Celanese would irrigate with waste water

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

A new waste disposal proposal may mean Celanese Chemical Co. will join the same farmers who blasted the firm's underground waste plans in April — and at least one of the farmers says that's fine with him.

Celanese currently is seeking a permit from the Texas Water Commission to use liquid waste to irrigate alfalfa and grasses on a plot of land near its chemical plant five miles west of

The irrigation project would all but replace underground disposal wells three miles east of Pampa that prompted protests from area farmers during an April hearing before Water Commission Examiner Duncan Gordon, company officials said.

Celanese had planned to pump 855 gallons per minute of treated liquid waste through a 13-mile pipeline extending to the south of Pampa. The waste would have consisted of 99.5 percent water, 0.4 percent salts and 0.1 percent "organic compounds," and would have been dumped down 10,000-foot injection wells

Area landowners complained that the project would devastate their mineral rights and risk damaging the Ogallala Aquifer, a major source of underground water in the Plains.

Gordon has since approved the disposal-well plan and recommended that the commission issue Celanese a permit. The commission is scheduled to make a decision by Aug. 18.

But despite the apparent approval of the $28 million project, Celanese officials think they've found a better way.

Project Manager Phil Rapstine said the company does not plan to abandon the well site, but will probably use it only sparingly if the irrigation permit is approved by the water commission. And plans to build the plant-to-well pipeline are in the process of being scut-

'We will not be assembling the pipeline to the injection well, assuming the acceptance of this permit," Rapstine

Rapstine said Celanese has an option on a parcel of land directly southeast of the plant, and plans to irrigate alfalfa, Bermuda grass and Jose tall wheat grass with specially treated waste

Thousands stomp at bluegrass jam

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

MOBEETIE - Pickers picked, grinners grinned and fiddlers fiddled this weekend as the happy sounds of bluegrass rang out over the flat plains surrounding the Texas Panhandle's oldest community.

Close to 4,000 bluegrass lovers converged on the grounds of the Old Mobeetie Jail Museum for the eighth annual Old Mobeetie Bluegrass Festival, which began Friday night and wraps up this morning with a two-hour gospel show beginning at 10.

A lot of spectators were there not only to listen, but to play, whether on the "official" stage or in one of the many impromptu jam sessions scattered about the camping area

Some just showed up with the knowledge that they'd have a chance to play some old-time music with some new-found friends

'I just came over to visit and pick," said banjo player Earl Niemeyer of Amarillo, as he sat under a shade tree Saturday and iammed the afternoon away with members of West Texas Grass and several other bands

"I don't even know who all these guys are with," Niemeyer

Around the grounds it was the same, and although most of the spectators may have thought they came to watch what was on stage, there were almost as many mini-concerts as there were shady spots and campsites to jam

And everywhere the music cooked - as hot as the 90-plus heat that prompted spectators to find new and unique ways to beat the heat.

Nine-year-old Justin Sloan of Pampa curled up on a bench underneath an umbrella to escape the sun's penetrating rays. Others used the sun as an excuse to tour the Old Mobeetie Jail — the oldest jail in the Panhandle.

Members of the bluegrass band Free Wheelin' of Amarillo said they finally located a shady See STOMP, Page 2

New strip debuts Monday The most popular of the new comic strips to appear in the past two years will debut in The Pampa News Monday, when Calvin and Hobbes jump onto the daily comics page Drawn by cartoonist Bill Watterson, Calvin and Hobbes was appearing in approximately 130 newspapers less than three months after its distribution by Universal Press Syndicate.

Calvin and Hobbes replaces the comic strip Tumbleweeds.

Since then, its popularity has continued to grow as more newspapers have begun running the comic strip and as readers' polls have placed it at or near the top in lists of favorite comics in all age categories

It took Watterson a lot longer than three months, however, to gain syndication — about five ears, in fact. Watterson, who says he squandered a rather unremarkable childhood in Chagrin Falls, Ohio, had his own primitive cartoons appear in the school newspaper and yearbook — "and not a few doors at various boy rooms" — by the time he graduated from high school

At Kenyon College, he was encouraged by "fellow delinquents" to pursue political cartooning, also majoring in political science. He earned a degree in 1980 and a major Cincinnati daily immediately offered him a job as editorial cartoonist.

But, Watterson recalls, within a matter of months the editor returned from the sanitarium, and Watterson was fired. Disillusioned by the reception awarded his political cartoons, he turned to comic strips. That same wear he submitted his first strip — "a sort of outer space parody'' - to several syndicates. It was rejected, the beginning of a series of rejection slips and piling debts. So he tried an animal comic and a couple of starring a young person in his first job and apartment. They were turned down, too.

In an interview with Editor and Publisher in February 1986, Watterson recalled, "When each one was rejected, I would read into any comments the syndicates had written and try to figure out what they were looking for." He later realized this was a mistake. since he found himself trying to do something trendy rather than drawing what came most natur-

But the years of effort were not totally wasted. One of his failed comic strips featured two minor characters named Calvin and Hobbes. One syndicate liked the outrageous 6-year-old and his pet tiger so much it advised Watterson to make them the stars of their own comic than with a "worm or space For another, the kid is not so cute that people are turned off. Instead. Calvin is far from that. 'There's an undercurrent of nastiness to him. He's got a little dark underside." Still, he is a kid. Another possible reason is its fantasy element. Hobbes is a stuffed tiger to everyone else, but the animal is absolutely real to Calvin. They converse, play and do many other things together. The hyperactive Calvin also has an intense imagination, slipping into bizarre fantasies and daydreams at a moment's notice. And editors and readers may be drawn to the comic's art which has an exaggerated quality akin to some animated cartoons. Indeed, Watterson said he admired certain television cartoons as a kid

Watterson also acknowledges influence and inspiration from other popular comic strips over the years, including Pogo, Peanuts, Doonesbury, Bloom County and Krazy Kat.

In addition to his successful Calvin and Hobbes strip, Watterson also currently does one editorial cartoon a week for a chain of suburban Cleveland newspapers that he has contributed to since high school

Watterson currently resides in Hudson, Ohio, with his artist wife Melissa and their adopted "children," three cats named Juniper Boots, Sprite and Pumpernickel.

Chemical spill causes 10,000 to flee

AVON, Ind. (AP) - A flammable chemical spilled at a Conrail train yard Saturday when steel rods knocked a hole in a railroad tanker, forcing the evacuation of more than 10,000 people and injuring at least 12, officials said. The spill at Conrail's Avon Yard occurred about 7 a.m. when the steel slipped from a flatbed car and ruptured the tanker coupled behind it, said Lt. Steve Golden of the Hendricks County Sheriff's Department.

More than 10,000 people from a two-mile by three-mile area around the site were evacuated. said Tom Drake

"If all that has been done, from previous information, it sounds like they could develop a reasonable irrigation operation," VanZandt said.

One problem that area agriculture experts foresee with the irrigation plan is storing water when heavy irrigation isn't needed.

Guard said excess waste would be stored in deep, lined ponds near the site. He said the ponds are significantly different from solar evaporation ponds that the federal government has ordered Celanese to phase out because of leakage.

Leaking solar ponds were what initially forced Celanese to search for another disposal method.

Addressing another concern, Rapstine said wastewater used to irrigate Celanese land would be kept from spilling onto adjoining property by an earthen berm surrounding the chemical company's farmland.

Rapstine said Celanese must follow basically the same permit procedures with the Water Commission as the firm did with the disposal wells.

"If everything goes well, we should have our permit by the middle of October," Rapstine said. Water Commission spokesman Bill Colbert said the permit has been reviewed by the TWC technical staff and was sent to the commission office for scheduling Friday. He said public notices, advising landowners of their right to request a public hearing, could be published by early August.

Colbert said the Celanese irrigation request is not unusual.

"Irrigation with waste water is fairly common."

he said. Meanwhile, Celanese officials can only wait. But they are confident the irrigation permit will be approved without a hitch.

'In all these things, we've assumed success, and we haven't stopped any engineering work," Guard said. "We felt like we met all the state's require-

AUSTIN — The bandwagon Bill Clements rode to victory last November ran head-on into political reality.

The Texas Legislature may never be the same again.

When the fog of seven months of legislating lifted, a governor who had promised no new taxes signed the largest tax increase in state history, and the once one-party Texas House discovered that political affiliation makes a big difference now.

The Legislature, using all 30 days of its overtime special session, finally passed a balanced budget. State government will spend a record $38.3 billion in 1988-89, and taxpayers will pay $5.7 billion more to run it.

Those results came after Clements, a Republican, campaigned against any new taxes and for four months vowed to veto any tax increase larger than $2.9 billion.

So what happened? Secretary of State Jack Rains, a Republican, Clements appointee and gubernatorial ally, said the outcome was the best the anti-tax governor could do against a Senate where Democrats rule 25-6 and a House where Democrats outnumber Republicans 94-56.

'Politics is the art of the possible," Rains said. "Within the realm of possibility, Bill Clements has done the best job he can do for his constituency and his viewpoint."

Clements argues that his mission was accomplished. He vowed to stop "run-away" government growth and did it, he says. Citing 1986-87 spending of $37.4 billion, he asserted that the 1988-89 increase is less than either the inflation rate or population growth.

