Iran calls UN cease-fire resolution 'unfortunate'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Iran will likely reject a U.N. resolution calling for a cease-fire in its war with Iraq, according to an Iranian deputy foreign minister who promises cooperation with other peacemaking efforts.

Mohammad Jawad Larijani, Iran's deputy foreign minister for international affairs, is scheduled to meet with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar today to discuss the cease-fire resolution.

"Iran will be ready to cooperate fully with any effort which aims at bringing peace to the region," Larijani said Sunday. But he accused Iraq and the United States of resisting peace.

"Iraqis intensified and escalated their attacks on the ground and on the air, and both the United States of America intensified its presence and brought the huge armada in the region. So I think this resolution from the day of inception was in trouble," Larijani said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

Despite Larijani's comments, Richard W. Murphy, assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, said he still held out hope for the U.N. resolution.

The resolution, which Iraq has accepted, was approved July 20 by the U.N. Security Council, which includes the United States, Soviet Union, China, Britain and France.

Murphy said Larijani's meeting with Perez de Cuellar is a critical one in determining whether Iran accepts or rejects the resolution. Nevertheless, the Public hearing set Tuesday on new city operating budget

Pampa city commissioners will hold two public hearings at their regularly scheduled meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

One will be on the proposed operating budget and program of services for the 1987-1988 fiscal year, and the other will be the second hearing on the proposed master plan for Recreation Park.

The proposed budget calls for expenditures of approximately $9.23 million, about $600,000 under the current year's budget. There will be no tax increase and no hikes in city utility fees.

The property tax rate will remain at 64 cents per $100 valuation, the same as it has been for the past two years.

The parks hearing concerns a master plan recommended by the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board for long-range facilities, maintenance, landscaping and other developments at Recreation Park, located east of the city.

The plan does not eliminate any currently existing facilities but proposes other facilities that can be located in presently undeveloped areas of the park. Proposed projects include a 4-plex softball field complex, a playground near the ballfields, a parking lot, a campground, a hike trail, rehabilitation of the former city lake, paved roads, installation of sprinkler systems, landscaping and general maintenance programs.

The master plan is a guideline for projects to be conducted at the park over a period of years, with no plans for any immediate, large-scale programs in the coming year.

In old business, the commission will consider on second reading ordinances establishing new fines and penalties for code violations in accord with state law and creating the Office of Emergency Management Preparedness.

In new business items, commissioners will consider:

- awards of bids for janitorial services and emergency medical services;
- authorization of a contract with Operations Management International Inc. (OMI) for management of the water and wastewater treatment facilities;
- first readings of ordinances relative to annexation and zoning change for the Lawley Ranch Addition;
- first reading of an ordinance relative to crediting jail time and confinement toward pecuniary fines and costs;
- first reading of an ordinance affecting participation of city employees in the Texas Municipal Retirement System; and
- approval of two accounts payable.

Local retail sales continued slight rebound in June

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

Pampa's retail sales continued to show a slight rebound from two months ago, though sales for the year are still down more than 18 percent from a year ago, according to the latest sales tax reports.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock this month sent checks totaling $99.7 million in local sales tax payments to the 1,034 cities that levy the 1 percent city sales tax.

Bullock said the monthly allocations were down 7.4 percent statewide in August compared to the August 1986 allocations.

In his August report, Bullock reported Pampa had received a check this month for $127,018 for its share of the city's 1 percent sales tax on retail goods and services.

The August check represents taxes collected on sales made in June and during the second quarter and reported to the Comptroller's Office by July 20.

Pampa's latest check represents sales tax collections on $12.7 million in retail sales made in June.

The August check is down more than $23,000 from the $150,272 payment received a year ago.

For the year to date, Pampa has received payments totaling $799,084, representing sales of $79.9 million. That's down 18.49 percent from the comparable 1986 period payments of $980,371 for approximately $98 million in sales.

In Bullock's July report, Pampa was listed as being down 19.04 percent, and in the June report the city was showing a 20.14 percent decline from comparable 1986 period sales.

Though there has been a slight turnaround in sales in the past two months, Pampa still has a ways to go to catch up. In the August 1986 report, Pampa was down only 11.98 percent from comparable 1985 sales of $111.4 million.

According to the current figures, Pampa's sales are down by some $31.5 million from sales recorded two years ago in the same 1985 period.

Elsewhere in Gray County, McLean had a check this month for $2,269, slightly under the $2,309 received in August 1986. Its payments for the year to date stand at $12,436, dipping 8.59 percent from the comparable 1986 period payments of $13,604. A year ago McLean was running 1.41 percent above 1985 period sales.

Lefors had an August payment of $727, down more than $145 from the $872 received a year ago. Its payments for the current year to date total $3,311, dropping 38.55 percent below the $5,388 recorded in the comparable 1986 period. At this time last year, Lefors was showing a 59.79 percent increase over comparable 1985 sales.

In Roberts County, Miami received a hefty check of $1,838, more than $780 above the $1,057 recorded a year ago. Its latest collections pushed the year to date total to $11,269, floating 3.30 percent above the $10,909 recorded in the August 1986 report and also up from the 4.27 percent decrease listed in the July report. A year ago Bullock had listed Miami with a 22.59 percent decline from comparable 1985 sales.

In Wheeler County, Mobeetie had a payment from the state of $478, more than $270 under the $750 recorded a year ago. Its total payments for the year to date stand at $2,399, a decrease of 9.32 percent from the $2,646 registered at this time in 1986. But a year ago, Bullock was listing Mobeetie with a 17.59 percent decline from comparable 1985 sales.

Shamrock had an August check for $12,313, down more than $770 from the August 1986 payment. For the year to date, Shamrock has received $67,000 in payments for its share of sales tax collections, falling 10.61 percent from the $74,955 recorded a year ago. In the August 1986 report, Bullock recorded Shamrock with a 6.52 percent dip from the 1985 period sales.

Bullock sent Wheeler a check for $4,851 this month, up slightly from the $4,786 received last August. Its payments to date this year total $29,137, down 10.32 percent from the $32,491 listed a year ago. At this time in 1986, Wheeler was showing a 1.31 percent dip from comparable 1985 sales.

In Hemphill County, Canadian had an August payment for $11,822, down about $410 from the $12,232 received at this time in 1986. Its yearly payments to date stand at $69,620, plunging 22.24 percent under the $89,536 recorded at this time a year ago. In the August 1986 report, Bullock was listing Wheeler with a 12.59 percent decline from comparable 1985 sales.

In Carson County, White Deer had a check this month for $2,096, dropping more than $610 from the $2,709 gained a year ago. For the year to date, White Deer has received payments totaling $12,336, falling

Pampa teen takes class in his room

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

The blues-rock sounds of Robert Cray fill Kelly Hendrick's room as he lays sprawled across his bed, struggling with a history question.

He leaves the stereo on, and walks out to the living room to ask his mother for help. As he kneels beside her desk, she patiently leads him through the tough question.

It could be a scene from the life of any American family on any given night during the school year. The only difference is, it's the middle of the afternoon.

Homework has taken on a broader meaning for Kelly since his parents took him out of school three years ago and began teaching him at home.

Although he hasn't attended a single day of high school since he finished eighth grade, Kelly says he's still learning.

Kelly, 17, said he doesn't feel cheated by having missed four years of public education at Pampa High School.

"I stopped school, but I never stopped learning," he said. "I never associated school with learning. The only reason I went to school was because somebody told me I had to. I got senioritis when I was in seventh grade."

Kelly has been taught at home since 1984, when his parents, Larry and Deborah Hendrick, 2225 N. Dwight St., decided that the public school system wasn't for them — or their son.

The Hendricks cited religious beliefs and said they were being forced to turn more and more of their rights as parents over to a faceless bureaucracy called public education.

Home schooler finds friends

Larry Hendrick answers one question with another when people ask him how his son makes friends.

"He gets done with his schoolwork and goes out and plays with the kids in the neighborhood," Hendrick responds. "Isn't that what everyone does when they get home from school?"

Hendrick's son, Kelly, 17, has been taught in the family's home at 2225 N. Dwight St. for three years.

The Pampa teen-ager is one of more than an estimated 10,000 home-educated youngsters in Texas.

Although he doesn't attend class with his peers, Kelly's parents say home schooling hasn't hurt his social life. He dates, is active in scouting and attends church functions.

Unlike those in the public school system, Kelly's outside activities give his parents the chance to make sure he mingles with the right crowd.

Larry Hendrick said one thing that bothered him about Pampa Middle School was that it forced Kelly to be with kids that Hendrick and his wife never would have allowed him to hang around with in any other social setting.

Among Kelly's classmates was Jessie DeLeon, charged with a stabbing death at a drunken Halloween brawl. Another schoolmate, Kevin Kirkham, currently is serving time for burglary.

"My kid was exposed to drugs in middle school,"

Hendrick complained. "Fortunately, he knew better."

Critics of home schooling frequently refer to the "socialization" they say takes place in public schools. They fear that home-schooled youngsters don't get enough interaction with their peers.

"Education in the home has many good benefits to it, but it also has some detriments," said psychologist Bin Gilbert of Pampa Family Services Center. "Lack of socialization is one of those detriments. I believe strongly in the public school system."

Welcome mat still out for Gorbachev

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) - President Reagan's invitation to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev for a summit meeting on U.S. soil still stands, but there is no basis for a newspaper report that the two leaders will meet in Washington in September, the State Department says.

Department spokeswoman Nancy Beck denied the report of an impending meeting, which appeared in Sunday's editions of the Los Angeles Times, as Reagan rested at his ranch north of Santa Barbara on the 11th day of a 25-day California stay.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov, asked today whether a U.S. visit was planned by Gorbachev, also denied the newspaper report: "We have no such news. This is not true."

