Parties Near Agreement On Dead Bodies Search

SAIGON (AP) — The United States, North and South Vietnam and the Viet Cong were reported near agreement today on a combined search for Americans and American bodies missing in Vietnam. A U.S. spokesman said the operation is expected to take years.

Reds Disregard Nixon Warnings

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence sources report that military equipment has continued to flow from North Vietnam since President Nixon warned Hanoi to stop infiltrating South Vietnam.

It's still going on, one source said. He indicated Sunday there has been no measurable slowdown of such movements in the wake of Nixon's statement last Thursday that the North Vietnamese should not lightly disregard U.S. expressions of concern.

Meanwhile, intelligence analysts estimate that the North Vietnamese have sent between 400 and 450 armored vehicles, including tanks, into South Vietnam in the less than two months since the Vietnam cease-fire.

Cambodian Pilot Attacks Palace

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — The Cambodian pilot who bombed President Lon Nol's palace, killing at least 36 persons but not the president, apparently made a successful getaway to Communist territory.

The Cambodian Air Force T28 fighter that Capt. So Potra used in the assassination attempt Saturday was last seen over Kompong Cham province, northeast of Phnom Penh. He was believed to have landed at an air strip in the two-thirds of Cambodia controlled by the Khmer Rouge, the country's Communist movement, and their North Vietnamese allies.

Potra was reported to be the lover of Princess Norodom Bopha, daughter of the chief of state deposed by Lon Nol, Prince Norodom Sihanouk. But some American sources suggested that Potra was angry because he had failed flight training.

Lon Nol in a broadcast charged that the assassination attempt was part of a Communist plot to overthrow his government.

Potra's bombs missed the presidential palace but hit the guards' compound nearby, razing more than 100 closely packed shacks. Searchers recovered 36 bodies, and more than 50 persons were injured.

Lon Nol barred foreigners from leaving the country, closed all newspapers except the government's and strengthened the watch on members of the royal family.

The bombing came amid mounting discontent over steeply rising prices, corruption and general war weariness. A few hours before the attack, a group of teachers and striking students held a public protest meeting, and militant rightists bombed it, killing two persons.

mission to complete the exchange of Vietnamese prisoners on Sunday, three days before the March 28 deadline. South Vietnam will have handed over more than 26,000 prisoners and will have received nearly 5,000 from the Viet Cong.

Canadian Foreign Secretary Mitchell Sharp returned to Ottawa early today after a week's visit to Saigon, Hanoi and Vientiane and said his government would decide "very quickly" whether it would carry out its threat to quit the International Commission of Control and Supervision because it is not effective.

The commission refused to go along with a Canadian proposal to ask all parties in the Vietnam conflict to end the fighting. Canadian Ambassador Michel Gauvin said his delegation wanted to send 31 South Vietnamese government allegations of cease-fire violations to the four-party Joint Military Commission "with an appeal to the parties" to cease hostilities.

"But we couldn't get agreement on this," he said. "Finally, we got agreement on nothing."

Indians Reject Proposal

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (AP) — Indians occupying the village of Wounded Knee say the government's proposed solution to the 20-day-old confrontation amounts to total surrender by the Indians.

American Indian Movement (AIM) leader Russell Means, promising "a final ultimatum" sometime today, said "the proposal we make will be the deciding factor in whether the negotiations continue."

"Our statement will bring the confrontation to a head," Means said after a meeting with federal negotiators in Wounded Knee Sunday.

Means said the government offer Saturday by Asst. U.S. Atty. Gen. Harlington Wood "amounts to total capitulation, total surrender" on the part of the Indians.

Wood had said the offer was the best one the government could make. Wayne Colburn, director of the U.S. Marshall Services, and Richard Hellstern, an assistant to Wood, talked for 2½ hours with the Indian leaders in Wounded Knee about the government's three-phase proposal.

Following that meeting Wood said he expects more negotiations.

Senators Discuss Economic Controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opening debate on renewing presidential authority for wage-price controls, the Senate is considering a range of amendments that would give Congress a voice in managing the economy.

The key issue under debate today was extension of the Economic Stabilization Act for another year past its April 30 expiration. President Nixon used the act as authority for the 1971 datory Phase 2 controls and the largely voluntary phase 3 program.

But the Senate has a variety of proposals that would give the President more than he asked. Most of these were pushed by Democrats during Banking Committee consideration of the bill.

Proposed amendments would: —Restore federal controls on rent for one year in most metropolitan areas with low vacancy rates. There are no rent controls under Phase 3, and many tenant organizations are pro-

Committee To Consider Release Of ITT Papers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel is weighing whether to release a secret summary of reportedly "politically sensitive" papers that the Securities and Exchange Commission got by subpoena in a probe of International Telephone & Telegraph Corp.

In the aftermath of weekend reports by columnist Jack Anderson that the SEC summary says several high-level present and past Nixon administration officials are named in the ITT papers, the House Commerce Committee's special investigations subcommittee planned a closed meeting today.

The subcommittee voted last week to make the confidential summary public today unless the Justice Department and SEC presented, in writing, "a clear and compelling statement" that disclosure would prejudice rights of any person or firm.

Anderson reported Sunday that the ITT papers contain claims that contradict former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell's sworn testimony last year to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The columnist said summaries show ITT chief executive Harold Geneen visited Washington in early August 1970 to deal with antitrust matters, and the trip, "according to the memos, was to bring pressure on Richard McLaren.

Motorcycle Wreck Injures Local Man — Ronnie Blair Campbell, 27, Pampa, is in High Plains Baptist Hospital, Amarillo, in serious condition following a motorcycle accident Saturday night.

Campbell was riding alone on Texas 273 about seven miles from town when he apparently lost control of his motorcycle, according to Texas Department of Public Safety officers who investigated the crash.

European Value Trading Briskly

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS — The floating American dollar rose strongly at the opening of foreign exchanges around the world after a two-week shutdown, and the Bank of Japan sold an estimated $50 million to keep the rate from rising too fast.

But by noon in Europe, the value of the U.S. money was edging down in brisk but nervous trading. Big money operators appeared holding off while they watched for indications whether the international decisions in Paris Friday had ended the two-month monetary crisis.

U.S. Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz conferred for an hour with British Prime Minister Edward Heath in London. Shultz reportedly pressed for quick moves to reform the international trading system to give American exporters better competitive access to world markets.

Shultz also met with Chancellor of the Exchequer Anthony Barber. Tokyo dealers reported an acute shortage of dollars in the Japanese capital after the two-week shutdown of exchanges. The Tokyo market was the first to reopen because of the time differential. The central bank's intervention was designed to keep the dollar's rate close to the level between Feb. 14, when the yen was floated, and March 2, when the exchanges closed.

In London, the pound declined sharply at the opening to $2.45 but by noon it had climbed back by a full cent, almost reaching Friday's closing rate in bank-to-bank trading of $2.4610.

In the key Frankfurt market, the dollar opened at 2.8350 marks, 21.5 pfennigs above Friday's close. But by noon the dollar had edged back to 2.82 marks.

The dollar was also up sharply in Zurich at the opening, being quoted at 3.2650 Swiss Francs, more than three centimes over Friday's rate. But by noon, the rate had dropped to 3.24 francs.

The closing rate in Tokyo was 264.90 yen, down from 266.50 on March 1 but up from Friday's 260.50.

The price of gold, which soared to a record $95 an ounce at the peak of the money crisis, was $81 in Zurich and London, drops of $1.50 and $1.75 from the price Friday.

Finance ministers of the major non-Communist trading nations agreed in Paris on Friday that all major currencies would float freely in relation to the dollar according to supply and demand forces in the market place.

The move, putting an end to the 29-year-old Bretton Woods system of fixed parities, means no state bank is committed any longer to support the dollar at a fixed value. For an indefinite period, "speculators will speculate against speculators" and not against state banks, as one American informant put it.

This is the first time since World War II that the dollar has been free to find its own value without central banks buying and selling to maintain a bottom price.

The old system of fixed exchange rates for the world's major currencies was established by the 1944 Bretton Woods Agreement. It was abandoned after massive speculation poured $3½ billion onto European exchanges on March 1, forcing their closure.

They ratified a plan on Friday in Paris calling for a joint float of the stronger Common Market currencies against the dollar along with a 3 per cent upward revaluation of the West German mark. The European governments agreed that their central banks would buy dollars only when the U.S. currency fell to a point that threatened to make their own exports non-competitive.

Two Girls Killed In Car Crash

Joleen Keel, 17, and her sister, Debra Aline, both of 1209 S. Faulkner, died in a two-car crash between Pampa and Lefors late Saturday night.

Bruce Dale Young, 19, 540 Crawford, driver of the other vehicle is reported in satisfactory condition in an Amarillo hospital with two broken legs.

