Pieces lost in Iran-Contra puzzle

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A member of the Iran-Contra committees said today that the American people should not expect definite answers from the congressional report on the diversion of Iranian arms sales profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., vice chairman of the House committee, said he didn't believe the committees' final analysis would satisfy a public looking for answers.

"No, it probably won't," he said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "But, again, I think it's important to remember that the process we've been through is to look at sort of a snapshot in time ... a series of decisions. What we're really interested in, what Congress ought to be interested in, is how we improve the process overall, how do we do a better job of conducting U.S. foreign policy."

He added that the process of public hearings followed by a report "is one more attempt to adjust the mechanism, but it will get out of whack again at some time and then will have to do it in the future."

With the public hearings completed, the committees went behind closed doors today to question high-level Central Intelligence Agency officials about their roles in the affair.

The first witnesses was Duane Clarridge, the CIA's counterterrorism chief. He was to be followed by Clair George, the agency's official in charge of covert operations, and Alan Fiers, director of the CIA's Central American task force. All were being quizzed about their involvement in the Iran arms sales and the clandestine resupply network for Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

The public portion of the three-month series of hearings ended Monday, with panel leaders condemning administration secrecy and deceit that permitted the covert scheme to thrive over the objections of President Reagan's top advisers.

"I see it as a chilling story, a story of deceit and duplicity and the arrogant disregard of the rule of law," said Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate investigating committee. "It is also a story of a flawed policy kept alive by a secret White House junta despite repeated warnings and signs of failure."

All three CIA officials being questioned today were in frequent contact with Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, the White House aide who coordinated both projects from his office at the National Security Council. Investigators are interested in learning the extent of CIA participation in Contra aid when it was banned by Congress.

The agency's new director, William H. Webster, has launched his own review of the involvement of those officials and others and says he will decide whether disciplinary action is in order after receiving a report in two to three months, about the same time the congressional panels issue their final assessment.

Conflicts have arisen in connection with earlier statements by Clarridge, who has sworn to Congress that he did not know that a November 1985 shipment from Israel to Iran contained Hawk anti-aircraft missiles.

Clarridge said under oath that he believed the shipment was oil drilling equipment. But later testimony, including that of former White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, showed that the oil equipment story was merely a cover used to hide the shipment's true nature.

In other developments: ■ A committee source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the cost of the hearings, excluding such expenses as security, utilities and remodeling of office space in the Capitol complex, probably will reach $3 million to $4 million by the time the panels' work is completed.

■ President Reagan will give "general views" about the hearings in a speech next week, but will not hold a news conference until at least September, an aide said. Regan plans to discuss "where we go from here and his agenda in the months ahead," said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

The hearings' final public witness, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, testified Monday that "the interests of the United States were damaged overall" by Regan's decision to make secret arms sales to Iran.

Weinberger and Secretary of State George Shultz both said they fought hard against that policy but failed to convince the president. Weinberger said the way to avoid such damage in the future is "not to embark on a policy of this kind."

Hostages' fate moved Reagan into arms deal

WASHINGTON — Two themes emerge clearly from the conflicting testimony about President Reagan in the Iran-Contra hearings — he earnestly wanted to get the American hostages out of Lebanon and he was determined to support the Nicaraguan rebels, no matter what Congress said.

At some points, the testimony depicts a president who acted decisively — as when he cut off all discussion of pardons for Lt. Col. Oliver North and former National Security Adviser John Poindexter.

Always, however, it shows a president dedicated to gaining freedom for the Americans held

Widow agrees to exhume body of Booker banker

AMARILLO (AP) — The wife of Booker banker Glen E. Lemon has agreed to have the body of her husband exhumed in order to lay to rest allegations by an insurance company that his death in a fiery plane crash last fall may have been staged.

Helaine W. Lemon filed a consent to exhumation Monday in U.S. District Court in Amarillo so she and her family "would be spared further mental anguish, grief and emotional trauma associated with the death of their husband and father," according to court documents.

Iowa-based American Mutual Life Insurance Co. said last week it wanted Lemon's body exhumed before paying off on a $1.5 million policy on him because his charred remains were never identified after a November 1986 plane crash near Liberal, Kansas.

Wayne Sturdivant, an Amarillo attorney representing Mrs. Lemon, said Monday she agreed to the exhumation under protest.

"She did not want her husband dug up," he said. "She's a very religious woman and very much opposed to it."

"We want to remove any stigma on Glen Lemon concerning these completely unfounded allegations," said Lemon's brother Robert, a Perryton attorney.

The insurance company filed a motion in U.S. District Court last week alleging that Lemon's plane could have been pre-set to take off and crash without a living person at the controls.

A Seward County, Kansas, coroner's report stated the body found in the charred plane's wreckage was burned beyond recognition and was identified only by a billfold and a ring with Glen Lemon's initials on it. No autopsy was conducted.

Mrs. Lemon's consent said the company's spurious allegations links Lemon to "a scheme that at the worst suggests murder and at the best fraud of the most egregious type," but that the family "cannot leave unchallenged these unfounded allegations."

Attorneys and members of the Lemon family have said that digging up Lemon's burned body would be futile because there was no doubt his body was in the grave.

Larry Lesh, a Dallas attorney representing American Mutual, told the Amarillo Globe-News that the consent surprised him, but declined to comment further.

Lemon, 54, was president, chief executive officer and part owner of First Bank & Trust in Booker, which was closed by regulators six weeks after the plane crash.

The Texas Banking Commission closed the bank because of mismanagement, "insider transactions" and bad loans in energy and agriculture.

Larry A. Chilton, deputy banking commissioner, said at the time of the bank failure that mismanagement was the key to the bank's demise.

"Its failure is attributed largely to mismanagement and unusual insider transactions related to the loan portfolio," Chilton said in a prepared statement.

Federal authorities continue their investigation of the bank's downfall.

At the time of his death, Lemon reportedly held about $12.2 million in life insurance from several different companies. More than $8 million of that amount was purchased during the nine months prior to his death, according to records. American Mutual contends Lemon lied about how much life insurance he held to get the company to insure him.

A date for the exhumation has not yet been set, attorneys for both sides said.

Nervous traders rocket oil higher

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices have returned to the lofty peaks of last month in reaction to the widening crisis in the Middle East.

In the wake of bloody weekend clashes between Iranian pilgrims and Saudi Arabian police and more anti-American posturing by Iran, oil prices jumped sharply on the New York Mercantile Exchange Monday.

Contracts for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the bellwether U.S. crude oil, settled at $22.16 per 42-gallon barrel, up 79 cents from Friday's close.

It was the first time in about two weeks, the benchmark price moved above the $22 level.

The contract traded as high as $22.67 per barrel early in the day and never fell below $22 despite some profit taking later in the session, according to figures provided by Telerate Systems.

Prices of refined products also increased sharply. Unleaded gasoline settled at 55.94 cents, up 1.07 cents from Friday's close, while No. 2 heating oil hit 56.95 cents, up 1.60 cents.

Analysts attributed the market's move to the effect of the expanding Mideast drama. They said that even though world oil supplies remained plentiful, traders harbored fears that a combination of incidents — like those of the past weekend — might eventually result in a disruption of oil shipments through the Persian Gulf.

"Clearly, nervousness is the reign of the day," said Bob Baker, senior energy analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. Iranian officials reiterated their threats to avenge the U.S. plan to continue protection for Kuwaiti oil tankers sailing through the troubled gulf.

Those shipments resumed Monday, as the Gas Prince, a Kuwaiti tanker under U.S. flag and escorted by American warships, steamed through the Strait of Hormuz, the gulf's narrow gateway.

In response, Iran announced the beginning of naval maneuvers in the strait and warned ships and aircraft to stay out of its territorial waters.

Still, some experts believe the market's reaction to the escalating hostilities has been overblown, considering the current oversupply of oil.

One economist, Gordon Pye of Irving Trust Co., lightheartedly suggested that futures traders install "radar-screen scopes of the Strait of Hormuz" on their computer terminals so that they could track the Persian Gulf developments even more closely.

"We're out of the realm of economics at this point," said Pye.

Iran's maneuvers build gulf tension

KUWAIT (AP) — The Kuwaiti tanker Gas Prince headed for Japan on its own today after its U.S.-escorted trip through the Persian Gulf, and Iran announced completion of the first stage of its naval maneuvers in the Strait of Hormuz.

The Gas Prince cleared the gateway to the Persian Gulf on Monday, a few hours before the Iranian exercises began, after a 550-mile journey from Kuwait. Another Kuwaiti tanker, the Bridgeton, and its U.S. escorts reportedly will depart Kuwait soon for the strait.

Tehran radio, monitored in Bahrain, blared anti-U.S. slogans and threatened that Iran will undermine American and Saudi Arabian interests throughout the world. The threats came as Moslem pilgrims celebrated the end of their annual pilgrimage to Mecca, Saudi Arabia. On Friday, hundreds of the pilgrims were killed in violent clashes with Saudi police.

Iran blames the United States and Saudi Arabia for the deaths.

"They're going on down the Gulf (of Oman). It's over," Rear Adm. Harold J. Bernsen, commander of the U.S. naval force in the Persian Gulf, said today as the Gas Prince steamed toward its final destination of Imari, Japan.

The Strait of Hormuz connects the Persian Gulf with the Gulf of Oman and the Arabian Sea.

Pentagon officials in Washington on Monday hailed the successful passage of the Gas Prince as a "textbook" operation.

Reagan

by Lebanese terrorists.

"The first objective was to get the hostages back," said Poindexter. "And the president felt that ... it was worth taking some risk."