The president and first lady Nancy Reagan will interrupt their ranch vacation Tuesday and spend the rest of the week in Los Angeles. Reagan plans a foreign policy speech, billed as a major address on East-West relations, in Los Angeles on Wednesday.

The Times report, attributed to an official the newspaper did not name, said the Soviet Union had informed the United States that Gorbachev planned to visit New York in late September to attend the U.N. General Assembly meeting and then meet with Reagan in Washington.

Officials in Santa Barbara said they knew nothing of any such plans.

Ms. Beck, speaking in Washington, said, "There is no basis for the story in today's Los Angeles Times."

Gorbachev agreed in principle at his first meeting with Reagan in November 1985 to visit the president in the United States, but never has formally accepted the president's invitation.

Cease-fire

United States supports a second U.N. resolution imposing an arms embargo on Iran, he said.

The comments by Murphy and Larjani were made in a second version of the NBC program. In an earlier version Sunday, the network interviewed Murphy, but not Larjani, due to technical problems.

In the first program, Murphy said that while the United States is maintaining its military presence in the gulf, with its escorts of Kuwaiti oil tankers through the war-torn area, it also is pursuing its diplomatic option.

However, Murphy said the administration will work to contain the Iranian regime and its revolution the way it sought after World War II to contain the Soviet Union.

"We do not believe the Iranian revolution should be imposed on its neighbors, most of whom are Arab-Sunni neighbors," Murphy said.

Murphy said the administration is "very satisfied" with the support it has received from the Arab states. However, he would not comment on a report in Saturday's edition of The Washington Post that Saudi Arabia has agreed to let carrier-based U.S. combat planes in the gulf land in Saudi territory for refueling and other logistical support.

City budget reflects public comments

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

The City Commission will conduct two public hearings at its regularly scheduled meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday. The commission meets on the third floor of City Hall in the City Commission Room.

The first public hearing will concern the proposed budget for the 1987-1988 fiscal year.

We have had several questions and comments during the planning process, and I want to share how the budget reflects these comments prior to the public hearing.

The budget maintains the existing tax rate and utility rates. There is a slight reduction in personnel without a reduction in service delivery. Funds have been included to provide heating for the M.K. Brown Swimming Pool.

The tree replacement program for the parks system (currently in its infancy) will be continued; mowing equipment will be purchased for the Parks Department to alleviate the trouble we had earlier this year with equipment breakdowns.

Programs such as the Safety Program and equipment replacement program are included to help us save costs in the future. Also, continued funding for economic development through the TEXCEL Program is planned. We will continue working with the Pampa Chamber of Commerce in other economic development areas such as Main Street and the M.K. Brown Civic Auditorium.

The commission will also conduct a public hearing on the proposed master plan for Recreation Park.

The proposed master plan is not a plan to develop the park immediately but, rather, to provide a broad outline of what the community would like to see in Recreation Park over the long term. By having a master plan, we can gradually develop park facilities without interfering with other planned uses.

Again, the public hearing process is to determine the desirability of the park as well as the desirability of proposed facilities. Public hearings of this nature are extremely valuable in providing direction for the commission and staff.

Elsewhere, our Sanitation Department is continuing with the Clean-Up Campaign in Ward 4. We anticipate being in Ward 4 for another three weeks, when we will move into Ward 3.

With the summer almost over, we have combined our lifeguard crews in order to keep at least one pool open. Marcus Sanders Pool closed two days ago, and M.K. Brown Pool will close on Saturday, Aug. 29.

We continue to receive inquiries about the proposed public golf course. The staff is preparing an analysis for the City Commission.

The commission plans to conduct a series of public hearings on the proposed golf course and at least two proposed sites during October, after which a final decision on the golf course can be made.

About 5:30 p.m. Sunday, June 21, a 9-year-old boy riding his bicycle was struck by a motorcycle in the 500 block of South Barnes.

The motorcycle was described only as being black. Two white men reportedly were riding the motorcycle. The passenger on the motorcycle reportedly had long hair.

Crime Stoppers of Pampa will pay $500 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for this felony failure to stop and render aid.

Rewards are available for information about crimes not in this announcement. The board of directors of Crime Stoppers urges citizen involvement in reporting crimes in our community.

this month for $2,105, nearly $80 less than the $2,184 received in August 1986. Its payments to date in the current sales year total $12,185, dipping 7.29 percent below the $13,144 recorded in the same 1986 period. A year ago Groom was registering a 1.34 percent decrease from comparable 1985 sales.

Skellytown had an August payment of $970, more than $120 under the $1,093 received a year ago. For the year to date, Skellytown has earned $6,561, plummeting 32.78 percent from the $9,760 recorded in the same 1986 period. In the August 1986 report, Bullock listed Skellytown with a 24.75 percent decline from comparable 1985 period sales.

New American convoy moves into Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) - Three more reflagged Kuwaiti tankers headed into the Persian Gulf escorted by U.S. warships today as the mine-damaged supertanker Bridgeton sailed out through the Strait of Hormuz, shipping sources said.

The shipping sources also said the U.S. helicopter carrier Guadalcanal and the frigate Hawes intercepted an Iranian gunboat that came too close to the Bridgeton convoy and forced it to move away.

Pentagon sources said two small sailing dhows thought to be Iranian were sailing together toward the convoy and were ordered to stay away. When they didn't alter course, flares were fired, said the sources, also speaking on condition of anonymity. The dhows heeded the warning and left.

It was not known if the Pentagon and shipping sources were describing the same incident.

Three other reflagged Kuwaiti tankers were cruising with two American warships about 50 miles behind the Bridgeton on their way out of the gulf, said the gulf-based shipping sources, who monitor activity in the gulf and based their reports on ship sightings.

Pickens adopts new strategy, say analysts

DALLAS (AP) — T. Boone Pickens Jr.'s reputation was built on takeover attempts in the oil and gas industry.

Now, after puzzling Wall Street with forays into defense stocks, the Amarillo oilman and his Mesa Limited Partners, are taking aim at a mining company with oil and gas interests.

A few weeks after Mesa unitholders amended their partnership agreement to allow Mesa to pursue business activities outside the oil and gas industry, the group in June filed notice that it intended to acquire more than $15 million of Seattle-based Boeing Co.'s common shares.

Mesa also sought permission to buy as much as 15 percent of the aerospace and defense company's stock. Boeing made the disclosure public in late July.

This month, Mesa also filed notice under the Hart-Scott-Rodino antitrust act that it wanted to buy $15 million of Singer Co., a Stamford, Conn., aerospace electronics and consumer products maker. It also asked permission to buy up to a 15 percent stake.

"I was very surprised at the recent developments, particularly in Singer and Boeing," said Michael W. Lamb, president of Wealth Monitors, a Kansas City, Mo., investment research firm.

"I find it very difficult to understand what he's doing there other than trying to capitalize on his own notoriety," said Lamb.

"Generally, his style is one (target) at a time," said Lamb. "For him to go after Boeing and then suddenly go after another company in the defense industry and then another—there's a pattern that isn't consistent with the past."

Analysts believe that Mesa made the Boeing and Singer investments for short-term gains and wasn't really interested in takeovers. Many analysts considered the stocks of both companies undervalued and have touted them as takeover candidates.

"It was pretty much following Boone's strategy of looking for an undervalued stock, generating interest, getting the price up and then selling when it's up," said Janet Dzwierzynski, an analyst at Duff & Phelps Inc. in Chicago.

She said that strategy took Pickens outside the oil industry because "most energy stocks are overvalued, if not fully valued."

Boeing and Singer stock soared after the disclosures that Mesa had taken shares in the companies.

Most recently, Pickens led a new general partnership called Ivanhoe

Partners in taking a 9.1 percent stake in Newmont Mining Corp. of New York. The partnership is owned 45 percent by Mesa; 30 percent by NRM Energy Co. LP of Dallas; and 25 percent by Harbert Corp. of Birmingham, Ala.

The investor group last week boosted its stake to 9.95 percent, raising Wall Street concerns that Pickens and the other companies may be making a takeover run at the firm.

Newmont has interests in gold, coal, oil and gas and other natural resources. Analysts said he company is a traditional type of Pickens target.

New law clamps down on speed traps

CLUTE (AP) — A new law limiting the amount of fines that municipal courts can retain on state highway speeding violations has some cities scrambling.

House Bill 581, which goes into effect Sept. 1, was passed in the regular session of the Texas Legislature as a means of removing the incentive for small cities to maintain speed traps as a major source of revenue.

Jones Creek City Secretary Anita McCoy said it is hurting cities like hers, which need the revenue to maintain law enforcement to protect residents.

"I think it's outrageous," McCoy told the Brazosport Facts newspaper. "We don't know what we're going to do. Right now we're looking at a way of surviving."

Specifically, the law allows municipal courts to keep $2 for every mile per hour the driver exceeded the speed limit. The law applies only to violations on state highways. The state treasurer is to receive any penalties in excess of the $2-per-mile fine.

For example, if a person were fined for going 10 mph over the speed limit, no more than $20 of the fine could be kept by the municipal court. The rest must be sent to the state.

The state keeps $10 of each fine for speeding now and will continue to collect the $10 plus any additional amount collected by cities exceeding $2 for each mph the speeder is going over the speed limit.

McCoy said she was told that the law is targeted at cities with a population of less than 5,000, "but that's the cities that need the money the most."

West Columbia Police Chief Earl Winebrenner said the law will have a significant effect on the amount of revenue West Columbia is allowed to keep from speeding fines.

However, Surfside Mayor Burt Strouse said Surfside will not be affected much by the new law because most of the speeding fine revenue that Surfside gets comes from County Road 257, which is not maintained by the state and therefore does not qualify as a state highway.

