Michigan plane crash kills 154

ROMULUS, Mich. (AP) — Investigators were checking reports today that a jetliner was on fire before it plunged into the ground and "crumbled like a piece of paper" as it smashed through freeway bridges, killing 154 people in the nation's second-worst crash.

There were conflicting reports on whether a 4-year-old girl hospitalized Sunday night after the crash of Northwest Airlines Flight 255 might have been a passenger. The girl was found in the wreckage under the body of a woman, which had apparently cushioned her.

The McDonnell Douglas MD-80, an updated version of the DC-9, had arrived from Saginaw and was en route to Phoenix and suburban Los Angeles. It crashed in clear weather at 8:46 p.m., moments after taking off from Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Aboard the plane were 147 passengers, including two infants being held on laps, and six crew members, said Bob Gibbons, a Northwest spokesman in Minneapolis. At least 152 people died on the ground, and at least six people on the ground were injured, authorities said.

If it was the first major commercial plane crash in the United States in almost a year, and the first involving a domestic carrier in almost two years.

Authorities said there was some looting at the site shortly after the plane crashed, with some people carrying away debris. Six people were arrested.

The area was cordoned off today and National Transportation Safety Board investigators were on the scene. Interstate 94, the main artery between Detroit and Chicago, was still closed late this morning because of the debris.

FBI agents were sent to the scene based on a report that there might have been an explosion before the crash, said John Anthony, an FBI spokesman in Detroit. The agents would check for any sign of a bomb, but there was "no indication" there was a bomb on the plane, he said.

In January, the FBI said it was investigating alleged tampering with Northwest planes at the Minneapolis airport. Last month, the Detroit Free Press said the airline had brought in security guards to combat minor acts of vandalism on ground equipment.

Gibbons said FBI investigation of a possible bomb is routine. "I wouldn't jump to any conclusions about the FBI involvement."

He said there's no evidence of possible sabotage in the crash, and would not comment on Northwest's recent union problems in Detroit.

Michael Moore, 14, who was standing near the Avis building, said today he saw an "orange glow, like on fire behind the building. And the glare is what made me look."

Moore told ABC's "Good Morning America" that the orange glow was "around the engines, in the back, covering the engines."

The jetliner rocked side to side and plunged to the ground trailing fire before skidding beneath an Interstate 94 overpass and breaking into dozens of burning pieces on Middlebelt Road, bordering the airport, witnesses said.

"It looks like a large bomb fell on Middlebelt Road," said Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara.

"When it hit the ground it just crumbled like a piece of paper," Joel Taylor, a motorist, told Cable News Network.

The plane, he said, exploded as soon as it hit the ground.

"If there was any survivor, I don't know how," he said. "There was a ball of fire under the bridge."

"The entire Northwest family of more than 34,000 employees is stunned by this tragic loss," said Northwest Airlines chairman and chief executive officer Steven G. Rothmeier in a statement released today. "With our condolences, we have extended to the families a commitment for every possible assistance."

A wing clipped an Avis rental car building, then the plane slid underneath a railroad trestle, continued through the eastbound and westbound bridges of I-94 onto Middlebelt Road, which adjoins the airport on the east, McNamara said.

FBI, Justice Department seize records of 290 Texans for lengthy S&L probe

DALLAS (AP) — Records of at least 290 Texas developers and savings and loan executives have been subpoenaed by federal officials investigating the state's troubled thrift industry.

One Dallas executive said he expects to be driven into bankruptcy by the investigation.

"I'm turning over 30,000 pages of documents to the FHLB and the Justice Department every month," said the executive, who asked not to be identified.

"If certain people are scared, they may have a reason to be scared," said Stephen Learned, the U.S. Justice Department attorney overseeing the massive investigation from Washington.

"We're looking at a two-year commitment just to bring cases into some manageable form," said Anthony Adamski, chief of the FBI financial crimes unit. "The initial phase of the investigation is a dragnet."

The Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday that a federal grand jury in Dallas was ordering many Texas S&Ls to surrender everything in their files about those targeted for investigation.

Wrongdoing such as fraud, inside abuse and gross mismanagement could cost the federal thrift insurance fund up to $3 billion, according to Brian Neuberger, acting director of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

Roy Green, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas, said it will take between five and seven years and up to $6 billion in FSLIC funds to restore the Texas thrift industry to health.

Guadalcanal moves after mine-sweeping drill

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Newly arrived American mine-sweeping helicopters maneuvered over the Persian Gulf today as three tankers and their U.S. Navy escorts prepared for their return trip through the perilous waterway.

After the RH-53D helicopters flew several drills, they alighted on the helicopter carrier USS Guadalcanal, which weighed anchor at about 11:15 a.m. local time and appeared to move south, in the direction from which it arrived last weekend, said an eyewitness. Its destination was not known.

Correspondent Brent Sadler of Britain's ITN network said he could not confirm reports that a Soviet warship was "shadowing" the Guadalcanal. He said he had not seen any such ship from his chartered vessel about 30 miles off Bahrain.

The arrival of the eight mine-sweeping helicopters coincided with a warning from Iran that it could produce mines "like seeds" and sow them in the gulf, where an explosion damaged the first U.S.-escorted Kuwaiti convoy last month.

But in a surprise announcement, Iran's foreign minister said Tehran would welcome a visit by the U.N. secretary-general to discuss security in the gulf.

The RH-53D Sea Stallion helicopters made intermittent flights during a 10-hour period Sunday, said Sadler.

He said the helicopters, along with UH1H gunships, circled the carrier and performed low-level passes above the water in an apparent practice drill.

The helicopters drag sonar buoys and sleds with explosive charges through the water to locate mines and break their anchor cables. The mines then rise to the surface where they are exploded by gunfire.

The 11,000-ton Guadalcanal was sent to the Persian Gulf when mines threatened to disrupt the U.S. plan for refueling 11 Kuwaiti See DRILL, Page 2

Ownership of $8 million in Swiss accounts remains undetermined

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the central issues left hanging in the Iran-Contra affair is the ownership of roughly $8 million still frozen in Swiss bank accounts once controlled by middlemen.

The money appears to be a key element in the case that Lawrence Walsh, the independent counsel, is trying to build against several of the principal figures in the scandal, according to sources familiar with the investigation.

"The U.S. government apparently aims to argue that these funds were illegally converted, and, therefore, are U.S. government funds, and there was fraud involved," said one person with knowledge of the investigation. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Another source, also speaking anonymously, said Walsh apparently will take the position that funds were misappropriated, and those involved will be indicted.

James Wiegart, Walsh's spokesman, said he could not comment on details of the criminal investigation.

Richard V. Secord, the retired Air Force major general who helped Lt. Col. Oliver L. North run the Iran-Contra operations, told Congress the money belonged to the "enterprise" operated by Secord and his business partner, Albert Hakim. Secord has said the money belongs to him and his company.

North was with the National Security Council at the time, while Secord and Hakim were acting as private businessmen.

The money is held in accounts into which payments were placed from the sale of U.S.-made arms to Iran in 1985 and 1986. Out of that money, Secord, Hakim and North created a private air wing to assist the Nicaraguan Contra rebels during a period in which Congress had banned U.S. military aid to the group.

After the Iran-Contra affair was exposed last November, the Justice Department acted swiftly to freeze disbursement of the money under a U.S.-Swiss legal aid treaty.

Sam Hirsch, a spokesman for the Senate Iran-

Contra committee, said $1.4 million is in a Lake Resources account and $6.5 million is in a Swiss fiduciary known as CSF. Of that $6.5 million, $5.5 million is in a subsidiary Merrill Lynch account in Geneva, and about $1 million is in Strauss Turnbull, a London investment house.

The money can be moved to various investments, but it can't be disbursed, Hirsch said.

Walsh has not yet been given access to all the Swiss financial records, and last week he complained that his investigation has been slowed as a result.

Although a Swiss court ruled that the records should be turned over, Hakim, Secord and Iranian arms merchant Manucher Ghorbanifar appealed to the Swiss Supreme Court, which said it would rule on the case Aug. 20.

Besides filing petitions for the records, the U.S. government has not moved to take control of the money, according to an attorney in the case who asked for anonymity.

Others may also claim the money.

Ghorbanifar, who served as an intermediary between the Iranian government and the Secord team, lost about $10 million on the deal, according to his attorney, Stuart Pierson. Pierson is considering filing a claim for the money in Switzerland.

Ghorbanifar's associate, Saudi financier Adnan Khashoggi, also says he lost money. Khashoggi said he borrowed money from a Saudi partner for "bridge" loans that enabled the weapons sales to proceed in February and May 1986.

In simple terms, Khashoggi and Ghorbanifar lent money to Secord, who bought the weapons from the U.S. government. Once the weapons were delivered, Iran paid Ghorbanifar, who was to reimburse Khashoggi.

The report by the Tower commission, the presidential panel that investigated the Iran-Contra affair, indicates Khashoggi placed $15 million in Lake Resources, the Hakim-Secord account, on May 14, 1986. But he was only repaid $8 million from the account.

New head takes over SMU

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University's athletic teams should stay in Division I and the Southwest Conference — at least for now, new President A. Kenneth Pye said this morning as he reported for his first day on the job.

But the former Duke University chancellor also said the school must put its athletic department scandals behind it and get about its primary business — teaching and research.

"The principal attack on intercollegiate activities today is that they are out of proportion," Pye told a news conference.

Pye, 55, said that no matter where he goes, he is confronted by athletic questions. "There's a stadium over there, but if you look around you'll see a lot of other buildings around campus."

Pye said he had not consulted with the Methodist bishops who prepared a report on the SMU pay-for-play scandal that cost the school its 1987 football season.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association slapped SMU with its strictest sanction, the "death penalty," for paying football players out of a booster slush fund while the university was on probation for similar violations. The NCAA Division I school voluntarily dropped football in 1988.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox is seeking the bishops' files gathered during their investigation into the scandal, but a spokesman for the group said members would not release the information.

Crash

one of the bridges and wreckage was strewn a half mile on Middlebelt Road, he said.

Other wreckage landed on I-94, a six-lane east-west freeway north of the airport. The highway links Detroit and Chicago and is often crowded Sunday nights with motorists returning from the western part of the state.

A morgue was set up at the airport, McNamara said.

Aboard the plane were 14 passengers, including two infants being held on laps, and six crew members, said Bob Gibbons, a Northwest spokesman in Minneapolis.

A motorist and a passenger in the vehicle were killed, said a deputy sheriff who refused to give his name.

Among those injured were a 4-year-old girl and a man believed in his 30s, who were both in critical condition today at the University of Michigan Medical Center in Ann Arbor, said hospital spokeswoman Catherine Cureton.

There were conflicting reports whether the girl had been on the plane.

