Child survives; parents killed

Lone air crash survivor identified by grandfather

By KATHERINE RIZZO
Associated Press Writer

ROMULUS, Mich. — A 4-year-old girl emerged as the miraculous survivor of the nation's second-deadliest air disaster, and reports surfaced of repeated engine malfunctions in the Northwest Airlines jetliner that crashed, killing up to 162.

Cecilia Cichan, who was listed in critical condition today with third-degree burns over 29 percent of her body, was identified as a passenger on Flight 255 by her grandfather, who recognized her chipped tooth and purple nail polish, officials said.

"Her mother shielded her, and that is what saved her," said the grandfather, Anthony Cichan of Maple Glen, Pa.

The girl's parents and 6-year-old brother were killed in Sunday night's crash just after takeoff from Detroit Metropolitan Airport on a flight to Phoenix and suburban Los Angeles.

Authorities have yet to establish an official death count in the crash of the McDonnell Douglas MD-80, which occurred in clear weather.

John Lauber, of the National Transportation Safety Board, said 152 aboard the plane died. Northwest spokesman Kevin Whalen said 155 people might have been aboard, and at least 154 people died.

"The infant count is going up," he said. Infants generally are not ticketed on commercial airline flights if they are carried by adults.

Wayne County officials reported that two people died on the ground. Late Monday, County Medical Examiner Werner Spitz said five or six bodies were pulled from three vehicles destroyed when the plane smashed into them or showered them with blazing fuel and debris.

Spitz said the bodies were too charred to determine the number, and it wasn't immediately clear whether he included the two earlier ground fatalities.

At least six people who had been on the ground were treated at hospitals for injuries in the crash.

Northwest Airlines on Monday began bringing family members here to help identify the victims, but an official passenger list wasn't released.

A team of 100 investigators, including experts from the federal government and the companies that made the plane and engines, walked the flight path and examined the remains of the jet's two Pratt & Whitney JT8D-217 engines.

Federal Aviation Administration records showed plane had engine failures on takeoff twice in 1986 and once in 1985. As recently as January 1987, the plane was forced to return to the airport in Memphis, Tenn., after takeoff because of low oil pressure, said Bobby Mardis of the FAA's Aeronautics Center in Oklahoma City.

The aircraft landed safely in Minneapolis on Jan. 6, 1986, after flying 18 minutes on only its right engine, according to FAA records cited by WCCO-TV in Minneapolis and The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer. Republic Airlines, which merged with Northwest last year, discovered defective T-3 turbine blades, the report said.

Northwest spokesman Redmond Tyler called that report misleading, saying the problem engine was replaced.

On April 1, 1986, the same plane lost power in its right engine and returned safely after 11 minutes, the reports said. The airline again discovered that the T-3 blades, which power the aircraft, had failed.

In November 1985, an engine turbine section failed about 80 miles from Minneapolis, forcing the plane to return, Mardis said.

The crash was the first of a major commercial plane in the United States in almost a year, and the first involving a domestic carrier in almost two years. The death toll was the worst since 275 people died when an American Airlines DC-10 crashed at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport on May 25, 1979.

Debris from jet crash is cleared from damaged highway near Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Jet had previous engine problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Northwest Airlines jet that crashed near Detroit had engine problems that required pilots to turn back at least three times over the last two years, the Federal Aviation Administration said today.

Two of the incidents involved turbine blade failures and necessitated replacement of the jet engines, while a third involved an oil pressure problem, FAA records showed.

In each case, the McDonnell Douglas MD-80 landed safely.

The FAA said the plane was a relatively new one and had been bought by Republic Airlines in December 1982 before it merged with Northwest.

The records show a total of eight incidents affecting the plane since December 1984, including the three failures in the Pratt & Whitney JT8D 200-series powerplants.

The JT8D 200-series engines were the subject of industry-wide federal air safety warnings earlier this year after episodes of failures at three other airlines.

Pratt & Whitney spokesman Ed Cowles defended the JT8D 200-series engines as having "an outstanding safety record. They carry millions of passengers a day safely."

