Jobless rates down from last year

By LARRY HOLLIS News Editor

Pampa and Gray County unemployment rates rose nearly a percentage point from May to June, but the rates are down nearly 5 percent from a year ago.

Texas Employment Commission Pampa Manager Charles Vance reported that the June unemployment rate for Pampa was an even 9 percent, up from the 8.2 percent recorded in May.

With a labor force of 10,488 in Pampa, 946 were unemployed in June while 9,542 were working, according to the TEC re-

But a year ago Pampa was showing a 13.7 percent unemployment rate, 4.7 points above the latest available rate, Vance said.

Gray County had an unemployment rate of 9.2 percent in June, up from the 8.4 percent listed for May. Of the 12,921 listed in the county's labor force, 1,192 were looking for jobs while 11,729 were employed in

The county's rate in June 1986 was an even 14 percent, 4.8 points above the latest rate, Vance noted.

Vance said there is no definite reason for the increase in employment in the past year. "The only activity generally has been in jobs in the service sector," he said. such as food services, convenience stores, nursing homes and the like. Some of the increase also has come in seasonal out-

There has been a slight increase in oilfield-related work in the past year, Vance said, "but nothing to brag about yet."

Some oilfield firms and related businesses have called back some previously laid-off workers in the past few months, but the employment is still way down from the levels reached before the petroleum industry entered its economic straits in the state

The other four counties in the local TEC's reporting district also have unemployment rates lower than a year ago, with decreases ranging from just under 1 percent to 4.2 percentage points

Hemphill County had the biggest decrease next to Gray County. Its unemployment rate for June was 8.2 percent, down 4.2 from the 12.4 percent recorded a year ago. But its June rate also showed an increase from the 6.7 percent listed in May. Of the 2,152 listed in Hemphill County's labor force in June, 177 were unemployed and 1,975 had jobs Lipscomb County showed a 3.8 percent unemployment rate in June, down 0.3 from the 4.1 percent registered in May. Of the 2,011 in its labor force, 77 were looking for jobs while 1,935 were employed.

In June 1986, Lipscomb County had an unemployment rate of 5 percent, 1.2 points higher than the rate reported in June this

Roberts County had an unemployment rate of 8.5 percent for June, up 2.8 from the 5.7 percent recorded for May. With 706 listed in its labor force, 60 were without jobs while 646 were employed.

Series took weeks of digging, interviews

EDITOR'S NOTE: "Home School: Solomon's Classroom' is the product of more than two months' research by Pampa News Senior Staff Writer Paul Pinkham. The nine-story series about educating children at home begins today and continues through Thursday

The articles explore the reasons for parents' removing their children from organized schools to teach them at home, their dealings with school authorities, student reactions, psychologists' views on home education and how truancy and attendance laws relate to home schooling. The series also details the history of home education, the views of public school educators, home-school curricula, college admissions policies, armed forces recruitment and support groups available to home schoolers.

Research for the series began in June and included more than 35 interviews with parents, children, educators, lawyers psychologists and state leaders. Numerous published reports research studies, legal interpretations and previous news reports also provided back ground for the series.

Pinkham's journalism career began in 1983 at the weekly Linn County News in Pleasanton, Kan., where he was news editor. He came to Pampa as a reporter in 1985. He was named senior staff writer last fall. He covers schools, courts and police for The Pampa News.

A New Jersey native, Pink ham, 27, holds a teaching degree from Glassboro State College in New Jersey and completed his master's degree coursework in journalism at Kent State University in Ohio.

But this was something else The speaker at Bible Church of Pampa seemed to be talking directly to her.

And what he was saying was almost outrageous enough to work, she thought.

For years, Deborah and her husband Larry had worried about their son Kelly. They tried to run a Christian home - and Kelly was basically a good kid but every day, Deborah sent her son off to school wondering what kind of bad habits he would pick up, even subconsciously.

Or what kind of kids he would associate with Or what kind of secular thoughts would fill his head. Something was dreadfully wrong, Deborah thought. She was losing her son, and she felt powerless

"Increasingly, I got the feeling that he was their property, not mine, and I wanted my son back," she said. "We were no longer controlling our family. Someone else was Then, on that fall day in 1983, a few words uttered by Dr. Norman Geisler, a professor from Dallas Theological Seminary, turned the Hendricks' world up side down — or, the Hendricks would say, right side up.

"He said, 'If you don't like the way things are in public school. take your kids out and teach them at home," "Deborah re called. "That was a very novel idea to me.

Gail Winter is the first to admit that she faces the coming year with a certain degree of fear. When her daughter Samarah's kindergarten classmates from Austin Elementary School go off to first grade, Samarah will stay at home Instead of a classroom filled with eager, young faces, Samarah, 6, will learn at her mother's side where Gail and her husband Raymond believe God intended her to learn.

That, Gail admits, is an awesome responsi-"I'm scared at times. It's not going to be easy,"

she says. "But then I realize I can't do it without God's help anyway, and he's promised me that.'

"It's not something we're going to try," adds Raymond, a unit operator with Phillips Petroleum Co. in Borger. "It's something we're going to do.

The Winters are one of thousands of families across Texas who choose to bypass the public school system and more traditional private schools, and educate their children at home.

State District Judge Charles Murray of Fort Worth - who ruled earlier this year that home schooling is legal in Texas — estimated that 10,000 to 15,000 Texas school-age children are taught at home. In the Panhandle, 150 to 200 families teach their children at home, says Mary Ann Gillis of the Panhandle Christian Home Educators Association.

Pampa-area eye patients are seeing two doctors

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

If you notice two listings for opthalmologists in the Pampa telephone directory, you're not seeing double.

Pampa became a two-opthalmologist town two weeks ago when 5-year Pampa veteran Dr. George Walters was joined by Nebraska native Dr. Lori Hawkins. The two eye surgeons have joined forceps at the Regional Eye Center, a new specialized clinic that opened in July at the Medical Plaza complex in far north

Walters and Hawkins make up what Walters believes is the only "group" of opthalmologists in the eastern Panhandle. 'We work together,'' Walters said. "If I need consultation or back-up, she's right there. And the patient gets two doctors for the price of one. Walters and Hawkins handle almost any major eye trauma or disease. Cataracts, caused by a clouding of the lens, are the most common form of eye surgery the doctors perform. Walters added that he treats a lot of industrial chemical burns from area chemical companies. Glaucoma seems to be the most common eye disease, Walters added. 'We also treat kids with crossed eyes, the 'lazy eye,' patients who tear abnormally, degeneration," Walters said, estimating that three-fourths of his patients are

Walters explained that minor surgery and laser surgery are conducted at the small operating room at the Eye Center, which also has about four examination rooms. Major surgery, such as for cataracts, is done across the street at Coronado Hospital.

Patients with more severe or complex problems are taken to specialists at Amarillo or at the Dean McGhee Eye Institute in Oklahoma City.

Both doctors are "general practice" opthalmolgists because, Hawkins said, 'you have to have a big, big patient base a big city or a medical school — to specialize.'

Walters said even Amarillo isn't big enough to support opthalmologists who

Still, the Pampa area may seem to be an unlikely place to support a medical practice for your eyes only.

But Walters, the lone Pampa practitioner since 1982, believes the time is right for

"There is a tremendous demand for eye care in this part of the Panhandle," said Walters, who handles up to 300 cataract surgeries per year.

'He's pretty busy,'' Hawkins said.

Walters, who draws his patients from Pampa and the surrounding communities, said that in the past, patients either had to wait to see him or go to Amarillo. He, too, had to depend on Amarillo opthalmologists to back him up if his schedule got too heavy or if he needed second opinions.

Such a schedule cut into his free time, so Walters began seeking an associate earlier this year.

Hawkins, who was finishing her residency in New Orleans, joined Walters Aug. 2 after reading about the opening in a professional journal. She began her practice

Weather prevents blind sailor's crossing

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — Bad weather has forced Jim Dickson to put off until next year his bid to become the first blind mariner to cross the Atlantic.

"Part of my objective was to get people talking about the capabilities of the blind and the prejudices of the able-bodied and I have been successful in that," Dickson, 41, said here Friday

Dickson set sail in his 36-foot sloop Eye Opener on Aug. 4 from Portsmouth, R.I., for Plymouth, England. But he had to make a 200-mile detour to Bermuda when the autopilot and satellite navigation system broke down a few days later.

He braved rough seas and heavy winds about 60 miles north of Bermuda last week as a tropical storm blew across this tiny British colony and headed out to sea. Dickson and the Eye Opener, its sails and rigging damaged by the storm, were guided across the island's reef line and into port on

Aug. 14. A fund-raising barbecue at a Bermuda sailing club Tuesday night failed to raise enough money to cover repairs, but Club Med, the French resort group, offered Friday to donate the $15,000 he needs

"I was stunned by the offer," said Dickson. "I still can't believe what's happened.'

But even as the offer was made, Arlene, the first named storm of the 1987 Atlantic hurricane season, was east of Bermuda over the north Atlantic. Tropical storm Bret, the second named storm of the season, was southeast of the island, and the two tempests made an attempted crossing too risky

Dickson said he would try again in May or June of next vear.

He said he had yet to decide whether to leave Eye Opener in Bermuda for the winter or sail it back to the United States.

'Right now I'm going to celebrate the good financial news by taking a long nap," he said. "I'm exhausted from all the fundraising, the repair work and answering questions from everybody.

Doctors

ern Nebraska town of Ogalala, so the Pampa high plains seems like pretty familiar country.

'Pampa is a big city compared to where I'm from," noted Hawkins, who went from the Nebraska prairies to Arizona State University to the University of Texas Medical School. She received more specialized training at the Louisiana State University medical school, which Walters said has one of the top opthalmology schools in the country.

"This is close to home compared to where I was." Hawkins said.

Hawkins admitted that after only two weeks in Pampa, she does not yet have quite the patient load that her associate has. "I'm happy with the way it's been going," Hawkins said. "It's picking up. Pampa native Walters received his medical degree from the University of Texas at Galveston and completed his residency at Tulane University

Walters said it takes between eight and nine years of post graduate work to become an opthalmologist

But it's not because it takes so long to learn about eye problems, Walters said.

You can learn about that in a year," he noted. It's the practice that takes time — practice steadying one's hand under precise conditions. Said Dr. Hawkins: "People with hands that shake don't want to get into opthalmic surgery.

Many of the delicate instruments that the eye doctors use in their surgery can fit into the palm of Hawkins' hand. The sutures used to sew the opera-

Much of the surgery that we do is done under a tions can be as narrow as three hairs wide. "The sutures are so light they float in air, like a spider web," Hawkins said. Walters said the hardest operation is the lens implant, in which a lens no larger than a hayseed is placed behind the eye's cornea.

The two doctors also work with laser machines that shoot pinpoint beams that can burn microscopic holes in the eye.

Luckily for the doctors' nerves, eye surgery seldom takes more than two hours. The average length of an operation, according to Walters, is 30

A comparatively short operation, but to the patients who have their sight returned, that half-hour can make a life-changing difference.

Ione Shuck, 75, of Skellytown had a cataract removed from her right eye in July. She recalled that her right eye began giving her problems about three years ago.

"It got to where I couldn't see anything," Shuck said.

It took a while for Shuck to get an appointment with Dr. Walters. But when she did, she was able to have the date of her cataract removal moved up from July 29 to July 27.

"He was wonderful," Shuck said. "There was not one bit of pain, nothing."

Shuck said that before she had her surgery, she could not drive because she couldn't recognize any of the road signs. "But now I can read things way down the road," she said. "Now I can see everything as plain as plain can be. Shuck had a cataract operation on her left eye about five years ago, and she said she can now see better out of her right eye than her left.

Government tightens air control

WASHINGTON (AP) - Among an exclusive club of 535 frequent flyers — the members of Congress sentiment is growing in favor of new laws forcing improvements in airline safety and service.

Nine years after U.S. airlines were deregulated, there is a growing sense on Capitol Hill that legislators ought to take some action on aviation issues. It's a threat the airlines are taking seriously.

"I think this industry is scared to death," says Jon F. Ash, an airline consultant in Washington. 'A number of them are running around the Hill lobbying to try to prevent the imposition of these types of dictates.

The federal government, responding to a surge in reports of aircraft near-collisions, announced Saturday plans to tighten air traffic control restrictions at nine additional airports and to require more sophisticated anti-collision devices for air-

The nine airports are Charlotte, N.C.; Baltimore-Washington International; Washington's Dulles Airport; Tampa; Orlando; Memphis, Tenn.; Salt Lake City; Houston Hobby and Phoenix, Ariz.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said the Federal Aviation Administration will shortly propose new rules to create nine new Terminal Control Areas, with larger areas of controlled airspace and stricter requirements for pilots

Mrs. Dole made the announcement at a news conference in Charlotte, N.C.

Congress has been working on two major pieces of aviation legislation this year. One would provide billions of dollars for airports and the air traffic control system, the other would require airlines to report monthly on delayed and canceled flights, lost luggage and other service problems.

Chevy would enjoy a Jersey vacation

NEW YORK — I've always felt rather sorry for Chevy Chase

Not only did he have to lug two neurotic kids, an eccentric aunt and a vicious dog on an ill-fated journey across America in the first Vacation: movie-goers loved it so much, he had to do it again

But Chevy and the rest of the Griswald clan ain't seen nothin' till they take a family vacation with

I mean, he had two kids, but we had three ruffians to look after when we climbed aboard an American Airlines 727 bound for the Big Apple last weekend

But that wasn't the worst part. Our kids were infinitely better-behaved than Chevy's

I remember the boss telling me when I left that he's always more exhausted after a vacation than before it. "Not me," I thought to myself. "This trip's gon-

The first incident came early in the trip when we decided to borrow Mom's car and take a side trip down to Philadelphia to see the Liberty Bell, Independence Hall, Penn's Landing and all that good, historical stuff. Surprisingly, we found a parking place on the street, about two blocks from The Bell itself, and set off on our journey.

It was a wonderful afternoon, not too hot, and filled with sunshine, culinary pleasures like Philly cheese-steaks and a pleasant stroll along the Dela-

In a panic I ran into a nearby office and called the police to report a stolen car. Of course, since it wasn't mine to begin with, I didn't know the license plate number, or even the color for that matter.

'Not to worry," the police lady who answered told me. "We have your car. It's in our impound lot. We towed it.'

That meant all we had to do was walk about 50 blocks, shell out $55, then walk back another 50 blocks and get Mom's car. So much for my column about how everyone should try to visit Philadelphia and see the Liberty Bell.

But that was a pleasure trip compared to what my aunt had planned for us later in the week.