Jerry Linton, Federal Aviation Administration tower chief, said taped conversations between controllers and Flight 255 crew have not been reviewed. Controllers witnessed the crash but Linton gave no further details.

The jet's "black box," the flight data recorder, has been recovered, officials said.

Probe

numerous developments, owners and executives of at least 23 failed, failing or ailing thrifts, and a variety of Texas attorneys, real estate appraisers and real estate brokers, the newspaper said records revealed.

Texas S&Ls lead the industry nationally in financial losses and failures, and Neuberger said the Texas recession is only partly to blame.

Many regulators say that the state's thrifts were responsible for the temporary insolvency of the FSLIC, the federal agency that insures deposits of up to $100,000 at member banks nationwide.

The Dallas-based task force conducting the investigation includes 20 FBI agents, two assistant U.S. attorneys, four Internal Revenue Service agents, 14 Justice Department lawyers and special prosecutors and at least one federal grand jury. Up to four FHLB board executives will work directly with the task force, Learned said.

Adamski said the investigation is the largest white collar crime probe of its type in U.S. history.

The probe is based on criminal referrals made by the Dallas FHLB, the FBI said.

"The FHLB has identified a number of transactions that border between criminality and gross negligence. You may spend months looking at a certain deal and conclude there is no crime," Learned said.

Rosemary Stewart, director of the FHLB office of enforcement in Washington, said regulators have made several criminal referrals on Texas thrift owners suspected of embezzlement.

Other criminal referrals are based on "land flips" and loans for S&Ls at inflated stock prices, Green said.

A number of vehicles in Pampa recently have been burglarized.

Many of the vehicles were unlocked when burglarized.

Items taken from the vehicles include stereo equipment, radar detectors, purses, cash and jewelry.

Police ask residents to roll up windows and lock doors when leaving their vehicles unattended.

Crime Stoppers of Pampa will pay $500 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for these vehicle burglaries.

If you have information about these burglaries or any other crime, you can report it and remain anonymous by calling 669-2222.

Rewards are available for information about crimes not in this announcement.

The board of directors of Crime Stoppers urges citizen involvement in reporting crimes in our community.

Citizen involvement needed

By BOB HART

Pampa City Manager

Neighborhood Watch was created to obtain citizen involvement in discouraging and preventing residential crime.

Pampa has seen an increase in residential burglaries in the past few months. The Crime Prevention Office of the Pampa Police Department would like to help you establish a Neighborhood Watch in your area.

You may call Officer Kenneth Henson at 665-8431 for more information on the Neighborhood Watch programs that are available to the citizens of Pampa through your police department.

According to the U.S. Fire Administration, smoke detectors decrease your risk of dying in a home fire by as much as 50 percent. The earlier a fire is discovered, the better the chance for survival.

Smoke detectors should be on every level of your home.

Test your detector at least once a month and change the battery once a year. A chirping noise means the detector needs a new battery.

If you need assistance installing your smoke detectors, or if you want a home fire inspection, call the Fire Marshal's office at 665-8431.

today. Last week, a U.S.-operated supertanker, the Texaco Caribbean, hit a mine in the Gulf of Oman.

On Saturday, the 240-ton supply boat Anita, owned by a United Arab Emirates company, was blown out of the water by a mine in the Gulf of Oman. One crewman died, five were missing and five were injured.

Sharpshooters of the United Arab Emirates army detonated two more mines Sunday in the same area, off the Emirates port of Fujairah. At least six other mines were reported found in the past week.

A tanker anchorage in the Gulf of Oman was closed to boats after the Anita sank, and one shipping agent said Sunday the area was "completely empty."

Shipping sources said the mine threat could force the U.S. Navy to find another marshaling site for its next Kuwait-bound convoy, which reportedly sets sail next week. Sources said it will include the 46,723-ton liquefied gas carriers Gas Queen and Gas Princess and the 294,739-ton supertanker Townsend.

Iran has been blamed for laying mines in the region, but it claims the United States planted them. After Iraqi warplanes bombed two oil fields in southwest Iran early Sunday, Iran's Parliament speaker, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said: "We have a mine factory that could make mines like seeds."

In Muscat, Oman, on Sunday, Iran's Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati said Tehran would welcome a visit by the U.N. secretary-general to discuss security in the gulf. Iran has previously criticized the United Nations for not condemning Iraq as the aggressor in the gulf war.

Officials say

Domestic drug problem as large as international

HOUSTON (AP) — The problem of domestic drug production in Texas is as large as that of drugs being smuggled into the country, narcotics officials say.

"If we stopped every ounce of marijuana, cocaine and heroin coming across the border we would still have enough (domestic drugs produced) here to keep everyone quite happy for a very long time," a federal narcotics agent said.

It is a paradox that increased emphasis on international smugglers has fueled the growth of domestic producers, said Cmdr. Mike Scott of the Texas Department of Public Safety's narcotics division.

"We know what problem exists with our border with Mexico. We've put a great amount of resources along the border to try and prevent the influx of drugs of all types. Possibly because of those efforts, there has been a turn to other sources of drugs," he said.

Nearly 40 percent of the total amphetamine and methamphetamine labs seized by federal agents nationwide in 1986 were in Texas. Of the 395 speed labs seized, 156 were in Texas, with California's 131 in second place, a Drug Enforcement Administration report shows.

Officials say the preferred areas for speed labs are rural, with most being found in Central, North and East Texas. In those areas, the odor produced during the manufacturing process doesn't attract much attention and local law enforcement is not as well trained in lab detection. At the same time, however, the producer is near metropolitan supply and distribution areas.

Law officers said speed labs can be found throughout the state and the prevalence is due in part to the ease of buying chemical ingredients.

Rider Scott, general counsel to Gov. Bill Clements, said Texas became a mecca for speed producers because it allowed the unregulated sale of basic chemicals used in the manufacture of speed.

But a law recently passed by the Texas Legislature has changed that, Scott said. Starting Sept. 1, people buying certain chemicals used in the manufacturing process will have to register with the state.

However, the federal agent said California has had such a law and, although it has worked well, drug producers have either found new ingredients or learned to manufacture basic controlled substances from other, non-controlled, chemicals.

One pound of speed brings up to $22,000, Scott said, adding that even a simple lab can produce several pounds a week.

Adding to law officers' concerns over booming speed labs is the knowledge that producers of the stimulant are among the most dangerous in the domestic drug world.

Speed "cooks" have an affinity for exotic weapons, machine guns and explosives, one undercover DPS officer said.

Police have found homemade anti-personnel devices, crude grenades and land mines among the laboratory defenses, the officer said.

An East Texas agent said officers raided one laboratory that was wired to explode with the police inside. The only thing that saved him, he said, was a malfunction in the explosive device.

Connally is looking ahead despite bankruptcy filings

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite his bankruptcy filings two weeks ago, former Gov. John Connally says he is optimistic about the future.

"I can go back to legal work," Connally said. "I can go back to representing people. I can put deals together. I can do a lot of things. You won't see me at a food stamp line... and we're not going to run a telethon and ask for contributions."

A partnership between Connally and former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes filed under Chapter 7 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code; its assets will be liquidated. Connally personally filed under Chapter 11, giving the 70-year-old former three-term governor protection from creditors as he reorganizes his financial affairs.

It was a steep financial fall for the one-time U.S. Treasury secretary and candidate for the Republican presidential nomination.

The two formed Barnes-Connally Investments in July 1981 and soon were involved in about $600 million worth of projects. Many of the developments were in Austin, including an 1,800-acre residential community, but their holdings extended to 15 cities.

"We probably tried to do too much," Connally said recently in an interview from his Austin office. "We built at a time when everything was booming. We thought it would last."

It didn't.

Within a few years, the bottom had fallen out of the real estate market and Barnes and Connally — whose boundless energy and eternal optimism had coaxed millions from bankers and investors — were caught in a financial squeeze.

"We made our share of mistakes," Connally said. "If we had made more prudent moves earlier, maybe we wouldn't have suffered as big losses. The amount might have been less, maybe, but it still would have been the same situation. We built quality projects, but at the wrong time."

Connally joins a long list of prominent Texans, including the Hunt brothers of Dallas and former Dallas Cowboys owner Clint Murchison, who have fallen on tough times.

The partnership was formed a year after Connally's unsuccessful drive for the Republican presidential nomination, during which he spent $12 million and garnered one delegate.

Says Connally, "If the Texas economic expansion had continued for another two years it would be an entirely different story. We'd be rich. We just got in real estate at a time when we were paying as high as 18 percent interest for money and building costs were high. We just got into it at the wrong time."

"We fought it for 15 months, but we couldn't do anything about it," Connally said. "We did everything possible to pay the people we owed."

Outfitters rent rafts to fun-seekers

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — Fun seekers have returned to the Gaudalpe River for rafting activity, but outfitters say the river flow is still too strong for the use of inner tubes.

The rate of water being released from behind Canyon Dam was reduced to 1,500 cubic feet per second during the weekend by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Although the flow rate is slow enough for outfitters along the river near New Braunfels to rent rafts to people, it still is considered too high for inner tubing.

Valorie Luker, a clerk with Whitewater Sports, said this is the first weekend since early June that they have rented out rafts.

She said, however, the river still is moving too swift to rent inner tubes or canoes.

"The rafts are more stable and don't take in as much water as a canoe," she said. "Business has been slower than we had hoped it would be."

Doug Guerrant, manager for Texas Canoe Trails

Inc., said some people were on the river this weekend with their own inner tubes.

"We're not renting them, but there are some people out there with their own," he said Sunday. "We will start renting them when we feel it's not hazardous anymore."

Some of the tubers he saw Sunday were having a hard time staying afloat because of the river's current, Guerrant said.

Joe Hanover, manager of the Gruene River Co., said his company was only providing guided raft tours on the river, and he is advising people to stay off the river on inner tubes.

"Most of them are on private tubes," Hanover said. "We are advising them not to. The water is still a little rough and there have been several incidents of them (inner tubers) hitting the bridge, but no one's been hurt."

Business has been slow this summer because of the swift moving water, outfitters say.

Concert benefits victims of the Saragosa tornado

MANOR (AP) — There were fewer music fans than expected, but organizers said that didn't dampen the spirit of a concert to benefit victims of the May 22 Saragosa tornado.

When Johnny Cash appeared to begin the concert at 10 a.m. Sunday, there were barely 200 people on the grass in front of the stage at the Manor Downs racetrack. When John Anderson started his set at 1:30 p.m., the crowd was around 500.

By the end of the day, there had been a total of about 700 paid spectators and approximately $5,000 was raised for Saragosa, said Cynthia Spencer, a publicist for Waylon Jennings, who helped organize the benefit.

"Waylon will probably have to come up with some of the expenses. We didn't make all of the expenses," she said.

"Something had to be done and if we didn't do it, nobody would have. It might work and it might not, but I would do it again," Jennings said.

