Meese probe labeled a cover-up

By JIM DRINKARD Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Attorney General Edwin Meese III, insisting he could not have known the depth of the Iran-Contra affair when he began looking into it eight months ago, faced tough questions today from congressional investigators who believe his inquiry was incompetent or calculated to be superfi-

"He's not going to upset the apple cart at all," said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, a member of the House investigating committee. "It looks to me like he's following the same pattern of cover up, protect the president.

After a relatively easy day Tuesday recounting his actions last November after President Reagan asked him to launch an investigation of the affair, Meese faced skeptical questioning expected to focus as much on what he didn't do as on what he did.

In another development:

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., disclosed he resigned from the Senate Intelligence Committee last January because he was responsible for the leak of a draft staff report on the panel's Iran-Contra investigation. Leahy, who was vice chairman of the panel at the time but is not a member of the current Iran-Contra investigating committees, admitted carelessness in allowing a reporter to examine the draft.

When questioning of Meese resumed today, Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, said he planned to ask Meese why he failed to immediately require that records of Lt. Col. Oliver L. North be sealed to preserve them for investigators, a failure he said allowed potentially key documents to be shredded

And he said he wanted to know why Meese recruited a team of political appointees to carry out the inquiry rather than seasoned criminal attorneys with better investigative instincts.

"It seems to me that at least in retrospect, the records should have been sealed earlier and the criminal people should have been brought in earlier,' Mitchell said.

Other questions remained, as well: How could Meese fail to ask then-CIA director William J. Casey, a close friend, about the diversion of Iran arms sale profits to aid the Contras? Why was then-National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter not questioned more thoroughly about his role? Why did Meese tell other administration officials about

Berserk man kills three in rampage over alimony pay

'Angry' suspect charged in courthouse shootings

PORT ST. JOE, Fla. (AP) — A man charged with fatally shooting a judge and two other people during a courthouse rampage had written numerous letters to newspapers that showed he was "angry at the world," an editor

Clyde Melvin, who authorities said opened fire with two guns Tuesday during a court conference about alimony payments, nad fretted in his letters about 'warmongers in Washington,' and Zionist and communist conspiracies.

The 62-year-old security guard from Appalachicola also shot his ex-wife, Eleanor Inez Huckeba, whom he accused of infidelity, before he was shot by a sheriff, authorities said.

Melvin was treated at Gulf Pines Hospital and was ordered held without bail at the Gulf County Jail on three counts of murder in the slayings of Huckeba's lawyer, his ex-wife's sister and Circuit Judge Wilson Lamar Bailey 64

Huckeba, 58, was in stable condition with a head wound described as minor by State Attorney James Appleman.

'I've showed you for running around on me.'

— suspect Melvin

'I've never run around on you in my life.' — ex-wife Huckeba

The shootings began in Judge

Bailey's conference room. Appleman said Melvin, a 30year employee of St. Joe Forests Products' paper mill, fired seven or eight shots from two handguns, first killing Huckeba's attorney, Thomas E Ingles, 43, of Panama City.

Ingles may have tried to disarm Melvin in the conference room, authorities said

Melvin then chased down the judge and killed him with a blast through a bathroom door; gunned down his ex-wife's sister, Peggy White Paulk, 55, of Sumatra, on a stairway, and shot his wife as she fled to a roof, authorities said.

Waterfield airs bloody tax fight

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

State Rep. Dick Waterfield may have lost his battle to stop a state tax hike, but that didn't keep him from sharing his war stories with Pampa Desk & Derrick Club members Tuesday

The Canadian Republican told club members how he stood firm against the $5.7 billion tax increase, passed last week in a special session of the Texas Legisla-

It wasn't an easy fight when even former outspoken tax opponent Gov. Bill Clements turned into a supporter.

According to Waterfield, the tax increase amounts to an additional $400 per year per resident

He listed the new services that fall under the tax - private clubs, insurance claims services. landscaping, lawn services by people above 18 years of age, telephone services, data processing and exterminating.

Waterfield also chided the tobacco tax increase, the motor vehicle sales tax, the tax on professional fees and the hotel-motel tax increase.

To top that off, Waterfield said, the state will now charge a fee to collect the sales tax.

'We're gigging you, and here we're going to make it worse, the representative said.

But it's the sign of the times, Waterfield observed, noting that the tax increase reflects the "bad anti-business climate in the country.

'If we're going to get out of the slump we're in, business should lead the way," Waterfield told the Pampa club women. "And we need business people in Austin to balance the budget, not tax and spend. The fat needs to be cut.

Economics are bad, people in Texas do not want new taxes, Waterfield declared

But it didn't have to be that way, he said, adding that legislators had 10 amendments to act on that would have cut $1.6 billion from the budget.

But after hearing from lobbyists, the state ended up cutting See TAX, Page 2

Peet splits from commission in city manager's

By LARRY HOLLIS News Editor

Following a lengthy executive session. City Manager Bob Hart received a strong vote of confidence Tuesday night from the Pampa City Commission. The vote came after the semi-annual evaluation of the city manager, conducted as part of an executive session lasting nearly three hours Groundwater rights and possible real estate purchase also were discussed during the executive session, but no action was taken on either item after commissioners reconvened in open session. After reconvening at 9:42 p.m., Mayor McDaniel noted the commission had conducted the twiceyearly evaluation and then asked for a vote of confidence in Hart.

Ward 1 Commissioner Ray Hupp moved to show confidence in Hart's operations in the past six months, with Ward 3 Commissioner Joe Reed seconding the motion.

Mayor McDaniel and Ward 4 Commissioner Clyde Carruth joined Hupp and Reed in expressing the vote of confidence in Hart's performance.

But Ward 2 Commissioner Richard Peet, without making any comments, voted against the extension of confidence. Peet left commission chambers immediately after Tuesday's meeting, and he was unavailable for comment today

No public comments were made by commission members about the discussion of Hart in closed session.

McDaniel, after reopening the public session, said only that the commission had conducted the semi-annual evaluation in a "quite lengthy" session that "touched on a number of matters. In other action Tuesday, the commission approved having two public hearings on the proposed master plan for Recreation Park, which surrounds the rodeo grounds. The hearings will be conducted as part of the commission's regular meetings on Aug. 11 and Aug. 25.

McDaniel said the public hearings will be held "to make sure that there is a time for people" to provide input into the plan recommended by the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board.

The mayor noted the Parks Board has spent a lot of time in the past year preparing the proposal for development of land and facilities at the 134-acre park located east of the city Parks Superintendent Bill Hildebrandt said the large tract, accounting for 48 percent of the city's parks land, offers "a lot of possibilities" for development. He said implementation of the plan will "need a lot of input.

Hildebrandt suggested the commission hold two public hearings instead of just one. The Parks Board plan proposes two phases of development. The first phase entails prohibiting off-road vehicles from the site, clearing unsightly brush and increasing the frequency of mowing and general grounds maintenance. Phase 2, which includes longer-term goals, con-See EVALUATION, Page 2

Mines in Persian Gulf Shipping Lane Farsi Island ip USS La Salle or land bases SAUDI MINE SWITTPERS UNITED ARAB OMAN EMIRATES 100 miles

KUWAIT (AP) — The supertanker Bridgeton, its side torn open by a mine, prepared today to take on a load of oil even though the U.S. Coast Guard has not yet ruled on its seaworthiness, officials said.

In Washington, Coast Guard spokesman James Kosch said the 401,382-ton tanker has not been granted permission to sail on its return trip south through the Persian Gulf. Coast Guard permission is needed because the Bridgeton is registered in the United States. But a government shipping source here said the Bridgeton would take on - probably today — about 240,000 tons of crude oil, or two-thirds the tanker's capacity

In Bahrain, marine salvage officials said today that Saudi Arabian minesweepers have found several mines and detonated at least two of them in the gulf, a major theater in the nearly 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

'The Americans have located many more. The gulf has become a virtual minefield with its lanes too perilous to navigate," said one executive, who spoke on condition of anony-

The Bridgeton docked at Kuwait's Sea Island loading terminal today after four days at anchor several miles offshore. It hit the mine Friday 120 miles to the south.

The shipping sources said the Kuwait Oil Tanker Co. hopes that the Bridgeton, its convoy companion, Gas Prince, and their U.S. warship escorts will begin the 500-mile trip back toward the mouth of the gulf by the weekend. After passing through the Strait of Hormuz, the Bridgeton is expected to transfer its cargo to smaller vessels and go to Dubai or Bahrain for repairs

The Reagan administration has agreed to reflag 11 Kuwaiti vessels and provide them with U.S. protection to protect the flow of oil through the gulf.