I didn't think much about it when she announced she was taking us tubing down South Jersey's Cedar Creek. I knew I didn't want to go — but that was a matter of knowing that floating down a shallow, muddy, probably-polluted creek with one's posterior stuck in an inner tube wasn't my idea of

I had no idea, though, how miserable one could be trying to have a good time.

I spent the first half of the trip belly-down across the tube, because every time I tried to sit in it, it would flip me into the shallow, muddy, probablypolluted and, I learned, freezing cold creek. Another degree colder and we probably could have ice skated, which would have been a heckuva lot more fun.

What seemed like 100 miles down the creek, I ran into a canoe (literally) that was being paddled by two youngsters.

They said tubing looked like fun, and they'd like to try it. I said be my guest — Linda and I will take the canoe. We agreed to meet at the next beach.

We should have known better. No sooner had we paddled around the first bend than we managed to flip the canoe. The kids' clothes, shoes, lunches and anything else they may have left in the canoe went floating calmly down the river.

I did manage to rescue a Twinkie, but it was pretty soggy.

After about 30 minutes, we got the canoe righted and proceeded down the stream.

Just when I thought we might finally reach our destination without any more bad luck, a tree limb I brushed away from my face snapped back and hit my wife right between the eyes, knocking her glasses to the swift-flowing river bottom - gone without a trace.

Space does not permit me to fill you in on the rest of the week's adventures — like sunburn from head to toe or getting caught in an anti-Mayor Koch demonstration in downtown Manhattan.

Let me just say that on the seventh day, at my insistence, we rested.

But, hey, things could have been worse. We could have had my mother-in-law along!

Off Beat Skellytown Fun Day

Skellytown residents don't hold back when they have their summer Fun Day. Skellytown folk filled the ballpark near City Hall Saturday for a day of fun, food, contests and DALLAS (AP) - Savings and loan industry officials continue to assure depositors that their money is safe in the wake of concerns by Gov. Bill Clements and others about the health of Texas thrifts, but some doubts remain.

The Federal Home Loan Bank has been trying to instill confidence in consumers who heard Clements say the federal government might renege on its deposit insurance program, paying only 30 cents on a dollar and issuing promissory notes.

"All insured deposits up to $100,000, and I emphasize all, will be made good and honored by the FSLIC," M. Danny Wall, FHLB board chairman in Washington, said last week.

Officials say the "full faith and credit" of the federal government is behind thrift deposits.

"No depositor has lost even one nickel of insured funds," Roy Green, president of the Dallas Home Loan Bank, said.

Orientation for all Pampa High School freshmen and their parents is scheduled for 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday in the high school auditorium.

High School Principal Oran Chappell encouraged all freshmen and parents to attend.

Chappell said other high school students already have received their schedules and do not need to report to school until-Sept. 1.

Thursday is enrollment day for elementary and sixth-grade students at their respective schools. Pampa Middle School Principal Jack Alexander said sixth-graders should report Thursday to the middle school auditorium for orientation and class assignments.

Seventh- and eighth-grade students are already enrolled and do not need to report until Sept. 1,

Parents whose kindergarten-age children have not yet been screened should contact Arlene Gibson at 665-2376 this week.

The federal S&L system is designed to prevent a domino collapse in case of one thrift's failure, said Mark Clark, a spokesman for the U.S. League of Savings Institutions.

"In most instances, another institution acquires the failed S&L, or it is merged into another institution with some assistance from the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.," he said.

Many Texas thrifts are paying a higher interest rate on deposits than S&Ls in other regions of the country. Clark said there is such a premium because of the widespread negative perception of the Texas economy.

'S&Ls have to pay rates to attract customers," he said. "What possible reason is there not to take advantage of this?'

DALLAS (AP) — Kent Hance, who switched from the Democratic Party to the GOP in 1985, is in line for an appointment to the Texas Railroad Commission. associates of Gov. Bill Clements

Hance, 44, said he met with Clements earlier this week and, "the only thing he said was to think about it and see if you want to be considered.''

He said he has not been offered the job.

James Huffines, the governor's appointments secretary, also said Hance has not been offered the post, but confirmed that Hance is one of four people on 'our short list that we are seriously contemplating."

'We've had lots of calls on his behalf, but Mr. Hance has not indicated whether he is interested," Huffines told the Dallas Morning News.

Hance, a former Democratic congressman from Lubbock, said he would discuss the appointment with his family and friends this weekend and let the governor know early next week if he is interested.

The post became open after Democratic Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace announced his resignation last week.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion Social tinkerers put own interests first

For 20 years, social engineers have tried forcibly to integrate the public schools. The result? The schools are still not integrated, in some cases less so than ever. That's the underlying — though unstated — conclusion from a new University of Chicago study, "School Segregation in the 1980s.

Let's remember how schools differ from the forced segregation that lasted up until the 1960s, which separated racial or ethnic groups by law. Under that discarded system, blacks or other minorities were taxed for public schools, but couldn't use them; instead they were shunted aside to inferior schools.

Today segregation really doesn't exist — despite the title of the Chicago report. True enough, many schools are not integrated. The Chicago study laments the "deepening isolation of children growing up in innercity ghettos and barrios from any contact with main-stream American society." In Illinois, 84 percent of blacks attend minority schools. In New York, the percentage of blacks attending intensely segregated schools rose from 56.2 percent in 1980 to 56.7 percent in

What can be gleaned from these numbers? First, that the numbers actually aren't as bad as they seem. The reason is that the white birth rate has declined much faster than that of blacks, Hispanics, and other minorities. With fewer white kids to go around, the percentage of minorities in schools is going to increase even if nothing else changes.

Second, where such numbers are valid, the Chicago study unwittingly displays the failure of forced busing and other coercive integration plans. Such programs just don't work.

In fact, parents of all racial backgrounds uniformly oppose having their kids shuffled around on some berserk social engineer's planning board. This was proved dramatically last year when Norfolk, Va., shelved its forced integration program at the insistence of black parents.

Third, in opposition to the social engineering schemes, a revolution has been occurring in education. Private schools have been sprouting like wildflowers. And they're far more integrated than the public schools. A few "white academies" do exist, but they're the small exception. The vast majority of private schools welcome minority students.

Indeed it's in private schools that minorities excel. Public schools, particularly in the inner cities, have become violent battle grounds and breeding places of illiteracy. The Three Rs have been rejected for taxsupported birth-control clinics and condom classes.

The funny thing is, though, that desegregationists almost to a man oppose injecting some competition into education. For example, they oppose voucher plans that would give parents a choice of which school

Maybe the social engineers aren't interested so much in integrating American schools, or in providing better education to minority students, but in advancing their own power.

ACP has become irrelevan

The NAACP's announced plans for an all-out. war in opposition to the confirmation of Judge Robert H. Bork's appointment to the U.S. Supreme Court is an excellent example of misplaced priorities, squandering of resources, and the increasing irrelevancy of the NAACP.

Judge Bork is no racist. He's a true civil rights advocate. He shares the thoughts of traditional liberal philosopher-statesmen like John Locke, George Mason, Thomas Jefferson and James Madison. Men who believed limited government and equality before the law are the strongest guarantees of liberty.

These values have Judge Bork in trouble with civil rights organizations who value massive centralized government power and inequality before the law, where race and sex become the court's decision criteria. Since Bork cannot be criticized on his credentials as a legal scholar, the NAACP and radical feminists' attack will focus on his position on court-mandated quotas that Benjamin Hooks calls "decisions guaranteeing civil rights.'

Opposition to Bork's confirmation — just as with earlier opposition to Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds' promotion to associate attorney general — is more evidence that the once noble NAACP is going through the agonizing throes of death. The NAACP was very effective in meeting and defeating the old problem - violation of black constitutional guarantees. But its concentration on Bork's confirmation is equivalent to Nero's fiddling while Rome burns

Let's take a step back. Did the successful NAACP opposition to Brad Reynolds' promotion help slow the black teen-age pregnancy plague? Did it help the black people in inner-city slums who live in day-to-day terror? Believe me; they don't live in fear of Brad Reynolds or Robert Bork. They fear black drug pushers, rapists, thugs, arsonists, and murderers who often receive aid and comfort from ACLU lawyers and the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, aid which enables them to continue to prey on law-abiding citizens.

Will the NAACP's opposition to the Bork confirmation help black children cheated by grossly inferior public schools? In many major cities, school systems with superior funding and inferior performance are run by blacks as school superintendents, administrators, principals and teachers. On top of that, in cities like Detroit, Chicago, Philadelphia and Washington, even the mayors and a large percentage of the city councils are black; yet mediocrity and incompetency roll on, while racism remains the whipping boy. Georgia Sen. Julian Bond, in a Harper's Magazine article (February 1987), mused, what kind of teacher does his daughter have that would send a note home reading. "Julia be late too often."

There is no black problem that NAACP opposition to the Bork confirmation will solve. Yet, tragically, the NAACP sees nearly every black problem as a civil rights issue, hence the NAACP's irrelevance in 1987. Desperate Vietnamese boat people hit our shores 10 years ago. Now they are running academic circles around black, and many white, students. They're scoring high on tests that blacks have failed, tests the NAACP calls "culturally biased." The Vietnamese students' success is not the result of a civil rights strategy. It's the result of tried and true ingredients for success - hard work and sacrifice.

School starts soon. Kids will be poised for another year of educational rip-off. Where will the NAACP be? Not at state capitals or boards of education demanding accountability. They'll be traipsing the halls of Congress fiddling over

The University of Alabama, in its continuing effort to change its image from that of the "football factory" days of the late Bear Bryant, has now taken a number of steps in that direction.

Alabama President Dr. Joab Thomas first named Georgia Tech's Bill Curry as Alabama's new head football coach despite Curry's losing record at Tech and his 0-7 record against Auburn, the Crimson Tide's number one rival.

It was Curry's firm stand on academic excellence for his players, Thomas said, that landed Curry at Alabama.

"Academics is very important," as Curry puts it. Thomas also hired Steve Sloan, who also had a losing record at Duke, as Alabama's new athletic director

"We want our fans to get used to losing," said Thomas, "and I couldn't think of two better guys than Bill Curry and Steve Sloan to get the job done. Thomas further has announced a plan to play rival Auburn on an occasional basis rather than on a yearly basis. "The rivalry has become too intense to play the game every year," said Thomas, who said Alabama would try to schedule other schools with academic standards on its same lofty level to replace Auburn.

"We've been talking to Harvard, MIT, and Carnegie Mellon," said Thomas.

Lewis Grizzard

Thomas, it was learned, had also tried to contact Furman about a game, but Curry had talked him out of it, denying the reason for doing so was the fact he was never able to defeat the small Greenville, S.C., school while at Georgia

Thomas did say, however, he had taken Curry's recommendation to reduce the size of Alabama's massive football stadium by 40,000

"It worked at Tech when we decided to deemphasize," said Curry

Georgia Tech is thought to be the first major school ever to reduce, rather than enlarge, its football stadium.

Thomas also has a plan to change the Alabama nickname, Crimson Tide "We need a nickname that is more in keeping with the direction in which we are heading, said Thomas

Campus insiders say the new nickname might be the Owls, symbols of wisdom. "Because of our renewed interest in academics," it was explained.

Another souce said a new nickname might result from the fact both Curry and Athletic Director Sloan - fondly known as the Righteous Brothers — are staunch members of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. But others feel the praying mantis would never go over as the Alabama mascot.

Asked how Alabama alumni, some of whom are rabid fans of the school's football program, are taking this new move toward putting football "in its place" - a familiar phrase in Alabama some years ago — Thomas said:

"I have had nothing but support, except for a few thousand crackpots including the ones who tried to burn my house down, slash my tires, took out an ad calling me a communist, and set fire to my dog.

Thomas said, however, he feels things will settle down soon, and he can get back to making the University of Alabama "a school the people can be proud of."

Rope sales, meanwhile, are said to be brisk all over the state.

Put a stop to legal aid abuses

Berry

"I just HATE her 'punker than thou' attitude."

Seven years into the most conservative presidency in decades, taxpayers still fund lawsuits that inflate government's cost and distort public

Meanwhile, defenders of the practice still successfully thwart anyone bold enough to speak up in dissent.

Just ask Maryland's Democratic governor. Earlier this year, William Donald Schaefer threatened to withhold money from the Legal Aid Bureau there unless it promised not to file lawsuits against the state. Yet, after a few weeks' negotiations, he settled for an anemic compromise requiring, among other things, legal-aid attorneys to provide notice of intent

Like other politicians before him, Schaefer had met his match in the legal-aid lobby. Even The Washington Post joined in his drubbing, solemnly suggesting the governor doesn't "entirely subscribe to the difficult side of democratic government." In the Post's view, apparently, de-mocracy hasn't fully flowered until taxpayers gratefully fund efforts by legal-aid groups to oppose literacy tests for high school graduates (this happened in Florida) or to fight a tax-

Vincent Carroll

cutting measure (as occurred in

In fact, the roll call of vital "demo cratic" lawsuits is practically endless. As documented by economists James T. Bennett and Thomas J. Di-Lorenzo in their book "Destroying Democracy," past examples include "requiring a new school board election in Hereford, Texas; challenging the way federal agents search for illegal aliens; making expulsions from a junior high school in Newburg, N.Y., subject to racial quotas; supporting anti-nuclear groups in their attempts to stop power plant construction; blocking increases in transit fares'

It's not as if the Reagan administration hasn't tried to bridle this activism. It sought (but failed) to ban class-action lawsuits against the government by the Legal Services Corp. the quasi-private but federally funded entity that supports hundreds of local groups, such as Maryland's Legal Aid

Each year the president has also proposed zero funding for Legal Services, only to be ignored by Congress. Not only is the corporation's budget roughly equal to what it was in 1980 $306 million as opposed to $300 million - Congress has required its Reagan-appointed officials to funnel money to essentially the same local groups as before. Perhaps critics of Legal Services should switch tactics. Rather than wage a hopeless crusade against a charmed program, they might adopt an approach appealing to non-doctrinaire friends of legal aid for the poor.

Pepe Mendez, a Reagan appointee to the Legal Services board, has suggested a host of interesting possibilities. To cite a few: require mediation prior to suing; award legal fees to defendants who prevail against frivolous or harassing lawsuits; require all legal-aid groups receiving federal funds to limit the length of service on their boards and maintain no more than a single-person panel majority from either party. As it is, some legalaid boards have been dominated for years by the same indulgent friends of radical litigation.

Mendez would also equalize federal funding among programs according to the number of poor people served. This not only would be fair, it would happily reduce the income of some of the most aggressive agencies, such as California Rural Legal Assistance.

Such proposals won't transform legal aid into the benign friend of the poor it was intended to be, but at least they'd trim the worst abuses.