"If your math works like mine, that is a 2.4 percent increase for the next two years, or 1.2 percent per year. Those are hard numbers. And I'm not confused at all," Clements declared. "We have literally stopped the growth in Texas state government."

What he didn't do was keep his campaign promise

When filing as a candidate on Feb. 3, 1986, Clements said: "I have the knowhow and the commitment to tell Texas that I will veto any and all tax or fee increases. Bill Clements stands absolutely firm on this issue.'

On Oct. 21, 1986, just days before the election, Clements said: "We are not going to have an overall increase in taxes in the state of Texas while I'm governor during the next legislative session.'

The realities were different.

Lawmakers took two special sessions in 1986 to trim fat from the budget. They wound up cutting spending, but also raising taxes, and still left a $1 billion deficit. When they convened again in January, the economy had so soured that Comptroller Bob Bullock forecast almost a $5 billion shortfall to keep services at current levels.

Democrats control the Legislature. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and the Senate wanted to restore funding for higher education to stop what they said was a "brain drain" of talented faculty. In the House, Speaker Gib Lewis and others said budget cutting could do only so much.

Majority wins.

But in the Texas House, the Democratic majority found a feisty GOP

President Reagan's 1984 landslide and the changing makeup of the Texas electorate that year gave Republicans more than one-third of the House, gains consolidated in 1986 when they won 56 of the 150 seats.

That may not sound like much in a House run by Democrats for decades, but it was enough. Under House rules, many things take 100 votes to accomplish.

Tropical storm pours water on popular Mexican resorts

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Hurricane Eugene, the first of the year in Mexico, was downgraded Saturday afternoon to a tropical storm as it continued skipping along the Pacific coast, dumping tons of rain on popular tourist resorts and closing many ports. The National Weather Service reported that at noon (1800 GMT) Eugene was centered 37 miles southeast of the Puerto Vallarta resort in Jalisco state, 420 miles northwest of Mexico City. It said the storm was packing winds of 56 mph with gusts up to 130 mph and was moving northwest along the coast at about 10 mph.

At 6 a.m. (1200 GMT) Eugene had been reported to have sustained winds of 80 mph with gusts up to 108 mph, the and caused 15-foot-high waves along the coast. At that time, it was 40 miles northwest of the Manzanillo resort in Colima state, 300 miles west of the capital, and reoving toward Puerto Vallarta at 8 mph.

The weather service said navigation warnings have been issued for the coastal states of Colima, Jalisco and Nayarit and ships in those areas were urged to maintain constant radio contact with port officials.

In the city of Colima, 30 miles (50 km) inland. state government spokesman Juan Ramon Negrete said by telephone that Eugene briefly touched land near Cuyutlan, a coastal town of 15,000 people, and then spun back to sea.

Negrete also said the nearby villages of Boca de Pascuales, El Paraiso and Tecuamillo also were damaged by the hurricane, but no deaths or injuries had been reported.

The spokesman said many houses made of wood and palm leaves were leveled by the high winds and strong rains, and the homeless were being housed in public buildings and hospitals.

Ignacio Pantoja, manager of the reception desk at the luxury Las Hadas hotel in Manzanillo, said by telephone the storm caused no injuries, but blew down trees and beach huts, broke windows and left much of the city without electrical power early Saturday. He said the hotel was operating with emergency generators.

The port at Manzanillo closed down loading and unloading operations at its piers and barred ships from leaving, according to the port captain, Jose Luis Rios Hernandez.

Eugene was classified a tropical storm until Friday when its winds increased. Within 24 hours it moved 230 miles northwest along the coast.

The government Friday barred small crafts from leaving the port at Zihuatanejo and suspended navigation for all classes of craft at Acapulco. Both ports are on the coast south of the hurricane's location.

Meanwhile, the Mexican navy was put on alert from Acapulco to as far north as Guaymas, in Sonora state, a distance of 925 miles (1,540 km).

Auditorium employee recalls famous faces that lit the hall

By LARRY HOLLIS

News Editor In July 1951, a man on his way to Idaho stopped off in Pampa to visit his then-father-in-law. Thirty-six years later, Morgan Edwards, 62, is still here, having worn out many a pair of shoes during his work with the city of Pampa Water Department and the M.K. Brown Auditorium

Originally from Joplin, Mo., where he worked as a tire rebuilder. Edwards recalls that he had planned to stop in Pampa just to visit with his father-inlaw before he headed up to Idaho.

But after finding he had stayed here a week, "I decided I better get to work," Edwards said. "Never did get to Idaho."

Instead, he found employment with the city, lasting until he retired Friday, July 17, after 36 years. Edwards, 62, said he started with the Street Department "but never did much work with them" before he was shortly afterwards transferred to the Water Department. Over the next 20 years, he worked at pumping water and other chores, including spending the summers managing the municipal swimming pool, then under the Water Department. In the fall months, he also helped in maintenance with the street and traffic lights In 1971, the M.K. Brown Auditorium was built. About eight months before the facility was completed, Edwards was transferred there to oversee its maintenance and management operations.

'And I've been there ever since,' he said. Though he never had the title, Edwards said he was "unofficially a manager of the auditorium" until present auditorium manager Danny Parkerson took over the management end nearly two years ago Edwards said he has enjoyed his auditorium work more than any of his jobs with the city. "For one thing, I got to work with adult people," he said, instead of having to supervise the young lifeguards and watch after all the youngsters at the swimming pool While at the auditorium, he had to help with arrangements for all the various civic and community activities, the concerts and other functions held in the auditorium facilities.

Celebrities' performances at the auditorium bers of homes and other buildings. stand out in Edwards' mind. He listed Jim Ed Brown, Freddie Hart, Pa il Harvey, Dear Abby. Anita Bryant, Bobby Bare, Faron Young and the Ozark Jubilee as "the ones I remember most." His work at the swimming pool and the auditorium gave him a chance to know and work with many local residents. "Most of those years were working with the public, which I enjoy very much," Edwards said.

He said he will "very definitely miss" working at the auditorium, but noted he still plans to drop by once in a while to chat and yisit with other fellow employees and residents. Regardless of what he does in his retirement years and what traveling he may do, "Pampa will always be home now," he stated. Though he has retired from city employment

Edwards plans to keep busy. For one thing, he has an interest in antique cars Presently he has 13 cars he keeps up, including four Model As, a Model T, a 1937 Packard and several others from the '40s and '50s,' he noted Edwards takes the rehabilitated cars to shows and sometimes sells and trades his antique cars, something he's been doing since 1966

One of his sons, who has now been in military service for 19 years, had a Model A he drove to school. "I helped him tinker with it," Edwards recalled, noting that experience had got him interested in the antique cars. "Once it gets in your system, it's hard to get out.' He said he really has no other hobby besides his antique cars. "That keeps you busy enough," he Still, he enjoys fishing and plans to do some traveling in his mobile home for some relaxation Also, he has "a couple of other small businesses to take care of — and the antique cars.

Edwards said he has a snow cone business open during the summer months. And he has a partnership in a gift shop in Denver, Colo., where he will be going for "about a month." He said his partner "thinks it's time to expand some."

He also has four children from a previous marriage that he plans to visit occasionally. Prior to his work as a tire rebuilder in Joplin,

Edwards spent three years of military service with a transportation crew in Newport News, Va. Since he settled down here, Edwards said, there 'have been a lot of changes in Pampa,'' including the population growth from the 16,000 residents living here when he came to the more than 20,000 now here, with the resulting increase in the num-

There also have been changes in the way work is done, he said. "Things we did with our hands back then we do with machines now," he said.

"But people are the same," whether there are good times or bad times. "Working with people really hasn't changed that much," Edwards said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

High court denies basic human rights

The Supreme Court recently ruled 5-4 that a soldier who was given LSD secretly by the Army and subsequently underwent severe personality changes cannot sue the government for damages.

Justice Antonin Scalia, writing for the majority, said even if the claims of veteran James Stanley are true, allowing a lawsuit would "call into question" military discipline and decision-making" and "dis-rupt the military regime." Scalia also said the court was upholding a longstanding tradition of staying out of the military's affairs.

It's time for that tradition to change.

When a person joins the armed forces, he gives up certain civilian rights and submits to military rules to keep the machine moving. In times of war, particulary, many decisions must be made quickly; soldiers must follow orders and trust their superiors, because there isn't time for battlefield debate.

But that doesn't mean they must give up their human rights. As Justice William Brennan Jr. noted in his dissent, "Soldiers ought not to be asked to defend a Constitution indifferent to their essential human

In this case, the Army told Stanley and dozens of other soldiers they were volunteering to test gas masks and protective clothing. The Army lied. Acting in conjunction with the CIA, it secretly put the mindaltering drug LSD in the soldiers' water to test LSD's effects on people.

'The government of the United States treated thousands of its citizens as though they were labora-tory animals, dosing them with this dangerous drug without their consent," Brennan said, comparing the experiments to those done by the Nazis.

The medical trials at Nuremberg in 1947 deeply impressed upon the world that experimentation with unknowing human subjects is morally and legally unacceptable," Brennan said. Yet the majority of the court decided the "military regime'' stands higher than constitutional rights and human decency. Furthermore, Congress did not invite civilian courts to deal with military matters, the majority suggested. Fine. Then Congess should specifically define the human and civil rights of military personnel — a G.I. Bill of Rights. If the military then chooses to violate such rights, the U.S. government is liable.