"I'm not really worried about it," said organizer and singer-songwriter Tony Joe White. Manor Downs near Austin also served as the site of Willie Nelson's Farm Aid II concert last summer, which was attended by 40,000.

Cash said that despite the few fans, "it was really a good kickoff anyway."

"It's the thing to do. The American people have got to help their own. It seems like the American government has kind of forgotten about some people," Cash said.

Five of the 183 survivors of the tornado that leveled the small West Texas town made the trip here and were helping move and set up equipment throughout the day.

"We are just thankful that the performers, especially Mr. White and Mr. Jennings, came out to help us," said Felipe Lopez, one of the five. "We are helping set up just to say thank you to everyone involved."

Lopez said the town of Saragosa is in the initial stages of rebuilding, but is still in desperate need of supplies such as lumber and cement.

Johnny Rodriguez, Neil Young, Jessi Colter and Rex Allen Jr. also performed at the concert. Tickets were $15 apiece. Canned goods and other contributions were welcome.

Many people came to see the Los Angeles band Los Lobos, but were disappointed after the group cancelled.

"We kind of centered the show around them because they're so hot right now," said Jennings. "And since they pulled out that hurt us a little bit, but we'll have to pick up and move on."

'Dr.' Cathy's college survival guide

College is a crazy world of new experiences, ambiguous values and hard-to-spell words. But you need not go alone. As a public service, I am offering you this guide to survival on campus.

This is not a source of all truth and wisdom — you should have already gotten one of those from The Gideons. Nor is it advice on how to pick up guys — that, I'm still trying to figure out.

This is just some tips on how to survive that first year without Mom and Dad.

Roommates: You can't live with 'em and the housing people won't let you live without 'em.

My most memorable roommate was an affectionate 300-pound chain-smoking reformed sinner whom I shall call Bathsheba. She had the gift of greeting people from across campus, belting out a big "HELLO" and bear-hugging them into oblivion. She liked to smoke Cools and lounge around in her underwear and Emeraude perfume. And she sweated a lot.

And Bathsheba loved her gospel music played loud and late on my stereo. While I tried to get to sleep, she used to sit at her desk, wave her arms and clap to the tunes of the Happy Goodman Family (not to be confused with the blues group, the Sad Goodman Family).

But, being a good Presbyterian, I tried to keep a good witness and be tolerant. Besides, I had trouble finding a place where I could smack her and make an impact.

No matter who it is, even a high school buddy, a college roommate will test everything you ever learned about "love one another."

Music: No doubt, you will soon find a favorite country or rock radio station at your college. But search your radio dial for a classical and jazz station, too. This will not only broaden your appreciation of good music, it may also improve your studying. People seem to concentrate better when they are calmed by some soft instrumental music. Vocal music can be distracting.

The "New Age" music, which claims to be used to induce meditation, is nice if you can brush aside its alleged mystical influence. Some of the stuff just puts me to sleep.

IMPORTANT REMINDER: Don't forget your record of Hungarian folk dances.

The people in the room next to you are party animals. They play their stereo loud and late on the eve of your big exam. It is not the Happy Goodman Family. It is Megadeath. The following courses of action only make matters worse: telling the dorm mother, shooting them, writing a kind note telling them to please be considerate of others.

This works: on Sunday morning, when they are hung over and you are getting ready for church, crank up your stereo and play that Hungarian music loud, boys. If you have no Hungarian folk dance record, a copy of Florence Henderson's Greatest Hits will suffice.

Off Beat

Cathy
Spaulding

Dorm food: Remember the sumptuous steak you had for college preview day, the one served by the pretty lady? Forget it.

Once the food service director has you in his clutches, he'll replace the steak with mystery meat and jello muffins. It will be served by a tobacco-spitting crone whose only vocabulary is "fisherliver."

Humanist professors: People in my college church group always complained about their philosophy teacher. He kept questioning their faith, and they were convinced he would burn in Hell.

Funny thing, though, the more their faith was tested, the stronger it got.

If you have a good thing going with your faith, stick with it; it will carry you through tough times.

And some professors maybe burn in Hell for the garbage they teach. In sociology, we had this stupid "role-play" game in which we played survivors of a nuclear war and had to decide which one of us should live or die. Dumb.

But don't condemn or be closed to "alien" ideas or cultures. Some ideas labeled as "Humanist" or "Bhuddist" may also be Christian values. Weed the wheat from the chaff.

Your most valuable lessons may not be in the classroom or the lab. It may be through loving fellowship in a campus church group.

I know they're "unpopular" and are not likely to sponsor any keg parties. But ministries like the Neuman Club, the Wesley Foundation, Chi Alpha and the Baptist Student Union have helped hundreds of students pull through college. For some of my friends, such places gave them an artistic or social outlet they could not find in a more formal and selective setting. For others, campus ministries saved their lives.

Check out the campus ministries and let yourself grow.

So, there you have it. True, some thoughts were a bit off-the-wall. But, hey, so is life.

Good luck and keep in touch.

Bombing raid put Gadhafi into cage

Has anyone noticed that it's a bit less noisy along the northern coast of Africa these days?

Before April of last year, much of the world trembled at the awful words "Moammar Gadhafi." The Libyan dictator smirked as he had bombs planted on planes, American servicemen killed, innocent civilians murdered. Then, President Reagan seemed to lose his temper and said, "Enough!"

Eighteen American F-111 warplanes, supported by Navy A-6 attack jets from carriers in the Mediterranean, left England under cover of darkness, flew 2,800 miles and dropped 100 tons of angry bombs on Tripoli. Immediately after the April 15 raid, Libyans took to the streets and screamed: "You must tell Reagan we are not afraid to fight and we will fight ... Fight on, fight on. We will not forget. Punish America. Bomb them."

Sixteen months have passed, and these shouts have faded. In these 16 months, perhaps Libyans have matured. Maybe they have climbed down from the giddy heights of pre-raid days, when their swaggering dictator had so much of the world terrorized, and now recognize that sometimes people will fight back.

President Reagan, along with most of his countrymen, simply got fed up that April. After months of turning the other cheek, Reagan decided to respond to evidence that Libya was involved in the April 5 bombing of a West German discotheque and teach a bully that crime does not pay.

Our president was almost alone that April. Of our allies, only Britain's Margaret Thatcher gave us help in the middle-of-the-night raid. Remember France? Remember Spain? Our pilots had to fly thousands of extra miles because these "allies" refused our request to fly over their territory. They feared retaliation from the bully to the south.

The president took punches from many corners for his action:

- Former President Jimmy Carter was anguished at the loss of "innocent lives."
- Former Attorney General Ramsey Clark filed claims on behalf of victims of the "illegal bombing of Libya."
- Egypt expressed "alarm and resentment" at the attack.
- East Germany said the raid threatened to spread into World War III.
- West Germany Chancellor Helmut Kohl warned, "We have always said a violent solution will not be successful."

But the rhetoric subsided, and the terrible threats ceased. Today, France and Spain, along with the United States, Britain and the rest of the world, are enjoying a respite from Libyan-sponsored killings and bombings. And Britain and the U.S. survived — the Washington Monument has not been toppled; Thatcher is still alive.

No one can cite a major terrorist act since the raid that points to Gadhafi as the culprit.

The danger of a terrorist's retaliation always exists, but right now it appears that some of the saner elements in Libya have put Gadhafi back into his cage.

Taxpayers need bill of rights

WASHINGTON — In the current dispute between Sen. David Pryor and the Internal Revenue Service, both sides make some good points. The Arkansas Democrat is pushing his "Omnibus Taxpayers' Bill of Rights." The IRS opposes the bill. The senator has the better case. With certain modifications his bill ought to be resoundingly approved.

Pryor is outraged, with good reason, at the zealotry, the rapaciousness and the unfairness of a few IRS agents. His Senate hearings have abundantly documented his charges against the agency. The horror stories spelled out before the Finance Committee might have been written by Franz Kafka.

Consider, for example, what the IRS did to Thomas L. Treadway of Pipersville, Pa. The agency destroyed him. Until the summer of 1982, Treadway had a successful trash management business. Then the IRS sent him assessment notices for $247,000. Not content with striking at Treadway, the IRS — without a word of warning — also seized $22,000 from the bank account of his longtime companion Shirley Lojeski. The theory was that he was diverting assets to her.

The charge never was proved. Lojeski couldn't maintain her horse farm because she could not buy feed. She was threatened with foreclosure for inability to make mortgage payments. And she was an innocent bystander!

For one solid year, the IRS put Treadway and Lojeski through a nightmare. Then, on Sept. 23, 1983, an IRS appeals officer found the entire $247,000 assessment unwarranted. Four months later Lojeski finally got her money back, but by that time she and Treadway had run up $75,000 in legal and accounting fees. They sued the IRS agents for violation of their Fourth and Fifth

James J. Kilpatrick

Amendment rights. They won in a U.S. District Court but lost on appeal through a bizarre legalism: They had "failed to show any detrimental reliance on the requirement that IRS regional counsel approve the filing of notices of lien and levy." Whatever that means.

Treadway's case is one of dozens that Pryor has put on the record. Since his hearings began in April, corroborating evidence of IRS abuses has piled up. Just last month the IRS seized the $10.35 bank account of a 12-year-old boy because his parents missed a payment on an overdue tax bill. How can such arrogant nonsense be defended?

The Arkansas senator now has 26 co-sponsors on his bipartisan "bill of rights." His measure would require the IRS to give every taxpayer, at the time an audit begins, a "simple, comprehensive and non-technical statement" of the taxpayer's rights and obligations. What's wrong with that? The bill would give taxpayers a right to make recordings of such interviews. Why not? Pryor would give the General Accounting Office new authority to review "the accuracy and consistency" of any advice the IRS offers to taxpayers. His bill would require the IRS to make installment payment plans available to small taxpayers who are found to owe the government money. Surely this is reasonable.

Pryor has one other provision that the IRS opposes. He learned that in some field offices of the service, agents are evaluated by the number of seizures, liens and deficiency assessments they have ordered. IRS Commissioner Lawrence Gibbs says such evaluations are in violation of long-standing policy. Well, then, why not write the policy into law? Gibbs contends that he can correct abuses internally, and to his credit, as Pryor has emphasized, Gibbs has done much toward enforcing policies of courtesy and fairness.

In opposing Pryor's bill, Gibbs does not deny the horror stories. He makes the point that when 100 million tax returns have to be processed every year, some mistakes are bound to be made. Not all taxpayers are honest; a disarming number will cheat the government whenever they feel they can get away with it. Some of the small-business men who complain so pathetically of IRS harassment are garden-variety crooks: They have withheld income taxes and Social Security taxes from their employees and have used the money for their own business purposes. It is easy to scorn the IRS agents who confiscated Shirley Lojeski's bank account, but we ought to have equal contempt for bums who break the law.