Iran's revolutionary patriarch, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, warned the United States on Tuesday that it would suffer more "shame and disgrace" if it continued escorting Kuwaiti tankers. His remarks were carried by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus.

In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government said today it is prepared to consider sending minesweepers to the Persian Gulf if asked. Spokesmen at the Defense Ministry and Foreign Office said they could not confirm news reports from Washington saying U.S. allies might be asked to send minesweepers to the gulf

Agency to discuss 911 emergency number

A task force of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission will hold a hearing at 4 p.m. Thursday at the Gray County Courthouse in Pampa to determine the need for a 911 emergency telephone service in the northeastern Panhandle.

The hearing, one of four scheduled in July and August, will help the PRPC to decide what form an emergency communications district for the region should take and how it should be financed

During the hearing, a representative of the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations from Austin will explain the legislation passed this session to make the emergency phone service possible

The representative will explain the legislation and how it affects the individual counties and their

The hearing also will concern short-term goals for the Panhandle region, including planning strategies that can be used to establish an emergency communication district or districts in the 25-county area.

The task force also will take questions and written or oral comments from emergency services personnel, including fire, police and ambulance, as well as from elected officials and representatives of phone companies and emergency services.

The general public from Pampa and surrounding areas is also invited to attend the hearing.

All the material, written or oral, will be summarized in a written report that will be presented to the PRPC's annual assembly Sept. 10. At that time, the board of directors may choose to create an emergency communications district to serve the Panhandle.

A similar hearing was held Tuesday at Dumas, with others scheduled for Aug. 18 in Hereford and Aug. 20 in Clarendon.

The first hearing concerned a request from owner Harold Lawley for annexation of 9.84 acres of the site into the city limits. The second hearing involved a request for a zoning change from Agriculture to Single Family 2 District.

Neither hearing received any public comments from those in attendance at the meeting.

Action on the requests, both of which have received the approval of the Planning and Zoning Commission, will be conducted at the next regular meeting

In related business, commissioners approved the final plat for the Lawley Ranch Addition. In other business, commissioners:

awarded a bid to Wall and Sons Drilling Inc. for the drilling of wells to test groundwater supply being considered for purchase; appointed Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard of the Gray County Appraisal District as the city's officer to calculate and publish the effective tax rate for the city of Pampa; and approved accounts payable.

ter referendum on a state lottery. In other remarks during Waterfield's speech Tuesday: only $19 million, Waterfield said.

■ The representative was asked how he accomplishes anything in the midst of the back-talk and banter on the House floor. Waterfield said it's not easy, but he manages

Waterfield recalled one instance in which Houston legislators wrangled for five hours about a mass transit system for the town. "Rural Texas is safe as long as the urban representatives are at each other's throats," he said. ■ Waterfield declared: "You have a good representative in Foster Whaley." He expressed regret that the Pampa Democrat is not a Republican. He observed that area Republicans face an uphill battle finding a GOP candidate more conservative than Whalev.

He also confirmed that he turned down requests to run for the Texas Senate against State Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon.

Waterfield said Borger is in ran in the Kentucky Derby last "kind of a holding pattern" in its efforts to get an area prison. One Waterfield also supports a voobstacle, he said, was that the land donated to build the prison did not meet water requirements.

Wheeler and Shamrock residents have put aside their prison promotion and set their hopes-on a potential feedyard and packing house that could employ up to 350 people. The key to getting that packing house lies in enabling legislation that provides state bonding programs for agricultural ventures.

A former member of the Canadian school board, Waterfield asked the women to support efforts to return the state school board to an elected body, not an appointed board. A question on the November election ballot will ask voters if they support an appointed or elected state school board.

But, he said, "please do your homework ... Let's get involved in knowing who we are electing.

he said. Waterfield said chances of bringing a supercollider to Texas are "quite good," but Amarillo will have a hard time getting it from Dallas.

"The biggest hurdle is funding," he said.

Technical restrictions actually School district to discuss

A budget workshop scheduled for 6 p.m. Thursday in the Pampa Middle School library will focus on possible revenues for the school district, Superintendent Harry Griffith said.

Griffith said the second of three scheduled school board budget workshops also will feature a general discussion of the 1987-88 budget, including teacher salaries

More specific discussion on next year's budget is planned for an Aug. 13 workshop, Griffith Thursday's meeting also will include a closed session to discuss personnel matters. Griffith already has predicted that Pampa probably will need tax increases of up to 8 percent in the next two years to head off a "financial crisis." School districts can raise taxes up to 8 percent without being subject to a rollback election. And, Griffith said, Pampa's effective tax rate — the amount needed to raise the same amount as the current year — has risen dramatically. "With the falling of values, it's around 79 cents," he said. Currently, the school tax rate is 71.8 For the owner of a house valued at $50,000, that equals an increase in school taxes from $359 to about $395 per year. Thursday's meeting will feature a complete discussion of revenues, including money to be expected from the state, local taxes and other sources. Griffith also plans to provide comparisons of Pampa to other area school districts Gray County Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard will be present to answer questions. Griffith

The meeting will then move into a general discussion of the 1987-88 budget, including teacher salaries, Griffith said.

Democrats said Hobby's retirement leaves a void in their party, while a Republican official said the GOP has a better chance to capture statewide offices.

"The game of musical chairs is about to be played. Now, who gets to sit in them remains to be seen," Comptroller Bob Bullock, a Democrat, said Tuesday

Hobby, who first won the lieutenant governor's office in 1972, earlier this year indicated he would run for governor. But Monday, he said he won't seek any office.

Bullock, who decided in 1982 that he would seek the 1986 gubernatorial nomination and then changed his mind, said he isn't planning to run for governor. And he said he learned five years ago that an early announcement can

"Every move that you make after that (announcement) is characterized as political, looked upon with skepticism," Bullock said. "It's almost deceiving. If a man's going to be political, he's going to be political whether he's announced or not."

Hobby's decision means that for the first time since 1972, the Democratic Party won't have an incumbent seeking re-election as either governor or lieutenant governor.

Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle said Democrats have a number of good prospects for both jobs.

"I think it's very healthy that the party has multiple candidates for governor and lieutenant governor. It's better to have 20 good candidates for six jobs than no qualified candidates for those jobs, like the Republicans," Slagle said. Because running for governor is expensive - Bill Clements and Mark White spent about $24 million between them last year - Slagle said the Democratic primary may not be a free-for-

"We might find only two or three (candidates) because of the availability of funds." he said.

John Weaver, executive director of the Texas GOP, said Hobby's decision was good news for Republicans.

'Hobby's leaving the scene is almost the end of a political era in Texas that dates back generations. The only one left is (U.S. Sen.) Lloyd Bentsen. As the Democratic Party becomes more liberal, the (Jim) Hightowers, (Jim) Mattoxes and others make the Republican Party that much more attractive,' Weaver said.

"For us, obviously it makes the governor's race and the lieutenant governor's race and most likely all other down-ballot races winable and wide open," he said.

One Democrat who says he's studying the race, Attorney General Jim Mattox, was not available to comment Tuesday, aides said.

But Mattox issued a written statement Monday night that said, "I was not looking forward to a race against Bill Hobby ... I am relieved he will not be making the race.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said Hobby's decision "creates a real vacuum. It's obvious Texans are going to be looking for new faces and new leadership.

Mauro, first elected in 1982, admits he would like to run for governor someday. But echoing the comments of other potential candidates, he said it is too early to decide.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, widely considered a possible gubernatorial candidate, said the next election is more than three years away.

"It is far too early for a definitive comment now on my part," Cisneros said, although he added, "I want to assure those friends and supporters who are encouraging me to consider this an opportunity, that I will take their comments under advisement."

State Treasurer Ann Richards, under speculation as a possible candidate for either the governor's or lieutenant governor's races, was out of town Tuesday.

Her office issued a statement saying, 'My immediate plans are to follow the lieutenant governor's advice: use reason and common sense to get on with the task of guiding Texas through the next critical years. If I can meet his high standards in public office, my political future will take care of itself."

Another Democrat, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, says he is looking at two 1990 races - governor and U.S. Senate.

"Hobby dropped out and eight dropped in," Hightower said.

Analysts, investors speculate on what's on Pickens' mind

SEATTLE (AP) — The price of Boeing Co. stock rocketed 151/2 percent higher as industry analysts speculated on Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens' intentions toward the nation's No. 1 airplane manufacturer.

But Pickens, who earlier indicated an interest in buying up to 15 percent of Boeing stock, remained mum Tuesday on what his plans might be Boeing's revelation Monday afternoon of Pickens' interest and Boeing's efforts to defend itself against a possible hostile acquisition propelled the company's stock to the top of the New York Stock Exchange's mostactive list Tuesday, up $7.121/2 to $53.75 a share.

