Mexico plane crash kills 37

Obsolete craft plows into cars on busy street

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY — Bulldozers today cleared charred wreckage from a highway where a 1940s propeller-driven plane loaded with horses crashed into rush-hour traffic and exploded, killing at least 37 people.

The Boeing 377, described by a Boeing spokesman as virtually obsolete, was bound for Miami with 12 people and 18 horses aboard Thursday evening when it crashed. Witnesses said it began swaying as it fell, shearing the tops off trees and knocking down power lines before it plowed through bumper-to-bumper traffic on the eight-lane Mexico-Toluca Highway then slammed into a restaurant.

An investigator from the Defense Department said no cause for the crash had yet been determined.

Mexico City Police Chief Jose Domingo Ramirez Garrido Abreu said the search for bodies ended early today and that 37 people were dead. Arturo Martinez, a dispatcher for the Red Cross, confirmed that figure. Police spokesman Alejandro Ortiz said 22 people were hospitalized.

The government news agency Notimex reported 42 deaths. It wasn't immediately known how many died on the ground and on the plane.

Heavy equipment was brought in to clear the burned hulks of cars from the highway, and shortly after dawn, traffic was moving slowly along the busy thoroughfare.

Investigators and dozens of curious passers-by crowded in front of the badly damaged restaurant.

the mud near a section of fuselage. A dozen yards away, a gray crate bearing the words Animal Air Service lay in a muddy field. What appeared to be a horse blanket, badly burned, was under the crate.

A passenger who survived, horse trainer Guadalupe Pina, 42, said in a television news interview from his hospital bed that panic broke out as the plane began rocking from side to side.

Passengers screamed "God save us! Save us!" and cried as the cabin filled with smoke, Pina said.

Alejandro Perez Palma told television news he was in the kitchen of his home when the plane flew past. The impact from the crash made his house shake so violently he thought a powerful earthquake had hit, Perez said.

Residents of the Lomas Santa Fe neighborhood in the plane's flight path ran outside and watched as the plane buzzed low over their homes.

"It was obviously laboring. It looked like it wasn't going to make it, and it didn't," said Elaine Carey.

The plane crashed in a drizzle at 5:03 p.m. (7:03 p.m. EDT), seven minutes after takeoff from Mexico City's international airport, said airport general manager Carlos Padilla.

Three of the four crewmen and four passengers were being treated at three hospitals, but officials at those hospitals refused to give their conditions.

Hospital officials identified some of the victims being treated as the pilot, Rick Moore; the co-pilot, Robert Banta; the cargo master, Bryan Stuart; and passengers Pina, Federico Fernandez, Ruben Rodriguez Monterde, and his son, Ruben Rodriguez Enriquez. They provided no other details.

Notimex quoted witnesses as saying they saw a fire on the plane's right wing shortly before the crash.

School debates 14-cent tax hike

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Property owners face a 14-cent tax hike to fund a projected $11.96 million Pampa school district budget next year, according to figures released Thursday by school officials.

But because of declining property values, that tax increase still would leave a budget deficit forcing the district to dip into its reserve funds to the tune of $300,000, Superintendent Harry Griffith said during a budget workshop Thursday night.

Griffith stressed that the budget estimates are only preliminary. He said firmer figures can be expected by the board's next workshop Aug. 13.

"Don't hold us to these numbers," he said.

Although the meeting dealt mostly with revenues, Griffith presented trustees with what he called a "rough draft" of the 1987-88 budget. According to figures released Thursday night:

■ The tax rate would increase from 71.8 cents to nearly 86 cents per $100 valuation, bringing in an estimated $6.08 million. The increase means the owner of a $50,000 home would see his school taxes jump from $359 to nearly $430.

The 86-cent figure is roughly 6½ cents higher than the effective tax rate of 79.6 cents — the rate needed to raise the same amount of money as in 1986-87.

■ An additional $535,000 is expected from other local sources such as delinquent taxes, athletic gate receipts and interest on investments.

■ The district could count on receiving slightly more than $5 million in state funds, or about the same amount as in 1986-87. Griffith noted that, while state funding will remain about the same, state mandates on local school districts are increasing.

■ The school budget would increase by almost $400,000 — from $11.56 million to the projected $11.96 million.

■ Barring any changes in the projected budget, trustees would spend about $285,000 from the district's $2.65 million reserve fund balance to make up the difference, leaving a reserve balance of $2.37 million. School Business Manager Jerry Haralson has estimated that $2 million is needed in the fund balance to pay bills from the time school starts in September until tax statements are mailed in December.

Griffith defended the budget increase, saying improvements need to be made in a number of areas. He called the increase

No one questions Miami city budget

MIAMI — The city's 1987-88 budget hearing Thursday was almost unheard of.

The notices for the hearing were posted on the door of the Miami city office, the post office, the bulletin board and the first-floor door at the Roberts County Courthouse and published in the Miami Chief.

But when the meeting was set to convene at 7 p.m., there were no taxpayers there to comment. That, city officials say, is not unheard of.

There wasn't even a quorum until 24 minutes after the 30-minute hearing was supposed to begin Thursday. Mayor pro tem Joe Bill Seuhs, City Secretary Betty Anderson and council members M.J. Allison and Brent Cowan waited until others showed up.

Mayor Tom Stribling, one of the latecomers, admitted to the council that he had forgotten about the hearing and went to his son's baseball game — the last one of the season.

Council member Royce Bailey came in after Stribling.

Agency pushes regional emergency phone service

Law seeks to establish 911 in state

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

The Panhandle Regional Planning Commission is committed to implementing regional 911 emergency telephone systems, a PRPC official said Thursday at a public hearing in Pampa.

Wayne Hughes, special projects coordinator, presided at the hearing in the Gray County Courthouse, one of several hearings that the PRPC is conducting in the Panhandle to explain the 911 system. Information obtained from the hearings will be discussed at the annual PRPC assembly on Sept. 10.

Explaining the 911 legislation was Jay Stanford, representative of the Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, 9-1-1 Program, from Austin.

Stanford said House Bill 911, which becomes effective Aug. 31, is designed to implement financing programs for the 911 emergency telephone system statewide, providing "a vehicle to get 911 everywhere" in the state.

The program "hopefully will promote a regional approach," Stanford said. In the past, the 911 system has been implemented in a city-by-city and county-by-county approach. But that method "is leaving gaps" where the emergency system is not available, he said.

While generally agreeing it's a good idea to have a central emergency telephone number, city and county officials at a public hearing in Pampa Thursday had questions about implementing the program regionally.

The Panhandle Regional Planning Commission held one of its four scheduled public hearings in the Panhandle at the Gray County Courthouse to explain the regional 911 concept.

Explaining the regional concept were Wayne Hughes, special projects coordinator for the PRPC, and Jay Stanford of Austin, representative of the Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, 9-1-1 Program.

Pampa City Commissioner Ray Hupp asked Hughes if cities and counties have separate options on joining a regional 911 program.

Hughes said the separate governing entities in counties having less than 120,000 population have an option on whether to participate in the regional efforts.

He explained that a county must pass a resolution to get rural areas included in a 911 telephone system. If the resolution is not passed, then the 911 program cannot be extended beyond a city's corporate limits, assuming the city has a 911 program.

Gulf escort crew missing while tanker takes on oil

KUWAIT (AP) — The damaged supertanker Bridgeton waited to take on oil today and the U.S. Navy continued searching for three crewmen missing in the crash of a U.S. helicopter in the Persian Gulf that left another American dead.

Choppy seas Wednesday and Thursday delayed the loading of the Bridgeton and drove it away from its moorings, but shipping sources in Kuwait said the tanker was back docked at the Sea Island terminal late Thursday after spending a night anchored 10 miles off shore.

They could not confirm if it had begun taking on oil.

American divers hunted for mines Thursday on the southbound route that the Bridgeton, Gas Prince and their U.S. Navy escorts will take through the gulf.

In Tehran today, Iranian President Ali Khamenei warned the United States to pull its forces out of the "dangerous whirlpool" of the Persian Gulf or face attack by Iran.

The Thursday afternoon crash of the Navy SH-36 Sea King helicopter occurred as it was ferrying equipment and personnel to the USS LaSalle, the command ship of the U.S. Mideast Task Force, the Pentagon said.

One man was killed, five men were rescued, and the search for the missing went on through the night. One of those rescued was reported in critical condition in a hospital in Bahrain.

Pentagon sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, would not confirm a CBS News report that the rear rotor of the chopper struck the ship. "The only thing we know is that it went down fairly close to the ship," said one source.

The men involved in the crash were not identified.

The Pentagon said the LaSalle and the destroyer Kidd were patrolling the central Persian Gulf. Officials would not identify the land base, but Bahrain in the central gulf is the main staging area for the task force.

Law

fire or ambulance service — has been around for about 20 years throughout the nation but has really accelerated in the past 10 years, Stanford said. Now the Legislature, through HB-911, hopes to have the program available statewide "in the foreseeable future," he stated.

Stanford said the legislation provides three main aims in implementing the 911 program:

- a mechanism for planning through regional commissions;
- a financing plan, tentatively establishing authority to set a 50-cent monthly surcharge on phone bills; and
- a method for long-term administration through regional boards.

Stanford said the legislation gives incentives to counties to implement the system. Counties having more than 120,000 population are required to implement the 911 system; counties having less than that population have an option on whether to adopt the system.

Hughes said the PRPC is approaching cities and counties in the 23 counties (outside of Potter and Randall counties, where the system is already in effect) to ask them "to join the regional effort."

He said counties and cities joining the program will have to pass resolutions supporting the 911 system and authorizing the 50-cent surcharge for phone companies to add to monthly bills.

Hughes said the actual organization of the regional systems will be decided by boards of directors that will include government officials, emergency personnel, phone company representatives and others.

"There are many variables" in determining how the system will actually be implemented, Hughes said.

Decisions also must be made on what enhanced features to add to the 911 systems. Hughes listed three options that are available with current technology:

■ Automatic Number Identification — displays the caller's telephone number on a computer screen within the 911 answering point. In case the caller is not able to give an address, the phone number offers a reference for gaining the address.

■ Automatic Location Identification — displays the address from which the call has originated.

■ Selective Routing — provides for the 911 call to be automatically routed to the nearest jurisdiction from which the call has been placed.

Hughes said he personally favors the Automatic Location Identification as "the best way to go," though that also entails some difficulties that must be overcome.

One difficulty is that all rural homes and businesses outside corporate city limits must be mapped, with county roads given names and addresses assigned, Hughes explained. Counties would have that responsibility, he noted.

a city, Hughes said. If a county adopts the regional 911 program, cities in the county will not be included unless they also approve a resolution for participation in the regional program.

Others in the audience of about 20 questioned the addition of a 50-cent monthly surcharge that will be added to monthly phone bills to finance the regional 911 systems.

Hughes defended the fee as being a small price to pay for the system, noting it only amounts to $6 a year. "You can't even go to a movie for that," he contended.