One aspect of Pryor's bill is troublesome. He would shift the burden of proof in cases of tax evasion. It is now up to the taxpayer to prove the honesty of his return. The bill would require the IRS to prove something wrong. Such a change might tempt many taxpayers to stop keeping accurate records. The provision needs careful thought. Otherwise this "bill of rights" is sound. It should have been adopted long ago.

Little news in foreign reports

News organizations, streamlining, are shrinking their staff of overseas correspondents.

Entire news bureaus overseas are being closed.

Television networks had become especially overfat in trying to maintain correspondents and crews in every corner of the planet.

You will not notice the change, and you will not be denied anything you have a "right to know" from anywhere.

On the contrary, networks have frequently felt obligated to use their overseas people even when the day's news might have dictated other priorities.

Stateside, I can cover and dismiss: Home-made bombs exploded harmlessly near the American Embassy in Rome today. So far nobody claims blame.

But if I am going to use my foreign correspondents in Rome, they will have to justify at least 60 seconds worth of prose and pictures covering this "nothing story."

In the days when I was doing my own legwork — chasing elections and disasters and wars wherever ...

Paul Harvey

I was in Britain covering one of Churchill's election campaigns in 1948.

Coincidentally with my time there, Queen Elizabeth and her Prince were in the Mediterranean on holiday, aboard the royal yacht anchored off Malta.

I went on the air from London to announce that the Queen of England was watching her calendar — expecting a baby within seven months.

The report was widely quoted stateside. And seven months later the royal family was receiving congratulations on the birth of Prince Charles, and Paul Harvey was receiving congratulations from stateside editors on his perceptivity.

Some were convinced that I must have been peeping through a bedroom window on Malta to be able to anticipate a royal birth by seven months.

The fact is that I knew about the Queen's pregnancy before I ever left the United States.

A doctor friend, William Dieckman, was also a friend of the royal family physician. It was thus I learned.

I mention this further to dilute the mystique of the foreign correspondent. Had the world known I got my information from Chicago it might never have been accepted as credible.

But because I was "over there" my words were construed as gospel.

Said quite bluntly — TV networks have little to offer their affiliate stations unless they can display their newpeople "at the source," against a background of the London Bridge or the Taj Mahal. They still need you to believe that this lends "authenticity" to whatever is being said.

Democrats could shed their wimpy image

By Ben Wattenberg

Now is the time for all good Democrats to come to the aid of their party by coming to the aid of democracy. If Democrats do this, they will take a giant step toward shedding their wimpy image on foreign policy and advance the possibility of their capturing the White House.

The summit meeting of the five Central American presidents has put forth a historic, and fuzzy, plan for peace. In theory, it will bring about stability and democracy in Nicaragua and elsewhere.

But two things haven't changed: The future of the region is still in the hands of the U.S. Congress, and Democrats are in control of Congress.

The situation is this: The Central American presidents have agreed to a revolutionary idea — that only democracy yields peace. They have agreed that democratization in Nicaragua is to be brought about simultaneously with a cease-fire in place and then a demobilization of the contras as the contras move into a civilian political role in Nicaragua.

This is tricky. What is the evidence of democracy? No communist government has subjected itself to free elections. The Sandinistas will likely try to dither: making small cosmetic steps, claiming the Americans aren't cooperating, playing a waiting game until Ronald Reagan leaves office, hoping always to demoralize and do away with the contras.

The plan involves a process, not an event. It will test the nature of the Democratic Party in Congress, about 75 percent of whom have been against contra aid, but almost all of whom have said they also disapprove of the Sandinistas. The test will be whether the Democrats use the peace process as a way to try to get rid of the contras or as a way to try to bring about democracy.

A small but influential part of the Democratic Party will use the process to focus on Reagan. They will say he lacks good faith and is using the process to discredit the Sandinistas. They believe Reagan is the problem, not the Soviet-backed communists in Managua.

If the mainstream of the Democratic Party in Congress adopts this posture, they will bring down upon their heads the three little words that have hurt them most: "Blame America First." That's what Jeane Kirkpatrick said characterized the 1984 "San Francisco Democrats." There were tens of millions of Americans nodding their heads in agreement when she said it.

But the Democrats can try another strategy: take the lead in spotlighting Sandinista behavior. There are serious moves the Sandinistas can make to show that they mean to move toward democracy.

Will the Sandinistas free the 3,000 to 6,000 political prisoners they are holding and torturing? Estimates by human rights groups lead observers to believe there are more political prisoners per capita in Nicaragua than in any other place in the world.

Will the Sandinistas allow the opposition newspaper La Prensa to publish uncensored?

Will the Sandinistas allow Radio

Catolica to go on the air again so that Nicaraguans can again hear from their cardinal, Obando y Bravo?

Will the Sandinistas stop the rigged secret "people's trials" used to imprison opponents of the regime?

If only Republicans ask these questions, it will have little impact. The Sandinistas know that Reaganists oppose them. But if Democrats press the issues of democratization, it can have real effect. If they ask tough questions and get wrong answers, the Sandinistas must worry that the peace process may stall and that some Democrats, convinced of communist insincerity, will vote for contra aid. If the Congress united on this issue, the Sandinistas would be finished, and they know it.

So: Only the Democrats can bring democracy to Central America. It will be good for the world and good for Democrats.

Presidential hopefuls keep contributions secret

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jesse Jackson and Pat Robertson are raising large sums of money as they head toward the 1988 presidential race, but unlike other White House hopefuls, they aren't making public any financial details.

The two say their secrecy is legal under the "testing the waters" provisions of election law, which requires disclosure of finances only when a person is an actual candidate for president, but not while the person is exploring whether to run.

Robertson claims to have raised more than $8 million during his exploratory phase, far more than all but one of the acknowledged candidates who have filed disclosure reports with the Federal Election Commission. Jackson says he has raised and spent nearly $600,000 and expects two large fund-raising events to bring his total to $1 million by September.

Election law allows exploratory activity without financial disclosure, but not to amass funds during this time to be spent after the person becomes a candidate.

The law does not tell candidates how much exploratory efforts should cost or how testing the waters should be conducted, said FEC spokesman Fred Eiland.

The political activity of both Robertson and Jackson compares to that of the avowed candidates: nearly full-time travel, meetings with supporters and speeches at state party conventions and forums with other candidates.

Of the dozen politicians who have official campaign committees reporting to the FEC, Vice President George Bush has raised the most money: $9.4 million. On the Democratic side, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis leads with more than $4.6 million.

Bush is the only one with more money than Robertson claims, a sum that might raise questions about Robertson's status as a candidate.

Most candidates have raised more than Jackson, but his participation in a July 1 televised debate with six other Democrats could be an indication that he, too, is beyond the exploratory stage.

Jackson's activities "indicate that he is clearly exploring," said his spokesman Frank Watkins. He said Jackson will announce his intentions in mid-September.

Robertson, who says he wants to collect 3 million signatures of support before announcing in September whether he will run, admits he's putting off his disclosure until the last minute.

"There's absolutely no law that says I should do it otherwise just for the convenience of Pete du Pont or George Bush or anyone else so they can look at my donors and call them and give them trouble," he said. "So the longer you can put that off, the better you are."

The Rev. Charles Bergstrom, chairman of the liberal activist group People for the American Way, disagreed, and said Robertson should voluntarily disclose finances of his massive Christian Broadcasting Network.

Exploratory committee finances must be disclosed when the committee becomes the candidate's official campaign organization.

The law says testing the waters may include such activity as conducting polls, telephone calls and travel to determine the feasibility of a candidacy.

But, in answer to a query from 1984 Democratic candidate Reubin Askew, the FEC said it would consider the following activities likely to be crossing the boundaries into candidacy: hiring public relations people to arrange speaking engagements and get the candidate's articles and speeches published; and publishing biographical brochures to be distributed at speaking engagements.

The FEC is investigating a complaint filed against Jackson for his fund-raising practices. It was filed by Anthony Martin-Trigona, a Connecticut man who has told the FEC he is running for president in 1988.

77-year-old lifeguard captain, still rules his beach

SEASIDE HEIGHTS, N.J. (AP) — After 57 summers with a whistle around his neck and sand on his toes, "Captain" John Boyd scowls at the notion that lifeguards are mindless hulks who ogle at bikini-clad girls on the beach.

"My guys know that when action comes, it's life or death out there," the 77-year-old Boyd said. "It's not as fun as you think. It's a great responsibility."

Boyd removed a well-chewed cigar from his mouth and grudgingly acknowledged that a good tan and lots of adoring girls are "added attractions."

With binoculars in hand and a white captain's hat on his white hair, the muscular Boyd scans the sand and surveys the water. But he watches for more than foundering swimmers or menacing sharks.

If Boyd's eyes pass over a kissing couple getting a little too passionate for his "family beach," he turns on his public address system and lowers his voice to a growl — "his God voice," said lifeguard Richard Phillips.

"Promiscuous necking will not be tolerated on this beach," Boyd booms into the microphone.

"Four thousand people always get up and look around after I do that," he says. "The Captain," as he is called. "And the offending couple dives under the blanket."

Lost children are routine. With nothing but a never-empty coffee pot in his office, he'll take the weeping child to a boardwalk snack bar for ice cream. "We never have any left over here at the end of the day," he said.

In his years as boss of the beach, Boyd said, Seaside Heights never has seen a drowning and only "one or two" people have needed mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

His days of removing boardwalk splinters are gone, though, because of the risk of infections and possible lawsuits. "We used to take 'em out by the dozens," he said.

Boyd's most renowned announcement comes at 5:30 p.m., when the beach closes.

"Clear the water. Clear the water. Beaches are closed for the day. If a life is lost, it may be one of yours. Drive safely. Come back soon. God bless America. Pack it up."

The words rarely change from day to day, Phillips said.

Boyd has been on the beach in Seaside Heights almost every summer of his life, seven days a week, except for his years in the Navy during World War II.

Even there, the military drew upon his lifeguard background, putting him in charge of water survival training.

In the winters before he retired, Boyd, the father of two children, taught physical education at Atlantic City High School.

Boyd keeps watch over beach.

Soviets still depict news about U.S. in a harsh light

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet media may be singing a different tune on internal matters, but they are still playing harsh melodies about America including what U.S. officials call "disinformation."

The intent is to tarnish the U.S. image abroad, according to Soviet defectors once involved in the campaign. American officials have mounted an international campaign of their own to rebut the charges.

Among recent Soviet media reports, all denied by U.S. officials, were that:

—The Defense Department developed the AIDS virus;

—The CIA was behind the suicide of 914 Americans at Jonestown;

—The Pentagon ousted President Nixon;

—The assassins of Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi "received their ideological inspiration from the CIA;"

—Maine schoolgirl Samantha Smith's letters and visits to Soviet leaders led U.S. intelligence agencies to murder her.

Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev's policy of allowing more internal criticism in official Soviet media "seems to be having no effect on Soviet international behavior," said Richard Perle, formerly deputy defense secretary and now a fellow at the conservative American Enterprise Institute.

Soviet defector Ilya Dzirkevlov testified at a trial in London this year that the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee decided in 1959-60 "to increase our ideological influence in the West." He said that involved "active measures" — planting fabricated or distorted stories in foreign media.

Herb Romerstein, a U.S. Information Agency specialist on such Soviet activity, said, "We have not noticed any reduction in the amount or the intensity of Soviet disinformation" since Gorbachev rose to power in March 1985.

Once the reports appear in the foreign press, they are picked up by the state-run Soviet media, and fed abroad again by official radio stations and news agencies, according to U.S. officials and defectors such as Dzirkevlov Stanislav Levchenko, who worked for the KGB disinformation campaign.

The Central Committee secretariat sets the goals of disinformation, and leaves the means to the KGB, according to Dzirkevlov and Levchenko.

The USIA, said Romerstein, coordinates efforts by U.S. diplomats abroad to monitor Soviet disinformation, and to counter it through statements either to foreign journalists abroad or by government spokesmen in Washington.

Among the most spectacular Soviet fabrications was the accusation that U.S. Army scientists developed the virus responsible for AIDS, the acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"Quite simply, these charges are untrue," said Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman. "Yet the story keeps going."

Vermont opens rural shelter for homeless

COVENTRY, Vt. (AP) — What looks like a farmhouse amid the cornfields here is actually a harbinger of an often invisible problem, say social workers who have turned the house into Vermont's first shelter for the rural homeless.

The four-bedroom home is ready to begin accepting families for seven to 30 days of shelter, say workers with North East Kingdom Community Action Inc., which finished renovating the colonial blue house earlier this month.

The agency says it is dealing with an increasing number of rural homeless people, including battered women with children, farmhands and their families and the working and welfare poor.

Arms sales to Saudis is planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Reagan administration plan to sell 1,600 anti-tank missiles to Saudi Arabia, withdrawn earlier this year in the face of congressional opposition, will be resubmitted to lawmakers when they return from their summer recess, The Washington Post reported today.

The Maverick missiles will be included in a proposed $1 billion arms sale to the Saudis, the newspaper said, quoting sources familiar with the plan.

Administration officials had said in July that the Maverick request would be resubmitted within a few months. The Post said the administration is expected to notify Congress shortly after it returns from its summer recess on Sept. 9.

In addition to the Maverick missiles, the package would include 14 of the latest F-15 jet fighter planes and improvements for earlier-model F-15s and other U.S. weaponry already in Saudi stockpiles, the Post reported.

The administration withdrew a notification of sale for the Maverick deal in June when congressional opposition stiffened.

Fringe fever hits Edinburgh

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — The Fringe, the freewheeling sideshow to Edinburgh's staid theater festival, has drawn 1,000 plays to Scotland, from speeded-up Shakespeare to a work set in one of the city's laundry rooms.

Theater troupes from Malibu to Mexico, from New Zealand to New York, have descended on the Scottish capital, taking over schools, street corners and even church crypts to mount their productions.

The Fringe — which started as an amateur showcase in tandem with the professional Edinburgh International Festival — has even spawned a counterpart of its own this year. Organizers of the "Fringe Fringe" maintain the original has become too bureaucratic, and too expensive to join.

Few productions in the Fringe make money or, for that matter, break even. But participants say the attraction of the cultural carnival is undimmed.

"It's been a dream of mine to come to the Fringe," said actor D. Scott Glasser, 38, whose play, "Minnesota," presented by that state's Actors Theater of St. Paul, is one of 1,005 shows from 482 companies vying for audiences at the 41st annual Fringe.

"It can only help with our image back in the States in that we're seen within a world context where we can share our work," Glasser said.

Through Aug. 29, more than 6,000 performers are converging on the streets where actors Dudley Moore and Derek Jacobi began their careers. Their shows? Everything from Indian classical dance and send-ups of Shakespeare to a widely acclaimed French play, "Le Lavoir" ("The Wash-House"), performed inside an authentic old laundry room west of the city center.

Michael Coveney in The Financial Times said that "Le Lavoir," a hit at last summer's Avignon Festival in France, showed the Fringe rising "magnificently" to match the standards of the official festival.

But Fringe standards vary. "I've been shocked at how abysmal some shows can be," said Adam Long, a performer with the Reduced Shakespeare Company, a California-based troupe that condenses the Bard's 37 plays into a knockabout 90 minutes.

"It comes down to where you don't want to go see anything," Long said.

But the Fringe has never billed itself as a clearing-house for quality. Any company is welcome to take part, provided it can meet the costs of a venue (about $800 a week) and a listing in the Fringe booklet (about $300).

"People come at their own risk, at their own expense, under their own steam," said Mhairi McKenzie-Robinson, 27, chief administrator of the Fringe.

She dismissed the new "Fringe Fringe," saying "In terms of what they're offering, it's nothing new."

"It's not cheap to come to the Fringe," she added.

Sometimes it's not easy, either. This year, for the first time, the British government required work permits for all the foreign participants outside the European Economic Community. In the past, Fringe participants were advised to enter Britain as tourists.

100th murder in area troubled by clan war

CITTANOVA, Italy (AP) — Police say a 22-year-old man was killed by several shotgun blasts in the 100th murder this year in the province of Reggio di Calabria, where a clan war has dragged on for 20 years.

Investigators said Urbano Deraco appeared to be the latest victim in a feud between rival factions of the 'ndrangheta, or Calabrian Mafia, in the province at the southern tip of the Italian boot.

Investigators said Deraco had been shot several times with a shotgun, probably Saturday evening.

Police believe the murder is the latest in a feud over control of drug traffic, extortion rackets and other organized crime.

At least one worker killed in strike clash

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — One black worker was killed and two were injured in fighting between supporters and opponents of a strike at the government's collieries and liquid fuel plants, the company said today.

A spokesman for the Chemical Workers Industrial Union said it had heard two men were dead, but neither the union nor management at the South African Coal, Oil and Gas Corp., or SASOL, could say which side had suffered the casualties.

A strike by up to 15,000 chemical workers and miners was scheduled today at the mines and coal-to-oil plants near Secunda, east of Johannesburg, but SASOL spokesman Jan Krynauw said everyone had gone to work. He announced several hours later the violence that had occurred Sunday after the union held meetings "to convince workers to strike."

The strike at Secunda was called to demand two paid holidays of significance to blacks, but the National Union of Mineworkers believed the action was in sympathy with their national wage and benefits strike against the country's major industry.

In a new development in that strike, the country's largest mining house and the leader of the black mineworkers union agreed to hold talks today on ways to curb violence in the eight-day-old walkout.

The chemical workers are demanding May 1, International Workers Day, and June 16, anniversary of the 1976 Soweto riots, as holidays. Their union said management had "moved swiftly" Sunday night to block the strike.

Krynauw denied the allegation, and said the union was trying to strongarm workers to strike.

The National Union of Mineworkers, in the eighth day of its strike against two-thirds of South Africa's biggest gold and coal mines, accepted an invitation to meet this afternoon with the Anglo American Corp., the country's largest gold producer.

Cyril Ramaphosa, general secretary of the union, told a news conference Sunday that he was pleased the company had "come to its senses."

However, he reiterated the union's claim that mine owners sought to smash the strike with police help, and directed members to defend themselves against "barbaric acts" by police and mine guards.

He said about 240 union members had been injured and 200 strikers had been arrested since the job action, the nation's largest legal strike ever, began Aug. 9.

London homeless face eviction

LONDON (AP) — Homeless people face eviction from their makeshift shelters of cardboard boxes, bags and newspapers under the railway bridge at Charing Cross in London, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported today.

The shelters, known as "cardboard city," will be cleared away by Westminster Council so that shops and offices can be built in the area, the BBC said.

Since World War II, men and women have slept on the sidewalks under the bridge.

The Salvation Army estimates 10,000 people are homeless in London.

"There is nowhere for these people to go — our hostels are full," said Michael Carroll of the St. Mungo Housing Trust, which runs shelters for the homeless.

Westminster Council has said it will provide accommodation for homeless people who have registered with local authorities.

Golf collectibles have gone professional

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Golf, golfing equipment and clothing have changed enough in the past 400 years to make it possible to collect many golf-related items.

Clubs, golf balls, programs from tournaments, pictures, prints, porcelains decorated with golfers and many other antiques can be found. The price is influenced by rarity and the fame of the artist portraying the golfer.

Otto Poertzel was a prominent German sculptor born in 1876 who made many Art Deco bronze figures in the 1920s. Some had ivory heads and hands. A few were even silver-plated.

One attractive figure was of a man with the typical knickers, knee socks and cap worn by the well-dressed golfer. It is the type of gold collectible that brings top prices.

Q. Could I find old safety razors if I want to collect them?

A. The first safety razor was patented in 1885 by Andrew Partridge of Springfield, Mass. King Gillette made his razor by 1903.

Other early companies were the Collins Safety Razor Company of Chicago (c.1910-1930), the Never-Fail Company (1909-1919), Hebrand Company (1881-?), Bedford (1910-1925), Rhodes Razor, Shake Sharp, Curvit, Bates, Arnold Triplex Secrest, Gem, Ever-Ready by American Safety Razor Company, Khaki Razor (c.1915), King Oscillation Razor, Keen Kutter, Kriss Kross and the Rolls.

Q. When was the digital clock first made?

A. Clock designers began making very simple modern clocks in the 1920s. The cases became very angular. Wooden cases of mahogany were ignored, and chromium plated and enameled cases came into fashion.

The numerals were indicated

Antiques

by plain lines or small chromium plated balls. The digital clock presented designers with a new type of mechanism plus many other problems.

Kem Weber designed many clocks in 1933 for Lawson Time Inc. His digital clock featured two small windows for the hour and the minutes. This meant that the clock could be made in any shape.

These clocks are now considered examples of the best of the American Deco designs. Read "American Art Deco" by Alistair Duncan (Abrams, $49.50) to learn more about the industrial changes and designs of the period.

Q. We have the four pictures of the Northern Tissue girls. Friends say the pictures are worth $400 each. Is that a rumor?

A. The pictures were offered as a premium by Northern Tissue several times in the last 20 years. They are interesting but not worth $400. It is a rumor.

Q. How was a tea caddy used?

A. The tea caddy is a small ornamental box used to hold tea leaves. Tea purchased in Malaya in 1704 was measured by the "kati," which was about 1 1/3rd pounds.