Officials at Pickens' Mesa Limited Partnership in Amarillo, Texas, did not return telephone calls from The Associated Press

Monday or Tuesday. Boeing said Mesa filed notice June 29 under antitrust laws that it intended to acquire more than $15 million of Boeing stock. Unless the government intervenes, by the end of a 30-day waiting period, Mesa would be permitted to buy up to 15 percent of Boeing's 155.37 million outstanding

On Monday, Boeing said it had set up a "poison pill" defense against a hostile takeover. Boeing's plan allows shareholders to buy additional stock in the event of an acquisition attempt, aimed at making a takeover prohibitively expensive. A number of analysts said Pickens may only want to invest in Boeing, not to try to take it over. They pointed out that Pickens might not have the billions of dollars needed to wrest Boeing away, and that Boeing would put up a tough fight. In addition, some said the government might intervene if Boeing, a key defense contractor and the dominant company in a major U.S. industry, were in danger of being seriously weakened.

"I think Boeing would be a very, very tough one to pick on if he wanted to make an easy buyout," said Paul Nisbet, analyst with Prudential-Bache in New York

Mesa and Pickens "certainly don't have the kind of cash or assets that would be necessary to acquire a Boeing," Nesbit said. "I can only guess that he's committed to an investment."

Boeing "is a very undervalued company," said analyst David Smith of Alex Brown & Sons Inc. in Baltimore. "I believe he (Pickens) realizes that undervaluation and he made an investment in it. If that brings other people into it, so be it.

The 59-year-old Pickens' previous takeover bids have been against oil companies, including Gulf Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co., Unocal Corp., and Cities Service Co. He failed to acquire any.

but made hundreds of millions of dollars when the companies either were bought out by other bidders or repurchased their own

Mesa recently amended its partnership agreement to allow it to invest outside the oil and gas industry, which has been hurt by depressed prices. Among the non-petroleum companies Mesa has invested in are Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., Burlington Northern and USX Corp.

Nisbet said Boeing is "fiercely independent" and would be fierce in defending itself.

"They don't believe anybody could do anywhere near as good a job as they could do in running their company. And they're probably right."

Forrest Coffey, Boeing's chief Washington state lobbyist, told state legislators Tuesday the company is studying what other states have done to counter takeover bids of major corpora-

"We're trying to seek all the protection we can get," Coffey said, but added Boeing has not decided whether to ask the state for legislation.

'We just don't know yet," he said. "We're taking a look at what can be done. We don't know how serious this situation is. We're looking at it to try to understand what could happen to us.

A serious bid to acquire Boeing would take anywhere from $11 billion to $18 billion, analysts esti-

"I don't think Pickens has the wherewithal to buy Boeing," said analyst Bill Whitlow of Dain Bosworth in Seattle

Boeing's major operating companies in aerospace, commercial and military planes, electronics and computers work closely with one another, and each company's products often have many elements from other units. For example, the AWACS surveillance plane, built by Boeing Aerospace Co., uses a Boeing Commercial Aircraft Co. airframe, electronics from Boeing Electronics Co. and computer design from Boeing Computer Services.

Whitlow said that because Boeing's operating companies work so closely, it wouldn't make sense for a raider to try to profit by selling off operating units.

You would essentially destroy the value of the company," he There's also the question of what the government might do to protect what Smith describes as 'a national treasure."

Boeing is a keystone of the aerospace industry, one of the few heavy industries where the United States holds a decisive edge over foreign competition.

Boeing was founded 71 years ago as a small seaplane company, and made its reputation in the 1920s with fighter planes.

'exas educator up for education post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dallas schools superintendent Linus Wright will be nominated for the Education Department's No. 2 post, undersecretary of education, according to administration sources.

Wright, 60, is one of the best known and highest paid school superintendents in America. He will be nominated by President Reagan following security checks and routine paperwork, said the sources, who insisted on anonymity

Wright, if confirmed by the Senate, would take over the post vacated when Gary Bauer moved to a White House policy slot in the

In nine years at the helm of the 135,000student Dallas system, Wright has earned a reputation as an adroit manager and academic innovator.

Contacted by telephone on Tuesday, he declined to confirm that Reagan had chosen him for the job, but acknowledged, "I know I've had discussions and I'm under consideration

Wright, who makes $104,000 a year, would take a pay cut to $82,500 as undersecretary. The nomination was going to go to Harvard economics professor Glenn Loury, but he withdrew his name from consideration in June for personal reasons

Wright has opposed administration proposals for tuition tax credits and vouchers for private schools. He has, however, pushed magnet schools to give parents more choices within public education. He also has championed efforts to narrow the gap between the standardized test performance of white students and that of blacks and Hispanics.

He has headed the Dallas public school system, one of the nation's 10 largest, since 1978 after working as a top business manager for schools in Houston, Lubbock and San Angelo.

Wright had planned to retire this spring after his 60th birthday, but the Dallas school board asked him to stay for the 1987-88 school year. It is already searching for a successor.

As in nearly all major U.S. cities, most students in the Dallas schools belong to ethnic minorities, with about half black and 30 percent Hispanic. Dallas students' scores on standardized tests have been rising and the ethnic gaps closing in recent years

Asked what his dealings with Secretary of Education William J. Bennett have been, Wright replied, "I haven't had any."

But Wright, who said he is a registered Republican, said Bennett has "established a philosophy for education that is good for the country, that we need to return to the basics, that we need to return the three C's to education ... content, character and choice.'

Minister to face grand jury in wife's attack a Tyler nursing home.

DALLAS (AP) — Prosecutors and police hope the formal setting of a grand jury hearing will help elicit new information about the near-fatal choking of the wife of a Dallas

Among seven people subpoenaed before the panel today is the Rev. Walker Railey, who has refused to talk to police about the case for 14 weeks.

However, Assistant District Attorney Norman Kinne, who asked for the hearing, and police investigators may be disappointed again. Railey's attorney, Doug Mulder, has not said whether the former senior pastor of First United Methodist Church of Dallas will answer questions posed by grand jurors. Railey's 38-year-old wife, Margaret "Peggy" Railey, has been in a coma since the April 22 assault and is now being cared for in Railey has said he returned home from studying at a Southern Methodist University library and found his wife about 12:40 a.m. But police said they have "indisputable evidence" contradicting Railey's account of his whereabouts that night.

Kinne said that the use of a grand jury as an investigative tool in an attempted murder case is extraordinary. But, he said, "This is an unusual case.'

Texas law requires all subpoenaed witnesses to appear before the grand jury, but a witness has the constitutional right not to give any evidence that might be self-

Also subpoenaed to appear before the panel are Railey's psychiatrist at Timberlawn Psychiatric Center; Lucy Papillon, a Dallas psychologist and a friend of the Raileys who was called twice from the minister's mobile phone the night of the attack; the Rev. Howard Grimes, an associate minister of First United Methodist and leader of a group which tried to retrace Railey's steps the night of the attack; the Rev. Spurgeon Dunnam, editor of the United Methodist Reporter; a librarian who saw Railey at SMU the night of the attack; and a custodian of records.

Nine days after the attack, Railey took an overdose of pills in a hospital room near his wife, just before police investigators were scheduled to question him. After recovering from the overdose, he voluntarily admitted himself to Timberlawn where he underwent six weeks of treatment

Trade deficit isn't sign of weakness

The protectionists are on the warpath again. They are alarmed at recent figures that indicate the trade deficit edged up to $13.3 billion.

The Senate is working on protectionist legislation that the Reagan administration has threatened, sensibly, to veto. The House already has approved an even more destructive kamikaze attack on sound econo-

Frowns House Speaker Jim Wright: "Strong medicine is needed. The 8 percent jump in the trade deficit for May underlines the need for enacting trade reform legislation as soon as possible." Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen concurs in such folly: the numbers in May are bad news. There's no other way to put it.' But there is another way to put it. The trade deficit, if it indicates anything, shows the underlying strength of the American economy. After all, only a prosperous nation can buy imports

The false impression these politicians give is that diabolical foreigners, especially those with yellow skins, are plotting to subvert American industry. But if Congress really wants to look for a culprit it should inspect a mirror.

Most of the small trade deficit increase for May stems from a rise in petroleum imports. Yet the wrongly named "windfall profits" tax imposed by Congress stifles American oil production. And Congress prohibits exports to Japan of Alaskan North

Next, consider the "voluntary" quotas on the numbers of Japanese car imports. The Reagan administration still imposes them, but only to placate Congress. These quotas actually worsen the trade deficit. Japanese car imports rose to $2.03 billion in May from $1.71 billion in April. The reason: Because quotas limit the number of cars Tokyo sends us, they send us their most expensive models.