Hughes said the 50-cent charge is the maximum rate permitted under House Bill 911 legislation for the regional 911 programs. That amount could be raised in later years, or other sources of financing could be included, he said.

Pampa Fire Chief J.D. Ray said he understood there's also a possibility of using a one-half percent tax on intrastate long-distance phone calls. Hughes said that charge could be substituted for the 50-cent fee, but added the PRPC for now is going with the surcharge instead of the tax.

Under other questioning, Hughes said county commissions — assuming the county joins the system — would have the burden of funding the program for the first three months before the surcharge is implemented and collected.

Pampa-Gray County Emergency Management Coordinator Steve Vaughn asked questions about the possibility of cities and counties forming their own 911 districts without having to join in a regional effort.

Hughes said that option is available, noting that that method has been the one used in the past for areas already having 911 systems. But under the legislation, such districts now must be formed by Jan. 1. After that date, no new districts can be formed on that basis; instead, they will have to form under HB-911 rules.

Vaughn asked if a city or county having a central emergency number system may later decide to join in the regional emergency number system. He noted that Pampa this year implemented a central emergency phone number system, using 669-1177 for police, ambulance and fire services.

Stanford said that as far as he knows, no cut-off date has been set for when cities and counties may join a regional program.

Other questions concerned how the system would affect currently existing dispatch offices.

Hughes said the program will try to use existing dispatchers and dispatch officers.

Tax

"conservative" in the face of taxable property values that have dropped from $833.4 million in 1986 to a projected $763.4 million for 1987.

Gray County Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard's figures reveal that mineral values have fallen from $112.2 million last year to only $67.4 million currently. Two years ago, Buzzard said, mineral values were $188.3 million.

"We're talking about the lives of a lot of children," Superintendent Griffith said. "We're not just talking tax rates."

"I don't think we ever want to be the kind of school district where, if a teacher comes and asks for staples, we open up a box and say, 'Here's a row.'"

Griffith said the effective tax rate last year was 82.2 cents, but trustees chose last year to keep the tax rate at 71.8 cents and fund an $800,000 deficit entirely out of surplus funds.

"By staying at 71 cents instead of going to 82, we effectively gave the citizens of Pampa a 12-percent decrease," Griffith contended. "The individual homeowners don't feel it that way, but the minerals..."

The proposed 86-cent tax rate is the maximum the board could levy without being subject to a rollback election.

Texas law allows citizens to challenge tax increases of more than 8 percent over the effective rate with a rollback election.

Griffith noted that the average 1986-87 tax rate for all school districts north of Lubbock was 81.2 cents, roughly 9 1/2 cents higher than in Pampa.

The superintendent also recommended leaving intact the local teacher salary supplements of $2,600 for a bachelor's degree and $2,800 for a master's degree. Coupled with the state's base salary of $15,200, a first-year teacher in Pampa would earn $17,800 next year.

Although the base figure hasn't increased, the state requires annual $1,140 salary increases for Texas teachers after their first year. Griffith said he opposes cutting the local supplement to offset the state-mandated raises.

However, he said he is forming a committee of Pampa teachers and administrators to study problems he sees with the salary schedule. The biggest problem, he said, is that the schedule stops rewarding teachers after they have taught for 10 years.

That affects nine Pampa teachers this year, and will affect 44 veteran teachers next year, Griffith said.

Griffith's proposed 1987-88 budget calls for increases in all areas, except guidance and transportation. The guidance and counseling budget was cut $35,000, due to a reduction in staff, Griffith said.

The transportation budget was cut nearly $80,000 by delaying the purchase of two new school buses until later in the year. Griffith said the district won't have to pay for the buses until they are delivered next year.

The City Council almost always meets on Tuesdays, not Thursdays.

The city officials waited for another 30 minutes to see if any Miami citizen would show up. State statutes dictate that public budget hearings be at least 30 minutes long.

Still, nobody came. The hearing was adjourned at about 8 p.m. with no discussion held or action taken.

Council members are expected to adopt the city budget at their next regular meeting Aug. 11 — a Tuesday.

But even then, Stribling isn't confident of a quorum. He said won't be able to make it. And, he said, two council members have expressed uncertainty about making it.

The proposed $67,435 budget is an increase of more than $1,000 from the 1987 budget. Stribling attributed the increase to dropping sales tax collections and the halting of federal revenue sharing funds, which the city used for maintenance of the dump ground.

The budget is based on a tax rate of 30 cents per $100 valuation, up 1 cent from the current tax rate. In June, the council passed a resolution broadening the ad valorem tax base to include vehicles.

Council members are also expected to adopt an $18,000 sewer fund budget.

Judge: ruling likely next week on exhumation request

LUBBOCK (AP) — A federal magistrate said he will rule next week on an insurance company's request to order the exhumation of a body to make sure that it is that of a Texas Panhandle banker who had $12 million in insurance when his plane crashed and burned last November in Kansas.

Attorneys for the family of Glen E. Lemon argue it would be futile, since there's no doubt the remains in his grave are his.

U.S. Magistrate J.Q. Warnick Jr. held a hearing Thursday's on the exhumation request of American Mutual Insurance Co., which had $1.5 million of the insurance on Lemon, 54, of Booker, Texas.

The company is trying to "break" the Lemon family and avoid paying off on the policy, said Amarillo attorney Wayne Sturdivant, representing Lemon's wife, Helaine.

Attorneys for the insurance company argued that it's highly possible Lemon staged the crash to make it look like he was dead.

A body was inside a plane that crashed and burned after takeoff from Liberal, Kan., in November. Lemon's billfold and credit cards were found in the debris, as was an Oklahoma State University class ring with Lemons' initials on it, but the body was burned beyond recognition and no autopsy was performed.

Lemon was president, chief executive officer and part owner of First Bank & Trust in Booker, an institution that regulators closed six weeks after the plane crash. The bank's operations remains under investigation.

Larry Lesh, a Dallas attorney representing American Mutual, said evidence in depositions filed on the case show that it was possible for a person to stick a dead body in the cockpit, pre-set drive levers to take off, rise to a certain height, roll to the right, then crash, as Lemon's plane did.

"We're not sure it was Glen Lemon's body found under those ashes, and we think that with the suspicious circumstances surrounding the crash, cause exists for the court to allow exhumation of his body," Lesh told the judge.

Eight lawsuits are pending by other insurance companies with similar policies on Lemon that were taken out six to eight months before the crash. Lemon had more than $12 million in life insurance when he died.

Attorneys for the Lemon family said the decision not to have an autopsy was that of the Kansas coroner and that law authorities who investigated the crash said there was no doubt it was Lemon's body.

"The widow doesn't want this body dug up and transported around between two or three pathological laboratories," Sturdivant said.

The case was filed in Amarillo federal court, but was moved to Warnick's court because U.S. Magistrate Clinton Averette of Amarillo was a U.S. attorney at the time of the plane crash and was involved in the closing of the Booker bank.

Children forget memories of tornado with day at park

ARLINGTON (AP) — Children who watched a tornado destroy their town and injure and kill relatives remembered what it was like to be kids again as they rode water chutes and roller coasters at an amusement park.

"I just didn't want to remember the tornado. I want to forget it for the day," Roman Muniz, 15, said Thursday.

"We will never forget it totally," he said. "But we need to have a good time today."

Texas Baptist Men organized the amusement park visit for 32 children from Saragosa, the mostly Hispanic community in West Texas that was destroyed by a tornado May 22, as part of a three-day trip to the Dallas area.

But some of the kids said that even the excitement of their first trip to the Six Flags Over Texas amusement park would pass.

"The memory will be back soon from the tornado," said 15-year-old Manuel Mondragon Jr. as he prepared to get on the Roaring Rapids. "We will be telling our children about it."

His sister broke her collarbone in the storm and couldn't come, he said. Mondragon's father also was injured.

Muniz said his mother and two brothers were in the town's community center to watch his little brother graduate from a Head Start program when the tornado came through. His mother suffered only minor cuts and there were no serious injuries in his family.

A total of 30 people were killed and 160 injured in the twister.

Albino Casias, 14, who lost his mother and two sisters in the storm, was quiet and reserved as he rode the Roaring Rapids with his friends. As the others raced up the ramp to the ride, he said simply, "I really want to have fun."

The youngsters cheered and yelled when they arrived at the amusement park in a Trailways bus, but were more subdued than other youngsters at Six Flags.

"Yesterday, there was a lot of trouble getting these kids out," said Paul Matta, counselor for Catholic Charities. "Also, there was hesitancy by some who had lost their parents and other relatives in the disaster. They really want to go out and have fun again. And it's becoming easier, but it will take time."

The Rev. John LaNoue, disaster relief chairman for Texas Baptist Men, got the idea for the amusement park visit after seeing the expressionless faces of Saragosa's children.

"They are already doing better," said LaNoue's wife, Dr. Kaywin LaNoue, one of 12 chaperones. "They were climbing the walls last night."

They got so excited when they heard they were coming. Some of these children had not ever ridden a bus before.

The children, ranging in ages from 10 to 16, arrived in Arlington Wednesday and stayed at Fielder Road Baptist Church, one of the major sponsors of the outing. They were returning home today.

"They were pretty ready last night," said church member Nissa Grimes. "They all want to ride Judge Roy Scream and the Texas Cliffhanger. They were so excited about getting out of Saragosa."

"We splashed a lot," said Edna Lopez after she left the Roaring Rapids. "You got wet. It was like a river."

Report says Railey discussed marriage with a psychologist

DALLAS (AP) — The Rev. Walker Railey, whose wife has been in a coma since a near-fatal choking three months ago, had discussed marriage with a psychologist before the attack, a source told the Dallas Times Herald.

The source, familiar with the testimony of psychologist Lucy Papillon before a grand jury earlier this week, told the newspaper Ms. Papillon also told the panel she and Railey had taken several trips "while he was out preaching."

Railey, former senior minister of the First United Methodist Church of Dallas, repeatedly took the Fifth Amendment when questioned Wednesday before the grand jury, sources have said.

The source told the Times Herald that Ms. Papillon, the daughter of a Methodist bishop who had been pastor of the church before Railey's tenure, and Railey became romantically involved in June 1986.

Ms. Papillon's attorney, Phil Bursleson, has said there was no romantic involvement between Railey and his client.

The source said Ms. Papillon, who specializes in the treatment of eating disorders, testified that she first met Railey in 1984 on a religious television program the minister had hosted.

Ms. Papillon told the grand jurors she had no knowledge of the attack on Margaret "Peggy" Railey, 38, the source said. But she told the panel she and Railey had been together from 7:30 p.m. to 8:15 p.m. the night Mrs. Railey was assaulted.

Norman Kinne, Dallas County's chief criminal prosecutor, said Railey's failure to tell police he had been with Ms. Papillon the night of the attack was a discrepancy authorities had hoped to clarify during the grand jury investigation.

"He made no mention of visiting Lucy Papillon that night when he talked to the police," Kinne told the Dallas Morning News.