The picture is also that of a president who, after Congress had cut off U.S. military aid to the Nicaraguan rebels, said to Poindexter: "Look, I don't want to pull out our support for the Contras for any reason. This would be an unacceptable option. Isn't there something I can do unilaterally?"

Secretary of State George Shultz told congressional investigators that they seemed "to miss the point that this president is a very decisive person."

"This idea that the president just sits around not paying any attention — I don't know where anyone got that idea," Shultz said.

And yet, according to White House officials, Reagan can't remember signing a document spelling out the sale of arms to Iran in return for the release of hostages, although he does not dispute testimony that he did sign it.

Poindexter, testifying that he submitted papers to Reagan daily when he was national security adviser, said the president "reads everything you give to him" or at least "most everything you give him."

But Reagan reportedly never learned the central fact that excess money from the sale of arms to Iran was being funneled to the Contra rebels fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua. Poindexter said he didn't tell him.

One former government official who has seen presidents come and go said of Reagan, "What I have learned from watching him is that much of what goes on he is not very interested in. But there are a number of areas in which he is very interested, and he gives them plenty of time and attention. One of the matters he is so interested in, that I have felt sometimes it is almost an obsession, is Nicaragua."

"He had another one that got to be an obsession and that was the question of terrorist activities and the apprehension of Americans made captive," said the former official, a Democrat who spoke on condition he not be identified.

To former White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, the hostages seemed to be the "bait" that kept the Iran arms sales alive despite strong opposition from Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

Take Poindexter's account of a meeting in the upstairs family quarters at the White House on Dec. 7, 1985 — two days after Poindexter says Reagan signed a retroactive "finding" approving earlier arms shipments as a means of securing release of hostages.

Shultz and Weinberger registered "very strong, very specific objection and clearly laid out for the president the other side of the issue," Poindexter said.

"The president pulled a footstool up to the coffee table and sat there very quietly, as is his nature, listening to all of the discussion up to that point. ... And at the end of the discussion, at least the first round, he sat back and he said ... something to the effect that 'I don't feel I can leave any stone unturned in trying to get the hostages back. ... And I think that we ought to at least take the next step.'"

Regan also portrayed a forceful boss, describing a meeting in the Oval Office last December in which the possibility of a pardon for Poindexter or North was discussed.

He quoted Reagan as saying, "Not only is it premature, but I'll be darned if I'm going to accuse them of a crime in advance."

"It never came up again," said Regan.

that in "the who-done-it sense and in the smoking gun sense, it's left up to the jury and the jury really is the American people as much as the Congress."

Immediately after the hearings ended, committee leaders expressed hope that Reagan will recover from political damage done by the affair.

"I hope that he recovers, because he is president of the United States and there are important issues to contend with, many problems ahead of us," Inouye said. "If he has been injured by this unfortunate chapter, I hope that his wounds will heal fast."

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., vice chairman of the committee, said Reagan's recovery has begun.

"I think the president has done rather well in recent months," Rudman said, adding that he sees two important items on Reagan's agenda: controlling the budget deficit and working out an arms control agreement with the Soviet Union.

"If Ronald Reagan can deliver the United States Senate a ratifiable arms control agreement, he will go out of the presidency with his crowning achievement — and he is the only one, in my view, who can get that done. Anybody who writes him off is making a terrible mistake."

City gets tough on loose animals

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

The Animal Shelter, in conjunction with the Pampa Police Department, is joining efforts to enforce the animal control ordinance in our city.

The ordinance reads that all dogs and cats must be restrained to their property at all times.

We have been taking numerous reports on animal bites this past month, averaging one a day — some are serious enough to cause surgery.

Nationwide, hundreds of people die yearly from animal attacks. These animals are neighborhood pets that would never have been suspected of biting anyone. Our Animal Control personnel hear people say, "My dog would not bite anyone." To which their reply is always, "Does your dog have teeth?"

Any animal is capable of biting someone if the circumstances are right. In order to reduce the risk of animal bites, it is imperative that every pet owner keep his pet restrained 24 hours a day.

The Animal Control Department is unable to schedule officers 24 hours per day, so the Pampa Police Department is assisting us by enforcing the ordinance at night. Court summonses will be issued to the owners of animals that are allowed to run the streets at will.

First violations are $30 and can go up to $200. If the animal is impounded at the shelter, there will also be a fee to redeem the animal.

The ordinance also states that one's animals must be vaccinated at the age of 3 months and revaccinated thereafter annually for the life of the animal. The state and city laws require the pets to display their rabies tag on a collar or harness. Violators for pets without rabies shots and rabies tags will also be fined.

The employees of the Animal Shelter ask for your cooperation in this matter so that it will be safe for our children to play in their yards and parks and that adults may walk and jog in safety.

The Animal Shelter number is 669-6149.

Trooper shoots passenger in scuffle

MARSHALL (AP) — A manhunt was under way today near Marshall for the driver of a car pulled over by a Texas Department of Public Safety trooper in an incident in which a passenger was shot twice, officials said.

Trooper Briscoe Davis stopped a car with Arkansas license plates around 2:30 a. m. about six miles south of Marshall on U.S. Highway, said DPS Capt. Tony White in Tyler. White said the driver of the car resisted arrest and the passenger tried to help him.

The passenger was shot twice by the officer during the scuffle, and the driver fled, White said.

Shot in the arm and the side, the wounded man was hospitalized at Marshall Memorial Hospital in serious condition, White said.

Greenspan wins Senate approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alan Greenspan takes over as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board with a strong commitment to follow anti-inflation policies, the chairman of Senate Banking Committee says.

Greenspan, who directed the Council of Economic Advisers under President Ford, easily won Senate confirmation Monday to succeed Paul Volcker as head of the nation's central bank, clearing the hurdle on a 91-2 vote.

Senate Banking Committee

Chairman William Proxmire, D-Wis., said the 61-year-old economist has displayed a "clear commitment to follow monetary policies to counteract inflation."

Proxmire said that in the past, President Reagan ignored the Fed chairman's recommendations for new appointments to the board. Now, with his own man as Fed chief and another vacancy to be filled, "once again the president can rely on the chairman" to fill vacancies, Proxmire said.

That should make for a better board, he said. Proxmire added that, had Greenspan been rejected by the Senate, "it is unlikely the administration would appoint a better qualified person."

Voting against Greenspan's nomination were Sens. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Kent Conrad, D-N.D.

Not voting were Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., Jake Garn, R-Utah, John Heinz, R-Pa., Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., David Pryor, D-Ark., Paul Simon, D-Ill., and Robert T. Stafford, R-Vt.

FCC scraps 'fairness doctrine'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission today voted to scrap the fairness doctrine, a 38-year-old policy requiring broadcasters to present contrasting views on controversial issues.

In a unanimous vote, the commission's four sitting members said the doctrine is unnecessary because of the number of radio and television stations serving the country and is unconstitutional because it gives the government editorial control over broadcasters.

Broadcasters have long opposed the fairness doctrine, claiming it violates First Amendment rights to free speech.

Anticipation of the FCC action has fueled efforts in Congress to enact the doctrine, which has been a policy of the FCC, into law.

Congressional efforts to overturn today's action were expected.

FCC Chairman Dennis Patrick said the action "should be cause for celebration" because it extends to broadcasters the same first amendment guarantees of free speech that protect the print media.

Supporters of the doctrine say it is needed to ensure that minority viewpoints are aired by broadcasters.

Gulf

eight mine-sweeping helicopters had arrived at the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia for use in the gulf.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicaragua, said its exercises along a 875-mile stretch of its coastline and in the 44-mile-wide strait would show the readiness of the volunteers for suicide attacks on the U.S. Navy, which Iran says helps Iraq in the 7-year-old war.

On Monday, Iran warned all ships and aircraft to stay out of Iranian territorial waters in the gulf, the Strait of Hormuz and the Sea of Oman.

Although Iranian waters are difficult to define, gulf shipping executives note that international law puts the territorial line 12 miles off a nation's coast. However, that limit may also apply to each offshore Iranian island, extending it considerably.

The reflagged 46,732-ton Gas Prince, with a cargo of liquefied petroleum, negotiated the strait with two Navy ships on guard. Once in the Gulf of Oman, the two U.S. warships left the Gas Prince.

Tankers passing through the strait face the threat the Chinese-built Siltworm missiles that Iran keeps on its side of Hormuz. They have a range of about 50 miles, a Defense Department official in Washington said.

Last month, the supertanker Bridgeton, also flying the American flag, sailed north through the Persian Gulf with the Gas Prince in the first Navy-escorted convoy. The Bridgeton hit a mine July 24 off Iran's Farsi Island about 120 miles south of Kuwait.

The tanker limped into a Kuwaiti port with a hole in its hull. But it was later loaded with a partial shipment of oil and is waiting to make the return voyage south through the Persian Gulf with U.S. Navy escorts.

Tehran radio broadcast a communique Monday that said Iran's naval exercises would prepare the country for "possible aggressions by the arch-Satan, the world-devouring United States, and her hireling servants, in the southern blue waters of Islamic Iran."

Monitored in Cyprus, the radio said the exercises also would honor the hundreds of Iranian pilgrims killed last week during battles with Saudi Arabian police in the Moslem holy city of Mecca.

Iran said its "martyrdom seekers" had been stationed on islands in the strategic strait. Iran has accused Washington of masterminding the clashes in Mecca Friday.

Moody's trial delayed

HOUSTON (AP) — The scheduled trial of Galveston millionaire Shearn Moody Jr., who is charged with two counts of defrauding a charity foundation established by his wealthy family, has been postponed until Sept. 3.