Hostage escapes

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — American journalist Charles Glass said today he outwitted his captors and fled to freedom after two months as a hostage in Lebanon. He was turned over to a U.S. diplomat in Damascus.

Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa handed Glass over to American Charge d'Affaires David Ransom, the senior U.S. diplomat in the Syrian capital.

"I feel good," Glass told reporters. "The people who really suffered are my wife and children." He appeared to be in good shape but looked tired.

He said he wanted to fly to London, his home, "as soon as possible to meet with my family and folks."

Asked whether he was set free or had escaped, Glass replied: "It was an escape."

Glass, wearing a blue track suit and no shoes, walked into the seaside Summerland Hotel in west Beirut at 2:30 a.m. today and said: "I am Charlie See HOSTAGE, Page 2

School proposes budget increase of $500,000

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

A school budget with a spending increase of almost $500,000 will be considered for approval when Pampa school trustees meet at 6 p.m. Wednesday in the Pampa Middle School library, 2401 Charles.

The proposed $12.05 million budget carries a 14-cent tax hike, but trustees don't plan to formally set a tax rate until Sept. 8, following a required public hearing Sept. 1.

Based on the proposed higher tax rate, the annual school tax on a $50,000 home would increase by $70.

The 1987-88 budget recommended by Superintendent Harry Griffith has generally been supported by trustees.

School Business Manager Jerry Haralson said Monday he was finalizing budget figures for Wednesday's meeting. He said the final amounts won't be exactly the same as those estimated in previous budget workshops, but "they should be fairly close."

"We'll see how good estimators we are," Haralson said.

The proposed budget includes a new, 18-step plan for teacher salary increases, replacing a state-imposed 10-step plan.

Currently, Pampa teachers receive an annual $1,140 salary increase in each of their first 10 years as teachers, as required by the state. There are no increases after 10 years.

Under Griffith's 18-step proposal, teachers would receive smaller pay hikes — averaging $800 a year — for longer than the 10-year period. The proposed plan was approved by a committee of administrators and teachers before being presented to the school board.

Griffith has said freezing salaries after 10 years of teaching provides no pay incentives for older teachers.

Griffith has recommended that taxes be raised from 71.8 cents to 86 cents per $100 valuation, near the maximum allowed before the district would be subject to a roll-back election by taxpayers.

Texas taxing entities can raise tax rates up to 8 percent more than the effective tax rate — the rate needed to raise the same See BUDGET, Page 2 intendent David Malone, the district's effective tax rate — what it would have to levy to raise the same local tax revenue as last year — rose from $1.15 to $1.49 per $100 valuation. Sixteen cents of the tax rate must go for the debt service. Trustees were considering an original tax proposal of $1.50 per $100 valuation.

After cutting $5,701 from the originally proposed $580,000 budget Monday, and after arguing over how much to go into the surplus, trustees managed to pull the proposed tax down to $1.44 per $100 valuation.

Malone said the proposed tax rate would require $50,000 from the school's $60,000 surplus.

Trustee Kevin Frankenbery proposed an even smaller increase — a $1.40 tax rate, which would pull $55,000 from the surplus.

Said Frankenbery, "If you have to use the surplus, you may as well use it all because you aren't going to save enough to do anything with."

Taxpayers will have the chance to give whatever suggestions they have at a budget hearing at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 31 at the school offices.

Malone said the $575,000 budget is about the same as what was proposed for 1986-87. The final 1987 budget rose to $589,000 mainly because of legal fees and adjusted salaries surrounding the mid-year resignation of former Superintendent Bob Mickey. Mickey resigned in November when trustees cut his salary from $46,646 to $33,120 last year.

Also contributing to the increase was a correction for the salary scale for former Principal W.F. Howard, who retired in May.

What to do about replacing the principal was another issue that split the board.

Malone had proposed cutting the principal's position from the 1988 budget and going with a single administrator campus, with Malone serving in both positions. Eliminating the principal's salary would cut $35,000 from the See MOBEETIE, Page 2

MOBEETIE — The headaches, disagreements and midnight meetings continue for Mobeetie trustees while they decide whether to raise taxes by nearly 30 percent or consume the school district's small surplus.