I was terribly disheartened when reading Thursday's paper about the school board meeting. Quite a few of us "custodians" have received at least a 4 percent raise, and we still take home only $950 to live on for a whole month! This must pay for utilities, gas and groceries, plus medical bills, drug bills, property payments, insurance payments,

We had been encouraged when we heard Dr. Griffith's remarks about giving people a boost in pay as a reward for good service and an incentive to stay on

The custodians are seldom recognized because they seldom appear in the limelight. These are the people who do the dirty work and keep our schools looking good. We had all been waiting with bated breath after being told, "Oh yes, there'll be a

Then we read that soccer is going to be started and money pumped into that, but the custodians can have only a 2 percent raise. We can't protest in person because we would be fired.

If the school system cannot afford a better pay raise for custodians, then how can it seem that teachers and athletics get more? These people who make "good" money don't realize or take into consideration the custodians.

It is not fair to those of us who have been patted on the back and told how great our school looks and then — nothing.

I protest. We "little people" deserve better pay. Money speaks, whereas promises and compliments don't put food on the table.

Neither does a 2 percent raise. Name withheld

Time to stop crying over spilled cream

I said I wouldn't do this, but as I drove down Hobart Street Thursday night and saw the sign in front of Baskin Robbins saying, "Another business going down in Pampa. I just couldn't stand it any longer.

I also own two small businesses in Pampa. I know things are tough, but why cry about it?

What happened to the spirit of "when the going gets tough, the tough get going?" I wanted to write a letter after I finished gagging on Mr. Coon's sob story about his high-priced joint going belly-up. By the way, I could not believe he received the kind of newspaper coverage for a going-out-ofbusiness sale. But back to Baskin Robbins, or Tripplehorn Enterprise, as it says on their license. When there was no competition, business was good. No one had a choice but to pay $1.29 for an ice cream cone. But along comes Braums, and Baskin Robbins isn't the only ice cream parlor around.

Instead of lowering prices and improving the poor service — which by the way Braums has no real improvement on — close up and blame it on

I think it is about time merchants all over Pampa decide to trim the fat a little. Also work together to bring down ridiculous rents we have to pay and cut expenses anywhere else we can.

I own two businesses doing the same type of business. My smaller building in poorer repair has almost double the rent of my larger building. Maybe that's because my landlord at the lowerrent location is a local (Borger) person who knows what problems this area has. The other is in a shopping center that doesn't really care about local conditions.

Come on, Pampa merchants. Let's quit crying and start fighting Name withheld

I'm writing in regard to the headine for "Dear Abby" on Thursday, Aug. 6. I read in an article that she doesn't write the headlines, but the editor of each paper does

The headline read: "Pit bull dogs don't belong in any back yard.'

Nowhere in that column did it single out the pit bull. Why was the headline put there? Most of the "news" is labeling all pit bulls as bad or dangerous. I don't believe this to be true.

I have an AKC-registered male American Staffordshire Terrier or as some refer to it, a pit bull

He is 5 years old and is only vicious to flies. He also barks at people with hats.

Humans have made these dogs what they are today. Any large dog can be vicious and can cause serious injury. But if you raise a dog not to be aggressive, he is not likely to bite unless provoked.

I once came home to find two neighborhood boys beating my pit with a piece of garden hose and wire. The dog was trying to get into his doghouse to escape the beating. The boys could have been seriously injured. The real danger was not from the dog but from me.

Any dog will bite if provoked, and yes, I know the pit can cause tremendous damage if it is provoked. But I will not get rid of my dog because of what he might be capable of. That would be wrong.

If these people keep pushing for a ban on all pit bulls and not just "vicious" dogs in general, they are doing a great injustice against many loved

I don't believe in capital punishment for any man (or dog) just because his cousin is a convicted murderer. What I'm trying to say is there should not be a canine holocaust just because of the breed

I do not fear for my two children to be around my pit, nor do any of my friends fear their chilren being around him. The only fear might be for them to trip over his chain.

I'm sure there are other good pit bull dogs out there that would suffer if such a ban on this breed

Thank you for letting me get this off my chest. Roxie Chilton

Whaley to retire as representative

To the editor: My wife Lois and I will not seek re-election to the office of state representative of the 84th District. As you know, we first ran on the platform, "We will give you two for the price of one." This we have done. Lois has been my unpaid secretary. She has been my sounding board for most of my ideas and my chauffeur when I was too sleepy and worn out to drive. Wherever you saw me, Lois was there also. Without her help, I would have never served the five terms we have served together.

It has been with a great deal of pride and satisfaction that we have been allowed to serve the good citizens of the 84th District. For this, we shall be eternally grateful. We appreciate the bulging file of nice "thank you" notes I have received over the years; we can count the nasty notes on one hand. Not bad considering that we have more than 92,000 constituents in our 84th District.

We will continue to serve you until the expiration of our term of office, which ends January 1989, just as we have in the past.

Our decision to not seek re-election was made after much deliberation, coupled with the many stressfu! and disappointing events of the last few

This annoucement is being made early for the benefit of those who might consider running for this office. Further, I would be happy to talk with anyone who would be interested in the office. At this time, however, I will not endorse any candi-

Kilpatrick column contained errors

James J. Kilpatrick's piece on the suit brought by Pennzoil against Texaco contains many inaccuracies. For example, here is a sampling of the author's major errors:

He says there was no binding contract; three courts have ruled otherwise.

He says Pennzoil relied on a handshake; in fact, Pennzoil relied on written documents signed by holders of a majority of Getty oil shares.

He says "some of the parties" reached an agreement; in fact, all of the concerned parties, including the Getty board, agreed to accept the Pennzoil proposal, and Getty Oil publicly announced the agreement in a broadly distributed news release.

Kilpatrick says, "The U.S. Supreme Court refused to get involved." On the contrary, the U.S. Supreme Court unanimously voted, 9-0, to require Texaco to pursue the remedies available to it in the state courts, rather than its attempted end-run around the judicial system.

He totally misunderstands how the damages were computed, calling them "hypothetical." On the contrary, damages were computed by an outside expert who used three different methods routinely employed in the oil industry. All three methods produced damages in the $5 to $8 billion range. They represent compensation for the loss Pennzoil actually suffered by Texaco's interference, which has been declared unlawful by judge and jury.

There are many more errors in the piece, but these examples should suffice. On the assumption that Mr. Kilpatrick somehow never had access to the facts, we are sending him, by copy of this letter, the information he lacks, drawn from the trial evi-

Willingness to help seems to be lacking

To the editor:

"We hold these Truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness."

So says the Declaration of Independence. There is nothing stated that says were are

'equal'' or that we will be "happy' On the "Letters to the Editor" page in last Sunday's paper, there were several letters with a negative content.

One letter chided the "Pampa dads" for neglecting the "majority" (no golf course).

Another complained that everyone should get the same medical treatment whether they are rich or poor and, inferred that, if one of the Kennedys chose the treatment of a specialist in Vienna, then we should all be entitled to this treatment. Also, the 'taxing agents'' were squandering his money on a golf course.

Another individual complaining about the "seat belt law" stated that the city might well have to feed her if she did not fasten her seat belt because she could not afford the fine. (Neither can I, so I fasten my seat belt).

When thinking about their various complaints, I wondered how "willing" these persons are to help build a better community. H.G. Wells in his Outline of History observed that the fall and decay of the Roman Empire, after several centuries of greatness, was the result of many factors.

Wells wrote: "Evident the want of any wide organization of education to base the ordinary citizens' mind upon the idea of service and obligation to the republic, to keep them willing ... another was the absence of any general information to keep their activities in harmony, to enable them to will as one body.'

In other words, too many takers, not enough givers

To many, the "pursuit" of happiness seems to be to drive faster than is safe, to toss litter on the public domain and to refuse to fasten seat belts.

Then there are complaints because laws are inacted to protect "grown" people from themselves. W.A. Morgan

Ransom Canyon is lakeside community

In reference to my letter of Aug. 9 regarding the possibility that Foster Whaley has grown "fangs and claws." please make a correction.

My address is not Canyon. It is Ransom Canyon. It's sort of hard to live in Canyon and only a few hundred feet within Foster's district, as my letter Ransom Canyon is more than 100 miles south of Canyon and about 15 miles east of Lubbock.

Lake Ransom is a private 200-acre lake and divides Foster's district. He knows where it is, who is here, and many of the 700 or so residents who live here know Foster.

The city was incorporated in 1978. It has a property owners' association, a city commission (on which I serve), a mayor, police department and volunteer fire department. Its monthly newspaper, the Ransom Canyon Echo is edited and printed by my wife Elleta.

Optimism creeps into oil patch

Texas guest columnist

By KEN BRODNAX The Odessa American

ODESSA (AP) — Tentative smiles, nervous giggles and crossed fingers — a few favorite West Texas mannerisms these days.

The rest of the world will have to forgive the Permian Basin. It is feeling a bit giddy, but nobody's quite ready to celebrate. Maybe prayer is a better course.

Now, just what is the mood? Not confident, not by a long shot. Not cocky. Not yet. Not relieved, that's reserved for later.

Hopeful? Always. Wary? That's for sure. The oil industry is in much the same shape as a gambler coming off a long losing streak. A few winning bets don't mean a lot. He has to Folks in the Basin have spent considerable time peering into the future looking for that light at the end of the tunnel. By now, their eyes are so weary they don't know if the latest upsurge is a mirage or a miracle.

A few months ago, most people in the oil patch thought they would have been singing 'Happy Days Are Here Again' if crude prices would only reach the $20-a-barrel Well, that's happened. But most of the par-

A majority of the so-called experts say years could pass before the economy reaches the heady levels of the early 1980s. History indicates that residents will never

Plane crash probe moves to lab

ROMULUS, Mich. (AP) - Investigators in the crash of Northwest Flight 255 are shifting their focus from the scene to the laboratory, where they face conflicting evidence on whether the wing flaps and slats had been set for takeoff.

The National Transportation Safety Board has uncovered "conflicting and confusing" evidence about the flaps and slats of the jet in the nation's second-worst airline disaster, NTSB spokeswoman Rachel Halterman said Friday.

The Phoenix, Ariz.-bound plane crashed last Sunday just after takeoff from Detroit Metropolitan Airport, killing at least 155 people.

The Wayne County Medical Examiner's Office released a list Friday of 149 people killed in the crash — 147 on the airplane and two on the ground. The names of six other victims, all aboard the plane, were confirmed by family members.

The disaster's sole survivor, 4-year-old Cecilia Cichan, continued her recovery from burns at C.S. Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor, where she was in serious condition early today.

Volunteer firefighter Donald Daughenbaugh, who found the girl amid the charred remains of the crash victims, dropped off flowers Friday. "She helped me as much as I helped her," he said.

NTSB member John Lauber has said preliminary indications from the flight data recorder of the McDonnell Douglas MD-80 showed the wing flaps, which give the jet crucial lift, were retracted, rather than ex-

However, he said the plane's cockpit voice recorder did not pick up alarms designed to go off if the flaps and slats are not extended, and a pilot on another Northwest plane said he saw the flaps in proper position.

tended for takeoff.

"The physical evidence looks as though the flaps were retracted ... but they (investigators) were not comfortable that that is a fact," Halterman said from Washington.

Metallurgical tests on the wreckage at NTSB laboratories in coming weeks will help determine the configuration at the time of the crash. Halterman said.

The federal investigators said they expected to stay in Detroit a few more days to examine the wreckage, which is being assembled in a hangar.

Nurse's aide admits killing at least 25

CINCINNATI (AP) — The number of suspected killings by Donald Harvey continues to rise even though he has pleaded guilty to poisoning or suffocating 24 people, and his lawyer says he doesn't know if the former Kentucky city. hospital worker will admit to more murders.

After his confession Tuesday and sentencing to three consecutive life terms under a plea bargain agreement, Harvey returned to court Friday and pleaded guilty to a 25th murder. That brought another life term, to be served concurrently with the others; he will be eligible for parole in 60 years.

Also Friday, a prosecutor in London, Ky., said he was asking authorities to investigate allegations that Harvey may have murdered eight people at a hospital in that southeastern Commonwealth's Attorney Tom Handy said that Harvey's lawyer, William Whalen, told him the deaths occurred while Harvey was employed at Marymount Hospital as an orderly from May 11, 1970, to March 31, 1971.

While Harvey claimed he killed his mostly elderly victims to end their suffering, Hamilton County Prosecutor Arthur Ney Jr. noted that Harvey also admitted to the non-fatal poisonings of healthy people, including his roommate

"He's no mercy killer, and he's not insane," Ney said in court. "He killed because he liked to kill.

Ney said Harvey had "a compulsion to kill like someone else might have a compulsion for malted milk or cold beer.

Whalen ended the week by saying he does not know if Harvey will admit to additional Marine spy Lonetree, right, is led away.

Lonetree sold country for woman's charms

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) - Sgt. Clayton Lonetree, the first Marine convicted of spying, could be sentenced to life in prison for passing secrets to the Soviets after falling in love with a Russian translator at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

The jury of eight Marine officers that convicted the former embassy guard of all 13 counts against him Friday is to decide on a sentence Monday.

"We shall appeal and we shall fight this to the end, and we hope, in the end, justice will prevail," said defense attorney William Kunstler.

The jury deliberated four hours before finding the 25year-old St. Paul, Minn., man guilty of charges he turned over to the KGB the identities of U.S. intelligence agents and floor plans of the U.S. embassies in Moscow and Vienna.

He was also convicted of lesser offenses of failing to report contacts with Soviets. The most serious allegations against him, that he escorted KGB agents through secure areas of the Moscow embassy, were dropped earlier.

Lonetree was silent and showed little emotion as he was led toward the van that returned him to the Quantico Marine Base brig Friday

"I put my arms around him and he was shaking, but he was like a Marine," Kunstler said. "He took it and he took it

The court-martial began July 22, with the prosecution calling 32 witnesses in seven days of testimony. The defense rested Friday without calling any witnesses.

Defense attorneys argued that Lonetree turned over nothing of value to the Soviets and was instead a scapegoat in a bungled investigation of spying in the Moscow embassy

He was portrayed by the defense as a none-too-bright young man fascinated with spy thrillers who thought he could take on the KGB singlehandedly as a do-it-yourself double agent.

The chief military prosecutor, Maj. David L. Beck, argued that Lonetree plainly betrayed his country and his Authorities said the investigation began Dec. 14 when Lonetree came forward to the CIA station chief in Vienna and said he had become involved with a Soviet agent, Aleksiy Yefimov, after falling in love with a Soviet translator, Violetta Sanni.

Sanni had introduced Yefimov to Lonetree as her Uncle Sasha, investigators said.

Mine-damaged tanker heads out under escort

By NABILA MEGALLI Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain - The mine-damaged supertanker Bridgeton and three other reflagged Kuwaiti tankers left Kuwait under U.S. warship escort Saturday and sailed down the dangerous northern Persian Gulf behind a wall of haze.