The military needs the freedom to make its own decisions, but experimenting with mind-warping drugs without the subjects' consent or knowledge is an abuse of that freedom.

Contra support isn't any secret

Aside from the Iran-Contra affair being juicy gossip for an otherwise boring summer, it's sad commentary on our foreign policy. It demonstrates that U.S. foreign policy cannot be run by 535 congressmen; for better or worse, it's best left to the executive branch of government.

During President Reagan's 1984 campaign, there was no doubt in anyone's mind that he was for aid to the Contras, who are fighting Nicaragua's Soviet-backed Sandinista government. On that platform, Reagan was returned to the White House in a 49-states-to-1 sweep. The margin suggests that condemning aid to the Contras as a betrayal of national will is ludicrous. In order to carry out this policy, upon which Reagan was returned to office, the administration had to use proceeds from the sale of arms to one enemy to help fight another. That's the

The real tragedy of the Iran-Contra intrigue is that the mightiest nation on earth is forced to conduct sleight-of-hand foreign policy in an environment where Congress can produce more obstacles than our country's enemies can. But given congressional constraints, such as the Boland amendment, Reagan administration people had to use sleight-of-hand and lie to Con-ret documents to the benefit of our enemies; acts that used to be considered treason. So Col. Oliver North's concern, that led him to shred documents before they got into the hands of Congress, was not entirely without merit.

The Soviet-Cuban influence in Nicaragua is a threat to our national interest. Therefore, "gunboat diplomacy" is a more appropriate U.S. policy. We should send our armed forces in to snuff out the Sandinistas and establish a naval military blockade. The fact that Mikhail Gorbachev has shipped $2 billion worth of helicopter gunships, rocket launchers, tanks, and small arms into Nicaragua makes the Soviet designs in the area clear. Or does Congress think this is simply another Soviet goodwill gesture to us and our Latin American allies?

And North Korea would have overrun South Korea had President Truman's Congress had the power to interfere with foreign policy as does today's. Even during Truman's presidency Congress tried to meddle; but Truman had guts. In effect, he told Congress, "I sent the boys to Korea; you'd better send them some ammunition." As a result, South Korea wasn't overrun and has emerged as one of the economic miracles of the Far East, while North Korea languishes in poverty under communist rule.

Let's consider this in depth

The name Bubba does conjure an initial reaction that there might be a pickup truck involved somewhere, one with muddy tires, a Confederate flag decal on the back window and a bumper sticker that says, "I'll give up my gun when they pry my cold, dead finger off the trigger."

On the other hand, Bubba certainly could be a term of endearment, a little sister's pronunciation of the word, "brother," for instance. And Bubba even has its place in modern literature

Pat Conroy's "Bear" called all the cadets an endearing "Bubba" in Conroy's brilliant, "The Lords of Discipline.

There is also Bubba Smith, the former football player who now bites open beer cans in television commercials.

But would anybody have a problem doing business with a man named Bubba?

I can only speak for myself, but I think I could deal with a Bubba and probably have more in common with him than with a man named Raoul or Tripp.

I would go to a bank to take out a loan from a Bubba, and I'd even have a Bubba for a lawyer. I figure the jury could warm up to a man with a name like that Plus, I think that somewhere in the Constitution it probably says an American has the right to have just about any name he or she pleases. Otherwise, Liberace would have been in big trouble. And what would happen to poor Fennis Dembo, the Wyoming basketball player?

This is hardly the first time TV has undone the best-laid plans of congres-

With the help of a friendly committee chairman (and to the despair of Joe McCarthy's critics), the Wisconsin senator started to turn the hearings into another vicious free-forall - until, perhaps inevitably, he stepped over the line and smeared a young lawyer who worked in the office of the Army's special counsel.

That counsel, Joseph P. Welch, was ready.

"Little did I dream you could be so reckless and so cruel....," he said in a voice no less emotional and earnest than Oliver North's. "I like to think that I am a gentleman, but your forgiveness will have to come from someone other than me.

And then, after a further exchange, came Welch's famous plea: "Let us not assassinate this lad further, senator. You have done enough. Have you no sense of decency, sir, at long last? Have you no sense of decency?

I am writing to you, Mr. Editor, to voice my opinion concerning the title of our accelerated program in the Pampa Independent School Dis-

All will agree, I believe, that every human being is gifted and talented in at least some ways. The use of a label such as "gifted and talented" to describe a certain group automatically labels all of those not in that group "not gifted and talented."

In my opinion, the choice of words for the title of our accelerated program is inappropriate and really "not very smart."

Grandpa told story about a ghost town To the editor:

I thought you might be interested in a story my grandfather once told me. It's called, "The Day Pampa Became a Ghost Town.

Well, sir, he said it was about the year 1983 or '84. Pampa was a thriving little community. Most everybody still had pretty good jobs. During the day, you could drive to most any business and could hardly find a place to park. Yeah, Pampa was a nice little town, mostly dependent on oil.

You see, everybody got to be a little independent with what they had. Our city fathers sat back and counted their profits from " : oil boom. They thought, "Things sure are going good. I don't see how we could ever have problems with our economy, so we'll just sit back and let the money roll

Well, sir, they couldn't see the dim future because of the money sack in front of their faces. It wasn't long though, that little oil companies started to get in a bit of a bind, and the money quit comin' in. People started moving out of town because there were no jobs to be found.

People started selling their homes, cars, etc., except those who had them repossessed by the banks and finance companies. Yeah, things started looking pretty grim in our little town.

All of the businesses finally moved out of our town, I guess it was probably about April 1988. The bankers and city fathers who were left ran out of money to count. The city flopped, basically because everybody who had anything to do with attracting any industries or businesses to help Pampa were afraid of a little competition. "Well, Grandpa said, "I guess we had better wałk back to our little cabin, your Grandma will probably have supper ready.

Optimist system left girl off All-Stars

I too am troubled as to how boys or in this case. girls, are selected to the Optimist All-Star teams. Whoever does the selecting needs to explain to a girl playing on a winning softball team how this is

This is All-Star pitching, particularly when in many of the games, 10 or 15 runs usually score on walked batters alone!

The team she played on lost only two games this season. I might also add that in addition to winning every game this girl pitched, she also finished up several games for other tiring pitchers on her

She was dismayed when she learned that the two players who lost the games made the All-Stars. Baseball and-or softball games are not won solely by batters. A team must also have credible

I hope that the Optimists do not let "politics" enter into the selection of All-Stars, but I too fear this is the case.

I believe someone owes this player an explanation or better, an apology

She has enjoyed playing in this program for many years now, and "these" parents have always stayed out of the way and not "meddled" in her enjoyment of playing.

But, there is a bad flow in the selection of All-Stars in the Optimist program. It is my hope that in the future a better and fairer way is found to do this and not put a cloud over a program that has provided valuable enjoyment to our youngsters.

Picking All-Stars is tough on managers

To the editor:

This is in response to the letter to the editor about "politics" in Optimist baseball. I wanted to coach a baseball team; this year I got my chance.

Because I went to practice every time last year and helped, the other parents, or coach or Optimist Club thought to ask if I would help. I wish to thank them because I love baseball and kids. The players on our team were super, and we did very, very well.

As a Dad, I felt my son was as strong a ballplayer as any of the others, although he was 11. Every game during the regular season and city tournament, I tried to play every player at least two innings and at least one at bat. Unfortunately we had 14 players, and as a coach, I pulled my son all year, so everyone could play. I also pulled an outstanding 10-year-old. To all parents, I tried to be as fair as I could with their ballplayers.

When we won our division and found out we got to also coach All-Stars, I was thrilled.

The process we used called for every manager to vote on the top players on the other teams. Each team put its best players on a master sheet. From this, the top 10 players had to be taken. The president also gave us the next seven on the voting list. Out of this we got 10 players and went with the choice of the managers and our own feeling and picked five more players.

Politics enter when every manager has the problems of trying to pick his best players. As a coach, I push for my players. But when you have 112 players, and only 15 make All-Stars, it is super tough to

As a coach of the All-Stars, I went through every score book and took the time to figure 40 players batting averages. Then I went back to look at errors on each of these players. Then with all of the managers and coaches we picked the five remaining players.

I feel we did the best we could. I apologize to anyone who feels we were not fair in our selections.

To each and every coach, manager, umpire, concession stand worker, equipment man, field worker, dads, moms, brothers, sisters, grandparents, and all who came out - thank you.

To all of those who had a complaint and to Warren Hasse, all I can say is — we tried. We gave our time, our money and our love. To each parent out there, it is worth it.

On Friday, President Regan nominated Sessions to head the FBI. If confirmed, Sessions will replace William Webster, who left to become CIA chief.

Sessions, 57, supervises six other judges in the Western District of Texas, a gigantic area that stretches north to Waco and west to El Paso.

Sessions, who fought in the Korean War, gained national attention in 1982-83 when he presided over two trials stemming from the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood, known as "Maximum John" for the stiff sentences he imposed on Sessions stresses courtroom decorum, forbidding gum-chewing and ejecting males without sports coats. In his sentencing, he is especially harsh on drug dealers and repeat offenders.