Railey told police he found his wife unconscious on the floor of their garage at 12:40 a.m. April 22. Railey told investigators he had been at a Southern Methodist University library doing research until he went home and found his wife, unconscious on the floor of their garage.

Railey, 40, had talked about divorcing his wife, the source said.

Although Railey and Ms. Papillon had discussed marriage they had made no formal plans, the source said.

"They had discussed it," the source said. "She had those hopes. And they had talked some about it. But there were no concrete plans."

Sources told the Dallas Morning News that they saw Ms. Papillon deliver a long-stemmed rose to Railey at Presbyterian Hospital on April 30, where he was staying to be near his wife. She was among the minister's last visitors before he attempted suicide with a drug overdose later that night.

Panel OKs state borrowing

AUSTIN (AP) — A committee has authorized the state borrowing up to $1.372 billion to make sure it doesn't issue any hot checks in 1988-89.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock voted for the issuance of cash management notes "very reluctantly," and Gov. Bill Clements skipped the meeting to protest the notes, which he called deficit financing.

"Recurring debt and today's rollover situation violates the spirit, if not the letter, of the constitutional principle of paying as we go," Bullock said.

"We look forward to getting out of this business at the very first opportunity," Bullock said in a statement Thursday.

State Treasurer Ann Richards and Jack Roberts, chief deputy comptroller representing Bullock, cast votes to issue the notes, near the end of August.

Clements, the third member of the Cash Management Committee, said his absence was symbolic "in the sense that I, in principle, do not agree with cash management notes. It's a form of deficit financing."

"I know they're a necessity, but they had a quorum without me," Clements said.

Some things can't be forgotten

It has been a mere two years. I remember it well. Just the mention of Aug. 2, 1985 may not mean much to many.

Until, or course, the words "Delta Flight 191" are mentioned.

I was an employee with the Irving Police Department at the time of the sixth worst airline disaster in the history of aviation.

I was off that day. I was enjoying a baseball game on television when the first reports began coming in.

After 16 hours of overtime at the department, I remember sitting down and writing my thoughts on the crash of this once mighty airplane.

While digging through my desk the other day, I ran across those words again and still they stir my memory and my emotions.

"A sight I will never forget is that of a burnt out tail section of a Delta jet," I wrote.

"A Delta L10-11, Delta's biggest jet, much like American Airlines' DC-10, was on its final approach to DFW Airport, landing southbound on runway L-13. The plane was on a flight from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., en route to Los Angeles with a stopover in Dallas.

"Also approaching the DFW airport was a freakish thunderstorm, one that also darkened the sky over my Irving home, some four miles south of where the disaster would soon occur.

"Scientists, meteorologists and other experts speculate what downed the jumbo jet was wind shear, a sudden and violent down draft in winds accompanying the storm. As the plane approached the airport, it apparently got caught in a down draft with winds clocked at 80 m.p.h.

"The plane was brought down suddenly. The pilots had no warning; the passengers, no hint as to what was about to take place.

"The plane skimmed across U.S. 114, instantly killing a driver traveling westbound on the highway. Although I know of more details, to say the man was decapitated would be understating what actually happened to him.

"The man in the car, William Mayberry of Mississippi, was the first fatality. There would be 130 others who never knew what happened to them.

"The plane crashed about one-quarter of a mile

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

south of Highway 114 after careening off two water tanks. Authorities said those water tanks 'cushioned' the blow of the crash. If it weren't for those tanks, officials speculate the 27 people who lived — some who walked away with minor cuts and bruises — might not have been so fortunate.

"All because of a damn thunderstorm, 131 people die. If only someone had forgotten to pack a bag in Ft. Lauderdale. If only the plane could have been delayed in some other way — for even a matter of a few seconds — 131 people might still be alive. So would the 12-month-old-baby that perished. That a baby that tiny died upset me tremendously.

"The people who survived were sitting in the plane's tail section. All others who sat in the forward section of the aircraft were not afforded the luxury of a longer life.

"As William Cowper said in his poem 'Light Shining Out of Darkness' — God does indeed work in mysterious ways."

Sunday marks the second "anniversary" of this horrible airline disaster.

At work, in the police dispatch office, I remember hearing tapes of the initial sighting of the disaster by an Irving police officer.

"There's just been some sort of tremendous explosion," the officer said frantically when he first saw the fireball from some three miles away. "I'm headed out toward the airport to see what it is."

There are some things that you'll always remember.

There are some things you wish you could forget, but just can't.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Private skies could solve airborne jam

A determination by the National Transportation Safety Board concerning last August's airplane disaster over Cerritos, Calif., which blamed the air-traffic control system, reflects our political culture's abhorrence of individual responsibility.

Responsibility is inextricable from individual freedom, and fear of responsibility is a chief source of the popular fear of freedom. A culture that puts its faith in regulation rather than individual judgment is bound to be more comfortable with a finding that a given problem wasn't anybody's fault, but a problem — correctable, of course — with the system.

So the NTSB noted that both pilots and the controller were trying to follow the rules and do their jobs, but that the system didn't have enough redundant backups and automated alerting procedures to cover every contingency. It made three recommendations for incremental improvements — increase policing of the restricted airspace around airports, require more airplanes to have altitude-reporting devices, and put new software into air-traffic control computers.

Such minor reforms can't hurt. But whether the NTSB decision represented justice or evasion, the Cerritos crash and a growing mass of evidence should suggest a more thorough look at the air-traffic control system. The NTSB said air-traffic controllers made 50 percent more mistakes last month than they did a year ago, so incremental reforms aren't doing the job.

The essential problem is a creaky, outmoded, bureaucratized air-traffic control system attempting to cope with the dynamic, growing business that airlines have become since deregulation. Its problems stem from the constraints inherent in using a tax-funded government agency to provide air-traffic control services.

The system has still not recovered from the 1981 controller strike; fewer controllers are at work than in 1981 (though the workload has increased), and fewer of today's controllers are classified as full performance level controllers. The FAA is prohibited from taking the quickest route to full staffing: Rehiring fired PATCO members. Executive and legislative micromanagement and federal personnel and procurement regulations pose major obstacles to responsive, businesslike management. Non-market pricing of services leads to overuse at peak periods.

The best way to solve these problems is by privatization. The FAA's facilities could be divested to a non-profit, user-owned corporation, while ownership of control towers and landing slots is given to the nation's airports.

The new private owners could charge market prices for their services and would be free to rehire experienced former controllers. Overcrowding at peak times, understaffing, and the need to update equipment could all be resolved more quickly than under any reform under which the government retained sole responsibility for air-traffic control.

No looking back on reflagging

WASHINGTON — Kuwait tankers now have been reflagged with the Stars and Stripes. American crews are aboard. American warships will guard them through the Persian Gulf. For good or ill, the Reagan administration has taken on a fateful commitment. There can be no backing out now.

In a series of thoughtful speeches in the House last month, Rep. Les Aspin of Wisconsin analyzed what we are getting into. Aspin could not resist a few partisan jabs at the president, but setting these aside, the gentleman did a first-rate job. In his opening address he went directly to the core of the matter. There are dangers to the United States if we take the reflagging course. And there are dangers if we do not. Aspin so many instances, the choices before the president were not choices between good and better. They were choices between bad and worse.

Kuwait asked for U.S. reflagging last December. In March, after much thought and calculation, the State Department and the Defense Department united in a recommendation that the plan be approved. The alternative was to leave a superpower vacuum that the Soviet Union swiftly would have filled.

The U.S. naval forces now assigned to convoy duty are at once real forces and token forces. The ships are real in the sense that they are manned by American sailors; if American lives are lost or American ships are sunk by Iranian action, real blood will have been shed. Bloody retaliation will have to be exacted.

The task force is a token — a presence, if you please — in the sense that its role is tightly limited. Kuwait has 235 merchant vessels, including 22 tankers. We are reflagging precisely 11 of these. This is not enough to prevent the Iranians from attacking other shipping, but such tankers as the renamed Bridgeton are so huge that significant amounts of oil will be protected.

The plan involves serious risks. Aspin does not believe the Iranians will attack our convoys directly, either with Silkworm missiles or with suicide bombers. Iran would not so openly invite massive retaliation from the United States. Iranian response more likely will come in the form of mines, which could as easily have been laid by Iraq, or in the form of terrorist attacks on U.S. installations in the Middle East.

The Iranians, Aspin acknowledged, are an ingenious lot. "The minds that dreamed up the truck bomb and that conceived an outboard navy to fight the Iraqis amid the marshes are probably hard at work right now trying to spring some novel surprises on us." We ought to be working with equal imagination to anticipate an Iranian response.

One rationale behind the administration's reflagging plan is that our presence may contribute to ending the war between Iraq and Iran. Actual hostilities began in September 1980, though Iran had been trying to topple the Iraqi government long before that. Since then the conflict has been waged sporadically and erratically by both sides. Casualty figures are grossly inexact, but Aspin finds no evidence of a war-weariness sufficient to bring an armistice. Our convoys will not alter the belligerents' determination.

Since Aspin completed his series of speeches, the United Nations has adopted a resolution call on the warring parties to agree to a cease-fire. Iran's initial reaction was to spurn the proposition. After all, Iran is in de facto possession of a good deal of Iraqi territory; to withdraw its forces to the former boundaries would be interpreted domestically as a defeat. The deal will have to be sweetened if Iran is to agree to restore the status quo ante.

In Aspin's view, any such peace would be "a phony peace." It would leave both regimes intact and their Islamic animosities unrelieved. A stalemate would end the war "with two wounded snakes more dangerous to innocent bystanders than to themselves." Iraq might well turn on Kuwait. The other five Gulf Arab states would be equally vulnerable.

Aspin ended his series about where he began: "There are dangers if we do reflag, and there are dangers if we do not reflag." By refusing to act boldly, "we look indecisive and insecure to everyone." If we undertake the operation and soon cut and run, "we send a message of unreliability."

That last point is critical. In its vapid resolutions, the Congress — especially the imbecilic Senate — has given an impression of feebleness and timidity. That won't do. We have taken on a long and costly commitment. Until Kuwait relieves us of that commitment, those 11 flags will have to remain.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, July 31, the 212th day of 1987. There are 153 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On July 31, 1777, the Marquis de Lafayette, a 19-year-old French nobleman, was made a major-general in the Continental Army after offering his help to the rebellious American colonies. Lafayette later played a role in the British defeat at Yorktown.

On this date:

In 1498, Christopher Columbus discovered the island of Trinidad.

In 1556, St. Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Society of Jesus, died in Rome.

In 1875, the 17th president of the United States, Andrew Johnson, died in Tennessee at the age of 66.

In 1948, President Harry S. Truman helped dedicate New York International Airport at Idlewild Field. (The airport was later renamed John F. Kennedy International Airport.)

In 1953, Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, known as "Mister Republican" for his conservative philosophy, died in New York at the age of 63.

In 1964, the American space probe Ranger 7 transmitted back to Earth pictures of the moon's surface.

Lawyers fuel exploding feuds

You don't know what "hate" is until you have eavesdropped on a divorce court.