The U.S.-registered tankers departed hours after three other U.S.-escorted tankers docked safely in Kuwait. They were escorted by the same American warships, the destroyer Kidd and the frigates Hawes and Klakring.

In other developments: ■ Iraq said 40 of its warplanes bombed the key Iranian petrochemical complex at Bandar Khomeini in the neck of the gulf, and Iran said its jets raided Iraqi factories.

■ The Washington Post reported Saturday that

Saudi Arabia agreed to let carrier-based U.S. combat planes in the gulf land in Saudi territory for refueling and other logistical support. The 401,382-ton Bridgeton, which hit a mine July 24 as it passed an island base of Iranian Revolutionary Guards, would again be passing through the same dangerous shipping channel. The other tankers were the 81,283-ton Sea Isle City, the 79,999-ton Ocean City and the 46,723-ton Gas King, a liquefied gas carrier.

The Pentagon said the tankers left early Saturday without incident and that no unusual Iranian air or naval activity was reported nearby.

Shipping executives in the area said the convoy was expected to reach the waters off Saudi Arabia's Ras Tanura oil terminal before Sunday, ending a run through mine-infested waters.

Mines have plagued shipping in the area and in the waters off Fujairah and Khor Fakkan, outside the Strait of Hormuz, gateway to the gulf. The United States blames Iran for laying the mines.

Tehran first blamed Washington for planting the explosives, but Iran on Thursday acknowledged some mines were laid by Iran "to defend our coastlines." The Iranian navy now claims to have cleared all mines from the Gulf of Oman and Strait

It was not clear if the USS Guadalcanal and its eight Sea Stallion mine-sweeping helicopters were aiding the convoy, the fifth one-way transit of the gulf since the Reagan administration's escort operation began last month.

In all, 11 Kuwaiti tankers are to be given U.S flags to afford them U.S. protection. Both Iran and Iraq have attacked foreign ships in their 7-year-old war. Iran has targeted Kuwait, which it regards as an ally of Iraq.

The Democrats on the House Armed Services subcommittees on investigations and defense policy said Saturday the United States should go ahead with the program despite what they called a lack of

Black miners challenge apartheid's economic backbone

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — In their unprecedented strike against South Africa's major industry, black miners are challenging the economic basis of apartheid, demanding a greater share of the wealth they pro-

The walkout, called two weeks ago, is the biggest legal strike in South Africa's history. A bold move, made against a background of massive black unemployment in a depressed economy, it showed the growing power and confidence of black trade unions.

The unions' recent success in uniting and mobilizing black workers in the struggle for economic and political power is just what the white-led government feared in the years it prohibited independent black unions.

The unions were finally legalized in 1979, but were barred from political activity. They have ignored that prohibition despite warnings from the government that it would crack down on any opposition outside Parliament where the black majority of 25.6 million has no representation under South Africa's apartheid system of racial segregation.

"Everything is political in this country," Cyril Ramaphosa, general secretary of the National Union of Mineworkers, said at the outset of the strike, which he says involves 340,000 miners at 45 major gold and coal mines.

The mineworkers are part of a federation of black labor organizations that has adopted a political platform branding apartheid and capitalism as twin evils and calling for redistribution of the wealth controlled by 5 million

Some apartheid laws have softened, but black mineworkers still must live apart from their families; they have no pensions, and no hazard pay for the most dangerous jobs in the deepest, hottest and richest mines in the world.

Their demands to change these conditions and increase average pay by 30 percent are political issues in a country where blacks were regarded for decades as merely a transient work force without rights.

Bobby Godsell, industrial relations manager for the biggest gold producer, Anglo American Corp., said the wage increases of 15 to 23.4 percent the company imposed last month are fair.

This argument is rejected by union officials who know that the profits of the South African-owned mining giant increased 409 percent in the past eight years, while miners' pay rose just 85 percent over a decade

The company reported earning a $501 million profit in the latest fiscal year and paying its black miners an average $9.50 a day.

The union is at a disadvantage in a long strike, since almost 6 million unemployed blacks in South Africa and millions more in neighboring states are eager for work. The mining companies, meanwhile, continue to mill stored gold when production is idle.

Even so, independent analysts say the companies are losing potential revenues of almost $8.5 million a day.

The mine owners last week got tougher, firing 9,000 miners and threatening 41,000 others with dismissal or disciplinary action. Such tactics could be the spark that brings in other unions, in sympathy strikes that politicize the mineworkers' action, giving it a theme beyond wages and benefits.

Korean riot police fire gas in Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Riot police fought shipyard workers storming a hotel in search of company bosses Saturday, and a worker hit by fragments from a tear gas canister became the first fatality in a month of national Striking ground workers at Seoul's airport delayed flights for up to an hour, and striking bus drivers in the capital disrupted rush hour traffic.

Lee Suk-kyu, 22, was among 500 striking workers from Daewoo Shipbuilding and Machinery Ltd. who formed an advance group and marched on the hotel near the shipyard in Koje, said the Hankook Ilbo, a leading national

The demonstration in the southern coastal city began after talks aimed at ending the strike against the big shipyard broke Followed by 2,500 workers, the advance group battled 1,300 riot police who fired tear gas and closed in from three sides, the paper said. The workers countered by throwing rocks. Lee and 20 other workers were tear gas canister fragments penetrated his lung, Dr. Lee Dooyoung was quoted as saying.

Workers armed with rocks and steel pipes set fire to two cars and smashed hundreds of windows of company apartments and dormireports said. About 100 workers bypassed the police lines and ransacked the Okpo Tourist Hotel room by room in an unsuccessful effort to find their company president and other managers, the reports said.

A 50-year-old Japanese man broke his back in a jump from his third-floor hotel room during the melee, the reports said.

The strikes were the latest in a wave of labor unrest that has swept South Korea since President Chun Doo-hwan agreed last month to democratic reforms, including greater labor freedom. The Labor Ministry said protests were under way Saturday at 553 workplaces around the country. Daewoo shipbuilding, South Korea's No.2 shipyard, has been paralyzed since workers walked off their jobs last week, demanding pay raises and improved working conditions.

The company said Friday said it had to shut down the shipyard indefinitely because the workers refused a labor-management agreement reached in a series of talks. Another round of talks on Saturday also broke down.

Three Pampa families are known to teach their children at home, although Pampa school Superintendent Harry Griffith says the number could be twice or three times that high because there is no way to document home-school cases

In the Winter home at 1536 Coffee St., class has already begun. Gail, who taught in a Kansas high school for a year before getting married, began teaching Samarah this summer using home school materials published by Pat Robertson's CBN University in Virginia. She says being 100 percent responsible for her daughter's education has changed her attitude toward motherhood.

'It makes you a lot more responsible," she says. "You think, 'Do I really want them to learn this characteristic.

'Whether you know it or not, you're a teacher all day long, 24 hours a day, by example.'

The Winters decided to begin home schooling when, during Samarah's kindergarten year. they realized the school system couldn't provide the individual attention or teach the Christian values they wanted for their daughter, and, ultimately, her two little brothers, Adair, 3, and Taggart, 18 months.

'I certainly didn't have any problem with the school or anything like that, but I just realized that she didn't get that much individual attention," Gail says. "I wanted Raymond and I to be the most important thing in Samarah's life.

Gail says she feared her daughter would be brainwashed by negative peer pressure and 'secular humanism.

She says she first thought of trying to set up a school at Spirit of Truth Church, where the Winters worship. But because that couldn't be done immediately, Gail says, she decided to start teaching Samarah at home.

Gail says she still would like to see the church set up a school someday

"That's probably the most ideal situation anyway," she

of putting Samarah in an existing private school because "no school I know of would have the values we want, except the Wheeler Christian Academy, and Wheeler's too far," Gail says.

Even at a private school, "you're still putting your kids in somebody else's hands for seven hours a day," Raymond adds.

Gail admits that, in an era of single-parent and two-income homes, home schooling may not be for everyone, "but I think it could be done more than most people would like to admit.

She says she can't understand parents who act like they can't wait for the summer to end so they can send their children back

'They kind of give the implication that their kids are kind of a bother," she says. "I don't consider my kids a bother. I consider them a gift from God, that he has given me the responsibility for.'

They became the reason that Larry spent almost every waking hour poring over the Bible, studying what it had to say about parent-child relationships.

They sent Deborah scurrying to law books, periodicals - anything she could get her hands on that would support what Dr. Geisler had said.

The Hendricks found they weren't alone in their worries about the public school system.

"I just discovered this whole movement out there," Deborah said.

When Kelly finished eighth grade, the Hendricks decided to join that movement, which has attracted the parents of more than 10,000 Texas schoolchildren, according to state District Judge Charles Murray of Fort Worth, who ruled in April that Texas parents can legally teach their children

Nationwide, a recent Department of Education study suggests, as many as 500,000 youngsters, not counting handicapped and migrant children, may be schooled at home

Larry and Deborah fired off letters to Pampa school authorities, informing them that Kelly would not be attending Pampa High School that fall. Instead, he would be taught at home.

Almost all parents complain about the school system at some time or another. Few take such drastic steps as the Hendrick family did three

But now, as they prepare for what would have been Kelly's senior year at Pampa High, the Hendricks believe they made the right choice.

Home schooling has provided Kelly with enormous freedom in his studies, Deborah explained. He frequently explores subjects such as politics, religion, economics — "the types of things that, because of the numbers, cannot be handled in the public school," she said.

Kelly also has been allowed to engage in intense study of subjects that interest him - and spend extra time mastering areas that give him problems, she added.

But, most important to the Hendricks' way of thinking, home schooling has returned control of their family to them.

"If you're a parent with children in the public schools, your whole life revolves around (the school district)," Deborah said. "When they say you can take a vacation, you have a vacation. 'We were no longer controlling our family. Someone else was.'

The Hendricks have stressed repeatedly — both in interviews and in a letter to former Superintendent James Trusty — that their problem is not with the Pampa school district, but with what they call a 'socialist public education bureaucracy," that, for some reason, the American public has grown to accept "like death and taxes.

"Sometimes I get the feeling that our children are being sacrificed on the altar of public education." Deborah said. "They keep asking for more money so they can build bigger altars.

Student records are kept confidential by law, but

— Deborah Hendrick

Deborah said Kelly had few discipline problems in school and generally got high grades. She said he had teachers he liked and teachers he disliked, just like any normal student.

The Hendricks said they never feared prosecution by authorities under Texas truancy laws, despite the arrests of a nearby home-school family in Phillips in 1985 and school district action against four Clarendon families in 1983.

Now that Kelly is 17, he is no longer covered under the compulsory-education laws.

But Deborah said the family "exercised prudence" so as not to draw added attention to their situation. For example, she said, she wouldn't take Kelly shopping during school hours

Said Larry Hendrick: "We weren't hiding in the cellar, but at the same time, we weren't flaunting it The law notwithstanding, Larry said he felt a higher calling after he began studying the Bible intently.

"The scripture is your umbrella for everything that you do," he said. He said he was particularly led by New Testament exhortations for fathers to teach their children, and by King Solomon's instruction of his son in the Old Testament. "Solomon didn't pack him up and ship him off to Egypt. He taught him at home," Larry noted.

Ironically, a U.S. Supreme Court decision that conservative Christians usually protest, played a part in the Hendricks' decision to educate Kelly at

It was a "bitter pill to swallow," Larry said, but the same 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion is essentially a right to privacy ruling that guarantees personal freedom in matters regarding the upbringing of children

'It just seemed incredible that you could choose to abort them after you were pregnant, but once you have them, they belong to the state and not yourself," Deborah said.

The Hendricks won't dwell on whether home schooling is right for other families, saying only, "The scriptures are there for everybody." The Bible has something to say about the problems of single-parent homes and working mothers, Larry said.

"The biggest problem is commitment," Deborah said. "You're not going to have time to do it if you don't make time to do it.

'We trust that, for all believers, God is in control of their lives," she added. "For non-believers, they're just on their own.'

LETTER TO SCHOOL OFFICIALS

On May 8, 1984, Larry and Deborah Hendrick wrote a five-page letter to Pampa school officials, announcing their plans to remove their son. Kelly, from the school system. Following are excerpts from that letter

"We wish to inform you ... that our son presently an eighth-grader at Pampa Middle School, will not attend Pampa High School as a freshman in the fall. We will provide for the education of our son

"Our reasons for educating Kelly at home are personal and based on Biblical principles, which we as Christians believe in fully. As concerned parents, we want our son to have the best education possible, and we know that it is our responsibility to provide it.

"Accordingly, we have thoroughly researched all aspects of home education programs. Since last November we have contacted 14 private schools, 15 correspondence schools and two publishers, seeking the appropriate teaching materials. Kelly will be enrolled in Summit Christian Academy in Dallas, and use the LIFEPAC Basic Curriculum from Alpha Omega Publications headquarted in Tempe, Ariz.

"During this time span, we have very carefully studied the Texas Education Code, Texas Family Code and the federal statutes; and we have consulted lawyers and home educators from across the nation. Our rights to teach our son are protected and have been repeatedly upheld by law. And, in compliance with the only requirements of a private school for purposes of compulsory attendance laws in Texas, Kelly's course of study ... will include a study of good citizenship and will be taught in English .

"We will provide highly detailed materials in the areas where Kelly is eager to concentrate his studies: Computers, science and mathematics. In this one-on-one learning situation, Kelly will learn at his own pace, retain more knowledge and have the advantage of exploring new horizons that the school system simply cannot

"According to our faith, we accept the Bible as inspired by God and infallible. As the word of God, it is the supreme authority in our lives. The Bible clearly ordains the home as the institution responsible for education ... and by accepting this responsibility, we are to teach our son to regard all of life from God's perspective rather than a worldly point of view

"It is simply not possible to 'train up a child in the way he should go,' and at the same time give him a humanistic, secularized governme tal education ...

ucation as it is presently co in the public schools, conflicts with our sincere and deeply held spiritual convictions and our personal rights - which are fundamentally protected under the ... U.S. Constitution .

'While the state of Texas and the United States may have a legitimate and substantial interest in mass education, that interest may not be enforced by broad means, such as the indiscriminate prosecution of valid alternative educational forms, when those forms effectively further the same interests, especially when such enforcement would broadly stifle fundamental personal liberties...

Rangers' tradition continues

'V-Ball' turns to 'DOA-Ball'

An AP Sports Analysis By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) -The annual August aneurism is a Texas Rangers' tradition.

Some teams have traditions like raising division-winning flags on the centerfield flag pole. The best tradition the Texas Rangers own is going belly-up in August like an oxygen-deprived Bobby Valentine's "V-Ball" is now "DOA-Ball."