But many who know Sessions say he is fair. "He is a very careful person about what he does and he will be very interested, for instance, in everybody's rights, no matter what their positions,' Sessions' wife, Alice, said Friday.

"He hears from prisoners all the time who say that he was very fair when he sentenced them, she said. "He is a very conscientious, considerate

Sexy star Joan Collins whips estranged hubby

LOS ANGELES (AP) -'Dynasty' star Joan Collins' riches are protected from her estranged husband by a prenuptial agreement, a judge ruled after four days of testimony about Hollywood-style love, money and greed.

The court ruled valid an agreement Miss Collins, 54, and former Swedish pop star Peter Holm, 40, signed in October 1985, two weeks before their marriage. The one-page document limited Holm to 20 percent of her earnings, as long as they stayed together.

The actress' attorney, Marvin Mitchelson, said the ruling means Holm has lost the right to have Miss Collins' property divided by the court in a di-

Holm had argued that the prenuptial agreement affected only how money would be divided during marriage, and not in the event of a divorce.

Top officials parade before committees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressional Iran-Contra committees investigate an investigation this week as they interrogate Attorney General Edwin Meese III on the scope and intent of the Justice Department inquiry that unearthed the secret diversion of Iran arms sale dollars to the Nicaraguan re-Opening the final phase of nationally televised hearings that began May 5, the committees also set appearances by former White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

The trio of major witnesses, beginning with Meese on Tuesday, will testify in the aftermath of last week's somber account by Secretary of State George P. Shultz of an epic 'battle royal" with White House insiders to get out the facts of the Iran-Contra diversion.

Accusing his opponents of trying to subvert the Constitution's system of checks and balances and mislead the president, Shultz said their effort to cut him out of key decisions on arms sales to Iran and diversion of the proceeds to the Contras in Nicaragua was infused with lies, intrigue and deceit.

In questioning Meese, investigators will address suspicions that his initial inquiry into the Iran-Contra affair was intended more as a cover-up than an exercise in full disclosure.

Critics say that although Meese disclosed the diversion in an explosive news conference Nov. 25, delays in calling in the FBI permitted stacks of potential evidence to be shredded or burned.

Meese has said that while he delayed one criminal investigation linked to aid to the Contras, he did not stall another. He has rejected suggestions he should have called in the FBI earlier and said nothing he did was intended to make a cover-up possible.

Regan was White House chief of staff at the time Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter, then the national security adviser, and the late William J. Casey, then the CIA chief, battled with Shultz for influence with the president.

Weinberger, like Shultz, is known to have vigorously, but fruitlessly, opposed the plan backed by Casey and Poindexter to sell arms

Shultz, following Poindexter at the witness table last week, treated with scorn the admiral's testimony that he had deliberately not informed the president of the diversion plan to give the chief executive "plausible de-

Poindexter had said he acted on his own authority and decided that in this case the 'buck' stopped not with the president, "it stopped here with me." Shultz, who is a statutory mamber of the National Security Council, said, in effect, that no member of the NSC staff has such authority. It is the duty of the staff, Shultz said, to advise and assist, not decide.

Shultz repeatedly denied he and Weinberger could have been more vigorous than they were in attempting to persuade the president not to approve the arms sale policy.

KUWAIT (AP) - Divers on Saturday checked the damaged hull of a listing Kuwaiti supertanker that hit a mine while U.S. warships escorted it through the Persian

The captain of one of the Navy ships said he didn't understand why the flotilla didn't have protection from mines. Pentagon sources in Washington said efforts were under way to enlist the aid of Kuwait and Saudi Arabia in sending minesweepers into the gulf to guard future convoys.

In Manama, Bahrain, marine salvage experts said the mine may have been laid only two hours before the 401,386-ton Bridgeton hit it Friday morning. Two rusty mines were sighted later by passing ships in the gulf near the Abu Sa'fah field, south of where the Bridgeton was hit, shipping executives said.

The Bridgeton, which raised the Stars and Stripes so it could sail under the protection of a U.S. convoy, was being inspected to determine whether it can be repaired in Kuwait or would have to be sent to shipyards in the southern part of the gulf, said U.S. Ambassador Anthony Quainton

Officials of the Kuwait Oil Tanker Co., which operates the ship, declined to talk about the extent of the damage to the Bridgeton.

Three U.S. warships had escorted the Bridgeton and the smaller oil-products carrier Gas Prince as part of the vanguard of a U.S. effort to protect oil shipping lanes from attacks stemming from the Iran-Iraq war. They arrived safely in Bahrain on Saturday.

The frigate Crommelin, the cruiser Fox and the destroyer Kidd arrived safely in Bahrain on Saturday and planned to tie up near the LaSalle, the headquarters' ship of the U.S. Mideast Task Force.

Arab and Western diplomatic sources in: the gulf region said the United States was likely to fly helicopters equipped with sonar sleds to sweep the waters ahead of future convoys

French salvage Titanic treasure

PARIS (AP) — The crew searching for treasure from the Titanic made its first dive Saturday in a small submarine that plunged 21/2 miles to the ocean floor accompanied by a robot named

High winds frustrated diving efforts Friday, but the weather improved enough Saturday to allow divers to begin a general survey preceding the retrieval of artifacts, said Yves Cornet, spokesman for Taurus International.

A crew of three aboard the mini-sub Nautile was to explore the site 350 miles off Newfound-

Salvagers were searching for the bow of the Titanic, which has been lost since the ship sank 75 vears ago. It is believed to be as far as one or two miles from the main portion of the wreck, Cornet

They will be floating over a 21/2mile-wide debris field around the Titanic shown in previous surveys to be littered with silver trays, china cups and other arti-

The Nautile is equipped with two arms capable of picking up objects smaller than teacups and larger than safes. It is attached by a 26-foot umbilical cord to the 176-pound robot, Robin.

Robin has lights and three cameras encased in titaniumand-steel cases for shooting inside the Titanic. Another camera will be carried by a member of the mini-sub crew

The $2.5 million expedition is being conducted by the French Institute for Research and Exploitation of the Sea and underwritten by a group of international investors operating as the British-registered Ocean Research Exploration Ltd. Taurus International negotiated the contract.

QUESTION: MY DOG AND CAT HAD FLEAS MOST OF LAST YEAR, BUT SEEMED TO BE RID OF THEM WHEN COLD WEATHER CAME. NOW MY DOG IS SCRATCHING BUT I DON'T FIND FLEAS. CAN THEY BE

ANSWER: Yes, fleas have a long life cycle. In other words, the eggs laid by female fleas last year may not hatch for female fleas last year may not hatch for 6-24 months. So it is very possible you're beginning to have a problem. Now is the time to get ahead of them. A good bath followed by a prescription-type product to dip your dog and cat will head them off. Follow up with either prescription flea collars, or the oral preparation "Proban tablets or liquid" to complete the job. Premise treatment is vitally imthe job. Premise treatment is vitally important. This can be done by a pest control service or yourself. Either way, its a key factor in flea and tick control. The er you start working on flea control the better the results will be. Perhaps visit to your veterinarian can confirm the presence of fleas/ticks or perhaps, another problem like grass allergy. In this case, sometimes an "allergy Shot", followed by weekly baths at hor be helpful.

Tri-State champion Ken Bailey.

Bailey wins Tri-State title

Tri-State Seniors, say hello to talented youngster Ken Bailey. He's liable to be around for many years to come, knocking on the door of that championship throne room.

Bailey played steady, if not spectacular, golf to win the 53rd annual TSSGA Tournament Friday at the Pampa Country Club

Bailey, of Amarillo, shot a three-round total of 217 for a three-stroke margin over Lamesa's Jake Broyles, who finished in the runnerup spot after winning the Tri-State title a year ago. Bailey had led Broyles by three strokes after Thursday's second round

Harold Delong of Shawnee, Okla. and Everett Gauldin of Vernon tied for third at Bailey, who just became eligible to play in the 55 and over tournament this year, had a two-over par 73 Friday, as did Broyles. Bailey led by as many as six strokes on the back nine, although Broyles did cut the gap to one after the first three holes.

Bailey praised his accurate chipping with winning the title while Broyles lamented his putting woes.

"My chipping won it for me. The greens were nice and smooth and just right for my game. I was getting within four to two feet on almost every hole with my chip shots '

"My putting was just terrible," said Broyles, shaking his head. "I just couldn't get anything going my way on the greens.' Bailey had only two birdies on the day and his precision chips saved par on five holes.

"If I ever get to where I can hit some of my putts, it's hard telling how good my scores can be," Bailey said. "But it was a bad day for putting, for everybody.

Bailey did have some scary moments. He bogied No. 16 after missing a seven-foot putt and Broyles parred the hole to cut Bailey's four-stroke lead to three. Bailey then shanked the ball into a grove of trees on his second shot on No. 17 and ended up with his third bogie of the round. Broyles, however, couldn't take advantage and bogied the same hole after his second shot hit a tree limb.

Broyles, who was the first-round leader with a one-over par 72 Wednesday, had his chances to captured the silver tray again, but his putter failed him just when he needed it most. On four of his six bogeys, Broyles missed parr putts ranging from five to one and a half foot. To his credit, Broyles did sank 12 and 15-foot putts for birdie and par respectively on Nos. 13 and 15, but by that time Bailey's lead was almost insurmountable.