His passenger, Kenneth Atkins, 16, 1125 Huff Rd., was said to be in fair condition at Highland General Hospital suffering internal injuries.

The car driven by Joleen Keel was proceeding east on FM 273 when it was struck in the right side by the vehicle driven by Young.

The car was knocked some 200 feet from the intersection by the force of the impact according to Jay Fiedling of the Department of Public Safety, who investigated the mishap.

The victims were the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Keel Jr., 1209 S. Faulkner. See Obituary Page 2.

No charges have been filed as yet in the case.

School Paper Earns Several ILPC Awards

The Little Harvester, Pampa High School's newspaper, received several awards including the Distinguished Merit award, at the Interscholastic League Press conference meeting in Austin over the weekend.

The paper was named tops in the Division 3 class, out of 59 entries from across the state.

It was also selected as runner-up for "Tops in Texas," an award presented to the paper judged best overall from all the classes in competition. San Antonio's Robert E. Lee High's Bugle also received the top award this year. The Little Harvester has received it several times in previous years.

Carolyn Hom, editor, gained second place in general columns for her "Comment." Over 400 columns were entered.

Keith Samples, junior, LH sports editor, was elected ILPC vice president.

The paper earlier had received word Thursday that it had been given a first place rating by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association in New York.

Ten PHS students attended the two-day meet which concluded with the awards banquet Saturday night. Miss Elizabeth Hurley, journalism adviser, and Bill Haynes, social studies teacher, accompanied the students.

LI Gov. Bill Hobby was the main speaker at the banquet. He was called in at the last minute to replace Dan Rather, CBS White House Correspondent, who was unable to attend because of business.

Miss Hurley said.

LI Hobby spoke on various laws currently before the legislature.

The students held a press conference with Speaker of the House Price Daniel, a former high school journalist who at one time served as president of the Texas High School Press Association.

Over 4500 students attended the conference sessions held on the University of Texas campus.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Rights Commission said today teachers in southwestern schools pay far more attention to Anglo pupils than Mexican-Americans, reinforcing and mirroring educational neglect of the Spanish-speaking minority.

Opera Tenor Dead

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Lauritz Melchior, one of the greatest Wagnerian tenors of the "Golden Age of Operatic Singers," is dead at 83.

He died here Sunday at St. John's Hospital where surgeons operated on his gall bladder last week. A hospital spokesman said the cause of death was a primary tumor of the liver.

Along with his magnificent voice, Melchior had the excellent acting ability demanded by Wagner's operas. He was a durable operatic figure whose staggering record of more than 1,000 performances of the difficult Wagnerian operas was more than three times the total of any other Wagnerian singer.

The Danish-born Melchior's endurance was legend, and from 1926 to 1950 he reigned supreme over the difficult scores by Richard Wagner.

In 1950 he left New York's Metropolitan Opera when Rudolf Bing failed to sign him for what would have been his silver anniversary with the company.

Undaunted, the jovial Melchior was kept busy for several more years by a string of concerts that took him across the nation.

LATEST GROUP

Returning POWs Head For Reunions At Home

Associated Press Writer Two planes carried 26 American prisoners of war across the Pacific today toward reunions with families and friends.

Among them was the longest held American POW, Army Maj. Floyd J. Thompson, who was met by a 9-year-old son he has never seen.

Also in the group which left Clark Air Base in the Philippines in C141 Starlifters Sunday evening were Philip W. Manhard, 51, of McLean, Va., the highest-ranking U.S. diplomat held captive, and Navy Lt. Cmdr. Robert J. Flynn, 38, of Colorado Springs, Colo., freed Thursday by the Chinese.

The other 25 are the last of 134 military men and six civilians freed last week in Hanoi by the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese.

By North Vietnamese count, 147 American prisoners are still to be released by March 28. Meanwhile, 56 former POWs prepared for extensive medical examinations today after warm welcomes Sunday at military installations from California to Maryland.

"Wonderful! Wonderful! Wonderful!" repeated Air Force Capt. William W. Butler, 32, of San Rafael, Calif., as he accepted handshakes and hugs from some of the 1,000 well-wishers greeting the group of 20 men landing at Travis Air Force Base, Calif.

"We're back in our land and we're back with our people and we are humbly grateful to God and to you our countrymen for bringing us home," said Navy Capt. Leo T. Proffitt of Palo Alto, Calif., tears welling up behind a bright smile.

At Camp Lejeune, N.C., Lt. Col. Jerry W. Marvel, 39, told 1,000 persons who turned out to greet him: "I don't know the words to say how happy I am to be here tonight. I was very fortunate in Hanoi to learn the meaning of a very small word that we sometimes take for granted.

"The word is faith. Faith in God and faith in our country, faith in our President, faith in my family and faith in my fellow prisoners."

Of the 26 flying home toward similar reunions today, Maj. Thompson of Hudson, Mass., had reason to be one of the most eager. "I'm anxious to see my family, but especially my son."

He said before leaving Clark. "He's nine years old and I've never seen him."

The second plane is to land at Travis Air Force Base, Calif., and go on to Scott Air Force Base, Ill. Marine Sgt. Ronald L. Ridegway, 23, of Houston, Tex., is among the 14 men aboard that plane. He was mistakenly declared dead in August 1969 after the bodies of several men were found in an abandoned outpost where his squad was ambushed.

'Big Red' Greeted By Happiness Sign

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — "Happiness is Big Red" was what the sign said, and "Red" himself was happy.

Maj. Glenn "Red" Wilson, who was captured Aug. 7, 1967, was one of 19 former POWs to fly to Kelly Air Force Base Sunday on their return to their home country.

Wilson, of nearby Universal City, and three other Texans stayed in San Antonio for POW processing at Wilford Hall Air Force Medical Center while four other Air Force officers changed aircraft to journey onward to Sheppard Air Force Base in Wichita Falls, Tex.

"Still others hop-scotched to other Air Force, Marine, Army and Navy hospital facilities in the South and East after experiencing the red carpet treatment in ceremonies at Kelly.

Wilson's wife and three young children sped to his open arms as soon as he completed his salutes to military officials at plane-side at Kelly.

A crowd of about 1,400, a few of whom carried signs and banners, cheered. There were also happy tears.

"I took the first tranquilizer of my life. I may have to take another one," said Wilson's mother-in-law, Mrs. R. J. Crawford of San Antonio, before the huge C141 carrying the POWs landed.

The other Texans staying at Wilford Hall—Lt. Col. H. C. Copeland of Brady, Lt. Col. Elmo Baker of San Antonio, and Maj. Terry Ueyama of Austin—reunited with their families at Kelly with the same hugs, smiles and kisses which Wilson had.

Air Force Col. John Flynn of Cleveland, Ohio made a plane-side statement which drew applause from the Texas audience.

"The jails of Hanoi were something like the Alamo. There was no place to run," said Flynn, one of four men aboard the mercy flight who will be processed at Keesler AFB, Miss.

"And our men, like the men at the Alamo, were responsible for some tremendously heroic deeds which I know will go down in history," said Flynn.

Four other POWs returned to Sheppard Air Force Base at Wichita Falls, Tex., and received similar welcomes and made similar statements.

Horinek, met by his parents, told the crowd: "I will never betray my God; my country, my president or my fellow fighting men. Engrave these words in your hearts because this is what our country expects from each one of us."

Clements also was greeted by his parents, while Sumpter and Walker were met by their joyous wives and children.

Drunk Drivers, Vandalism Fill Police Blotters

Drunk drivers and vandalism occupied the greater part of the local police blotter for the weekend with one auto accident within the city injuring five Sunday afternoon.

Joe Graves Kent, 17, 509 Harlem, suffered injuries with three passengers in his car when it was struck by a vehicle driven by Winnie Baker Tackitt, 94, Panhandle.

Mrs. Tackitt was driving west on Wilks St. and struck young Kent's car when she ran the red light at S. Hobart St., according to the police report.

She was treated for injuries at Highland General Hospital. Extent of Kent's injuries, as well as those of Randy Graves, 3, 509 Harlem, Randal Craig Evans, 20, and Donald Gene Derrick, 20, both of 1088 Varmon Drive, is not known, police said.

Mrs. Tackitt was cited by the investigating officer for failure to stop at the traffic control light.

Rural Forces Gathering Against Fund Diversion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural and small-town forces are digging in to try to head off a move in the House to divert some highway trust funds to mass-transit programs.

Their initial battle comes today in a hearing of the House Public Works subcommittee on a three-year $18-billion federal highway bill passed Thursday by the Senate.

Included in the Senate version was an administration-backed provision allowing cities to use up to $850 million a year of highway funds for mass-transit systems.

In a message to Congress on March 8, President Nixon urged that a portion of highway trust funds be "used in a more flexible fashion, thus allowing mass-transit capital investments where communities so desire."