Tea became very popular in the 18th century, and cabinetmakers began making boxes the proper size to hold a "kati" of tea. The box was soon called a tea caddy. It was later called a tea caddy.

TIP: Don't send your antique white linen or cotton items out to be dry cleaned. The chemicals will yellow the fabric. Hand wash them in soap, nonchlorine bleach and tepid water. Be sure to rinse until all soap is removed.

This Otto Poertzel bronze of a golfer is 10 inches high. It was made of silver-plated bronze and ivory for the hands, head and golf ball.

To fill in your set of flatware or goblets, send for a copy of the Kovels' booklet, "China, Crystal and Silver Matching Services." Send $1 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Kovels, P.O. Box 22900, Beachwood, Ohio 44122.

Flower-decorated dishes marked "Manhattan, American Limoges Sebring" were mentioned in the column last month. Viktor Schrekengost, the artist who designed the pattern, wrote to tell us more. He designed Manhattan Shape in 1935 and The Flower Shop pattern in 1936. It was one of the most popular patterns on the American market. There were 38 American and eight European and Japanese copies made.

CURRENT PRICES

(Current prices are recorded from antique shows, sales, flea markets and auctions throughout the United States. These prices vary in different locations because of the conditions of the economy.)

Brass tray, British Jubilee, profiles of king and queen, 1935, 11 inches, $28.

Toy airplane, cast-iron, Hubley, single engine, 5-inch wing, $65.

Little Lulu clothespins on original card, $80.

Navaho rug, red, gray, black, natural hand-carded wool, c.1940, 29x50 inches, $150.

Coin-operated machine, Jergens Lotion dispenser, 1 cent, $175.

Hawkes cut glass table lamp, Corning, N.Y., bulbous domed shade, bulbous baluster-form pedestal, signed, early 20th century, 17 1/2 inches, $200.

Doll, Charles McCarthy, composition, ventriloquist, original clothes, 22 1/2 inches, $265.

Empire stand, mahogany, flame veneer, floral and foliage carved pilasters, turned feet, base shelf, two dovetailed drawers, brass ring pulls, 28 1/2x23 1/2x17 1/2 inches, $300.

Buffalo Pottery Deldare humididor, Ye Lion Inn, octagonal, signed, 7 1/2x6 1/2 inches, $635.

Fraktur, pen, ink and watercolor, stylized floral design, birds, men and dogs, "Rebecca Snyder," laid paper with red, yellow, blue, green and brown, old black frame, 8 1/2x9 1/2 inches, $3,700.

Create a home that people will want to buy

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Last week's column focused on an overview of strategies to consider when selling your home. Today, let's take it just a little further as we explore some specific pointers for creating a superior exterior and interior package.

To figure out where to put your money, try to look at your home with a skeptical eye, as a prospective buyer might. You may want to ask for an objective critique from a friend or the real estate agent with whom you plan to list the house. In other words, evaluate your product.

Research shows that the entryway and front of the house has the most significant impact in attracting a potential buyer. Regardless of how pretty or nice the house may be inside, it may go unseen unless the buyer is attracted to what he or she sees from curb side.

The first impression is indelible. It often pays to focus most of the attention on the exterior of the house.

If funds for fix-ups are limited and you are going to sell, it can be more effective to concentrate efforts on the front of the house. Exterior improvements need not be expensive to be effective.

Trimming shrubbery and planting flowers can dramatically transform the exterior appearance of a home if properly done. Foundation plantings hide the house's foundation.

Accent plants of a different color should be arranged to appear three-dimensional and abundant. Yellow flowers best accentuate a white house from the curb, and white flowers work best against homes of other colors.

A small home can be made to appear larger by painting the front door the same color as the body of the house.

Where the home has been well

Homemakers' News

maintained, sprucing up for resale can mean "cosmetic" type improvements that will enhance buyer interest. If maintenance has been neglected, preparation for resale will be much more costly.

Another crucial point comes when the prospective buyer takes his first step into your home. Because his impression of your home's living space will be shaped by what greets him in the front foyer or hallway, it is important that he find the area tidy and the flooring in good condition.

If the carpeting is stained or worn, clean it, replace it or remove it to expose a hardwood floor. To make a room appear more spacious, consider eliminating excessive knickknacks from tabletops or shelves and removing some artwork and other wall decorations. You want to show how spacious the room is, not how you use that space. The buyer should be able to envision his own belongings in the room.

Window treatments are important and should not detract from the impression you are trying to create. Basically they should command little or no attention. Some window treatments that accomplish this include louvered shutters, window shades and miniblinds.

Carpeting is still expected in bedroom areas, but many buyers consider hardwood flooring in dining, living and family areas a plus. Many older homes have carpeting covering lovely hardwood floors.

New homes today are equipped with ceiling fans, so if you are preparing an existing home for the market, consider adding this feature.

The ultimate look to achieve is one of a clean, uncluttered home. A home looks more spacious if excess furniture and paraphernalia are cleared out. Closets and cabinets should be neatly arranged to create a feeling of adequate storage space.

Other improvements such as painting, redecorating and major repairs should be considered in terms of time and expense versus benefits. Cleaning, polishing and small repairs may be time-consuming but not costly, and could pay off in selling a home. Kitchens and master bedrooms are generally considered the more influential rooms in determining the outcome of a home sale. "Newness" is almost always viewed as a positive characteristic.

Ample cabinet and counter space is important. Color can be the most cost-effective and least expensive packaging tool for suggesting newness. Quality light fixtures and bright lighting can make the kitchen or bath seem more appealing and more valuable. Eliminate clutter and infrequently used appliances from countertops.

By carefully packaging your home for sale rather than just putting it on the market, you can maximize your return on your investment. For more information on home improvements, contact your Gray County Extension Office.

Outcry over rape case changes law

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter in your column from "Outraged in California," concerning Lawrence Singleton, who was found guilty of raping a teen-age girl, chopping off her arms with an ax and leaving her for dead in a ditch.

He was sentenced to 14 years in prison, served eight years, and then, because of a "flawed law," was released for "good behavior." You rightly suggested that the "flawed law" be changed.

I want you and your readers to know that the Singleton case contributed to the passage of subsequent legislation that imposed full consecutive sentences for violent sex offenses. If Singleton were sentenced today, he would receive a sentence of 31 years, plus a life term!

MIKE ROOS,
SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE,
CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE

DEAR SPEAKER ROOS: Thank you for setting the record straight. I understand that Singleton is presently living in a trailer on the grounds of San Quentin Prison, protected by two parole officers at the cost of $1,350 a day to ensure his safety. My readers are irate that their tax money is being spent to protect this man. And

Dear Abby

frankly, so am I. Read on for a sample of reader mail:

DEAR ABBY: "Outraged" wrote that California officials are paying $1,350 a day of taxpayers' money to protect Singleton, the rapist; $1,350 times 365 days equals $492,750! That's a cool half-million dollars a year!

Who authorized this tremendous expenditure, and on what legal grounds? Is there a law that authorizes this protection? And if so, why aren't the same amenities provided for all prisoners released? Many of them face a hostile and unfriendly reception from the community after release, too.

Personally, I think the ideal place for Singleton is in the same culvert where he left that poor girl — minus his arms — but, of course, our system of "justice" doesn't provide for anything as inhumane as that. Instead they spend a half-million dollars a year to house, feed, clothe and protect him!

I will never be able to understand that kind of justice!
OUTRAGED, TOO, IN NYC

DEAR ABBY: For your survey: My husband and I have been married for 57 years and neither one of us has ever been unfaithful. No credit to us — we just haven't.

Your story in the Los Angeles Times about the man who put an ear of corn in the trunk of his car every time he was unfaithful reminded me of the story about the middle-age couple who were reminiscing about their married life and the husband said he wished they had enough money for a down payment on a house instead of paying rent. The wife asked how much it would take, and the husband told her about $8,000. She then left the room, and returned with a shoe box in which she had a pile of bills amounting to a little more than $8,000.

He looked at her, astounded, and asked where she got it. She told him that when they got married, she started putting $5 in the box every time they had marital relations.

He was furious and yelled, "Why didn't you tell me? I would have given you all my business!"
MARGARET MORRISON

DEAR ABBY: My gentleman friend and I are well into our retirement years. Each of us has lost a beloved spouse, so we understand each other's loneliness and needs, and we see each other often.

What can I say to relatives and others who ask (usually with a snicker) whether we are intimate? I do not want to confirm or deny it, but I would like to leave them wondering. I want also to cure them of the notion that the idea of sex for older people is something to laugh about.

I have enjoyed the sweetly uttered put-downs you suggest to others ("and why do you ask?" etc.) and now I need a ladylike — but cutting — remark to use myself. Please help me!

TONGUE-TIED
DEAR TONGUE-TIED: With a smile on your lips and a twinkle in your eyes say, "On the advice of my lawyer, I'm taking the Fifth."

Health screening to be held Wednesday

A health screening sponsored by Panhandle Health Care Coalition will be held Aug. 19 at Lamar Family Life Center at 1200 S. Nelson.

The screening will be for persons with high blood pressure, diabetes, pregnant women and women at high risk for breast cancer.

Tests will include a blood pressure measurement, diabetes blood test and cholesterol blood test.

The screening will be done at the time commodities are given out, from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 3 p.m.

A fee will be charged according to income.

The charge is $3 for one blood test or $5 for both blood tests. There will be no charge for those who are unable to pay. Those who wish to be tested for diabetes should not eat or drink at least eight hours prior to testing.

The aspects indicate that you'll be more enterprising in the year ahead than you have in the past. Of the numerous involvements that you'll experience, two appear to be big winners.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Members of the opposite sex are apt to find you more appealing than usual today. If there is someone in that category you'd like to impress, fire your best shot. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Two secret admirers have some nice things to say about you to others today. These people are interested in helping you improve your lot in life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Lady Luck tends to favor you today where your newest interest is concerned. It's an exciting enterprise in which you've just gotten involved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Material motives will furnish the incentive you need today to be an achiever. If you feel the stakes are worthy, success is almost a foregone conclusion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your judgment is keen today, and you won't be afraid to make snap decisions. In fact, your first assumptions will be remarkably accurate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to be helpful to others today. Your kind gestures will make an indelible impression that will be long remembered after you've forgotten them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You may be Cupid's special assignment today. If so, he'll do whatever he can to make things pleasant for you and the one closest to your heart.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your creative juices will be flowing today, especially when doing things to beautify your surroundings. It's a good day to plant flowers, trim shrubs or cut the lawn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Something in which you are involved with several friends today is in need of reorganization so that it can function better. You are the person with the know-how.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't leave situations that are of importance to you hanging financially today. You're on a lucky roll now, so capitalize on it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Matters of extreme personal importance can be advanced to your satisfaction today, especially if you take control of your own destiny.