Mel Shaffer of Grandbury shot a 72 to win the president's flight

Pampa camp gets an assist from Jennings Former Red Raider star instructs youngsters

By L.D. STRATE Sports Editor

Former Texas Tech basketball standout Bubba Jennings is gaining some valuable experience before starting his first coaching job this fall. The scoring whiz has been a guest instructor in various youth basketball camps this summer and he's making the most of the opportunity. Jennings was a member of Pampa Coach Robert Hale's coaching staff at the Top O' Texas Basketball Camp last week at McNeely Fieldhouse.

"Coaching is something I've always wanted to do,'' said Jennings, who is hobbling around on a sprained ankle sustained while helping with a summer basketball league last week. "These summer camps are not only helpful to the players, but it's helpful to me as

Other instructors at the camp were Clay Richerson, John Charles, Larry King, Michael Glover and Mark Spain.

"We're teaching the fundamentals and trying to get everyone playing like a team. The players have been really enthusiastic and eager to learn at Pampa," Jennings said.

About 50 youngsters, ranging from the fourth-grade to high school, attended the camp. Jennings spent a lot of time teaching the art of shooting, something he knows quite Jennings scored a state-record 1,870 points as a high school player at Clovis, N.M. He averaged 33.8 points per game his senior year and led the Wildcats to the Class 4A championship finals in 1980.

The 25-year-old Jennings landed his first coaching job this fall as he returns home to be an assistant coach of the Wildcats. He was passed over for a similar post at Lubbock Coronado earlier this year.

'My dad (Brooks Jennings) was my high school coach and I've wanted to be a coach ever since I started playing," Jennings said. Jennings capped his collegiate career at Texas Tech by being named the Southwest Conference Player of the Year by United Press International. The 5-10 guard led the Red Raiders to preseason and post season league crowns in the 1984-85 season.

The Dallas Mavericks of the NBA drafted Jennings in the fourth round, but he was cut after playing in two exhibition games.

Jennings then tried international basketball and went on a scoring binge, averaging 40 points per game for the Crystal Palace team in London, England.

"When I came back home, I decided I better give up playing and get into coaching,' added Jennings. "I hope to be a major college coach someday. Camps like these will help me get a step in that direction.'

"We've had a good response for our camp," "It was fun for the coaches and fun for the players," Hale said. "It's good to have a great player like Bubba helping us. We're going to try and have this camp every

THE EXCELLENT THINGS

"And this I pray that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and all discernment; so that ye may approve the things that are excellent; that ye may be sincere and void of offence unto the day of Christ; being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are through Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God." (Philippians 1:9-11.) Constantly the disci-ple of Christ is faced with making decisions between that which is right in the sight of God and that which is wrong in His sight. (2 Timothy 3: 16-17) teaches us that the word of God is inspired of God and that it alone furnishes the man of God completely unto every good work. Also, Paul emphasizes that in the gospel is revealed the righteousness of God(Romans 1:16-17.)

Of course the New Testament does not list in detail everything that is defiling and on the other side of the page list everything that is righteous. Instead a standard of righteousness is recorded there we understand that anything and everything which does not me-asure up to that standard is un-righteousness (cf. Psalms 119:172.)

In attitudes we are always to consider the kingdom of God and His righteousness first (Matthew 6:33.) That is, God, Christ, the Church, righteousness, eternal life, spiritual things, etc., must be more important to the child of God than the things of this life.

Concerning our speech, it is to be "always with grace, seasoned with salt," (Colossians 4:6.) Also all filthiness, foolish talking and jest-ing which is not befitting is to be avoided by the child of God (Ephe-sians 5:4.) We go to exemplify by our speech that we are the children of God with all consistency (James 3:1-12.) Holiness is the standard that the disciples of Christ are to strive toward (I Peter 1:15.)

Our actions, as Christians, should reflect the influence of the doctrine of Christ upon our lives (Acts 4:13.) If people cannot tell by the way disciples conduct their lives that they are children of God, all the teaching and talking will avail nothing (James 2:12.) The excellent things are simply the things of God revealed in His Word. -Billy T. Jones

Cooperstown has Pampa connection

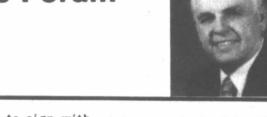

AS THE CROW FLIES, it is about 1,500 miles, plus a couple of stops for corn and water, from Pampa, Texas to Cooperstown, N.Y. Yet, it would be easier for the crow to make that jaunt than a baseball player from Pampa. Cooperstown, as most sports enthusiasts know, is the site of the Baseball Hall of Fame, where this afternoon three former major leaguers will be honored with induction into that mosttreasured valhalla

And strange as it might seem, there is a connection between Pampa and this afternoon's ceremonies. A fine, grey-haired, tall and erect man by the name of Ivy Griffin served as general manager of the Pampa Oilers in 1955. At season's end he went back to his full-time job as a scout for the Chicago Cubs, and signed a youngster to a Cub contract whom he had first seen playing as a 16-year old for the Mobile, Ala. Black Bears one Sunday afternoon. The kid will join the elite in the Hall of Fame this day, a superstar named Billy Williams. Unfortunately, the man who signed him never got to see him play in a Chicago uniform. On August 25, 1957, at age 59, Ivy Moore Griffin, who had played first base for the Philadelphia Phillies in 1919-20-21 and spent the rest of his life managing and scouting the minor leagues, was killed in a car accident near Gainesville, Florida. Williams will carry Ivy's memory into Cooperstown today, knowing that Griffin gave him that chance. another youngster, then age 18, in his pro career. "Kid, you just stay after it," he told Roy Woldt, when he was forced to tell the diminutive utility player he was going to have to cut him from the Eau Claire, Wis. pro club. He told Woldt, known to all of us as Deck, that he liked his dedication, and desire, and even made arrangements for the now-retired Pampa teacher-coach to sign with another club and get a lengthy and successful minor league career initiated. Woldt can talk about Griffin today as an almost fatherlike figure, as he obviously was to today's honoree, Sweet Swinging Billy.

Sports Forum

And that pro career for Williams got underway not far from here. Signed in late summer, he left his Alabama home to complete the season by playing 13 games for Class D Ponca City, hitting a weak .235. But then, he was a teenager, away from home for the first time, in a strange town, and black. He impressed his manager Don Biebel, so much that Biebel even left him home on road trips. He was a thrid baseman who was switched to outfield, falling flat on his stomach the first time he tried to catch a fly ball. The rest is history, available now at Cooperstown.

Cooperstown is an unlikely place to showcase the world's greatest team sport.

A central New York state community of 2,300, it was selected as the result of a decision by The Mills Commission, a seven-man group appointed in 1905 to determine once and for all where the game originated. There were arguments that the sport had evolved from an English game called 'rounders.' The study took three years of testimony and investigation before the committee's final report, issued Dec. 30, 1907, stated "the first scheme for playing baseball, according to the best evidence obtainable to date, was devised by Abner Doubleday at Cooperstown, N.Y. in 1839.'

Discovery of an old baseball in an attic trunk 27 years later supported those findings. That ball was purchased by a local businessman for $5 as a display item. He gathered other baseball items and put them on public view, the start of the National Baseball Museum. Through the evolution process and total cooperation of all facets of baseball, it grew to today's stature. The Baseball Writers Association chose the first five inductees in 1936 - Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Honus Wagner, Christy Mathewson and Walter Johnson In 1939 the Hall of Fame and

Museum was officially dedicated. Regular attendance annually exceeds more than 200,000 fans, coming to view the people and instruments used in the historic moments of the game. The Hall's members' bats, gloves, uniforms. Lou Gehrig's license plate (1-LG), Babe Ruth's bowling ball and golfing trophies, Joe DiMaggio's shoes, Casey Stengel's windbreaker, Mickey Mantle's first contract (for $5,000 per year), and even Phil Rizzuto's glove, although they haven't elected The Scooter yet

But as Ivy Griffin told dejected teen-ager Deck Woldt, "Kid, you just stay after it!" Good advice for all young athletes.

Yes, there will be a little bit of Pampa Baseball History, meager as it may be, installed in Baseball's Hall of Fame today.

Baseball teams spoil guesses

I am not so immodest to not admit when I have made a grave

So, let me take a few minutes to "re-explain" some of my preseason baseball predictions. Its not altogether my fault that I have been embarrassed by these prognostications.

Its just that baseball teams have this annoying habit of not living up to the expectations of sports writers.

Earlier this year, I said that the New York Mets would win the National League East and the Houston Astros would win the NL

One of those picks is very wrong. The other, well, its just too early to tell.

As of Friday's games, the New York Mets are 10 games under .500, nine games out of first and mired in a season long slump that now finds them in fourth place. If I could, just for a moment,

"re-adjust" my picks. The St. Louis Cardinals should win the NL East. They are lacking on pitching because of injuries, but have power hitters again this year, namely Jack Clark and they sparkle on defense. The Montreal Expos, though, could very well surprise. The Cubs will finish third and the Phillies will finish fourth.