"It is very important to recognize that this proposal does not represent an arbitrary federal shift of funds from highways to transit," the President said. "What it does stress is the right of local governments to choose the best solutions for their urban transportation problems."

last year against a procedure that would have allowed a diversion amendment to be offered.

Since last year, supporters of the mass-transit provision have gained a potent backer in Rep. John C. Kluczynski, D-Ill., chairman of the subcommittee conducting today's hearings.

But Rep. John A. Blatnik, D-Minn., chairman of the parent committee, is opposed to the proposal, as is House Republican leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan.

Opposition to diversion comes mainly from representatives of rural and small-city areas who don't want the $6-billion-a-year outlays from the highway trust fund used for other purposes. The fund is financed by taxes on fuel and tires.

NOT YET, ANYWAY

Saigon River Cruise Not Exactly A Tour

Editor's Note: Over the years, it had its moments of terror. Freighters taking war supplies to Vietnam were crippled by mines, raked by machine guns, blasted with rockets on the tortuous 46-mile passage up the Saigon River from the South China Sea. A few days ago, an Associated Press reporter journeyed up the river aboard a Saigonbound freighter.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN AP Special Correspondent ABOARD SS PRESIDENT TAYLOR in the Saigon River (AP) — The half dozen freighter-passengers, all well past middle age, had been told to expect an adventure.

Imagine, going to Saigon as a tourist!

For the four-hour passage up the narrow, bending river, past soft-sounding names like Coconut Bay, Coral Banks, Moon River, they had to sign indemnity-release forms and were ordered by the captain at dinner the night before to remain below decks.

"The war's not really over," the dining room steward fed their apprehensions. "There's a lot of diehards around shooting up the place." He mentioned names that didn't ring so softly: Charlie country, Rocket Alley, Dead Man's Bend.

On the bridge of the sleek American President Line freighter, Capt. Norman V. Jennings of Boston and San Carlos, Calif., watched the nimble Vietnamese pilot climb the rope ladder from the bobbing pilot boat. A stiff breeze was spanking out white caps across Coconut Bay, where, at the height of the war, more than 100 ships lay at anchor waiting to enter the river's mouth. Off to the starboard, the beach umbrellas and red tile villa roofs of Vung Tau, the old resort town the French called Cap St. Jacques, glittered in the noonday glare.

Jennings had made the tortuous, 46-mile passage more than 20 times before, all the way back to 1956, when the banks were lush and primitive and dank with the hot breath of the Orient. During the war, the palm trees were cut back and the mangrove swamps defoliated to discourage the Viet Cong who had made a shooting gallery of Saigon's narrow lifeline to the sea.

This time there were no sandbags on the bridge of the President Taylor, and the crew went to battle stations without helmets and flak jackets. Cease-fire was on, and it was weeks since the Shell tanker Hemisphere entered the pilot's log book as the last ship to come under heavy attack in the river.

"I didn't bother to break out the signal flares," the captain said, "but we are manning an alternate steering station. If anything happens to the bridge, you've got to be able to recover real fast. There isn't too much room to maneuver up that channel."

The pilot, 36-year-old Tran Binh Sanh, came aboard wearing a black baseball hat instead of a steel helmet; and for the first time in anyone's memory, he wasn't wearing a sidearm.

"We go up on the flood tide," Jennings said, explaining the delay in getting under way. "With all this vegetation cut back, it's difficult to tell the river from its banks. The channel is fast, narrow and full of sudden curves and bends. Shallow, too; less than 20 feet at low tide, and we have a draft of 27 feet. Ships can pass each other anywhere in the river, but there's no place for anything as big as us to turn around."

Six checkpoints climbed in numerical order up the river from Vung Tau, but the miles were counted in descending order, with Saigon's floating restaurant as the zero marker and the mouth of the river Mile 49. Checkpoint 1 was a Vietnamese navy gunboat anchored in a palmetto-shaded cove, her crew swaying gently at siesta in their hammocks. Two was an army mudflat with no sign of life but the red and yellow flag of South Vietnam flapping over a desolate sandbar.

Checkpoint 3, Dead Man's Bend, sent the compass swimming in the binnacle. The big ship seemed almost to double back on herself. Negotiating this bend on Aug. 23, 1966, the Baton Rouge Victory went aground when she hit a mine that blew apart her engine room and drowned seven sailors.

"Keeping going is all you can do; you can't even get up too much speed and still make these turns," the captain said, staring out at Mile 14 Charlie country, where the rice paddies seemed almost indistinguishable from the main channel. "Our orders always were to fire a red flare in the direction the attack was coming from and get on the radio to Moon River."

Moon River, around the next bend in sight of Nha Be's oil tanks, was the code name for the river rescue station, where helicopters, gunboats and minesweepers stood ready to defend the busy shipping channel.

"The run's a picnic now compared to what it used to be," Jennings said, as Saigon's high-rise hotels suddenly loomed above the withered landscape. He remembered having to wait a month in Coconut Bay just to come up the river and then being stranded at a mooring buoy off the downtown warehouse while the battle of Tet 1968 raged.

Sang recalled being escorted from his house to the pilot boat by two American MPs all during the battle of Tet. And he remembered when the ammunition ships traveled in convoys with helicopter protection overhead, there were always American MPs with rocket launchers assigned to make the trip upriver. Of the 22 pilots in the Saigon River Pilots Association, at least a half a dozen were wounded and almost all received medals for bravery.

Theodore Roosevelt was the only U.S. president who did not use the pronoun "I" in his inaugural address.

Ervin Suggests Aides' Arrests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The arrests of White House aides who refuse to testify before the Senate Judiciary Committee about the Watergate bugging case has been suggested as a possibility by Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C.

Ervin, interviewed Sunday on CBS' Face the Nation program, said he would recommend that the Senate send its sergeant at arms "to arrest any White House aide or any other witness that refuses to appear."

High Prices Bring Revival In Rustling

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Prodded by high beef prices, cattle rustling in Oklahoma is undergoing a resurgence.

"It's on the increase, all right—there's more of it today than ever before," said Raymond Russell of Pawhuska, an inspector with the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

The association has been engaged in cattle theft investigations for 70 years.

Last week the Albert Scorgin Cattle Co. of Altus lost two steers, 20 heifers and 31 bulls from a feed lot. The total value was $14,417.

"Whenever anything gets up in price, there's usually more people trying to steal it," Russell said.

"And with the price of cattle like it is, there's money to be made. If a cattle rustler picks up one or two head a week he might make $400, which isn't a bad week's wages."

Ellis Freeny, executive vice president of the Oklahoma Cattlemen's Association, said that even though rustling is always a problem, this year seems to be worse.

One of the biggest problems in catching the rustlers is the time lag that often occurs before a theft is reported.

"A lot of times a farmer or rancher won't report one or two animals missing because they figure they strayed off or got in a neighbor's pasture or something," Russell said.

"By the time we get some reports the animals have been missing for several weeks and our chances have been cut down pretty good."

But the biggest problem is unbranded cattle.

More than three-quarters of all animals reported stolen are unbranded.

Dear Abby

Divorce is bad enough without friends' remarks

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: After nearly 10 years of marriage, and two lovely children, my husband and I are getting a divorce.

We never washed our dirty linen in public. In fact, we had a good social life and everyone thought we were a very happy couple.

My problem: Since the news of our divorce has become public many of our friends have called to tell me how "smart" I am to call it quits. They say they have known for years that my husband was fooling around, and then they proceed to fill me in on all the sordid particulars.

What am I supposed to say? I surely can't thank them for pouring salt on my wounds with all these ugly tales. Yet, I don't know what else to say.

DEAR ACHING: Those who would pour salt on your wounds aren't friends. In the future, when someone starts to fill you in, say, "Thanks, but I'm not interested."

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are in our mid-50s. Our two children are married and on their own.

Eight years ago my wife went back to work, but I continued to carry the entire financial load. She banked most of her money in her own name, which was all right with me.

A few years ago I made a will, naming my wife as the sole beneficiary. I told her about it. A few weeks ago I suggested that my wife also draw up a will to avoid complicated legal procedures if, God forbid, she died before me. She acted on my suggestion promptly and informed me that she arranged for everything to be divided equally among me and the two children.

I felt hurt. Not because of the few miserably dollars involved, but because she knew she was my sole beneficiary, and she didn't choose to make ME hers. After all, what did our children ever do for us? Nothing!

I will refrain from further comment because I feel I am badly in need of yours. Thanks.

DEAR DISGUSTED: My guess is that your wife reasoned that if you were to survive her, you'd probably marry again. And should wife No. 2 survive you, she'd wind up with all your worldly goods, leaving nothing to your children. Since women usually survive their husbands, I am surprised you didn't apply the same reasoning.