It may take both for the school district to maintain the proposed $575,042 general fund budget that trustees proposed at their regular meeting Monday.

An additional burden comes with $53,408 in debt service to finish payment on the school gymnasium. The district has three years left on the bond.

But with an enrollment fewer than 100 students and the tax base dropping to $32,783, every penny counts. And trustees were divided over where those pennies can be taken from. It took trustees until 12:30 this morning to whittle their budget and proposed tax rate.

Shon Loyd Kysar, 18, 1500 N. Sumner, was arrested at the Police Department on a charge of burglary of a motor vehicle.

Francisco Apodaca-Portillo, 19, 516 Warren, was arrested in the 1300 block of Charles on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

Officer Cox looks through about $8,000 in recovered property.

Police arrest two teen-agers in string of auto burglaries

Police recovered more than $8,000 in property and arrested two teen-agers after patrolmen looked in a car on the "drag" and saw fishing gear that had been reported as stolen.

Tony Scott Hicks, 17, 434 Hill Ave., and Shon Loyd Kysar, 18, 1500 N. Sumner St., were arrested Sunday and Monday and charged in connection with a string of recent car burglaries on Pampa's north side.

The auto burglaries had been featured as this week's "Crime of the Week" in the Crime Stoppers report.

But it was an alert police officer — not a citizen seeking a reward — that cracked the case, police said.

Sgt. Charlie Love said today that officers Jay Lewis and Wayne Williams arrested Hicks and another teen-ager Sunday night at 400 W. Foster Ave. after Williams noticed the fishing gear, which had been reported stolen from a boat on Rosewood Lane.

Love said questioning of the teen-agers by detectives Terry Cox, Lynn Brown and Gary Boydston led to the recovery of more property, including car stereos, weights, office furniture and signs.

"Through intensive interrogation, we solved about nine auto burglaries and several other thefts," the sergeant said.

Police dismissed auto burglary charges against the other youth in the car, David Wayne Parker, 17, 1133 Willow Road, on Monday, after detectives determined that Parker knew about the thefts but wasn't involved. Parker also was charged with being a minor in possession of an alcoholic beverage.

Kysar was arrested at the Police Department later Monday and charged with burglary of a motor vehicle.

Hicks was charged with minor in possession and possessing a fictitious driver's license, in addition to his auto burglary charge.

Justice of the Peace Wayne Roberts set bond on Kysar and Hicks at $2,000 each. Kysar remained in jail this morning.

Salesman not exposed to AIDS

DALLAS (AP) — An insurance salesman who authorities feared had spread the AIDS virus to dozens of sexually molested children never was exposed to the fatal disease, said the pathologist who initially issued the report.

"The original test produced a false positive," said Charles Petty, the Dallas County medical examiner who did an autopsy on Jimmy Glenn Etheridge, 37, who was shot to death June 29 by a 16-year-old housemate.

"We have run every available test and have concluded Etheridge had not been exposed to the virus," he said Monday.

While Petty's latest findings prompted relief, they also provoked criticism that his report a month ago was alarmist because it was based on an experimental and unreliable test for acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Stephen Johnson, an attorney for Etheridge's former housemate, said Marlin, Texas, had been disgraced nationally by the misleading report.

"A lot of damage that's been done could have been avoided if the medical authorities had issued a caveat from the beginning, saying their initial findings were based on experimental tests that could well be inaccurate," he said.

After Etheridge's death, police searching his Marlin home found computer diskettes containing records of sexual contacts with young males, as well as snapshots of boys and pornographic magazines and videotapes.

The first autopsy findings led authorities to fear that Etheridge had exposed up to 54 youths to the deadly disease.

The original report said Etheridge tested positive for AIDS but that his blood tested negative for antibodies produced to fight the virus that causes AIDS.

Petty's second series of tests included the neutralization test, which turned up negative.

Budget

amount of property tax revenue as in the previous year — before taxpayers can force a rollback election. Because of declining mineral values, the effective rate for Pampa schools in 1987-88 is 79.61 cents.

