youngster to the hospital Sunday night.

A 9-year-old boy, who lives on South Barnes, was listed in good condition with arm injuries at HCA Coronado Hospital this morning after he was knocked off his bicycle by the speeding motorcycle in the 500 block of South Barnes, shortly after 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

Witnesses told police the motorcycle, ridden by two white males, continued south on Barnes after the accident, just north of Baker Elementary School.

"They were going pretty fast," one witness said of the motorcycle riders. "They didn't even stop."
 The witness said she was coming home from work and was following the motorcycle.
 Little damage could be found on the bicycle, but the bloodied youngster was lying in the street in shock when police arrived.

Officer Kenneth Hopson said both motorcycle riders were wearing blue jeans. He said one had long hair and one was wearing a denim jacket shirt cut off at the sleeves.

Special legislative budget session starts

AUSTIN (AP) — As the Legislature's special session on the state budget crisis approached, lawmakers sought to find out what their options are.

"Darn few," said Rep. Al Luna, D-Houston, a member of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee.

Luna, appearing on a television panel prior to the start of the 30-day special session, said legislators can cut spending, broaden the sales tax base or enact a corporate or personal income tax.

Various spending proposals surfaced in the 140-day regular session that ended June 1, along with suggestions for taxes to cover increased costs, but the Legislature never got close to an agreement on an 1988-89 budget.

It was the first time since 1961 that legislators had failed to pass a spending plan in regular session.

Gov. Bill Clements called lawmakers back for a quickie special session on civil judicial reform, then scheduled work on state finances to start today.

In calling today's session, Clements added several other subjects to the legislative agenda, including constitutional bans on personal or corporate income taxes.

Luna's fellow panelists on "Texas Politics" — Bill Alloway of the Texas Association of Taxpayers and John Kennedy of the Texas Research League — agreed that the Legislature would enact a corporate tax before a personal income tax.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock projects that state spending in 1988-89 will run about $5.5 billion higher than expected state income. Add to that a $1 billion deficit left from the current budget year, and lawmakers face a deficit of $6.5 billion.

Since the Legislature adjourned three weeks ago, "Very little has changed except that now our circumstances are even more urgent," says Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

Hobby noted in a mid-June budget briefing that there has been no spectacular comeback in Texas' petroleum industry, new markets have not suddenly opened up for agriculture and the Mexican peso is still unstable.

"Our state revenue outlook has not turned up roses," he said.

Hobby and the Senate offered a $39.3 billion budget. Lewis and the House recommended a $38.4 billion plan. Clements has indicated support for a budget totaling $38.1 billion.

Clements, who has vowed to veto any tax increase over $2.9 billion, said he would accept budget increases "only for selected priority programs."

"We must be vehement in our commitment against tax-and-spend philosophies," he said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis observed, "We're going to have a tax bill. Let's be realistic about it."

One of the more recent proposals to help balance the budget would divert taxes from highways and use bond sales to finance road building, which would free up $3 billion in tax money.

"It's possible," Clements said.

State highway commissioner Bob Lanier said, however, such a proposal would "wreck the highway system."

Clements said, "When the family budget is being sliced and chopped to fit the economic times, taxpayers insist on nothing less than the same from state government."

"Whatever happens this summer has got to be quick and dirty," Hobby said after a budget meeting with Clements. "It's got to be something that can be easily explained, be easily administered."

Jim Gideon, guitarist for the band Catfish Charley, warms up backstage for his appearance Saturday at the first Farm Aid concert in Wichita Falls.

Farm Aid attendance turns out to be skimpy

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — When members of the band Catfish Charley showed up to perform at a concert to help farmers, musicians outnumbered the crowd.

Even when the $5 Farm Aid concert tickets started going for free and evening took the edge off Saturday's heat, the audience grew from only four members to about two dozen.

Sponsors had barbecue enough to feed 500 and a half-acre of chairs on hand for the daylong event. But the crowds failed to materialize, prompting jokes from band members who warned non-existent fans on the dance floor to calm down.

"I think when we got here, the musicians outnumbered the crowd," said Jim Gideon, guitarist for Catfish Charley.

One band at the concert ended its performance with the lead singer offering mock thanks to the empty folding chairs for being such a wonderful audience.

"This is a learning experience," said Jim Russell, disc jockey for KLUR, a Farm Aid co-sponsor. He said part of the problem was that residents didn't know some of the out-of-town performers.

At 4 p.m., Russell said sponsors had decided to waive the admission fee for anyone who showed up before supertime. But by then, only two dozen or so had shown up as a band belted out renditions of mainstream country tunes.

Members of the Red River Renegades band, outfitted in their Old West gear, killed time near the parking lot by throwing tomahawks and knives at a tree-stump cross section.

"We figure if we only had about 490 more people here, we'd have an even 500," one buckskin-clad man said.

Railey: 'Didn't do anything to my wife'

DALLAS (AP) — In his first extended interview since an attack that left his wife in a coma, the Rev. Walker Railey said he did nothing to hurt her and wished police would find the culprit.

Railey also said he received several death threats after being admitted to a psychiatric hospital, which he left on Saturday.

"I didn't do anything to my wife. I didn't plan for anybody to do anything to my wife, and I have no knowledge of who did anything to my wife," Railey said Saturday.

"I still believe there's somebody out there," he said. "I don't know the motive of all this."

At one point during the interview session, tears welled in his eyes when he pointed to the garage, where he found his wife's body crumpled on the floor early April 22. Later, he joked about getting a haircut after friends who had seen him on television news broadcasts suggested that his hair was getting a little long.

Railey was senior minister of the downtown First United Methodist Church of Dallas. He was granted a leave of absence after his wife was attacked and he tried to commit suicide. The church has since said it will search for a new senior pastor, a decision Railey said he supports.

Earlier this year, Railey, 39, said he and his family were targets of threatening letters linked to his stance against racial injustice. In the pulpit Easter Sunday, Railey wore a bulletproof vest and his family was given police protection.

Police said the letters were written on a typewriter in Railey's church.

"I didn't write those letters to myself. I've never been accused of being overly smart, but I'm not totally dumb. I wouldn't write letters to myself on a typewriter in my own church if I did it," he said.

PTA's national convention begins in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — About 1,400 delegates are attending the Parent-Teacher Association's national convention, which continues through Tuesday at the Hyatt Regency Dallas.

"We have made giant steps over the past two years," said PTA president Ann Kahn, citing the PTA's increased membership and budget.

"It's amazing that this has occurred at a time when volunteers are supposed to be decreasing and 50 percent of women are in the work force," she said in a welcoming speech this weekend.

Activities at the 91st National PTA Convention will include workshops on subjects ranging from the influence of television on children to teen suicide. Delegates will also elect new officers and present awards to outstanding school systems.

The new PTA president, Manya Ungar, is to be installed Tuesday.

Mike Singletary, middle linebacker for the Chicago Bears and spokesman for the National PTA's Drug and Alcohol Abuse Program, will give a workshop today on drug abuse.

Figure skater Peggy Fleming was to be introduced today as the National PTA's honorary membership chairman, officials said.

More parents became involved in PTA because they realize the importance of public school education, said Ms. Kahn.

"This country absolutely must depend on the effectiveness of public schools because those children are going to be the workers and leaders of the future," she said.

Linus Wright, Dallas school superintendent, said he requires all schools in his district to have PTA chapters.

"I don't know of a group that's more important to our students and our society than the National Congress of PTA," he told the group Saturday.

"I've always supported the involvement of parents in the educational process," he said. "Teachers can't do it alone, you can't do it alone but together, we can make our society the greatest in the world," said Wright.

Testimony to begin in capital murder case

BELTON (AP) — Five times the murder trial of Jerry "Animal" McFadden was delayed.

Three times delays were granted at the request of defense attorneys. The fourth delay came after Upshur County officials said they couldn't afford the trial, expected to cost $250,000.

And last week, the trial was postponed after a juror was injured by a rooster.

Finally, testimony was scheduled to begin today before state District Judge F.L. Garrison in the trial, moved to Belton on a change of venue from Upshur County.

McFadden, 39, is charged with the death of Suzanne Harrison, 18, of Hawkins.

Gena Turner, 20, and Bryan Boone, 19, accompanied Miss Harrison to Lake Hawkins on May 4, 1986 for a summer swim. All three were reported missing that night by relatives, who found only Boone's truck at the lake after the three didn't return home by midnight.

Miss Harrison's partially nude body was found the next day atop Barnwell Mountain in neighboring Upshur County. After a 10-day search, the decomposed bodies of Boone and Miss Turner were found in a roadside ditch near Barnwell Mountain.

McFadden is suspected in those two deaths but has not been indicted.

Court-appointed defense attorney Vernard Solomon of Marshall said McFadden was a victim of circumstance, and his client's criminal past made him a perfect target for Upshur County authorities.

In 1972, McFadden pleaded guilty to the rape of a 14-year-old girl in Denton.

A year later, he pleaded guilty to the rape of a junior high school teacher in Haskell.

Then in 1978, he pleaded guilty to taking a Hamlin secretary hostage and raping her. He received 15 years.

McFadden was paroled from a Texas prison July 17, 1985, after serving five years of a 15-year sentence for aggravated sexual abuse.

He was arrested again and charged in connection with the theft of two beers from a couple at Lake Hawkins. The incident occurred the same day the three youths were reported missing from the area.

Heightened concern is voiced about border residents' health

EL PASO (AP) — Dr. Asencion Mena worries that polio, whooping cough and other diseases once conquered through immunizations will again trouble people living along the U.S.-Mexico border.

"We're too fragmented in the county," said Mena, medical director of the La Fe Clinic in El Paso. "Patient dumping from hospitals still exists."

Mena, whose clinic saw 55,000 low-income patients last year, was one of several health officials attending a three-day conference over the weekend on border health issues.

Although some attending the conference said the federal government is growing more concerned about the health of those living along the border, others questioned the government's sincerity.

They said the government is pledging to help solve problems on one hand while cutting back programs.

"There is an awareness that more needs to be done," said Herbert Ortega of the Pan American Health Organization in El Paso.

Clements' payments silence could hurt his credibility

AUSTIN (AP) — Revelations that Gov. Bill Clements' knew, but kept silent about Southern Methodist University football players receiving under-the-table payments could hurt his credibility on some fronts, but should have no real side affects in other areas, political observers say.

"Those men who conspired to protect the governor did the public and the voters of Texas a great disservice," said Bob Slagle, the state Democratic chairman.

"His credibility will be suspect through the remainder of his administration. Being a liar is like being a little pregnant — you either are a liar or you aren't," Slagle said.

One Republican lawmaker said the disclosure by an SMU bishops' committee report last week may dampen Clements' efforts to remove two Texas Supreme Court justices recently chastised for judicial impropriety.

"When you have a mark against you, you can't point a finger at someone else," said Rep. Terral Smith of Austin.

But Smith was among those who didn't think the scandal would affect upcoming state budget debate.

A 48-page report issued Friday said Clements, as chairman of the SMU Board of Governors, knew improper payments were being made to football players and allowed them to continue even though the school already was on probation for similar violations.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, said Clements' action "does bring into question a very serious question of moral ethics. But the voters would have to decide that, should he choose to run again."

But a political consultant and veteran observer of Texas politics said the issue may be moot. "It's very difficult to do political damage to an incumbent who's not running again," said George Christian of Austin.