Jury selection in the trial was scheduled to start Monday before U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling. The judge, however, delayed the trial because of adverse publicity in the case when more than half of the prospective jurors questioned Monday had heard of the case through the media.

Moody, his longtime aide Norman Revie and four other men are accused of defrauding the Galveston-based Moody Foundation of as much as $1.5 million in an alleged scam that included kickbacks, money-skimming and fake non-profit entities, all while Moody was a foundation trustee.

Two defendants are Dr. Robert E. Earl, a Houston dentist who set up one of the organizations allegedly used to fraudulently obtain Moody Foundation grants, and Howell C. Willis of Lewisville.

Two other defendants, William R. Pabst and Vance Beaudreau, are fugitives believed to be living in Mexico.

Pabst also is being sought by local authorities on an apparently unrelated fraud conviction in state district court in Harris County.

The defendants face sentences ranging from 40 years to 135 years in prison if convicted.

The case has been hotly contested since shortly after the indictment was issued in December, with Moody's defense attorney Marian Rosen filing dozens of motions that included a challenge of the grand jury that charged her client and a request for a gag order.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda refused to impose the gag order, but stepped down two weeks ago in response to Rosen's claim that there was a potential conflict of interest between the judge and Beaudreau.

Moody also faces a trial in September before U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald that could bring him a 70-year prison term if convicted.

In that case, Moody and Revie are accused of funneling hundreds of thousands of dollars of Moody Foundation money to organizations controlled by their associates.

They are accused of defrauding the court-appointed trustee in Moody's bankruptcy case by hiding assets that should have been used to pay creditors.

Pennzoil asks Supreme Court to nix Texaco's judgment appeal

AUSTIN (AP) — In the latest move in its continuing legal battle with Texaco Inc., Pennzoil Co. asked the Texas Supreme Court to reject Texaco's appeal of a $10.53 billion judgment.

The two oil companies have been fighting in various courts after a district court jury in Houston ruled in November 1985 that Texaco wrongfully interfered in a planned merger between Pennzoil and Getty Oil Co.

"We address every claim that Texaco has made, and I think a reading of the brief will show that Pennzoil will prevail in this matter," Pennzoil attorney Joseph Jamail said after filing the motion Monday. "Texaco has no basis under these facts or under our law to have this case reversed."

"I don't think money, or the number of zeros, has anything to do with justice, and I don't think the courts believe that," Jamail said. "Otherwise, little people would get dumped on all the time and the big ones would go free."

As part of its filing, Houston-based Pennzoil denied breaking a Securities and Exchange Commission rule prohibiting it from private purchases of Getty stock from the J. Paul Getty Museum while a public tender offer was outstanding.

The SEC on July 22 filed a brief asserting Pennzoil violated Rule 10b-13. Texaco claims the alleged SEC violation meant Pennzoil did not have a valid merger agreement with Getty, and therefore Texaco could not have interfered with it.

In the filing with Texas' highest court, Pennzoil argued its agreement with Getty interests called for the Sarah C. Getty Trust to buy stock owned by the Getty Museum, of Malibu, Calif.

Under the terms of a "memorandum of agreement," the Getty Trust would have bought stock owned by the museum, while Pennzoil would have bought stock owned by public shareholders, the filing said.

"It was the expressed agreement of Pennzoil and all other parties that all shareholders be treated the same, and there was an express provision in the Memorandum of Agreement that all applicable laws and regulations be satisfied," Pennzoil said in the filing.

The trust, controlled by Gordon P. Getty, at the time owned about 40 percent of Getty's stock, while the museum owned about 12 percent. Under the merger agreement, the resulting organization would have been owned 57 percent by the Getty Trust and 43 percent by Pennzoil.

While the possibility of Pennzoil purchasing museum stock did come up, it was only in the context of enabling the museum to avoid a $2 billion tax penalty, Pennzoil plans to argue, the filing said.

A Texaco spokesman at company headquarters in White Plains, N.Y., said Monday that Pennzoil's filing stems from the brief filed by the SEC.

Gibbs laughs and cries after getting crown.

Miss Metroplex is crowned Miss Texas-USA on Monday

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Courtney Ann Gibbs was modeling at a charity fashion show in Fort Worth earlier this year when Joe Rinelli found her.

Miss Gibbs never had formal pageant training, but within a few months Rinelli had her trained and she went on to become Miss Metroplex.

Monday night, Gibbs was crowned Miss Texas-USA 1988, winning the title from a field of 108 contestants.

Shortly after the 20-year-old brown-haired, blue-eyed representative from Fort Worth was crowned, Rinelli walked onto the stage.

"Joe, Joe, Joe," Gibbs cried as she hugged Rinelli.

"It has been a long week and short week. It's been a day-long and two months long. It's been a long road," Gibbs said, wiping away tears and trying to crack a smile.

Rinelli, who has trained the last five of six Miss Texas-USA winners, said he discovered Gibbs at the Big Brother, Big Sister charity in Fort Worth in late January.

"All I could see was the back of her. I had to see her face," Rinelli said. "She turned around and I walked up to her and said, 'Are you interested in beauty pageants?'"

"She looked at me in amazement. She came over and we started training, smiling more and fixing the hair different, interview techniques and difference between modeling and pageant competition," Rinelli said.

First runner-up was Miss Austin, 20-year-old Kristen Schuler.

"The last few moments I was thinking how cute Miss Austin was," said Gibbs, who has just completed her sophomore year at Texas Christian University, where she majored in liberal arts.

Miss Bedford, Gretchen Lynn Polhemus, was second runner-up. Miss Houston, Lee Anne Locken was third runner-up and Miss Bay Area, Tracy Hogue, was fourth runner-up.

As winner, Gibbs will receive $90,000 in cash and prizes, will travel throughout the state and will compete for the Miss USA title next February.

The pressure will be on her because the past three Miss Texas-USA winners have gone on to become Miss USA.

Gibbs, who wants to be an actress, said she is not discouraged.

"It is a big challenge but Texas is the best," she said. "We've had three. We can have four. It doesn't frighten me. It makes me a little more brave."

Carolyn Mitchell, one of the pageant coordinators, said she believed the state's system for training the young women is No. 1 in the nation.

"We don't believe in the impossible," said Mitchell. "Obviously last year, no one thought it could never happen and because it did, it made us feel better about the system."

Papal Mass site under study

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Bexar County's highest-ranking public health official has resigned in protest over what she claims are inadequate health precautions for the San Antonio site where Pope John Paul II will celebrate Mass next month.

Dr. Katharine Rathbun, director of the San Antonio Metropolitan Health District, told city officials Monday that massive crowding, lack of water and intense midday heat could prove fatal to some attending the papal Mass.

Catholic church officials have said they expect 500,000 people to gather at a 140-acre site to see the pope celebrate Mass Sept. 13. Rathbun said the crowd should be limited to 125,000.

"Unless proper attention is paid to the need for limiting the size of the crowd and providing an adequate water supply, I'm concerned we may have hundreds of people dying and thousands of casualties," she said.

Under Texas law, organizers of gatherings that last more than 12 hours must apply for a state permit.

Furr's to continue pursuit of Safeway

EL PASO (AP) — Furr's will try to convince the Federal Trade Commission that its proposed purchase of 59 Safeway stores in Texas and New Mexico will not harm competition, an official of the supermarket chain says.

The FTC announced Monday that it would ask a federal judge to block the $144 million transaction pending administrative review. The commission said Furr's proposed purchase of Safeway's El Paso division would substantially reduce competition among grocery stores in West Texas and New Mexico.

"We will continue to have discussions with the FTC," Bob Hurrence, Furr's vice president of personnel, said by telephone Monday from the chain's Lubbock, Texas, headquarters. "We think we can reach a satisfactory solution with the FTC to overcome their objection."

Officials at Safeway's El Paso division referred all calls to company headquarters in Oakland, Calif. Felicia del Campo, the corporation's public affairs manager, issued a statement saying the company had not heard from the FTC and declined comment.

Furr's has offered to buy Safeway's El Paso division, consisting of 59 grocery stores, a milk plant, an ice cream plant, a warehouse, administrative offices and inventory. Furr's has offered $94 million for the assets and about $50 million for the inventory, according to the FTC.

FTC spokeswoman Susan Tichnor said the FTC will file the request for the temporary injunction "sometime," but did not elaborate.

Furr's operates 105 stores in South and West Texas and New Mexico under the names Furr's, Sack N Save, Food Emporium; Box, Bag N Save, and Save N Gain.

Safeway was publicly held until last year, when the Landover, Md.-based Dart Group tried to buy it in an unsolicited offer. To fend off the takeover bid, Safeway went private in a $4.2 billion leveraged buyout.

Safeway has closed more than 100 stores in Texas this year. The company closed 131 Safeway stores in North Texas in April, as well as its processing and distribution systems near Dallas. It closed seven Houston grocery stores in June, bringing to 16 the number shut down in the Houston area.

Guard AIDS tests mostly negative

AUSTIN (AP) — Only 30 of 19,500 Army and Air National Guard members, about 0.2 percent, tested positive for the AIDS virus in the past year, the Texas National Guard says.

Testing of Army Guard members is completed, but some members of the Air Guard remain to be tested under a program that began in August 1986, said Maj. Ed Komandosky, Guard public affairs officer at Camp Mabry in Austin.

Whether the testing will be a one-time thing or a normal practice depends on how Guard planners view their budget for the new fiscal year, Komandosky said.

"I don't know how much it cost the Guard to test us. The National Guard Bureau in Washington, D.C., paid for it. I believe the overall allocation for the whole Guard nationwide was in the $40 million range," he said.