In year 15 of their existence, the Rangers have again rewarded their fans (they have averaged 24,139 and should draw well over 1.5 million for the year) with an attack of the August sags. Another year, no championship cigar. Not even die-hard Ranger holdouts would profess a chance to catch the Minnesota Twins after the recent collpase of the Texas bullpen.

How about the five-game span where the bullpen not only failed on four save opportunities but served up 23 hits and 20 runs over 10 innings, good for an atrocious 17.42 earned run average?

When feisty Dale Mohorcic was disabled by internal bleeding, it was taps time for the 1987 Rangers. He was the only stopper the Rangers had with a 6-3 record, 15 saves and a 2.83 ERA Example: Paul Kilgus leaves with a 5-1 lead after six innings. The Rangers lose 7-6 to Kansas General manager Tom Grieve says the Rangers are still committed to their youth movement although the growing pains can "Well, our young guys are geting," Grieve says. "We still believe at some point in time it will pay dividends.' But so far, it's meant a team ting some great on-the-job train-that has blown leads 32 times, has lost the opening game in 11 of the last 12 series, and has a starting pitching staff with an ERA of almost five runs per game.

The dog days of August have never been good to the Rangers except last year.

"We were 17-12 in August last year." Grieve says. "I thought we had killed off that jinx."

He begs the Rangers' fans to hold off their boos for one more

Grieve says the youngsters the Rangers are fielding "are not average players. These are guys with great talent. The day will come when these guys will come into their own and that's when we'll be in the battle to the end."

The Rangers' severely hurt their 1987 chances with a dreadful 1-10 start.

"That really hurt, but I thought we had battled back," Grieve says. "We've had a few injuries but you can't blame everything on that."

His biggest disappointment of 1987, he says, was the defense. "I expected it to be more solid. We're leading the league in errors and that's not good."

The biggest surprise?

"Starting the season with nine losses," Grieve says. "And Jerry Browne has just been great at second base. He has been a nice surprise to a lot of people. Of course, Ruben Sierra has just been amazing. He's had a great

They used to call the Dallas Cowboys "Next Year's Champions" until they finally won a Super Bowl.

Now it looks like the Rangers may have inherited the slur.

By the time the Pampa High coaching staff finished watching the movie, their eyes were blurry and the popcorn was stale. Actually, the "movie" the coaches were watching was a videotape of the Harvesters' scrimmage with Boys Ranch Thursday night. Head Coach Dennis Cavalier and his staff spent countless hours viewing the film and nothing changed. There were the same fumbles, the same missed blocking assignments, the same backfield mixups. But Cavalier wasn't all that surprised.

'We looked at the film over and over again and what I saw was where I expected the program to be at this time," Cavalier said. "We're just in the infancy stages of developing a top-hotch

'The players are trying hard and they were up for the scrimmage," Cavalier said. "We're just very, very weak right not, but I feel like we can overcome these weaknesses with a lot of hard work

Pampa did beat Boys Ranch in the controlled scrimmage (two touchdowns to zero) and eleven Harvesters were held out of the lineup because of various ailments But Cavalier felt the Harvesters should have been more dominating against the smaller Class 3A school.

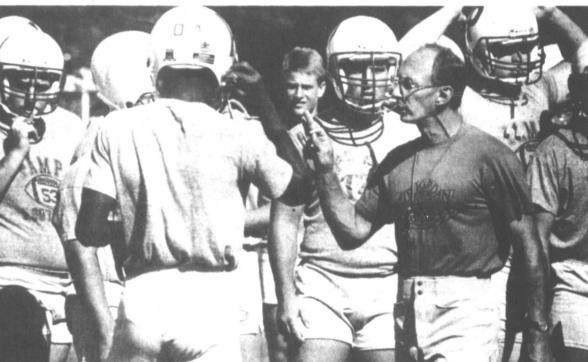

"Boys Ranch does have some good athletes, but they've never done very well in their own district," said Cavalier.

One gets the idea that Cavalier doesn't plan any letup for the Harvesters going into the third week of practice. Three-a-days will continue.

'I love these players very much and I know they probably don't believe that the way I'm constantly on their backs," Cavalier said. "I just want them to be successful and I'm not going to leave any stones unturned to accomplish that task."

Pampa has one more scrimmage before the season opener Sept. 11 against Amarillo High. The Harvesters scrimmage Amarillo Tascosa Friday night in Harvester Stadium. The scrimmage starts at 5 p.m. with the junior varsity, followed by the varsity at 7 p.m.

"Right now, we're just not ready for the caliber of play in District 1-4A," Cavalier said. "We're not a very good team right now, but the future is going

Greed main motive for football playoff proposal

AS THE NEW SCHOOL year is about to start, it's time to check in on where some of the former Pampa and area folks are working this year.

Former PHS coaches: Danny Palmer, head basketball and assistant football at Aledo; Gary Abercrombie, head basketball at Granbury; Norm Phillips, returns for umpteenth season at El Paso Irving; Lou Allred at Ingram.

Male athletes: Buddy Sharp head football at Cisco; Jim Arthur assistant football at Brazoswood High. Female athletes: Sharon Moultrie, South Grand Prairie coaching girls track and cross country; Kellye Richardson, Canyon school system volleyball and basketball Kristin Douglass Grice, tennis coach at Abilene HS.

Band directors: Harris Brinson at Angelo State: Fred Stockdale at Azle, where he also directs cheer leaders; Jeff Doughton at Andrews; Bill Duggan at Sugarland. Others: Former White Deer coach Eddie Richardson assistant football and head track at Odessa HS; White Deer star Jeff Beardon coaching boys and girls basketball at Breckenridge; former Lefors coach Dunny Goode, brother-in-law of Gray County commissioner Jim Greene, at Farmington, N.M.; ace golfer Penny Hughes, golf coach at Snyder; former New Mexico State head coach Jim Woods returns for another season at Quanah HS; and former White Deer-WTSU outstanding athlete Don Denham has strong interests in White Deer where son-in-law Kent Hargis is an assistant, and at Tascosa, where son Randy is a grid assistant.

Busiest coaches: Dave Johnson at Kelton, where he coaches all sports while serving as athletic director and activities director; Dave La Garza at Waelder and Cherry Elldredge at Goree, where they coach all sports.

ANOTHER COUP FOR Indianapolis which has gotten the Track and Field Hall of Fame to move from Charleston, W.Va. to the aggressive Indiana city. Al Cartwright, director of the Association of Sports Museums and Halls of Fame, reports there are approximately 75 halls of fame worldwide. The most notable, of course, are the Baseball HoF at Cooperstown, N.Y., and the Football HoF at Canton, O. There are halls of fame in Singapore and Switzerland, Amarillo and Prince Edward Island in Canada.

ABSTINENCE AND GREED, two words that are virtual opposites in today's world; two words that are both the cause and the solution to many of the world's problems; two words that are not recognized in the lexicon of the education industry "Where is the next money going to come from?" (to finance collegiate athletics) asks Georgia Tech AD Homer Rice. Then he answers his own question: "It'll have to be a football playoff system tied to TV revenue." And this past Thursday, that was the recommendation of a special NCAA sub-committee. The plan as proposed, would be a single-game playoff between two college teams chosen by another specially formed committee with the net result expected to be a $40 million bonanza for the NCAA and it's schools.

And that will be the only benefit - greed-sought dollars. There is no way humanly possible to handpick two teams and prove the victor is the No. 1 collegiate football team in the nation. But the cost of getting such a jackpot is inexpensive. The slave labor, the athletes, are already paid for with their scholarships. College leaders believe that TV is salivating for such a game to be played on the open weekend between the NFL's league championships and the Super Bowl. The problems inherent with such a plan, the selfavowed greed it exudes, the total inconsideration for athletes and staff makes one wonder why it would even be considered. But then, the athletic director of a major university already in deep trouble with the NCAA, chairs the committee which dreamed it up and recommended it be placed before the NCAA membership in the January convention.

The proposal definitely defines GREED; now, educators, look up the word ABSTINENCE.

I DIDN'T KNOW THAT Dept.: What do Baseball Hall of Famers Christy Mathewson, Rube Waddell. Connie Mack and Pampa's Randy Clay, Harold Lewis, and Buddy Cockrell have in common?

All played professional football. Well, Mr. Mack didn't exactly play, but he did manage a professional football team also called the Philadelphia Athletics, in the autumn of 1902. Waddell had just won 25 games for Mack's baseball team that summer and with it the American League pennant. The World Series started the next year.

Mathewson, a 22-year old phenom, was just reaching his pitching prime, but had played fullback at Bucknell. He did that duty for Pittsburgh's Stars in the three-team league that was called the National Football League, 18 years before the NFL we know today was organized. The third team was formed by the National League baseball team, the Phil-

Mack's team won the oneseason league championship with a 10-2-2 record. The Dallas Cowboys should do as well!

THE JUNIOR HIGH football coach called his players over to him in a huddle at midfield. "Let me explain some of the basic principles of sportsmanship," he said. "We don't believe in temper tantrums. We don't believe in screaming at the officials. We don't believe in throwing things on the field. Do you understand that?"

"Yes, sir!" answered the boys in unison.

'Well, then," sighed the coach, 'do you think you could explain it to your parents jumping around over there in the stands?"

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)-There's something about Arlington Stadium that brings out the best in Bill Long.

The Chicago White Sox are 2-9 at Arlington in their last 11 appearances and Long has both victories

He scattered eight hits and struck out a career-high nine batters Friday night in Chicago's 5-1 victory over the Rangers.

Long, noted as a control pitcher, showed the Rangers he also has a strikeout pitch.

He threw 141 pitches in the 95degree heat and 91 of them were Long, now 7-6 for the year, only walked one batter. He has pitched 132 2-3rds innings this year and yielded only 24 walks. "I had good control with my breaking pitch," Long said. "It was my out pitch.' Long said "I struggled a little in the first inning but after I struck out three hitters in the second inning I felt like I had it going pretty good. Chicago erupted for four runs in the sixth inning highlighted by Greg Walker's two-run double to put the Rangers away. Ken Williams also knocked in two runs with two singles for the White Sox 'Long did a good job for Chicago,'' said Rangers' Manager Bobby Valentine. ''We had him on the ropes several times but couldn't get him down. Give him credit. He did the job. We just didn't swing the bats. You can't win with just one run.

Paul Kilgus took his fifth loss in seven decisions.

"Paul pitched pretty well on three days' rest," Valentine said. Long, who beat Texas in a 15-5 game on June 2 in Arlington, was touched for a first inning run on a single, a ground out, and Pete O'Brien's single.

Pete Incaviglia tripled with two outs in the ninth inning but Long forced Oddibe McDowell to pop to first to end the game.

'Bill had it going good," said Chicago Manager Jim Fregosi."He had great control with his pitches. He's got a slow easy motion and wshen he follows through right his fastball jumps on the CHICAGO (AP) — Andre Dawson is having one of the most productive home run campaigns in Chicago Cubs history and Lee Smith has set a National League record for successive 30-save seasons.

But something is wrong. The Chicago Cubs are still in fifth place in the National League

Dawson hit two home runs to give him 40 and the major league lead Friday and Smith notched his 30th save in leading the Cubs to a 7-5 victory over the Houston Astros

Smith became the first National League pitcher to have four successive 30-save seasons, equalling the American League record set by Kansas City's Dan Quisenberry.

All of which doesn't satisfy Smith. "Despite Dawson's 40 home runs and my 30 saves, we're still a fifth place club," said Smith. "I would take 18 saves or even 12 if we were where the (St. Louis) Cardinals are in first place.

"The chief reason is our pitching has lacked consistency," Smith said. Dawson, the free-agent bargain who signed with the Cubs for $500,000 plus bonuses last spring so that he could play day ball and on a grass field, hasn't given up yet. "I never gave 40 home runs a thought," said Dawson. "I'm just trying to bear down and finish as strong as I can. This team can still open some eyes and be a contender if we can put together a 9-or 10-game winning Dawson, who has hit four home runs in two times with 47 his highest, Billy Williams hit 42 in 1970 and Hank Sauer hit 41 in 1954. But the club and National League record of 56 was set by Hack Wilson in 1930. "I feel the statistics will even themselves out," said Dawson, whose previous high was 32 with Montreal in 1983 and who has an excellent chance of reaching 50.

Dawson's first homer Friday, a two-run shot, came off starter Jim Deshaies, 10-5, and capped a four-run third. He led off the fifth with his 40th off reliever Jeff Heathcock.

"I thought it was just a fly ball that would be caught," said Deshaies. "Sometimes it's just not your day."

There was no doubt about the second one which went over the left-field wall. It was the seventh time this season and the 25th in his career that Dawson had hit two or more home

Ernie Banks hit 40 or more in a season five Suffering fan lists all-time Rangers' team

I received an open invitation, of sorts, after having read Putt Powell's Amarillo Globe-News column of this past Thursday.

Putt listed his all-time St. Louis Cardinal team, and followed it with The Pampa News' Warren Hasse's all-time Chicago Cubs team. Then, he invited readers to send in their favorite all-time teams

Growing up in the Dallas-Ft. Worth metroplex, I became a true-blue Texas Ranger fan. I have suffered along with them year after year. It is not easy naming an all-first catcher, and the only other one that did a credible job.

Starting Pitchers — Gaylord Perry, Charlie Hough, Ferguson Jenkins, Frank Tanana and Jim Bibby (all but one — Hough — had their better years pitching for other teams).

Readers favor football, Cowboys, local coverage Survey also finds lack of support, politics as Harvester downfall

Football is the most watched sport in the area, the Cowboys are locally the clear-cut favorite professional team and, by a 3-to-1 margin, readers feel The Pampa News sports coverage ranks anywhere from good to excellent.

Those are some of the "unscientific" findings of The Pampa News Sports Survey, a questionnaire readers were recently presented in our sports sec-

Questions included readers' opinions of The News' sports coverage to favorite sports and teams, to the reason the Harvesters have not fielded a successful football team in recent memory

Again, while 66 percent of the answers to the first question - "What is your opinion of coverage of Pampa and area sports?" — were positive, there were some who felt we could do a better job.

"It seems to be extremely lopsided," wrote one reader. "All we ever see is news on boys sports or out-of-town sports. Nothing on girls or very little."

"Poor!" wrote another respondent. "I feel the sports section should be full of large, detailed articles about the Harvesters.'

Wrote another reader: "Pampa sports news is as good as you could find for such a small town. In my opinion, it ranks ahead of Amarillo's paper."

While the survey was far from scientific, readers also voted by a 3-1 margin in favor of the job The News' writers and columnists are doing. Some of the sample comments include:

"Very good. The best since I first moved to Pampa in 1940."

'What can you say about Warren Hasse? He has been one of the area's best broadcasters and writers for years.

"Drop Warren Hasse! Put someone in that's upbeat and positive - not that's in the past."

"Warren Hasse is the best."