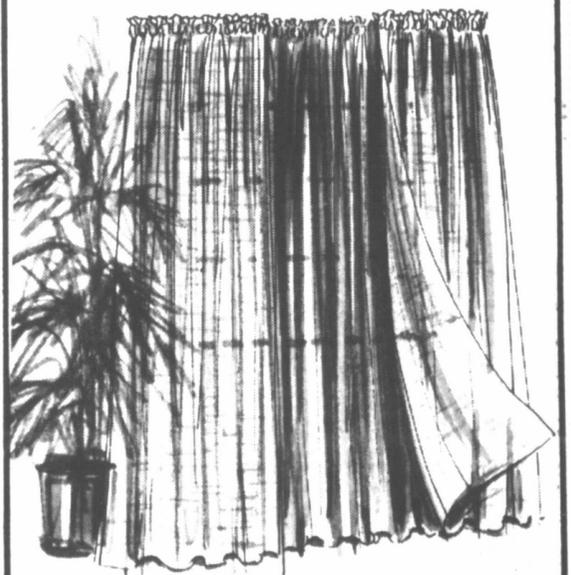

Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, said "it is only appropriate that the attorney general read the report and see if any state law was violated."

"I think any credibility he had is gone," Cavazos said.

Clements, before and after the election, denied knowledge of payoffs at SMU, but in March admitted he decided to gradually "phase out" the payments.

A panel of four United Methodist bishops conducted a three-month investigation into the scandal. The bishops said Clements and several other members of the board of governors participated in an elaborate scheme to keep Clements' involvement a secret.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Paying dictatorships spurs hate for U.S.

When President Reagan came to power, a few naive conservatives thought his administration might start reducing foreign aid. Not only is foreign aid generally harmful to the poorer people in recipient countries, because it goes to the governments that have strangled, but it has little if any domestic political constituency. Most administrations have had to fight for foreign aid against a skeptical public and a sporadically skeptical Congress.

Any illusions conservatives may have had about the Reaganites were quickly dispelled by the steadily increasing amounts of foreign aid requested by the administration. And events of recent weeks indicate that the administration is committed to the discredited policy of trying to influence and "moderate" avowedly Marxist governments with buckets full of taxpayers' money. The latest example involves southern Africa.

Sen. Larry Pressler, a South Dakota Republican not considered especially conservative, has proposed an amendment that would cut off aid to southern African states that have refused to renounce terrorism or condemn the practice of "necklacing" — placing gasoline-doused auto tires around the necks of political opponents and setting them on fire. Necklacing is most often used by black radicals in South Africa against other blacks deemed to be government informers and has been widely condemned by firm foes of apartheid who believe correctly that such brutal practices discredit an otherwise worthy cause.

The Reagan administration is lobbying Congress against Pressler's effort. "This would completely undermine our whole policy in southern Africa," said one official who — natch — asked not to be identified. The administration is also determined to keep foreign aid flowing to Mozambique, an avowedly Marxist country experiencing an indigenous rebellion similar to the UNITA insurgency the administration is backing in Angola, and courting enough money from any Western country naive enough to supply it.

Any policy that depends on sending money to avowedly Marxist countries, or those that hesitate to issue even a pro forma condemnation of terrorism, is utterly bankrupt and deserves to be undermined. The United States should not be supporting rebel forces in southern Africa — but neither should it be using the taxpayers' money to subsidize the central governments in one-party states that routinely oppress their people and have announced their hostility to Western values of individualism and democracy.

A long-term trend may be discernible in the countries of the so-called Third World — not only of opposition to one-party dictatorships, but of skepticism about the poverty induced by centrally planned economies. Sending foreign aid to countries that persist in anti-democratic and anti-freedom practices puts the United States in opposition to the ordinary people in those countries and on the wrong side of history. Cutting back aid to such regimes would not only be popular at home, but constructive abroad.

Why is this administration doing the opposite?

Lake Wobegon gets drained

It was a cold, dark Saturday evening, and when I walked into the kitchen I found my wife listening to the radio. A man with a deep voice was recommending to listeners a product called Minnesota Language Systems, which promised to teach the Upper Midwest how to use such versatile phrases as "yah, but..." and "It's different," so they could pass as natives.

I had the same reaction that millions of other Americans have had upon being confronted by this particular radio program. Looking at my wife with puzzlement, I asked, "What on earth is that?"

That, of course, was Garrison Keillor, self-proclaimed as "America's tallest radio humorist," performing on the live, weekly public radio broadcast "A Prairie Home Companion." Fortunately, my first reaction was not my ultimate one. Before long, I was an evangelist for Keillor, urging his show and books on friends and relatives without provocation.

Now they have the same grievance against me that I have against my wife. Thanks to her, I have been seduced only to be abandoned. After 13 years, the final broadcast of "A Prairie Home Companion" aired last weekend.

It's departure leaves a gap not only in the Saturday schedules of its listeners, but in their hearts. Losing our weekly report from Lake Wobegon, "the little town that time forgot and decades cannot improve," is a little like moving away from a place where you've lived some important parts of your life and enjoyed a lot of happy moments.

Much of it will stay with us. There were the recurring jokes, like Ralph's Pretty Good Grocery, whose slogan assures customers that "If you can't find it at Ralph's, you can probably get along without it." There were the musical interludes, with folk songs and sturdy hymns and guitar instrumentals. And there was the quiet, whimsical monologue by Keillor, which always managed to make the world seem a little more inviting than usual.

The final show, like those that went before, was homespun, unassuming and gently humorous. The host's humor was directed as much at himself as at the quirky mythical place where he claims to have grown up. "I've never believed in doing brave and cheerful farewells," Keillor admitted at the outset. "When I go, I want to hear weeping and howling. I want people to throw their arms around my ankles and beg me to stay."

By the end, after the usual songs, messages from listeners and commercials, Keillor was once again summoning up his imaginary town's cafe, where a woman tells a companion that after 16 years, she can still hear her late mother's voice, saying, "Ariene, you're doing that all wrong."

And, in what amounted to his goodbye, he recalled his childhood, when it was possible to imagine that Lake Wobegon was really an ocean, "so that you believed you could take off from this shore and go anywhere you wanted to go" — even, presumably, to Copenhagen, where Keillor is moving with his Danish wife.

The parting is painful because those of us who listen to Keillor each week have gotten the unlikely idea that we know him. His appeal lies in his ability to evoke those simple, often unpleasant moments that we all have in common, to make us laugh at them and to use them to illuminate our common humanity.

It is those things we have in common that interest Keillor. He may or may not be a religious man, but his upbringing in a strict Christian sect obviously has left him with a powerful sense of the frailty of men and women and the vanity of their hopes. To be human, he knows, is to feel out of place in a world whose everyday reality falls so disappointingly short of what we dream. But, as he once said, "if you believe in the existence of a loving and merciful God, then life is a comedy."

Amid the pain, he showed, there is also joy and pleasure and love. And those, along with an ability to laugh at our failings, make life not merely bearable but sometimes sweet. In his recollections of a bucolic era that most of us never knew, Keillor never denies that small-town life can be stifling and bleak. But he also knows that in the Lake Wobegones of the world, a life of isolation from those around us is impossible.

His show gained a broad audience because it reminded us, humorously but insistently, that however much we might like to, we can't elude our ties to other people. If we've paid attention, the lesson will survive the departure of teacher. But that doesn't mean we won't take him back if he ever changes his mind.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, June 22, the 173rd day of 1987. There are 192 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On June 22, 1940, Adolf Hitler gained a stunning victory as France was forced to sign an armistice eight days after German forces overran Paris.

On this date: In 1611, English explorer Henry Hudson, his son and several other people were set adrift in present-day Hudson Bay by mutineers.

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte abdicated a second time.

In 1868, Arkansas was readmitted to the Union.

In 1870, Congress created the Department of Justice.

In 1911, Britain's King George V was crowned at Westminster Abbey.

In 1937, Joe Louis began his reign as world heavyweight boxing champion by knocking out Jim Braddock in Chicago.

In 1938, Joe Louis knocked out Max Schmeling in one round in New York.

In 1941, Germany invaded the Soviet Union during World War II.

Scientists to discuss UFOs

June 26-28 in Washington, there is going to be an "International UFO Symposium."

Speakers will include scientists and others from over the world, many of whom have made "flying saucers" a hobby, some of whom have made it a business.

The Freedom of Information Act has made available to all of us enough information so that we now know we were lied to by some government agencies during the 1940s and 1950s when "unidentified flying objects" seemed everywhere.

We were told that there were "no official investigations" of certain specific situations when, in fact, there were.

The whole situation is certain to return to the news late next week as symposium speakers are quoted worldwide.

I have always treated this subject with respect. I was well acquainted with Dr. Allen Hynek and his "Center for UFO Studies" at Northwestern University. I shared both his enthusiasm and his skepticism.

Recently I have seen a document that purports to be an Air Force briefing on the subject and that reportedly was presented to Gen. Dwight Eisenhower while he was a candidate for president.

The authentic-looking document — if valid — tends to confirm that something did crash near Roswell, N.M., in July 1947.

Our Air Force was first on the scene. Witnesses said a "spaceship" had crashed "with three or more people aboard."

The initial Air Force report from the site referred to "a flying disc" but within 24 hours they relabeled it "a weather device."

Whatever it was, any debris was sent to Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, presumably for evaluation and safekeeping.

Pragmatically, several things have bothered me about the Roswell reports. For one thing, how could any bodies from another galaxy be smart enough to come visit us and yet not smart enough to make a safe landing when they got here?

Also, we have so many blabbermouths in the bureaucracy and in the Congress, I could not imagine — if there is a valid "flying saucer story" to tell — why no "deep throat" clandestine source has come forward.

When I publicly mentioned my skepticism, I was offered contact with one such source. With his face in shadow and his voice rendered unrecognizable, this witness — presumably still in our government — gave me an hour-long description of what he said he had seen and heard.

But he delivered me nothing tangible, nothing I could show you. When I say "tangible" I mean parts of spacecraft, space people, space anything and official documents. All I got was words.

Then I decided to seek elsewhere for worthy evidence.

We will pursue that search together during our next visit.

Projects aim to keep students in school

By Robert Walters

TUCSON, Ariz. (NEA) — "Schools need to do some accommodating. We need to do some changing," says teacher Gerrie Mackaben in a candid acknowledgment of the educational system's failure to keep students in school.

Mackaben is especially concerned about the crisis among the Yaqui Indians attending Tucson's public schools. "American education hasn't worked very well for native Americans," she says, noting that Indians have the highest dropout rate of any U.S. ethnic group.

Mackaben and fellow teacher Karen Chatterton, both teachers at Mansfield Middle School are determined to do something about the phenomenon that often dooms young people to a frustrating lifetime of qualifying only for unskilled or semi-skilled jobs paying poverty-level wages.

As directors of Project ENABLE (Empower Native Americans by Learning and Encouraging) they have mobilized parents, teachers and administrators in an ambitious effort to enhance the educational experience for Yaqui children attending three of the city's schools.

That project, cosponsored by the National Education Association and its local affiliate, the Tucson Education Association, is one of 16 local programs throughout the country funded by NEA's Operation Rescue, whose goal is to cut the nation's dropout rate in half by 1990.

"We fear that young people who drop out will become a new permanent underclass within our nation," says NEA President Mary Hatwood Futrell. "We fear that they will become the core of a forsaken population that is estranged from the American mainstream (and) exiled from the American dream."

Indeed, the statistical evidence of fers little hope for the estimated 1 million young people who annually drop out of school or become chronic truants.

Item: A National Center for Education Statistics study shows that 36 percent of all high school dropouts are unemployed, compared with a 21 percent unemployment rate for those who graduate from high school but do not enter college.