That leaves the Mets to wind up somewhere in the area of fifth -

I'm not too embarrassed by this pick — yet. Over in the American League, I admit I once again fell victim to preseason "Ranger-itis."

"Ranger-itis" is a disease many Texas sports writers get, particularly those in the Dallas-Ft. Worth area.

Like a dummy, I picked Texas to win the West, just as I have done every year since the team's inception. One of these years, maybe I'll learn that Texas will never be as good on the field as they look to be on paper.

Injuries cause yearly headaches for coaches

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

Earlier this summer, the National Athletic Trainers Association met to discuss the growing problem of injuries to high school football players. In statistics reported in The Orange County (Calif.) Register, the NATA survey indicated: Thirty-seven percent of all high school football players will sustain an injury that will either require medical treatment or cause him to miss one or more practices or games.

Seventy-five percent of the injuries will take less than a week to heal.

Sixteen-percent of the injuries suffered will force a player to miss two to three games.

Almost 9-percent of the injuries will take more than three weeks to heal.

As we prepare to embark upon yet another prep football season, the question again comes to the forefront: Is high school football safe?

With figures like those above, obviously there åre some risks taken every time a student puts on the pads and cleats.

Locally, schools in The Pampa News circulation area have suffered their share of bumps and bruises and injuries of a more serious nature. In the 1986 season, the Canadian Wildcats were the hardest hit. "It was one of those real unusual years for us," Canadian athletic director and head coach Paul Wilson said. "It affected our team tremendously. Our fourth-string quarterback started four or five ball games" because of injuries to the other three. One of those injured — quarterback Wade Wilson - is still not sure whether he will completely re-

Wilson dislocated a knee which caused nerve damage in his foot. "They're not sure if the nerve will heal itself," coach Wilson said. "He had an operation this summer. We think he'll recover all right, though.'

Wilson missed nine games last year because of the damage to his knee Also missing nine games was Dan Dockray who broke a collarbone. Wilson blamed early season injuries on "physical immaturity," saying players will come to fall the neck workouts out of shape, which results in plenty of pulls in regions such as the hamstring, thigh and

For the Pampa Harvesters, it was a year of frustration in the won-loss column, but a fortunate year in terms of hurt players.

Former head coach and present athletic director John Kendall noted that Pampa had its share of "nagging injuries" (pulls and turned or sprained ankles), but only one player spent the majority of the season recovering from an injury

"Rodney Kelly was hurt in the Dunbar game, our fourth game," Kendall said. "He was our fullback at the time and we put him in on defense. He made a tackle and suffered a shoulder seperation." As a result of the injury, Kelly missed five In Groom, AD and head football coach Terry Coffee cited the sprained ankle as the most common type injury, but said there are others as well.

"I think the majority of our injuries occur when they catch themselves on the ground," Coffee said, meaning when a player hits his hand on the turf and tries to advance himself for extra yardage.

As far as coming to workouts out of shape, Coffee said he doesn't "dog 'em to death," at workouts and offers his players plenty of opportunities to

The White Deer Bucks were more fortunate in 86, experiencing only one injury that accounted for a loss of playing time.

"Ladd Lafferty, our senior running back, tore a tendon in his finger," head caoch Windy Williams said. "He had surgery and didn't play again until the last game.

Aside from that, White Deer didn't lose any other players to injuries the duration of the year.

For the Wheeler Mustangs, it was a year of "almosts" as the club made it to the class 1-A

Head coach Preston Smith said the team quite possibly could have made it to the championship game had it not been for an injury to their star running back

We lost Dickie Salyer, who could have been the best 1-A running back in the state," Smith said. "That hurt us all year long."

Salyer suffered ligament damage in his knee in the first quarter of the Mustangs' first game. As a. result, Salyer was out of the lineup for 11 games. Smith's son, Bubba, also fell victim to the injury plague, breaking his collarbone in the team's fourth game against Panhandle.

Bubba was out for five weeks.

"It (injuries) happens every year," Smith said. "It's just part of the game. You just have to adjust and hope the injury is not that seious."

Smith's Mustangs have been picked as the number-four team in Texas 1-A football, according to Dave Campbell's Texas Football Magazine.. The Texas High School Coaches Association preseason poll has the team ranked 16th in the state this

If the team can avoid injuries, they just might be able to live up to those pre-season standards. Other findings of the NATA injury survey show

"Direct impact" accounted for 44-percent of the injuries: stretched muscles were the cause of 13percent; torsion injuries numbered 11-percent and 'indirect force' caused 9-percent of the injuries.

Eighteen-percent of all injuries are to the hip and thigh area; 17-percent to the ankle-foot and 15-percent to the knee.

Fifty-nine-percent of all injuries are to the "lower extremities", including the knee and trunk.

'Injuries do seem to run in rashes,'' Canadian's Wilson said. "If we could pinpoint anything we do that causes them, we could can that stuff and make a fortune.

Pampa cagers entered in BCI tourney

Two Pampa High basketball players have been selected to play in the BIC Boys' U.S. Senior Prep Basketball Classic this week in Tempe, Ariz.

Dustin Miller and Keith Barr will represent the Harvesters at the annual BIC (Basketball Congress International) games, which is open to players with high school elibility remaining. Miller will be a junior and Barr a senior.

They will be among ten Panhandle athletes competing as a team (Panhandle BCI) in the huge tournament, which usually draws around 300 college scouts. The 6-3 Miller averaged almost nine points per game as a starter for the Harvesters last season. Barr, at 6-3, played mainly for the Shocker JVs, but saw action in seven varsity games last

Bet You Didn't Know Brought To You By Bill Allison Here's a true story about what happened one day to the great golfer Bobby Jones — and, this is a story that illustrates the real meaning of the word "sportsmanship"...Jones was playing in the National Open of 1925 at Worcester...His ball went into the rough, and then accidentally moved very slightly when Jones's club touched a nearby blade of grass...Reporters later said that NOBODY saw the ball move-Jones, however, asked thathe be penalized a stroke...Everyone tried to talk him out of taking the penalty because no one saw the ball move...But Jones insisted and as it turned out, that stroke cost him the title that yearone later asked Jones why he'd done it...He said, "That's the only way to play the game"...Is there a better definition of sportsmanship than that?

Gates for the air show will open at 9 a.m., with people invited to come in early to get a place for the show. Spoonmore said there will be concession booths and "all kinds of good food to eat" while viewing the assembled planes, visiting with association members and getting ready for the air show.

In the morning parade, there will be military vehicles and units, antique cars and an old-fashioned calliope. Plans are also under ching band and motorcycle brigade. Also, there will be a plane on a flatbed truck riding in the parade.

In addition, Pampa's National Bank of Commerce is handing out small American flags at the bank to children, who will be invited to march in the parade. Children can pick up the flags at NBC bank from now through Friday, Aug. 14.

ller briefly escapes in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — A handcuffed Texas death row inmate made a brief escape through downtown Houston moments after he was judged incompetent to be executed for a 1977 robbery-slaying, authorities said.

Clarence Jordon, 31, jumped over a chainlink fence and ran from a bailiff at the Harris County Criminal Courthouse Annex, authorities said. Mounted patrol officer Cindy Hogg saw the chase Friday afternoon and pursued Jordan until he surrendered a few blocks

Four other mounted officers surrounded the bewildered Jordan after he was cornered. Mary C. Moore, Jordan's attorney, said she believes Jordan was headed toward an Army recruiting station because one of Jordan's delusions is that he has been serving his country and Army recruiters would grant him a Jordan was found incompetent to be executed Aug. 25 after a hearing before State District Judge Robert Burdette. Prosecutors agreed that Jordan is mentally incompetent and cannot be put to death under guidelines set by the U.S. Supreme Court last year.

The high court ruled that a person cannot be executed if he does not understand the reason for the death sentence.

When asked Friday by prosecutor Caprice Cosper why he was in court. Jordan said it was for aggravated assault. He further explained that he had been pardoned for the capital murder because he fought for his country

In a psychiatric report, Jordan said he was lethally injected for the capital murder. Jordan was sentenced to die for the Oct. 14, 1977, shooting death of Houston grocery store clerk Joe Williams, 40.

Friday's incident was not Jordan's first major courtroom disruption. During his 1978 capital murder trial, he pulled a knife on a bailiff and threatened to kill him, officials said. State District Judge Wallace "Pete" Moore heard the commotion and grabbed Jordan before the bailiff was injured.

Trina Douthit, 17, of Pampa cools off with an icy snow cone.

By MARILYN POWERS Lifestyles Editor

July and August are usually the hottest months of the year in the Texas Panhandle, with afternoon temperatures hovering near the three-digit mark, and many Pampans have their own favorite ways of fighting heat stroke.

Getting wet is one way to beat the heat. Swimming pools, wading pools and even lawn sprinklers offer cool relief. Some people take literally the advice to "go jump in the lake," with Lakes McClellan, Greenbelt and Meredith providing them the nearest opportunities to do so.

City parks have lots of shade trees that offer a hiding place from the sun's relentless rays. Panhandle winds, although often cussed, are a natural cool-aid.

If all else fails, it's possible to combine comfort and entertainment by retreating to the air-conditioned confines of the movie theater, stores and restaurants. The library can be a haven for sun-baked bookworms, and a few minutes near the frozen foods section of a grocery store can cure even the worst stages of summer-itis.