Brazoria Police Chief Theresa Guidry also said the law would not affect Brazoria's revenue much. But she said the reason was because little of the city's revenue is generated by speeding tickets.

However, Richwood Police Chief Glenn Patton said the law could really affect Richwood's speeding ticket revenue.

An analysis of the bill by the House Research Organization said the bill will primarily affect cities with less than 5,000 residents.

The analysis said speed traps exist all over the state, but "attention has been focused on the practices of certain police departments in counties adjacent to Harris County."

One of those cities, Splendora, a small town in east Montgomery County bordering U.S. 59, is reacting to the bill by shutting down its police dispatch unit, warrants division and municipal court.

A total of eight paid police officers will be laid off, leaving only two paid and two unpaid reserve officers.

Thompsons building varied private empire

DALLAS (AP) — Despite wide holdings, the Thompson Co. has not appeared on annual published lists of Dallas' largest private companies.

With revenues that would place it in the top 15, the company last year produced estimated sales of $500 million.

It has a reputation for intense privacy, but the company that holds many of the personal investments of Southland Corp.'s founding family is finding it more difficult to stay out of the public eye.

"Up until now we kept a pretty low profile, but I guess that has changed," said John Sloan, president of the Thompson Co.

That's because JT Acquisition Corp., a newly created unit of the Thompson Co., announced a $5.1 billion plan on July 5 to acquire Southland Corp. in a leveraged buyout.

The Southland buyout will add the 7-Eleven convenience store operations to the Thompson Co.'s investment portfolio. JT Acquisition has completed the first stage of the Southland buyout plan and the transaction is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Thompson Co. owners — John Thompson, chairman of Southland Corp.; Jere Thompson, Southland president and chief executive officer; and Joe "Jodie" Thompson, a Southland director — already had gathered a diverse group of assets under the holding company's umbrella.

Among the Thompson Co. holdings are an Arkansas boat builder, a Phoenix manufacturer of plastic cups and a Los Angeles importer of consumer goods from Asia. In addition, the holding company's real estate arm manages office buildings and retail stores in Carrollton, Richardson and Las Colinas.

Officials of the Thompson Co. and Southland Corp. indicated last week that both companies will undergo changes in the coming months that will affect long-standing relationships with its employees and corporate entities.

"The (Thompson) family is extremely concerned that at a time when it is divesting itself of businesses (that) it has another company that is aggressively growth oriented," Sloan said.

Under terms of the proposed buyout by the Thompsons, Southland plans to sell off its dairies, Chief Auto Parts stores, its snack foods division and some of its real estate holdings. Analysts say the moves are likely to reduce the company's 67,000-person workforce significantly.

By trading in their Southland stock for a 77.5 percent ownership of its assets, the Thompsons will also bring a hefty debt load to their private investment portfolio.

Credit unions fighting to regain loan business

FORT WORTH (AP) — Credit unions, which suffered when major automobile companies began offering low-interest car loans, have fought hard to regain their market share and started other financial services for members.

"The dealer discounts cut into our car loan business, and we had to readjust our thinking — no doubt about it," said Gerald Deering, president of the 40,000-member Educational Employees Credit Union of Fort Worth.

The state's credit union industry has since thrived, while some high-flying banks and savings and savings and loans have taken a tumble in the troubled Texas economy.

Credit unions offered group programs with discounts on fleet purchases and preapproved car loans that enabled buyers to walk into showrooms, ready to work out final prices. Credit unions are getting back lost car loans from automakers.

"Our members have learned to ask questions about those low-interest programs," Peggy Gage, vice president for operations at Fort Worth's largest credit union, the Federal Employees' Credit Union, said.

Many automakers' loans have prepayment penalties, do not apply to the most popular cars and have shorter repayment terms, she said.

"We can generally offer them about the same kind of monthly payment, over a longer period, even with higher interest," said Ms. Gage.

Deering said the first automaker low-interest loans two years ago cut the auto loan share of his business from 50 percent to about 40 percent.

But he said "auto loans are back to about the same percentage of the portfolio that they were before the discount rates began."

Residents, company split over plans for toxic waste facility

LONE STAR (AP) — A plan by this east Texas city's namesake and largest employer to build a hazardous waste incinerator on the southern outskirts of town has angered many residents.

Proponents say 100 jobs would be created from Lone Star Steel's construction of the facility, a significant number in an area of the state where one in four adults is unemployed.

The project, an $18 million to $25 million incinerator that would consume 75,000 tons of waste each year — including solvents, pesticides, acids, waste oils and PCBs — could also breathe economic life into Dallas-based Lone Star Technologies Inc. It has been losing money since 1983.

Thermal Kinetics, the Lone Star subsidiary that will build and operate the facility, plans to apply for state and federal permits for the incinerator in October. If approved, construction would begin in a year and be complete in early 1990.

But many residents of the area — a collection of small towns in the piney hills north of Longview — plan to fight the granting of those permits. Three hundred are expected to attend an organizational meeting in a high school auditorium this week, says project opponent Earl Jones of Daingerfield.

"We've got a haven here in East Texas, a paradise most people only dream of. The cool pines, the hills, four or five lakes to fish in — I don't want to see that ruined," said Mike Carter, who owns a dry cleaning shop in Daingerfield.

Thermal Kinetics officials say they're as concerned about the environment as anyone.

"What we're trying to do is come up with the very best way to handle these hazardous materials that we all know are already out there," said Paul Thompson, president of Thermal Kinetics.

Bruce Riekels, Thermal Kinetics' general manager, said the company has gone to extraordinary measures to insure that the incinerator won't pollute the air or water.

That system, Riekels says, includes watertight concrete walls surrounding storage tanks, an automatic fire control system with up to 750,000 gallons of water and a back-up, and a four- to five-foot high levee surrounding the site.

Roger Meachem, a spokesman for the Dallas regional office of the Environmental Protection Agency, said the company's application will be subjected to an "excruciatingly detailed" review.

Suites add touch of chic to rodeo arena

MESQUITE (AP) — Rodeo has always been a sport of sun-bleached bleachers and dusty arenas.

But the swank suites on the third level of the year-old Mesquite Arena have ushered in a new rodeo chic.

The 78 private suites lease for $10,000 a year and attract movie stars, royalty, politicians and big-dollar businesses.

"Everybody wants to go to a rodeo," said Charles Seeds, a car dealer who uses his suite to entertain friends and business associates. "It's like a circus, and a private suite with air conditioning and closed-circuit television is the only way to watch it."

Prince Ranier and Princess Stephanie of Monaco have watched rodeo events from the suites, as have Dallas Cowboys running back Herschel Walker, country and western singers Lee Greenwood and Patsy Montana, actor Rob Lowe and model Cheryl Tiegs. Each of the rodeo suites is equipped with a telephone, refrigerator, wet bar and closed-circuit television for replays of rodeo events or standard television programming.

Maeve Hillery, the wife of Patrick Hillery, president of the Republic of Ireland, watched her first rodeo from one of the suites recently.

"This is the first time I've seen this in the flesh, so to speak," Mrs. Hilery said.

Mrs. Hillery's hostess and longtime friend, Jen Brodrick of Dallas, said she frequently brings friends and family from Europe to the rodeo.

"It's always a place to bring international guests," Mrs. Brodrick said. "I mean, this is Texas. It's cowboy country, and they want to see cowboys."

Some of the individuals and companies who lease the suites say they enjoy watching sports or other events in private, but others entertain business clients in lavish western settings.

Jim Wright makes living from grants

With Congress in such a huff about ethics violations by the Reagan administration, it might take a look at its own comandante, House Speaker Jim Wright. This great American has done well by serving the people: Wright has not disclosed his exact net worth; ethics laws require only disclosure of a broad range. But after becoming majority leader in 1977, his reported worth rose from near zilch to $899,997 in 1981, according to The Wall Street Journal. The oil slump reduced that to $464,996 in 1986. Though who knows, really? As a comparison, Teddy Kennedy reveals only a fraction of his half-billion-dollar net worth. Whatever the case, it's obvious that congressional rank has its privileges — and profits.

Wright's business partner, Fort Worth developer George Malick, has helped the House speaker "earn tens of thousands of dollars from real estate, oil wells, and imported rubies," The Wall Street Journal writes. "At the same time, Malick was angling for a stake in a partnership that aims to turn Fort Worth's historic stockyards area into 'the Williamsburg of the West.'" To help his good buddy, Wright earmarked $11.8 million "for the area in two federal money bills."
Wright earned a minimum $17,502 salary for his work with Malick, not including profits. Says Malick of one business venture: "It earned some dough and we got some tax advantages." Ah, the risky life of a capitalist!

No wonder Wright, who keeps chanting for higher taxes, has no idea how much high taxes hurt entrepreneurs. To him all economic growth seems to stem from government grants or special tax breaks bequeathed by oily politicians like himself.

With Malick's help, Wright has skewed banking legislation to benefit insolvent Texas savings and loan banks, most of which are run by Democratic campaign contributors whose get-rich-quick business schemes went bust. Malick told The Wall Street Journal the full cost "could easily be $50 billion... Yes, the speaker realizes that, and he's worried about it." Imagine that: $50 billion — pulled from the pocketbooks of taxpayers, rich middle class and poor alike — to pay off these gamblers' debts.

Imagine the hypocrisy. Congress has spent eight months and untold millions of dollars investigating $3 million in arms shipped to the ayatollah, possibly illegally. Heck, the $50 billion Wright's deals might cost us could fund the whole Iranian army for years. And let's not forget the ongoing investigation into Ed Meese's questionable investments, the amount of which couldn't even pick up the bar tab for a Wright-Malick deal.

"Some statesmen go to Congress and some go to jail," wrote Eugene Field. "It is the same thing, after all."