The result: Fewer cars for Americans, at higher profits for the Japanese. Maybe Wright and Bentsen should take courses in remedial math. Just what do our congressmen see as they gaze out from Capital Hill? Probably only the glare from government buildings. The view from anywhere else in the country is one of vibrant economic health: ■ Unemployment is down to about 6 percent, the lowest level this decade.

■ Exports — the flip side of imports — increased from $20.1 billion in April to $20.4 billion in May.

For the first half of 1987, industrial production increased at a 2.4 percent annual rate, a big jump from the 1.0 percent of 1986.

What we're seeing, really, is an economic boom caused by the 1986 tax reform. American companies are pumping out more goods; American workers are working harder and earning more. So it's not surprising they have more money to buy imports. This is supposed to be "bad news?"

Protectionist fever would end all these good trends quicker than you can say Great Depression. If Congress really wants to help, it can. It should end current production limits on American industry by further cutting taxes and repealing laws that restrict trade. Any other course leads to stagnation or recession.

Brennan's will prevails in term

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court handed down its last opinions of the 1986-87 term on Friday, June 26. Except for the court's opinion in the California beachfront case, none of the final decisions amounted to much. Reporters were about to hang up their telephones and go quietly when the stunning announcement came that Justice Lewis Powell was retiring. The following Wednesday, President Reagan nominated Robert Bork to succeed Powell. Since then the noise has been deafening.

The hubbub has effectively drowned out most of the term's-end commentary we have come to expect. It was not a spectacular term, but the term had a character all its own. To a remarkable degree this was Bill Brennan's term. The 81-year-old justice had one helluva time.

This was not expected. When the term began last October, with William Rehnquist in the chair of the chief justice and Antonin Scalia newly seated, conservatives looked forward to happy times. It was widely speculated that Rehnquist would prove more effective than his predecessor in welding a conservative majority. We fondly assumed that Scalia would vote consistently with Rehnquist on the big ones. Sandra Day O'Connor and Byron White could be relied upon. The new chief could work his presuasive charm upon Powell or Stevens to pick up a swing vote. In October the prospects looked

It didn't quite work out that way. By my count, the court disposed of 155 cases in all, 146 by signed opinions and nine by "per curiams." In the 151 cases in which they both sat, Rehnquist and Scalia voted oppositely no fewer than 19

James J. Kilpatrick

voted abainst Rehnquist 26 times. By contrast, Brennan and his sidekick, Thurgood Marshall, disagreed only seven times in the whole term. It was Brennan who proved to be the big persuader

True, a statistical case can be made that Brennan and his liberal colleagues lost more than they won, but the figures are misleading. John Paul Stevens cast 55 dissenting votes, Brennan 53 and Marshall 52. The court divided 5-4 in 44 cases. By my rough reckoning, the conservatives won 24 of these and the liberals only 14 (six were draws). What is of greater importance is that Brennan's troops prevailed in most of the biggies.

Brennan wrote the majority opinion in the case of Alabama's state police; here he upheld a draconian plan to compel promotion of black troopers. In early June Brennan marshaled five votes in support of Maine's plant closing law. On June 15, to the dismay of Rehnquist, Powell, O'Connor and Scalia, Brennan pushed the doctrine of "freedom of speech" to an outer limit in a case involving the sassing of police officers. A week or so later, Brennan pushed the boundary times. O'Connor also left the reservation: She back again: He upheld the right of a Texas con-door.

stable to applaud the attempted assassination of President Reagan.

Look at the record: Brennan wrote 16 majority opinions during the term. Rehnquist dissented to 12 of them. Brennan kept his troops together to liberalize election laws, to uphold deliberate discrimination against qualified men in employment, to expand federal law on hand-icaped persons, and to nullify Louisiana's law requiring "equal time" for creationism if evolution is taught in the public schools. All in all, it was quite a year for the high court's feistiest old gentleman.

Brennan came to the court on Oct. 16, 1956, by appointment from President Eisenhower. By the end of the 1987 term next summer, only eight members in the history of the court will have served longer than he. Oliver Wendell Holmes served on the court until he was 91; Hugo Black served until he was 85. Brennan appears to be in excellent health, and he has a twinkle in his eye. The way he's going, he could beat them all.

Not long ago I ran into Justice Brennan as we were leaving a large party. I made my manners, and he recalled an incident I had quite forgotten from the fall of 1956. I was then editor of the Richmond (Va.) News Leader, and I was opposing his confirmation.

'Do you know," he reminisced, "that you were one of the very few editors who took the trouble to read some of my opinions on the New Jersey Supreme Court?" I made modest murmuring noises. "And do you know what you said about them?" I shook my head. "You said they read like pages from a plumber's manual!" And Brennan laughed all the way to the coatroom

citizens increase

By Ben Wattenberg

I have uncovered the way to separate people who understand American politics from those who don't. Those who don't understand our politics use the word "impossible." Consider: A book of mine has recently been published called The Birth Dearth (Pharos Books). Its theme is elemental: People in the United States and the whole modern Western world are having children at well below the rates necessary to keep a population from declining over an extended period of time. I think that such very low fertility rates can harm us economically, geopolitically and personally. I recommend in the book that action be taken, some of it governmental, to make it financially easier for young couples to have children. Among the ideas I discuss are higher standard tax exemptions for children, child allowances, paid maternity leave, day care and forgiving some repayment of college loans for those who are having children.

Some of my critics have said low birth rates are not really a problem and Wattenberg is a dolt. Fair enough; it's a complicated and controversial issue. If dolts want to call me a dolt, I can live with it; after all, I'm not one of those thin-skinned authors

It is another sort of criticism that bothers me. Yes, some critics say, there is a problem; yes, it would be good to do something about it, but -- it's too expensive, the Congress will never vote for it, it's impossible.

I ask you to forget the merits of the argument; forget whether pro-natal government policies are needed. Concentrate on that word "impossible" as used by the nay-sayers. What does it say? That even if we recognize a problem, we free people can't act to deal with it. Distilled, it is a view that says democracy doesn't work. But it does. And people who say it doesn't, or can't, don't understand the situation.

Consider: Back in the 1930s, the idea of a Social Security system was raised. Pensions for the elderly would be a good idea, the nay-sayers might have said, but it's too expensive, the Congress won't fund it, the voters won't want to pay the taxes for it it's politically impossible. Today surprise! - we spend over $200 billion a year on Social Security, and congresspersons go into tantrums if it is suggested that benefit increases should go up less quickly. What happened? Voters were alerted to a real problem - elderly poverty - and responded in a decent way.

Turn the hands of the clock ahead to the early 1960s. Rachel Carson writes a book called Silent Spring. She maintains that our environment is being poisoned. It is clear that, over time, it will cost many hundreds of billions of public and private dollars to clean up. What would the nay-sayers think about that? Good idea, but too costly, the Congress will never approve it, it's impossible. But today politicians fall all over themselves to spend more to do environmental good things. Why? The environment has become, as they say, a motherhood issue.

Or take an issue seen to be on the conservative side of the spectrum: national defense. After World War II, America disarmed. But the Soviets were on the move. Geopolitical thinkers said that the shattered forces of democracy would have to be led by the United States. The costs would be enormous. What would the nay-sayers say? Important idea, but too costly. the Congress wouldn't approve, impossible. Today we spend $300 billion a year for national defense. We don't spend it because we like to but because we perceive that we must do it.

So: Don't say impossible. The record is clear. Democratic peoples can do what they think it is necessary to

Now an idea is surfacing, and not just in my book to be sure, to make motherhood a motherhood issue. It may not happen, but if it doesn't, it won't be because it can't happen. Watch this space for details.

Report alleges human rights abuses by Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) - An agency set up by congressional order to monitor the U.S.-backed rebels in Nicaragua says the Contras have committed human rights abuses, including execution of civilians and forced recruitment.

In investigating 22 "major cases of alleged human rights abuse," the Nicaraguan Association For Human Rights has concluded that the Contras executed eight Sandinista prisoners, killed eight civilians and forcibly recruited four Mennonites, according to a report obtained by The Associated Press. Among the civilians listed as killed in the report was American Benjamin Linder.

In addition, a since-arrested Contra commander conscripted 53 Indians through "psychological pressure," the association's report said.

The association also received 200 allegations of human rights violations by Nicaragua's ruling Sandinistas. Since the association's mandate is only to monitor the Contras, the Sandinista cases were referred to organizations such as the human rights commission of the Organization of American States.

Several of the 22 Contra cases are still under investigation, and include allegations of kidnappings, killings and deaths of children and unarmed indi-

The human rights group, which operates independently, was established last fall as a congressional condition for resumption of U.S. aid to the Contras. State Department officials have been pressing the Contras to improve their human rights record.