DEAR ABBY: I too used to be annoyed with chain letters, but now I enjoy them. It gives me an excuse to write the following letter to the sender:

Dear Friend,
Thanks for the chain letter. My favorite hobby is copying chain letters and mailing them off to all my friends. I also enjoy sending money to the stranger on the top of the list.

In return for your kindness, I am sending you this REVERSE chain letter. Make a copy of this letter and send it to the person whose name is above yours on the chain letter you sent to me. You must do this within 24 hours of receipt of this letter. The person receiving it must do the same within 24 hours, and if the chain is not broken, the letter will eventually get back to the jackass who started this whole thing.

I urge you not to break this chain. Mr. J. V. Greedy broke the chain, and the very next day his mother in law came to live with him.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90020. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90020.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, MARCH 20

Your birthday today: All born today face strenuous challenging year of confrontation with new and intricate conditions. Relationships are under stress, require special reflection and care.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Reference to old customs, formal manners helps ease the way past conflicts and clashing encounters.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Cutting corners, failures to follow precautions become hazardous beyond usual. Smart alecks tend to lose out.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Active, devil-may-care friends confuse the whole situation. New methods come into use on the job, including a short cut.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Short tempers are the rule rather than the exception. The tighter the relationship, the more exasperating the provocation.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Sudden incidents around you provoke thought, rare and self-conscious reactions—or an unusual creative response.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Penny-wise has been the rule lately. If you are buying in quantity for a special reason, fine. For everyday needs, the minimum is enough.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Your grand ideas are better for another day of planning, review. Meanwhile, there are more than enough concerns to keep you busy.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Let somebody else lead while you do some hard thinking. All the solitude you can get is useful.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: You find you must move quickly to protect a friend's interests or take advantage of a passing opportunity.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Associates and relatives, no matter how long since you last worked with them or communicated, do helpful things for you.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Your most natural concern seems to be the guiding of the energy and resources of others into higher channels.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: This is hardly a day for serious purchases. You discover that everybody has worse troubles than you, if you look around.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Oswald: "One of the most important principles of successful bidding is to learn to pass when things aren't developing in a satisfactory way."

Jim: "There was nothing wrong with South's opening bid. He would have liked a few more high cards but 12 points and 5-4 distribution is usually going to lead to a good contract."

Oswald: "The two-diamond response did not really hurt South's hand. In any event it was forcing and he made his correct rebid of two hearts."

Jim: "North made the normal continuation to two no-trump and now South was unhappy. He had a three-suit hand and just did not like the idea of playing at two no-trump. He was sure that three clubs would be a better contract and bid it."

Oswald: "He was right about that. Three clubs made easily. Unfortunately for North and South it did not become the final contract. North took South right to five clubs and East decided to double. There wasn't much to the play and defense. East took two trump tricks, two aces and 500 points above the line."

We can't be sure how the play would have gone at two no-trump. North might well have made it or he might well have gone down one. The important thing to realize is that there is no way that East and West could have picked up that tidy 500 points against a two-no-trump contract.

Cities Service Announces Its Re-Structuring

TULSA — Cities Service Oil Co., a subsidiary of Cities Service Co., announces an additional step in its move to increase the effectiveness and utilization of its exploration and production personnel.

This change consists of the restructuring of the six existing exploration and production regions into three areas of two regions each. The region offices will remain in their present locations. A vice president of exploration and production has been appointed for each area, all three to be headquartered in Tulsa. All changes will be completed by summer.

D.L. Kastner will head the Central area consisting of the Mid-Continent region, headquartered in Oklahoma City, and the Southwestern region, headquartered in Midland.

Jack Phillips will head the Southern area consisting of the Southern region, headquartered in Houston, and the Southeastern region, headquartered in Jackson.

R.E. Sampson will head the Western area consisting of the Western region, headquartered in Denver, and Canada-Cities Service, Ltd., headquartered in Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

C.E. Cole will be vice president—E&P staff, also headquartered in Tulsa.

R.W. Dotson will continue as vice president—E&P services, Tulsa.

G.P. Bunn, Jr., executive vice president of Cities Service Oil Co. said, "This is in keeping with our plan of reorganization and redirection which commenced in 1968 and will result in a unified direction and effort which is so necessary in these times of rising costs and declining U.S. reserves.

"Any company in this business today must make maximum use of all of its resources if it is to survive. This change will involve no mass moves of people nor any change in our operating areas.

"We will only be naming single managers of E&P where we had two before and creating smaller operating entities for more flexibility and effectiveness," he concluded.

Women Urged To Start Businesses Carefully

By EVE SHARBUTT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) —

Starting a "super" business isn't really so difficult. All that's required are nerves of steel, absolute faith in oneself and planning, planning, planning.

With $900, ambition, enthusiasm and some good ideas, Claudia Jessup and Genie Chippis got out of the aspiring actress business and into a new service business they called Supergirls Enterprises, Ltd.

They have not been successful beyond their wildest dreams, but at least they have a long list of business clients and a plus balance at their bank.

"When we breezed into business there was no pre-planning," said Claudia. "We had an idea and boom—we had a telephone, some assignments and we fell in love with the business. That isn't the way we'd do it now."

Four years later, after many inquiries from women who would like to start a business of their own, "We thought we'd write a book about some of the things we learned," Genie said.

"There's a universality of experience in business, whether it be cosmetics, advertising, interior decorating or restaurants, and we've talked with people involved in all of them. Everybody agreed with us on the fundamentals," Claudia added.

"You can't get scared off. You can learn by doing. Starting a business is not so hard if you have enthusiasm and think it through," Genie said.

That's Progress?

Sheep flocks total 15.8 million head today, compared with 19 million 15 years ago or 44.9 million just after the Civil War. Man-made cloth has blanketed much of the wool industry.

BUSINESS WOMEN — Claudia Jessup, left, and Genie Chippis are college friends who started their own successful business.

Strongest of advice Supergirls has to offer is to get a professional in the beginning to plan a budget, check overhead and make projections for the future. This professional could also check progress at regular intervals — six months, one year, etc.

"You'll be doing yourself a favor to hire him and he will think of all the things that have to be dealt with as you go along — licenses, taxes and all that. And maybe you will only have to pay him occasionally," Genie said.

"The accountant can do projections on how many of your bills will be paid. He can even work out bill forms for things like services — party planning, or menu costs if you plan a restaurant or food service business.

"He can also offer help with overhead. In large cities, overhead can be quite high," Claudia added.

They admit they might not have made a go of their business if they had not run it on a shoestring from Claudia's

"Lots of people have terrific ideas, but they can't quite take that first step to get out and make it," Claudia said.

The all-purpose service bureau which is Supergirls was based on experience Genie and Claudia had obtained from part time jobs they had taken while seeking their big break in the theater. They decided they could shop for hard to find items, plan original parties, do research, decorate homes, carry out promotions and find creative talent for specific jobs.

"Private people never could appreciate the time we spent doing their jobs... and they weren't very good about paying their bills," Genie said.

So Supergirls now deals primarily with large businesses.

"We are still doing some finding out on behalf of agencies but we're more involved in promotions. We are able to come up with our own ideas and use some of our creativity in the feminine market, and that's important to us. We are involved in a new magazine on a very speculative basis but we believe in it. And it's still the great fun of Supergirls that we can work in so many areas, not just one," Claudia said.

Genie added that they have learned a number of business tricks.

"When we're not certain what a company wants to pay for a job, we make a list of all the things we're going to do and include a few very useless items, things we know from past research and so forth. At the end of our presentation, if the client thinks the cost is too high, we tell him we can cut items four, five, six and eight and bring the fee down," she said.

"It's a kind of education you can't get until you're on your own. If you're naive about business, you tend to forget that in its broadest definition, it is a profit-seeking concern. Things get easier, not harder when you're in business for yourself," Claudia added.

NEW YORK (AP) — Gene Roddenberry, a quiet man with an incredible background, quit television 2½ years ago when NBC cancelled the "Star Trek" series he created.

While the series' quite vocal fans raged over the cancellation, Roddenberry wrote a few movies, got married, and, as he puts it, "played golf around the world."

But touring assorted courses proved a bit dull for a man who in his 51 years has been: A B-17 bomber pilot in the South Pacific, a Pan Am pilot on DCs and Lockheed Constellations, a Los Angeles police sergeant, and one of the most respected writers in television today.

Roddenberry's self-imposed exile from the tube ends Friday night when CBS broadcasts his "Genesis II," a 90-minute pilot he created for a proposed series. It is set in the year 2133.

Unlike "Star Trek," the new show is entirely about the planet earth, a war-ravaged planet in which civilization has collapsed and broken down into isolated communities with no links to each other.

It's a grim scene faced by the show's main character, a young NASA scientist awakened from a suspended animation test that had begun 160 years earlier and was to last only a few weeks.

Roddenberry said he was encouraged to start writing for television again because when he came out of semiretirement

"studio heads and the networks were saying, 'What have you got that's different?'"