"And Texas is ahead of many, many other states simply because we went ahead on it with our own medical personnel," he said.

Komandosky said the testing was accompanied by educational films and lectures. He said those who tested positive will not be allowed to continue serving in the National Guard.

Komandosky told the Austin American-Statesman there are no plans for a second round of tests, even though medical experts say testing should be followed up within a few months of the first exam. That is because it takes up to two months for the human immunodeficiency virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome to generate antibodies in a person's bloodstream.

A positive result for HIV refers to the presence of these antibodies. Even then, experts say, only about 50 percent of the individuals with the virus develop AIDS or a related illness.

"AIDS testing is not a cheap procedure," Komandosky said. "When you're testing 20,000-something people on a regular basis, you've got to have money to do it. As of today, the Guard bureau has allocated money for only this one time."

Maj. John Smith, a public affairs officer with the National Guard Bureau in Washington, said more testing will follow the first round.

"This isn't it for the Texas Guard," Smith said. "They'll have to be tested again."

Free AIDS test to be offered in Panhandle

A free anonymous test for the Human Immunodeficiency Virus, which causes Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS), will be conducted once a month for Texas Panhandle residents beginning today.

The Panhandle AIDS Support Organization (PASO), in conjunction with the Bi-County Department of Health, is sponsoring the testing.

The test sites will not be publicized, "for we are trying to assure the people who come for testing the confidentiality of their persons as well as their names.

We feel that it would be irresponsible to advertise the place because of the possibility of disturbance by those of morbid or sensational curiosity," said Neil Hawkins, president of PASO.

Those wishing to be tested may call 372-4557 and leave a name (whether real or fictitious) and phone number. Their phone call will be returned and they will then be given the address and time for testing.

The test will be given at a different site each month, but the phone number will remain the same, Hawkins said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Other nations ought to escort gulf ships

The U.S. government is sending mixed signals to the Persian Gulf and to other countries in the world that use oil from that region. If actions speak louder than words, the message likely to be received most clearly is that the United States is prepared to provoke war, rather than the message that our government earnestly desires peace.

The message of peace came in a resolution in the Security Council of that Great Cave of Winds, the United Nations. The United States sponsored and pushed a resolution demanding an end to the Iran-Iraq war, although the question of a U.N.-sponsored embargo on arms sales to either belligerent (the only enforcement tool the United Nations has available besides hot air) was left for another day. The resolution achieved unanimous passage, which is supposed to represent a great diplomatic coup, but the Iranian regime told the U.N. to get lost.

Meanwhile, of course, the program of putting U.S. flags on Kuwaiti oil tankers and using U.S. Navy ships to guard them is on course. Although the United States speaks only of protecting the world's oil supplies, Iran, with some justice, considers Kuwait an ally of Iraq and a de facto belligerent. The United States is thereby close to entering the war on the side of the country that started it (and which has already accidentally blasted a U.S. ship, killing 37 American sailors).

This risky business has been undertaken even though the United States gets little oil from the Persian Gulf, while the Japanese and Europeans who rely more heavily on Persian Gulf oil have been notably reluctant to commit their own personnel and material to escort duty.

So the United States talks like a peacemaker on the East River while coming close to acting like a belligerent in the Persian Gulf. Which message are countries in the region likely to take more seriously?

The reflagging of Kuwaiti oil tankers represents a dubious interventionism, the urge to get the United States involved in trouble overseas when a sober assessment of the risks, values, and interests at stake would dictate otherwise. There had been no dramatic increase in attacks on tankers in the Persian Gulf. If there had been, the primary responsibility for protecting them would lie with Japan, Western Europe, and other producing countries, not the United States.

A skeptical reassessment of this impulse to play policeman to the world, to risk the lives of American servicemen unnecessarily, is quickly sailing past the point of no return.

Both sexes reject NOW ideas

Eleanor Smeal, the implacable former president of the National Organization for Women, is dissatisfied with the nation's direction on everything from the Equal Rights Amendment to the defense budget, and she has a remedy: Elect more women to office.

In her outgoing speech July 8, Smeal called for the "feminization of power," outlining a plan to recruit feminist candidates to "flood the ticket ... from top to bottom" in the 1988 elections. One of her chief hopes, in addition to putting Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., in the Oval Office, is to triple the number of women in Congress.

Neither goal is plausible. Nor is the assumption that "feminists" and "women" are roughly interchangeable terms, and that the objectives of NOW represent the thinking of most American women. It is less a women's organization than an ideological one. Likewise, the purpose of Smeal's new "Fund for the Feminist Majority" is not to elect more women to office, but to elect more left-leaning ones. Jeane Kirkpatrick may be a model of female achievement, but if she runs for the Senate she shouldn't expect a contribution from Eleanor Smeal.

The premise of the plan to "feminize" power is that men and women have sharply different ideas, that they see their interests as conflicting and that women will cast their votes as women rather than as citizens. In fact, women and men largely agree on most issues, particularly on the so-called women's issues like abortion and the ERA.

The small differences between the sexes are on broader ideological matters — party affiliation, foreign policy, social welfare programs and the like. On those, it may be possible for some candidness to appeal to women, but only at the risk of alienating men: The gender gap cuts both ways. And militant leftwing views, like Smeal's, won't attract many women or men.

The good news for Smeal is that women do tend to be more liberal than men. They are somewhat more likely to regard themselves as Democrats, to favor less spending on defense, to support more spending on programs for the poor and the elderly, to oppose capital punishment and to favor affirmative action for women and minorities.

There are several items of bad news, though. One is that the "gender gap" is small. On military programs, according to the Gallup poll, 47 percent of women think we spend too much, compared with 40 percent of men. That means the difference of opinion is found in only about one of every 14 women.

Moreover, the position preferred by liberal feminists doesn't carry the day on many issues even among women. Some 45 percent of women think we spend the right amount or too little on defense, which means a nearly even split. Fifty-nine percent disapprove of hiring women or members of minority groups over better-qualified men or whites. Two out of three support capital punishment, according to the National Opinion Research Center. More women call themselves Republicans or independents (57 percent) than Democrats (43 percent).

On the matters of greatest concern to Smeal and company, the surprise is that women apparently think no differently from men. Two-thirds of all women supported the ERA in a 1981 Time magazine survey, but so did two-thirds of all men. Women as well men firmly reject the feminist support of abortion on demand. A Newsweek poll found that 57 percent of women support banning abortions except in cases of rape, incest or danger to the mother's life, with just 39 percent opposed.

Contrary to what Smeal hopes, women probably won't feel any special obligation to vote for women candidates. She claims that the Democrats' nomination of Geraldine Ferraro for vice president in 1984 "helped sustain the gender gap," but the gap was larger in 1980, when the second slot went to a man. Also unpublicized by Smeal is the fact that, despite Ferraro's historic presence on the Democratic ticket, 58 percent of women voted for Ronald Reagan.

In campaigns for lower offices too, women pay little attention to the sex of the candidate. In a survey of 1986 races for governor and the U.S. Senate, Public Opinion magazine found that "in only one state, Oregon, were women significantly more likely (than men) to vote for a female candidate."

If women are going to win more elections, most will do it not by pursuing any feminist agenda or relying on sisterly solidarity, but by addressing those matters that concern their constituents, male and female. As long as women and men are in substantial agreement on issues, the sex of officeholders won't have a great effect on government policies. Feminists who think electing more women will turn the political world upside down aren't dreaming but hallucinating.

Car phone replaces foam dice

Before you go out and spend a lot of money to have a telephone installed in your car, ask yourself, do I really want to do this?

It occurred to me recently to have a telephone put into my car, mainly because a lot of my friends were doing so, but then I remembered just how much of a nuisance a telephone can be.

It's bad enough having one in your bedroom, which means that no matter how much you need a good night's sleep, somebody can awaken you with a telephone call at any hour.

There's some dentist who apparently once had the telephone number I have now. I get numerous calls each day, some as late as midnight, asking for him.

I am forced to explain to each caller that they are speaking to somebody who wouldn't know a molar if one bit him.

I've decided it's mainly ego that makes people do stupid things like having a telephone in their car.

If I have a phone in my car, then it must mean I think I am so important I can't drive to the convenience store and pick up a six-pack without being out of touch.

Lewis Grizzard

A lot of men probably put phones in their cars to impress girls. In the old days, we hung foam rubber dice from our rear-view mirrors to impress girls.

The fact is, the automobile is the setting for many a romantic interlude and who wants to be at the height of passion and get a call from his mother wanting to know if he's wearing clean underwear.

There's also a safety factor involved here. We have campaigned urgently to get the drunken driver off the roads.

But what about some mover-and-shaker cutting a million-dollar business deal on his car phone at 70 mph?

I see enough people driving while doing "seated" dancing to their favorite songs on the radio, applying various cosmetics, searching madly for a cigarette that has just fallen between their legs, gazing openmouthed at everything other than the road, and trying to steer with one hand while dialing their bookie with the other.

I look at it this way: If I'm in my car and I really need to get in touch with somebody by phone, it's not that much trouble to pull into a service station and use the old reliable immobile phone.

The problem with any status symbol such as a car telephone is that it won't last. Somebody will always be able to get you one better.

Samuel Goldwyn, the eccentric Hollywood producer, had a bitter rival who had a phone installed in his limousine.

Not to be outdone, Goldwyn had one installed in his limousine, and his first call was to his rival, who answered in the back seat and, upon hearing who was calling, said, "Hold it a minute, Sam, I've got a call on the other line."