Item: The U.S. Department of Education says that among those holding jobs, the annual earnings of high school graduates are 23 percent higher than the yearly income of dropouts.

Item: The U.S. Department of Justice reports that 59 percent of all whites and 63 percent of all blacks incarcerated in state and local penal institutions are dropouts.

In Texas, a startling 91 percent of all prisoners are dropouts. Moreover, it costs $42,000 a year to house an adult inmate in a Texas prison and $18,000 a year to hold a teenager in a juvenile correctional institution, compared to only $6,000 annually to educate a high school student.

Nationally, providing for dropouts and their families costs an estimated $75 billion every year — including welfare payments, unemployment compensation, lost tax revenues and crime-related costs.

The $40,000 project here, for example, will establish special teams of parents, teachers, counselors and principals to monitor and instruct the 220 Yaqui children now attending their neighborhood elementary school, middle school and high school.

Students identified as being at risk of dropping out will be encouraged to receive special tutoring, participate in study skills workshops and become involved in extracurricular activities.

"We want these kids to feel good about school and to have a new sense of pride in themselves," says Mackaben of the enrichment program she hopes will slash the dropout rate.

Democrats ready to pass tax-hiking budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats are ready to pass their version of $1 trillion federal budget this week, intensifying a long-standing fight with President Reagan over new taxes.

Final votes on the fiscal 1988 spending plan highlight a busy agenda, with the House also working on appropriations bills and the Senate turning to major trade legislation amid a Republican filibuster over campaign finance reform.

There also was talk of trying to put one or both houses on record as concerned about Reagan's policy of reflagging Kuwaiti oil tankers.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said Sunday that congressional Democrats would take up the Kuwaiti matter Tuesday, and might recommend delaying the plan or putting a time limit on it — a compromise that falls short of outright rejection.

The House also is slated to take its budget vote Tuesday and send the package to the Senate, where Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., says it will be pushed to the head of a line of legislation backlogged by the three-week GOP filibuster.

Byrd is warning that unless a compromise is reached on the Democrats' campaign spending bill, senators can expect long days and late nights, handling the budget and trade during the daylight and campaign reform after dark.

Virtually no Republicans are expected to back the Democratic budget, which calls for $64.3 billion in tax increases over the next three years but leaves it up to future legislation to pinpoint the sources of the money.

Although the budget is only a spending blueprint that does not require Reagan's signature, any tax increases would have to be passed in legislation subject to White House veto.

Reagan has said he will veto any tax boost. The budget includes a fallback mechanism the president doesn't like either: a trimming of defense spending unless the unspecified new taxes are levied.

Two weeks could be needed for Senate action on the trade bill, which is drawing threats of a presidential veto because it contains what administration officials say are protectionist provisions.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter has said the best hope for getting a bill acceptable to the White House will come when congressional negotiators eventually meet to resolve differences between the Senate bill and one passed by the House on April 30.

The Senate bill would provide a wide array of measures to assist import-ravaged businesses to become competitive with foreign rivals if the International Trade Commission deemed it possible for them to do so.

Unlike the House version, the Senate bill would grant the president no latitude to cite national security as a reason for rejecting commission recommendations.

IRS pushes auditors for results despite a written policy, Senate panel says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators have uncovered evidence that some Internal Revenue Service officials routinely judge employees on the basis of how much tax they collect and how much property they seize, in direct violation of written IRS directives.

The Senate Finance subcommittee that oversees the IRS released a memorandum today that the chief of one of the agency's collections branches had sent to his group managers. The memo complained about poor performance by the revenue officers who collect overdue taxes.

"It appears the fewer cases that the revenue officers have assigned to them, the less work they do," wrote branch chief Wilbur E. McKean of the IRS Baltimore district office. "Where are you as managers? ... The revenue officers that are performing above a satisfactory level will be rewarded, and the ones that are not will be documented with corrective action taken."

"Your midyear evaluations will be prepared in approximately 1 1/2 months," the memo noted. "You will be evaluated on your accomplishments or lack of accomplishments. Need I say more?"

The memo was made public as the subcommittee, headed by Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., resumed public hearings on a "taxpayer bill of rights" that, among other things, would prohibit the IRS from promoting workers on the basis of how much they collect.

However, as IRS Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs pointed out at an earlier hearing, the agency has long barred such promotion standards.

IRS Policy Statement P-1-20 states: "Records of tax-enforcement results shall not be used to evaluate enforcement officers, appeals officers and reviewers, or impose or suggest production quotas or goals."

"This prohibition is necessary not only to protect employees from any adverse impact of quantitative goals, but also to protect taxpayers against possible inequities."

Subcommittee aides speaking on condition they not be identified said McKean's memo supports other evidence that the policy set by IRS headquarters in Washington is not always followed in the field.

In testimony prepared for the subcommittee hearing, Robert M. Tobias, president of the union that represents most of the 102,000-plus IRS employees, said management's statistical goals place undue pressure on IRS employees and prevent them from using their best judgment in arriving at fair settlements.

Jerry Falwell says God will overrule PTL 'monkey business'

TEGA CAY, S.C. (AP) — Jim and Tammy Bakker have hired lawyer Melvin Belli to help them regain PTL, but the Rev. Jerry Falwell called their efforts "un-Christian shenanigans" and said God would decide the battle.

"The odds are very, very much in favor" of the Bakkers returning to the TV ministry, Belli said Sunday after meeting with the couple for four hours in the PTL-owned home they are occupying on Lake Wylie.

Bakker said Sunday for the first time that he wants to regain control of the ministry he handed over to Falwell in March amid a sex scandal.

Falwell said in a telephone interview Sunday from his home in Lynchburg, Va., that the fate of PTL, which owes $72 million, is in the hands of the bankruptcy court.

"I am sure the federal court will take into consideration that it was under Reverend Bakker's leadership that the terrible violations which brought about the virtual collapse of the ministry occurred," he said.

"Most of us who who love Reverend Bakker and who love the PTL ministry are saddened that he would put himself ahead of the survival of the ministry," he said. "However, I believe that God will overrule all this monkey business and will recover this ministry."

Falwell added that Bakker had a full week to reconsider turning the ministry over to its present board.

"It was not until some of his dissident friends encouraged him to resume leadership at PTL that all of these un-Christian shenanigans began," Falwell said. Belli said Sunday that Bakker wasn't properly advised when he gave up the ministry he founded to Falwell. "Had we been in at the beginning of this, Jimmy never would have resigned," he said.

Calling Bakker his "finest client" in 53 years of practicing law, Belli said the defrocked Pentecostal minister's side has not been told. "We're going to tell it without venom" over the next two to three days, he said.

Belli, an Episcopalian, said he wants to meet with PTL officials and the old board of directors. He also said he would like to set up a meeting between the Bakkers and Falwell.

Belli, 79, has represented Jack Ruby, who killed John F. Kennedy's assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald; victims of the Bhopal, India, chemical leak in 1984; and families of those killed when the Soviets shot down a Korean Air Lines jet in 1983.

Bakker said Sunday he wanted to make peace but had to seek legal counsel when the ministry's new leaders filed for reorganization.

"Our desires and goal is that the ministry continue, that all creditors be paid 100 percent and that all the partners have fulfilled the vision that we gave them to have a place for retreat," Bakker said.

When asked if he expected to resume control of the ministry despite recent allegations concerning his sex life and spending practices, Bakker said, "They accused Jesus Christ of the same thing. They said he was a wine-bibber, that he went out with publicans and sinners and prostitutes. Just because people accuse you doesn't change the call of God on your life."

Catfish farming soars, but image problem remains

WASHINGTON (AP) — Catfish farmers have seen their industry grow dramatically — an 11-fold increase in production since 1976 — but admit they have somewhat of an image problem to overcome.

Promotional efforts to put more catfish on dinner plates have been successful, the Agriculture Department says, but outside the main catfish producing areas, the slick-skinned, whiskered fish still suffers from a traditional image as a bottom-feeding scavenger.

The modern farm-grown catfish is smaller, much younger and more delicately flavored than its rough-and-tumble cousin, the river cat, which can grow to more than 100 pounds.

Dwight Gadsby of the department's Economic Research Service said catfish farming — the practice of using underwater feedlots in ponds stocked with small fish — has grown tremendously, with perhaps as much as 135,000 acres of catfish ponds currently in production.

The annual output of processed catfish rose to nearly 214 million pounds last year from less than 19 million pounds in 1976. And production is still gaining, with 70 million pounds processed in the first three months of this year.

Johnson stands at traffic barricade.

Racial motive seen in wealthy suburb's roadblock placement

CLEVELAND (AP) — The affluent suburb of Shaker Heights is being accused by some city council members of racism because of road barriers that seek to keep Cleveland drivers off its streets.

Unable to convince the Ohio Supreme Court in April that the roadblocks are illegal, Cleveland councilmen are now threatening to erect their own barricades to pressure Shaker Heights officials to reconsider what they have done.

The roadblocks, erected in 1976, are low-level, landscaped concrete barriers and wooden guardrails with a "No Road" sign facing the Cleveland side to prevent motorists from entering the suburb on residential streets.

There are more than a dozen residential streets where one can enter Shaker Heights from Cleveland, and only two are blocked off.

Cleveland Councilman Kenneth L. Johnson, who represents one of the mostly black areas bordering Shaker Heights, said he expects Cleveland to put up barricades on six streets within 30 days.

Some have questioned whether this retaliation would hurt Cleveland residents as much or more than those who live in Shaker Heights. But Johnson predicted the action would cause Shaker Heights officials to remove the suburb's barricades within two weeks.

"If that doesn't come to pass, I guess we'll have to do something else," he said. "There's been talk among some councilmen about taking it to the U.S. Supreme Court."

Cleveland Mayor George Voinovich said he worries that the April court decision, which found that the barricades were legitimate traffic devices and not impediments to free movement, will lead to unnecessary barricades all over Ohio. But he opposes retaliation.

"I think if the Shaker Heights barricades are taken down for any reason, they'll be taken down because they're a source of misunderstanding," Voinovich said. "I don't think the city of Cleveland putting barricades up will cause them to take barricades down."

Although racism was not an issue in the court case, several black leaders, including those of the Cleveland-area chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, have called the Shaker Heights barricades an ugly symbol of discrimination.

TREATMENT FOR STIFF NECK

If you're suffering from a stiff neck, don't wait for it to take care of itself when treatment is available to correct it.

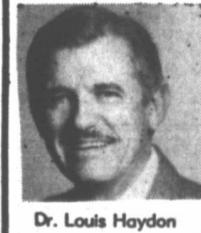

Of all the bones in the spinal column, none are more easily injured or more vulnerable than the seven vertebrae in the neck. None are moved more often. We are constantly turning our heads to look at people and things.

Neck stiffness can have many causes, from sudden and violent accidents to such simple activities as painting a ceiling or just sitting reading a book for a long time. But there's nothing simple about the pain.

A careful examination will reveal the source of the pain and how best to treat it. Any misaligned vertebrae in the spinal column should be properly adjusted so there will be no abnormal pressure on your nervous system. Treatment may also include exercises for the cervical muscles such as gently rotating your head in all directions. This can help restore muscle strength and tone.