"This is the first time this has happened to me in almost 20 years in the business and I think it's going to greatly improve TV in years to come," he said.

Another factor in his return to television, he said, was that "I discovered, to my absolute consternation, that playing golf seven days a week wasn't really as much fun as sitting behind a desk."

Roddenberry said he felt a combination of fatigue and bitterness when NBC cancelled "Star Trek" at the end of a three-year run.

"To do a show as complex as that, to work 14 hours a day for three years — you've made a huge emotional expenditure as well as a physical one," he said softly.

He grinned when asked why he was returning to the television wars.

Freedom Seeking Women Find Resort

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer
SUN VALLEY, Idaho (AP) — The well-heeled woman with a yen for freedom has discovered Sun Valley as a place to ski and split, a resort where it's almost as easy to break up a marriage as it is to break a leg on the slopes.

Idaho, like Nevada, requires only a six-week residency for a valid divorce. And although life here can be expensive, it also offers a host of advantages. Some of the newly unmarried even decide to stay.

"My attorney said 'Idaho' when I told him I wanted to go there for my divorce," recalled Gee Nowakoski, now a full-time Sun Valley resident.

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Today is Monday, March 19, the 78th day of 1973. There are 287 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1920, the U.S. Senate rejected the Versailles treaty providing for a League of Nations. It was the beginning of a long period of U.S. isolationism.

On this date — In 1628, the English founded the Massachusetts colony. In 1711, war was proclaimed between Russia and Turkey. In 1918, New York City began a novel new experiment — Daylight Saving Time.

In 1942, during World War II, American men between the ages of 45 and 64 were ordered to register for nonmilitary duty.

In 1945, members of the Norwegian underground began a program of organized sabotage against German occupation troops.

In 1962, relative calm returned to Algeria after a cease-fire ended seven years of warfare between the French and Algerian nationalists.

Ten years ago: Algeria demanded that France negotiate on ending nuclear testing in the Algerian Sahara.

Five years ago: President Lyndon B. Johnson signed a bill removing gold backing from U.S. paper currency, freeing billions of dollars to defend the dollar abroad.

One year ago: A helicopter rescued three American airmen who had been shot down during stepped-up military operations in Laos.

Today's birthdays: Gen. William Westmoreland is 59. Mrs. Charles Robb — the former Lynda Bird Johnson — is 29.

Thought for today: A man who dares to waste one hour of life has not discovered the value of life — Charles Darwin, English naturalist, 1809-1882.

"But I'd heard so many good things about the place. And when three of my friends from Short Hills, N.J., came out for their divorces, it really turned out to be fun," she said.

Sun Valley—with a year-round population of 180—is far from a mecca for would-be divorcees. Last year there were only about 30 out-of-state divorces granted in the area, in contrast to 3,000 in Reno, Nev.

"We don't want this to become a divorce mill like Reno," said attorney Everett "Phez" Taylor, who has been handling divorces of the rich and social ever since the Union Pacific came through town more than 35 years ago. "We want only the carriage trade, not the bus trade."

Comfortable housing to wait out the six weeks can cost as much as $4,000. A private ski instructor at $50 a day, massages, dining out, shopping in the exclusive boutiques and other pleasures to pass the time can double the divorce bill.

"There seems to be a stream of women coming here looking for the Marlboro man to ride off into the sunset with, but that doesn't happen," said Gee. She added, however, "You can be as social as you want here. It's easy for a single woman to get around." A resident for two years, Gee works part time at a ski shop in the winter and takes long hikes with her 14-year-old daughter in the summer.

Another fan of Sun Valley is Mrs. J., now in her sixth week of residency. She asked that her name not be used.

"Reno sounded too dreary. This is the only place I considered coming," she said. "You can go through it all very easily and enjoyably here. Besides, he's paying for it all."

Happy Murphy, now Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller; Pat Kennedy Lawford, and Ann McDonnell Ford lived here during their separations.

Nondivorcing visitors to Sun Valley have included the shah of Iran: Ernest Hemingway, who wrote "For Whom the Bell Tolls" in a room at the Sun Valley Lodge; Leonard Bernstein; Andy Williams; Barbra Streisand; Mrs. Aristotle Onassis; and Ethel Kennedy.

It's fine company to enjoy and people make sure their stay is relatively carefree by deciding property settlement and child custody with their lawyers at home. It's all fairly amicable, says attorney Taylor, by the time the woman comes to Sun Valley. The Idaho lawyers get a minimum $500 or $1,000 fee.

Mrs. J. had been married almost 30 years when her husband asked for a divorce. Anxious to marry again, he offered to send her to Sun Valley. Since other members of Mrs. J.'s family had gone there for their divorces and had raved about it, she agreed.

"I have a lot of friends here so I'm really never lonely. I go cross-country skiing, take a swim, have a massage, meet friends for lunch, go shopping. Time passes quickly and there's no excuse ever to be bored," said Mrs. J., who took a three-bedroom condominium, costing $60 a day, for her stay.

What she has missed most, she says, are the cultural events of New York. For Sun Valley has no concerts or plays or current movies.

But next year's batch of divorcees will be able to enjoy the Creative Arts Center that will provide stage productions, classical concerts, lectures and seminars.

Those waiting for their divorces blend in with the vacationers who arrive in buses at the Lodge for some of the best skiing in the country, ice skating, paddle and indoor tennis, sleigh rides and discotheque dancing. Only the lawyer, a few friends, the bellboys and the ski instructors could pick out the marrieds waiting to be single again.

A bellboy or a desk clerk often acts as the witness in court to certify that the woman has completed her residency requirement.

"We're introduced to someone and told she'll be staying with us for six weeks. Of course, we know what she's there for," explained one bellhop. "Most of these women are very nice and we get to know them well over the weeks. I remember a Mrs. Moore who stayed in a room costing $75 a day. She was great fun and gave all kinds of parties for the employees. As a rule, though, most are too socially conscious to mix with the employees. After drinking and dining with someone all night, you feel kind of strange when she asks you to pick up her laundry the next morning."

Many women use the six weeks to learn or perfect their skiing. The resort has top-rate Austrian instructors whose good looks almost match their ski techniques.

It's not unusual for a woman to spot a particularly handsome ski instructor and request him for six weeks of private instruction. Friendships develop well beyond the slopes and, while some instructors say they are left with broken hearts, some are also left with expensive gifts and tips as high as $1,000.

76ers Looking Forward To End Of The Season

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
"Everyone is looking forward to the end of the season," Philadelphia Coach Kevin Loughery said Sunday after his 76ers bowed to the Baltimore Bullets 129-118 for their ninth consecutive National Basketball Association loss.

Kevin Loughery, meet Tom Heinsohn.
"This is not the end; this is just the start of something," Boston's Heinsohn said following a 109-105 victory over the Kansas City-Omaha Kings that wrapped up the Atlantic Division championship for the Celtics.

Elsewhere, Milwaukee edged Atlanta 105-104, Los Angeles trounced Phoenix 121-113, Portland upset the New York Knicks 99-96, Chicago trimmed Detroit 119-107, Seattle downed Houston 121-112 and Cleveland nipped Buffalo 102-101.

In the American Basketball Association, it was Utah 100, Kentucky 99, Indiana 119, Virginia 105, Denver 122, Dallas 105, San Diego 127, New York 106.

"That's step one," Heinsohn said after the Celtics beat a 19-point lead but then went ahead for good on Dave Cowens' lay-up with 1:06 left. "Step two is to beat out Los Angeles and step three is to win the championship."

One more Boston victory or Los Angeles loss will assure the Celtics of at least a tie for the best record in the NBA and the home court edge should the two teams meet for the championship.

Nate Archibald sparked KC-Omaha's rally by scoring 17 of his 33 points in the third period. He also had 16 assists.

Baltimore led a 13-point lead against Philadelphia but recovered to hand the 76ers their 69th defeat in 78 starts.

Bobby Tolan Seems On Way To Full Comeback

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Bobby Tolan, who came pretty far back last season—far enough to be named Comeback Player of the Year—appears to have come back the rest of the way.

The Cincinnati Reds' center fielder, who missed the entire 1971 season with a ruptured achilles tendon in his right leg, hit .283 with 82 RBI and 42 stolen bases in 1972. "I'm hoping this year to get back to the .300 mark," he says. He batted .305 and .310 in the two years before he was hurt.

Tolan seems to be well on the way to attaining that goal. After sitting out the Reds' first five exhibition games, he broke in with a 5-for-6 showing in his first two games, including a triple and home run.

And on Sunday, he drove in two runs to lead the Reds' "B" team to a 5-0 victory over Philadelphia. The Cincinnati "A" squad made it a sweep as Joe Morgan, Dan Driessen and Dave Concepcion each had three hits and drove in two runs to lead the way to an 8-3 triumph over the New York Mets.