Even with the projected 14-cent tax increase, however, trustees are still left with a budget deficit of nearly $382,000, forcing them to dip into the district's $2.65 million surplus fund. Haralson has warned that he needs at least $2 million in the fund to pay bills from September until tax notices go out in December.

In other action Wednesday, trustees plan to consider employee health insurance. Haralson said bids for individual premiums, currently paid by the district as a benefit to employees, increased from $56 last year to $90 for 1987-88, meaning the district faces a $17,000 increase in employee health insurance costs.

district's school administration budget.

But Malone also proposed that his salary be raised to about $45,000 to cover both jobs.

This did not sit well with Frankenberg, who opposed any salary increase that was not mandated by the state.

Frankenberg proposed that the board give Malone a $36,420 salary and look for a principal. His motion was defeated 2-4.

Frankenberg was also thwarted in his efforts to cut proposed salary increases for cafeteria workers and custodians.

"This is no time to be increasing anything that is not mandated by the state," Frankenberg said, stressing that he felt the cafeteria workers were doing an excellent job.

But Trustee Gary May asked if it was fair that non-teachers be denied a salary increase while teacher salaries are being raised.

Trustees chopped another $5,000 from the budget by cutting proposed repairs to teachers' housing from $10,000 to $5,000.

The proposed budget also includes a $14,000 cut in library services and a $3,500 cut in counseling services because the district has combined the jobs of librarian, counselor and special education teacher. In July, trustees hired Malone's wife, Merle Malone to take on these threefold duties as well as monitor the school's new TI-IN satellite television classroom.

The school will use the TI-IN system as part of its 1988 curriculum. Installation of the call-in curriculum and state-mandated teacher salary raises boosted the school's instruction budget by $17,889, to $330,545.

In other business, trustees: accepted a bid of $1,264 from Happy Painters of Pampa to paint the cafeteria and gymnasium; hired Tommy Massey of Canadian as boy's basketball coach; and designated the teachers' work room as the staff smoking area. Staff members may also smoke in the school cafeteria during school activities.

Nurse's aide indicted in 28 deaths

CINCINNATI (AP) — A special grand jury today indicted a former nurse's aide, called a sane but compulsive killer by the prosecutor, in the deaths or poisonings of 28 people, including 20 patients at a county-owned hospital.

Under an agreement between prosecution and defense attorneys, Donald Harvey will enter guilty pleas, and will be spared the death penalty, Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge William S. Mathews said Monday.

The indictments today, which covered from April 1983 to December 1986, were in addition to an earlier charge of aggravated murder pending against Harvey in the March 1987 death of a patient at Drake Hospital, where Harvey worked.

Harvey allegedly used cyanide, arsenic, hepatitis serum, rat poison and suffocation in the attacks.

Heat, humidity create dangerous conditions

DALLAS (AP) — An excessive heat alert was issued through today as temperatures over 100 degrees combined with humidity resulted in conditions pinpointed as factors in at least two deaths.

Highs above the century mark and humidity ranging from 35 to 45 percent made it feel like 115 degrees across much of North Texas Monday, the National Weather Service said.

"What we base it (the heat index) on is a combination of the actual temperature and the humidity," said Ed Delgado of the weather service's Fort Worth office. "The heat index factor is what it actually feels like out there."

The Dallas County medical examiner's office ruled Monday that the Saturday deaths of two men, ages 82 and 43, primarily resulted from hyperthermia, or elevated body temperature.

William Hicks, 82, was found dead in his bed in South Dallas. He was in a back bedroom with all the doors and windows shut and a box fan on the dresser blowing air that police estimated was heated at more than 100 degrees.

The medical examiner ruled that heart disease contributed to Hicks' death.

Warren Ray Harris, 43, also apparently died in his sleep, authorities said. One fan was blowing, and police said the temperature in the room was about 100. Contributing to his death was diabetes and myotonic dystrophy, a degenerative muscle disorder, the medical examiner ruled.

Although a weak front spawned some thunderstorms along the Red River, cooling temperatures near Wichita Falls Monday evening, those storms drifted to the east and were not expected to bring relief to the rest of the state.