"Hasse is a discredit to our area." "Very good generally. I get tired of reading columns by (The Associated Press' Denne) Freeman get others for the SWC."

By far, the most responded to question dealt with the lack of success by the Harvester football

Survey participants widely agreed that the reason for this lack of success deals with too much politics and parental influence on the coaches, not enough player discipline and lack of fan support.

Some sample responses: "Politics and favoritism of players. Not enough support from students."

'They will have to play the best boys instead of the rich kids and the favorites. But, I don't think they will stop a trend that's been a practice around here for 20-25 years."

"Too much parent interference and politics." "Poor coaching, poor organization of program and a lack of a firm punishment system.

"Pampering the players too much." "Lack of condition and discipline of today's

1987 K mart Corporation

"Lack of pride in Pampa residents and a lack of winning attitude in everyone.'

"Lack of leadership and example ... but that is

"Pampa fans have never supported a losing team."

"Not enough team spirit and not enough support from the town.

"Friction between football and basketball. Not enough sincere fanatic backing by us citizens." "Too much emphasis on basketball by coaches

Respondents also gave an overwhelming vote of confidence to first-year coach Dennis Cavalier, saying by a 10-1 margin that, yes, he would be able to turn the Harvester football program around. Most agreed, though, that it would take Cavalier from 2-5 years to do so. The only two negative comments concerning the new coach were that it would take him, "'til hell freezes over," to turn the program around and that his chances of improving the program were no better than the others, "unless the negativism in the community disappears."

By a wide margin concerning readers' favorite sports, football was at the summit.

For each first place vote, a sport received 10 points, for each second-place, nine points, and so on. The findings:

1. Football (198); 2. Basketball (152); 3. Baseball (131); 4. Golf (113); 5. Track (109); 6. Tennis (79); 7. Soccer (67); 8. Volleyball (61); 9. Hockey (53).

Other sports receiving votes included bowling, swimming, running, weightlifting, cycling, horse racing, boxing, Olympic sports and wrestling.

The poll also showed:

Most people think the Arkansas Razorbacks will go to the Cotton Bowl. Texas A&M ranked second. ■ The New York Giants and Los Angeles Raiders or the Chicago Bears and Seattle Seahawks will go to the Super Bowl.

In the World Series, most people are leaning toward the Toronto Blue Jays, New York Yankees, New York Mets or St. Louis Cardinals.

Atop the list of favorite professional teams were the Cowboys, followed by Houston's Astros and Oilers, Los Angeles Raiders and New York Mets. Only two people listed the Texas Rangers as one of their favorite teams.

The majority of respondents were noncommittal in regard to the question concerning minorities in front office positions in pro sports. Most people agreed that if the applicant is qualified, regardless of color, he or she should occupy a front office position.

Those who responded to the survey ranged in age from 9-to-72.

Males outnumbered females by à 4-to-1 margin.

Matthew Harp, son of Duane and Anita Harp of Pampa, seems to have found plenty of school supplies. He will enter second grade when school starts Sept. 1.

Bettie Dacus, library coordinator for Pampa elementary schools, prepares the Baker Elementary School library for the 1987-88 year.

A city worker positions the stencils used to paint Pampa's school crossing zones, including this one on Duncan Street in front of Stephen F. Austin Elementary School.

By MARILYN POWERS Lifestyles Editor

Summer freedom is drawing to a close for Pampa school-age children, with Sept. 1, the first day of school, only nine days

Enrollment for students attending Pampa schools for the first time will continue through Aug. 27, including registration at the high school and middle school. High school students who are pre-registered and were in attendance at the end of the last school term do not need to register again.

Class schedules have been mailed to high school students, according to JoAnn Jones, juniorsenior counselor of Pampa High

This year's slogan for the school district is "Every person makes a difference. "We want to include the whole community students, teachers, administration," said Jane Steele, assistant superintendent for instruction curriculum.

"This is going to be a good year. Morale is higher than it's ever been," said Lynda Queen, director of communications and public information.

Two new programs in the school district involve computers and troubleshooting.

A new twist to the Chapter I remedial reading program will be take-home computers. The plan will be tested at Woodrow Wilson Elementary School this year, Steele said. Students can take home the computers for themselves and for their parents to "Abilene is the closest school system to us to do this," Queen said. The computers will be on display at Chautauqua festivities on Labor Day.

At Risk is a new intervention program that will be coordinated by Sally Griffith. The program's primary purpose is to help iden-tify students who are at risk of dropping out of school before high school graduation.

The theory behind At Risk is that dropouts are not made at the secondary level. Students from kindergarten age through high school are vulnerable to influences that may make them drop out of school as soon as they are legally able to, Steele said.

"Creating a successful environment for them and identifying certain factors that may create failure will help us identify these kids and help them. Indications may include drug and alcohol abuse, below-grade-level test results, or any indication that the child feels unsuccessful," she

Griffith, the program's director, has master's degrees in social work and business administration, plus 14 years' experience in social work.

The school year promises to be a successful one for the Pampa district, Steele said.

"It is incredible the number of teachers we have involved in inservice this year and have taken their time to be involved in programs. We think it's going to be the best year we've had," she said.

Last year, 4,200 students were enrolled in Pampa public schools. Programs provided for special-needs groups include Head Start, a federal program for underprivileged children; the pre-kindergarten program; a locally-funded program for children qualifying for free or reduced-price lunches; and special education for students with a variety of handicaps.

Fourteen percent, or 550, Pampa students were enrolled in spe-cial education classes in 1986-87, according to Jerry Pope, special education director. Special education classes are held at each school, and qualifying children age 3 or older may be enrolled.

Children who are blind or deaf or both may enroll at an earlier age through the Early Childhood Intervention Program of Region XVI Education Service Center in Amarillo, which administers the ECI program. Assistance is also provided to students who are homebound.

For more information on special education, contact Pope at 665-2376, or call the principal of the school district in which the child lives.

Returning students do not need these papers, she said, since the school maintains records of immuniza-

Transfer students may not need to provide birth certificates or immunization records, since this information may be found on the students' transcripts from their previous schools, Steele said. In the U.S., an estimated $1 billion is saved annually in would-be medical costs because of immunizations.

Some preventable diseases persist, mainly because parents often do not take them seriously enough to ensure that their children's immunizations are up-to-date. In 1986, TDH recorded sporadic outbreaks of measles (398 cases), mumps (239), pertussis (112), rubella (78) and tetanus (12) in the state. Victims included unimmunized children as well as adults who had allowed their own immuniizations to lapse. However, only six cases of diphtheria and four cases of polio, one of them fatal, were reported in the state in the past

Husband, wife disagree on comfortable, tattered clothes

DEAR ABBY: In your column in the Niles Daily Times, you said, "No one has the right to dispose of another person's property." That is what my husband and I have been discussing in reference to his work

I think I should dispose of his clothing when it's tattered and torn. and my husband feels that I have no right to do this. Let me go further and explain that he never throws anything away - he will wear trousers that require a safety pin to keep the fly together, and shirts with holes in them. I should add that he dresses this way only around the house and yard; when he goes anywhere, he looks nice and

I don't think he should look like a slob whle working around the house and yard. (Sometimes our friends casually stop by.) He contends that he's "comfortable," and should be able to wear whatever he wants to wear — and dispose of it when he wants to. I told him that if Abby agrees with him, I will never toss out a thing of his again. MRS F. IN NILES, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: I think I have good reason to wonder who my real father is. I am now 17, and was named after my father's best friend. I look enough like him to be his son, which I think I am.

My parents and this man and his wife have been close friends for years, and I have put two and two together and think there must have been some wife swapping years ago.

Should I come right out and ask? If so, whom should I ask? My parents, or possibly the man I think is my "real" father?

DEAR WHO: The person to ask is your mother. If you closely resemble this family friend for whom you were named, it must be apparent to others, so this question will not come as a surprise to anyone.

DEAR READERS: I don't know whether round robin letters qualify as "correspondence" in the "Guinness Book of World Records," but according to assistant editor Cyd Smith, the longest sustained correspondence on record to date is one of 75 years - from Nov. 11, 1904, between Mrs. Ida McDougall of Tasmania-Australia, and Miss R. Norton of Sevenoaks, Kent, England, until Mrs. McDougall's death on Dec. 24, 1979.

Another fascinating entry in the "Guinness Book of World Records": The shortest literary correspondence on record was between Victor Marie Hugo and his publisher, Hurst and Blackett, in 1862: The author, who was on holiday and eager to know how his new novel "Les Miserables" was selling, sent the following message to his publisher: "?

BRIDEGROOMS GIVING GIFTS

GIFTS
Just as the bride gives gifts to her bridesmaids as tokens of gratitude and remembrance, so too should the bridegroom choose gifts for his friends and relatives in the wedding party. No need to fall back on the tried-and-true tieclips or pen sets; here are some gifts that show he cares.

Two relatively simple gifts that can show a personal touch are books and cologue. In either case, the groom can choose a title or scent appropriate for the individual.

Sports-related gifts can also be a hit with the guys—anything from sports clothing to gym bags to baseball mitts might be some-thing his friends could use.

It would also be fun for all concerned if the groom gave each usher, and the best man, a ticket to a sporting event they could attend together (in this case, it's okay for him to give himself a gift as well).

OUR BRIDAL REGISTRY Sheri Jones Sandra Dee Stout Amanda J. Holt

We know exactly what they want in a wedding or shower gift. We up-date their list as gifts are purchased.

Fresh, juicy tomatoes are abundant now in Gray County. Many of you have been calling for information on how to can the tomatoes, as well as any other ways to preserve them.

One of the most popular ways to preserve tomatoes is by canning in glass jars. In canning, you stop the action of yeasts, molds, bacteria and enzymes, which cause food spoilage, by processing food with heat and protecting it with an airtight seal.

The boiling water bath method is recommended for canning fruits, fruit juices, tomatoes, tomato juice, rhubarb and pickled vegetables. It is not recommended for any other vegetable.

Water bath canners may be purchased; however, any big, clean kettle with a rack and tightfitting lid will do if it is deep enough to hold the jars upright ter immediately. Remove core and permit the water to boil gently 1 or 2 inches over the top of Use only standard-make jars imprinted with the manufacturer's name. Check tops of jars for cracks, chips and dents, discarding those with defects that would prevent an airtight seal.

A two-piece, self-seal lid may be used. It has a metal disk and a metal ring and is self-sealing as the jar cools after processing. The metal disk can be used only once, but the ring may be used more than one time.

Use only fresh, firm, ripe tomatoes. Wash all tomatoes thoroughly before canning. Wash all jars in hot, soapy water and rinse well before canning. It is not necessary to sterilize jars when from sticking. Pack boiling-hot tomatoes to 1/2 inch of top of jar. Add 1/2 teaspoon canning or pickling salt and 1 tablespoon bottled lemon juice to pints; 1 teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon bottled lemon juice to quarts. Wipe off sealing surface of the jar. Adjust jar lids. Place the closed jars of food in the water bath canner. Add additional boiling water to the water bath canner to cover the containers 1 to 2 inches. Place the lid on the water bath canner.

Count the processing time as soon as the water comes to a boil. Process pints and quarts 41 minutes. At the end of the processing time, remove the containers from the water bath. Place the jars right side up on a rack far enough apart to cool quickly.

Homemakers' News

After testing seals of jars and cans, store in a clean, cool, dark, dry place. Canned food kept in a warm, damp place may change in color and flavor. It is wise to use all home-canned food within a

Answers to garden questions

By JOE VanZANDT County Extension Agent

The Farmers Market continues to have very ample supplies of a lot of different kinds of vegetables grown in our area. It has started opening at 7 a.m. now on Wednesdays and Saturdays at M.K. Brown Auditorium parking lot, and remains open until sellout.

be fertilized? It is necessary to fertilize the garden before planting tomatoes. Apply the fertilizer again when fruit first sets. From that point on, an additional fertilization (sidedress) every week to 10 days is recommended. Plants grown on sandy soils should be fertilized more frequently than those grown on heavy, clay soils. A general sidedress fertilizer recommendation is 1 to 2 tablespoons of a complete fertilizer scattered around the plant and worked into the soil. If using a fertilizer high in nitrogen such as ammonium sulfate, reduce the rate to 1 tablespoon per plant.

feeding on the pods. Certain sucking insects, such as stinkbugs and leaf-footed bugs, inject chemicals into the pods, causing the pods to stop or slow down growth in that area. The other side is growing normally, which results in a curved or bent pod.

The pods can still be eaten. No control is necessary unless the bugs are still feeding on the plants. Use Sevin® for control. Use as directed on the label.

I have ants all over my okra. Do they hurt the plants?

Ants do not hurt your okra plants. Ants visit okra plants to get honeydew produced by sharpshooters, aphids or other sucking insects. Get rid of the sucking insects and the ants will leave.

Why do cucumbers bloom without setting fruit?

This is a pollination problem. This could be caused by insects Cucumbers have male and female blooms, and for proper fruit set, the pollen must be transferred from the male to the female blooms. This is usually done by pollinating insects, primarily honeybees. If pollen transfer does not take place, fruit will not set. How do you tell the difference between the male and the female cucumber bloom? Female blooms have small, immature cucumbers located directly behind the petals. Male blooms do not have immature How can you tell the difference between a slicing cucumber and a pickling cucumber? Slicing cucumbers are dark green and are from 6 to 8 inches in length. Pickling cucumbers are lighter and are short and blocky. If you intend to put up pickles, then grow pickling types. Pickling cucumbers were developed to go through the brining process and will produce a higher quality product. If you intend to use cucumbers mainly in salads, then rely on slicing types.

Are "burpless" cucumbers really burpless?

Yes, at least to some people. Some people have gastric problems which prevent them from enjoying fresh cucumbers. The new burpless types are milder.

LUBBOCK — Christopher J. Kupcunas, a 1983 Pampa High School graduate, was one of 11 fourth-year architecture students at Texas Tech University chosen to design drawings and models for a proposed science center and museum.

Kupcunas was chosen to present the team's recommendations to members of the Lubbock Science Center board.

Students were to plan the details of changing a former grocery store into a 30,000-square-foot science center museum, said Michael Peters, associate professor of architecture at Texas

The challenge for the students, Peters said, was to modify the building to accommodate the museum and to design the remaining 50,000 square feet of space for small businesses.

Skin cancer can be fata

NEW YORK (AP) - About 5,800 of the 500,000 Americans who contract skin cancer this year will die, according to dermatology experts at a recent national symposium.

Although one-third of all cancers are skin cancers, most are curable, said Dr. Alfred Lane, assistant professor of dermatology and pediatrics at the University of Rochester (N.Y.) Medical Center.

Cancerous melanoma, which is fatal in 25 percent of cases, will strike more than 25,000 people in the nation this year, he added.