One administration official said Tuesday that the Contra leaders will have to address the discipline issues that have led to some Contra troops acting "like marauding Vikings." The official, speaking on condition of anonymity called the human rights report "a positive, constructive step that's pointed out deficiencies."

The report cited a "discernible tendency" among some Contra leaders to view human rights "as little more than a public relations effort.'

But Contra spokesman Bosco Matamoros on Tuesday denied that statement, saying the rebel leadership is committed to human rights observ-

He called the association's findings a "very important report." He said its recommendations for investigation and prosecution by the Contra military command "will be presented to our legal advisers. They will decide if there are merits to continue the investigation" in

In the case of Linder, who worked on hydroelectric projects in Nicaragua, the report concluded he died in a gunfire-and-grenade ambush by Contras who were told by a "courier" there was a Sandinista patrol with a Cuban and another foreigner in the area. Participants gave conflicting testimony as to whether Linder fired a weapon, the re-

Contra participants were interviewed but the Nicaraguan government refused to cooperate, so investigators could not corroborate a government coroner's report that Linder was shot point blank in the head. The Linder investigation is considered incomplete, the report said.

Democratic hopefuls get look-over by governors

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich. (AP) - Eight Democratic presidential hopefuls are getting the look-over today from the nation's Democratic governors, who want a greater say in selecting their party's nominee than they had four years ago.

The presidential contenders and most of the 26 Democratic governors flew in to this Great Lakes island resort Tuesday afternoon and spent the evening socializing before a morning-long private

Although all the announced and likely presidential candidates said they would attend, none said he expected to walk away with endorsements on the strength of this meeting alone.

"This is one of those events that attains critical mass, and one must attend," said Tennessee U.S. Sen. Albert Gore, who announced his bid last

"I don't expect to come out of there with political support — that comes later," said Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri. "This is just to meet people.

Jesse Jackson said it was a get-together session that he would use to urge greater equity in the state delegate selection process.

"You look for relationships, you look for the comfort level, you look for how you share the delegates," Jackson said. "We need to form some good

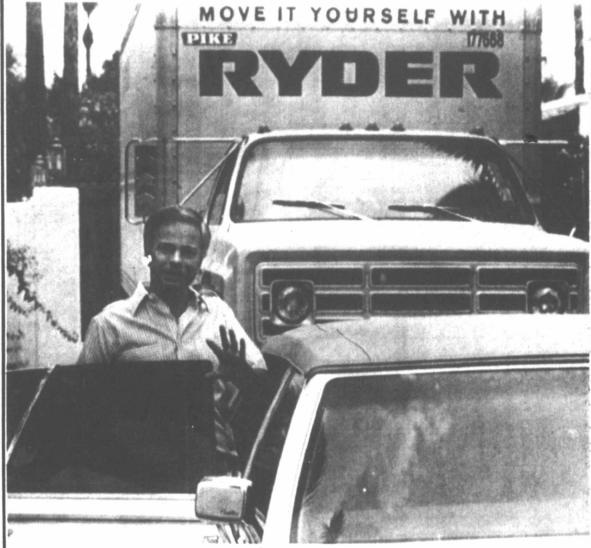

Other presidential hopefuls planning to attend are former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, Delaware U.S. Sen. Joseph Biden, Colorado U.S. Rep. Patricia Schroeder, Illinois U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, and one governor, Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts. Ms. Schroeder and Jackson have not formally announced their candidacies.

Most of the governors flew by helicopter from Traverse City after Tuesday afternoon's conclusion of the four-day National Governors' Association annual meeting. Republican governors don't meet with their party's presidential hopefuls until

The National Governors' Association ended its meeting earlier Tuesday after passing a policy statement calling for more spending to battle AIDS, including increased testing, and elevating New Hampshire Republican Gov. John Sununu to chairman for one year.

Sununu announced plans to focus the group's efforts on ways to restore the states' authority, which he said has been eroded by Congress and federal courts. Sununu said he will name a task force of governors to study the issue, and suggested they might recommend a proposed constitutional amendment to strengthen states' rights.

Superpowers move closer to arms control agreement

By BARRY SCHWEID AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Compromises on arms control are carrying the United States and the Soviet Union toward a third superpower summit meeting, one that would bring General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev to Washington on his first

But despite the major strides taken by the two sides on Tuesday, at least three important issues are unresolved. The main one is a dispute over equipping West German medium-range missiles with U.S. nuclear warheads.

The Soviets want the warheads destroyed along with all other superpower weapons with ranges of 315 miles to 3,125 miles. The Reagan administration calls the demand "mischievous" and says any such decision is for the West German government to take.

The other major unresolved issues are the schedule for a missile withdrawal by the two sides and whether American monitors will be allowed to make checks on Soviet installations without much warning

The Soviets' willingness to eliminate all intermediate-range missiles eases what had been a primary U.S. concern: how to make sure a treaty is not being violated.

"If you are down to zero and you see one you know there's a violation," chief U.S. negotiator Max M. Kampelman said in an interview last

The process of compromise began quietly several weeks ago. It centered on the 33 triple-warhead SS-20 missile launchers and 50 SS-12 shorter-range rockets the Soviets proposed to keep in Asia even while all other U.S. and Soviet intermeidate-range missiles were destroyed.

Col. Gen. Nikolai Chervov, a senior adviser to the Soviet General Staff, approached U.S. negotiator Maynard Glitman in Geneva, where the two sides have been working on an arms control accord since 1981, with an informal offer.

Suppose, Chervov said, the Soviets agreed to remove the remaining Asian rockets. Would the United States promise not to convert cruise missiles to be taken out of Western Europe into sealaunched missiles or to modify Pershing II missiles into shorter-range weapons?

Glitman reported the offer to Washington and was instructed to tell Chervov it sounded like a good idea. He did within a few days. But despite the positive U.S. response, the negotiations went into a slowdown at the beginning of July, and there they remained until Gorbachev gave an interview last week to an Indonesian journal. He said he would destroy all the Asian missiles.

thereby yielding to the proposal Reagan first made in 1981 for a total ban on intermediate-range mis-In exchange, the United States had to agree not to store 100 warheads in Alaska, within range of Soviet territory.

The deal was acceptable, and on Monday Glitman notified the Soviets formally in Geneva. The decision to go to "zero-zero" — meaning there would be no U.S. or Soviet missiles in the shorter- and medium-range (intermediate) categories — met two American concerns. One is that the missiles would no longer be targeted on China, and on two major U.S. allies — Japan and South Korea. The other is that a treaty would be easier to Glitman, in accepting Gorbachev's offer, also accepted the concessions sought by the Soviet leader and by Chervov in his informal proposition.

Movie crew filming at cemetery

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Seeing a film crew making an automobile commercial in the cemetery where his wife is buried was just too much for Joseph Hallam.

"When you put somebody you love in that ground, you don't want anybody fooling around with it," said Hallam, 62. "It's the code of decency. There are some things you do and things you don't do. Everybody knows that.'

Hallam, who buried his wife in June at the Oakwood Cemetery in suburban Chatsworth, complained earlier this month to the cemetery's general manager. He didn't get very far.

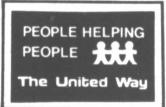

There's no law against the use of cemeteries as backdrops for movies, TV shows and ads, he was told. Not only that — the cemetery welcomes the "Really, our families have been elated that Oakwood has been selected to make a film," the cemetery's general manager, Norman Ruppert, said recently. "They feel that adds prestige."

Ruppert said Hallam is the first to complain about the practice. Not all cemetery operators share Oakwood's view. The Forest Lawn Memorial Parks ban movie. TV and commercial filming at its four cemeteries for considerations of privacy, said spokesman Dick Fisher. But at least a dozen Los Angeles area cemeteries FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) -Oscar-winning director John Huston was in stable condition today after an ambulance transported him to a hospital for treatment of emphysema, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Huston, who turns 81 next week, was taken to Charlton Memorial Hospital on Tucsday while en route to a filming ses vion at a Newport, R.I., mansion for the movie "Mr. North."

He was admitted for complications of his emphysema and was in stable condition today, hospital spokeswoman Dorothy Allen said.

Huston spokesman Ernie Anderson told the Boston Herald, 'His condition is grave but there are hopeful signs, since he hasn't contracted pneumonia."

Asked about Anderson's comment, Ms. Allen said: "I can only say that I don't know where - I suppose there are a lot of people making comments. The hospital statement, however, is that his condition is stable at this time."

Huston, who was to act in the film, co-wrote the screenplay and is the movie's executive pro-

Demonstrators fired on by police as Gandhi arrives to sign pact

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) -Police fired on demonstrators in at least four cities today as Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi arrived for the signing of a controversial pact to end four years of ethnic civil war.