'Zero option' builds trap for free nations

By William A. Rusher

The "arms control" treaty currently under negotiation in Geneva between the United States and the Soviet Union is now taking a sufficiently well-defined shape to permit of intelligent comment. A tremendous amount of ink has been wasted on proposals that got scrapped along the way, but some rational conclusions are at last becoming possible.

Ever since the Soviet Union acquired nuclear bombs and the means to deliver them, via missiles, to the major cities and defense installations of the Western powers, peace has been preserved only by letting the Russians know that, if they launched a nuclear attack, enough Western missiles and bombs would survive that attack to inflict, in turn, "unacceptable" damage on the Soviet Union.

This has had the effect of deterring a "conventional" (i.e. non-nuclear) Soviet attack as well, because, thanks to the West's refusal to pledge "no first use," Moscow could not be sure that a conventional attack wouldn't lead to nuclear retaliation. (Such retaliation might take the form of nuclear-tipped artillery shells, which are highly effective against the tanks that would spearhead any conventional Soviet attack. Or it might involve intercontinental missiles.)

We assuaged European worries that we would never risk a nuclear war with the Soviet Union to save Western Europe in two ways: (1) by stationing a powerful American contingent in Europe as part of NATO's defense forces, and (2) by putting a number of intermediate range ballistic missiles with nuclear warheads, capable of reaching the Soviet Union, under NATO command. This was justified on the ground that Moscow had a similar number of IRBMs installed and aimed at Western Europe.

That has been the state of affairs for years, while liberals and leftists on both sides of the Atlantic belly-ached to high heaven, demanding a "no first use" pledge, calling for various unilateral "first steps" to nuclear disarmament, etc.

Gorbachev's first move was to accept our standing offer to eliminate the IRBMs on both sides — except for 100 that Moscow would retain in its Far Eastern territories and 100 that the United States could base at home (presumably in Alaska, whence they could reach Soviet Asian targets). Subsequently, in response to our objection that it would be harder to make sure that only 100 missiles have been produced than to be certain that none have been, Gorbachev modified his proposal and accepted the original plan suggested by Washington: the "zero option" — no IRBMs at all.

Oddly enough, Soviet acceptance of the zero option has thrown many Europeans, as well as some important Americans, like Henry Kissinger, into a panic — rather like the aging Casanova who couldn't take "Yes" for an answer. Without nuclear IRBMs under NATO command, they fear, Western Europe (and especially West Germany) will lose confidence in America's determination to defend Europe at all costs, despite the presence of U.S. forces in NATO. The leftists who favor a neutral West Germany will prevail, they predict, and pull that key piece out of NATO — presaging the collapse of Western Europe's will to resist the Soviet Union.

And that may indeed be precisely Comrade Gorbachev's canny calculation. But if that is, in fact, the prospect we face, it raises (to borrow an expression from the recent congressional hearings) more questions than it answers.

Consider. If Western Europe is willing to remain allied with the United States in NATO only on condition that its defense is provided by nuclear missiles (thereby sparing Europe the expense of increasing its conventional defenses), what does that imply about plans for a space shield? Quite obviously, our European friends must oppose that too, since it would render both ICBMs and IRBMs useless and, like the zero option, compel Europe to expand its conventional forces.

We will consider America's response to this problem in another column.

Radon gas threatening 1 in 5 U.S. households

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fifth of all homes checked in a 10-state survey contained more radioactive radon gas than the level recommended by the Environmental Protection Agency, the agency said today.

"Levels exceeding our guideline were found in each of the states participating in our survey, and in most states we are able to identify radon hot spots," said EPA's deputy administrator, A. James Barnes.

EPA cautioned that the results do not necessarily apply nationwide because the amount of radon depends in part on soil types, because some of the state surveys did not cover enough homes and because the states were not randomly selected.

However, Barnes said radon, which can cause lung cancer, "may be a problem in virtually every state."

Radon is an inert, colorless, odorless gas formed in the radioactive decay of uranium and thorium naturally occurring in the soil. It decays quickly into other radioactive compounds.

Most radon is breathed in and out without effect, but the successor atoms that are formed by decay in the lungs can remain there forever, irradiating the tissues. Those successor atoms also can be carried into the lungs on dust and smoke particles.

The EPA previously had estimated that up to 12 percent of the 75 million homes nationwide contain more radon than the guideline, 4 picocuries per liter.

In the new survey, the highest percentage of homes exceeding that level was found in Colorado, 39 percent, although the agency said that could not be used as a statewide estimate because the 900 measurements were not enough. The lowest percentage was in Alabama, 6 percent.

The other states and their percentages above the guideline: Connecticut, 21; Kansas, 21; Kentucky, 17; Michigan, 9; Rhode Island, 19; Tennessee, 16; Wisconsin, 27; and Wyoming, 26. Overall, the percentage was 21.

Even the low-radon states had some measurements well above the guideline, the agency said.

Like the Colorado results, figures for Rhode Island and Kansas are based on too small a sample to be considered reasonable statewide estimates, and the Connecticut results cannot be applied statewide because detectors were not placed according to a random sampling plan, officials said.

Rhode Island, Colorado and Kansas will complete their surveys this winter and Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Missouri, Indiana, North Dakota and Arizona will mount similar surveys. The Indian Health Service also plans to check some reservations in Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin.

"In almost every case geology proved to be a good indicator of high-risk areas for radon," EPA said. The agency is revising its maps to reflect the correlation between uranium and similar radon-causing deposits and the radon level in homes.

EPA has found that several techniques are effective in reducing radon, ranging from extra ventilation to complicated ducting. Some are cheap and some can cost more than $3,000 per home.

Government concern about radon grew in the 1970s when rising energy prices prompted many homeowners to "tighten" their homes to reduce heat losses, with an accompanying buildup of radon. Radon can seep into basements through foundation cracks and other routes, and can be liberated from water used indoors.

Converted Titan missiles to launch satellites

LITTLETON, Colo. (AP) — An outdated, 103-foot Titan missile has been taken from its silo and converted to launch satellites instead of nuclear warheads in what the Pentagon calls a milestone in the recovery of the space program.

Martin Marietta Corp. on Monday rolled out the Titan 2 space launch vehicle, the first of 13 ordered by the Air Force under a $528.9 million contract.

Air Force Secretary Edward C. Aldridge Jr. said the Air Force is counting on the Titans to become the workhorses of U.S. space-military programs, adding, "I would expect the program to go far beyond the 13 we have on contract."

For payloads too large to be accommodated by the Titan 2, the Air Force has ordered 23 Titan 4 rockets from Martin Marietta. It has also ordered 20 smaller Delta 2 rockets from McDonnell Douglas for launching navigation satellites.

The total of 56 rockets will dramatically reverse the plan of a few years ago to phase out rockets as launch vehicles in favor of the space shuttle.

The Air Force, even before the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger in January 1986, had seen the shuttle program as too unreliable for putting satellites into orbit and won approval before the disaster to use Titan rockets.

After the Challenger disaster and two failures of the Air Force's best alternative launch-er, the large Titan 34-D, aging or broken satellites went unreplaced for months.

The Titans, removed from underground silos in Arizona, Arkansas and Kansas, are being converted to carry up to 7,000 pounds of payload material into orbit, company and Air Force officials said at a ceremony in this Denver suburb.

The Pentagon this year is spending about $17 billion on space projects.

Storms fail to crack continuing heat wave

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms dropped temperatures a degree a minute in the Midwest but failed today to crack the heat wave gripping the eastern two-thirds of the nation. The heat, now in its 18th day, has been blamed for 83 deaths.

"We've already had a summer's worth of 90-degree temperatures," said state climatologist Paul Waite in Iowa, where temperatures cooled to the 80s Monday after the hottest May through July since 1936.

Hospitals in Evansville, Ind., and Indianapolis were treating people for heat-related ailments, and Alabama's Department of Public Health extended a heat alert through today, warning people to take precautions.

Storms spawned by the hot and humid air have downed power lines, straining utilities already struggling to meet record-setting demand for power. The heat also kept police busy.

"Roads buckle, cars break down, people's tempers are frayed because of it," said Bob Fletcher, a spokesman for the Illinois State Police. "We find it as stressful as everyone else."

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast today from the Atlantic Coast states across much of the Great Lakes region and middle Mississippi Valley and into the southern Plains.

But highs in the 90s or above were forecast from southern New England to Florida and west into the Ohio Valley, the lower Mississippi Valley and the Southern Plains.

Highs in triple digits were expected in parts of Arkansas and northeastern Texas, as well as the Southwest desert.

Mexico's inflation rate to be above estimates

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Treasury Secretary Gustavo Petricoli acknowledged that the nation's inflation rate this year will be above earlier government predictions of 75 percent to 85 percent.

Petricoli did not offer a new estimate for inflation during brief remarks with reporters, but he said the government remains committed to holding the line on price rises.

"The present administration has not reduced efforts to control the rise of prices and inflation," Petricoli was quoted as saying.

Private analysts have predicted the inflation rate may well reach 120 percent or more this year, above the 105.7 percent posted last year, the highest since the government began collecting those statistics in 1968. Prices advanced 63.7 percent in 1985.

The government, in a forecast late last year, had predicted a 1987 inflation rate 20 to 30 percentage points off the 1986 pace. Through the first half of this year, consumer prices rose at an accumulated rate of 54.9 percent, compared to 40.6 percent during the same period a year ago.

Prices have been rising in part because of the government's move to reduce subsidies on a range of basic goods and services, trimming federal expenses but boosting costs to consumers.

Meanwhile, the Department of Planning and Budget released new figures it said begin to show "certain signs" of the economy's recovery.

"The economic reactivation," it said, "advances on a solid base" and should continue through the second half of the year.