Children playing outdoors without protection from sun exposure are of great concern to experts in the field.

"Today's tan can become tomorrow's cancer," he told the symposium, which was supported by an educational grant from Johnson & Johnson Baby Products Co. "A tan is the body's reaction to damage from the

Because 80 percent of lifetime exposure to the sun is obtained by age 20, parents must help children protect themselves, Lane said. He urged parents to teach youngsters to stay out of the sun during the midday hours, wear protective clothing and use high sunscreen protection.

Good Sam gets free bread

Free bread is now being donated to Good Samaritan Christian Services Inc. by Allsup's Convenience Stores in Pampa.

Heidi Tally, local Allsup's supervisor, recently asked for and received permission from her firm to allow outdated bakery products to be donated to Good Samaritan, according to Bill Ragsdale, executive director of the interfaith mission.

"Many folks have told us of the large amounts of food that is thrown into the trash cans each day in Pampa. Several Good Samaritan volunteers have tried to find a way to have the usable food donated to the Good Samar-

"They were told that the higher management said this was against the policy of the stores involved. Some stores even tore open packaged food before dumping it," Ragsdale said.

John Norris picks up the donated food from Allsup's and also donuts from The Donut Shop.

"All of this food is in good condition and is being issued to those needing food," Ragsdale said.

"We recently lost our lowpriced source of bread when the Flower's Bakery Store closed, and now we have free bread," he Requests for aid from the interfaith mission, which provides food, clothing, medical and other assistance to needy persons, were up 2 percent in July as compared to June. Income exceeded expenses, partly because of lost mail, according to Ragsdale.

"Two utility bills and at least one check for the Good Samaritan were lost in early July. So, if we didn't pay a bill that was sent last month, or if a check to the Good Samaritan has not cleared the bank, it may have been lost in the mail. Please call in either case - 665-0073 from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m.," he said.

Food issued in July was up 5 percent over June, and clothing was up 22 percent. Utility aid requests were down 36 percent.

Of 247 families requesting aid, 234 were helped. Food was given to 187; clothing, 71; rent, two; utilities, 23; transportation, 11; lodging, four; medical, 17; and other, 18. Total number of persons helped was 785.

Reasons for refusing requests for aid from 13 families included several previous requests for utility aid and-or no reasonable expectancy of paying their own bills in the future. Some were referred to the Salvation Army for possible payment from grants.

Those seeking assistance included 233 families from Gray outside Gray County but within 25 miles of Pampa, and five transients

One was referred by news, 36 by friends, eight by other organizations or agencies, and 202 were returns. There were four emergency after-hours calls.

Out-of-pocket expenses for July included food, $76.22; clothing, $80.59; utilities, $964.37: transportation, $191.93; lodging, $36.86; and medical, $493.01. Total expenses were $2,016.21 for July, compared to $2,809.81 in

In addition to bread, Good Samaritan had an increased supply of diapers from donations and from the Food Bank. Because of the increase in amount of bread available, extra issues were given to those needing food.

Shepard awarded 248 Conservation Project Support (CP) grants totaling $3,199,628.

Conservation grants enable museums to conduct projects such as surveys of environmental and collection conditions, conservation of specific objects in their collections. training and research in conservation, and species survival activities.

Carson County Square House Museum will use the $1,500 in grant and matching funds to hire Mary Frederickson, conservator from Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon, to inspect the museum's collections. make general recommendations on conservation of the items, and answer specific questions.

The museum will apply for funds next year to carry out her recommendations, according to Donna Otto of the Panhandle museum.

IMS revised the Conservation Project Support application for this year's competition in response to conservation needs demonstrated by the museum field. The new framework established for this grant cycle assumes that a museum's conservation plan should be encouraged to develop from very basic activities such as surveys to more adva ced ones such as treatment of objects. In announcing the awards, Mrs. Shepard said, "Too often the proper conservation of museum collections is neglected or put off. Unfortunately, such neglect is extremely detrimental to the irreplaceable cultural artifacts housed in our nation's museums.

"The goal of the Conservation Project Support program is to encourage museums to develop a far-sighted, longterm approach to the conservation of their collections. I am delighted by the encouraging response to the new program guidelines from the museum field and from the conservators reviewing the applications.

"It is quite evident that the CP program is helping to address the needs of the country's museums.'

IMS funds all disciplines of museums, including art, aquariums, botanical gardens and arboreta, children's, general, history, natural history, nature centers, science and technology centers, zoos and specialized.

A total of 495 museums applied for project grants of up to two years. All grants require a one-to-one match and are made on a competitive basis.

After technical review by museum professionals in the field, applications are evaluated by panels of senior conservation professionals who make funding recommendations to the Director of IMS.

come to this unusual prairie camp to talk about drugs, sex - and themselves. Then they go back to their hometowns and help other teens stay out of trouble.

They are rich and poor; from industrial cities and farm villages; wearing designer shirts or tattered jeans. Still, camp officials say they share many of the problems of adolescence.

"We realize they can go out and do whatever they want and we can't stop them, so we just give them information and hope they'll make the right decisions," said volunteer director Mark Nelson of Mattoon.

'Now, they can talk to other kids who have been through the same things and see that they can make it too," he said.

About 750 high school students attend the three sessions of the Illinois Teen-Age Institute at Allerton Park, tucked between fields of tall corn and the Sangamon River, about three hours south of Chicago.

The focus of each weeklong camp is building self-esteem and leadership skills, then showing the teens how they can deliver the message about clean living to their friends at home.

Presentations by the staff cover topics ranging from drug and alcohol abuse to sexuality and divorce. Teens often meet in small groups to discuss each issue privately. They also can talk with the 50 counselors any time during the week.

"That's what makes this work," said Tony Rennard, camp director. "It's not just a presentation and then we go home. Nelson says the camp, which has just completed its 13th year, has become a model for other states. This year it attracted a group from England interested in creating a simi-"We're not used to opening up — we tend to bottle everything up inside," said Seema Ra-jput, 17, who lives near London. "It's such a relief to share and realize you're not alone." The camp is sponsored by the Illinois Alcoholism and Drug Dependence Association.

Coming back successfully after a long absence is one of the most difficult tasks a band has to overcome. Boston did it last year with their Number One album Third Stage after

But in the field of hard rock, it is especially difficult. This is what Def Leppard is trying to overcome after just four years. Hysteria is the title of the new disk by the Sheffield, England quintet.

Many (and I do mean many) difficulties plagued the band after they left the road touring in support of the multiplatinum Pyromania. They fired their first producer and had trouble obtaining the producer they wanted. Lead singer Joe Elliott lost his voice to the mumps. Drummer Rick Allen had his left arm cut off in a New Year's Eve accident.

But the final outcome is surprising. To even make a dent in the charts with this album, Def Leppard had to surpass their last album in sound, production and style. They are totally revamped and tight throughout the album.

Their sound and style have changed for the better. However, the album is overproduced. The studio tricks are too prevalent on quite a few tracks.

The music, however, overshadows the tricks. Twelve songs, more than 60 minutes of music, are contained in Hysteria, which has already entered the Top 10 best-selling albums on Billboard magazine's charts. The lengths of the songs range from 4:02 to 6:34. This was a smart move for the band to give the fan the most for his money

The first single is also the first song on the album. 'Women' has hit potential, and the way the charts have been lately, it is likely to break into the Top 20.

The second song is the marathon of the album. "Rocket" is a tribute to English music, with references to 'Sgt. Pepper and the Band," "Benny and the Jets," "Dizzy

Miss Lizzy" (the Beatles version) and "Major Tom" (from David Bowie's "Space Oddity.") Trying not to sound like a teen-ager on American Bandstand's Rate-A-Record segment, I can still say this cut is appealing because of the good

Two ballads are on the disk the title track and "Love Bites." The latter is a victim of overproduction, along with "Gods of War." "Gods" is a 6:32 drawn-out bore. If it weren't for the long intro and ending, it would be fine. Airplanes, rockets launching and snippets of speeches by Margaret Thatcher and Ronald Reagan clutter the cut.

"Pour Some Sugar on Me" takes the honors for stupidest title - poor lyrics, but good structure. The lyrics ("I'm hot, sticky sweet/from my head to my feet") tend to overshadow the talent of the dual guitarists Steve Clark and Phil actually stretches his normal abilities by sounding like three different singers.

Catchiest title I've heard in a long time is "Armageddon It." This is another surprising song. Vocalist Joe Elliott Rating ★★★

This album surpasses Pyromania in some aspects but lags on others. The sound is crisper; the guitarists aren't fighting one another, they all play tighter and with more range. But, as I've already said, overproduction slays the disk in places

It takes at least two listenings to get used to the album. It grows and captivates the listener. This is a wise purchase for lovers of harder than Hysteria has promise to become like Slippery When Wet, a pop-metal album to achieve the pinnacle of the album charts. Look for Def Leppard to regain the stardom they achieved with Pyromania.

Hysteria is exciting and fun to listen to, and a bargain for

The conference, held Aug. 1-4 in Washington, D.C., was entitled "Synergy" and included programs and seminars on providing service to the public, booking entertainment acts, corporate sponsorship and creative problem solving and marketing.

"The 1987 IAAM conference and trade show gave me an opportunity to learn state-of-art management and marketing information and meet with my colleages to discuss industry issues and concerns," Parkerson said.

"An important workshop, sponsored by Disney University, focused on creating the magic serving America," Parkerson said. "Servicing customers is a crucial part of our responsibilities as managers, from selecting and training employees to creating a service environment."

Facility managers attending the conference had the opportunity to attend a special "Stars and Stripes" performance by the Marine Drum and Bugle Corps and Silent Drill Team at the Washington Convention Center, as well as visit a wide variety of historical sites and museums.

At the Movies

By LINDA DEUTSCH Associated Press Writer The Living Daylights

James Bond is a new man this summer — literally.

And the happy news is that Timothy Dalton, number five on the Bond hit parade, is an attractive addition to the gallery of actors who have portrayed Ian Fleming's debonair Agent 007.

In The Living Daylights, Dalton gives us a Bond who is less world-weary than Roger Moore and more realistic about life than the daring Sean Connery. He takes risks out of necessity, not just for fun.

This may be the first OO7 opus in which distinctions between good and evil seem to blur and definitions of good guys and bad guys aren't crystal clear. The girl in the movie — and there's always a girl — debuts as a villain but quickly is revealed as a heroine. And wonder of wonders, James appears to be practicing safe sex: In this film he's a onewoman man.

Maryam D'Abo is the beautiful cellist who wins Bond's heart. One wishes she projected a little more fire; she's a bit wimpy as a sidekick in his wild adventures. Many of the gimmicks of the remain alive after 25 years — and they're still fun. Bond's sportscar still performs marvelous feats, and that master of spycraft, Q (Desmond Llewelyn), is older but still inventing gadgets such as an exploding keyring with a whistled song as the trigger.

007 formula for box office success

There are car chases, airplane chases and a breath-catching race down a ski slope with a $150,000 Stradivarius cello as a toboggan. James is always good for a few laughs.

There are spies, counterspies and spies whose affiliation is doubtful. Jeroen Krabbe, as General Georgi Koskov, a Russian defector (or is he?) is an urbane addition to the Bond bad guys. If Bond is monogamous, Georgi is not. In the end, the story involving dealing seems incidental to the action scenes set in exotic locales including Morocco and Afghanistan. Director John Glen keeps the action moving at a swift pace,

To those who were into rock 'n' roll when "La Bamba," hit the charts, its bouncing rhythms are unforgettable. So is the name Ritchie Valens, a symbol of the musical revolution that propelled poor, guitar-strumming kids to the heights of stardom.

The biggest surprise about the movie, La Bamba, is that it took nearly 30 years for Valens' deeply touching story to reach the

Of all the musical successes of the late 1950s, Valens' was among the most extraordinary and most tragic. Famous by the time he was 16, the youth who sang his way out of a Mexican-American ghetto was killed at 17 in the plane crash immortalized in song as "the day the music died." Killed with Valens were rockers Buddy Holly, 22, and The Big Bopper (J.P. Richardson), 29.

La Bamba is an affectionate account of Valens' brief life which becomes two movies in one

- an exciting tribute to the magic of early rock 'n' roll and a touching drama of one youngster's climb out of the poverty and sibling rivalries of a Mexican-American family

Valens' music, sung by Los Lobos, along with a sound track of '50s hits, is one of the special pleasures of this film. So is the debut of newcomer Lou Diamond Phillips as Valens.

But writer-director Luis Valdez has chosen to focus on the young star's ethnic roots as Richard Valenzuela of Pacoima, Calif. As a result, he neglects the musical-social upheaval surrounding the young musician and doesn't get to it until late in the film. A black-and-white clip from American Bandstand and the frenzy of an Alan Freed concert capture some of the excitement of the era.

It's a satisfying two hours at the movies with an ending guaranteed to produce tears. What's missing is the rock 'n' roll history that might have made a good movie great.

La Bamba is rated PG-13 for sex, violence and drug use involving the bad-guy brother. The film's moralistic message that nice guys become stars overcomes any negative impact.

All rolled up

It appears that a farm worker got caught up in his work and wound up inside a large bale of hay near McComb, Miss. recently. Actually it was a farmer's prank. Alan Pounds stuck two sticks in the hay and placed a spare pair of boots on them to create the image of the baled man.

Improved farm income; lower bank losses

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Bad-debt losses by banks and other farm lenders remain high but are declining as farmers cut expenses while receiving rising federal payments, according to an analysis by the Agriculture

'Estimates of lenders' potential losses on farm loans peaked at $8.6 billion in 1985 and are forecast to drop to $4 billion in 1987," the report says. "Loan loss is measured by unpaid interest and asset losses through forced sales of financially stressed commercial

William S. Serlitis of the department's Economic Research Service said Wednesday that the potential losses reflect loans in jeopardy during a specific year, not actual actual 1985 losses at about $4 billion, twice the level of 1984. He said the figure probably rose to around $5 billion in 1986. No 1987 estimate is available yet, he said.

He said the agency estimates farm lenders'

"Lenders now hold nearly 8 million acres of farmland acquired through foreclosure and bankruptcy," the report said. "This is less than 1 percent of all farmland, and about 24 percent of annual farmland sales."

The report added: "Although these holdings could be put on the market all at once, lenders are reluctant to sell the holdings rapidly lest prices fall. In addition, improving rates of return on land used for farming could boost values.

Another favorable indicator has been gradual stabilization of farm real estate values. Consequently, with farm income buoyed by rising federal payments and reduced cash expenses, farmers may be seeing some rise in their equities — the value of holdings actually owned.