The heat index is expected to stay high for the next several days, creating dangerous conditions, especially for people with heart conditions and other ailments, he said.

While temperatures scorch the state, people should take care to avoid prolonged exposure to the sun and to ward off the effects of the heat. Delgado recommended drinking water, wearing light-colored clothing and avoiding alcoholic beverages, which tend to cause dehydration.

An emergency room nurse at Parkland Memorial Hospital said the way to beat the searing conditions is to stay inside.

"It's essential that everyone remains as cool as possible because the heat will increase stress levels and work loads on the body," said the nurse, Larry Hess. "If people have to work outside, they must take as many breaks in the shade as possible and drink plenty of fluids."

Senior citizens especially should be wary, he said.

People aren't the only ones suffering from the summer heat.

Dr. Lonnie Legg, associate director of the Emergency Animal Clinic in Dallas, said people had been bringing in pets suffering from heat stroke symptoms because of the hot weather.

Pets should be kept inside with good ventilation or in the shade, he said.

The heat and humidity creates stress for livestock and crops, said Johnny Dews, an agriculture agent with the Dallas County Extension Service.

"It's hard on cattle, especially out grazing," he said. "It reduces the milk cycle for dairy cows and the breeding cycles on cow-calf operations."

New president wants to put athletic scandals behind SMU

DALLAS (AP) — The incoming president of Southern Methodist University says the school needs to focus on the business of teaching and research instead of its athletic scandals.

A. Kenneth Pye, 55, who became SMU's ninth president Monday, said immediate problems facing SMU include the budget deficit, a decline in developmental money and decreased admissions.

"When we get those in hand, we'll be in much better shape to determine which way we can go, how fast we can go there and what we can legitimately achieve," he said.

The school is reverberating from the football scandal which led to the National Collegiate Athletic Association banning the 1987 football season. The NCAA cited a booster slush fund that made payments to football players while the school was already on probation for similar violations. The school later dropped the 1988 season.

Pye said intercollegiate sports are criticized today as taking priority over academics. He said he has frequently been confronted with questions about problems in athletics.

"We want to put them at rest and engage in what this university is about — teaching and research," he said. "We've got a stadium over there, but we've got some other buildings, too. And it's the students and faculty in those buildings we're interested in."

The former Duke University chancellor said the Mustang athletic teams should stay in NCAA Division I and the Southwest Conference, as a faculty committee charged with evaluating the school's athletic department has recommended.

"I think they reached the correct result for the immediate future," he said. "Whether that is the long-range future, only events will tell."

Pye said he had not consulted with the Methodist bishops who prepared a report on the SMU pay-for-play scandal that cost the school its 1987 football season.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox is seeking the bishops' files gathered during their investigation into the scandal, but a spokesman for the group said it would not release the information.

Pye said SMU would be open and straightforward in the attorney general's probe and any other inquiries.

"We have absolutely nothing to hide," he said. "I don't want to have any kind of court battle that would produce a rehashing of this entire matter for the one zillionth time."

Pye succeeds former President L. Donald Shields, who resigned last fall during the height of SMU football scandal. Shields cited health problems for stepping down and William Stallcup was named acting president.

All segments of the university will be evaluated for their importance and effectiveness, and some may be eliminated or de-emphasized, Pye said.

But increased admissions, coupled with a slight tuition increase and a significantly higher level of donations, could mean that it would not be necessary to de-emphasize some SMU programs, he said.

Judge to rule on whether Crystal Beach's disincorporation vote valid GALVESTON (AP) — A state district judge is considering whether a vote that abolished the tiny coastal town of Crystal Beach should stand.

The town was officially abolished April 27 after residents of the small community of retirees and beachgoers voted April 4 to disincorporate the city.

State District Judge Arthur Leshar Jr. heard testimony and oral arguments Monday from attorneys representing pro- and anti-city factions, said Richard Crowther Jr., an attorney representing the pro-city group known as "Save Our City."

After the city was abolished, supporters of the former government then filed suit, seeking to have the vote declared invalid over alleged irregularities.