Now we are talking "hate," vicious, venomous, unmitigated, vitriolic hate.

Jurists and barristers will tell you that you have never experienced sheer, naked hatred until you are in court where somebody's love got turned inside out, and legal proceedings have polarized the principals.

We have been reading recently about such confrontations involving Joan Collins and Peter Holm and the William Friedkin split with Lesley-Anne Down.

One case involves custody, but in both cases the fuel on the fire is money.

Apparently there is similar bloodletting when religious bedfellows fall out.

Presently there are 2,000 Eastern philosophical religious systems in the United States and all are gaining followers — Hare Krishna, transcendental meditation, reincarnation, spiritualism, the New Age Movement — and all created to fill the vacuum created when mainline religions began discrediting themselves with intramural squabbling.

Paul Harvey

Last March 19, after admitting sexual indiscretion with a church secretary, evangelist Jim Bakker asked the Rev. Jerry Falwell to take over and run his PTL media ministry.

Falwell accepted the responsibility, though I am sure he has since regretted that decision many times.

When the scope and scale of PTL resources became public knowledge, lawyers smelled pay dirt.

At last count there were more than a dozen lawyers representing various factions involved in the several squabbles over the spoils.

And the lawyer for the Bakkers was regurgitating allegations which, in any other environment, would be grotesquely unbecoming.

Attorney Melvin Belli, for example, accused Rev. Falwell of doing "some strange things" with the PTL's financial records to the benefit of his own Lynchburg, Va., ministry.

Belli, the lawyer, is well aware that such a slur as "some strange things" leaves him legally in the clear while tending to condemn the Falwell ministry.

And inevitably, for all Falwell's denials, the aroma remains.

And the worst is yet to come.

Big money contributors to PTL want their money back. The Internal Revenue Service and two other federal government agencies are exploring evidence of fraud, misuse of church money and other misconduct.

A federal grand jury is almost certain to hand down indictments against the Bakkers and other former PTL leaders.

Inevitably, all ministries will suffer. The old Persian proverb says, "When elephants fight the grass gets trampled."

Aquaculture could ease hunger problems

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The "green revolution" is widely known as the generally successful campaign by industrialized nations to help less developed countries become more self-sufficient by growing traditional agricultural crops.

But few people are familiar with the "blue revolution" — the concept of farming for fish and other forms of marine life that may have originated in China as many as 4,000 years ago. Also known as aquaculture, the practice of growing fish in captivity for human consumption has become more widely accepted in recent years as a result of several developments:

• Decades of overfishing have led to depletion of natural stocks in both oceans and inland waterways.

• More than 100 nations have further restricted supplies of edible marine species by designating the ocean waters up to 200 miles from their shores as their exclusive fishing territory.

• In an era of relatively high oil prices, sending petroleum-fueled boats to mid-ocean fisheries is more expensive than relying on land-based operations.

• Many people in developed nations, increasingly sensitive to the relationship between diet and health, seek food high in protein but low in fat — a requirement fish fulfills better than meat or poultry.

"In a world where pressure on resources is mounting," notes the Washington-based Worldwatch Institute, "aquaculture should... be seen as a means of tapping some currently unused resources."

In 1980, the most recent year for which comprehensive statistics are available, a U.N. survey found that aquaculture accounted for the production of about 9 million tons of edible fish worldwide.

China was by far the leading country, accounting for more than 4 million tons. Japan produced almost 1 million tons while India followed with just under 850,000 tons. Other leading nations included South Korea, the Soviet Union, the Philippines, Indonesia, France and Spain.

Although aquaculture accounts for about 17 percent of all seafood consumed globally, the domestic industry provides only about 12 percent of the fish eaten in this country.

But that figure has been rising steadily in recent years as fish farming has been adapted to raising a growing number of finfish and shellfish species — including salmon in the Northwest, trout in Idaho, prawns in Hawaii, oysters in New England and lobsters in Maine.

But nowhere has the growth been more phenomenal than in the South, where catfish production soared from 5.7 million pounds in 1970 to almost 46.5 million pounds in 1980 and to just under 214 million pounds last year. This year, the figure is expected to exceed 250 million pounds.

Fish in general and catfish in particular are attractive because of the high efficiency with which they convert vegetable-based feed into edible meat.

Cattle must be fed 7 pounds of grain to produce a pound of meat. The ratio for pigs is 3½ pounds of feed per pound of meat, while broilers require 2½ pounds of feed to produce a pound of chicken meat.

But the conversion ratio for catfish (lower than most other fish) is 1½ pounds of feed per pound of meat. Fish are so efficient because they are cold-blooded and thus do not burn calories to maintain a constant body temperature. In addition, locomotion in water is less energy consuming than on land.

The farm-raised, grain-fed catfish produced in the South bear little resemblance to the traditional bottom-feeding scavenger. The commercially sold fish can be baked, steamed, poached, braised, stewed, grilled, blackened, broiled or sautéed.

"The rapid growth of catfish farming in the lower Mississippi Valley," adds the Worldwatch Institute, "is one of the world's aquacultural success stories."

Regan describes chaotic, deceitful White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan testified today he didn't "focus on the Iranian situation at all" for most of 1986, leaving former National Security Adviser John Poindexter on his own to manage the secret arms sales initiative.

Testifying for the second day at the nationally televised Iran-Contra hearings, Regan said that during his once-a-week breakfasts with Poindexter, he discussed administrative details and presidential trips abroad — but not the secret program of arms sales to Iran.

Regan made his comments to Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., who said he would not engage in hindsight and second-guess Regan's actions.

Regan testified on Thursday that he didn't know until last November that proceeds from the weapons sales had been diverted to Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government.

Regan was expected to conclude his testimony later in the day, and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger was expected to begin answering questions immediately afterward. Leaders of the House and Senate investigating committees hope wrap up the hearings early next week.

Regan sidestepped a question on whether he believed that former CIA Director William Casey did not know of the diversion of funds until last Nov. 24. Casey told him he had not known, but former White House aide Oliver L. North has testified that Casey knew all along.

Regan said that after discussions of the Iran initiative in January 1986, he turned his attention to U.S.-Soviet relations and other issues.

"I really didn't focus on the Iranian situation at all," between February and October, he said. "I was busy on a lot of other things."

He said the exception was in May, when the president decided to send former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane on a secret negotiating trip to Iran in the hope of winning the release of five U.S. hostages from captivity in Lebanon in exchange for American-made weapons.

In his testimony on Thursday, Regan said Poindexter had misled the president and other administration officials even as he resigned in the Oval Office last Nov. 25, not telling them he had taken it upon himself to divert arms profits to the Contras.

He added that Poindexter withheld vital information when he was preparing Reagan on Nov. 18 to go before a televised news conference the next day. The result, Regan said, was that the president botched answers to several questions.

In other developments: ■ The Army unwittingly helped generate additional profits from the Iran arms sales when it underpriced TOW anti-tank missiles conveyed to the CIA for resale, according to a report by the House Armed Services Committee. But panel chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., said Army procedures make it almost impossible to find the right price, and led in this case to "soap opera-like confusion."

■ Conservative fund-raiser Carl R. "Spitz" Channell, who has pleaded guilty to a charge he conspired to defraud the government in connection with his fund-raising activities for the Contras, is disputing in bankruptcy court a $40,000 bill from lobbyist Lyn Nofziger, the former White House political director recently charged with ethics law violations. Channell said he hired Nofziger for his lobbying expertise and contacts.

■ Congressional investigators and the government's independent counsel in the case, Lawrence E. Walsh, are looking into the relationship between Washington lawyer Martin Artiano and David Fischer, Reagan's former personal assistant who was paid $20,000 a month by Channell to set up "thank-you" visits with the president for private donors to the Contras. Artiano, a former Reagan campaign worker, reportedly split that money with Fischer.

In his testimony Thursday, Regan said it had become clear that the Iran arms deal that the president hoped would free U.S. hostages in Lebanon — and which Regan also had approved — had been largely a scheme by international arms dealers who used the hostages as "bait."

"They saw an opportunity here and tried to keep it alive," said Regan, who was forced out of the administration Feb. 27 after he was blamed by the presidential Tower commission for the disarray at the White House.

Regan told of asking Poindexter for a copy of a chronology he had seen in the hands of NSC aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North after the president's Nov. 19 news conference. Poindexter gave him a copy, then returned a few hours later to ask for it back, saying it contained errors.

Regan said he declined to return it, instead giving the document to White House counsel Peter Wallison to look into.

Committee investigators say it appears North's initial chronology was fairly accurate, but versions developed over the next few days were "cooked" to minimize the president's role in approving early arms sales to Iran, which advisers feared might be illegal because they were done without proper prior written authorization.

Under questioning by Terry A. Smiljanich, the associate Senate committee counsel, Regan testified that he and the president were aware of a cover story for the November 1985 shipment by Israel of Hawk missiles to Iran. It was unclear from the testimony when the president became aware of the existence of the cover story.

"So in other words, you and the president understood that Hawks were involved in that November 1985 shipment?" Smiljanich asked as part of a series of questions about preparations for a November 1986 news conference. "Certainly," Regan answered.

"But that oil drilling equipment was a cover story?" "Sure."

Average starting teacher salary up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average starting salary for school teachers jumped 7.1 percent this past year to $17,800, with six states offering more than $19,000 to newcomers, the American Federation of Teachers said today.

The hike over salaries a year earlier was a larger boost than the 5.7 percent average pay raise for all public school teachers, the union said at the start of a biennial conference on school reform.

The AFT estimated that the average salary for all teachers in 1986-87 was $26,698.

The AFT said the current teacher salaries are the highest ever, even when adjusted for inflation. The previous high was $26,296 (in 1987 dollars) in 1972. The teachers' actual pay in 1972 was $9,705.

The AFT's research shop gathered its data from state education departments.

Regan to undergo surgery to remove skin cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, paying the price for spending long hours in the sun, will have a skin cancer removed from the tip of his nose late today.

"They have to do a little peeling here on the end of my nose," Regan said Thursday. He said he was feeling fine and was unconcerned about today's procedure at Bethesda Naval Hospital, which will be performed with a local anesthesia that blocks pain while allowing him to remain awake. It's the third time in two years Reagan has had skin cancer on his nose. Experts say the 76-year-old Regan likely will have recurrences of the problem — known as a basal cell carcinoma — for the rest of his life.

Skin cancer, which affects an estimated 500,000 people a year in America, is the most common form of cancer and the most easily cured.

Regan, an avid outdoorsman and onetime lifeguard, called attention to his problem Thursday during a speech to anti-abortion activists. Pointing to a small bandage on his nose, where a skin sample was taken a day earlier, Regan said, "This is just a small billboard that says ... 'Stay out of the sun.'"

Later, Regan joked about his nose when reporters asked him about the seriousness of the cancer.

Political party asks Juarez residents to boycott El Paso

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — An intensified effort by U.S. immigration authorities to enforce border-crossing laws humiliates Mexicans, the president of this border city's ruling party says.

The ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party — known in Mexico by the initials PRI — has asked residents of Juarez to protest the renewed enforcement by staying in Mexico and boycotting El Paso, Texas, businesses for three days ending Saturday.

"We don't like to hurt business, but sometimes you have to show that you're against what the Immigration Service is doing," Alfredo Urias, the city's PRI president, said Thursday.

He spoke at a rally in front of the Santa Fe Bridge, one of four spans across the Rio Grande between El Paso and Juarez.

The party maintains the Immigration and Naturalization Service is enforcing law unfairly. The latest controversy stems from a new INS crackdown on Mexicans who abuse temporary border crossing cards.

The permits allow Mexicans to cross the border for up to three days to shop, visit people and take care of personal business, such as visits to doctors. The permits do not authorize the holder to work — but the INS suspects many people, especially maids, use the cards for that purpose.

INS inspectors on Monday began asking people, especially women, what they planned to do once they got in the United States. People who said they planned to shop were asked to show how much money they had. Those with little money were not allowed across, said Guadalupe Gonzalez, counsel for the INS' El Paso district.

In some cases, the permanent, plastic-laminated cards, which most Mexicans call passports, were taken and replaced with temporary paper permits. Mexicans who go to El Paso can then exchange the temporary permits for the permanent cards when they return.

Several of the people whose cards were taken Monday were maids, said Carlos Marentes, head of the Border Agricultural Workers Union. Other maids, afraid their cards would be taken, did not try to cross, he said.

Urias said the INS is targeting the poor.

Plane crash turns highway into inferno

MEXICO CITY (AP) — In the flash of an exploding airplane, the Mexico-Toluca Highway was transformed from a normal rush-hour scene into an inferno of twisted metal and burning cars with people trapped inside.

The difference between living and dying was a matter of luck — a matter of being in the right place at the right time.

Alejandro Perez Palma told television crews his house beside the highway shook as if an earthquake had struck when the Boeing 377 crashed Thursday evening, seven minutes after leaving Mexico City's international airport.

Looking out his kitchen window, Perez said he saw the plane pass under a bridge on the highway, avoid a gas station to the right of the road, bounce off the tops of cars, crash into a restaurant and house and explode.

The bridge, commonly known as the Conafrut bridge, is about 16 feet high and leads from the eight-lane highway to the large, Conafrut food processing plant.

The commercial cargo plane was bound for Miami with 12 people and 18 horses aboard. Officials said 37 people died in the accident and 40 were injured.

Cars crashed into each other and some burst into flames, trapping passengers inside.

Soviets present treaty on reducing long-range, strategic, nuclear forces

GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union today presented a draft treaty on reducing long-range, or strategic, nuclear forces and indicated it would continue to link such a treaty to limits on the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative.

"Today we are presenting our draft (treaty) on strategic offensive missiles," deputy chief Soviet negotiator Alexei Obukhov said. He called the Soviet proposal "another major step in the negotiations."

Obukhov, speaking to reporters outside the U.S. mission before the meeting, said an agreement on space and defense systems to include limits on the U.S. "Star Wars" defense initiative "is a necessary prerequisite" for an agreement on long-range weapons.

The chief U.S. delegate on long-range weapons, Ronald Lehman, speaking separately, said: "That is not a reasonable linkage. It creates obstacles." However, he said the Soviet draft treaty submitted today was an "important step — now we can sit down and draft treaty language."

The Soviets presented their proposal at a joint plenary meeting of the two sides, comprising about two dozen negotiators and aides on each side.

The United States presented a draft treaty on long-range weapons in May and had been waiting for a Soviet response.

Strategic arms represent one area of the three areas under discussion at the Geneva arms control talks. The other two are intermediate-range nuclear forces and space and defense systems.

Blind sailor plans solo ocean crossing

By ALAN FLIPPEN
Associated Press Writer

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)—A blind sailor aided by a talking computer plans to cast off next week in his yacht The Eye-Opener on his quest to become the first sightless person to sail solo across the Atlantic Ocean.

"The last couple of months have been the most exciting and the most difficult of my life," Jim Dickson said Thursday.

The 41-year-old Dickson, who has been preparing for the 2,800-mile voyage to England for seven years, had planned to set sail more than a month ago but postponed his departure to make improvements to his 36-foot fiberglass sloop.

His planned route will avoid shipping lanes and will take him southeast from Rhode Island to the 38th parallel, then east almost to the Azore Islands and northeast to Plymouth, England.

Dickson, who estimates the voyage will take 28 to 32 days, will be escorted out of Narragansett Bay and into Plymouth harbor, but will be totally alone otherwise.

He said he is ready to leave whenever the winds cooperate.

"The next three or four days, we're going to have light winds from the wrong direction, and then no winds," but the weather is expected to improve by Tuesday or Wednesday, said Dickson.

He said he hoped his trip would demonstrate what blind people are capable of, and eventually help reduce the 70 percent unemployment rate among the blind.

"It isn't that they don't want to work, it isn't that they're not capable of working," said Dickson, an associate director of Project Vote, a national voter registration organization in Washington.

"It's that they don't get the chance." Bob Cooper, director of the Governor's Commission on the Handicapped, said Dickson's voyage would show ways that existing technology can help blind people lead productive lives.

Dickson has outfitted his boat with more than $12,000 worth of special equipment bought with donations. The equipment includes the talking computer that will give him position, speed and wind direction. He also plans to have a ham radio aboard, and will keep an AM radio switched on at all times to detect storms.

"If I hear static from a lightning charge, I will lower sail and wait for it to go by," he said.

He said the satellite tracking system Argos, used by solo yacht racers, will help him fix his position, and the U.S. and British governments have agreed to help as well.

"The Royal Air Force will locate me if my navigation is less than precise," said Dickson, who suffers from the degenerative eye disease retinitis pigmentosa and has been legally blind since age 7, when he lost 80 percent of his vision.

He will fight boredom with 25 books he's bringing along, including James Joyce's epic novel, "Ulysses," Will Durant's "Caesar and Christ" and "some cheap detective novels."

Encephalitis-infected mosquitoes found

EL PASO (AP)—Encephalitis-infected mosquitoes have been found in a town about 15 miles east of El Paso, and a 7-month-old boy from a town just west of the city has symptoms of the disease, an official says.

The mosquitoes were found in San Elizario's town square July 14, said Dr. Laurance Nickey, director of the El Paso City-County Health District.

The boy, from Canutillo, had mosquito bites all over his body and was taken Tuesday to Thomason General Hospital. Doctors are determining whether the unidentified boy has encephalitis, Nickey said. If he does, he would have the county's first reported case this year.

Encephalitis is rare in El Paso. Three cases were reported last year. The mosquito-borne disease is found most often where water has been allowed to stand. There is little standing water in El Paso's desert climate, but Nickey said the Rio Grande is unusually high this summer.

Mutual funds: Question of size

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—When you are choosing a mutual fund to invest in, many financial advisers say, smaller is likely to be better.

They argue that a stock fund with, say, $25 million or $50 million in assets has a better chance of achieving stellar performance than a $500 million or $1 billion fund pursuing the same objectives.

"Small funds are more likely to be big gainers than large funds," declares Sheldon Jacobs in the current edition of his annual Handbook For No-Load Fund Investors.

In 1986, Jacobs observes, 33 of the top 50 funds ranked by performance had assets of less than $50 million each at the start of the year.

On its face, this tendency might seem a bit paradoxical. The larger the fund, the greater its presumed economies of scale. The percentage management fees charged by most fund sponsors decrease as the assets of the fund grow.

Furthermore, logic suggests that big funds couldn't have attracted all the money they have received from investors without doing at least a respectable job.

A large fund is very likely to have good management, Jacobs acknowledges, but that management can be hampered by the very rewards of its success.

"Large funds grew to their present size because they performed well in their early years, when they were small," he says.

The bigger a fund gets, he suggests, the harder it is to steer with any precision—like a speedboat that expands to the proportions of an ocean liner.

In addition, large size prohibits a fund from making meaningful investments in small companies, which may have better growth potential than big, well-established companies.

"Large funds can't quickly dispose of their huge holdings without depressing a stock's price," Jacobs writes. "Diminutive funds are more nimble."

"Of course," he adds, "small funds take greater risks."

That last point is a matter not to be overlooked, contend two researchers who recently published the results of a study on fund size in the American Association of Individual Investors' AAI Journal.

Robert T. Kleiman, an assistant professor of finance at Oakland University in Rochester, Mich., and Kwang W. Jun of the World Bank in Washington tracked the results achieved by 64 funds over the years 1970-84.

When the funds were classified into four groups by size, the smallest scored the best average annual return of 13.10 percent, followed by the second smallest, 11.20 percent; the second largest, 9.52 percent; and the largest, 8.93 percent.

However, the smallest funds also consistently ranked high in risk, as measured in several ways. Their individual performances varied more from the average than did those of the larger funds. Their holdings, as one might expect, were less diversified.

Also, the smallest funds were the only group of the four that were more volatile than the stock market as a whole.

"When these higher risks are taken into consideration, it appears that smaller funds do not provide statistically significant higher returns," the authors conclude.

For his part, Jacobs recommends that investors give preference to funds with assets of less than $250 million.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

A THIRSTY LAND

Men have a thirst and a longing for goodness and righteousness. Even the most parched soul is touched by acts of kindness, forgiveness, and love. Jesus said, "Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

May all who are thirsty for a oneness with man and with God find satisfaction and fulfillment by attending church

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Calvary Baptist makes plans for its Bible school

Calvary Baptist Church, 900 E. 23rd St., will be having its Vacation Bible School from Monday through Friday next week.

Classes will be conducted from 7 to 9 p.m. each evening, with a special Family Night at 7 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 9.

John Denton, pastor, will be directing the Bible school, assisted by Debra Stubblefield, church secretary.

Debbie Dancel, LVN, will care for babies through age 18 months. Sherry Day and Bob Poole will teach the 2 and 3 year olds, with Pam Fowler and Rick Crosswhite teaching the 4 and 5 year olds.

Leading first through third grades will be Rhonda Mileus, with Cheryl Schuck and Aubrey and Teresa Agee leading the fourth and fifth grades.

Nancy Poole and Sandy Crosswhite will teach the middle school group. The high school group will be led by Charlotte Singleton, Wilbur Hapeman and Judy Dehls. Adults will be led by Maxine Hapeman and Brother Denton.

The church van will be in operation to provide transportation for those who need its services. Those wanting to use the van may call 665-0842 or 665-5357 to arrange for the transportation.

Denton said all ages are invited to attend the church's Vacation Bible School.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Because of the service by which you have proved yourselves, men will praise God for the obedience that accompanies your confession of the gospel of Christ, and for your generosity in sharing with them and with everyone else. (2 Corinthians 9:13 NIV)

I returned from running errands to find my two teenage daughters rummaging through the clothes and shoes in my closet.

After listening to several minutes of giggling and wondering about their whispered comments, I decided I'd better see what they were up to. I asked, "What are you looking for in my closet?"