The economy last year contracted a sharp 3.8 percent, partly under pressure from plunging oil prices. Mexico's economy is heavily dependent on crude sales for needed foreign revenue.

The government initially had forecast the economy would grow in the range of 2 percent to 3 percent in 1987, but private analysts say the gain will likely be no more than 1.5 percent, after adjustment for inflation.

In its new report, the budget office reported gains in manufacturing, mining and metals, and construction.

Exports of non-oil goods, it said, grew 30 percent in the first half of the year.

Sales of manufactured goods to foreign customers, it said, were up 50 percent in the first six months of the year.

Grieves for Haitian

Panamanian general focus of drug study

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gen. Manuel A. Noriega, the military leader in Panama, is the focus of a federal criminal investigation into whether he has been skimming money from narcotics shipments, according to a published report today.

A federal grand jury in Miami is hearing evidence that Noriega has provided protection for drug trafficking and money laundering operations in Panama, the Los Angeles Times reported.

The newspaper quoted an unidentified law enforcement source as saying the evidence is "very strong," but it did not say that any indictment was imminent.

The Reagan administration has taken the position that it is more important to U.S. interests to cooperate with Panama on curbing drug trafficking than to pursue allegations against Noriega.

Noriega, who controls the sole military and police organization in Panama, where the United States maintains military bases, has been the target of congressional investigations in recent months.

According to the Times, a Senate subcommittee heard private testimony last year from a witness who directly linked Noriega to drug trafficking.

Officials conceded there is little chance Noriega would be extradited to face charges if the Miami grand jury hands up an indictment.

Father and son killed in separate shoot-outs

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — An alleged professional hit man and his son were killed in separate shoot-outs with police, authorities said.

Dario Ibarra, 54, and his son, Indalecio, 27, were slain within minutes of each other Sunday after firing on police trying to arrest them, said Jose Refugio Rubalcava, Chihuahua Judicial Police commandant in Juarez.

Two officers were injured, he said.

The elder Ibarra was visiting relatives when he got word that police were on their way to his house, Rubalcava said. He and his wife, Esperanza, drove back to the house and caught the officers by surprise, firing on them with a pistol.

Rubalcava said the police dived for cover, leaving a submachine gun behind in their pickup truck. Ibarra grabbed the weapon and fired it until he was cut down by seven police bullets, Rubalcava said.

During the shooting, Mrs. Ibarra ran six blocks to Indalecio Ibarra's home and told him what had happened, Rubalcava said. The younger Ibarra put his 6-year-old son in his car and tried to drive off, but was blocked by a backup police unit. He left the boy in the car and began shooting a submachine gun at the two police officers, Rubalcava said.

Agents Jose Luis Irigoyen was hit in the shoulder and Roberto Corral Barron was shot in the ribs, hip and legs.

Horse racing battle out of gate

DALLAS (AP)—Proponents of racetrack gambling are mounting an advertising blitz to promote the Nov. 3 binding referendum on legalizing pari-mutuel wagering. Officials of the Texas Horse Racing Association say the Austin-based group plans to spend $1.6 million to counter opposition from religious leaders and prominent Texans — whose group includes Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry and former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough. "I'm 99 percent sure it will pass," said Ricky Knox, executive director of the Austin-based Horse Racing Association, of the proposition to allow betting at horse and dog race tracks. As of last month, the association had collected the names and addresses of 485,000 supporters to be targeted in get-out-the-vote efforts, he said. Consultants have been on board for months, and more than 40,000 pro-racing pamphlets have been distributed statewide. Staffing has been arranged for phone banks that will become operational in about two weeks, several fund-raisers have been held, and bumper stickers have been passed out at horse shows that say: "Don't mess with taxes. Race horses in Texas." Pari-mutuel racing's chief opposition is a coalition of ministers, politicians and anti-crime organizations called Texans Who Care, which opened a campaign headquarters in Dallas last week. Leaders of the coalition said they got a late start because they were tied up in a legislative battle against a lottery bill. The organization received its first shipment of 20,000 anti-gambling brochures last week, has hired a pollster and a direct-mail expert, and is preparing a voter information guide on the election, said spokeswoman Sue Cox, executive director of Anti-Crime Council of Texas. Coalition members listed in the group's brochure include Landry; Yarborough; Jim Adams, former director of the Texas Department of Public Safety; Baylor football coach Grant Teaff; and former Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach. Cox said the group has no plans to air television spots, but will concentrate instead on mailings and grass-roots organizing. She wouldn't estimate the group's budget, but said she doubted it would keep pace with the pro-racing forces. "We're not concerned," she said. "We plan to match their dollars with people." United Methodists and Southern Baptists, the two largest Protestant denominations in Texas, also are working against legalized betting.

Houston experts in AIDS battle

HOUSTON (AP)—The director of the nation's first AIDS hospital and the city health director are publicly disputing how serious a health threat the disease poses. Dr. Peter Mansell, medical director of the Institute for Immunological Disorders, wrote in a letter to Mayor Kathy Whitmire that the city's health director doesn't know enough about AIDS and is downplaying its perils to the public. "The public health official for this city continues to deny that AIDS represents a serious problem," Mansell wrote in the July 13 letter. Dr. James Haughton, the city health director, denied Mansell's allegations. "He attributed statements to me that I never made," said Haughton, referring to the letter. "I have not said AIDS is not a serious problem." Haughton acknowledges that AIDS poses a threat, but says more people are dying in the city from ailments such as breast cancer. Whitmire's spokesman, Paul Mabry, said the mayor had received the letter, but had not yet read it. In his letter, Mansell said Haughton's actions may be affecting the credibility of the city administration.

Parents are stunned by son's announcement

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are beside ourselves with grief and frustration. Our 18-year-old son has just told us that he is gay. This doesn't seem possible. He is an honor student, excelled in athletics and has even had girlfriends all through school. Abby, he is so masculine looking, no one would ever guess it.

He didn't express any great sorrow about it. He just stated the fact that he has "known" how he felt ever since he was 7 or 8 years old. He swore he has never been molested by a man at any time in his life and was not introduced into this kind of sex by anyone. He says he just "feels" a sexual desire for men that he has never felt for a woman.

Abby, his father is an elder in the church, and our son loves the Lord and knows what the Scriptures say about man lying with man.

It breaks our hearts to know that our only son will never marry and have children. How do other parents handle this problem?

What can we do apart from praying for him?

DEAR ABBY: When I read the beautiful poem "In Memory of Beau" with "author unknown," I knew I had to write. Abby, the author is not unknown. That poem was written by Jimmy Stewart, the famous actor. I heard him read it on Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show." If Mr. Stewart did indeed pen those moving words, I feel he should be given credit for touching so many of us with that beautiful tribute to a beloved pet.

BERNICE COGGAN, DENVER

DEAR BERNICE: Many readers wrote to tell me that they had heard Jimmy Stewart recite his beautiful tribute to Beau, so I wrote to Mr. Stewart and asked him if he was indeed the author. His response:

DEAR ABBY: I have your letter and the copy of the piece from your column titled "In Memory of Beau."

This one was not composed by me. I once wrote a poem about my dog, Beau, but it's completely different than "In Memory of Beau." Very sincerely,

DEAR DENNIS: Beautiful. That little speech was just what the doctor (or nurse) ordered.

DEAR ABBY: I have a suggestion for "Motormouth," who asked for hints on how to refrain from talking too much.

New options make luxury bath popular

Spurred by the fitness craze, encouraged by a change in social attitudes, and embraced by a population that craves amenities, the latest home improvement trend — the upgraded luxury bath — has come of age.

This trend has reached a level of sophistication that surpasses simply remodeling. It now involves creating a unique space to serve a wide range of needs, from a recreational center to a tranquil retreat.

"Today's consumers want a larger, more luxurious bath filled with many amenities and distinctive features," said David Weiner, executive director of the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau. "They want to create an elegant room and are willing to invest their hard-earned dollars to do so."

"The bath is changing in its role," Weiner said. "It used to be a rather routine 5x7-foot room. Now it is becoming a more important part of the home, large enough to accommodate luxury items such as whirlpools or spas, and receiving as much attention as the kitchen."

As a result, there is now an amazing array of new products, colors, styles and materials available for the bath to provide unlimited design possibilities. And, with the assistance of bath designers and manufacturers, consumers are eagerly experimenting with the new options, according to the Bureau.

"Consumers are looking for their own stamp, their own signature, so they are searching for unique elements," said Jean Niederberger, director of bath design and color for Eljer Plumbingware.

"They are also exploring the use of very familiar products in a unique way; instead of simply putting a whirlpool against a wall, they are putting a whirlpool against a wall with a window that contains a view of an exotic garden," she said.

According to John Laughton, manager of marketing projects for American Standard, "Bath designs are incorporating architectural details such as cathedral ceilings, skylights, varying floor levels and innovative ways to separate areas and use the space more effectively."

The search for personal expression in the bath has led to the introduction of a variety of new colors for fixtures and accessories.

"People are discovering they can make a strong statement with color and are becoming less afraid to use even bold colors, either throughout the bath, or as an accent," said Tim Mullally, director of marketing for Kohler Co.

While white and natural tones still dominate in the market, colors such as Eljer's "ruby" and "onyx" are popular, as are Kohler's "wild rose" and "tender gray," and American Standard's "whisper colors," which are light tints.

Mullally also said that green tones are selling well. "They are becoming more common in fashion and therefore are making an appearance in the bath, especially teal and light greens."

One reason for the influx of new colors is the emergence and popularity of products (especially faucets and fixtures), that are European in design.