Leshar said Monday he would consider evidence in the case before ruling, possibly on Tuesday.

In the suit, "Save Our City" members claimed an insufficient number of valid signatures were collected on petitions leading to the vote, Crowther said. The suit also claims insufficient notice was given of the election and irregularities occurred during voting.

The pro-city group is seeking to have another election held on disincorporation, or it wants to have the results of the first election declared invalid and the city government resumed, he said.

"There never should have been an election, the city should be (brought) back," Crowther said.

Robert Shattuck, an attorney representing the "Committee to Abolish Crystal Beach," said the results of the vote should stand.

Wheeler range and pasture tour Thursday

WHEELER — The Annual Wheeler County Range and Pasture Tour will be held at 9 a.m. Thursday, Wheeler county Extension Agent Joe Don King announced.

The tour is sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Wheeler County Soil and Water Conservation District and the Soil Conservation Service.

Tour participants are to meet at 9 a.m. at the parking lot at Maxey's Steakhouse, south of Wheeler.

The first stop will be two goldaster-control demonstration plots on the Duncan Ranch south of Mobeetie. The tour will also include nearby stops at new lovegrass planting to compare different methods of seeding lovegrass.

The last stop on the tour will be at Bill Atherton's to look at new and year-old seedings of Plains Bluestem. The group will also see different methods of weed control.

Lunch will be provided by T.J. Bluestem Farms of Fargo, Okla., and Seright Enterprises of Elk City, Okla.

After lunch, Dr. J.F. Cadenhead, Extension range and brush control specialist of Vernon, will discuss the importance of weed and brush control and chemicals available for the control of weeds, brush and goldaster.

Texas agency ratings lowered

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials had expected a change in ratings of more than $2 billion worth of state bonds because of a failure to come up with a permanent solution to the state's financial woes, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said.

Standard & Poor's Corp. said Monday it had lowered the rating from AA+ to AA on about $2.1 billion debt of five Texas agencies backed by the state's general obligation.

"I tried to get the state to face up to the situation a year ago. As a result of the failure to do so then, the bond rating was downgraded. As a result of the failure to deal conclusively with the financial problems again this summer, the bond rating was downgraded again," Hobby said.

The downgrade follows the poor financial performance and position of the state and the absence of long-term solutions for improvement, S&P officials said in a news release.

However, the company noted there have been efforts to diversify the state's economy as it shifts from overdependence on the employment and income of the oil and gas industry.

The five agencies affected by the ratings and their debt were College Student Loan Program, $106.9 million, Farm and Ranch, $10 million, Park Development, $31.2 million, Veterans' Land and Housing Board, $1.4 billion, and Water Development Board, $491.7 million.

In its release, S&P noted that legislators recently passed a $38.3 billion budget appropriations bill for 1988-89. The state anticipates ending fiscal 1988 with a fiscal cash deficit of $594 million. The state should have a $190 million surplus by the end of the 1988-89 biennium, the release said.

The recently passed tax package enables the state to pay for current appropriations, but doesn't provide a financial cushion for future downturns, the release said.

Bill Cryer, spokesman for state treasury, said the change effect only long-term bonds sold by the five programs.

"It means if they go out for money anytime in the near future they will pay a higher rate on bonds. As I understand it, a lot of those bonds have been selling at a lower rating anyway," Cryer said.

Wallace out, Hackney wants in AUSTIN (AP) — Democrat Mack Wallace is giving up his Railroad Commission seat soon and Democrat Clint Hackney wants it.

But Hackney and other potential candidates will have to wait until the November 1988 election. In the meantime, the seat will be filled by Republican Gov. Bill Clements, which means the GOP probably will get its first-ever seat on the three-member commission.

Wallace, citing financial considerations, announced his resignation Monday. He said the exact date would be determined after he talks with Clements.

"It's purely economic," Wallace said of his decision. "I have a wife and two children — both of them are in college now."

He declined to reveal how much he would be making with the law firm but said it was an increase over his commission salary, which goes up to $73,233 on Sept. 1.