Author indicts higher education

WASHINGTON — How in the world, I am minded to ask, did Allan Bloom's The Closing of the American Mind make it to the top of the best-seller lists? This is the powerful work of an intellectual writing for other intellectuals. It demands of the reader more background in philosophy than most of us can bring to its pages. It is heavy stuff. Yet it is selling like bagged ice in mid-August.

Bloom is a professor of philosophy at the University of Chicago. His book is a wide-ranging critique of higher education in the United States, and especially of higher education at the highest levels. More broadly, it is an examination of American culture — a word he regards with intense skepticism — toward the end of the 20th century. He hands down a sweeping indictment of our top universities. They are failing in their essential mission, which is to imbue their best students with a clear idea of what an educated human being is.

The book may be attracting a phenomenal audience in part because it is beautifully written. Heaven knows American education has had its eloquent critics. Hyman Rickover contrasted our high schools with those of Switzerland; Arthur Trace made comparisons with Soviet schools; James D. Koerner looked at our system and England's and found ours poorer. Charles Moser, Arthur Bestor, Mortimer Smith, Albert Lynd, Theodore Gross, Paul Copperman, Rudolf Flesch — all of them have pointed to substantially the same shortcomings. James Buchanan's "Academia in Anarchy" in 1970 was a forerunner of Bloom's polemic. But none of these critics, valuable as they have been, has written so superbly. Every page of "The Closing of the American Mind" crackles with quotable lines.

James J. Kilpatrick

Bloom feels passionately about the decline of the university. He is a profoundly angry man, but the virtue of his work is that he keeps a tight rein on the horses of his rage. He has special contempt for the university administrators who have yielded, belly-up, to the demands of pressure groups. Bloom was teaching at Cornell in the 1960s when gun-toting black students intimidated the president and made a travesty of academic integrity. His chapter on Cornell's capitulation is written not in ink, but in acid.

One fundamental trouble, he contends, is that the three major disciplines — the natural sciences, the social sciences and the humanities — tend to operate separately. They do not accept the wholeness of higher education. An incoming student "must navigate among a collection of carnival barkers, each trying to lure him into a particular sideshow." The greatest of our universities "cannot generate a modest program of general education for undergraduate students." They are not dealing with "the undeniable fact that the students who enter are uncivilized, and that the universities have some responsibility for civilizing them."

Bloom strikes with particular venom at his colleagues in the humanities. At Cornell they pusillanimously surrendered to the most radical students. At many universities professors all but abandoned the old learning in order to embrace trendy new courses in Black Studies, Women's Studies, Peace Studies and the like. "Humanists ran like lemmings into the sea, thinking they would refresh and revitalize themselves in it. They drowned."

It was better in the 1940s and 1950s, Bloom believes, before the animals took over the zoo. Thirty or 40 years ago, an atmosphere prevailed in which serious teaching was possible. He is not at all certain that such an atmosphere can be recaptured today. The differences and the indifference are too great. "It is difficult to imagine that there is either the wherewithal or the energy within the university to constitute or reconstitute the idea of an educated human being and establish a liberal education again."

If this can be done at all, it must be done by reeducation at the highest levels. Unfortunately, Bloom's plea for a return to the old ways has been met by sniffs and scowls. It is complained that Bloom is "too idealistic," that he forgets "the real world," that his "elitist" notions take no account of the desire of most undergraduate students to get on with their careers. I suspect that Bloom would accept most of this criticism cheerfully. His aim is to graduate students who can think; later on they can learn to do.

Bloom's book promises to be the book of the year. In an ideal world, every entering freshman would read it — especially the last 80 pages — and every top-flight student would dream of studying under a professor of Bloom's conviction. He lights fires.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Aug. 24, the 236th day of 1987. There are 129 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Aug. 24, A.D. 79, long-dormant Mount Vesuvius erupted, burying the Roman cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum in volcanic ash. An estimated 20,000 people died.

On this date:

In 410, Rome was overrun by the Visigoths, an event that symbolized the fall of the Western Roman Empire.

In 1572, the slaughter of French Protestants at the hands of Catholics began in Paris on St. Bartholomew's Day. The killings lasted until October and claimed some 13,000 victims throughout France.

In 1814, British forces invaded Washington and proceeded to set fire to the Capitol and the White House.

Screaming reels awaken lives

I'm going to let L.J. Willett of Jackson, Minn., answer the question: What is a fisherman?
"A fisherman may be a youngster with patched trousers, knotted string, bent pin and a willow stick."
"He may be a dude with fancy fly rod and creel."
"Or an old pro with chalk line and cane pole."
"Any of these may be the ardent creature we call a fisherman."
"Anglers come in all dimensions, colors, flavors, temperaments, cars, canoes and professions."
"They growl if the youngsters awaken them on Sunday morning at 9, but they smile if awakened by an auto horn Sunday morning at 3."
"When the reel sings, they forget all laws, in-laws, stock markets, business, war, death and taxes."
"You will find them on top of, crawling under, perched upon, leaning against, soaked with, trudging after, stumbling over, yearning for, scrounging in search of, doing without, wading into, boasting about, forgetting where, remembering when and smelling of."
"Dads teach them, 'widows' wait for them, neighbors ridicule them and when the game warden searches them — heaven help them."
"A fisherman is a man who would go broke if he used the same weights and measures in his private business."
"He is too tired to push a lawn mower over smooth grass, yet can set a speed record wading upstream, over rocks and under water and wearing hip boots.

Paul Harvey

"At home his ulcers nag him, noise upsets him, a draft chills him, nobody can cook for him."
"On the trail, the outboard roar soothes him, the wind invigorates him, a can of beans fills him."
"The fisherman is truth taken lightly, with the appetite of a horse, the energy of a dynamo, sleeps like a dog, curious as a cat, bellicose as a bull, dependable as a dollar watch, a night owl for hours, a bear for punishment, the imagination of a child, the fortitude of a deadbeat relative, and on backlash, the vocabulary of a waterfront parrot."
"No one but a fisherman can rise so early, miss so many meals, carouse so late, strain so much and come home all rested up."
"His arthritis won't let him transplant two rosebushes, but he can dig a foot-deep ditch a back-yard long before breakfast — looking for worms."

"He is contentment with fish scales under his fingernails and a hardware store in his pocket. Rusty daredevils, stinking minnows, dried dough balls, long-gone grub worms, shriveled earthworms, assorted sinkers, tangled leaders, bent hooks, defiant knife, twin-type bottle opener, illegible license, two keys, three old invoices, a state map, wet matches, reeking pipe, soggy tobacco."
"And one damaged and unidentifiable something that's no good for anything but 'might come in handy.'"
"At home an open window makes him a bed case."
"Up river he's Captain Courageous pulling both oars against the whitecaps — bareheaded."
"At home he says the butcher has a lead thumb..."
"But the fisherman refuses to compute the gross cost of his solitary perch."
"At home he says Junior's dinnertime hands must be washed twice."
"But the fisherman can slouch in a boat nibbling a sandwich with the same hands that just baited up."
"You can threaten the fisherman, insult him, seize his property. You can pin his shoulders to the ground just by looking scornfully at his empty stringer and saying nothing..."
"But when you have done your best and said your worst he'll merely reply..."
"So the big ones got away, but I know where they are now!"

Crooked federal judges dishonor position

By Robert Walters

BLOXI, Miss. (NEA) — Judge Walter L. Nixon Jr. still regularly uses the somber, wood-paneled chambers reserved for the chief judge of the U.S. District Court in the squat federal building here on Mississippi's Gulf Coast.

But Nixon no longer presides over any litigation. Indeed, he has been on an indefinite self-imposed leave of absence from his official duties since a federal grand jury indicted him two years ago on bribery and perjury charges.

Until late 1981, no sitting federal judge had never been indicted in this country. Since then, however, three have been formally accused of engaging in criminal activities. Two have been convicted.

Are those recent developments evidence of unprecedented corruption within the federal judiciary, a branch of government long renowned for its probity and integrity?

Probably not. Since federal judges are fallible mortals, it's likely that some of them have always succumbed to illegal temptations but have been insulated from prosecution because of their special status.

Thus, the recent spate of indictments and trials could well indicate a salutary shift away from the traditional belief that federal judges somehow are above the law.

The first of the three indicted — and the only one acquitted — was Judge Alcee L. Hastings of Miami, found not guilty after a 1983 trial on charges of obstruction of justice and conspiring to solicit a bribe.

Despite that acquittal, the Judicial Conference of the United States, a panel of 27 appellate judges charged with setting policy for the federal judiciary, has recommended to Congress that "consideration of impeachment may be warranted." An impeachment resolution was introduced in the House five months ago but the Judiciary Committee has shown no inclination to act upon it.

Judge Harry E. Claiborne of Las Vegas was convicted in 1984 of attempting to evade federal taxes by failing to report approximately $100,000 in income. He was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $10,000.

Because Claiborne refused to relinquish his judgeship and salary, Congress last year was forced to take the extraordinary step of impeaching him.

When Nixon was indicted in 1985, the accusations tarnished the reputation of a prominent political family with a tradition of public service. Nixon's father was a longtime county commissioner here.

When local residents discuss the case, the one word they repeatedly use is "tragedy." Nixon's critics say it's a tragedy that he brought shame to the community and the judiciary, while his defenders say it's a tragedy that a brilliant legal career has been truncated by specious allegations.

Nixon was accused of accepting royalty interests in three oil and gas wells in 1981 from Wiley Fairchild, a wealthy Hattiesburg, Miss., businessman. In return, Nixon allegedly promised to aid Fairchild if his help was ever needed. Nixon paid Fairchild $9,500 for the well leases but they produced more than $60,000 in income.