It helps to keep cool both inside and out. Nothing beats an icy snow cone or a tall iced drink for cooling off from the inside out. And summer wouldn't be summer without the traditional ice cream truck that plays a merry tune as it moves slowly through the neighborhood, calling children of all ages like an automated

Pied Piper.
But "if you can't take the heat, get out of the kitchen." Summer is a prime excuse for not cooking. It's also vacation time, when not only the kitchen but the whole house is left to broil in the sun while the motels and resorts of Colorado and New Mexico fill up with Texans eagerly searching for a "lesser degree" of summer.

Summer doesn't last forever, though. Fall fashions are already in the stores, and those three magic words for any mother, "back to school," are already appearing. Next winter when the Panhandle is digging out from under a cold blanket of snow, summer's heat will be something to look forward to.

PLANNING THE CHRISTMAS WEDDING If you're planning a wedding during the holiday season, you're going to start hear-ing people warning you of potential pit-falls. Here are some hints on how to avoid People do tend to be invited to many social activities around the holiday so plan to send your invitations out earlier than you ordinarily would. You don't want to put close friends or family in the position of having to break another commitment in order to attend your wedding.

If you live in a wintry area, choose your sites and travel routes carefully; you don't want bad weather to prevent your guests—or you—from getting to the church on time. That charming out-of-the-way country church or inn may not be the ideal location in a snowstry.

For some people, citizenship means participating in government, holding an office, campaigning and voting. For others, it is patriotism, defending the country, displaying the flag, and singing the National Anthem.

Citizenship also may be holding a job, making money, paying taxes, owning property and obeying the law. Still others see citizenship as simply being born or naturalized as a "citizen" of the county and that's it.

Citizenship demands participation, involvment and contribution, and this is where 4-H can play a major role.

America will be only as great as its people, the people who occupy this land, have the vision, the will and the determination to help her be great. Unlimited opportunity awaits the young American with enough love, courage and sense of direction to rise to the challenge of good citizenship. The 4-H program can help young Americans do just

A community is built by close relations between citizens. The individual good of every citizen depends upon the harmonious working of all the community. The 4-H club is a functioning group that promotes community activity. 4-H'ers see themselves as highly individual, but at the same time, as responsible citizens using organized action to improve this living environment.

Citizenship education through 4-H provides for three-fold

Understanding - using our heads for clearer thinking, getting information and understanding issues.

 ✓ Attitudes - using our hearts to appreciate our rights and feel our responsibilities.

Skills - using our hands and healthy bodies and minds to put into practice what we understand and feel we should do.

Through 4-H, youth can learn to become more active citizens working toward a better America.

'Be yourself' is best advice for women execs

NEW YORK (AP) - Women executives should ignore most advice they receive about creating a new personal image, according to Nancy Heckel, senior vice president of Communispond Inc., a firm that trains executives, male and female, to be more effective speakers.

Ms. Heckel says the best thing is to "be yourself and play to your strengths."

'Be yourself at your best," she says. "Be confident and consistent, and you'll find it's easier to climb the corporate ladder."

She offers these tips to accentuate those strengths during business presentations, when executives frequently size up their in five minutes, don't take 10.

Retirement benefits and child care were in a virtual tie for second and third in the survey. AIDS ranked fourth in worker concerns, officials said.

Several calls have been received about grasshopper control in garden areas. Insecticides recommended for grasshopper control are Sevin, malathion or sevimol. It will take a few days for grasshoppers to die.

Also, many times the grasshoppers hatched from weed and tall grass infested areas that may be in the vicinity of the garden. These areas should also be sprayed to eliminate grasshoppers in their breeding areas.

It also helps to keep the tall weeds and grass controlled so that these favored areas will not harbor grasshoppers from year to year.

Insecticide sprayings may be needed on a weekly basis until grasshoppers are brought under

TREAT LAWNS FOR GRUBS

One of the major pests in lawns is the white grub. It occurs in most areas of Texas, but may cause damage only in certain

The adult form of the white grub is often called the May or June beetle and is about 1/2 to 1/8 inch long and light brown.

The flight period for the adults in the High Plains generally occurs from mid to late June and lasts from one to two weeks. It is during this time that mating takes place. The mated female bores back into the earth and begins laying between 30 to 40 eggs which hatch in three to four weeks, giving rise to small larvae

There appears to be an aggregation behavior of egglaying females which likely gives rise to the localized infestations that we often see in lawns.

The larvae pass through three stages, becoming larger with each successive stage as they feed voraciously on grass roots. Stages 1 and 2 only require about three weeks for development, while stage 3 is in the soil for the rest of the year or two years and causes most of the lawn damage.

Feeding of large numbers of the larvae causes lawns to turn yellow in the affected area. Positive identification of white grub damage is possible when yellowed grass can be lifted easily by hand from the ground.

For Horticulture

In severe infestations, large sections of lawns can be rolled up just like a carpet.

The stage 3 larvae build up large quantities of fat in the summer and fall and may not need to feed further during the remainder of the annual cycle. In the spring, some stage 3 larvae may initiate feeding again, but generally consume only small amounts of decaying organic matter.

In the case of the two-year life cycle white grub, live-root feeding will be continued in the spring. Both the one- and twoyear life cycle white grub occurs in the High Plains.

The stage 3 larvae transform into the pupae stage or resting stage during late May and June. This stage lasts about three weeks, after which the adult emerges, completing the life

Lawns suspected of having white grubs should be checked by cutting and digging up one square foot section of lawn 4 inches deep and examining it. Treatment is justified when more than four grubs per square foot are found.

Take several samples to make sure an infestation justifies treatment, and treat only those areas that are infested. Diazinon, dursban and isofenphos (oftanol) provide adequate control when properly applied.

TIME FOR HARVESTING AND THOUGHT

If you've been doing the right things at the right times, such as planting the right varieties and fertilizing, watering, mulching and controlling pests properly, chances are you've begun to enjoy the "fruits of your labor."

Most inexperienced gardeners have a tendency to believe all that's left to do is to sit back and enjoy all those tasty, fresh veget-

Believe me, that's wrong! If anything, you should pay even closer attention to your garden and what's going on out there. An outbreak of disease, an infestation of damaging insects, or even a short drought period can wreck your garden and make all previous efforts worthless.

Also, make it a point to harvest all your vegetables when they mature. To get the most from your garden, harvest your vegetables at their best stage for

This is also a must for canning and freezing. The final quality of your preserved vegetables is no better than the quality you began with. In other words, what you put in the jar is what you take out.

After all the effort you've put into growing your garden this year, make sure that you enjoy your vegetables at their peak of quality. It's important to remember that once a vegetable is removed from your garden, it has no further source of food nor can it replace loss of moisture. So, make the time between harvesting and eating or preserving as short as possible Now it's time for a little philosophy. Gardening is a great activity for everyone. Its rewards are many, but there's one that's overlooked by most and that's an appreciation of agriculture. The truth is, you haven't been gardening, you've been 'backyard farming.

If you have been successful this year, you owe a lot of the success to the advances brought about by modern science and research conducted by land grant universities and private industry. New varieties, improved cultural techniques, high efficiency fertilizers, and safe and effective pest control chemicals are all the result of a highly sophisticated agricultural system like no other anywhere in the world.

If your garden was a failure or just didn't live up to your expectations, try to figure out what went wrong. Vow to do better next time. And on your trip to the local grocery or a farmers market, be appreciative and thankful for the small number of farmers doing a great job to feed

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Woman on crutches won't dance

DEAR ABBY: What should a handicapped woman say to men who ask her to dance? I am a 27year-old graduate student who walks with crutches. I enjoy going out with friends to listen to live music, and I put my crutches under the table so no one will trip over

When a man comes over and asks me to dance, a direct, "No, thank you," (according to male friends) is seen as snobbish or aloof - and invariably the guy turns and walks away without a word.

To say, "I really can't dance," leads to arguments that "Everyone can dance," or, "I can teach you," which is very embarrassing. Were I to say, "Sorry, I'm handicapped," it would cause an outpouring of sympathy, followed by a hasty retreat.

Abby, please don't suggest I keep my crutches in evidence as a tip-off. I am as flattered as the next woman by an invitation to dance. I need a quick, clever answer that won't embarrass either of us.

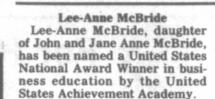

Your answer will not only help me, it will remind people to control the urge to say something sympathetic or to hurry away when they meet someone with a handicap. Finally, it may teach men to react more civilly to a woman who, for whatever reason, turns down their invitation to dance.

EVA IN BEAVERTON

DEAR EVA: When an attractive stranger comes to your table and asks you to dance, instead of a, "No, thank you," offer a pleasant, "I would love to - but won't you please be seated so we can sit this one out? My name is Eva, what's yours?"

Now, what man would walk away from such a gracious invitation? After he's seated, you can then explain that you were complimented by his offer to dance, but you are physically disabled, and although you keep your crutches under the table, you believe in putting all your ards on the table to ensure a fair deal. Good luck, Eva.