"It is obviously an increase over what I'm presently being paid of sufficient amount to cause it to be economically feasible for me to do it," Wallace, 57, said of the pay raise.

Wallace will go to work in the Austin office of the Dallas law firm of Hughes and Luce. After 14 years on the panel that regulates the oil, gas and transportation industries, he said "the time has come for me to pursue private endeavors and to attend to my family who have supported me for so many years with their faith and patience."

Clements now gets to appoint an interim successor to serve until the 1988 election. The winner of that race would complete the unexpired term, which ends in 1990.

One commission source said Clements would give the job to executive assistant George Bayoud if he wanted it. Bayoud was out of the office Monday and not available for comment.

Another possibility is former Rep. Ed Emmett, R-Kingwood, who lost in the GOP primary election for commissioner last year. The source also said Clements' staff had reviewed the eligibility of Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, but decided Toomey is ineligible for immediate appointment because he was a member of the Legislature that raised commission salaries.

Hackney, a state representative from Houston, had planned to run in 1988 against Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent, a Democrat whose six-year term ends next year. But Hackney said Monday he had opted to seek the seat to be vacated by Wallace.

"I think we were headed on a collision course to spend a couple of million dollars together in a Democratic primary battle," Hackney said.

Prison trusty drowns in river

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A state prison trusty who went swimming with several other inmates drowned despite an attempt to rescue him, a spokesman says.

The victim who died Monday was identified as Michael Anthony Gaines, 24, serving six years at the Hilltop Unit for credit card abuse out of Dallas County, Texas Department of Corrections spokesman David Nunnelee said.

Gaines was a minimum out trusty, meaning he worked outside the prison grounds. He was a livestock worker and assigned to a hog barn, Nunnelee said.

The inmate and four others were sent to load some irrigation pipe so they could water a pasture, but decided to go swimming instead Monday about 1:25 p.m. in the nearby Leon River, which runs through the unit's grounds, he said.

Gaines was seen struggling in the river.

Coryell County Sheriff's and Gatesville City Fire Department officials dragged the river Monday, and Gaines' body was located about 6:15 p.m. behind the Gatesville Unit, which is adjacent to the Hilltop Unit.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

States can't eat the cake and dough, too

Barry Goldwater once said, "A government which is big enough to give you all you want is big enough to take it all away." He could have been speaking a postscript for the recent National Governors Association's 79th annual meeting in Michigan.

On closing the meeting, the governors unknowingly displayed anew the marked schizophrenia that has persisted for decades in the states' relationship with the federal government. Two actions taken at the governors' meeting demonstrated the essence of Goldwater's 1964 prescience.

The governors adopted a resolution calling on the federal government to make a "substantial commitment" to combating AIDS by funding research and education. It called for federal spending (of individuals' money) on counseling and testing, without getting into the issue of whether AIDS testing should be mandatory, and for keeping tests results confidential. Only the federal government has the funds, the authority, the facilities — thus the responsibility — for dealing with the problem, according to the sense of the resolution.

But in almost the next breath, Gov. John Sununu of New Hampshire, chairman of the group for the next year, called for the federal government to get off the states' backs and quit assuming so much responsibility.

Gov. Sununu, a Republican, said the governors may want to draft an amendment to the Constitution during the coming year to reverse what Sununu said is a "drastic over-concentration of power in Washington." He bemoaned what he called a long-term and "drastic erosion of basic state authority" in the 200 years since the Constitution was written. Examples of corrective action, said Sununu, would be an amendment to allow actions by two-thirds of the states to overrule federal law and another strengthening state authority in the 10th Amendment, which grants to the states those powers not apportioned elsewhere in the Constitution.

The schizophrenia apparent in the governors' handing authority to the federal government in one major area of concern and, in the next instance, calling out for greater independence in others, typifies the states' relationship to the federal government for too long a time. When something costs money, the states want so-called federal funds — for example, the erstwhile revenue-sharing programs — to take care of the problem. At other times over the decades, they have made plaintive appeals to be released from federal bondage.

There is perhaps a better and simpler analogy than Goldwater's when contemplating compacts with the devil we know as government, whether pertinent to an individual or a state seeking relief from legislated oppression. It goes like this: "You can't eat your cake and have it, too."