According to the government, Nixon had an opportunity to return the favor in 1982 when Fairchild's son, Drew, was accused of participating in a drug-smuggling conspiracy at the Hattiesburg airport. Although state rather than federal charges were involved, Nixon was accused of interceding with the prosecutor in the case on behalf of Drew Fairchild.

Last year, Nixon was acquitted of the bribery charge and one perjury count — but he was convicted on two other charges of lying to a grand jury, then sentenced to five years in prison.

That conviction was upheld four months ago by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. If subsequent appeals fail and Nixon persists in holding onto his lifetime appointment and $81,100 annual salary, he also could face impeachment proceedings.

Congressional report indicates guidance problems may compromise MX reliability

WASHINGTON (AP) — Numerous guidance problems with the multi-warhead MX missile are raising "serious questions" about the dependability of one of the nation's front-line nuclear weapons, a House committee report says.

"Of the 22 deployed so far, eight don't even have a guidance system and are thus clearly and obviously unguided missiles," said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee that released the report Sunday.

One hundred of the missiles are expected to be deployed. "The Air Force says the other 14 are fine, but it has appointed a scientific panel to look into the issues, which indicates the Air Force isn't so sure," Aspin said.

The report from the Democratic-controlled panel was sharply critical of Northrop Corp., which built the inertial measurement unit, as the guidance system is formally known. It also criticized the Air Force for pushing quantity instead of quality.

Northrop responded by building the program so rapidly that corners were cut, the report said.

The Washington Post, meanwhile, stated in today's editions that the Air Force has suspended all MX flight tests while it seeks to resolve questions about the missiles' accuracy, basing its report on unidentified Defense Department and congressional sources.

The newspaper said Brig. Gen. Charles A. May Jr., Air Force deputy director for advanced programs, confirmed that the Air Force decided to delay three remaining MX flight tests "so that we could better understand these changes" in missile accuracy.

Lt. Col. Richard Oborn, a spokesman for the Air Force, disputed the conclusions about the accuracy of the weapon, which is known formally as the Peacekeeper.

"There's no question about the capability of the Peacekeeper system. Its accuracy has been demonstrated in 17 test flights," Oborn said.

Tony Cantafio, a spokesman for Northrop, said he had not seen the panel's report and could not respond to specifics in the document.

But Cantafio added, "The Air Force has stated that the guidance unit is exceeding its reliability requirements and has met or exceeded its accuracy requirements in the 17 test flights thus far."

"Our problem has been one of quantity, not quality," Cantafio said. "Since May, 21 new units have been accepted by the Air Force and we've reduced the backlog from 23 to 17 units."

"The Air Force likes to cite the success of the test program," Aspin said. "But our investigation shows that only five of the 17 test shots have used the production version of the guidance system, as opposed to the research version."

"And of those five shots, two fell far outside the target zone," he said. "That's a success rate of 60 percent, which scores a 'D' most places."

"As a result of the significant management deficiencies and ineffective program monitoring, serious questions of confidence in the deployed MX missile force have arisen," the report said.

Oborn agreed that only five tests used the production version of the guidance system.

The report summarized a series of hearings held earlier this summer by the panel's research and development subcommittee and its procurement subcommittee.

The dispute is only the latest controversy surrounding the MX, the 10-warhead weapon that has been one of the main components of President Reagan's program of building new nuclear weapons.

Brothers starting school amid AIDS concerns

ARCADIA, Fla. (AP) — Three hemophilic brothers who carry the AIDS virus braved death threats as they prepared to return to their public elementary school for the first time in a year.

A federal court order reinstating the children in regular classes is being contested by a parents' group, Citizens Against AIDS in Schools, which called for a week-long boycott of classes.

Louise and Cliff Ray kept their sons Ricky, 10, Robert, 9, and Randy, 8, in seclusion Sunday, a day after the family received four threatening telephone calls. One hysterical caller said, "Your children will die," and another threatened to burn down their house, according to Ray.

"It's a little tense. The boys are anxious about it," Louise Ray said as she got school clothes ready for today's start of the school year.

"To be honest with you, we're afraid for their safety," Judith Kavanaugh, the family's attorney, said Sunday. "We hope this is just a vocal, crazy minority and that this will blow over in time."

tem for socialization as well as education." Gilbert said home schooling isolates students too much from the "marketplace of ideas." Without a variety of teachers, he said, students can't receive the full scope of ideas.

But Dr. Raymond Moore — founder of the Hewitt-Moore Child Development Center in Washington, Wash., a home-school research foundation — disagreed.

Moore, a former public school superintendent and college dean in California, said young children sense rejection by their parents when sent off to school, and subsequently become "peer-dependent." He blamed peer dependency for the increasing problems with teen-age sex and drugs.

"They will knuckle under to their peers for their values," Moore said. "They lose their self-worth. They lose optimism. They lose respect for their parents, and they even lose respect for their peers."

Moore said home-schooled youngsters rate highly in terms of self-confidence and mature more quickly than students from traditional public or private schools.

Moore and other home school advocates argue that students can get plenty of positive socialization by participating in church groups, Scouts, sports, and by associating with other home-schooled children in the various home-school support organizations around the country.

Ray and Gail Winter, 1536 Coffee St., began educating their 6-year-old daughter Samarah at home this summer. Samarah would have been in first grade this year.

Mrs. Winter admitted that a home-school family could easily become an island, but "three-fourths of that battle is won when you realize that could become a problem and you take steps to prevent that from happening."

"I believe with all my heart that, with all the activities we have for our children, they will get plenty of socialization," said Mrs. Winter, a former public school teacher.

Asks Larry Hendrick: "How much socialization goes on in a classroom where, if a kid does speak to another kid, he's told to shut up and sit down?"

But Dr. Gilbert said activities such as Scouts and church groups, while valuable, don't go far enough in teaching social skills.

Gilbert said associating only with those who hold similar beliefs can lead to a form of "academic in-breeding."

"The marketplace of ideas is so important, and we don't get the full menu if we associate only with those who believe as we do," Gilbert said. "We may not agree with (all of them), but these ideas we'll be exposed to for the rest of our lives."

Class

by textbooks dealing with everything from English grammar to world economics, Kelly admitted there have been a few drawbacks to learning from Mom and Dad.

"Your resources aren't quite as good, yet not quite as bad as most people might think," he said. "You don't have chemicals like you do in your science or chemistry classes. We don't have bunsen burners all over the house."

But, he is quick to add, the disadvantages are overshadowed by the advantages.

He said he can learn at his own pace, or delve into a subject that interests him.

"If I want to learn about submarines, I can go to the library, and I've got unlimited resources at my disposal," Kelly explained.

Dan Snider, chief librarian at Lovett Memorial Library, said the Hendricks visit the library about twice a week, and frequently borrow materials.

Kelly said he enjoys the opportunity to take his time mastering subjects he's less skilled in — without the pressure of having to keep up with any classmates.

Achievement tests provided by various Christian home-school organizations — and administered to Kelly by his parents — also allow him to progress more rapidly in subjects that come easy for him.

"His learning is based on knowledge, not age," Mrs. Hendrick said. "He's not just studying what the public schools say a 16-year-old should study."

Kelly said public schools place too much emphasis on tests. Students prepare for weeks for one test, then, two weeks later, everything is forgotten, he said.

"The worst thing is getting, say, a 73. You get a 73, and you don't really understand it, but still you're passed on," he said. "I can study at my own pace."

"I've always liked to learn on my own. That's the one thing they've taught me since I was very young was how to learn on my own — and enjoy learning on my own."

Kelly said being schooled at home also has taught him independence. Many students, he said, are afraid to do anything that might make them stand out from the crowd.

"They're so afraid of not being accepted that they say, 'If I do everything just like everybody else, they'll have no choice but to accept me,'" he said. "I'm a relatively independent person. I don't like other people telling me what to do and where to go."

He said he has developed his own tastes in clothes and other interests since leaving Pampa Middle School. An avid bicyclist, he races throughout the year, and also is active in scouting.

Kelly's parents believe these activities and church youth functions provide the needed associations with his peers and are more positive influences than the public schools.

Kelly hasn't yet decided on what he wants to do in the future, but mentions the military and college as possibilities.

He admitted that home schooling takes a lot of self-discipline on the part of the student.

"No one's there to tell you to do it," he said. "You have to just go do it."

He said most of his friends thought him lucky when he left the school system. But, like them, he said he still has to get up in the morning and face his lessons.

"Most people have no idea how it really runs," he said. "It's different than we imagined."

Lonetree faces possible life sentence today

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Sgt. Clayton Lonetree's lawyers say they think they have a better chance getting his conviction overturned than gaining leniency when he is sentenced for allegedly passing secrets to his Soviet lover.

The eight military jurors who convicted the 25-year-old American Indian on Friday on 13 counts could issue a life prison term today.

As in the month-long trial, which was punctuated by frequent government censorship, the defense planned to call no witnesses during the sentencing hearing, said defense attorney Michael Stuhff.

"If this conviction does stand, it is time for us to surrender and say the Soviet Union has won, there is no difference between their system and ours," Stuhff said.

Lonetree, of St. Paul, Minn., was the first Marine to stand court-martial for espionage. Authorities alleged he gave the KGB, the Soviet secret police, identities of CIA agents and floor plans to the U.S. embassies in Moscow and Vienna, where he worked as a guard. Prosecutors charged him with passing secrets to the Soviets after falling in love with a Soviet translator, Violetta Sanni.

Lonetree's lawyers said he gave away nothing of value.

Stuhff and defense attorney William Kuntler said late Sunday they had not added up the entire maximum sentence Lonetree could receive.

"It's up to two lives and a bunch of years — we didn't work it out," Stuhff said. "We're going to be going for another end of the spectrum."

Lonetree could receive no punishment, but Stuhff said he believed the sentence would be severe.