Ed Sprague and Mel Behney combined for the five-hit shut-out that tamed the Phillies. The Reds scored twice off losing pitcher Larry Christenson in the third as Jim Driscoll, who doubled to right, and George Foster, who was hit by a pitch, scored on Tolan's double down the left field line.

A bases-loaded double by Rich McKinney in the seventh inning gave Oakland a 7-5 victory over Cleveland's B squad. The Indians' "A" team had better luck, though, unloading for six runs in the seventh inning en route to an 11-7 whipping of California. Jack Brohamer had a triple, three singles and a pair of runs batted in for the Tribe. St. Louis scored six runs in the sixth inning to ruin Stan Bahnsen's spring debut, then had to hold on for a 9-8 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Bernie Carbo's two-run homer triggered the seven-hit pasting. Dick Woodson, Bill Hands and Jim Strickland combined for a two-hitter and the Minnesota Twins, erupting for six runs in the sixth inning, clobbered the Boston Red Sox 9-1.

Pittsburgh collected nine hits off three Baltimore pitchers and defeated the Orioles 7-4. The Pirates' attack featured two hits apiece by Gene Clines, Bob Robertson, Rich Heber, and Jackie Hernandez.

Ron Swoboda, Rick Dempsey and Hal Lanier each drove in two runs as the New York Yankees erased a six-run deficit in the sixth inning and added four more in the seventh for a 10-6 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Don Sutton and Eddie Solomon combined for a five-hitter as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat Houston 6-0. Lee Lacy led a 10-hit Los Angeles attack with three singles and a double and Willie Crawford drove in three runs.

The Texas Rangers scored three runs on Alex Johnson's homer and a triple by Mike Epstein to defeat the Atlanta Braves 5-1.

Keith Marshall singled home Amos Otis from second base in the bottom of the 10th inning to give Kansas City a 3-2 victory over the Montreal Expos. Otis, who also singled three times, started the Royals on their way in the 10th with a double.

Volleyball, Tennis Play

Pampa High's girls volleyball team is in Hereford today for its second game in the district's second half.

After sharing the first half title with Amarillo High, Pampa dropped its second half opener to Tascosa last Monday in Harvester Fieldhouse.

PHS' tennis team is scheduled to play Perryton tomorrow here. Over the weekend, the Harvester netters took second place in the tennis competition at the Perryton Sports Festival. Perryton won the matches.

Minnesota and Manhattan opposing Alabama.

In the weekend's opening round action it was Notre Dame 69, Southern California 65, Louisville 97, American 84, North Carolina 82, Oral Roberts 65, Massachusetts 78, Missouri 71, Fairfield 80, Marshall 76, and Virginia Tech 65, New Mexico 63.

Against Kentucky, the Hoosiers blew a 13-point halftime lead and fell behind with less than eight minutes to play.

"I'm just happy that our kids didn't crack from the pressure of blowing the lead and getting behind," Knight said. "And proud that we were able to regain the momentum we had lost."

Kentucky went to a zone defense to get back in the game. Then Knight decided to move freshman Quinn Buckner from the point to the high post and the Hoosiers were on their way to St. Louis.

Tommy Curtis, the 5-foot-11 UCLA guard, came off the bench midway through the first half, with the Bruins trailing 16-7, put them on the attack and helped pull out the victory over San Francisco's 19th-ranked team.

UCLA Coach John Wooden expects Indiana to play at least as deliberately as San Francisco.

"I expect a conservative game," he said. "Their coach, Bobby Knight, usually has one of the top defensive teams in the nation—in statistics. But that's because they hold the ball so much."

Teams Announced
LOS ANGELES, Tex. (AP)—All-state basketball teams picked by coaches in the Texas Catholic Interscholastic League include two players each from state champions Houston Mount Carmel, Laredo St. Joseph and Corpus Christi Incarnate Word.

The Class 2A first team included David Rodriguez and Tony Pogue of class champion St. Joseph-along with Larnel Mitchell of Galveston O'Connell, Younel Means of Ennis St. John and Mike Bassire of Lubbock Christ the King.

Laura Holmes of Incarnate Word, Debbie Moser of Lubbock Christ the King and Rudy Roriguez of Fort Worth Nolan were the forward on the girls' first team, and the guards were Kathryn Smith of Incarnate Word, Nancy Harwood Dallas Bishop Lynch and Shirley Popelka of Houston St. Pius.

Bullish on central air conditioning? Consider investing just a little more in a long-term, blue chip Gas air conditioning system.

Only a Gas air conditioning system pays you regular dividends for many happy years. That's because the heart of a Gas cooling system is a simple gas burner, rather than an electric, mechanical compressor. A clean-burning gas flame doesn't wear out—so there's less to go wrong, fewer maintenance calls, a longer life with no loss of original cooling capacity. And because natural gas is the prime energy source, you'll also save money on operating cost.

Gold And Hamburger

When a mob wants bread, it tears up the bakery. So wrote a Spanish economist a score of years ago. He meant that, unless we take thought in pursuing our objectives, we are likely to destroy the very process by which we would accomplish them. You are witnessing some examples of unthinkingness today—picket lines in front of grocery stores and that type of thing—because of high meat prices. The supposition is that the grocer is somehow guilty because he is the person who puts the price tag on hamburger. A prevalent notion is that the man behind the counter is at liberty to put any dollar-and-cents figure he chooses on the product that he sells. One question should be sufficient to pierce that hallucination. How much hamburger do you think a butcher would sell if his price were 50 cents a pound higher than the hamburger offered in neighboring stores? The fact is, your butcher's prices must stay in line with the competition. If he could buy lower, so could his competitors, and the price to you would be lower. The price of meat goes up and down as a result of supply and demand. Supply in turn is influenced by the amount of money the livestock feeder pays for feed, by the amount that the feed-riser pays for gasoline and equipment, by the amount that the gasoline refiner pays for crude oil, and so on down the line. We do not mean to say that the final price per pound of the hamburger you buy is a composite of all previous costs that went into the production of the hamburger. That may or may not be the case in any given instance. What we do mean is that all previous costs are a factor that determine whether it is financially feasible to feed a lot of cattle, swine and sheep, or only to feed a few, and those under the more favorable circumstances. The fact that the farmer who grows the livestock feed must pay more for the gasoline he uses in his tractor is the link that shows the impact of foreign exchange on your very own food market. For a large share of oil is imported from Arabian countries whose governments have grown distrustful of the unbacked Yankee dollar. They are requiring hard money which the U.S. does not have at Ft. Knox, any more. In this manner, the mismanagement of U.S. finances which has shaken world confidence in the dollar really does affect you after all—right in the breadbasket and at the meat counter. Obviously the remedy is not within the capacity of the grocery store. Picketing there will not do any good. Remote, though it may seem, an effective effort at lowering of prices must come from one or both of two sources—lessened demand or increased supply. One cure is to buy less meat. At least a major share of the other cure is hard money, a type of money in which all people have confidence, including the Arabs who supply the oil that runs this country's farm machinery.

Dollar Doubletalk

When the dollar was devalued for the second time a few weeks ago, the propaganda mill of the federal government was kicked into high gear to assure the American people that such devaluation would have little if any effect on the spending of the dollar in this country. Of course they did admit that any foreign-made goods purchased would cost a bit more. Also, we were assured, the devaluation of the dollar would strengthen America's position in the world trade picture. So really, we were urged to believe, devaluation was a good thing. Now, with the dollar continuing to lose prestige overseas, the government is trying to assure the American people that further devaluation of the dollar will not be necessary, so we shouldn't worry. Seems strange. If devaluation doesn't affect American spending money at home, and if devaluation is such a great thing to help the U.S. in world trade, why do we need to be reassured that it won't happen again?

Truth often suffers more by the heat of its defenders than from the arguments of its opposers. William Penn

Let's Collect On Some Of Those IOUs

By PAUL HARVEY First aid for the American dollar is not enough. Our foreign involvement and our trade imbalance have flooded other nations with Yankee dollars, and all those other nations know to suggest its revaluation for us-U.S. Isn't anybody going to suggest that they pay us what they owe us? Somebody is. I don't know how much money other countries owe us; apparently nobody does. My files say $138 billion. Our House subcommittee on foreign operations set out two years ago to find out and all they've found out is that it's "something in excess of $46 billion." If that were all, that's a pile of money. While neighbor nations owe us that much, what's the big idea of them buying up gold, jewels and real estate in the United States because they mistrust our dollar—while at the same time neglecting to pay us what they owe us? Arkansas Rep. Bill Alexander of that congressional subcommittee has persistently insisted that collection efforts be increased. They were. That committee's efforts were almost solely responsible for initiating diplomatic talks with Russia on this subject. But Russia agreed to pay us only $722 million on a multi-billion-dollar obligation, and so far, has paid only $12 million. Subcommittee pressure got Iran to agree to cough up $35 million owed for surplus property provided after World War II. But so far we have only Iran's word and not money. Delinquent debts have been paid by Morocco, Spain and Italy—in part. There is one way in which the money-nor the promise of as much as $100 million from nations known to owe us more than $46 billion! The subcommittee is urging our diplomats in France and West Germany to press claims on those countries—but without effect. The multiplicity of currencies involved in any international monetary consideration confound most of us. But shucked down to the cob, as they say in Rep. Alexander's Ozarks, the present pressure on the American dollar results from too few of 'em over here and too many of 'em over there. Our huge investments in and purchases from other countries turned world trade upside down. Further devaluation of the American dollar is not a medicine, it's a narcotic; ultimately it undermines the system. A "cure" requires that our nation revert to producing more goods for the money so that it'll pay both them and us to buy American.