Police said they fired on protesters because they violated a nationwide curfew imposed Tuesday after riots that left at least 19 dead.

Residents of the town of Amparai, southeast of Colombo, told The Associated Press by telephone today that suspected Tamil rebels had massacred six Sinhalese villagers Tuesday at Mahanagapura village, 35 miles away. There was no official confirmation.

Gandhi and his wife, Sonia, went to the presidential palace for an official welcome ceremony which was boycotted by Sri Lanka Prime Minister Ranasinghe Premadasa. Government sources said Premadasa was expressing reservations about the Indian-mediated accord, to be signed this afternoon by Gandhi and Sri Lankan President Junius R. Javewardene

The accord would end the war between the Sri Lankan government and Tamil rebels, who began fighting in 1983 for a separate homeland.

Tamils, who comprise 18 percent of Sri Lanka's 16 million population, say they are discriminated against by the majority Buddhist Sinhalese. Nearly all Tamils follow Hinduism, the predominant religion of India, which has a large Tamil community.

On the southern outskirts of Colombo, thousands of Sinhalese were blocked by police fire from entering the city to protest Gandhi's visit and the accord, police

Former Chernobyl officials found guilty

CHERNOBYL, U.S.S.R. (AP) - Six former officials and technicians at the Chernobyl power plant were found guilty today in history's worst nuclear accident and sentenced to terms of up to 10 years in labor camp.

Thirty-one people were killed when an explosion and fire tore through the power station's No. 4 reactor, triggering a huge leak of Soviet officials blamed the April 26, 1986 accident on human error, saying the reactor blast was due to an unauthorized experiment during which workers flouted safety regula-

The accident spread clouds of radiation through the world, and tens of thousands of people were evacuated from the Chernobyl

Among those accused of repeatedly violating rules designed to ensure security at the power station were former plant director Viktor P. Bruykhanov, former chief engineer Nikolai M. Fomin, and Fomin's assistant, Anatoly S. Dyatlov.

All three were fired after the accident and jailed while the charges against them were investigated.

Also accused were Yuri A. Laushkin, a senior engineer and atomic energy inspector at reactor No. 4, shift director Boris V. Rogozhkin, and the chief of reactor No. 4, Alexander P. Kovalenko.

All the defendants but Laushkin were charged under Article 220 of the Ukrainian criminal code with violations of security measures in enterprises where explosions may result. That charge carries a maximum 10year prison sentence

All were found guilty of all the charges against them except Fomin, who was found not guilty of abusing his power.

The verdict against the six was believed to mark the first time nuclear power plant officials in any country had been held criminally responsible for failing to ensure safety at their installations.

More than 200 Soviets suffered acute radiation sickness because of the accident at the power station 80 miles north of Kiev.

Most of the 135,000 people evacuated from the northern Ukraine and southern Byelorussia because of the giant radioaction leak are still unable to return to their homes.

Bruykhanov, who was accused by the court of being chiefly responsible for the accident, was sentenced to the maximum 10-year term in labor camp for gross violations of safety rules.

Fomin and Dyatlov, his former deputy, were sentenced to the maximum 10-year terms in labor camp for violating safety

Rogozhkin was sentenced to five years in labor camp for violating safety rules and given a two-year concurrent sentence for negligence and unfaithful execution of his responsibilities. Kovalenko was given a three-year term in labor camp for gross violations of safety rules, while Laushkin was sentenced to a twoyear term.

Laushkin was charged with violating article 167 of the Ukrainian code, which stipulates a maximum two-year prison term for negligence or unfaithful execution of respon-

The dispatching of Raimond K. Brize, a deputy chairman of the Soviet Supreme Court, to hear the case meant that the verdict can be appealed only to the Supreme Soviet, the nation's nominal parliament.

The trial, which began on July 7, was held in a makeshift courtroom of Chernobyl's

Substitute reduced calorie salad dressing for regular salad Combine ingredients; mix dressing.

Food safety should be a concern for anyone who is preparing and packing foods for a picnic. Summer's heat and high temperatures create an environment that encourages the growth of organisms in food that can cause food spoilage and food poisoning.

Here are some tips for preparing and packing foods for your picnic outing:

 Always wash your hands before beginning any food preparation. Keep counters, work surfaces and utensils, such as knives and cutting boards,

 Wash fresh produce thorougly before slicing, dicing or chopping it for salads and other recipes.

 Select foods that travel well and pack them properly. Cold foods should be well-chilled before packing in an insulated picnic cooler. Pack and store hot foods in insulated containers, too. At the picnic site, protect coolers from the sun.

 Do not use the same cutting surface for raw and cooked foods. For example, wash cutting surface in hot, soapy water after cutting up uncooked chicken. Be especially careful about washing wood cutting boards; more food particles can be absorbed into wood than laminate boards. Uncooked chicken and fresh produce can be the source of salmonella and other organisms that cause food spoilage and food poisoning.

 Remember, food which may not appear to be spoiled can contain harmful bacteria. Salads and sandwiches prepared with salad dressing should be well chilled before packing in a cooler and kept chilled until ready to serve.

Some salad dressing's high acidity level actually slows the bacterial growth which causes food to spoil. However, it's still important to follow the food handling practices suggested

• To retain the crispness of lettuce for sandwiches and prevent soggy fillings, pack sandwich extras such as lettuce and sliced tomatoes separ-

 Condiments and dressings in plastic containers are ideal for picnics. Keep them cool, too, following manufacturer's instructions.

Farm wife begs compassion for all abandoned city pets

DEAR ABBY: Please print this as next time around. a service to all abandoned pets. Two days ago a mother beagle and her pup arrived on our doorstep in 96degree weather, starved and almost dead from thirst. We had heard that these two dogs were in the neighborhood. My husband got his gun and quickly put them both out of their misery. This isn't the first time he's had to do this sort of thing.

Many people think we farmers are thrilled to take in all the dogs and cats you city people don't want. We have as many pets as we can care for and do not need yours. So, please take them to the Humane Society rather than condemn them to a miserable death from starvation and/or thirst. Use your heads, and have compassion for the helpless! PET SYMPATHIZER, HOLLANDALE, WIS.

DEAR SYMPATHIZER: You, who allowed your husband to kill the mother and pup without even trying to save them, call yourself "Pet Sympathizer"? Starving, thirsty animals have been nursed back to health, you know. A truly "compassionate" person would have made some effort to save them.

Please call your local Humane Society, or a veterinarian in your area for a pet rescue group referral, should an abandoned animal again find its way to vour door.

DEAR ABBY: We have a wealthy friend who didn't have any luck getting his book published, so he is now in the process of publishing it himself. He announced that he is going to give each of his friends an autographed copy as a gift, and at the same time ask each friend to purchase five copies to give away as

Some of us think it's tacky of him to impose such a purchase on his friends, and when the time comes, I feel that for his sake, I should tell him so. Some of our mutual friends do not want to embarrass him, and think it's best to go along with the scheme. We are in a dilemma and will abide by your judgment.

Alzheimer's Alzheimer's Disease, sometimes confused with senility or "hardening of the arteries," is a progressive, irreversible neurological disorder that affects an estimated 2.5 million American adults, and it is the most common form of dementing illness. Dementia is a loss of intellectual ability, or insanity, according to Webster's Third New International Dictionary. The disease was first diagnosed in 1906 by Alois Alzheimer. It affects men and women equally and usually strikes after age 65, although it appears in some patients in their 40s and 50s, and has even stricken some individuals as young as their 20s.

There is no known cause or cure for the disease, although suspected causes include a genetic predisposition, a slow virus or other infectious agent, environmental toxins such as aluminum, and immunologic changes.

No single clinical test evi identify Alzheimer's Disease. Before diagnosing the disease, other conditions must be excluded, including potentially reversible conditions such as depression, adverse drug reactions, metabolic changes, nutritional deficiencies and head injuries.

Recommended tests for those suspected of having the disease include physical, neurological, psychological and psychiatric examinations, and laboratory studies including blood studies, computerized tomography (CT scan), electro-encephalography (EEG) and sometimes studies of the spinal fluid. Confirmation of the presence of Alzheimer's Disease requires examination of brain tissue, which is usually performed at an autopsy. Short of this, the condition can only be inferred from symptoms and ruling out of other causes of those symptoms.