"European design evolved from the modern movement and therefore is very functional and rather austere," Laughton said. According to Mullally, the "European look" is really a "euphemism for good, clean, functional design." The style is typically found in higher priced product lines because of this emphasis on design and a rich color palette.

Jewel tones, blue-green shades and other "sophisticated hues," initially introduced in Europe, have become widely accepted in the U.S.

In addition, faucets have been transformed from traditional chrome finishes to brass, white, blue, yellow and red.

Niederberger believes one explanation for the popularity of these new color schemes is the fact that the European fashion and textile market has influenced the "living home palette," which are the colors used for furnishings, carpets, bedspreads, etc. Consumers have used specific tones throughout the house and want to continue the pattern into the bath to create continuity.

In addition to offering a variety of color choices, manufacturers are also providing a wide selection of fixtures and bath "furniture" in numerous styles.

Sleek, one-piece toilets, bidets, pedestal lavatories and whirlpools, which can accommodate two or more persons, are frequently seen in today's luxury baths.

"Consumers continue to want traditionally styled fixtures, but accept any products that are well designed, make good use of space and are functional," said Mullally.

For this reason, pedestal lavatories, which were popular through the 1950s and then replaced by the vanity in the '60s and '70s, are reappearing.

"There is no doubt that people like the cleaner look of the new lavatories. However, the pedestal lavatory lacks the surface and cabinet storage provided by a vanity," said Mullally.

To overcome this inherent problem, industry manufacturers have developed new variations of the lav which offer more surface area. They have also designed unique forms of storage to accompany this highly stylized bathroom sink.

The fixture that has received the most attention and experienced the most dramatic changes in design, however, is the bathtub.

Baths for two are the biggest trend, according to Laughton, especially those that are fitted with whirlpool jets.

"Consumers are becoming educated about whirlpools," said Niederberger. "Whereas previously, they didn't know the difference between a spa, hot tub or a whirlpool, they now ask for specific designs and materials such as fiberglass, cast iron or acrylic."

Larry Fairchild, director of design at Universal-Rundle, said, "People are looking for the function of a whirlpool — a deep tub, arm rests, grab bars, lumbar supports and space for multiple bathing. So in response to this demand, there is a wide variety of whirlpools available in all sizes, styles and price ranges."

There are also a number of luxury items available with the whirlpool, including such devices as Kohler's "Autofill," which will automatically fill your tub when your morning alarm goes off, or at any other scheduled time.

Another is American Standard's "Ambiance," a computer control option that can be activated (even by phone) to fill the tub at any time.

Women expected to travel more

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — By the end of 1987, it's estimated that women will constitute 50 percent of the nation's traveling population.

Patti Fishel, travel services manager for R.J. Reynolds, says business travel for women does not have to cause fear and anxiety.

Fishel, whose department arranges more than 20,000 business trips a year, says the nation's hotels are doing a better job of accommodating female travelers, particularly with regard to safety concerns.

"But you have to help them," Fishel adds. "Ask to be moved to another room if someone is bothering you. Keep your door locked at all times. Stay out of dark hallways and know where the fire exits are."

Fifties styles make comeback

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifties fever is back and kids are catching it, according to Mary Warren, designer for Carter's, a leading manufacturer of children's clothing.

Today's generation is sporting swinging skirts, nifty leggings and other rock 'n' roll clothing reminiscent of the 1950s and '60s, Warren says, reflecting the fad started by their parents.

"Watch for fun, sassy kids' clothes for back-to-school this fall," she says. Warren adds that the nostalgic look has been recreated using the ease and comfort of today's fabrics.

Kevin Bass is greeted after two-run homer wins game.

Astros close in on Giants with extra-innings victory

HOUSTON (AP) — Right fielder Kevin Bass delivered a message to the National League's top two teams when he belted two home runs for a series opener victory over the San Francisco Giants—don't count the Houston Astros out.

"Other ball clubs don't consider us a threat anymore. We've done everything we can to win and it hasn't been working. Now maybe we're relaxed and things will start to happen," Bass said after the Astros' 5-3 victory in the Monday opener of a three-game series.

Bass underscored his message with a two-out, two-run homer to left field in the bottom of the 13th inning that sealed the Astros win and moved Houston within one-half game of the second place Giants. The victory also put the Astros only 3½ games behind the National League-leading Cincinnati Reds.

Switch-hitting Bass victimized reliever Joe Price, 1-2, with his right-handed homer, his 12th of the season. In the fourth inning, his left-handed home run was off Giants starter Mark Krukow.

"This is the first time I've ever done that in one game," Bass said. "It's one of those personal things you always dream about."

Bass was asked if Price was afraid to confront him with two outs.

"I figured he (Price) wouldn't be afraid to challenge me. I just waited back for the curve ball he got up."

Giants catcher Bob Brenly felt he called the right pitch.

The 300 score gave the Humble native a 6-pin lead over Paula Drake of Broken Arrow, Okla.

"It's nice to lead the tournament," Urbanek said, "but I'm more excited about bowling my first 300 game."

Bambinos still alive

PLAINVIEW—The Pampa National League All-Stars edged by Plainview 6-5 Monday night to stay alive in the Southwest Regional Bambino Baseball Tournament.

Pampa meets Broken Bow, Okla. at 5:30 p.m. tonight and a chance to gain some revenge. Pampa lost to the Oklahoma team 12-2 in the opening round of the tournament.

Plainview was leading 5-4 when Jeff Tidwell belted a two-run homer in the fifth inning for the two-run margin of victory.

Tidwell had two RBI in the game while Kurt West had two hits in three trips to the plate and also scored a run.

Tarin Peet won the game in relief for the Pampa All-Stars. He struck out five, walked two and gave up one hit in two and a third inning on the mound. Tidwell and Chris Poole also pitched for Pampa.

Pampa's top defensive player was left fielder Dennis Graham, who made some outstanding catches, including one he turned into a double play.

Losing pitcher was Justin Cork.

If Pampa wins tonight, they will play the Arkansas-Louisiana winner at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday night. A loss tonight would eliminate the local All-Stars.

Equipment check-out for the seventh and eighth grade teams will be announced at a later date, Dunnam said.

James Lott loses eligibility, newspaper reports

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — University of Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds today will officially declare defensive back James Lott ineligible to play football for accepting a loan from sports agent Lloyd Bloom, the Austin American Statesman reported.

Dodds said Monday Lott admitted he signed a promissory note for an $1,800 loan from Bloom, but never signed an actual contract with the Los Angeles-based agent, the newspaper reported.

Lott, however denied telling Dodds he signed the note.

"I knew they were writing a letter to the NCAA asking for (clarification)," Lott said. "Did I accept a loan? No, man. ... Did I sign a note? No."

Lott was expected to be in Austin today to talk with Texas Longhorns Coach David McWilliams.

Bloom and partner Norby Walters are being investigated by a Chicago grand jury for their dealings with more than 60 college athletes.

Bloom could not be reached for comment late Monday.

Dodds said he was told the grand jury investigating Bloom and Walters had a copy of a business transaction between them and Lott.

"We can't find any facts of a contract," Dodds said. "Bloom said James didn't sign a contract but a promissory note."

Pokes acquire Barksdale

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Fame is fleeting with the Dallas Cowboys. Rod Barksdale, obtained in a Sunday night trade with the Los Angeles Raiders for cornerback Ron Fells, wore No. 80 in practice Monday. It's the old number of Tony Hill, second-leading receiver in Cowboys history, who was released this summer and picked up by San Francisco. "I'm just as surprised to be here as you are," said the 6-foot-2, 190-pound Barksdale, who started 15 games for the Raiders last year. "The Raiders had a lot of receivers and somebody had to go." Barksdale, who was a track star at Arizona and never played high school or college football, caught 18 passes for 434 yards and two touchdowns in 1986. He used his 10.2 speed in the 100 meters to average 24 yards per catch. "The Raiders were very patient working with me," Barksdale said. "They saw me as a raw talent. I've worked hard and feel like I've improved since they signed me." Barksdale was signed as a free agent in 1985 and spent the first year as an injured reserve. Critics say Barksdale, like many track stars, has trouble catching the ball. "I've worked hard on my hand-eye coordination and I think it's getting better," Barksdale said.

"I'll tell you one thing, I have no fears about going over the middle." One of the biggest criticisms of Hill is that he won't make the tough catch in traffic. Coach Tom Landry said Barksdale will work on Mike Renfro's side opposite Mike Sherrard. "Barksdale could play right now but he's in some tough competition," Landry said. "Barksdale is not used to our precision passing game." "There is some question about his hands but we can fix that with a lot of work. They tell us he gets better every year. He has good speed, good size and is a good target. It's the kind of chance you like to take." Gil Brandt, director of scouting, said the trade "was good for both teams. Barksdale has great speed and gives us to legitimate deep threats." Barksdale finished sixth in the 1984 NCAA championships in the 200-meter dash. "I was surprised the Cowboys were looking for a young guy," said the 25-year-old Barksdale. "I thought they'd get somebody like James Lofton, a big wheel. I'm ready to learn the system and produce with the Cowboys." Barksdale stayed after practice with rookie quarterback Kevin Sweeney to work on his receiving technique. "He's a good person," Landry said of Barksdale. "You never know. He could really be something."