Cowboys fall flat in loss to Chargers

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys pass-offense coordinator Paul Hackett says he was able to see some good signs in the team's 29-0 loss to the San Diego Chargers in the first exhibition game for the National Football League team.

"I think with what we set out to do, which was establish the running game, there were some good signs with the first group," Hackett said Sunday. "Unfortunately, we weren't able to parlay some of the good things in that area to any productivity."

The Cowboys rushed the ball 26 times for 116 yards Saturday night, a respectable 4.5 average. And that was without Herschel Walker and with Tony Dorsett carrying the ball only five times for 32 yards.

Line coach Jim Erkenbeck says his goal is to gain at least four yards on 55 percent of all running plays, not including short-yardage situations. In Saturday's game, the Cowboys were successful on 14 of 25 plays for 56 percent.

Dorsett: 'Room for improvement'

"I think we're going to be able to run the ball," Erkenbeck said. "I wasn't disappointed (in the line) at all from a run standpoint and not too disappointed from a pass-protection standpoint."

"You hate to not score when the object of the game is to score, of course," Erkenbeck said. "Now, if we had tried to trick them and finesse them and still hadn't scored, then I'd be real sad. The biggest trick was that wingback reverse (a 15-yard gain by Kelvin Martin)."

Patience will be required by both the coaches and fans this year, Erkenbeck said.

"We've asked the fans to be patient," he said. "This was a good stepping-stone for us, but the fans won't see it that way."

"They'll wonder what we've been smoking when we say that," Erkenbeck continued. "But generally speaking, if you can stop the run and you can run the ball in this league, you can win."

Hackett was quick to admit that the passing game was not good.

"Our third-down passing was pretty bleak," he said.

The Cowboys passed on 13 third downs and only converted one, a 10-yard pass from Danny White to Doug Cosbie.

"I don't think we had very good quarterback play, and I don't think we had very good receiver play," Hackett said.

White, who completed three of eight passes for only 18 yards in his first appearance since last November, said he wasn't discouraged.

"I felt good about my performance," White said. "I haven't played in a long time. It was a sigh of relief to be able to put the ball where I wanted."

"But we need to be more aggressive," White said. "We've had a tough training camp and we've got a lot of players hurt, but that is a bad excuse."

Dorsett, who also caught one pass for two yards for a total of 33 yards, said, "We need to start to believe in ourselves, and by winning a few games we will."

"There is room for improvement," Dorsett added.

Boston socks Texas

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — In spring training the last couple of years, the hot rookie prospect and the old pro barely got to know each other.

But it was only a matter of time before young John Marzano got a chance to catch 11-year veteran Bob Stanley.

It turned out to be a storybook match Sunday as Marzano hit a pair of two-run homers and a double and Stanley won his first game since June 8 in leading the Boston Red Sox to a 12-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

"He's going to be a good one," Stanley, 4-12, said. "It's the first time he's ever caught me and he did a great job."

"He also has a little short stroke and some pop in his bat. If you make a mistake on him, watch out."

Marzano, called up from the minors July 31 to replace injured Rich Gedman, was given a standing ovation after the first three-hit game of his brief career.

But, while hitting four home runs and driving in 14 runs in his first 13 Boston games, he cautioned himself against over confidence.

"I'm just trying to relax and work hard," Marzano said. "Things come easy for you in college (Temple University All-American) and the minors. Up here you have to work harder."

Stanley, the man known as "Steamer," came back to scatter nine hits and breeze as Marzano staked him to a big early lead; Spike Owen and rookie Ellis Burks contributed two-run homers and Wade Boggs had his four 4-hit game, raising his average to .371.

Stanley went the distance for the third time in 17 starts by scattering nine hits as the Red Sox took the season series from the Rangers, seven games to five.

"Yuck," Manager Bobby Valentine said. "Greg Harris got his pitch up to Marzano in the second and bang. Then he did it a second time to him in the sixth. You'd rather he didn't do that."

Thirty-one and counting!

Milwaukee Brewer designated hitter Paul Molitor hit in his 31st consecutive game Sunday, which ties the mark for the longest hitting streak in the 1980s.

Scoring fix alleged at Pan Am

By JODI PERRAS
Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — U.S. gymnasts piled up the medals in all-around competition despite a Puerto Rican judge who had to be removed for trying to influence scores against them.

Scott Johnson won six medals — two gold and four silver — and Tim Daggett, Johnson's 1984 Olympic gold medal teammate, won the gold in pommel horse Sunday. Brian Ginsberg of Mobile, Ala., shared a bronze medal in rings.

Questions hung over the floor exercise and vault, where head judge Heriberto Crerspó was accused of fixing scores against both the U.S. team and Latin Americans who train in the United States.

Robert Cowan, the men's technical director, asked Crerspó to leave midway through the vault competition.

"Never in my knowledge has this happened before," Cowan said. "He was trying to manipulate the scores to affect principally the American gymnasts."

"Plus, half the gymnasts here are training in the United States. There were instances where he was doing things to hurt them."

Crerspó, as head judge on floor exercise and vault, had the power to call conferences when he disagreed with judges' scores, Cowan said. An unusual number of such conferences were held during the competition, which lasted four hours — normal time would be closer to 2½ hours.

Cowan and an official from the International Gymnastics Federation warned Crerspó after the floor exercise to stop his actions. He was removed during the vault competition.

"It was killing the crowd; it was killing our event," he said. "That's why he was removed. We'll write a formal letter of protest to the IGF, but nothing will be done about it."

Johnson won the rings with a 19.45 and parallel bars with a Pan Am record 19.575. He also became the first gymnast in Pan Am history to compete in the finals for all six apparatus.

Daggett, of Los Angeles, scored a 9.70 on pommel horse and finished with a 19.50 overall score, breaking the record of 19.45 set by John Beckner of the United States in 1955.

Gold medalist Tim Daggett

Johnson, of Lincoln, Neb., won the silver with 19.20. Aguilera, Tony Pineda of Mexico and Mario Gonzalez of Puerto Rico tied for the bronze at 19.15.

In the two exercises run by the Puerto Rican judge, Johnson lost to Casimiro Suarez of Cuba. Suarez came from behind in vault by scoring two 9.80s, while Crerspó used his authority to change Johnson's scores. Suarez also defeated Johnson for the gold medal in floor exercise, in which both men scored a 9.70.

Johnson and Suarez, who placed 1-2 in Saturday's all-around competition, both scored a 9.80 on their last routine and tied for the silver. Aguilera won the bronze in floor exercise with 19.175.

Jose Fraga of Cuba was behind Johnson in rings with a 19.375, and Luis Cartaya of Cuba and Ginsberg tied for the bronze at 19.350.

Women's competition, featuring national champion Kristie Phillips, begins Wednesday.

Graf reaches top rung of ladies' tennis ladder

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Steffi Graf of West Germany has reached the top of women's tennis a little earlier than she expected.

"I knew I had the ability, but not this soon," the 18-year-old Graf said Sunday after defeating Chris Evert Lloyd 6-3, 6-4 in the finals of the $250,000 Virginia Slims of Los Angeles women's tennis tournament.

Evert, however, thought Graf's promotion was a little overdue.

"She's had the best year of anyone," Evert said. "She's now won eight tournaments. I'm surprised the computer took this long to recognize that."

"She'll stay No. 1 as long as she wants to. She works hard. She's the best of all the newcomers."

The only match Graf has lost this year was in the finals of Wimbledon to Martina Navratilova. Still, her promotion took her by surprise.

"It feels great," Graf said of the top ranking. "My father said it was impossible. I had no idea. I was very surprised."

"Being No. 1 means everything. I've had a good year. It's important to get to be No. 1 before the U.S. Open. I can really relax."

Navratilova, who teamed with Pam Shriver to win the tournament's doubles title, declined to comment when asked about falling to No. 2.

In Sunday's final, Graf and Evert traded breaks in four straight games beginning in the second game of the first set. After Evert held service to pull even at 3-3, Graf then won the next three games.

In the ninth game, Evert dumped a service return into the net at deuce and then Graf took the game and the set with a forehand volley for a winner.

The two then traded breaks in the first two games of the second set and again in the seventh and eighth games, leaving the set even at 4-4.

Graf then broke Evert's serve and then held at love to take the match and the No. 1 ranking.

"This is a good match," Graf said. "We had long rallies. Chris is really playing well... she's hitting the ball harder than before and not making as many errors." Evert agreed.

West Germany's Steffi Graf

"I'm playing better now than when I was No. 1... The standards just keep going up and up," she said.

Evert's improved play made the finals more of a match. "I expected her to be tough," Evert said. "She hit well. She sliced well. The last couple of times she beat me badly. Today, I was in the match the whole way."

Astros down Braves

HOUSTON (AP) — If close pennant races boil down to pitching and defense, the Houston Astros can't be feeling too badly about their chances in the National League West division.

They used both, along with some key hitting by Billy Hatcher and Kevin Bass Sunday to defeat Atlanta 6-2 in the Astrodome.

"Those defensive plays were just as important today as any pitch or hit," said Braves manager Chuck Tanner. "Caminiti made a great stop and I didn't think Hatcher would catch that ball."

Ken Caminiti, Houston's rookie third baseman, made a great play on a smash by Gary Roenicke just inside the line to end a third-inning threat and keep Dale Murphy from coming to the plate with two men in scoring position.

Hatcher also made a crucial catch in the fifth with a man on when Roenicke sliced a liner to left that Hatcher caught off his knee on a dead run.

"I was begging on the mound, 'Get there, get there,'" said winning pitcher Jim Deshaies. "It was a fine play."

Deshaies, making his first start after being activated Saturday from the 15-day disabled list, pitched six innings. He gave up six hits for his 10th win of the year and Houston's relief pitchers shut the Braves down the last three innings.

"My arm felt fine and though my velocity may have been down, I had a real good change and no pain in the arm at all," Deshaies said.

The Astros scored all the runs they needed in the second when Bass led off with his first of three straight singles, stole second and scored on Caminiti's single to right. Newly acquired Dale Berra walked and after two outs, Hatcher grounded a bases loaded single to left.

The Astros broke the game open in the seventh when Hatcher doubled, again with the bases loaded for his third and fourth RBIs for the game, giving Houston their third straight win over the Braves after dropping seven of eight on their recent West Coast road trip.

"It's just one of those things," said Hatcher, "to get up twice with bases loaded and come through."

The Braves scored twice in the fourth, the big blow being rookie shortstop Jeff Blauser's first major league home run.

"I was just trying to get my pitch on a 2-0 count," said Blauser. "He threw me a fastball and I was lucky to get the ball up. I sure wasn't trying to hit a home run."

"We beat ourselves out on the coast," said Astros manager H. L. Lanier. "It's always nice to come home — we just find more clutch hits here."