Regardless of the sentence, Lonetree's lawyers said they should be able to get the convictions overturned, based on their assertion that their client was railroaded by a military judge.

The judge, Navy Capt. Philip F. Roberts, declined to comment, according to a Marine public affairs official who fielded a written request asking about the defense allegations. The defense said it was forced to rest its case without calling a witness because Roberts prevented most of the defense witnesses from testifying. Stuhff and Kuntler also said Roberts gutted their case by stopping them from asking vital questions of some of the 32 prosecution witnesses.

The defense attorneys said they have numerous issues on which to appeal to a military appeals court, and, if necessary, to the civilian court system.

The prosecutors, Marine Maj. David L. Beck and Frank R. Short, were not available for comment, said Quantico Marine Corps base spokesman Gunnery Sgt. Dean Chamberlain.

But some of Lonetree's Indian relatives, who have alleged the case was racially motivated, sharply criticized the government.

His mother, Sally Tsosie of the Navajo Indian Reservation in Arizona, told reporters her son's conviction was merely the latest chapter in a long history of injustices Indians have suffered at the hands of the federal government.

Tropical storms slow down

MIAMI (AP) — The first hurricane of the Atlantic season is nothing more than a rain storm heading for Ireland and Tropical Storm Bret has dwindled to a tropical wave, forecasters at the National Hurricane Center said this morning.

Former Hurricane "Arlene is so far off the edge of our satellite picture (that) we don't like to give a position," said meteorologist Max Mayfield. "It remains are moving off Newfoundland heading northeastward toward Ireland."

Arlene was downgraded from hurricane to tropical storm status Sunday after its top winds dropped to 70 mph. Late Sunday, the storm's top winds were 50 mph and the storm was moving east northeast at 40 to 45 mph, according to advisories issued by the center in nearby Coral Gables.

Meanwhile, Bret degenerated to tropical wave status Sunday after forecasters couldn't find any circulation to the weather system in satellite pictures.

"We don't have any named storms anywhere," Mayfield said. "It's very peaceful for the middle of the hurricane season."

However, "we're watching the tropical wave that was formally Tropical Storm Bret," he said.

At 10:30 p.m. EDT Sunday, National Hurricane Center forecasters issued the last tropical forecast they planned to make on Bret and Arlene.

Bret's remnants were about 600 miles northeast of Antigua heading northwest near 15 mph with top winds of 25 mph.

Storms are named when their winds hit 39 mph, and they become hurricanes when sustained winds reach 74 mph.

Reference to 'beer drinking' Hispanics in magazine angers some leaders

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Some Hispanic leaders are upset that an article in Newsweek about Hispanics' preparations for Pope John Paul II's visit mentioned beer-drinking and barbecues instead of pious activities.

Cruz Chavira, District 15 director of LULAC in San Antonio, said he does not think Hispanics will be drinking beer and eating barbecue.

"In our culture, for grandmothers, grandfathers and heads of households, this is the ultimate day for all families that have deep religious convictions," he said.

"It would appear they are confusing the pope's visit with a rock concert. There is a world of difference between those two events."

The article, which appeared today, said, "in San Antonio, thousands of Hispanics plan to camp out overnight with beer and barbecues so they can be among the expected 500,000 at the pontiff's 11 a.m. Mass."

"I'm saddened that that is the only thing Newsweek can say about our preparation for the papal visit," said Father David Garcia, secretary to Archbishop Patrick Flores and chairman of the papal site committee.

But Father Virgilio Elizondo, rector of San Fernando Cathedral, who had told the article's writer about the way people might spend the night before the visit, said he did not find the story offensive.

However, he added he did not limit the statement to Hispanics as the story did.

"Why discriminate against the others?" Elizondo said Friday. "It's a San Antonio tradition. We have barbecues and drink beer and ice tea and Big Red."

The author of the article, Newsweek senior writer Kenneth L. Woodward, said Friday he did not understand the objection.

"I don't see how that could be construed as stereotypical," Woodward said. "People who are anything but Hispanic do the same thing."

But Hispanic leaders faulted the magazine for what they said was an inaccurate portrayal of the Sept. 13 event.

"It's an insult," said City Council member Maria Berriozabal. "Newsweek is a credible magazine — I thought. It's hard to believe that statement."

"Of all things they could have said about Hispanics and the pope, why that?"

Richard Teniente, a past president of the San Antonio School District board and a former city councilman, said he was outraged by the article.

"It has nothing about the (spiritual) fulfillment," Teniente said.

City-country barbers have lot in common

By DAVE SAELENS
Beaumont Enterprise

BUNA (AP) — Wendel and Curt seem an awful lot alike, but you don't ever want to say that in front of them. They'll set you straight in a hurry.

You see, Wendel Widener runs a one-chair barber shop in a little red shed out on U.S. 96 just on the edge of town. He charges $5 for either a regular haircut or a flat top, and the hand-marked sign on the wall next to a little plaque reading "The Management of This Establishment is Not Responsible" will tell you so.

Wendel calls himself a rural barber. He's downright content with the little shop where he sets his own hours and lets the haircuts that leave his place do the advertising for him.

Curt Stimits, on the other hand, is a city barber. His shop sits right smack in the center of town on Main Street, just past the railroad tracks and right next to the appliance store.

Curt uses only one barber chair, but there's a spare in the corner just in case all the hustle and bustle of downtown Buna wears one out. And Curt, with the overhead of the big city being what it is and all, charges 25 cents more for a flat top.

But there's something strange about all this city-barber, country-barber talk. Especially when you take a good look around their stores.

Both of them keep a big jar of bubble gum on the shelf below a mirror lit by a long fluorescent bulb. All of their customers are tended to in antique iron barber chairs, and both barbers use straight-edge razors to shave the little hairs behind their customers' ears.

And they both use the same brand of green hair tonic.

When it comes right down to it, the barbers of Buna will agree they're both pretty much country barbers, but they wouldn't have it any other way.

"I tell you what, I catch more fish in here than anywhere else," Wendel says, commenting on how tall tales are more common in barber shops than little tiny hairs left behind your collar after a haircut.

And Curt agrees. "This is the best place in the world to catch a big fish, and have a full pardon when you walk out the door," he says with a chuckle. "The only reason I like barberin' so much is you can lie and get away with it."

The two barbers who even seem to talk alike have more than once thought about combining their talents and opening up Buna's first two-chair shop. But for one reason or another, they just never got around to it.

"I never really wanted a store in town. There's really no property for sale and I don't want to rent a spot," Wendel says, lathering up a customer and sharpening his straight-edge razor. "And I never thought about expanding out here. If I had more customers I'd need two people working here, and I like running this place myself."

Curt, on the other hand, likes to be where it's convenient for folks, but doesn't want to move any place much bigger.

"I always said a town with a stoplight was too big," he says, lathering up a customer's ears and sharpening his straight-edge razor.

"Well, we got one now and I'm still here."

The talk at both shops is usually pretty good just about any time of day, whether it's about the weather, the Buna Cougars or who's been up to what.

"There's people around here who know what's happening before it happens," Wendel laughs.

But unlike the rest of the barbers in the world, these two don't compete with each other. If either Curt or Wendel needs anything they call each other. Of course they have to wait until they get home, since neither has a phone at his shop.

They've been running their stores about 20 years each, but neither one has any plans to change locations. At least not anytime soon.

"I call these one-horse barber shops," Curt says. "Once a man gets into it, he can't quit cause he ain't got enough money to leave town on."

Woman wary of swingers who may swing both ways

DEAR ABBY: With the recent concern about AIDS, I need to know the answer to this question: We women can use our common sense when choosing to have a heterosexual affair, but how do we tell the difference when it comes to a bisexual man? They are very difficult to recognize.

What are the signs to look for? Are there some specific behavioral patterns? How can one tell the difference between a homosexual and a bisexual man? Thank you.
NO NAME

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR NO NAME: I sought the advice of renowned psychoanalyst Dr. Judd Marmor, who has long been my chief psychiatric consultant. He said: "There is no consistent or dependable way to distinguish bisexual persons from heterosexual ones. They do not necessarily look different, or behave differently. They can even be good lovers."

"There is, however, one difference between bisexual and exclusively homosexual males. Exclusively homosexual men are usually unable or uninterested in responding sexually to a woman."

"Before a woman becomes seriously involved with a man, she should know him well enough and intimately enough to develop the kind of mutual honesty that will bring any unusual sexual patterns out into the open."

In other words (mine): You will have to take your partner's word for it. And if you can't believe him, you have no business being in bed with him.

DEAR ABBY: I could have written that letter signed "Touch-Me-

Not." I was glad to see it because I thought I was the only person in the world who did not like to be touched by people I don't know very well. I am a woman, and I particularly do not like to be touched by men.

Now, please tell me — and other women like me — how to signal the touchers of the world to please keep their hands off me? I am not a cold person, but here's the way most men operate: First, they touch your hand, then they place a hand around your shoulder and tend to draw you closer, and unless they are stopped, before you know it, they have their arm around your waist, and so on. So how do I handle that situation?

INDIANA TOUCH-ME-NOT

DEAR TOUCH-ME-NOT: When a man whose advances you do not welcome touches your hand, deftly move so that you are not within his reach. If he repositions himself and touches you again, move — but not so subtly this time. If he either doesn't get the message or chooses to ignore it and places a hand on you, don't rely on body language — get verbal. If that fails — leave.

People used to dine with spiders and bugs

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Spiders, insects, birds and bats were popular decorations on some of the fine early art pottery made at the Rookwood Pottery in Cincinnati.

Perhaps it was the Japanese influence on the designs first made by Maria Longworth Nichols and other women who worked at the pottery. The Japanese designs and the French pottery shown at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876 were the models for the first vases made at Rookwood.