My little darlings looked at each other and giggled. "Tomorrow is Nerd Day at school, and we're looking for something to wear!"

Now I ask you, how much honor can a mother stand?

Although we have coined many phrases promoting the beauty of the inner person, the truth is, the general population is more interested in whether someone looks good.

In today's business world, to a great extent, we are what we wear. Today's up-and-coming professionals dress for success, often using computer programs as fashion aids. Nothing goes unnoticed, from hairstyles down to whether a man's socks come up high enough on his calves and whether a woman has a run in her stockings.

Research has proven a person's professional advancement is in proportion to the attention directed toward his or her personal appearance.

Although God judges Christians by our spiritual fitness, others judge our sincerity and the message we propound by outward appearances.

Do we dress our lives in appropriate Christian service, language and attitudes? Is our interaction with others marked by concern and love? Does our Christian disposition hold up under stress?

Our testimonial effectiveness as Christians is in proportion to the attention we direct toward the outward manifestation of Christ's work within us. To the world, we are the life we wear!

Religion Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Roman Catholic bishops are appealing a federal appeals court ruling that could require them to open their files about opposing abortion in a case that threatens the church's tax exemption.

If necessary, the bishops will carry the case to the U.S. Supreme Court "to protect their rights," says Monsignor Daniel F. Hoye, the bishops' general secretary.

Abortion Rights Mobilization, pressing the IRS to lift the church's tax exemption on grounds it finances political efforts against abortion, wants to examine church files about the matter, and an appeals court approved the search June 4.

Studies show pastors can use a day off

By SANDRA GINES
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO (AP) — A pastor's occupation is sometimes viewed as a 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week calling by congregations and by pastors themselves.

But mental health professionals and clergy members say they have found that pastors, like other professionals, need a regular day off. Ministers who feel pressured to spend all of their time tending the flock may not make such good shepherds, some say.

Ken Jordan, a consultant in the Southern Baptist Sunday School board's family ministry department, said in an article in the Baptist Press that "It's easy to become so enmeshed in the life of the congregation that we have no lives of our own. The greatest need in some ministers' families is the ability to say no."

Most people agree that pastors have a highly stressful job, comparable with the demands of a doctor. Pastors must deal on emotional and organizational levels and must be available to their congregation for emergencies.

Dr. Barry Click of the Samaritan Counseling Center in Waco, said he believes the main pressures are being a public figure and meeting the expectations of others.

"Usually, he or she is the main person, the chief staff person, and there's a tremendous pressure on them to meet everyone's expectations," he said.

Other Waco pastors agree on the need to take a break.

"In the dynamics of ministry, there is the give and take, and the minister lands most often in the posture of giving," says the Rev. Jim Johnson of Calvary Baptist Church.

The Rev. Delbert Taylor of Sparks Memorial United Methodist Church said he found he would get so involved with people and their problems that he would need to get away. And the Rev. William Anderson of Christ American Lutheran Church says he needs a day off to recuperate from the emotional drain of dealing with people, especially in crisis situations.

Pastors sometimes have to get beyond feelings of guilt in order to allow themselves needed time off, Click said.

The Rev. Jim Abel of Austin Avenue United Methodist Church said feelings of guilt are "always a real struggle. I think it's almost an occupational hazard."

"Most ministers I know are conscientious, and you could say, conscientious to a fault," Click said.

"They're trying to model God's love for humankind. It's difficult for them to let go of that ethic for 'self-indulgence.'"

"The role is so powerful in terms of expectations, one of the struggles is for them to come to terms with their limitations."

Click said Jesus himself went away from the crowds to be by himself.

"The longer I'm in the ministry, the more I realize that it really is important," said Anderson. He said he used to be concerned with taking a day off, but now advises other pastors to "take it seriously."

"Talking to retired pastors over the years, most of them will say if they had anything to do over, it would be to spend more time with their family," Anderson said.

One difficulty some may have is relaying their need for a day off to their congregations.

"The congregation has to kind of enter into a companion covenant with their pastor to look at the pastor's limitations. The pastor has to be instructive to his or her people so they learn his limitations and they learn not to make excessive demands on themselves," Click said.

The Rev. Paul Taft of St. Alban's Episcopal Church said his congregation honors his day off pretty well, and usually only intrudes in an emergency. In dealing with someone who calls on his day off in a non-emergency situation, Taft said, "Generally, I try to be tactful and not act irritated, but I also remind them that it's my day off."

Jordan spends time with 11-month-old son Brady.

"What I get hacked at is somebody calling me and saying, 'Where is the ladder at the church?'" Abel said.

Guideposts Magazine offered this hint for congregations:

"Respect his time ... And just because he's on call 24 hours a day, don't call him at all hours. Try to speak to him during his office hours, and if you must see him at home, call before you drop in. Finally, if your minister doesn't take a regular day off, encourage him to. He needs it as much as you do."

The pastors say they generally use the day-off as family time. Jordan said ministers and their wives or husbands have "difficulty seeing each other for significant, regular, quality blocks of time and therefore have a high need for time alone together." He also said ministers who "never have enough time" sometimes leave their mates and children out because they "confuse Christianity with church work."

Click said that ideally, the pastor would have a day off for himself and a day off for his family. Click urged pastors to consider days off "ministry to him or herself and family."

"The family sees the pastor caring for others, and giving his or her best, and then, if they're not careful, the minister will give the leftovers to the family," he said.

Taft said a day off "enables my family to count on me being available to be with them," but added that he "cannot use the day off as an excuse to not be with them at other times during the week."

"Days off are critical, for yourself and your family. It's certainly easy to neglect yourself and family. It has become such a phenomenon right now — about preacher burnout," said Johnson.

Abel said, "I just need to be aware that I'm my wife's only husband, and my two sons, ages 13 and six, only father." He says he sees his time off as "a witness to my people, that what I'm trying to do is authentically model Biblical faith."

Abel echoed the other pastors when he said he feels it is important to be available for emergencies at all times. He said he would in fact be upset if not notified during an emergency, such as the death of a church member.

But having a regular day off, plus mini-vacations, long vacations and sabbaticals, not only rejuvenate them, but make them better pastors, the ministers said.

Taft said time off allows the congregation to see him "as a more realistic person" and a model for the people.

"It's the concept of the Sabbath. Christian preachers don't really have a Sabbath," said Johnson. He said he tries "not to use my brain" on his day off because preaching is a lot of intellectual work.

"I don't think people understand the brain drain," or creative pressure of coming up with about three sermons per week, Johnson said.

"You really want to say something that is true and yet that is fresh to the point that people want to pick up on it and apply it to their lives," he said.

Taylor said that in the long run, he knows he is not indispensable. "The church can run without me. It hurts my pride sometimes, but ..."

St. Matthew's to welcome its new pastor

St. Matthew's Episcopal Church will welcome Rev. Dr. William K. Bailey Jr. and his family to Pampa during Sunday services at 8 a.m. and 10 a.m.

Father Bailey will be the new rector at St. Matthew's. He is coming to Pampa from the Episcopal Church of Our Savior at Rock Hill, S.C., where he was priest-in-charge.

Before becoming an Episcopal priest, Father Bailey was an English instructor at the University of South Carolina at Columbia, S.C.

Bailey and his wife, Edith, are the parents of two sets of twins, ages five and three.

The congregation of St. Matthew's, located at 727 W. Browning, invites all past and present parishioners, as well as the entire community of Pampa, to join in welcoming Father Bailey and his family.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your judgment might not be up to its usual high standards today, so take extra pains to size up situations before making commitments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Humility is a noble virtue, but today, don't belittle yourself in an unbecoming manner. It's better to let a portion of your ego shine through.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Occasionally it is necessary to be assertive when dealing with others, but today, you may do so with the wrong people under the wrong conditions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to avoid competitive situations today that require back-up. It may be difficult to marshal the needed forces to follow your banner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You may make a decision today based upon faulty information. Make no judgments until you're certain of your facts.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A loved one with financial problems may look to you to be bailed out today. Unfortunately, you might not have enough buckets in your own boat to do the job.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In your involvement with others today, you are likely to be the giver while your companions will be the takers. Try to keep the arrangement fair.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An irresponsible acquaintance may try to dump things on you that she should be taking care of herself. Watch out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This could be one of those unusual days where it seems like everyone is ganging up against you, even your most ardent supporters. Grin and bear it.

Redwood trellis supports climbing greenery

By BOB SAWYER

I think my son figures that if he mows down costly landscaping plants often enough, I'll quit making him cut the grass. Wrong.

We've been waging this battle for several years now. I admit it's been expensive at times, but this year I'm getting smart.

I've put up decorative fences and laid edging timbers, which cunning young "Jaws" will probably run over in a last-ditch effort to permanently disable the lawn mower.

I've also erected several trellises, which I hope will protect the climbing greenery. Whether or not it works, the trellises certainly have inspired compliments from the neighbors.

The hands-down favorite is my redwood trellis, which fans out gracefully and includes a heart-shaped insert. It can be posted in the garden or built into a planter box, which makes it movable.

You'll be surprised at how little time and money is required for this easy project. For more details than provided below, you may order our step-by-step plans.

They include a materials list, full-size patterns for the heart insert sections, and illustrated cutting and assembly instructions for the planter trellis plus a freestanding latticework arbor.

Another terrific outdoor project is our latticework barbecue center, a 4 x 8-foot pavilion that shelters your grill from rainy weather. It features a planter box, latticework panels, and a cabinet with charcoal bin and extra-long drawer for utensils.

To order plans for the trellises, specify Project No. 2074 and send $4.95; or for the barbecue center, specify No. 2076, $6.95. You can save a dollar and order both plans for only $10.90.

Mail to: The Woodwright, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000. Include $2.95 if you'd like our catalog, which includes $16 worth of discount coupons.

The body of the trellis is made from a 8-foot length of 2x6 redwood if you are going to mount it in the planter box, or from a 10-foot length if you are going to post it in the ground.

To create the fan, rip a 5-foot portion of the 2x6 into 15 1/4-inch-thick ribs, leaving the rest of the board uncut so that the ribs are still connected.

A 6-inch stove bolt reinforces the board below the rip cuts, to help keep it from splitting. Drill through the board from edge to edge, about an inch below the ribs, and insert the bolt.

A redwood trellis can be posted in the garden or built into a planter box.

To cover the lower ends of the rip cuts, which probably are not perfectly square and even, rip some redwood down to a thickness of 1/4 inch. Cut from this stock two covers, 3 x 5 1/2 inches. Staple a cover to each side of the trellis board, over the lower ends of the rib cuts.

The 12 x 13-inch heart is cut in 14 separate sections, which fit between the ribs and give the illusion of a solid shape. Insert the sections so that the bottom of the heart is about 5/8 inches above the lower ends of the ribs.

To get the upper ends of the ribs to fan outward evenly, I used spacer slats and a cover slat. Rip two slats from an 8-foot length of 1x2 redwood, each 1/4 inch thick by 1 1/2 inches wide.