In the year ahead, you will be more appreciated than ever in your present field. Your abilities will be acknowledged, and you'll receive deserved awards.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Assess situations logically and realistically today, but also give credence to your intuition. Your perceptions can contribute to a more well-rounded picture. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be a good listener today, even with friends who tend to belabor their points. Valuable information could be imparted and you'll want to get the whole drift.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) An important personal objective can be achieved today, provided your approach is flexible and you're able to make alterations to suit new circumstances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your curiosity is your most valuable asset today. Use it constructively to gain new knowledge about things that affect your immediate needs.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Before getting yourself involved in a new arrangement today, step back and study it to see if it fits into your present schedule.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You may have to contend with a critical situation today. Analyze it carefully before making a decision so that you're fully aware of all its ramifications.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This is a good day to discuss with co-workers a matter that displeases you. Through a meeting of the minds a resolution can be found.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This should be a pleasurable day for you because you'll be in gregarious mood. Others will enjoy being in your presence as much as you'll dote on their companionship.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Resourcefulness is your prime asset today. If necessary, you'll have the ingenuity to alter a situation that's headed up a blind alley.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you want to talk to someone, don't wait for him to get in touch. Pick up the phone and make the contact yourself!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to use some of your time today to put your paperwork in order. Also, re-evaluate your budget to see if you can get more mileage from your dollars.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You'll operate at peak efficiency today if you have several challenges to keep you busy. Bouncing from one thing to another shouldn't bother you a bit.

Clay 'coleslaw' was used to decorate pottery

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

There are special nicknames used in every type of job. Recently we were asked about "coleslaw decoration" on a piece of pottery.

The term is not in the reference books, but collectors and old-time potters know what it means. Small bits of clay, almost like long shreds of grated cabbage, are applied to a solid pottery figure to represent hair or grass.

The clay "coleslaw" is just sprinkled on the pottery so it has the irregular surface and texture of hair.

Small cottages made in the Staffordshire district in England in the 19th century and the poodle dogs made in potteries like Bennington in Vermont are the best known examples. It is a design technique that is no longer favored by potters.

Q. My mother had some little glass dishes she called salt cellars. I have two sizes, 1 1/4 inch and 1 1/2 inch, octagonal, 1/2 and 1 inch deep. They are heavy with a design on the bottom.

I think they were placed at each dinner plate. I understand that they were filled with salt and used by the diner for dipping. To me they are precious because they were my mother's. It would be interesting to know when they were first made.

A. Salt has been served at the dinner table for centuries. The salt shaker wasn't invented until the 1860s. Then, a threaded glass screw top bottle and agitator that kept salt from lumping became available. The salt dip was a small open salt dish. The large version was called a master salt. The large and small salt dishes were sold in sets with matching spoons.

Your small glass dishes were the type used from about 1860 until the salt shaker became popular. It was correct to spoon the salt or to dip celery or carrots into the salt.

Q. My grandfather left me a small, 3-inch diameter, wooden box with a hinged lid. It has an inscription on the bottom that says it is made from "the wood of the Royal George." What could it have been used for?

A. You may own a snuff box. Powdered tobacco or snuff was used in England from the early 17th century. Snuff was kept in small boxes. A pinch of tobacco was taken with the fingertips and sniffed up the nose. The boxes were made of silver, gold, or wood. They were designed to be carried in a small pocket.

The Royal George was an English ship that sank in 1782 but was salvaged about 1840. Souvenir snuff boxes made from historic timber were popular at that time.

Boxes were often made from famous pieces of wood. We have seen boxes made from wood from the original London Bridge, Shakespeare's mulberry tree, even the tiller of Noah's Ark.

Unfortunately, the wood did not always come from the indicated source, but the inscription helped to sell the box.

Q. How old is a small china doll marked Poll Parrot? It only measures 3 inches in height.

A. The Poll Parrot trademark was registered in 1922 by the International Shoe Company of St. Louis, Mo.

The company gave away many advertising premiums, especially dolls. Each child visiting the shoe store was given a toy. The name Poll Parrot was always written on the toy to remind the mother of the place to buy shoes.

The dolls were given away in the 1920s and '30s. Most of the items were made in Japan and China.

Q. How is the wood cut to make a burl bowl?

A. A burl is a knot or diseased growth from an ash or maple tree. The entire large knot is removed and then the bowl is shaped with the usual carving tools used by woodworkers.

Because the grain of the burl is not even, the wood is very tough and hard to carve. It is this same swirling grain that makes the bowl so attractive and durable.

TIP: It is safe to use spray or paste wax on your furniture, but be careful about changing brands. It is okay to put paste wax over spray wax. It is not safe to put spray wax over paste wax because it may soften the paste wax and spoil the finish.

Starch can damage teeth

NEW YORK (AP) — A new method of measuring the effects of foods on tooth enamel shows starch is just as harmful to teeth as sugar, according to AIMplus magazine.

Starch turns into sugar because of amylase, an enzyme found in the saliva, according to researcher Dr. Shelby Kashket at the Forsythe Center in Boston. And, since high starch foods, such as bread and crackers, tend to stick to the teeth, the enzyme has plenty of time to do its work. Bacteria then feed on the sugar, producing an acid which slowly dissolves the enamel.

Kashket hopes researchers will help discover why certain foods are harmful — at which point they can work with the food industry to help come up with alternatives.

Man's family shuns new wife

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a lovely woman I'll call Carole. My mother did not approve of her because she was a divorcee with two children. (We are both in our late 20s.) My brother was my best man. My family came to the church but did not go to the reception. In fact, they walked out the side door immediately following the ceremony.

My brother is getting married soon and I had already agreed to be his best man. When the wedding invitation arrived, I was shocked to see that it was addressed to me only! I asked my brother if it was some kind of oversight and he said no, Carole was not invited because

Dear Abby

Mother didn't want her there.

I sat down and wrote my brother a letter because I couldn't tell him face to face how hurt I was. I also told him that unless my wife was invited, I could not be his best man. I asked him to please come to see me so we could talk things over. I heard nothing from him, so I called and asked if he wanted to talk, and he hung up on me. I haven't heard from him since.

The last line of my letter was: "When Carole and I took our marriage vows, we two were made one, and I cannot send half of me to your wedding."

Was I wrong? Should I have gone

BECAUSE HE CARES...

Colors are associated with emotions. Blue signifies depression, green envy, red anger.

The Bible uses similar comparisons. To walk in the light is to associate with good. To walk in darkness is to associate with evil. A life lived in light is one of joy and happiness. It is free of guilt and full of promise. Isaiah said that we should "walk in the light of the Lord." Jesus said, "I am the light of the world."

For a life of peace and contentment, we can walk in the beautiful light of the Master's love.

WE CARE.

Clay 'coleslaw' was used to decorate pottery

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

There are special nicknames used in every type of job. Recently we were asked about "coleslaw decoration" on a piece of pottery.

The term is not in the reference books, but collectors and old-time potters know what it means. Small bits of clay, almost like long shreds of grated cabbage, are applied to a solid pottery figure to represent hair or grass.

The clay "coleslaw" is just sprinkled on the pottery so it has the irregular surface and texture of hair.

Small cottages made in the Staffordshire district in England in the 19th century and the poodle dogs made in potteries like Bennington in Vermont are the best known examples. It is a design technique that is no longer favored by potters.

Q. My mother had some little glass dishes she called salt cellars. I have two sizes, 1 1/4 inch and 1 1/2 inch, octagonal, 1/2 and 1 inch deep. They are heavy with a stem design on the bottom.

I think they were placed at each dinner plate. I understand that they were filled with salt and used by the diner for dipping. To me they are precious because they were my mother's. It would be interesting to know when they were first made.

A. Salt has been served at the dinner table for centuries. The salt shaker wasn't invented until the 1860s. Then, a threaded glass screw top bottle and agitator that kept salt from lumping became available.

The salt dip was a small open salt dish. The large version was called a master salt. The large and small salt dishes were sold in sets with matching spoons.

Your small glass dishes were the type used from about 1860 until the salt shaker became popular. It was correct to spoon the salt or to dip celery or carrots into the salt.

Q. My grandfather left me a small, 3-inch diameter, wooden box with a hinged lid. It has an inscription on the bottom that says it is made from "the wood of the Royal George." What could it have been used for?

A. You may own a snuff box. Powdered tobacco or snuff was used in England from the early 17th century. Snuff was kept in small boxes.

A pinch of tobacco was taken with the fingertips and sniffed up the nose. The boxes were made of silver, gold, or wood. They were designed to be carried in a small pocket.

The Royal George was an English ship that sank in 1782 but was salvaged about 1840. Souvenir snuff boxes made from historic timber were popular at that time.

Boxes were often made from famous pieces of wood. We have seen boxes made from wood from the original London Bridge, Shakespeare's mulberry tree, even the tiller of Noah's Ark.

Unfortunately, the wood did not always come from the indicated

source, but the inscription helped to sell the box.

Q. How old is a small china doll marked Poll Parrot? It only measures 3 inches in height.

A. The Poll Parrot trademark was registered in 1922 by the International Shoe Company of St. Louis, Mo.

The company gave away many advertising premiums, especially dolls. Each child visiting the shoe store was given a toy. The name Poll Parrot was always written on the toy to remind the mother of the place to buy shoes.

The dolls were given away in the 1920s and '30s. Most of the items were made in Japan and China.

Q. How is the wood cut to make a burl bowl?

A. A burl is a knot or diseased growth from an ash or maple tree. The entire large knot is removed and then the bowl is shaped with the usual carving tools used by woodworkers.

Because the grain of the burl is not even, the wood is very tough and hard to carve. It is this same swirling grain that makes the bowl so attractive and durable.

TIP: It is safe to use spray or paste wax on your furniture, but be careful about changing brands. It is okay to put paste wax over spray wax. It is not safe to put spray wax over paste wax because it may soften the paste wax and spoil the finish.

Starch can damage teeth

NEW YORK (AP) — A new method of measuring the effects of foods on tooth enamel shows starch is just as harmful to teeth as sugar, according to AIMplus magazine.

Starch turns into sugar because of amylase, an enzyme found in the saliva, according to researcher Dr. Shelby Kashket at the Forsythe Center in Boston. And, since high starch foods, such as bread and crackers, tend to stick to the teeth, the enzyme has plenty of time to do its work. Bacteria then feed on the sugar, producing an acid which slowly dissolves the enamel.

Kashket hopes researchers will help discover why certain foods are harmful — at which point they can work with the food industry to help come up with alternatives.

Man's family shuns new wife

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a lovely woman I'll call Carole. My mother did not approve of her because she was a divorcee with two children. (We are both in our late 20s.) My brother was my best man. My family came to the church but did not go to the reception. In fact, they walked out the side door immediately following the ceremony.

My brother is getting married soon and I had already agreed to be his best man. When the wedding invitation arrived, I was shocked to see that it was addressed to me only! I asked my brother if it was some kind of oversight and he said no, Carole was not invited because

Mother didn't want her there. I sat down and wrote my brother a letter because I couldn't tell him face to face how hurt I was. I also told him that unless my wife was invited, I could not be his best man. I asked him to please come to see me so we could talk things over. I heard nothing from him, so I called and asked if he wanted to talk, and he hung up on me. I haven't heard from him since.

The last line of my letter was: "When Carole and I took our marriage vows, we two were made one, and I cannot send half of me to your wedding."

Was I wrong? Should I have gone

and left my wife at home? (She told me it was my decision.)

BECAUSE HE CARES...

Colors are associated with emotions. Blue signifies depression, green envy, red anger.

The Bible uses similar comparisons. To walk in the light is to associate with good. To walk in darkness is to associate with evil. A life lived in light is one of joy and happiness. It is free of guilt and full of promise. Isaiah said that we should "walk in the light of the Lord." Jesus said, "I am the light of the world."

For a life of peace and contentment, we can walk in the beautiful light of the Master's love.

WE CARE.