The disease usually progresses over a period of several years, and total care may be necessary near the end of this time. Recommended treatment includes appropriate medication, which can lessen agitation, anxiety and unpredictable behavior; improvement of sleeping patterns; treatment for depression;

physical exercise and social activity; proper nutrition; health maintenance; and a calm and well-structured environment. Symptoms of Alzheimer's Disease include a gradual memory loss, decline in ability to perform routine tasks, impairment of judgment, disorientation, personality change, difficulty in learning and loss of language skills. There is variation in the rate of change from person to person. The disease eventually renders its victims totally incapable of caring for themselves. There are three stages that an Alzheimer's sufferer may go through. Stage One involves feelings of grief, anger, inadequacy, guilt and apprehension. Stage Two is an intensification of the emotions in Stage One, which may be felt over more basic matters than those that trigger them in Stage One. In Stage Three, the victim has lost a great deal of intellectual ability and requires physical comforts and affection more than anything else. Barker's mother lived 10 years with the disease before she died at age 56. His father, a minister. kept her at home as long as he

'When I was a kid 25 years ago, my aunt's husband was the first one that they realized had Alzheimer's. There are 14 brothers and sisters in Mom's family. Now 10 have had it. Mom was the second to the youngest. The youngest was a boy and now he has it. He's in his late 50s now. In the family, it hits most of them in the 45-year range," Barker

Others in the family are believed to have had the disease because of their age of death and symptoms. "My grandfather died in 1946. We're pretty sure he died of Alzheimer's Disease. "If your parent has it, you have a 50-50 chance of getting it, too," he said Loretta Rachel Jones, Aubrey Jones' wife for 53 years, died at age 74 of Alzheimer's Disease. Before her symptoms began, she was a schoolteacher at Baker Elementary School for about 40 years before retiring in 1978 at the age of 65. She had a master's degree from West Texas State University, and was active in church and Eastern Star, where she held state office for several

Mrs. Jones began showing symptoms of the disease during her last year of teaching.

"I went down every day the last half year to the schoolhouse and eavesdropped on her. She was losing her self-control," Jones

"I had discovered telltale signs of something going on that I knew wasn't right. We went to one doctor after another here. They said it was premature senility setting in, and 'you're just going to have to accept it.' The diagnostic center and two specialists in Amarillo told me the same story. Scott and White Hospital in Temple same story.

"I told them, 'I know damn well ou're wrong.

'She got so bad that I took her to Houston in 1981. That's when it was pronounced as Alzheimer's." Jones said. He took the family camper on the trip, stopping at KOA campgrounds along the way. "We stopped at a KOA camp. I got her to lay down, if I'd lay down with her. Neither of us undressed. I walked her all night long. She would sob awhile. Then she'd come to herself and say we had to go to bed. We'd get to the camper, and she'd go right back out. The next night, it was the same thing," Jones said.

In Houston, Mrs. Jones was finally diagnosed as having Alzheimer's Disease. Her husband brought her home and began to cope with the demands the disease imposes on the victim and those who care for them. "I would find her walking in the alley at night and she'd say she was going to be late for school. She eased out of bed one night and didn't wake me. She set a fire in the wastepaper basket but put it out," he said. As the disease progressed, Jones hired an assistant to help tend his wife, than had to add another. "I cleaned out the front room and set it up with an electric hospital bed, a suction machine and oxygen machine. I kept her there until there were too many com-

"I did nothing but focus on her and on how I was going to pay the bills. The cost is tremendous, Jones said. "Mama was laying in bed one night. I went in there. She was crying when I sat down. She looked up at me just as calm and says, 'I'm going to die. But I'm not afraid.' She says, 'I'm ready.

I dried her eyes, and she went to sleep. She was rational," he said. "One night, Dr. (Robert) Philips looked in on her. He said, Well, Aubrey, we've got to put her in a nursing home. We've just got to do it. There's too much to take care of.' The next night he came out again, and I finally gave up. I hadn't slept in a week

"She lasted about four months in the nursing home," he said. One of the biggest heartaches of the ordeal was the feeling of being forsaken by friends and neighbors, Jones said.

"People saw how she was going and nobody came to visit, right when she needed them and I needed them. I can count on one hand the ones that stuck. Just a visit would help.

"I haven't fallen out with Pampa. I haven't fallen out with the people. After these months, I can see the public doesn't know how to deal with people who are disturbed mentally," Jones said. Others who are experiencing

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - When it seemed there was no other way to reach the goalline, Amarillo Palo Duro quarterback William Thomas and Daingerfield receiver Steve Stutsman took matters into their own

"We should have been doing it more in the game," said Thomas, whose pin-point passing rallied the North to a 16-13 victory over the South Tuesday night in the Whataburger Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star football game.

"The passes were right on the money, he hit me perfectly every time," said Stutsman, a Daingerfield receiver who will attend

The North took a 10-0 halftime lead on a 23-yard field goal by Decatur's Lance Aldridge and a 24-yard run by Eastland quarterback Jason Rattan.

But the North had to overcome a nearrecord performance by Groesbeck's Frankie Smith, who scored on runs of 26 and 1 yard in the third quarter for a 13-10 lead that stood until the final seconds.

Smith, the game's most valuable offensive player, rushed 131 yards on 19 carries, the second highest rushing total in the history of Smith missed the record of 149 yards on 17 carries by Temple's Roy Pace in 1950. The South was slowed by six interceptions, three thrown by San Antonio Holmes' Wilbur-Odom and three by Kenny Ford of Port. Arthur Austin.

"It was the worst passing game I ever played," said Odom, who passed for 6,122 yards in high school. "They ran some defense that I hadn't anticipated. I didn't think they'd bethat good."

Jefferson's Terry Johnson, who had two interceptions for the North, was the game's most valuable defensive player.

Rattan, who will attend Texas Tech, hit McKinney's Randy Simmons on a 17-yard pass completion and then ran the final 24 yards for the touchdown with 27 seconds left in the first half.

The North leads the series 29-20-4. South quarterback Lance Pavlas of Tomball passed for a record 246 yards leading the South to a 17-13 victory at the 1986 game in Houston.

A crowd of 17,526 was the largest since 19,641 saw the game at Houston in 1978.

Milwaukee ends Rangers' streak

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — There was a time a few years ago when the Milwaukee Brewers employed the "Big Bang" theory to produce runs, usually in wholesale numbers. In 1982 they hit a club record 216 home runs.

But from "Harvey's Wallbangers" of the early 1980s, the Brewers have taken on a new personality and now rely more on speed than muscle to win ball games.

Tuesday night they used a little of both — two home runs, five stolen bases — in beating Texas 9-2, snapping the Rangers' fourgame win streak and helping right-hander Chris Bosio to a 7-2 record and his fourth straight vic-

"For a team not blessed with a lot of speed, we've really been able to capitalize on our opportunities and manufacture runs," said Paul Molitor, who stole two bases, hit a three-run homer and scored three runs. The Brewers have stolen 15 bases in 16 attempts in the last three games and were five-forfive for the second consecutive game against the Rangers. When pitchers have a margin of error in the speed of their delivery, you have to take advantage of it by running," said Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn. "And

Bambinos ready for journey to Plainview

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

Fifteen members of the Pampa Optimist Club National League All-Stars leave Friday at 10 a.m. from Optimist Park on their way to the 1987 Southwest Region Bambino Tournament in Plain-

Teams from three other states - Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas — will take part in the tourney also.

Since the state's inception, we all know how large an area Texas covers, geographically speaking. That, of course, is no secret. Bambino officials recognize the monstrous proportions of Texas, also, and to compensate for its size, there are three different All-Star champions from Texas Essentially, officials divided Texas up into three different 'states' or regions as they are officially called. Pampa's NL Stars won the West Texas championship. Ennis south of Dallas — has been designated East Texas champs and Boerne - near San Antonio won the South Texas rights to participate in the tournament.

Plainview will also field a team in the tournament, after automatically receiving a berth for being the host team.

From the other states, the Broken Bow All-Stars represent Oklahoma; Denham Springs will be in from Louisiana and Arkansas' team is from Silvan Hills.

Hotel costs will be avoided as each team member will stay with a "host parent."

Lee Waters, coach of the Pampa West Texas All-Stars says the families will either be parents of Plainview's All-Stars or others closely related to the Bambino program in that city.

The tournament begins Saturday, Aug. 1 with Pampa playing Oklahoma at 3 p.m. Other Saturday games include a 5:30 p.m. match up between Louisiana and South Texas and East Texas vs. Plainview at 8 p.m.

If Pampa wins the first-round game, they will play Arkansas Sunday at 3 p.m. If they lose their first-round game, Pampa plays an as of yet undetermined team Monday, Aug. 3 at 5:30 p.m.

The double-elimination tournament continues through Thursday, Aug. 6.

The winner of the Western Regional Tournament will automatically receive a berth to the National Bambino Tournament in Oakland, set to start Aug. 17.