BRUCE BLOSSAT Defense Savings Lie in Manpower

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Since manpower costs today represent more than half of total defense spending, this is clearly the most sensible place to look for savings. But most attackers of defense outlays still think it's sexier and simpler to hack away at new weapons systems. Items like the proposed B-1 bomber, the advanced, missile-bearing Trident nuclear submarine, the continued multiple-warheading of many of our already employed land-based missiles are highly visible targets for the assassins. An exacting review of the defense manpower situation requires considerable sophistication and subtlety, but, rewarding as it might prove to be in savings, few in Congress seem willing to undertake it — or to make compelling demands upon the Pentagon in this field. Now, of course, new weapons systems are expensive, and like nearly everything else America puts together these days, they tend consistently to get into cost overruns which are quickly advertised by practiced wastewatchers like Wisconsin's Sen. William Proxmire. Still the military has an advantage in this struggle. It can argue plausibly that a defense force, especially its strategic element, must constantly be modernized, must be on guard against obsolescence. It can also successfully stir fears, legitimate or otherwise, that not to advance its weaponry technically is to risk giving an edge to its potential adversaries. There is one way in which rising manpower costs and the outlays for new weaponry intertwine, and here, say some budget specialists, the Congress can be tough as nails with the military without seeming to impede technical advances. The more sophisticated our new weapons systems become, the more dependent they are upon supremely skilled and hence high-paid personnel. In fact, some budget experts say these new systems call not only for higher skills but more people. Some analysts believe, therefore, that both Congress and the President should require Pentagon planners to design new weaponry with decisive intent to hold down if not bar altogether these associated higher manpower costs. A more productive area for manpower savings may be in what are called the general purpose forces, which leave out of account the strategic missile weaponry, whether airborne, land-based, or sea-based. It is a commonplace, dating at least from World War II, that U.S. military forces are far more amply supplied with support elements than any in the world. Given our basic wealth and high living standards, this is understandable and, to some extent, probably inescapable. But there are suggestions from a good many non-government budget specialists that we could field well-trained combat forces on a much leaner support base than we presently have — without real loss either in combat effectiveness or morale. Unhappily, precision is lacking in the definition of what support levels are "sufficient." A heavy charge should be laid upon the Pentagon to sharpen its real needs in this field, and, unsexed though the job may be, determined defense budget-cutters in Congress should be going at it. By one set of measures, the Brookings Institution estimated that for the present fiscal year indirect defense support costs "per unit of combat capability" are substantially higher than at the Vietnam war peak in 1968, when they were considered abnormally high. Brookings could find no comparable gain in effectiveness to justify the higher support levels. The whole issue is very complex, but it truly deserves the most pains-taking exploration by all those concerned with a proper defense. The reason that so many people's ships don't come in is that so few are ever initially launched. Every woman needs the protection of a strong man to steady the stepladder while she paints the garage.

H. L. Hunt Writes

LEARN FROM EXPERIENCE Theories are interesting and can be useful for all manner of human endeavor. In the ancient world, theories were dreamed up and accepted or rejected without much concern with how they worked out in practical experience. The essence of the so-called "scientific method," which is a rather recent human invention, was to check theories against experiments and experience to see if they were valid. Now we seem to be drifting backward into the errors of the ancient world and of the Middle Ages, when facts were ignored in favor of theories no matter how strongly experience proved the facts to be in error. Marxism-communism-socialism and all their off-shoots claim to be scientific, but experience proves the opposite. They claim that the theories of Marx are the answer to hunger, poverty and disease. Marx's theories have been expounded and tested for more than 100 years, but it is the Marxist-communist-socialist governments whose people continue to hunger, as the false theories of Marx turn food-exporting nations into dull tyrannies which must import food from capitalist farmers. Good working people of Republic USA have never fallen for the Marxist promises, but they have been betrayed by Marx-oriented leaders, especially those in politics and education. Working people are at last overcoming apathy and trying to turn the tide against crime, communism and inflation, all of which feed on each other and endanger the life of our Republic. We must win this battle.

Question Box

QUESTION: Chairman Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board seems to have entered the dietary business with his recommendation that "The American public will be just as well off if it spends less on meat and more on cheese." What business has this man telling people what to eat? Isn't his statement comparable to Marie Antoinette's comment when told the people could not afford bread, when she said "Let them eat cake."? ANSWER: We think the chairman of the FRB accidentally came up with a little intelligent advice, in economics as well as dietetics, even though we think he should look at his own house when he starts advising people what to do about the high prices resulting from inflation. For Mr. Burns, as chairman of the FRB, is a part of the problem. The Federal Reserve, serving its legal task of helping the national government finance its deficit spending, is contributing greatly to the inflation. This results in increased prices, as well as higher labor and other costs. As we have pointed out many times, the attempt to regulate wages and prices is an attempt to treat the symptoms, but not the ailment itself. However, Mrs. Burns' recommendation that when the price of meat gets too high that people find a substitute source of protein is good economics that people have been practicing for years until their political masters set the example of spending regardless of income. Many people of limited income have resorted to using less expensive substitutes when their favorite foods have become too costly. Cheese is a good source of protein, nutritionists will assure one, and when it is more readily obtained at a lower price, it is only good sense to use it. It is not at all comparable to the famed statement of Marie Antoinette. Mrs. Burns was suggesting that if the people could not afford the more expensive food, perhaps they could achieve the same purpose by eating something less expensive, but still nutritious. The French queen was showing her disdain for her starving subjects. We would that Mrs. Burns would remind President Nixon that the way to start reversing inflation is for the national government to start living within its income—eat a little cheese instead of more expensive meat. That would do more good than offering dietary advice to the people who are not responsible. "Tell me," said a philosopher, "where is God?" "First tell me," said the other, "where He is not." —Anonymous Hoyt King says: don't laugh at the coffee tycoon—he's urned his money. A spendthrift is a guy who blows his savings account on a night on the town. The life of man is a journey; a journey that must be traveled, however bad the roads or the accommodations.—Oliver Goldsmith, English novelist.