Makaha Valley, Hawaii native Scott Simpson waves to crowd after sinking a birdie on the 16th hole.

Simpson wins Open by a stroke

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— Scott Simpson was surrounded by guys with green jackets, Masters champions all.

But when the 87th U.S. Open ended Sunday, the 31-year-old Californian possessed his first major golf title. His closing round of 2-under-par 68 on the Olympic Club's Lake Course gave him a one-stroke victory over Tom Watson, the two-time Masters winner.

Spain's Seve Ballesteros, another man who has twice worn the traditional green jacket presented to Masters champions, finished five strokes behind Simpson in third.

"I'm actually surprised I won it, to tell the truth," Simpson said.

Watson was disappointed but not surprised at the outcome.

"Scott Simpson is a very fine golfer. He's proven he can come from behind and that he can win on tough golf courses. Does it surprise me? No," Watson said.

Simpson made three consecutive birdies starting at the 14th hole, going ahead to stay with his 15-foot putt for a 4 on the 609-yard 16th. He saved a par at No. 17 by coming out of a bunker and making a 10-foot putt, then parred the 18th to complete the tournament with a 3-under total of 277.

Watson had three bogeys on the first five holes but no more in his round of 70, which included three birdies. His 45-foot putt for a birdie on the 18th hole was about two inches short.

"I have to admit I was hoping it wouldn't go in. I didn't want a playoff," Simpson said.

If Watson's putt had dropped, the course would have had its third Open playoff in history today. Jack Fleck beat Ben Hogan in a Monday showdown to settle the 1955 title, and Billy Casper beat Arnold Palmer in 1966.

"It felt good to be back in the hunt again," said Watson, who has gone almost three years without winning a tournament.

"I have nothing to be ashamed about, but I am disappointed," he added.

Simpson won the NCAA golf title twice at the University of Southern California, joined the PGA tour in 1979 and has won three tour events including this spring's Greater Greensboro Open.

The victory Sunday was worth $150,000 and jumped him from No. 9 to No. 1 on the tour's money-winning list, with season earnings of $465,896. Paul Azinger and Payne Stewart, the top two on the list last week, failed to make the cut in the Open.

Ballesteros battled to within one stroke of the lead midway through Sunday's round, but fell back with bogeys at the 12th and 13th and finished with a 71 for his total of 282.

At one point there was a four-way tie for first involving Simpson and three Masters winners—Watson, Ben Crenshaw and current champ Larry Mize.

Mize, Crenshaw and Bernhard Langer finished at 283, in a five-way tie with Bobby Wadkins and Curtis Strange for fourth place.

Keith Clearwater, who matched the course record with a 64 on Saturday, fell from second place to a 31st finish by shooting a 79.

Defending Open champ Ray Floyd had a 73 for a 290 finish, four-time winner Jack Nicklaus had 77 for a 291, and British Open champ Greg Norman had a 77 for 292. On the last three Open holes, Norman went triple bogey-double bogey-birdie.

Simpson's highest round was an opening 71, followed by 68, 70 and 68.

"The strength of my game is consistency," Simpson said.

He said his father, a good amateur golfer from San Diego who has played the Olympic course many times, told him the course "was made for me."

Sidekicks become heroes in Big D

DALLAS (AP)— A year ago, the Dallas Sidekicks thought they might not be around for another season.

Now, they're in the spotlight after becoming the Major Indoor Soccer League's champions.

They have in mind keeping the hearts of Dallas sports fans.

"What we've done in the playoffs," said general manager Kent Russell, "is prove that we can draw big crowds and we can get the yuppie crowd down, which is the one most sponsors want us to attract."

"Now it is up to us to take what we've done up to this point and make it into something big," he said following Saturday's 4-3 win in overtime against the Tacoma Stars.

It's not bad work for a franchise that is only 3 years old and lucky to be alive after almost folding last summer.

But the Sidekicks are not slowing their pace. Already, the team scheduled summer soccer camps for youths to start in mid-June. Most of the players were still involved in the championship series but the camps opened as planned.

"We're over a thousand kids registered right now," said Russell. "Two months ago, we felt we would probably max out at a thousand. Our first camp started this week so we think we can do maybe 1,500 or 2,000 in the camp."

"Again, it is extra visibility and extra income which we didn't expect," he said.

Some of the team's success may result not only from skill on the field but from struggles of other professional sports franchises in the area.

The Mavericks' first round elimination in the NBA playoffs, the below .500 year for the Cowboys and a Rangers team that struggled this season may have left Dallas hungry for a winner.

"Let's face it," said Russell. "There's two things. You're smart, or lucky, and you need part or both of those to be successful. Everything fell into place. But you have to take advantage of it, too."

"It wasn't because those teams went out; we opened the doors and we got 16,000.

Dallas Sidekicks' defender Doc Lawson celebrates MISL Championship upon return to Dallas Sunday.

Astros close in on first with 6-1 victory over LA

HOUSTON (AP)— The Houston Astros continued their 1987 mastery over the rival Los Angeles Dodgers with their 10th victory in 14 games this season.

By a 6-1 score Sunday, the Astros won their third game in a four-game home stand against L.A. after winning 3-of-4 at Dodger Stadium just last weekend.

"When things are going wrong, everything you do seems like it's for the good of the other team," said Dodger outfielder Pedro Guerrero.

The Dodgers have lost eight of their last 10 and five of six on their current road trip, which concludes with a three-game set in Atlanta beginning Tuesday.

"We're coming close in a lot of games," said Manager Tommy Lasorda. "The tide is going to turn."

The Astros took advantage of the Dodgers' bad luck when they scored four times in the first with Bill Doran's one-out single to right, the only ball Houston hit out of the infield in the inning.

Chuck Jackson's infield single to second set up Dodger pitcher Rick Honeycutt's aborted pickoff attempt of Doran at second. The throw went into center, putting runners at second and third.

Honeycutt then wild-pitched Doran home. Two walks and an RBI infield single by Jose Cruz made the score 2-0, and the last two runs came home on third baseman Phil Garner's boot of a Ron Reynolds' grounder.

Houston Manager Hal Lanier said Honeycutt pitched well overall.

But he continued to be the Dodgers' hard-luck pitcher, taking his sixth loss against two wins after entering the game with the third-best ERA in the league at 2.73.

"Not much you can say about it," said Honeycutt. "Seems like every time I go out it's a struggle. Everything that can possibly go wrong does."

Jim Deshaies won his fifth straight, a career-best streak, but struggled giving up seven hits and striking out only two in eight innings.

"I didn't have good velocity or my real good stuff, but I made the pitches when I needed to and getting four runs in the first takes the pressure off," Deshaies said.

Three double plays by the Astros on hard shots by Dodger hitters also helped take off the pressure.

"We're playing our best defense right now," Lanier said.

The Dodgers' only major threat came in the third when Honeycutt opened with a single and later scored on John Shelby's single to center. But a smash to third by Guerrero was turned into a double play to end the threat.

Wimbledon braces for rain delay

By ANDREW WARSHAW
AP Sports Writer

LONDON (AP)— The start of the 101st Wimbledon tennis championships was held up by rain today, and organizers said they were pessimistic about the prospects for much play on the opening day.

Thousands of spectators, clad with umbrellas and raincoats, poured through the wrought iron gates of the All England Club, braving a persistent drizzle and hoping for a prime position to watch the action.

But to their frustration, the 14 famed grass courts stayed under tarpaulins and the scheduled 6:30 a.m. CDT start was delayed.

Play on the two show courts, Centre and No. 1, was not due to begin until 8 a.m., with two-time defending champion Boris Becker playing the first match on Centre against Karel Novacek of Czechoslovakia.

But tournament referee Alan Mills said Becker's return to the court where he became a star almost certainly would be held up as well.

"It's disappointing and frustrating, but there's nothing we can do," Mills said. "Even when it stops raining, the courts would have to be deflated and would then need more time to dry out."

Mills said the forecast was showers throughout the day, with brief periods of dry weather in between.

Wimbledon's grass signifies only one thing for Becker and Martina Navratilova — success.

Becker has lifted the men's trophy the past two years, while Navratilova has carried off the women's title the past five years.

Becker was favored to become only the seventh man, and the third in modern times, to win three successive singles titles in the world's most prestigious tournament.

Navratilova, however, looked a bit wobbly after a winless year and a growing confidence crisis.

"If I am not confident now, when will I be?" Becker said after completing his Wimbledon preparation by winning the Queens Club championships last week.

"I won Wimbledon, then I won it again, and I'm a much better player this year," Becker said.

By contrast, Navratilova hasn't gone into Wimbledon in seven years without a tournament title. She is winless this year.

Defeat in the final of the French Open by Steffi Graf, followed by another loss, this to Helena Sukova, in the championship match of the Eastbourne championships on Saturday haven't been the best preparation for the world's top-ranked woman player.

The loss to Sukova was Navratilova's first on British grass in 69 matches stretching back six years.

Wimbledon, she hopes, will put her back on the right track.

"I'm very down and not brimming with confidence but I'm still going to be the favorite to win Wimbledon," she said after losing to Sukova.

Navratilova, like all her leading rivals for the women's title, has until Tuesday, traditionally known as "Ladies Day," to think about her first-round opponent, Claudia Porwik of West Germany.

Old-timer remembers Texas minor league days

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP)— James "Pinky" Griffin rode the buses as a minor league baseball player in the late 1940s, never realizing his boyhood dream to make it into the "train leagues."

But the longtime Sulphur Springs resident travels the fast lane when reliving his baseball experiences.

The 67-year-old Griffin, a former infielder, reached for his Louisville Slugger as a guest speaker at a recent Rotary luncheon and unloaded one tale after another about the "good old days" on the diamond, as he remembers them.

During Griffin's rookie season in 1941, when he was trying to make the grade with Shreveport in the Texas League, his club played the Brooklyn Dodgers in an exhibition game.

"I was really excited because the Dodgers had guys like Peewee Reese and Pete Reiser in their lineup and Leo Durocher was their manager," Griffith recalled.

"One of our players thought he would have some fun, so he told me to go out and coach at first base when the Dodgers came to bat. I didn't know any better, so I trotted down to the coaching box, and for one inning I was as close to the big leagues as I ever got."

As a youngster growing up in Lamar County, Griffin rubbed elbows with two future major leaguers — Eddie Robinson and Dave Philley. In fact, Pinky saw both players hit home runs in the big leagues.

"I saw Eddie hit one out in New York when he was nearing the end of his career with the Yankees, and I was in the stands at St. Louis when Dave (then with the Chicago White Sox) homered against the Browns."

Robinson and Philley realized long and successful baseball careers, but Griffin chased his dream while riding the buses in the minor leagues. He broke in with Opelousas, La., of the Evangeline League in 1941. After a stint in the Army, Pinky joined Paris in the East Texas League, where he earned the tag of a slick fielding second baseman.

Griffin, a native of Deport, 35 miles northeast of Sulphur Springs, had his moments as a hitter. He batted .280 with 10 home runs and 86 RBI for Paris before being released in 1949 by the Big State League team.

Griffin then began hitting the books instead of the baseball. He attended Texas A&M for one semester, and then turned to East Texas State University, where he earned his bachelor's and master's degrees. He spent many years in the teaching field, one of which involved coaching high school baseball at Pittsburg, Texas.

But professional baseball left him with his fondest memories.

"There was this guy sitting in the box seats at Shreveport who called me over one day," Griffin reminisced.

"He said, 'Son, let me see your glove.' And then he tossed it back to me and said, 'Why don't you go out and get yourself a real glove and charge it to Cap Roberts (then the vice president of the Shreveport ball club). I had been using this $2.98 Sears special for years, but the next day, I went down and bought a $15.95 Ken Keltner model," he said, then laughed.