The Astros, however, are counting on pitching to carry them to their second straight west crown. They lead the league in team ERA and are at full strength now that Deshaies is back.

"The team that gets the best pitching will win this," said Tanner. "I don't know who that will be, but nobody's giving up."

The Astros play the Braves again Monday night in the only scheduled National League game.

Dolphins fall to Bears

Miami's new Robbie Stadium was christened Sunday night — but, not the way the stadium's namesake — Miami owner Joe Robbie — would have liked for it to have been.

The Dolphins not only lost their first preseason game 10-3 to the Chicago Bears, but also lost quarterback Dan Marino for 3-4 weeks with a dislocated finger on his passing hand.

The first NFL game ever to be presented on ESPN was a defensive struggle, with the only touchdown coming in the fourth quarter on a 65-yard pass by Bears' rookie QB Jim Harbaugh.

Harbaugh, the Bears' No. 1 draft pick, connected with fellow rookie Ron Morris for the score with 10:49 to play in the game.

PMS equipment checkout

Football equipment will be issued to Pampa Middle School players Wednesday.

Eighth-graders can pick up their equipment from 9 to 12 noon and seventh-graders from 1 to 3 p.m. Players who cannot pick up their equipment at the above-scheduled times can do so between 4 and 5 p.m.

If a player cannot pick up his equipment anytime Thursday, he should contact Coach Dick Dunham.

Physicals will be given to seventh- and ninth-grade girls who plan on participating in sports at 1 p.m. Thursday in the high school football fieldhouse.

New eighth graders who plan on participating in athletics can get their physicals during one of the above-scheduled dates.

If more information is needed, Coach Dunham can be contacted at 669-6722, 665-2921 or 665-6758.

Attempts to open the sixth floor renew building's traumatic history

DALLAS (AP) — A proposal to build an elevator to the sixth floor of the old Texas Schoolbook Depository has reopened a controversy surrounding the John F. Kennedy assassination landmark. Lee Harvey Oswald allegedly fired the fatal shot from a corner window on the sixth floor of the building. That floor has been closed to the public since Kennedy's death Nov. 22, 1963. Attempts to build an exhibit have been thwarted, partly by apathy and partly by resistance from those who believe it would be unwise to commemorate a blemish on Dallas' past. Last week, the city approved a 60-foot elevator tower for the north facade of the building, now the Dallas County Administration Building.

The OK came after three months of controversy that pitted county against city, city planning staff against landmark commission, historical foundation against Texas Historical Commission and preservationists against one another. One aspect of the controversy is architectural — the scale of the tower and the impact it will have on a historical building. At another level, the controversy is psychological and philosophical, rooted in Dallas' lingering guilt over the Kennedy assassination. For 15 years after the assassination, the Schoolbook Depository remained in the recesses of the minds of Dallas residents. The building was saved from a wrecker ball in 1977.

Notice of 1987 Effective Tax Rate for Lefers I.S.D.

The purpose of this notice is to inform you about your taxes. The 1987 effective tax rate is a tax rate that would give the most amount of operating taxes the taxing unit levied last year on property taxed in both years, plus the amount the unit needs to pay certain long term debts this year. The rate is calculated as follows:

1986 maintenance & operations tax levy:	$1,051,770.00
Less taxes levied to recoup 1985 appraisal roll errors and adjustments for lost value:	-$1,512.19
Equals adjusted 1986 maintenance & operations levy:	=$1,050,257.81
1987 total tax base:	$95,137,717.00
Less adjustments for value of new property:	-$53,894.00
Equals adjusted 1987 tax base:	=$94,504,383.00
The adjusted 1986 levy divided by the adjusted 1987 tax base and multiplied by 100 equals the effective maintenance & operations tax rate:	1.11133/100
Plus rate to correct for appraisal roll errors:	+$ 0 - /$100
Plus rate needed to pay debts and obligations:	+$ 0 - /$100
Equals 1987 effective tax rate:	=$1.11133/100
1987 effective tax rate:	$1.11133 per $100 of value
The maximum rate the governing body can adopt without publishing notice and holding a hearing is:	$1.14467 per $100 of value
The maximum rate the governing body can adopt before taxpayers can initiate rollback petitions is:	$1.20024 per $100 of value

This notice contains a summary of the calculations used to determine this year's effective tax rate. You can inspect the full calculations at Lefers I.S.D. Business Office 300 E. 9th Lefers, Tx. TRUTH IN TAXATION/1987

SCHEDULE A: Unencumbered Fund Balances

This taxing unit estimates that the following balances will be left in the unit's accounts at the end of the fiscal year. These balances are not encumbered by a corresponding debt obligation.

Type of Fund	Balance
General Operating	$440,711.58

SCHEDULE B: 1987 Debts Paid From Property Taxes

This taxing unit estimates that the unit will pay the following amounts out of property tax revenues for long term debts that are secured by property taxes:

Description of Debt	Principal or Current Payment to be Paid	Interest to be Paid	Other Amounts to be Paid	Total Payment
	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0
Total Amount Required for 1987 Debt Service	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0
Less Amount That Will Be Paid From Funds Listed in Schedule A	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0
Total To Be Paid From Property Taxes This Year	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0
Amount Added in Anticipation That the Unit Will Collect Only 9 of 10 Taxes in 1987	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0
Total Debt Tax Levy	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0	$ 0

BRICKER-OWNER

Roughly 100 persons gathered at the summit of Enchanted Rock, north of Fredericksburg, for a sunrise ceremony Sunday as part of the harmonic convergence observance.

Thousands observe harmonic convergence throughout Texas

By The Associated Press

Daybreak ceremonies at Enchanted Rock and other Texas locations meant the dawning of a new age for some and a focus on peace for others who helped send a message worldwide.

A "harmonic convergence" that drew thousands to Enchanted Rock in Central Texas and other locations across the state continues today. At the granite hills, now a state park near Fredericksburg, meditation and dances were scheduled.

"It's an Earth event," said David Knoll of Austin, the firekeeper for a ceremonial fire atop Enchanted Rock Sunday morning. "It's a step up in the consciousness. The Earth is going through a shift. That harmonious shift is a shift in its developmental phases. Everything, every human being, is part of that shift. There's no personal glory involved."

The two-day worldwide ritual includes gatherings at sites sacred to ancient cultures, state parks and other sites. Celebrants meditate to cause a planetary shift in attitude about peace and the environment. For some, it is a planetary alignment that signifies the dawning of the Age of Aquarius.

Devotees say that, for the first time in 23,412 years, the alignment of the planets will produce a cleansing energy focus. If humanity does not seize that focus, then harmonic convergence will fail and a period of catastrophe awaits, cosmic say.

"Oh, great spirit," prayed one woman at an Enchanted Rock ceremony. "You are the sun and the moon and all the stars in between... Hear my prayer. We come together now for the sake of the whole planet."

"We are gathered here because we believe in our hearts it will make a difference... Guide us, because we need your strength and we need your wisdom."

About 500 to 700 people climbed the rock Sunday morning for a sunrise ceremony, said Laura Moore, the event organizer, who carries a business card that announces her as a "Student of Life."

"The highlight was this morning," said Ms. Moore. "It was so fun, because when we walked up it was dark, and there was this trail of lights going up the mountain, and there was this trail of headlights headed into the park."

"What we are creating here is a resonant field of trust and love so strong that it will change the entire planet, as well as the thought processes of millions and millions of people," said Ms. Moore.

The park's attendance reached a record of 3,100 on Saturday, park spokeswoman Susan Carter said, adding 2,447 gathered at the site Saturday. She said park officials were prepared to handle a crowd of 5,000.

"I was standing in my bathroom on June 28 at 11 a.m. when a loud voice resonated through me and said 'Aug. 16 and 17, Enchanted Rock.' So, I set out to invite everyone I know in Texas to be at Enchanted Rock," said Linda Neal of Houston.

Ms. Neal distributed 350 fliers calling for people to gather at the granite formation rising 500 feet and covering 640 acres.

Convergence observers making the pilgrimage to Enchanted Rock were from Houston, San Antonio, Austin and Kerrville, Ms. Carter said.

About 200 people gathered at White Rock Lake in Dallas for the weekend ceremonies. Some danced beneath small oak trees near the lake's Bath House, while others chanted and meditated.

"It's just been beautiful," said Bob Price, a musician who organized the local ceremony.

Festivities continue today with a 5 a.m. worldwide synchronized silent meditation session and a five-hour counterclockwise circle dance beginning at 7 a.m.

Oklahoma woman dies in accident

ORANGE (AP) — An Oklahoma woman was killed and eight other family members, including five children, were injured when their van overturned on Interstate 10 in a weekend traffic accident, officials said.

Texas Department of Public Safety trooper Kevin Malone said the family's van was traveling east on the interstate when a tire blew out about 6:40 p.m. Saturday, causing the driver, Dominec Hoang, 41, to lose control of the vehicle. The van crossed the median, flipped over and landed upright in the west bound lanes.

The dead woman was thrown from the front of the van, Malone said. Justice of the Peace Pat Brown of Vidor pronounced her dead at the scene.

The woman's identity was not immediately known, a DPS dispatcher in Beaumont said Sunday afternoon.

All of the injured were from Oklahoma but their hometowns also were not immediately known.

Malone said the deceased woman was the grandmother of an Oklahoma family.

One of the injured, Hoc Hoang, 45, was taken by helicopter to Baptist Hospital of Southeast Texas in Beaumont.

Those taken to the hospital by ambulance were Dominec Hoang, Sen Hoang, 41, Linda Hoang, 7, Lisa Hoang, 6, Hiep Hoang, 12, Dominec Hoang, 13, and 11-year-old Yen Hoang.

Hoc Hoang was listed in critical condition Sunday with head injuries while the elder Dominec Hoang was in serious condition, a hospital spokeswoman said. The others were treated and released, she said.

City debts rising with renovation

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An effort to turn the site of the 1968 World's Fair into an urban showplace has resulted in mounting debt for the city of San Antonio.

The city borrowed $53 million two years ago to expand its convention center, build a parking garage and create an elaborate urban water park at the fair site.

Civic leaders are now debating whether to spend at least $13 million more on a plan to convert the HemisFair plaza and La Villita, a historical tourist site, into a marketplace. The plan would require an additional $1.2 million loan.

The renovation will increase hotel occupancy, prompt real estate development and create a better retail and business climate, a consultant in the project says.

But downtown developer, Arthur "Hap" Veltman Jr., says he is skeptical.

"The quest to develop HemisFair Plaza is on someone's personal agenda. It's a burning prod in someone's side," Veltman said.

Mayor Henry Cisneros has lobbied the city's prospective partner in the renovation project, Enterprise Development Co. of Maryland, to convert the dreary district into an urban showplace.

Officials are counting on the findings of the development company's market studies to bolster claims the project is worthwhile.