Inside Washington

By Robert S. Allen

Arab States Urge Leniency For Khartoum Killers WASHINGTON — The future of relations between the U.S. and Sudan depends entirely on the "measure of justice" meted out to the eight Black September assassins. Anything short of their execution will be deemed unacceptable—with consequent prompt and direct impact on the ties between the two countries. That has been made unmistakably clear to Sudan. Officially, the U.S. is keeping strict hands-off of Khartoum's handling of the Palestinian terrorists' cold-blooded murder of ambassador Cleo Noel and charged d'affaires George Moore. In its carefully restrained and guardedly correct formal dealings, Washington is proceeding on the basis that Sudan will act properly and decisively. At the same time the U.S. is letting it be known it is well aware that intense Arab pressure is being exerted on president Gaafar al-Nimeiry to deal leniently with the guerrilla killers. Also that the U.S. "could not countenance" such covert activity determining the fate of the ruthless slayers of the two American diplomats. Ironically, in the forefront of the undercover effort to save the desperadoes are two Arab states closely aligned with the U.S.—Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, both immensely oil-rich, both ruled by monarchs, and both large contributors to Al Fatah and the maniacal Black Septemberists. Also highly significant is that Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, distant from Sudan, being separated by sea and desert, are taking the lead in behalf of the Khartoum killers—instead of Egypt and Libya, which border on Sudan. But these two Arab powers are at icy odds with the Nimeiry regime and in no position to do any pressuring. That is particularly so regarding oil-rich Libya—another big donor to the Palestinian terrorists. Last year, Sudan and Libya openly clashed when the former refused to allow Libyan troops to be airlifted over Sudan to help Ugandan president Idi Amin in a border war with Tanzania. And last week, president Nimeiry, in his irate broadcast excoriating the Noel-Moore assassins, went out of his way to castigate Libya and, inferentially, heap scorn and derision on its strongman ruler Col. Muammar Qaddafi. What They're Up To Immediate aim of Saudi Arabia and Kuwait is to avert a death sentence against the eight Palestinian slayers. The strategy behind that is to play time for their lives. In the parleying with Khartoum authorities, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait concede the killers of Noel, Moore and Belgian charge d'affaires Guy Eid cannot go unpunished. The Sudanese are highly sensitive about their sovereignty, and in Nimeiry's broadcast he particularly stressed outrage at that being violated. So the Saudi and Kuwait negotiators are craftily proposing that the murderers be given heavy jail sentences—from which in a few years, when the blood thirsty incident has been forgotten and world attention is focused elsewhere, they could be quietly pardoned. As Saudi and Kuwait are suavely counseling, this plan would be a canny way out of the dilemma. They argue it would save Sudan's face, placate the U.S., at least in some measure, and win favor with the Arabs. What Nimeiry does remains to be seen. Time will tell the fateful story. More Gravy The Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts is back at the public trough again. This time it is for a relatively "small" handout—$22,500 for holly shrubs. The hardy and prickly plants will replace ivy which originally was installed in more than 14,000 square feet of planters bordering two levels of the huge marble structure on the Potomac River. The expensive ivy was largely destroyed by wild garlic, yellow clover, dandelions—and debris from theater and concert goes, including discarded cocktail glasses. So the National Park Service, now in charge of upkeep of the center, at $500,000 per annum cost to taxpayers, decided to replace the ravaged ivy with holly. The $22,500 outlay for it is the center's latest go-round at the public till. Its previous takes, over a period of years, total more than $43 million. It will soon look like Christmas at the Kennedy Center," says Rep. William Scherle R-Iowa, longtime critic, "and as usual the public will be cast in the role of Santa Claus. The government is being tagged for $22,500 to deck the outside of the marble halls with holly bushes; the latest instance of taxpayers' involuntary contribution to culture's biggest compost heap." Another First The nation's capital has scored another first-of-a sorry kind. It is now the No. 1 city with reported cases of syphilis per 100,000 population. Authority for this dismal information are local public health officials. They report that previously Washington was fifth in the number of syphilis cases—after Newark, Atlanta, San Francisco and New Orleans. But in the past several months it zoomed past them to top the sordid list. In doing so the capital also moved up to fourth from seventh in reported gonorrhea cases—outstripping Atlanta, Memphis and Charlotte.

Israeli Educators Smash Taboos, Teach Students of Christ

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli educators have smashed a major taboo and are giving 13-year-old pupils their first real lessons on the life of Jesus and the growth of Christianity.

Trying to escape the wrath of ultra-Orthodox Jews, teachers take a low-key approach to the subject, sticking to history and avoiding theological controversy.

The issue of who killed Christ is handled in a few words, and the name Judas never appears in the syllabus because, as an official teachers' guidebook points out, the question "may arouse emotional reactions among the pupils."

But in a country where many immigrants have known little comfort among Christians, and where some Jews still spit on the ground at the mere mention of "Yeshu," the introduction of Christianity into Israeli classrooms is striking.

The program, brought into the seventh grade last year, covers its ground in four one-hour lessons.

This is hardly exhaustive—but in previous years pupils spent 30 minutes of their 12 years of schooling thumbing through a few pages on the subject, then abandoning it.

A 35-page textbook recommended by the Education Ministry tells the story of Jesus tersely. It describes Roman oppression in the Holy Land and the profusion of self-styled messiahs promising a better afterlife. Then it continues:

"Into this reality, Jesus was born. Little is known of his life, and less of his childhood."

The textbook portrays Joseph and Mary as observant Jews who always spent the Passover festival in Jerusalem, "and it is easy to imagine how the holy places in Jerusalem were impressed upon the mind of the Galilean boy from Nazareth."

Then came "a turning point in Jesus' life, following his encounter with John the Baptist.

"This John appeared in Jericho, publicly proclaimed the coming of the Kingdom of Heaven, and called on Jews to prepare for it."

The pamphlet quotes at length from Jesus' teachings, describes the miracles, then reaches the story of the Crucifixion:

"The authorities could not ignore this man claiming to be a messiah, disrupting public order and predicting the destruction of the temple ..."

"Jesus was arrested by emissaries of the high priest and was brought for interrogation. During questioning Jesus proclaimed himself the messiah and son of God. Upon hearing this, the priest rent his clothes and ordered Jesus' trial by the Roman ruler Pontius Pilate ..."

"He was sentenced to crucifixion as a rebel against the empire."

Later, the textbook deals with Christian hatred toward Jews as supposed killers of Christ. It teaches simply:

"The Christians blamed the entire Jewish people for the crucifixion of Jesus and went even further, placing responsibility on Jews for all the generations to come."

Despite its approach, the Christianity syllabus has aroused the ire of Israel's Orthodox Jews. Says Rabbi Menahem Porush, a religious political leader:

"We oppose it because it damages Jewish sensibilities. There is no good reason to plant these things in the brains of our children in the land of Israel."

Porush says he would be less indignant if the textbook took a negative approach to Christianity from a Jewish point of view, "but after all we have suffered from Christians, a knowledge of their history can do no good for Israeli children."

Shevah Eden, the Education Ministry's director of school syllabuses, comments:

"Our approach is entirely historical, and teachers are advised to avoid theological issues. But it would be absurd to teach history without taking in Christianity's impact on civilization."

A teacher guide appended to the textbook emphasizes "a distinction between objective analysis and subjective opinion."

As one education official put it: "Israel is adult enough to take an objective look at other religions."

Commission Reports Oil Well Completion Decline

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission reported that 179 oil wells and 57 gas wells were completed during the past week in Texas.

That raised the total oil well completions for the year to 726, compared with 889 a year ago, and gas well completions to 293, compared with 191 in 1972.

The commission said 368 wells were plugged, including 111 dry holes.

Fourteen wildcat gas wells were drilled—6 in San Antonio's No. 2 district, 2 each in the Midland and Pampa districts, and 1 each in San Antonio's No. 1 district and in the Houston, Corpus Christi and Kilgore districts. Five wildcat oil wells were drilled—2 in the Houston district and 1 each in the Corpus Christi, Kilgore, Abilene and Lubbock districts.

WORRY CLINIC

Luella's tension would vanish if she'd follow the psychological prescription below. And millions of you "Worry Warts" about your health would become happy, extroverted people, freed from heavy costs of tranquilizers and sleeping pills. Get hep!

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

CASE W-554: Luella B., aged 28, is a busy housewife. "Dr. Crane," she began, "my 3 kiddies and household duties keep me feeling tense and frustrated."

"So I grow irritated at the children and quarrel with my husband."

"What can I do to gain a serene spirit and feel more calm?"

Instead, it is an invisible force that promotes relaxation from abnormal tensions. It also banishes insomnia at night. It is thus superb insurance for a longer, happier life.

During short athletic contests or brief wrestling with an office or domestic problem, we get keyed up and experience higher blood pressure, faster pulse and a zest for winning.

That form of tension is not the "abnormal" sort I mentioned above.

But when you allow such brief periods of tension to persist into the evening or let them keep you awake at night, then that is abnormal.

Millions of people now resort to whiskey or cigarettes or sleeping pills, tranquilizer drugs and frequent visits to a physician in their hectic attempt to gain relaxation.

Also, the modern M.D., plus his pills, often have replaced the Almighty in modern society.

For such patients now worship their doctor in lieu of God and regard medical bills as substitutes for the Temple sacrifices which ancient Samuel and Elisha prescribed for followers of Jehovah.

If you readers wish to shake off your anxieties and hypochondria, then link up ACTIVELY with a nearby church.

Don't waste your life in a pagan's unnecessary fears but gain the proper serenity of spirit that comes ONLY by joining God's team!

Also, adopt the "Compliment Club" strategy for winning friends and extroverting your attention from your "inwards," so send for that booklet, enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Box 184, Dallas, Texas 75201. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of the booklets.)

SPIRITUAL TRANQUILIZERS

A superb psychic tranquilizer is simply to ask yourself:

"What would I do today if I knew I were due to die before morning?"

This question is not intended to scare you readers who dread death.

But to let you gain a wider perspective.

For then you'll find that many supposedly major problems become trivial.

They dwindle fast from mountains to molehills!

For when you begin to contemplate eternal verities, your baby's glass of spilled orange juice or Junior's muddy trousers become negligible causes for a verbal explosion.

One reason why grandparents seem far more tranquil than you young parents, is their constant realization that today may be their last.

Our medical tranquilizers exert but a temporary dulling of your tension.

But spiritual tranquilizers can be of lasting nature.

And they don't cost you a visit to a physician nor an expensive prescription for pills!

Religion is thus a much more efficient tranquilizer than all the other drugs we medic prescribe!

And one reason why church people actually have less peptic ulcers, fewer heart attacks, and lower blood pressure, is this spiritual tranquilizer, namely, religion.

It is not an opiate for the masses, as Communism avers.