Robinson, Gilliam expected to go 1-2 in today's NBA draft

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Armon Gilliam has come a long way, from junior-varsity scrub in high school to potential No. 2 pick in the first round of the NBA draft.

"I was the seventh man on the 10-man junior varsity," Gilliam said of the start of his basketball career at Bethel Park High School just outside Pittsburgh. "At the time I was better in football, but I really loved basketball and stuck with it."

The 6-foot-9 Gilliam stuck with basketball so closely that he was in line to go quickly in today's draft once Navy's David Robinson is taken No. 1 by the San Antonio Spurs.

Phoenix had the first pick after the Spurs, and Suns General Manager Jerry Colangelo said Gilliam and Dennis Hopson of Ohio State were the only two players invited back to Phoenix for a follow-up interview.

On Sunday night, the Suns sent second-year forward Ed Pinckney and a second-round draft pick in 1988 to the Sacramento Kings for swingman Eddie Johnson. Earlier the Suns had traded rookie center William Bedford to Detroit for the Pistons' first-round draft pick in 1989.

The first-round draft order, after the Spurs and Suns, was New Jersey, Los Angeles Clippers, Seattle, Sacramento, Cleveland, Chicago, Seattle, Chicago, Indiana, Washington, Los Angeles Clippers, Golden State, Utah, Philadelphia, Portland, New York, Los Angeles Clippers, Dallas, Atlanta, Boston and San Antonio.

Gilliam averaged 23.2 points and 9.3 rebounds as a senior for UNLV, leading a team that was ranked No. 1 in the nation for most of the season.

Others expected to join Robinson, Gilliam and Hopson as high draft choices were 6-11 Olden Polynice of Virginia, who played last season in Italy; 7-0 Chris Welp of Washington, 6-3 Kenny Smith of North Carolina; 6-10 Horace Grant of Clemson, 6-9 Dallas Comegys of DePaul, 6-7 Reggie Williams of Georgetown, 6-9 Derrick McKey of Alabama, 6-8 Ken Norman of Illinois and 6-3 Mark Jackson of St. John's.

Inside-the-park grand slam highlights Ranger victory

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Rangers brought down the curtain at the Coliseum on Sunday, but it was a beleaguered underdog rather than a spotlight star who stole the show.

"We replaced power with power," said Texas Manager Bobby Valentine after reserve outfielder Bob Brower hit two homers, including the first inside-the-park grand slam in Ranger history, to help Texas earn a doubleheader split with the Oakland Athletics, 13-3. The A's won the first game, 7-3.

It was truly Fathers' Day for regular Rangers slugger Pete Incaviglia, who missed the doubleheader when he flew home to Texas to await the birth of his first child. His replacement, Brower, broke an 0-for-18 slump and doubled his RBI total for the season by driving in six runs on his two homers, his first hits since May 25.

"If someone can't play, that's when I've got to go out and make the best of the opportunity," Brower said.

His second-inning slam with two outs gave the Rangers a 4-1 lead off A's starter Eric Plunk, 1-4, and Texas added three more runs before the inning was over.

"That's not the play that beat us," said A's manager Tony La Russa, who was more upset that Plunk walked the bases loaded. "He couldn't get the ball over the plate."

Plunk walked six batters and left giving up only the hit to Brower in just 1 2-3 innings. His mound opponent, Edwin Correa, fell behind 1-0, but then settled down to win his first game since April 28 by lasting six innings and improving his mark to 2-5.

"A new season began for me today," said Correa. "There's no looking back. You see (Texas teammate) Bobby Witt got a win yesterday, and that was his first in a while, so let's keep it up."

AL hits record-tying 30 homers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

On a day when baseballs flew over American League fences at a record-tying pace, supposedly washed-up Jerry Reuss and still wet-behind-the-ears Lee Guetterman showed how to pitch.

Reuss, who turned 38 last Friday and was cut by two National League teams earlier this season, ended a personal 13-game losing streak Sunday — 11 at the major-league level — with a no-walk, six-strikeout eight-hitter in his AL debut as California beat Kansas City 8-0.

It was the left-hander's 196th major-league victory but his first since May 2, 1986, his first complete game since Sept. 21, 1985, and his first shutout since Aug. 11, 1985.

Meanwhile, unbeaten Guetterman pitched a three-hitter for his first shutout and fifth consecutive victory as Seattle defeated Cleveland 5-0. The 28-year-old left-hander struck out two and walked one.

Over-all, though, it wasn't a pitchers' day as 30 home runs were hit, equaling the major-league mark of 30 in the AL on June 10, 1962, and June 14, 1954, and the NL on May 8, 1970.

Detroit hit five homers, two by Chet Lemon, in beating Baltimore 9-3 after the Orioles won the completion of Saturday night's curfew-suspended game 9-5. Minnesota put four balls into orbit in downing Chicago 8-6 and the White Sox hit three. All seven were solo shots, the sixth such occurrence in major-league history, last done by California (6) and Oakland (1) on April 23, 1985.

"They ask if the ball is alive?" Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said rhetorically after the Tigers and Orioles hit 15 homers in three games. "I can remember that a team hit 200 home runs and it was like, 'My God!' This year, 10 clubs might hit 200. If you don't hit 200 you're a bad club."

Reds belt Braves — literally

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Cincinnati Reds and Atlanta Braves spent nearly as much time hitting each other as they did hitting home runs this weekend.

"It was a fairly exciting series," Buddy Bell said Sunday after his 10th-inning homer gave the Reds a 6-5 victory in Atlanta.

The teams played baseball on Saturday and Sunday, engaging in a pair of bench-clearing incidents. Both melees were triggered by batters being hit by pitches and charging the mound.

The fights may have been the product of pitchers' frustration — 12 home runs were hit in the two games.

"Brawls ... are kind of silly at times, but things like that are going to happen," Bell said.

Bell, who had not hit the ball out of the infield in his previous nine at-bats, homered into the left-field seats with one out in the 10th. His fifth home run of the season came off Gene Garber, 8-5.

Sunday's trouble came in the eighth inning after Atlanta reliever Jim Acker hit Tracy Jones with a pitch. Jones stood around rubbing his arm as Acker came within 25 feet of the plate, and Jones eventually charged.

Jones and Acker wrestled as both benches emptied. No one was hurt and Jones was the only one ejected.

Acker hit Jones with a pitch last weekend in Cincinnati.

On Saturday, the benches cleared after Atlanta's Andres Thomas rushed the mound after being hit by a pitch from Bill Gullickson.

Cardinals 7, Expos 3

Unbeaten rookie Joe Magrane pitched seven strong innings and Vince Coleman's two-run triple sparked St. Louis over Montreal.

Magrane, 5-0, allowed three runs on six hits. The left-hander was making his first start since coming off the disabled list with a tender elbow. Bill Dawley pitched the final two innings for his second save.

Jack Clark, leading the major leagues with 66 RBI, hit a run-scoring single in the first off Bob Sebra, 3-8.

Mets 8, Phillies 3

Dave Magadan drove home three runs and Sid Fernandez pitched four-hit ball for 5 2-3 innings as New York sent Philadelphia to its sixth straight loss.

The Phillies have lost all four games under new Manager Lee Elia, who replaced the fired John Felske on Thursday. The Mets have won four in a row.

Magadan had an RBI single in the fourth inning against Kevin Gross, 4-7, and a two-run double during a four-run fifth.

Fernandez, 9-3, gave up two runs. He is tied for the league lead in victories. Roger McDowell pitched three innings for his eighth save.

Chris James and John Russell hit consecutive home runs in the sixth for the visiting Phillies.

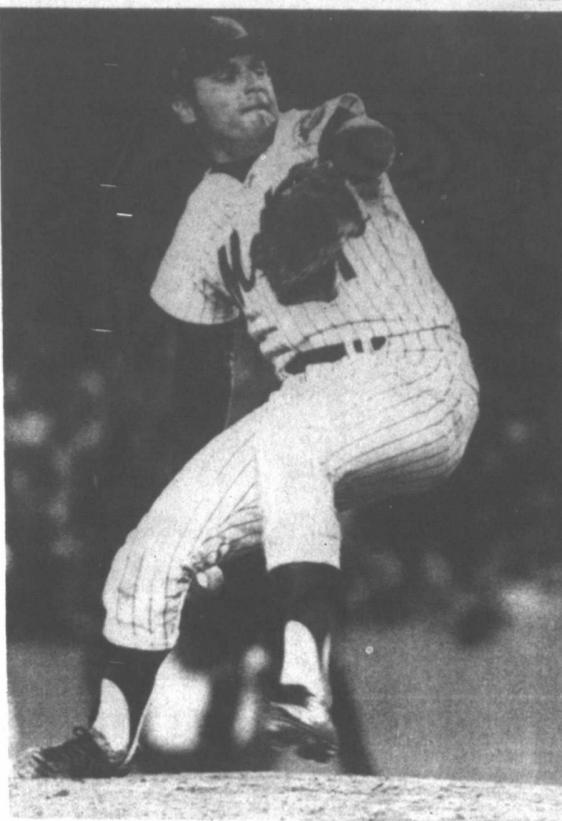

Cubs 6, Pirates 3

Keith Moreland homered and drove in three runs and Chicago beat Pittsburgh.

Steve Trout, 4-1, won his fourth straight decision and for the second time since coming off the disabled list Tuesday. He yielded seven hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Lee Smith pitched the ninth inning for his major league-leading 19th save.

Doug Drabek, 1-6, took the loss for the visiting Pirates.

Seaver retires again

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Seaver wanted to finish his career by pitching for the New York Mets. He made it back to the Mets, but not to the mound.

Seaver, 42, has decided he can no longer pitch well enough to make it back to the major leagues, and the Mets were announcing the end of his comeback try today.

"I know he wanted to help us win a championship," said Mets Manager Davey Johnson. "But I also know he's very disappointed with his progress."

Seaver rejoined the Mets in late May as a free agent, answering a call by General Manager Frank Cashen to patch up the team's injury-depleted pitching staff.

Yet in an exhibition start and two simulated games, Seaver was hit hard and did not show signs of regaining the form that made him a three-time Cy Young Award winner.

Seaver pledged he would retire rather than struggle in the ma-jobs, and apparently he did not see enough improvement.

"When I spoke to him yesterday, he seemed very discouraged," Johnson said Sunday. "Tom's a perfectionist and he knows himself better than anybody else."

Seaver had not pitched in the majors since last August, when a knee injury ended his year with the Boston Red Sox. The Red Sox did not re-sign him after the season, making him a free agent.

The Mets originally hoped Seaver, with a career record of 311-205 and a 2.86 earned run average, could make his first major-league start June 20.

Last Tuesday, pitching against teammates in a simulated game, he threw 88 pitches and gave up 13 hits.

On Saturday, the day Seaver wanted to pitch for the Mets, he was again shelled in a simulated game. He threw 60 pitches and gave up four runs on 10 hits.

"There was no improvement at all," Seaver said after that outing.

Dick Howser eulogized

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The first time the Rev. Jim Wells met Dick Howser was in a hospital in Kansas City 11 months ago.

The planned five-minute visit turned into an hour-long discussion the preacher has not forgotten.

"He looked at his World Series ring, looked back up at me and said, 'Jim, when you're facing what I'm facing, world championships don't mean a lot,'" Wells recalled at funeral services for the former Kansas City Royals manager.

"Dick knew this day would come."