Trim one slat to an overall length of 89 inches. Cut the other one into 14 6-inch lengths. Insert a 6-inch slat between each two ribs of the trellis, flush at the top. Secure with glue and staples. Secure the long slat over the top.

Adjust the heart insert sections, if necessary, and glue them in place. This completes the trellis. If you are not going to build the planter, just post the trellis in the ground.

The planter appears to be a two-tiered box, but only the lower, larger box has a floor. When filled with dirt, the upper box walls do provide a second level of growing space.

To build the planter, I used 14 feet each of 1x8 and 1x4 redwood (for the walls and trim respectively), and a 2 x 3-foot piece of 3/4-inch waferswood.

Cut the 16 1/2 x 22 1/2-inch floor from waferswood and drill drainage holes through it. To make a support for the trellis, cut lengths of scrap lumber and attach to the floor.

Cut four walls for the lower-level planter box, and assemble them around the floor. I made the box 7 inches tall. The upper box measures 10 x 24 x 7 inches, and the walls are notched to fit onto the lower box.

I added trim around the tops of both boxes. It is beveled to angle outward, which requires compound-mitered corner joints. This is more hassle, but it's much more attractive than ordinary trim.

Courtesy is just a phone call away for family

DEAR ABBY: I am a 37-year-old male "helper" presently employed to live with and care for an 89-year-old stroke victim in his home. He is still mentally very sharp. I take him to the senior citizens' center for lunch and company, and sometimes we go to the park to visit his friends.

My problem is with his family — daughters, son, grandchildren, etc. I have asked them to please call and let me know when they are coming. Twice now, they have walked in on me while I was in the midst of taking care of certain intimate problems that occur with elderly people — rather embarrassing for the old gentleman and unpleasant for me.

One of his daughters phoned me late one night to say that she and a family friend would be visiting around noon the following day. Her father and I stayed home all day waiting for them, and they never showed. Not even a phone call to let us know they weren't coming.

I realize that I am paid to take care of this man, but don't you think his family owes me the courtesy of a call to let me know when they are coming, as well as a call to say their plans have changed?

CONSCIENTIOUS CARETAKER

DEAR CONSCIENTIOUS: To phone and make specific plans to visit a disabled relative and then not show up is the height of insensitivity. But an occasional unannounced visit is the way concerned family members are assured that Mom, Dad or Grandpa is getting consistently good care.

DEAR ABBY: I am presently employed by a hardware company that brought in some hotshots who have made some recommendations that cost a lot of good, faithful people their jobs.

The last straw was a bulletin that looked like a shopping list:

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

"Company picnic at such and such park on July 4th. Invite your friends and family. Bring your own food and beverage. The park has barbecue facilities, but bring your own charcoal. Those who want to participate in the egg toss, don't forget to bring your eggs. We are having a balloon-breaking game, so if you're bringing the kids, bring your own balloons."

On the luncheonroom bulletin board was a sign depicting a tree with the following message: "Pruning the tree enhances growth." Penciled in at the bottom was: "Too much pruning can kill the tree!"

I hope management enjoyed their picnic.

REAL PERSON IN LA HABRA HEIGHTS, CALIF.

DEAR REAL PERSON: I think the "company" was barking up the wrong tree when it labeled the "do-it-yourself picnic" a company function.

The sign should have said, "Careful pruning can enhance the growth of a tree." Right now, the company tree appears to have gone into shock, and the company spirit is noticeably wilted.

I hope things improve by Christmas. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: "Outside Looking In" was right. As a stepmother, I would much rather be called "my stepmother" than "my dad's wife." The wicked stepmother image in the Cinderella fairy tale is long gone.

You said (in another letter) that introducing someone as a "third cousin once removed" is a distancing maneuver. By the same token, making the stepmother an attachment of the father ("my father's wife") is also a distancing maneuver. You blew it, Abby.

STEPMOTHER AND LOVING IT

DEAR STEPMOTHER: When you're right, you're right. I blew it.

Score: Readers, 455; Abby, 1. (I voted for myself.)

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is married and lives in Chicago. Her mother-in-law is 85 years old, in fairly good health and she also lives in Chicago. My daughter's husband has a sister living in Chicago. If the mother should get sick, whose responsibility is it to take care of her needs? Her son's or her daughter's? Is this written into Illinois law?

JUST WONDERING

DEAR JUST: Forgive me for reading your mind, but I think you are really wondering if your daughter is going to "get stuck" caring for her mother-in-law. How sad that a child would assume the care of an elderly parent only because the law compelled him or her to! I'm sure that few mothers take care of their children's needs because they're required by law to do so. Whatever happened to love and caring?

35 miles of U.S. books being consumed by acids

NEW YORK (AP)—The United States possesses some of the most complete libraries and literary collections in the world, but some of the books may never be read again.

According to the New York Public Library, which houses an astonishing 88 miles of bookshelves, as many as 35 miles of books are being consumed from within by acids. The books are literally crumbling between their covers. Scientists are working on expensive chemical treatments that may allow them to arrest some of the deterioration. But, they say, the only practical solution is to embark on a massive microfilming program — an attempt to preserve the contents of the millions of volumes on the library's endangered list.

It is a job, they predict, that will take at least 200 years.

Black families trace lineage

Gena on Genealogy

Gena Walls

Many black families have been able to trace their lineage, although it is very difficult. If you are a black descendant of the CLARK or SANDERS families of Rutherford and Wilson Counties in Tennessee, you may be interested in a book published by GenTrace 1986, 2810 Babe Ruth Drive, San Jose, Calif. 95132.

Because They Endured: A History of the Clark and Sanders Ancestors of Rutherford and Wilson Counties, Tenn. is available for $46, shipping and handling included.

The book also includes material for the COMER and HUDLESTON branches of the family, and descendants have been located in various states in 1985. It is well documented with various census records, slave deeds, estate inventories and marriage, birth and death records.

Compiling a manuscript is time consuming, and several things can make it an easier task. Compare several family histories for format and documentation. Decide on a numbering system for each family member. This is a must to avoid confusing the WILLIAM or JAMES or other family name that appears each generation.

It might be worthwhile to alphabetize as you finish a chapter. Both the major surname and the allied names should be indexed. All sources should be noted in the text or as footnotes, and credit individuals that provided assistance to your work.

Consider photocopying with a spiral binding if you want less than 100 copies. The end product looks good and is often very economical. A personalized cover adds to the charm of these books.

Andrews players gather around championship plaque. Andrews wins state crown against short-handed Pampa

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Pampa's bid for revenge over Andrews and a shot at the state championship trophy ended abruptly Thursday night, even before the game was over.

Pampa didn't run out of innings. Just substitutes, when pitcher Bret Mitchell was ejected in the top of the seventh inning for disputing calls made by the home plate umpire. The score was 8-3 and that's the way the Babe Ruth 16-18 finals ended at Optimist Park as the Andrews team was presented with the championship trophy by Tournament Director Gary Coleman.

Pampa Manager Gerrel Owens had emptied his bench the final two innings and there was no available player when Mitchell was ordered to leave the field. Apparently, Mitchell had objected to several calls made the umpire throughout the game and was ordered to leave the field after pitching to one batter in the top of the seventh. Under Babe Ruth rules a player cannot re-enter a game once he has been lifted.

Pampa had actually outthit Andrews and Mitchell was pitching a five-hitter going into the abbreviated seventh.

But one of those blows was a three-run homer by Nolan Watson that highlighted a five-run, fourth inning for the A's.

Mitchell had collected two of Pampa's six hits and had scored one run after leading off the sixth with a single and advancing all the way around on a balk and two wild pitches. Pampa's final run crossed the plate in the sixth when Billy Wortham's double brought in Robert Perez.

Brown, Grant Gamblin and Brad Clay each had singles to round out Pampa's hitting attack.

Pampa's first run came in the third on a bases-loaded walk to John Monthey which scored Kerry Brown.

Mitchell pitched back-to-back scoreless innings in the fifth and sixth and didn't allow a hit. Mitchell struck out four, walked five and hit one batter.

Outthitting Andrews, however, just wasn't enough. The A's played flawless defense and ran wild on the bases, getting caught only once in seven steal attempts. Two of their runs scored on an error and a wild pitch.

Sydney McCovey went the distance to pick up the mound win and also added one of Andrews' five hits. McCovey, a left-hander, struck out eight and walked five.

Pitching was another strength for Andrews. A's pitchers gave up just three runs in three games.

Pampa won three of five games in the tournament with both losses coming against Andrews. Pampa had lost to Andrews 17-0 last Monday to drop into the loser's bracket.

Andrews advances to the Southwest Regionals Aug. 8-13 in Seguin. Andrews won the tournament last year to advance to the Babe Ruth World Series where the A's advanced all the way to the semi-

Oilers high on Jeffires

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Houston Oilers rookie first-round draft pick Hayward Jeffires thinks his job this season may be to keep 1,000-yard receivers Drew Hill and Ernest Givins off the stretcher.

"I can learn a lot from them and I can teach them a little about taking a lick across the middle," Jeffires said.

"They shouldn't take the hit too wide open and be on that stretcher. They were on the stretcher a lot last year."

Hill and Givins were among the top pass-catching combinations in the league last season. This year, they'll have help from a big receiver with a small receiver's speed.

"It's very unusual to find a player of his size to have the quickness and speed of a little guy," Oilers receivers coach Milt Jackson said.

"He's a big guy who can play the little man's (speed) game, but when the ball's in the air, he's more difficult for the defensive backs to handle." Jeffires, at 6-2, towers over Hill and Givins, both 5-9.

Jeffires closed out his collegiate career at North Carolina State's No. 2 all-time receiver with 111 catches, and he was third on the all-time list with 1,733 yards.

He caught 40 passes for 591 yards last season. In his final regular season game, Jeffires caught 7 passes for 164 yards and one touchdown in a 31-17 victory over Western Carolina.

Jeffires said he was surprised that the Oilers selected him with two 1,000-yard receivers already on the roster.

He thinks Givins and Hill were surprised too. "Nobody's going to come right out and say they're not happy you're here, but I think they were a little surprised," Jeffires said.

"But as you get into camp and meet the other guys, you sort of become a family and you overlook other things."

Jeffires thinks he may have to learn from the starters for a couple of years before getting his chance as a starter.

"I think Drew's got a couple more years and then they'll want someone to fill his spot," Jeffires said. Hill caught 65 passes for 1,112 yards and five touchdowns to lead the team, and Givins, a rookie from Louisville, caught 61 passes for 1,062 yards and three touchdowns.

Jackson thinks Jeffires can make an impact on the Oilers offense this season if he maintains proper concentration.

"I think he'll have to discipline himself to keep his poise when he lines up against people that he's read about since he was a kid," Jackson said.

Basketball coaching team re-united at Pampa High School

EVER SINCE HE FIRST became a head coach, anytime Robert Hale lost an assistant it was so that assistant could become head coach. It happened again a couple weeks ago when the Harvester basketball leader lost first assistant Robert Chaney to Midland Greenwood.