A strange, almost smeared multicolor glaze was favored for the background of pictures of realistic birds and insects.

Today, it may seem strange to see a vase covered with spiders used as a centerpiece on a dinner table. It was not a problem for our ancestors.

Q. I have a round beveled mirror that measures about 20 inches in diameter. It is a beautiful blue color. Why would anyone make a blue mirror?

A. Blue glass mirrors were in style in the 1930s. It became almost the trademark of the decorators of the American Art Deco style. Radios, clocks, furniture and mirrors were made of blue glass.

Q. I need information on hair receivers. When were they made? Why was the hair saved?

A. Hair receivers are small round bowls with special covers. A hole in the center lets you stuff your fallen hair into the bowl.

The long hair in style in the mid-1800s was brushed each night, and the hair caught by the brush was saved. It was used to make hair jewelry, hair pictures or to make special "rats" worn in the hair to hold high pompadours.

Q. I have a lady doll. The head and arms are made of bisque. The body is a hollow long skirt. The skirt is narrow and about 5 inches from the waist.

I have heard that this is a "half doll" and was used to cover teapots or used as a pincushion. My mother has always called this her telephone doll, but we can't imagine why.

A. Half dolls were used to hide many objects, from teapots to powder boxes. Some were used on lamp bases. A few were made to hide the tall stick-type telephones of the 1930s.

There were instructions for making these covers in some of the ladies' magazines of the day. Many of these dolls were made with wax composition heads instead of bisque.

New half dolls are now appearing in gift shops.

Q. I collect political memorabilia and have a brochure telling about the Townsend Plan. It seems to have been part of a political campaign. Can you tell me which president or party it represented?

A. When Dr. Townsend was 66 years old in 1933, he was laid off work. He lost his job as the director of the City Health Department of Long Beach, Calif., because the city did not have the funds.

He had lost his money in the stock market crash in 1929 and needed a job. There were many other old people with similar problems. He wrote a letter to the local paper to suggest a transaction tax to support the elderly.

It didn't take long before he soon was asked to give lectures and to organize a movement to back the Townsend Plan. Every citizen over 60 was to get a government check for $200 a month. This money would be spent, stimulate the economy and end the Depression.

Townsend suggested that everyone send in a dime to support the cause. Five million dimes were sent, which caused a national shortage of dimes.

His ideas came well before the Social Security Act was passed. Most politicians, including President Franklin Roosevelt, disapproved of the Townsend Plan.

TREATMENT FOR STIFF NECK

If you're suffering from a stiff neck, don't wait for it to take care of itself when treatment is available to correct it.

Of all the bones in the spinal column, none are more easily injured or more vulnerable than the seven vertebrae in the neck. None are moved more often. We are constantly turning our heads to look at people and things.

Neck stiffness can have many causes, from sudden and violent accidents to such simple activities as painting a ceiling or just sitting reading a book for a long time. But there's nothing simple about the pain.

A careful examination will reveal the source of the pain and how best to treat it. Any misaligned vertebrae in the spinal column should be properly adjusted so there will be no abnormal pressure on your nervous system. Treatment may also include exercises for the cervical muscles such as gently rotating your head in all directions. This can help restore muscle strength and tone.

Brazil stuns USA in Pan Am basketball final

Sixteen year, 34 game win streak over

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The United States may have had the best basketball team, but Brazil had the best player.

And with the Pan American Games gold medal on the line, the best player ran circles around the best team.

Oscar Schmidt's 3-pointers, particularly in the second half, erased a 14-point halftime deficit Sunday as Brazil beat the U.S. basketball team 120-115, one of the most incredible upsets ever.

It wasn't supposed to happen, and certainly not right in the U.S.

After all, the Americans had not lost in Pan Am competition since 1971; they had a 34-game win streak and eight of nine Pan Am basketball golds.

This was a team with All-Americans David Robinson and Danny Manning, coached by Louisville's Denny Crum, returning to Market Square Arena, where he won his first NCAA championship.

Everyone was impressed. Except Oscar Schmidt and Brazil '87.

"The difference was their experience, and they hit 3-pointers even under pressure," Crum said. Navy's talented Robinson helped sink the United States by fouling out with about seven minutes to go. When he left, so did all U.S. control under the boards.

"In all the history of world basketball," said Jose Medalha, a Brazilian assistant coach, "no one has done anything like this, to beat the United States in their own house. Americans will never forget it."

When the buzzer sounded, Schmidt dropped to the floor beneath the U.S. basket, put his hands over his face and sobbed.

Other teammates carried the Brazilian flag down from the stands and took a victory lap around the arena. For many of the 12,000 fans it was hard to watch.

"I think the United States was the best team in the championship," said Brazil's Marcel Souza. "We tried to put pressure on them. And we did put pressure on them."

U.S. shooters hit only two of their 11 3-point efforts.

"On a normal night we make 40, 50 percent, but we didn't tonight," Crum said.

Schmidt made 47 percent of his 3-point attempts, seven of 15.

The United States took a 77-62 lead with 17:16 left to play on a rebound dunk by Robinson. But on the play Robinson was assessed a technical foul for hanging on the rim. Under international rules a technical counts as a personal foul and that was Robinson's fourth.

"There was contact. I got bumped a little bit," said Robinson, who had 20 points and 10 rebounds in 15 minutes. "I didn't feel I hung on the rim but the ref did. It's pretty basic."

With Robinson on the bench Brazil went to its most basic offense: Schmidt.

He made two free throws on the technical, then followed with a 3-pointer. Israel Andrade hit a layup, Schmidt a jumper and Souza converted a follow shot and Brazil trailed 77-73.

"In the first half they were denying me the ball and we talked about that," said Schmidt, like Souza, a professional player in Italy. "I got more open shots in the second half."

Schmidt made four consecutive 3-pointers in a 1:47 span to turn an 81-77 U.S. lead into an 89-85 Brazil lead with 10:00 to play.

While Schmidt and Souza were shooting and scoring, the United States could only shoot.

OU atop first poll

AP Sports Writer

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Is there pressure associated with being ranked the No. 1 college football team in the nation?

You've got to be kidding, says Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer.

"It doesn't put any pressure on me or on our players," Switzer said. "Being No. 1 is something I use in our program. It's another way to get the exposure and the tradition the Oklahoma program allows our young players to have."

The Sooners are the preseason No. 1 choice in The Associated Press poll for the third straight year and sixth time in Switzer's 15 years as head coach. It's the first time a team has been chosen preseason No. 1 three consecutive years.

Oklahoma received 55 of 60 first-place votes and 1,193 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. The Sooners finished third last year after winning the national championship in 1985.

Several players remain from the past two seasons, which is one reason Switzer was not surprised when his team was chosen No. 1 in the poll released Saturday.

"It's nothing that's unusual. I don't think anything about it because we've had that role so many times," he said.

The Sooners were picked ahead of Big Eight rival Nebraska, marking only the fourth time since the AP began a preseason poll in 1950 that two teams from the same conference were ranked 1-2.

Iowa and Ohio State of the Big Ten were 1-2 in the 1961 preseason poll, Nebraska and Colorado of the Big Eight held the top two spots in 1972 and Nebraska and Oklahoma led the way in 1983.

Oklahoma won national championships in 1956, 1974 and 1975 after being picked No. 1 in the preseason poll. The Sooners also were the preseason choice in 1957 and 1977, then finished fourth and seventh, respectively.

The only other teams to win the national championship after starting out No. 1 were Tennessee in 1951, Michigan State in 1952 and Alabama in 1978.

Oklahoma has eight starters back on offense and seven on defense. A year ago, the Sooners averaged more than 400 yards per game rushing while the defense led the nation in four major statistical categories.

"I don't think there's any way statistically we'll be as good as we were on defense," Switzer said. "Our offense has a chance to be what we were last year. If we're not the national rushing champs, we'll be right there at the top."

Nebraska, which finished fifth last year, received three first-place votes and 1,005 points. UCLA, No. 14 in last year's final poll, is third this time with one first-place vote and 935 points.

Thirty-eight ...

... And counting. Milwaukee's Paul Molitor extended his hitting streak to 38 games Sunday afternoon with a fifth-inning single during the Brewers' 10-5 win over the Kansas City Royals.

Cowboys hammer Niners

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys played like a team reborn in their rejuvenating 13-3 exhibition win over the San Francisco 49ers on Saturday night.

To be sure, this was a different Dallas than the one that went down 29-0 against the San Diego Chargers only a week earlier.

"It was an entirely different attitude on the field," said the Cowboys' Danny White. "We're improving and that is the important thing."

Dallas head coach Tom Landry seconded the motion. "We've come a long ways," Landry said. "We came off a cycle last year where we lost seven of eight. We need to reverse that and this will help us."

Against San Diego, the Cowboys' offense totaled 208 yards. After one period Saturday night, Dallas had a 166-18 yardage advantage and a 10-0 lead over the 49ers.

The Cowboys held their lead with the help of three interceptions, including two by Everson Walls, of passes thrown by Steve Young in the second half.

Can't afford continent this year? How about a supermarket tour?

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—If you can't afford that dream trip to Europe, you could always tour the Russian dressing, Brussels sprouts and french fries aisles at the supermarket.

In a growing nationwide trend, nutritionists are offering tours of supermarkets, serving as guides through a maze of culinary delights, steering people clear of ever-lurking cholesterol and alluring sweets.

"There's just so much confusion out there," said Eileen Stellefson, a registered dietitian at St. Francis Xavier Hospital who will conduct what's believed to be the state's first such tours this fall at a Piggly Wiggly grocery here.

"The more information that's coming out about nutrition, the more confused people are." The tours are designed to help consumers sort out what's nutritious from what's available. That's not always easy with thousands of brightly packaged products lining store shelves.