NEW YORK (AP) - Cameo can gloat over the platinum success of Word Up!, its 12th album in 10 years. But lead singer Larry Blackmon isn't resting on his

In fact, it's not certain that Blackmon knows how to rest. He'll soon produce two tunes for jazz trumpeter Miles Davis, and Cameo will make its first feature-length movie this summer, Tacky Guy. The group wrote the concept for the story and it will have an undisclosed star.

"We've been working on it awhile now," Blackmon said. "It'll leave you feeling excited and entertained. If you know our videos, this movie will be no new experience for you. It'll be the highly stylized thing Cameo is known for.

"It's a musical. We can expect simultaneous release of the movie and the album in the first quarter of 1988."

Blackmon calls Cameo's music black rock 'n' roll. "It's because we're contemporary black artists. If you put a blindfold on, you could listen to a white person singing and say, 'That really sounds black.' That goes to show that art is art.

"I know white artists who are playing black rock 'n' roll. I feel it is good," he said.

"But radio people shouldn't take a sound by a white person and play it and deny the black musician airplay on the same station if it sounds the same. That's where the unfair practice comes in. It happens a great deal."

Besides the platinum Word Up!, seven of Cameo's other LPs are gold, with Cameosis from 1980 their biggest seller.

Blackmon grew up in New York. He moved to Atlanta seven

"I had my own production company here," he said. "I didn't start my own record company until I changed the name from New York City Players to Atlanta Artists. I also have Atlanta Artists Management, which handles aspects of touring, and Samurai Artists Video Company." PolyGram distributes the

Farmland in 40 years will be enough to meet needs

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - A draft of a once-adecade report by the Agriculture Department says enough farmland will be left to meet needs of the year 2030, even though some 48 million acres could be taken for non-agricultural uses by then.

The draft report, which will be subject to public comment and review before being put in final form, was released by the USDA on Monday.

Erosion, salt pollution in irrigation areas of the West, and reduced vegetation on livestock ranges are other threats to the U.S. agricultural machine.

Although the rate of urban growth has slowed in some areas, the conversion of agricultural land into other uses remains a disturbing problem for the future, the report said. "Further, the effects of conversion, not only on local and regional farm income and production patterns but on the nation, may be understated if only the number of acres converted is considered.' the report said.

It added: "Much of the urban growth will occur on prime farmland in counties in or near metropolitan areas. Although counties in fast-growth areas include less than 15 percent of all cropland, they account for nearly 30 percent of the dollar value of the nation's farm output.'

The nation's total non-federal rural land area, not counting Alaska, is more than 1.4 billion acres, which includes 421.4 million acres of cropland, 133.3 million acres of pastureland and 405.9 million acres of rangeland, based on the the department's 1982 National Resources Inventory.

About 1.5 million acres are converted to nonagricultural uses each year, the report said. Sixtyfour percent is cropland.

"Assuming the current rate of conversion continued, the cropland base would be reduced by nearly 48 million acres, or 12 percent, between 1982 and 2030," the report said. "Changes in land use may have an enormous effect at the local level without becoming a problem that requires specific action at the national level."

The report said soil erosion caused by the wearing-away action of water and wind is reducing the productivity of some soils. In 1982, water erosion moved more than 3.4 billion tons of soil on nonfederal rural land, and wind moved 2 billion tons.

"More than 286 million acres of non-federal land are eroding at rates greater than the soil tolerance - that is, the rate at which sustained economic production is assured," the report said.

According to a new computer analysis cited in the report, 100 years of water and wind erosion under 1982 management conditions would reduce

U.S. productive capacity 1.9 percent. The report said that would be "the equivalent of losing production worth $9 billion at 1980 prices."

George S. Dunlop, assistant secretary for natural resources and environment, noted that the report's value is in its identification of "the status and condition of our soil and water resources" so those resources can be conserved and protected.

"Despite the fact that the report identifies some resource conservation problems, its findings show that the United States can meet food production demands for the foreseeable future," Dunlop said.

CRP SIGN-UP ENDS JULY 31 Currently a sign-up period for putting cropland into the government's Conservation Reserve Program runs through next Friday Land accepted into the CRP must be kept out of production for 10 years and prescribed conservation practices must be followed. This includes planting the land to grass or trees to prevent wind and water erosion, with costs shared by the government. Landowners must submit a bid on eligible land to their local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office during the sign-up period. Land eligibility is determined by the Soil Conservation Service. If the bid is accepted, landowners will be paid that price annually over the 10-year period provided they follow the prescribed conservation

Because several new phases of the CRP are being enacted this year, including sodbuster, swampbuster and conservation compliance, interest in the CRP should increase. Details on the total program are available at any local ASCS office.

The CRP is part of the 1985 farm bill and was initiated during the spring of 1986 as a five-year effort to take some 45 million acres of highly erodible cropland out of production across the U.S. Some 11.5 million of these acres are targeted in Texas.

Farmers interested in learning more details about the CRP and ble should contact local offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, both located in the Gray County Courthouse Annex

HIGH PLAINS SPECIALITY CROP TOUR PLANNED JULY

With one-third as many farmers today as there were at the turn of the century, only the most efficient are capable of surviving declining water tables and declining net-farm income.

Nowhere is this more evident than on the High Plains of New Mexico and Texas. Many farmers are looking at specialty crop production as an answer to their problems.

Tuesday through Thursday the New Mexico and Texas Cooperative Extension Services will host a High Plains Specialty Crop tour from Clovis, N.M. The three-day tour will include stops at farms, packing sheds and other marketing operations involved in specialty crop production in the Clovis, Portales, Melrose, Hereford, Easter and Muleshoe areas of New Mexico and Texas.

'We have oriented our tour around production, marketing and variety," says tour organizer George Dickerson, NMSU Extension horticulturist. "We are trying to expose our clientele to a variety of ideas. Some farmers like the challenge of developing their own markets. Others prefer working with commercial

On Tuesday registration will begin at 8 a.m., with Curry County Extension Agent Billy Dictson as host. The first stop on the tour will be a blue corn production field on the Ronnie Curry farm. Then, Gary Brown will explain production and marketing of green beans and summer squash. From there, the tour will go to the Terry Lusk farm to evaluate watermelons and direct-seeded onions in the field.

The tour will concentrate on packing sheds and processing after lunch, with the first stop at Lusk Onion Brokerage and Distribution in Clovis. Later, Randy Ware will guide the group through Ware Produce. J.R. Terry will guide the group through Frozfruit Company

A hospitality hour will follow at the Holiday Inn. It will be organized by Darrell Baker, NMSU Extension agronomist.

Registration begins at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday. The tour will leave the Holiday Inn parking lot at 8 a.m. under the direction of Roosevelt County Extension Agent Floyd McAlister. The first stop will be at Borden's Peanut Company in Portales. Later, Richard Moore will explain pecan production on the High Plains. Next, the tour will go to the Roy Newberry farm where participants will see sweet potatoes, peanuts and an improved irrigated pasture grass operation. Wayne Baker and Lester Merrill will finish the morning with a discussion of the benefits of alfalfa bagging.

Farm exports to Eastern Europe continue to skid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exports of grain and other farm commodities to Eastern Europe have continued to decline in value, despite large subsidized wheat sales authorized last year, according to a new Agriculture Department analysis.

As a result, the U.S. agricultural trade advantage with the seven-nation region has dwindled to a fraction of what it was a decade ago.

The countries include Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia.

Last year U.S. farm exports to those countries totaled $432.7 million, down from $479.1 million in 1985. Total agricultural imports from Eastern Europe were valued at $304.6 million, up from $263.3 million the year before.

That left a U.S. agricultural trade balance of $128.1 million last year, down from $215.8 million in 1985.

In the period of 1975-80, U.S. agricultural exports to Eastern Europe averaged about $1.57 billion a year, while imports were valued at $318.1 million annually. That left a yearly U.S. farm trade bulge of almost $1.25 billion.

One reason for the huge drop in exports to Eastern Europe was the 1981 U.S. economic sanctions against Poland after martial law was imposed. The sanctions denied Poland most favored nation status and prohibited U.S. government credits to that country.

President Reagan lifted the sanctions earlier this year after DIVORCE '78 determining that Poland had made substantial improvements in human rights.

Sales of U.S. agricultural products to Poland, which averaged more than $519 million a year in the 1970s, dropped to less than half that in the early 1980s and to $92.2 million in 1985 and to $33.1 million last year.

Nancy Cochrane of the department's Economic Research Service said in her report that lifting the sanctions against Poland will not have a quick impact.

"The poor quality of Polish goods and Poland's financial difficulties will prevent any significant increase in trade, and Western lenders do not regard Poland as a very good credit risk at present," she said.

Last year's 10 percent drop in the value of U.S. agricultural exports to Eastern Europe would have been greater if it hadn't been for subsidized wheat sales under the department's Export Enhancement Program (EEP), the report showed.

WATCH

Power lines can be dangerous.

Touching irrigation pipe to a power line can divert the electricity through the pipe . . . and to anyone in contact with it. In this part of the country, this is the leading cause of farm injuries and deaths in electricity-related accidents. Any equipment of unusual height represents a potential danger. Lift arms on field equipment, combine auger spouts and even radio antennas can cause serious injury or death if they, and you, make contact with a power line.

Keep an eye up for power lines. Watch up, for safety's sake