But Hale has reversed that procedure by employing 36-year old Mike Jones to fill the vacancy. For the past five years Jones has been head coach at Mt. Vernon HS, and had already been penciled into that capacity at Beeville next season. But then he was called about the Pampa opening, resulting in a sudden change of plans. He and his wife were hailed to Pampa for a quick look-see, and instantly became Pampanians, along with their three children, two boys and a girl.

The interesting part is it reunites a coaching team. You see, Jones had been assistant to Hale for three years at Burleson prior to taking that first head job at Mt. Vernon. It should prove to be a very positive situation for the Pampa basketball programs.

THE NCAA THIS WEEK released the individual school voting on matters considered at the recent specially-called convention in Dallas. A study of those votes reveals the wide disparity of thinking within the Southwest Conference membership. On 13 major issues the schools voted on, the eight schools voted differently than the SWC leadership a total of 35 times. Interestingly, the institution most consistent with the SWC administration thinking was U-Texas. The Longhorn hierarchy differed only twice, and on one of those got in line given a second opportunity. The other variance came when UT didn't like the idea of studying a plan to limit grants-in-aid to tuition, fees and need.

Most disagreeable school was the other state-supported major, Texas A&M. On six of the 13 votes Aggie land failed to go along with the SWC fathers' decisions. Baylor, Arkansas and Texas Tech differed five times; SMU, TCU and Rice four. And perhaps a trip to the woodshed does gain attention: SMU voted in favor of each and every issue presented by the NCAA.

Not surprisingly, the one issue to draw the most objection from SWC membership was a suggestion to reduce football scholarship grants. Only two financially strapped church schools, SMU and Rice, favored the cost-cutting measure. And Texas Tech and Baylor appeared to be the big spendthrifts, refusing to support cost-cutting studies to limit paid recruiting visits and other recruiting opportunities.

Sports Forum

By Warren Hasse

As for some other majors, Oklahoma opposed the NCAA in two instances, both putting slight restrictions on scholarships. Nebraska, another football-only powerhouse, differed in four cases. Two independents recognized for academic excellence as well as athletic superiority indicate how totally out of step is the SWC, noted for its simplified football-is-king mentality.

Penn State opposed only a reduction on football grants; Notre Dame agreed, as well as opposing the study of limitations being restricted to tuition, fees and need.

The pudding proof, however, was the vote of a school considered by most to be the finest example of academics and athletics, Stanford University. The Cardinal was recently voted as the top brain school in the nation, and coupled that honor with recognition as king of the NCAA the last school year by winning more championships than any other institution. At the convention Stanford voted in lockstep with the NCAA proposals all the way. And remember, so did SMU!

BUT STANFORD IS also an independent thinker. At the same time the special convention was going on, the institution received permission from a California Superior Court judge to join a lawsuit against the NCAA, challenging the organization's mandatory drug-testing program.

HOPEFULLY, THE PAMPA City Commission will be able to find money in its budget next year to utilize all the facilities at the new city swimming pool. I mean the water-heating process. Built almost entirely through funding from the M.K. Brown Foundation in honor of the wonderful man who loved his city and especially it's children, it is a disservice to his memory to make the fun of swimming so distasteful to so many.

For the 3-4-5-6-7 year-olds preparing to learn the possible life-saving art of swimming, it is an unbearable shock to be forced into the bone-chilling water. So much so that many have refused to continue the swim lessons the city provides and brags about. Hopefully the commission's attitude is not one of 'let them eat cake' and go learn at great expense at the Youth Center or Country Club. And hopefully these young'uns will overcome that initial shock and be willing to sometime return to learn to swim.

A call to the Parks and Recreation Office, which supervises the pool operation, reveals that "yes, the pool has equipment to heat the water, but the city manager says there is no money in the budget to heat it." And have you had many complaints? "Bunches of complaints."

A check with several city officials confirms there is not money available, and other things seemed more important than providing a service to several thousand persons hoping to have fun at the M.K. Brown Pool. Over $80,000 of new vehicles purchased last month, trips to various meetings and air conditioning the M.K. Brown Auditorium were some of the other priorities. The sun is expected to perform the city's responsibility.

How about borrowing a few thousand from Gray County's hospital sale fund? That's taxpayer money going unused, and any doctor will agree that swimming has unlimited therapeutic value. Let's do a better job of operating existing recreational facilities before we lead others down a dream-path of developing additional facilities at Recreation Park.

Astros blitz Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — The 1987 season has not been kind to the Houston Astros' Bob Knepper, but maybe the left-hander's luck is changing.

Knepper was a last-minute starter Thursday night in an 8-5 victory over Atlanta. He limited the Braves to six hits and two runs, one earned in five innings, to help the Astros salvage the last game of the three-game series.

Houston's offense was powered by Kevin Bass, who had three hits and drove in three runs, two coming on his 10th home run of the season, and Alan Ashby, who had a key two-run bloop single in the Astros' four-run sixth inning.

Until that point, Atlanta starter Rick Mahler, 6-11, had limited Houston to only one hit.

But an error by Braves shortstop Andres Thomas and two-out walks to Denny Walling and Glenn Davis led to Mahler's downfall.

Ashby followed with his single for two runs. Davis came home on a balk and Bass stroked a run-scoring single for a 4-2 lead and enabled Knepper, 4-12, to pick up the victory.

Knepper was told five minutes before game-time that he was starting in place of Jim Deshaies, who suffered a stiff left shoulder while warming up. "When you get your fourth win at the end of July, it's not anything to celebrate about," he said.

Knepper, a 10-year veteran who has a 118-130 lifetime record, was 17-12 a year ago, but was languishing with a 6.23 earned run average, four straight losses and seven defeats in his last eight decisions before Thursday night. He lowered his ERA to 6.03 by limiting Atlanta to only one earned run, walking two and not striking out anyone.

"When you're struggling like I am, the win personally doesn't mean too much, but it was a big win for the team," said Knepper.

"If I were 18-2, it would be a big win for me, but with the season so bad so far, I can't worry about numbers, I just have to get it going the second half," he said.

"He gave me exactly what I wanted," said Astros Manager Hal Lanier. "Maybe getting a win like this will change things around for him."

"I've had a lot of games like this where I've thrown well, but had one bad inning," said Mahler. "It's been the story of my season so far."

The Braves had taken the first two games of the series and had won three of four.

Jackson inks huge contract to be part-time NFL player

DALLAS (AP) — Bo Jackson, the full-time baseball player and soon-to-be part-time football player, will be the highest-paid non-quarterback in NFL history when he begins his career with the Los Angeles Raiders around mid-season, a published report says.

The Dallas Morning News reported today that the former Heisman Trophy winner, now an outfielder with the Kansas City Royals, has a five-year, $7.4-million contract with the Raiders even though he might be available to the Raiders for only eight games a year.

Only Miami's Dan Marino, whose multi-year contract is worth $9 million, Tampa Bay's Vinny Testaverde, who will get $8.2 million, and Buffalo's Jim Kelly, who earns $8 million, have more lucrative total dollar deals, the newspaper said. But they play a full schedule.

Denver's John Elway is expected to sign a new long-term contract for $2 million per year before the start of the season, the newspaper said.

The present value of Jackson's contract, computed in today's dollars, is $4.5 million, the newspaper said. That reflects deferred compensation in base salary and bonuses.

Neither Jackson nor the Raiders has been willing to divulge contract details. The newspaper did not reveal how it obtained the figures.

Jackson's contract includes a $1-million signing bonus and base salaries that average $864,000 a year. It also has an injury protection clause that guarantees he will be paid in full should he sustain a career-ending injury playing for either the Royals or Raiders once he passes his first Raiders physical in October.

The contract is not based on the number of games Jackson plays. It simply requires him to report to the Raiders 10 days after the conclusion of the baseball season and allows the Raiders to begin using him in games at their discretion.

There is nothing in the contract that forces Jackson to choose between the sports, the newspaper said.

The base salaries for the five years, which will be deferred over a 12-year period, are: $668,975, $748,499, $840,184, $960,886 and $1,101,456, the newspaper said. The total base salary compensation is $4.32 million, which will be paid in equal installments, about $360,000 a year, from 1987-1999.

Jackson's signing bonus of $1 million will be paid in two installments: $500,000 when he reports and passes the physical this year and $500,000 when he does the same in 1988.

He will get a $420,000 deferred bonus for each year he plays. If he plays the five years, the Raiders will pay Jackson $2.1 million in 25 years.

Tyson finds fame has price

By KEN PETERS AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Mike Tyson is finding that fame has its price, but the young heavyweight champion says he was forewarned.

"A heavy weight champion doesn't just have to toe the line," said Jimmy Jacobs, Tyson's co-manager. "He has to be three feet behind the line."

Tyson, holder of the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association titles, has been an American success story thus far, all the while emphasizing that he intends to be a good role model for youngsters.

But he's had to deal with a measure of controversy and rumors in the days leading up to his fight with International Boxing Federation champion Tony Tucker Saturday night for the undisputed heavyweight title.

The 21-year-old Tyson has been charged with misdemeanor assault and battery stemming from an alleged scuffle with a parking lot attendant June 21 in Los Angeles.

And more recently, there was a report that Tyson had skipped out of his Las Vegas training camp for four days to visit a female friend in Los Angeles.

"A heavy weight champion doesn't just have to toe the line," said Jimmy Jacobs, Tyson's co-manager. "He has to be three feet behind the line."

Tyson has been instructed by his attorney not to discuss the assault charge, but he indicated he would not have allowed himself to be drawn into a confrontation.

"If I can't handle it, believe me, I'll find a way to avoid an incident," he said.

"Anything I do, I always think about the circumstances. If anything is going to interfere with my career, I'm not going to do it. ... Cus always told me the best thing to do was walk away. ..."

Hopkins named to All-Academic Team

State Class 4A shot put champion Andrea Hopkins of Pampa has been named to the Texas High School Academic All-State Track and Field Team by the University Interscholastic League.

Hopkins, who graduated last spring, carried a 92 grade average her senior year to qualify for the All-Academic Team. She was voted the best all-around girl athlete at Pampa High School this past school year and was named to the Academic All-District Team.

Hopkins also finished fourth in the discus at the state meet as the Pampa Lady Harvesters finished second as a team. She was second in the discus at state last year when the Lady Harvesters won the championship.

At the regional meet this year, Hopkins won the shot put and finished second in the discus.

Hopkins and teammate Laquita Brown competed in an international track meet last month in China as part of the International Sports Exchange.

Hopkins, who holds school and discus records in the shot, turned down several college track and field offers to attend Panhandle State in Goodwell, Okla. on an academic scholarship. Hopkins indicated she may go out for the track team as a walk-on.

Melissa Nichols, another Pampa athlete, will be playing basketball at Panhandle State next season. Nichols is a sophomore transfer from Seward County Junior College in Liberal, Kans.

She is the daughter of Pampa High girls' basketball coach Albert Nichols.