Coaches want change in tie playoff games

DALLAS (AP) — A poll of Texas high school football coaches showed a majority would like a change in the way tie playoff games are decided, but supporters of the change are divided on the best way to break deadlocks. Of 100 coaches surveyed by the Dallas Morning News, 57 said they would like to see a new format to really settle the score in playoffs, 40 said no and three were undecided. "Let's have a clear-cut winner before we go home," said Henderson Coach Jimmy Watson. The coaches were polled during last week's Texas High School Coaches Association coaching school in Fort Worth. Playoff ties are currently broken by penetrations across the opponent's 20-yard line. If both teams have equal penetrations, first downs are used, then total yardage. The final tiebreaker is a coin flip. Although most were in favor of an overtime, coaches were split on how a better way of breaking a tie. Twenty-five said they wanted to see a form of sudden death overtime or an extra quarter, and 25 coaches wanted a format that would put the ball on a portion of the field — the 10-yard line in most cases — and give each team four downs to score. Overtime supporters say their format would allow players to actually decide a game's outcome. "I would like for it to be settled by the kids," said MacArthur coach Ray Overton, who favors a sudden death or extra quarter form of overtime. "I remember losing a playoff game when we were tied at 2 on penetrations and lost, 8-5, on first downs. "That was a hard way to lose. That was when I was with Abilene Cooper and we were tied with Wichita Falls, 0-0, in the mud and rain." Diboll coach Russell Roberts' team lost to Giddings 3-2 on penetrations in the regional playoffs after a 14-14 tie. "I'd like to see some sort of system giving each team three to four plays on the goal line," he said. "That, or have four plays picked up from midfield and the most yards win." Bosqueville coach David Borner prefers the format used in Arkansas schoolboy football. "Place the ball on the 10 and let them score any way they want," he said. "This format is exciting and allows a true winner to be decided. What a better way to win a game than to win in overtime and in a goal-line situation." But Plano's Tom Kimbrough, who won the 5A title in 1986, said he favors keeping the system as it is. "You can use strategy within the 48 minutes, and I think we have a good system with penetrations, first downs or points. To me, they are like fractions of points." Denison coach Marty Criswell said he also prefers the present system. His team won the 4A title in 1984. "It allows the coach to dictate the strategy that will determine the outcome of the contest over the entire 48 minutes of the game. A brief overtime period placed on a small part of the field may put the personnel on one of the teams at a severe disadvantage."

Athletes stunned by Pan Am heat wave

By DOUG RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jerry Morales played professional baseball in the Midwest, so the oppressive heat and humidity of August is no surprise to him. But it stunned many of the athletes and coaches arriving in Indianapolis for the Pan Am Games. "I'm used to this. It was like this in St. Louis and Chicago," said Morales, a former major-league player who finished his career with the Cubs in 1983. Morales is the hitting coach for the Puerto Rican baseball team, a crew that was greeted on Monday by temperatures in the mid-90s and oppressive humidity. Already tired from a long day of travel, the Puerto Rican team was content to leave sight-seeing for another day, deciding instead to seek relief inside the athletes' village at Fort Benjamin Harrison. More than 400 of the anticipated 4,000 competitors from 38 Western Hemisphere nations had arrived by Monday, but the heat and humidity kept daytime activity to a minimum at the village, located about 10 miles northeast of downtown Indianapolis. "We are getting used to the weather," Margrita Nava, a member of the Mexican equestrian team, said. "It is hard for us and hard for the horses." "The heat is so intense that you could have to change your race strategy," said Norman Bellingham of Rockville, Md., a member of the United States canoe and kayak team. Bellingham said the combination of the heat and the security precautions plotted by organizers served to keep the athletes close to their temporary homes. The National Weather Service said Monday's high in Indianapolis was 94 degrees. The temperature, and the 47 percent relative humidity, pushed the heat index to 100, the weather service said. The heat index combines temperature and humidity to indicate the relative discomfort caused by weather extremes. The heat wave which has gripped the Midwest is expected to last through Wednesday and then abate on Thursday, when temperatures are forecast in the 80s, the weather service said. The athletes will wait out the weather in their dormitories on the eastern end of the sprawling, tree-lined facility, which is home to the Army Finance Center. Near the dormitories, Pan Am organizers have set up a tent city of shops, food stands, a barber shop and dry cleaners. A drugstore, bank and post office are nearby. The village is surrounded by two rows of chain link fence, each topped by barbed wire. Incoming vehicles are stopped in a fenced-in area where policemen search the wheel wells and underside of vehicles. They also walk through the buses that transport volunteers, workers and the media into the village. Reporters and accredited visitors are welcome to mingle with athletes and coaches in the so-called "international zone" of the athletes' villages, but access is limited to the administrative and residential sections of the village. The closed environment gives athletes plenty of time to visit with competitors from other nations. "In our sport, you get to know a lot of your competitors pretty well," Bellingham said. "I was just talking to a friend from Argentina that I hadn't seen in a year."

Wide receiver excited about Oilers' offense

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Houston Oilers wide receiver Ernest Givins has one word to describe the Oilers' adjusted offensive scheme. "Excitement," Givins said. "Everytime the ball snaps, something is going to happen because you have the backs coming out of the backfield, catching the ball, plus you have four wideouts that can run." The Oilers bogged down at the start of last season trying to force a ground-dominated offense. The passes will come earlier this season. "It's wide open," Givins said. "You can score quicker and you can keep the fans happy that way." Givins' rookie performance for the Oilers also could be called excitement. He caught 61 passes for 1,062 yards and three touchdowns. What does he have planned for an encore? "Clap I guess," Givins deadpanned. The former University of Louisville star deserves the applause. He was an immediate hit in the NFL last season, combining with Drew Hill to become the NFL's fourth best receiving combination with 126 catches. Hill led the team with 65 for 1,112 yards and five touchdowns. Givins gave the Oilers their second 1,000-yard receiver in the final game of the season with two catches for 49 yards against Buffalo. "I'll sit down after the scrimmage (in Seattle Wednesday) and set some goals," Givins said. "Right now I'm just trying to work on this offense." Givins will no longer have the element of surprise on the league's defenses. "Last year when I came out I was scared, no one knew about Ernest Givins except Ernest Givins," Givins said. "Now, everyone in the NFL knows me. This will give me more chances to show my ability than what I did last year." Hill and Givins were key weapons in the Oilers offense last season and they'll be featured even more this season with more emphasis being placed on a balanced attack. The Oilers hired former run-and-shoot Coach June Jones to help implement a stronger passing attack and Givins is ready for it. The most chilling part of Givins' rookie season came early in the 10th game of the season against Miami when Givins suffered a neck injury.

Keeshan

HOUSTON (AP) — Bob Keeshan, television's Captain Kangaroo, says he feels great after triple heart-bypass surgery and will spend some time with his grandson before returning to work.

"I feel better than I've felt ever. I've probably been given another 20 years of life," said the six-time Emmy winner who was host of CBS' Captain Kangaroo, television's longest-running children's show, for nearly 30 years.

Keeshan suffered a heart attack in 1981 and said doctors recommended the July 23 operation because blood flow in three of his heart arteries was greatly restricted. "Almost any coronary event could have been fatal," he said.

Captain Kangaroo premiered on CBS in 1955 and went off the air on the network in 1984, but half-hour shows from the original run on public television.

Keeshan said he will take about two months off from supervising the series.

NEW YORK (AP) — Madonna says in an interview on NBC's Today show this week that being from a big family helped make her competitive.

The pop star said that having eight brothers and sisters made her "want to stand out. You wanted to be treated special."

In the interview, to be broadcast Wednesday through Friday, Madonna said also that she's unjustly accused of being popular more because of good publicity than for talent.

"Like a good hook gets you in the door, but something has to keep you in the room," she said.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Country music star George Jones has been released from a hospital after five days and told to slow down.

Jones, 55, left University Hospitals on Monday. He had been treated for exhaustion, a kidney infection, bronchitis and prostate complications.

"His physicians obviously felt like it was OK for him to go on about his business, but with an admonition that he rest a little more," said hospital spokesman Jim Bosarge.

Jones' press agent in Nashville, Tenn., Tom Conway, said that Jones became ill vacationing after a 47-city tour and that it was uncertain whether he would be able to complete the tour.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The other woman in the Joan Collins-Peter Holm divorce case says she's been deluged with acting offers since she took the stand and testified she was Holm's "passion flower."

"L.A. is crazy, and I love it. I always knew I was going to become a star," said Romina Danielson, who swooned in court while testifying about her affair with Holm before and during his 13-month marriage to Dynasty star Miss Collins.

This week, the 23-year-old aspiring actress was scheduled to appear on Good Morning America and Johnny Carson's The Tonight Show. She is also featured in this week's People magazine and has been offered $150,000 to pose for Playboy.

"I don't know if I'm going to do it. I'm very confused right now," she said of the offer.

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Heather Groshart says that judging from his music videos, she wouldn't have guessed that rock star Jon Bon Jovi was shy. But then the cancer patient never thought she'd get the opportunity to find out.

The 10th-grader met Bon Jovi through the Sunshine Foundation, a Philadelphia-based organization that grants wishes of terminally or chronically ill children. She has osteosarcoma, a form of bone cancer.

Evelyn Fiedler, family service coordinator for the group, said the foundation paid for a trip by the girl and her family to Huntington, W. Va., for a concert and meeting with Bon Jovi last month.

Two escape from crash

HEREFORD (AP) — A Dallas pilot and his passenger escaped injury when their single-engine plane flipped and burned during takeoff, authorities said.

Deaf Smith County Sheriff Joe Brown said a packet removed from the wreckage Monday identified the pilot as a Dallas man.

Federal investigators were expected on the scene today, about 20 miles northwest of Hereford, near the Great Plains Cattle Co., officials said.

The aircraft, apparently trying to take off from a road, belied into a field and overturned before bursting into flames around 4:45 p.m. Monday, authorities said.