Howser, 51, died last Wednesday of cancer. He was buried Saturday during a summer rainstorm in his adopted hometown of Tallahassee after family, friends and representatives of baseball packed Fellowship Baptist Church for a 50-minute farewell.

"Needless to say we will miss our good friend, Mr. Baseball. A part of our team is gone," said Royals president Joe Burke, who delivered the eulogy. "Dick we love you, we will miss you, and I believe we will see you again."

Howser, who led the Royals to the World Series championship in 1985, was the "common man's man," said Wells, pastor of Oakwood Baptist Church in Kansas City.

"And contrary to what the world says today," Wells said, "good guys do finish in first place."

Most of the 400 people in attendance were family and friends who had followed Howser's career since he was a two-time All American at Florida State University in the late 1950s and earned American League Rookie of the Year honors with the Kansas City A's in 1961.

In his last game as a manager, Howser led the American League to a 3-2 victory over the National League in the 1986 All-Star game.

NCAA could re-open SMU case

DALLAS (AP) — The NCAA could reopen its investigation of Southern Methodist University's football program, based on the findings of a committee that studied SMU's payoff scandal, but an official said further sanctions were questionable.

"To be honest, I don't know what else can be done to SMU," said David Berst, NCAA director of enforcement.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association slapped SMU with its harshest sanction — the "death penalty" — taking away the university's 1987 football season after learning payments to football players had continued after the school was placed on probation for similar violations.

"If something new to the case caused us to think there was more responsibility than what was initially contemplated, then there is that possibility" of reopening the case, Berst told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

A panel of Methodist bishops that investigated the SMU football scandal released its report Friday, naming the officials who authorized the continued payments to athletes despite the NCAA probation.

The committee said several members of the school's board of governors, including former chairman Gov. Bill Clements, knew about the payments, decided to continue them and then to cover up Clements' involvement.

Berst said NCAA investigators knew nothing of the involvement of Clements and other members of the school's board in the payments.

Frank J. Remington, NCAA Committee on Infractions

president, said when the NCAA handed down its February infractions, the committee had no idea the scandal went beyond the athletic department.

"There's no question the more involvement by higher-ranking members of the university, the more serious the violations," Remington said.

The NCAA invoked the death penalty in February and placed SMU on probation until 1990. The university voluntarily suspended football in 1988.

In March, Remington said the school could face permanent loss of its football program if high-ranking officials approved payments to players.

But Saturday, Remington said SMU's restructuring of its governance system and other changes made would weigh favorably.

Burns looks over a patch of flowers.

Gardener opens gate to those who want flowers without fuss

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Bashful men who have quarreled with their wives and small children clutching pennies are some of Betty Burns' favorite customers.

She opened her back-yard garden for business four years ago, allowing passers-by inside her white picket fence to cut their own bouquets from her 17 flower beds.

"I thought, 'I'll bet there are a lot of people who would like to have garden flowers as opposed to florist flowers,'" recalled Mrs. Burns, a retired X-ray technician with a square jaw, short hair and boundless energy.

A florist flower, she explained, is one grown in a carefully controlled environment to preclude any flaws, while a garden flower "is grown willy-nilly and if it has a bug hole in it, well, that's all right."

It's probably not the bug holes that draw folks to The Cutting Garden, a half-block expanse of shade trees and flower beds in various stages of bloom.

More likely it is the opportunity to stroll through beds of larkspur, asters, coneflowers, tiger lilies, cosmos, snapdragons and zinnias, to name just a handful in bloom in the garden behind Mrs. Burns' home.

"Every season it's something different," she said. Before opening for business, she perused seed catalogs, and ordered "everything anyone could conceivably want in a flower garden."

Customers enter through an arched gateway in a white picket fence that borders the garden on its street side. At a wood gazebo, they can get pails and scissors to gather their bouquets, and it is there that purchases are totaled up, usually 25 cents a stem, and carefully wrapped in green florist paper.

Throughout the garden are several tables and chairs, where friends and neighbors sometimes picnic.

A smaller bed located front and center by the gazebo is for children.

"What are children always told in a garden?" Mrs. Burns asked. "Don't touch! It's a shame."

So she installed a flower bed where children can not only touch, but pick the flowers, for a penny a stem.

"I ask that it be a penny that they've earned — not that someone's given them. If they spend it to buy a flower to give their mother, they're really giving something of themselves," she said.

"I've had nursery school classes come over here clutching their pennies."

"Kids are the cutest" of her customers, she said, but she also has quite a few young men selecting bouquets for their girlfriends, or husbands picking flowers to punctuate an apology to their wives after a fight.

"Many of my customers are fellows just wanting to get out of the dog house," she said. "A lot of times they'll say they don't know anything about flowers. I just tell them, 'All you have to know is if you like them.'"

Mrs. Burns was a late-bloomer herself when it comes to gardening.

"My husband liked to putter in the garden, but not me," she said.

When she retired from hospital work following a heart attack, "my husband decided I needed a greenhouse to putter in," Mrs. Burns said.

That led to a class, and eventually many classes, in horticulture at a vocational-technical school.

"At the time, this was all vacant," she said, waving a hand over the gardens. "I thought, 'I've got all this back yard, what can I do with it?'"

Arctic summer 'two weeks of poor sledding'

RESOLUTE, Northwest Territories (AP) — Up here where the sun doesn't set, the summer of '87 "dawned" at a crisp 36 degrees Fahrenheit, stirring the blood of shortstops, barbecue chefs and Eskimos in search of a suntan.

"I'll do some seal-hunting, some fishing, and maybe get a tan," an eager Elijah Nashook, mayor of the Canadian Eskimo settlement of Pond Inlet, told a visitor Sunday as he readied family, tents and guns for a 50-mile dash by snowmobile across the frozen seas to a favored summer campsite.

Some northerners, though, can still keep an objective southern eye 540 miles above the Arctic Circle.

"What summer?" laughed Hazel Clapperton, a cleaning lady at the remote Polaris lead-zinc mine. "Two weeks of poor sledding — that's all it is."

Even the weatherman's wife is a bit glum as summer allegedly arrives in Canada's High Arctic.

"She's had it," admitted Francois Guay, meteorologist at Frobisher Bay. "After eight, nine months of real winter, you look forward to sitting outside. And then it snows."

In fact, although Sunday was the season's start on the calendar, true summer is unusually late in coming to the far north this year.

In the Arctic summertime, the Earth's crown, like some planetary sunflower, tilts toward the sun, giving this sparsely populated region 24 hours of daylight.

From ground level, the glowing solar disk seems to simply roll around the horizon, in a 360-degree circle every 24 hours. At midnight, you'll find it in the north, hanging just above the Pole.

Bonn won't extradite Hamadi, sources say

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Bonn will not approve a U.S. request to extradite the alleged hijacker of a TWA jetliner, out of fear for the lives of two West German hostages in Beirut, security sources told The Associated Press today.

But Attorney General Edwin Meese is expected to visit Bonn on Tuesday in an apparent attempt to get West German officials to change their minds, sources said.

Meese was to meet with Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann to discuss "security issues," said Roland Bachmeier, a Zimmermann spokesman. Bachmeier refused to go into details, but security sources said Meese was going to Bonn to discuss the Hamadi case and might meet with Justice Minister Hans Engelhard and other officials.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl and officials in the Justice, Foreign and Interior ministries made the decision not to extradite Mohammed Ali Hamadi, the sources said.

Instead of extradition the Lebanese suspect, West Germany will place him on trial, the sources said. The decision will be made official in a Wednesday meeting of the West German Cabinet, the sources said.

Hamadi, 22, is one of four people indicted in the United States in connection with the June 1985 hijacking of a TWA flight 847 to Beirut, Lebanon, and the killing of a U.S. Navy diver who was a passenger.

He was arrested at Frankfurt airport on Jan. 13 when liquid explosives were found in his luggage. The United States requested his extradition soon after his arrest.

Bonn balked at the extradition request out of fear for the lives of Rudolf Cordes and Alfred Schmidt, who were taken hostage in Beirut soon after Hamadi's arrest in Frankfurt, the sources said. The kidnappers demanded Hamadi's release.

The security sources, who demanded anonymity, were confirming a report in today's editions of the Die Welt newspaper that said Hamadi would not be extradited to the United States.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Arsenio Hall will be this week's guest host on "The Late Show," which has jumped 10 percent in the ratings since Joan Rivers was dropped as permanent host, Fox Broadcasting Co. says.

The show had an A.C. Nielsen Co. rating of 2.2 for the week ending June 12, compared with 2.0 for each of the previous three weeks, Fox said Friday.

Ms. Rivers was replaced last month by a series of nightly hosts after the show lost in the ratings to "The Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson on NBC.

Hall's stint as guest host begins tonight, Fox said.

"After three weeks of experimenting with changing the host every night, we feel it's in the show's best interest to establish continuity from one night to the next," said acting executive producer Kevin Wendle.

NEW YORK (AP) — Director Stanley Kubrick was excited by the novel that inspired "Full Metal Jacket," and is satisfied with the new Vietnam War film, according to a published report.

"I'm happy with the picture," Kubrick said in an interview published Sunday in The New York Times. The movie opens Friday.

Two dead, two wounded in family shootings in Rockwell

ROCKWALL (AP) — A man shot three family members, killing one and wounding the others, and then turned the gun on himself after a dispute over a will turned violent, authorities say.

Rockwall Police investigator Terry Garrett said a telephone operator who notified police of the shootings told officials she heard one of the fatal shots over the phone.

Claude Francis Fulton, 71, died at 1:22 a.m. Sunday in the emergency room at Methodist Medical Center of Dallas. He died of a gunshot wound to the head, Garrett said. Dava Lynn Williams, 23, of Dallas was found dead at the home with a gunshot wound to her head.

"She was near the phone so she probably made the call," said Garrett. The body of Ms. Williams, who police believe was Fulton's granddaughter, was transported to the Dallas County Medical Examiner for an autopsy, he said.

Mary Duvall, 71, Fulton's wife, was in serious condition in Methodist's intensive care unit, said nursing supervisor Barbara Phelps.

Paula Williams of Dallas, 40, Fulton's daughter, was in fair to stable condition at Lakepoint Medical Center in Rowlett, said Brenda McFadin, a supervisor.

The operator called police at about 11:14 p.m. Saturday, Garrett said. When officials arrived at the family's Chandler's Landing home, they found Fulton, his wife and Ms. Williams in the bedroom. Mrs. Fulton had been shot in the shoulder and torso, he said.

Paula Williams, who was found next door, was shot in the face as she fled the shootings, Garrett said. A .38-caliber revolver was found in Fulton's hand, he said.

The Fulton home is in a Lake Ray Hubbard subdivision within this Dallas suburb of about 10,000. Residents are upper to middle-class people and the subdivision is patrolled by security guards, Garrett said.

"We've never had any calls at that residence as far as family violence," he said. "It's (the shootings) pretty isolated. There's not a lot of going on."

Police, the Dallas County Sheriff's Office and Texas Department of Public Safety are investigating the shootings, Garrett said.

Alistair Cooke reminisces after 2,000th 'Letter From America'

LONDON (AP) — When BBC officials asked Alistair Cooke to do a series of radio talks about the United States in 1946, they told him the show would last 26 weeks if it was a success, "but don't feel hurt if we stop."

This weekend, the 78-year-old British-born journalist delivered his 2,000th "Letter From America" — on the decline of flag-waving jingoism in American television commercials.

The British Broadcasting Corp., which has beamed Cooke's letters around the world for the last 41 years, decided to mark the anniversary on Sunday by letting some of his millions of listeners do the questioning.