EDISON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Long before winning the U.S. Women's Open, Laura Davies practiced doing just that.

It was back in England with her brother, Tony, the man who caddied for her Tuesday when Davies won a three-way playoff to become the fourth foreigner to win the American championship.

"As kids we used to simulate (championship) conditions," Davies, 23, said. "I was always JoAnne Carner or Nancy Lopez standing on the 18th green putting to win the U.S. Women's Open."

Tuesday, the dream came true as Davies rolled in three long birdie putts en route to a 1-under-par 71 and the victory in an 18-hole playoff with Ayako Okamoto of Japan and her childhood idol, Carner.

'When I looked over the putt at 18, I said to myself, 'My God, it's actually happening," said Davies, who finished two shots ahead of Okamoto and three in front of Carner. "To walk up 18 was a marvelous feeling. It's everything I've dreamed of. I hope it happens again, but nothing will beat the first time.

The victory continued a British streak in Open tournaments. Nick Faldo won the British Open on July 19 and Neil Coles won the British Senior Open on Sunday. Davies was to begin defense of her British Open title today.

The 42nd Women's Open began last Thursday, was extended an extra day when Sunday's round was rained out, and was forced into the playoff when the 48-year-old Carner bogeyed the 18th hole. Davies. Okamoto and Carner finished at 3-underpar 285, the only competitors in the field of 153 to break par over 72 holes at the 6,284-yard Plainfield Country Club course.

"I would have to say my putting was it for me this week," Davies said. "This week has been my best for holing out putts."

The three parred the first three holes then Davies hit a 9-iron within 20 feet and sank the putt to take the lead at No. 4 and she never trailed although Carner managed to tie when Davies bogeyed the par-4 10th hole.

When Carner, who had problems with her driver all day, bogeyed the 11th, Davies had the lead for A 20-foot birdie putt at the par-5 14th hole later stretched the lead to two shots and a 30-foot birdie putt at the par-3 15th made the bulge three shots. Davies parred the final three holes, never once playing any safe shots. "I never got the driver going today," Carner said. "It got steadily worse the last three days. I had some opportunities, but didn't make any Okamoto, 36, never got her game into gear as she saw a seond women's major slip through her hands. She lost the du Maurier Classic in Canada three weeks ago, squandering a six-shot lead in the final round "I didn't feel nervous today and maybe that's why I didn't win," Okamoto said through an interpreter. "I might have been too relaxed." Davies earned $55,000 for the victory — her first in the United States- and said she hoped to play on the LPGA Tour next year. Okamoto and Carner each earned $23,824.

FAA fining Midland for two near collisions

MIDLAND (AP) — City officials are fighting a $5,000 fine levied by the Federal Aviation Administration for what the agency claims were two near collisions between rescue vehicles and planes on airport runways and other violations, officials said.

The city maintains it has not violated FAA regulations, and the City Council in closed session Tuesday decided to attempt to hold further discussions on the matter with the FAA, City Attorney David Reagan said.

City officials held an informal conference with FAA officials July 17, he said.

"At this time we're not prepared to pay any penalties," Reagan said.

In a March 13 letter, the agency said, "Midland has failed to operate and maintain and provide facilities, systems, procedures and sufficient trained personnel" required by its airport operating certificate.

bad information and an incomplete investigation. In the letter, FAA regional counsel Hays Hettinger cited three incidents that prompted the complaint, said Mitch Barker, FAA public affairs specialist in Fort Worth.

If the council refuses to pay the fine, the Department of Transportation agency may take the case to trial in U.S. District Court, Reagan said. The FAA cited an incident on April 15, 1986, when the agency said a Crash Fire Rescue Vehicle stopped beyond a designated runway safety line while a Boeing 737 was departing. The vehicle had previously been warned by the air control tower to stop to avoid a collision with the jet, the agency said

But Reagan said there was no compromise of "That vehicle stopped on that particular day and there was no question it was going to stop," he said. 'We will admit our front wheels rolled over the

Spanish mariner preparing voyage of homage, peace

MEXICO CITY (AP) - An explorer will be off on one of his most ambitious expeditions next month when he sets sail from the Mexican Gulf Coast for Spain in a 15th-century-style caravel.

Vital Alsar, 53, a native of Spain and a resident of the Mexican Gulf Coast city of Veracruz for the past 30 years, says he also hopes to rescue the spirit of romance he believes is alive but ailing in the Alsar, who once spent 483 days with a crew floating from Ecuador to Australia on a balsa raft, also says he hopes to get Pope John Paul II to board the ship, in his role as "the world's leading man of peace.

The explorer has also led two expeditions by raft and on foot through the upper Amazon region and across the Andes Mountains, later building small galleons and rowing out to the Atlantic.

The voyage, scheduled to begin Aug. 23 from Veracruz, is in some ways the most ambitious because of Alsar's hopes for its international influ-

"It is a romantic example of peace combined with a romantic esthetic that I believe is being lost in the world," Alsar told reporters Tuesday.

About eight years ago, with the 500th anniversary of Christopher Columbus' historic voyage looming, the idea of building a replica of Columbus' Santa Maria "was born in my heart," Alsar said.

No plans were used in Columbus' day, but Spanish engineers were able to design the desired ship based on Alsar's drawings. For 51/2 years, more than 100 carpenters and other craftsmen have been building the vessel on a beach in the town of Alvarado, near Veracruz.

More than 30 kinds of tropical wood have been used in building the 108-foot ship, which is outfitted with modern navigational equipment and an auxiliary motor not only because of legal requirements but because "it is crazy to sail without it," Alsar said

The Marigalante, as the ship is called after the original name of the Santa Maria, is to be launched Aug. 16 at Alvarado and, with a Alsar at the helm and an international crew of 15 young men, to sail Aug. 23 from Veracruz.

Weather allowing, there will be stops in Miami, Philadelphia and New York City in late August and

Lease signed for island complex

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Construction of a new $38 million resort complex moved a step closer to reality when the Pleasure Island Commission signed a lease with a Florida development company.

The commission voted unanimously Tuesday to accept the lease with Cal-Merc Enterprises. Under terms of the 30-year lease, Cal-Merc will make a one-time payment to the commission of $400,000 for about 400 acres of island property. The lease includes an option after 30 years to renew the lease for another 30 years. For the second 30 years, Cal-Merc would pay one-time rent totaling 10 percent of the appraised value of all construction built on the property. Cal-Merc chairman Bill Fry said with the lease signed, his company can move ahead with putting ogether the financing of the proposed $38 million resort. He said Cal-Merc was considering financing the Pleasure Island resort together with other projects the company was developing. The complex will include two tournament-quality golf courses, a professional golf school, a 300-rom hotel and convention center and a 152room hotel. The company has under consideration a proposal to add an olympic-size swimming pool with a retractable cover and running track in efforts to attract non-golfers. The signing of the lease represents a historical turning point in the development of the island, acting commission chairman Brenda Drago said. "Now we wait for the first shovel of dirt to be turned that we all have awaited so anxiously," she said. James Black, a commission attorney, says the lease gives Cal-Merc eight months to begin construction. It provides six months from the signing to put together the financing for the project, then another month to pay the $400,000 rent, then another month to begin building, he said.

Cal-Merc still must finish a feasibility study on whether the proposed resort would be profitable, Fry said. It also would include an engineering study to determine if soil conditions on the island can handle the proposed development.

The City Council took the first step in the process of granting Cal-Merc a seven-year tax abatement for its proposed resort. A public hearing was held Tuesday morning on a proposal to set up a tax reinvestment zone on Pleasure Island.

LOS ANGELES (AP) Movie director William Friedkin's wife, television newswoman Kelly Lange, says she met Friedkin on a blind date and found that "We were made for each other.'

Ms. Lange, a news anchor at KNBC, and Friedkin were married June 7 in a ceremony presided over by California Supreme Court Justice Stanley Mosk, who worked with Friedkin as a consultant on his latest movie,"Rampage." The movie is due out in October. Friedkin, whose films include "The Exorcist" and "The French Connection," and Ms. Lange were introduced by the station's film critic, David Sheehan. "It was my only blind date that worked out," she said

It was the second marriage for both. Friedkin,

Ms. Lange, who declines to reveal her age, has a grown daughter.

SMITHFIELD, R.I. (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North has the makings of a National Football League player, says Raymond Berry, coach of the New England Patriots.

"One of the ways you get winning football teams is you get players who know how to play the game when the coaches ain't around," Berry said Tuesday. "I'd play Ollie at middle linebacker," he said, adding that he was impressed with the former National Security Council aide's toughness during the Iran-Contra affair.

"I think Ollie was an instinctive player and I think that's the kind that moves the ball," Berry said.