"Many farmers are paying off debts and acquiring less new short-term debt than in the past," the report said. "But continued foreclosures and debt restructuring indicate that not all farmers are sharing in the re-

The latest outlook report forecasts farmers' 1987 gross cash income from $151 billion to $153 billion, in line with last year's $152 billion estimate. Cash expenses are forecast at $95 billion to $97 billion, down from $100.1 billion last year.

Accordingly, the report said, net cash income of farmers could be a record, in the range of $54 billion to $58 billion, up from $52

In its report a month ago, the agency predicted somewhat less gross cash income and slightly greater cash expenses, leaving 1987 net cash income at $52 billion to $56 billion -

$2 billion less than the new forecast. No new figures were included for direct federal payments to farmers, but the agency previously indicated those could be $14 billion to $16 billion this year, up from about $12 billion in 1986.

Those would include cash payments of $7 billion to $9 billion, and nearly as large payment-in-kind benefits in the form of free government-owned grain and other surplus com-

The report also said:

Economic stress has caused hardship in much of the Third World, and those financial problems have hurt farmers in exporting countries including the United States.

Farm costs are down but market prices fall more

WASHINGTON (AP) - Costs of farm production went down last year but not as much as decreases in market prices that producers receive for their goods, an Agriculture Department study says.

Farmers paid less for feed, seed, fuels, fertilizer, tractors, buildings and fencing, according to the study produced by USDA's Economic Research Service and due out this fall.

But in most cases, the drop in commodity values from 1985 to 1986 exceeded the savings from decreased production expenses, the study found.

The decreased market prices for crops were related closely to a lowering of Commodity Credit Corp. price-support loan rates in an effort to stimulate sale of U.S. agricultural products overseas.

Production costs for corn dropped 13.4 percent while receipts decreased 34.6 percent. For other commodities it was wheat, 12.7 percent and 29.3 percent, respectively; soybeans, 5.3 percent and 7.4 percent; sorghum, 9.6 percent and 28.5 percent; rice, 13.1 percent and 47.8 percent; cotton, 15.1 percent and 27 percent; and barley, 10 percent and 21.7 percent.

Among livestock producers, the picture was less uniform.

PANHANDLE PEST REPORT Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension Entomologist, provides the following information on insect conditions for the Panhandle area.

Pheromone trap catches of southwestern corn borer moths are running 400-500 moths per night in Moore County and 20-50 per night in Dallam County. Infestations exist in all fields that I have been in this past week. Infestation levels are running between 15 and 80 percent. An insecticide application is justified when 20 to 25 percent of the plants are infested with eggs on larvae.

Closely monitor late planted fields, for they will be very attractive to the moths

Spidermite activity continues to increase, but I would still consider it a relatively light year as far as spidermites are concerned. Dimethoate (Cygon) is providing mixed results, but generally is performing better than expected. Sorghum

Greenbugs have increased and some fields are being treated, but a large scale outbreak has not developed to date. Continue to be watchful of this pest.

A few headworm infestations are being reported and I expect the number will increase over the next few weeks. Inspect heads on a regular basis in order to detect worms while they are small. An easy way to detect small worms is to shake heads into a white bucket and count those that are dislodged

A chart is available at the County Extension Office which provides an economic look at the number of headworm larvae per head and the relative economic damage they inflict.

MAKE HAY WITH FEED VALUE The hay producer who believes a delay of a few days in cutting would be of little consequence in hay production should give the matter additional thought. Considerable feed value could be lost. Research has shown that delaying harvest results in both protein and disgetibility losses in the hay. While producers can increase their total volume or number of bales of hay by delaying harvest, hay quality will suffer.

While many factors affect maximum yield of digestible nutrients per acre, the most important factor is the stage of plant maturity at harvest. All forage plants, grasses and legumes, become lower in protein, digestibility and acceptibility to livestock as they progress from the vegetative stage to the reproductive stage of growth.

Cutting and baling hay while grass or forage sorghums are in the vegetative stage preserves the hay's feed value while harvest delays result in feed value losses

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — It took them the better part of a century to finally meet up, but now that they have, there seems to be no separating them. These two West Texas gals just have too much in Lottie Cotten Casey, 92, and Lottie Butman Everett, 90, both from Taylor County pioneer families, met for the first time at the Sears Memorial Methodist Retirement Center. It was then they discovered they share not only the same first name but family ties dating back to the late 1800s.

'It all started about a year ago when we both lived in the nursing center," Mrs. Casey says. 'They sat me next to Mrs. Everett and she told me her name. Then we found out that our people knew each other in the 1800s."

Actually, the first tie their families shared was a tragic one concerning Mrs. Casey's brother, Homer Cotten, who apparently was killed by a wild horse near the Cotten family ranch.

Last one to the corral that day, Homer got the worst — or, at least, worst disciplined — horse, Mrs. Casey says. Later that day, ranchers found Homer's body not far from his horse in a pasture. His body was taken briefly to a house on the Butman spread until someone from town could pick it

The house was owned by the Butmans, Mrs.

Everett's parents.

'My mother had us in a buggy and this lone rider came to meet us." Mrs. Casey says, recalling that ing — even into their 90s day in the 1890s. "I must have been 4 and Homer was 18. That was when the rider told us about Homer's death.

'She (Mrs. Everett) didn't know about my brother's death and her mama's house until I told her," Mrs. Casey says.

After discussing the death of Mrs. Casey's brother, the women discovered their families were neighbors and friends through the early 1900s.

"I told Mrs. Butman my story and we found out that our names were the same," Mrs. Casey says. "Then we found out that our mothers were the best of friends.

The Cotten clan's C-5 ranch was in Caps, and the Butman family owned the Butman Ranch south of Merkel. The two families were among the first to settle this part of West Texas.

Mrs. Everett's father, Sam Butman Sr., came to the area from Maine in 1883 at age 17. He settled here after completing his third voyage around the world — a storm-lashed trip so nerve-wracking that he vowed to God he'd never leave dry land again if he survived.

As for the two Lotties, they were both born and reared in the county and lived 20 miles from each other during a time when few families had settled

Each day at the retirement center finds vet another common bond. The two Lotties still shed tears when recalling the death of the long-departed Homer. And one day not long ago, both showed up wearing the same sort of dress.

For these two women, life remains ever surpris-

New Louisiana archives building opens Monday

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The state's archives, long neglected and abused while being shuffled from a university campus to a dank Capitol basement and an industrial-area warehouse, have landed in a showcase described as a "new chapter in the history of Louisiana."

The $10.4 million state archives building, located on a 5.8 acre site in south Baton Rouge far from the hub of government agencies, will be dedicated Monday, culiminating a lengthy drive for an adequate center to house Louisiana's vital records and historic documents.

"I don't think the state can give a better gift to the people in this 175th anniversary of Louisiana than this building," said Dr. Donald J. Lemieux, state archivist. "I would say this has to be the finest in the nation."

The four-story building features modern areas for the public to study documents, internal climate controls to preserve aging paper and several warehouse-size storage areas. It replaces a former warehouse where, among other problems, air pollution posed a threat to preservation of important records.

"We never had a proper building for the archives," Lemieux said.

Until Louisiana State University established a quasi-official archives center in 1935, the state had no real system of keeping up with documents of potential historical value.

"Our records were mistreated and ignored for many years," Lemieux said.

After an archives agency was established in 1956, the documents stayed a short time in the subbasement of the Capitol before being moved to Peabody Hall, a dilapidated 19th century relic that was finally condemned. In 1966, the archives moved to the warehouse district.

In the meantime, many records documenting Louisiana's history vanished, Lemieux said.

'Some have been lost, some have deteriorated and when you don't have a good management plan, some simply disappear," he said. Lemieux said that too often, the public looks upon archives as a collection of musty papers. 'Most of the documents in a democracy are created to safeguard the rights and interests of citizens and for the citizens to avail themselves to the records to check on what their public officials are doing," he said. The archives also document a major part of the state's heritage, he said.

"When your spirit is drenched with the strength of your past and it is documented, you stand up tall." he said. "How can you have any future without a clear understanding of your past?'

Unlike the previous structure, a large portion of the new building is dedicated to public study.

A 99-seat auditorium is available for meetings and school classes, along with an exhibit room and the pride of the public area — the "Louisiana Room," a display area constructed of baldcypress wood where documents from the Louisiana Purchase of 1803 will be displayed Monday beneath thick security glass.

For the first time, a comfortable research library also will be open to the public.

The historic significance of what's inside greets a visitor even before entering the building. Above the front entrance are five murals by artist Al LaVergne that portray Louisiana from the time of its settlement by France through the Civil War to the era of Huey P. Long and the construction of the Superdome.

A tinted-glass version of the state seal - protected by a layer of bulletproof glass — hangs over the entrance.

The rest of the building contains voluminous space for a conservation laboratory, a microfilm section and a records management office. Most of the top two floors consist of cavernous storage areas. Three large vaults are guarded by a system that sprays an extinguishing gas in case of fire.

The building was constructed during a time that Louisiana has faced economic hard times and tight state budgets. For that, Lemieux credits the public's interest in preserving the state's heritage through its archives.

Monday's formal dedication will be more than the opening of another state office building, Lemieux said.

"All in all, the christening of the new state archives building can best be viewed as the writing of a new chapter in the history of Louisiana," he said.

Names in the news

AUSTIN (AP) - A county commissioners court may not attempt to restrict or abolish a constable's office by fixing an extremely low salary or by refusing to provide reasonable office expenses, Attorney General Jim Mattox reports.

Mattox said commissioners courts may prescribe different salaries for the constables of different precincts if the circumstances reasonably require different salaries.

"What constitutes a reasonable salary is a question of fact within the discretion of the commissioners court," Mattox said.

His opinion was requested by Joe Price, district attorney at Groveton.

AUSTIN (AP) - Mickey Neel, a probation officer in Brazos County, has been named the 1987 Line Officer of the Year by the American Probation and Parole Association.

APPA will present the award to Mrs. Neel during its annual conference, which will be held in Salt Lake City, Utah, Aug. 23-26.

Dating clubs differ nationwide on AIDS screening policies By BRETT J. BLACKLEDGE Raim said. Groups at highest risk for contracting Associated Press Writer TULSA, Okla, (AP) - Owners of dating services that the deadly virus could reach epidemic proportions among heterosexuals. Jack and Beverly Wagner, who started an AIDSscreening dating service out of their home in the Tulsa suburb of Glenpool, said doctors, lawyers and secretaries have shown an interest in the club.

'Men are more concerned with meeting peothat offer AIDS screening say their typical client is a single, professional man in his 30s who is fearful ple," Mrs. Wagner said. "Women are interested in being tested." P.A.L.S., Prevent AIDS Love Society, offers anonymous testing through a local laboratory for $50. If the results turn out negative, the club offers a $25-a-month six-month membership with access to other members tested for the virus, Wagner said. Members agree not to have sexual contact with non-members, he said. About 300 people, 60 percent men, have shown an interest in the club, which is expected to be in full operation next month, Wagner said. Club fliers and leaflets were distributed in adult apartment complexes and an advertisement was placed in local newspapers to promote P.A.L.S., he said.

Critics of such clubs say the dating services offering AIDS testing miss the point that no one can guarantee that someone who tested negative for AIDS today won't test positive tomorrow. The Wagners said they got their idea for the club after reading about others across the country, including a Barrington, Ill., club that offers members ID cards that state the carrier has tested negative for AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome. 'The only way to stop this disease is to have people tested," said Jim Raim, organizer of the Barrington club called American AIDS-Free Association. "It's kind of like a new lease on life."

The requirements to join the $195-a-year club in suburban Chicago are a negative AIDS test every four months and an agreement not to use intravenous drugs or have sex with non-members. Mother finds five dogs attacking her daughter

Johnson took over managment two years ago.

Company grows up with its baby boom clientele

By MICHELLE LOCKE Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH (AP) — Pier 1 Imports started out in the 1960s as a rattan mecca for college-bound baby boomers looking for cheap furniture and serapes to cheer up scruffy apartments.

"That was just the beginning of the emerging wave of the baby boomers going to college. Many of those students were in the process of rejecting parental values. At that time there was no better place (to do that) than Pier 1," said company president Clark Johnson.

Then the baby boomers grew up, swapping love beads and ponchos for MBAs and three-piece suits. Pier 1, however, didn't change, filling its shelves with quaint, anachronistic wares like incense.

We had products that were consistent with the lifestyle of the 1960s," Johnson said.

Two years ago, Johnson took over management the company, vowing to shed its tie-dyed image and woo back the original customer base with upscale, high-fashion merchandise aimed at young professionals

The store still relies on hand-crafted unique items such as wicker furniture, brassware and woven floor coverings. But the merchandise has been upgraded, offering better quality, more fashionable items at a higher price.

Besides upgrading goods, the company also revamped its advertising, switching from a black and white "bargain basement" approach to slick color presentations.

The makeover, coupled with a new strategy of placing stores in prime locations in upscale shopping centers, has resulted in significant fiscal improvements

For fiscal 1987, ending Feb. 28, company sales rose almost 29 percent to $262.3 million. Income before extraordinary items was $12 million, up from $8.6 million in 1986

In the first quarter of this fiscal year, ending May 31, the company had record earnings of $4.2 million on record sales $79.7 million. That represented a 58 percent increase in earnings and a 35 percent jump in sales over the same period a year Shareholders approved a 3-for-2 stock split in July 1986, a 4-for-3 stock split in January and a 3-for-2 in July of this year.

The profitable figures are a big contrast from the 1975-85 period when 175 stores were closed or relocated. Johnson said the company had begun paring away deadwood and shifting from novelty items before he took over, but was hampered by haphazard growth and old-fashioned advertising.

Following the recent successes, Johnson plans an ambitious $100 million expansion program that calls for doubling store space by 1990 from the 1985 level of 265 stores to 500 stores. The company currently has about 365 stores.

Johnson, a tall, broad-shouldered man, with a booming voice, exudes confidence when he talks about the new Pier 1.

"We had millions of potential Pier 1 customers that we weren't serving with existing stores," he

The story of how Pier 1 lost and regained its customer base is an unusual one.

"They did not change their whole concept in accordance with the changing tastes and demands. As a result they were not successfully growing and improving their profitability," said Ed Gagnon, an analyst with Rauscher Pierce Refs-

"It really grew up with the generation of the Sixties. To that extent, it is one of the few instances where you've seen the development of both sides.'

Part of the problem was that Pier 1, the country's largest specialty retailer of decorative home furnishings, was trying to out-price non-existing competitors, Gagnon said.

The average transaction at stores during the 1970s was $5, too low for a profit, and undercutting any attempts to create a quality image.

The company thought recapturing the customer base meant rediscovering the customer. Pier 1 held small group meetings with women — the store's main customers - in Dallas, San Francisco, Chicago and Washington.

Changes stemming from those meetings included sending buyers to pace-setter markets such as Milan and Paris to spot new trends.