A decade ago, shoppers were primarily concerned about the cost of food, but that has changed, according to Caroline Lackey, an Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist with North Carolina State University.

"Food is now sold by its nutritional value," she said. "That's taken the place of some of the concerns of cost."

The Supermarket Savvy firm in Dallas has been conducting nutritional tours for several years.

For $35, consumers get a 2½-hour trip through a supermarket in which they walk the aisles comparing nutrition information for products. Clients also get shopping lists of recommended foods.

"We teach people how to make their own decisions and evaluate food for what it is," said Lisa Galvan, an associate with the firm.

The company began marketing a tour kit to nutritionists in June. More than 100 of the $360 kits, which include a manual and two audio tapes, have been sold in all 50 states, Supermarket Savvy founder Leni Reed said recently.

A video tape featuring a 60-minute supermarket tour with six participants will be available next month.

"There are over 10,000 products in most supermarkets and they proliferate at an increasingly rapid rate," Ms. Reed said.

Robert Mesche, director of marketing and advertising for Piggly Wiggly Carolina, said stores benefit from tours because they can attract customers.

If successful, the tours here could be expanded to other Piggly Wiggly's in South Carolina and in Savannah, Ga., he said. The chain operates 87 supermarkets in the two states.

The tours sponsored by St. Francis will be free. "The goal is to teach people to read labels and read them quickly," Ms. Stellefson said. "Nobody wants to spend two hours in a grocery store."

She has three general shopping tips:

- Shop the perimeter of the store, where fresh fruits, vegetables, meats and dairy foods are located.

- If a label has salt listed higher than the sixth item, it probably has too much sodium.
- If sugar is listed higher than fourth, it probably has too much sugar.

Labels that don't give specific weights of ingredients list them in order of proportion.

7,000 striking miners fired as mass dismissals intensify

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—The Anglo American mining conglomerate fired 7,000 black strikers today for defying back-to-work ultimatums aimed at breaking the 15-day-old walkout.

Anglo, the largest of the six mining companies targeted in the strike for a 30 percent wage increase, said about 9,000 more miners at a gold mine and two coal mines faced dismissal later today if they did not return to their jobs.

Johannesburg Consolidated Investments said a strike supporter was killed Sunday night at its Western Areas gold mine in western Transvaal province by "disgruntled workers who had become thoroughly disgusted at attempts to prevent them from working."

A company spokesman, J.J. Nel, said another miner was killed at Western Areas late Saturday when he tried to break up a fight between workers and strike supporters. Nel said 14 miners were injured.

Three previous deaths have been linked to the job action—a striker killed by security officers and two miners who authorities say may have been killed for defying the strike.

The National Union of Mineworkers, which plans to challenge strike-related dismissals even though they are allowed under South African labor law, reported two more clashes late Sunday and early today between strikers and mine security officers.

In the first clash, Sunday evening at the Kinross gold mine east of Johannesburg, the union said at least six strikers were injured when mine security officers fired rubber bullets and tear gas into a hostel in an attempt to force men back to work.

Gencor, the company which operates Kinross, denied the union's account and said tear gas was used only to "stave off attacks by strikers on employees that indicated they wished to return to work."

Union spokesman Marcel Golding said another clash occurred at the President Steyn gold mine in the Orange Free State but that details were not yet confirmed.

According to the union, more than 300 strikers have been injured and 300 arrested during the strike.

Today's mass firings, at the No. 2 and No. 3 shafts of Anglo's Western Holdings gold mine in the Orange Free State, raised to about 16,000 the number of miners fired during the strike—all in the past five days.

Anglo said about 6,000 strikers at its Vaal Reefs gold in western Transvaal province and 2,900 miners at two coal mines could be fired later today.

The General Mining Union Corp. said it would begin disciplinary hearings this week against 23,000 striking miners.

Anti-government coalition calls for protests of striker death

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—A powerful opposition coalition called on South Koreans today to wear black ribbons and join horn-honking demonstrations to protest the death of a striking worker in a clash with riot police.

The National Coalition for a Democratic Constitution also called on President Chun Doo-hwan to step down because of the death of 22-year-old Lee Suk-kyu.

Lee was the first to die in the wave of labor unrest that has swept South Korea for more than a month.

The coalition organized huge demonstrations in June that resulted in Chun's agreeing to more freedoms, including greater labor liberty. Before the reforms, strikes had been virtually illegal.

In Seoul on Sunday, 5,000 workers and students battled riot police with firebombs and rocks and 300 workers and students staged an overnight sit-in at Yonsei University.

The protesters were demanding an official apology for Lee's death, the release of imprisoned workers and restoration of jobs to dismissed workers.

The incidents were the first in which students and strikers had joined forces during the recent labor troubles. Students were a major force in the successful campaign for democratic changes.

Walkouts involving hundreds of thousands of workers continued to plague industries across the nation today. In Seoul, airline ground workers were on strike as were service workers at two five-star hotels.

The National Coalition for a Democratic Constitution said today that Lee's death showed that the government had broken its promise to institute greater democracy.

Lee was fatally injured Saturday by fragments of a tear gas canister fired by police trying to control workers at the Daewoo shipyard on Koje Island off the southern coast.

On Sunday, riot police fought hundreds of shipyard workers protesting the death. The Yonhap News Agency said 1,000 workers continued sit-ins at the shipyard today.

News reports said one police officer was badly hurt Sunday when he tried to persuade about 500 workers to release Lee's body from a shipyard hospital for an autopsy in another facility.

Union leaders contacted by telephone today said they would ask labor, religious and dissident leaders to help organize a "National Democratic Workers' Funeral" for Lee at the shipyard Wednesday.

Nationwide, strikes were under way at 513 workplaces including auto and textile plants and department stores.

Striking workers have generally been demanding 30 to 50 percent raises, better working conditions and democratic unions.

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP)—Dr. Robert Jarvik, inventor of the artificial heart, has married a brain — Marilyn vos Savant, reputedly the world's smartest person.

Jarvik, 41, whose artificial heart has been used in more than 60 operations, married the 40-year-old vos Savant at the Plaza hotel Sunday, exactly a year after they met.

Vos Savant's IQ is 230, the highest in the world, according to the Guinness Book of World Records.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Actor Sean Penn has checked into the Los Angeles County Central Jail to complete his sentence for probation violation.

Sheriff's Sgt. John Andrews said Penn, star of "The Falcon and the Snowman" and "Fast Times at Ridgemont High," was processed Saturday at the jail, where more than 5,000 prisoners are confined.

Penn, 27, husband of singer Madonna, served the first five days of his term in the rural Mono County Jail. He was released Aug. 6 to resume his motion picture work.

With time off for good behavior Penn will only have to complete a total of 32 days of the original 60-day term, officials have said.

Penn was sentenced for violating probation by punching a movie extra who tried to photograph him on a movie set and because of a reckless driving incident. He was on probation for an earlier case that stemmed from a fight.

NEW YORK (AP)—Teen-age actress Lisa Bonet, one of America's 10 most beautiful women as selected by a magazine, says she never had a date in high school.

The list was published Sunday in September's issue of Harper's Bazaar.

"I was hideous until I turned 13," Ms. Bonet said. "And even though my looks improved, I didn't go out on one date in high school."

CBS "60 Minutes" correspondent Diane Sawyer, 41, also made the list.

Others were actresses Candice Bergen, 40; Anjelica Huston, 35; Marlee Matlin, 20; Michelle Pfeiffer, "in her early 20s"; Andi MacDowell, 29; Sean Young, 27; Virginia Madsen, 25; and model Christy Turlington, 18.

DETROIT (AP)—"Good Times" star Esther Rolle took part in a family reunion during the weekend on an island in the Detroit River along with members of hundreds of other black families.

The Midwest Black Family Reunion Celebration, sponsored by the National Council of Negro Women and several local businesses, was the third of four such festivals this year. Others were in Atlanta and Los Angeles. The fourth is scheduled for Washington, D.C., Sept. 12-13.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Matrimony for "Dynasty" television star Joan Collins may be ending wretchedly, but it has brought added fame to the chapel where she took the vows two years ago.

The Little White Chapel has a sign outside proclaiming that the queen of prime-time television soap-operas was married inside.

No mention is made of her betrothed, Swedish rock star Peter Holm, who is locked in a bitter divorce battle with Collins.

12,000 Legionnaires march in parade

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—An American Legion contingent from the Philippines drew applause with a banner saying "Remember the Alamo, Remember Bataan" as an estimated 12,000 paraded in 97-degree heat as part of the annual Legion convention here.

A half-dozen high school marching bands from San Antonio and Legion bands from across the country provided music for the nearly five-hour display Sunday.

Police estimated 8,000 people lined the parade route down Houston Street and past Alamo Plaza. "This will probably be one of the largest parades in San Antonio history," parade official John Powell said.

Marchers made frequent stops along the parade route, and water carriers armed with spray bottles stepped along with the groups.

Representatives from every state in the union as well as the Legion's six foreign departments took part. They included about 70 veterans from the Philippines who drew a large round of applause from onlookers with their banner.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements was to address the American Legion Auxiliary today, the eve of the legion's 69th annual convention. Vice President George Bush will give the keynote address Tuesday for the three-day convention.

Senate Minority Leader Robert J. Dole was scheduled to give an address Tuesday. Thomas Turnage, administrator of the Veteran's Administration, will also speak.

About 18,000 delegates are expected to attend the convention at the San Antonio Municipal Auditorium, said spokesman Fel Barbante. The convention will culminate with election of the American Legion national commander.

Col. Howard H. Hill, an advisor to the White House and Department of Defense, will brief the legion's POW-MIA Coordination Committee at 9 a.m. Monday, said spokesman John Hanson.