Cooke was told before his first broadcast on March 22, 1946, that he could talk about anything, and over the years he has talked about everything American — from politics and jazz to his guru, the late journalist H.L. Mencken, and the beauty of a New England autumn.

But he was still caught somewhat off-guard when a woman in West Germany asked what changes he would make if he controlled U.S. foreign policy. Speaking from the BBC studio in New York, he said with a laugh that nobody had ever asked him.

But Cooke had an answer. He said there appeared to be three separate foreign policy operations competing in Washington — the State Department, the Defense Department and the Intelligence Oversight Committee in Congress.

"I would simply reassert the power of the State Department and see that the secretary of state is the main link with the president and the main conductor of foreign policy," he said.

Cooke also seemed to enjoy a question from a caller in Kenya asking him to rate the postwar American presidents on a scale of one to 10.

Harry Truman and Lyndon Johnson got seven, Dwight Eisenhower and Jimmy Carter got five and John F. Kennedy got only four because he was "very bad" at persuading Congress to pass his legislative program, Cooke said.

"I really don't know how to score (Ronald) Reagan," he confessed, noting that the president has one great strength that Carter lacked.

"However much he befuddles the facts or is misinformed, he is positive, he knows what he wants and he insists on it."

As for Gerald Ford, Cooke called him "a healer of the great wound of Watergate" and said he was probably "greatly underestimated."

One caller asked if there was anything that could be done to limit the American presidential campaign.

Cooke said many attempts had been made but all had failed.

"They're looking for Moses, the great deliverer, and then they (Americans) find him and then he's in the White House for two years and they discover he's not Moses. So then, they start looking for another one," he said.

Reports: Wright intervened in S&L cases

NEW YORK (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright intervened with federal regulators on behalf of a long-time supporter whose savings and loan association was being investigated, according to published reports.

The Texas Democrat has been accused of helping several well-connected real-estate developers facing legal problems in his home state, said the reports in Newsweek's June 29 issue and today's editions of The New York Times.

Although there have been no charges of illegality, Wright repeatedly twisted the arm of Edwin Gray, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which oversees the S&L industry, the reports said.

U.S. officials told the publications that Wright tried to limit federal efforts to regulate the thrift institutions, and blocked passage of a bill that would pump more money into an insurance fund for S&L's.

The publications said Wright urged Gray to re-examine the board's action against real estate developer Thomas Gaubert, a prominent Democratic fund-raiser and owner of Independent American Savings Association in Irving, Texas.

"I have done things as a result of his calls that I would not have done and never did before," Newsweek quoted Gray as saying.

Spokesmen for Wright and Gaubert told the Times that Wright was not seeking special treatment for Gaubert. They also said Wright had made other efforts to protect S&L's from what he considered questionable enforcement by the bank board.

The Reagan administration wants $15 billion allocated for the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, which bails out weakened thrifts. Until April, Wright insisted that $5 billion would be enough and said the FSLIC was too eager to take over Texas S&Ls that could recover on their own.

"For the first time, in the FSLIC we are seeing recurrent attempts to use political influence to prevent FSLIC from taking effective enforcement action against hopelessly insolvent thrifts," FSLIC deputy director William K. Black told the Times. "Such interference from influential, powerful members of Congress will increase FSLIC's losses," he said. "Somebody's going to have to pay for the losses."

Wright "was always acting to help the industry generally rather than any specific institution," said his aide, Marshall Lynam.

In another case, Newsweek said Wright told Gray he wanted the FSLIC-appointed conservator of Westwood Savings & Loan in California to call off lawsuits seeking to foreclose on loans made to 16 syndicates of Dallas real-estate syndicator Craig Hall.

Newsweek said Wright made it clear the bailout bill wouldn't pass the House unless the board eased up on Hall. Hall told Newsweek, "I talked to Jim Wright and a lot of other congressmen — anybody who'd listen — to get the lawsuits pulled back."

A third Texan helped by Wright was Don Dixon, owner of Vernon Savings and Loan Association in Vernon, Texas, Newsweek said. Wright aide Phil Duncan said Wright merely asked Gray to delay the takeover of Vernon.

The contact was made in December and the FSLIC didn't act until March. By that time, 96 percent of the loans Vernon had made were delinquent, Newsweek said. The next month FSLIC sued Dixon and six associates for allegedly defrauding Vernon of $40 million.

Damage is surveyed after a tornado swept through a mobile home park in Novi, Mich., Sunday evening. (AP Laserphoto)

Tornado hits trailer park; man killed, wife and infant injured

By The Associated Press

A huge storm system deluged parts of Michigan today, swamping Detroit highways, after spawning a tornado that ripped through a mobile home park, killing a man and critically injuring his wife and infant son.

"After I heard a blast I looked out and could see everything going around and around — shingles, pieces of siding — it looked like squares in the air," said Dorothy Olsen, a resident of the Chateau Estates mobile home park in Novi about 30 miles northwest of Detroit.

Twenty-five to 35 of the mobile homes were severely damaged in Sunday's tornado, while 15 to 20 others sustained less severe damage, said Oakland County Sheriff John Nichols.

At least eight and possibly 10 tornadoes hit seven states Sunday, but no casualties were reported outside Michigan.

Severe thunderstorms continued in Texas this morning, with winds gusting to 75 mph in the panhandle town of Clarendon and up to 116 mph near the southern Texas town of Quemado.

Sunday evening, two tornadoes were spotted near Roswell, N.M., and another near McCamey, Texas, where winds were reported at 69 mph. High winds downed trees east of Carlsbad, N.M., where golf ball size hail fell.

A possible tornado knocked over trees and tore the roof off a building at Cohutta in northern Georgia.

Other tornadoes Sunday were reported near Lockbourne Air Force Base south of Columbus, Ohio; Monett, Mo.; and Jacksonville, Fla. Some homes were damaged, possibly by a twister, in Dunelton, Fla.

Clerical workers, Bell fail to reach agreement

FORT WORTH (AP) — Clerical workers joined production workers on the picket line in front of Bell Helicopter Textron Inc. today after their union failed to reach a new contract agreement with the manufacturer.

"All employees, including members of Locals 218 and 317 who are not participating in the strike, may report to work Monday. All non-union employees should report to work as usual," Tipton said Sunday.

Swaggart accused of skimming cash from ministry contributions

DALLAS (AP) — The Rev. Jimmy Swaggart and his ministry have been accused by tax officials of skimming cash from contributions, but his attorney vehemently denies the allegations.

The television evangelist and his Louisiana-based Jimmy Swaggart Ministries also are accused in court documents of ignoring court orders to produce financial information, the Texas Lawyer reported in today's edition.

The ministry's lawyer denied withholding any relevant material and denounced the allegation that Swaggart had dipped into contributions.

The papers were filed in a tax dispute between officials in South Texas' Montgomery County and Jimmy Swaggart Ministries, the lawyer reported.

The Conroe Independent School District, the city of Shandoah and the county say Swaggart's radio station KJOJ owes $157,000 in taxes for three properties.

Swaggart contends the properties are tax-exempt. Russell R. Graham, an attorney for tax officials, said in a letter to State District Judge John C. Martin that his clients believe Swaggart retained contributions for his personal use.

William D. Treeby, chief lawyer for Swaggart Ministries, denied the allegation.

"If any of that money went into Reverend Swaggart's pocket ... that would be the death penalty," Treeby said. "We're not going to do that."

The Baton Rouge (La.) Morning Advocate reported in May that the ministry's net worth was $111.9 million, with revenue of $128.5 million. The report was based on an audited financial statement provided by the ministry.

Homes owned by Swaggart and his son, and a third owned by the ministry and occupied by Swaggart's brother, were assessed at $2.5 million, the Advocate had reported.

Nuclear reactor set to load fuel in one unit this week

BAY CITY (AP) — After more than a decade of sometimes controversial construction on the South Texas Nuclear Project, officials plan to load fuel into the first unit this week.

"I've put 10 years of my life into this and this is what we have been waiting for," said Gary Parkey, plant engineering manager. "Now we can finally start putting all our training and practice into use."

Plans for the project near Bay City were first announced in 1973, and construction began in late 1975.

The original cost was estimated at less than $1 billion, but that figure has increased to about $5.5 billion. Completion of the site was first expected to be in 1980-81.

STNP's management notified the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in late May that it expected to start loading fuel sometime between June 23 and June 30. Parkey said it could begin Tuesday.

It will take about 10 days to move 193 nuclear fuel assemblies, each worth about $400,000, from storage in a fuel-handling building into the Unit 1 reactor vessel inside the silo-like containment building, he said.

Houston Lighting & Power Co. officials said the NRC license to load fuel, expected to be issued shortly, also will permit firing up the nuclear reactor to no more than 5 percent of full power.

There will be at least a month of final checks after the fuel is loaded before the reactor is turned on for the first time, officials said.

Unit 1 then will begin producing Texas' first nuclear electricity, probably sometime in August. The 1,250-megawatt unit will go to higher levels of power until it qualifies for full commercial operation, scheduled in December.

The utility claims the plant will save $24 billion in fuel costs over its 40-year lifetime.

But the process has had its problems. "There were thoughts like, 'When is it going to get there?'" said Terry Puckett, project manager for one of the partners, Central Power & Light Co. of Corpus Christi.

In 1979, 1980 and 1981, the project was hurt by disclosures of poor construction, inadequate quality-control and organizational disarray. HL&P was fined $100,000 by the NRC for poor management, and the original contractor, Brown and Root Inc., was booted from the project.

For almost a year, in 1981 and 1982, work was at a virtual standstill while HL&P brought in a new architect-engineer, Bechtel Power Corp., and builder, Ebasco Services Inc.

The partners sued Brown & Root, settling for $750 million. But now the city of Austin is suing HL&P, seeking a refund and release from the project or damages as high as $1.5 billion.

Meanwhile, the plant's Unit 2 is 76 percent complete and not scheduled for fuel load until December 1988.

Sagging economy means more abandoned pets, society says

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas' sagging economy is making it tough on pets, animal control officers say.

John Burns, volunteer director of cruelty investigations for the Humane Society of North Texas, says that in past years the society could expect several calls a month to rescue an abandoned adult dog or cat. Now, Burns says, such calls come in several times a week.

The greatest rise in the number of animals being taken to the society's shelter has been in adult pets, full grown dogs and cats left behind by owners who have moved out of town, he said.

Burns said that as of June 10, 72 abandoned pets had been picked up by humane society workers this year. For the same period last year, 35 animals were picked up.

The shelter has room for about 200 dogs and cats. The population was at about 150 last Friday, Burns said.

Burns theorizes that many owners can't afford to keep their pets any longer or are moving to another area and are unsure of their ability to find housing that allows pets.

"I can't think of any other reason for such a sharp increase," Burns told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Many of the recent calls involved animals tied in the backyard of vacant houses or locked in a house without water or food, Burns said.

In some cases, Burns said, officials are notified when landlords inspect recently vacated property.

"We've always had animals put out on roadsides and in parking lots," he said. "I guess we'll always have that, but this is more cruel when nobody even realizes the animals are left behind."

Mistreatment of animals through abandonment is a Class A misdemeanor punishable by a year in jail and as much as $2,000 fine, but Burns says prosecution is difficult because the owners usually cannot be found.

Rick Hay, environmental health manager for the city of Fort Worth, said owners brought 36 pets to the city's animal control shelter in May, compared with only 18 in April.

It may be one of two things, the winners are leaving town or just can't keep the animal.

Burns said that abandoned animals are put to death by injection if they are not adopted within a few days of their arrival.