The federal government has, by creeping progression, acquired all the keys to the bakery. And, thus, it has gained control of the dough.

Hearings end with wide yawns

For fans of melodrama, the conclusion of the Iranamok affair has to be deeply disappointing. After a promising start, this scandal stubbornly refused to follow the preordained path established in Watergate. Ronald Reagan wasn't implicated in great crimes; the nation won't be cleansed by his purging. Instead of culminating in a grand climax, the scandal gradually rolled to a stop. Instead of steadily building to a crescendo of public outrage, it spawned growing boredom.

The president's nationally televised speech last week was intended to take advantage of the public's declining interest. Reagan refused to dredge up all the embarrassing details that have come to light over the past nine months, which would have required him to explain how things could have gone so far wrong. Instead, he blithely accepted responsibility for everything, which essentially means accepting it for nothing. By making his culpability excessively broad, he made it irrelevant.

But there was political shrewdness at work. Reagan's nonchalant approach appealed to the public's preference for putting the whole matter to rest. A relatively minor scandal can't occupy center stage for the rest of his presidency.

In fact, the public never took the whole affair as seriously as Reagan's fiercest critics would have liked. A Washington Post-ABC News poll in July found that only 40 percent of Americans think Reagan made "major mistakes." Although nearly two-thirds of Americans think the president is lying when he denies knowing about the diversion to the contras, only one-third said they would be bothered "a great deal" if it were proven that he knew.

Besides, most people never had any doubt about who to blame for the most unpopular element of the scandal — the original attempt to buy back American hostages by sending arms to Iran. Reagan acknowledged from the beginning that he had approved the deal, though he denied it amounted to a ransom. The public never believed him. The most shocking revelation came at the beginning, which is fatal to a good suspense tale.

What slowly emerged later about the diversion of funds to the Nicaraguan contras never touched a comparable nerve. Most people apparently recognized that the congressional hearings were less a search for guilt and innocence than the continuation of a long-standing quarrel between the executive and legislative that would continue in any case.

Worse still for the demands of a good yarn, the arms sale to Iran was always regarded by the people as a mistake rather than a crime. Mistakes require only political accountability. In a parliamentary system, the loss of public confidence in Reagan last fall might have toppled the government, forcing new elections. In our system, the only formal recourse against a president is impeachment. Outside of the loony left, no one proposed that option. As Reagan noted, "There's nothing I can say that will make the situation right." Nor is there much Congress can do. So we pick up and go on.

Still, the whole ritual of investigation and debate has not been wholly useless, as Reagan's allies complain. If nothing else, it will be a long time before a president again tries to ransom hostages from an enemy. This is not a matter of high principle, contrary to what congressional Democrats pretend: If the trade had worked, they would look at it differently. Which of them opposed the deal for Nicholas Daniloff? Fortunately, failure can be a better teacher than success.

Presumably, future presidents and their subordinates also will be deterred from cynically circumventing the law to foil Congress. Regardless of whether any Reagan associates go to jail, the troubles of John Poindexter and Oliver North ought to have a sobering influence on succeeding administrations.

Still, though the scandal focused on allegations of legal wrongdoing, the real lesson involved the executive's moral obligations. An administration has no duty to obey laws that it plausibly regards as unconstitutional, if their constitutionality has not been settled by the courts. But it does have a duty to make its defiance public, to ensure its own accountability to the people. And, as John Poindexter's testimony reminded us, the decision to take such steps belongs with the president and no one else.

Iranamok represents a stupid policy decision that was compounded by arrogance and disdain for democracy. It deserved examination and it demands remembering. Now it's time we moved on.

The King embodied rebel spirit

Thirty years ago, I had a ducktail haircut. Here's how that happened:

I had one of those little boy flattops before I grew the ducktail. Each morning, I would put some of that wax on my hair, run a quick brush through it and that was that.

But then I discovered Elvis.

The first time I saw him was when he made his initial appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show."

I had always watched Ed Sullivan for the guy who used to spin all those plates on top of those sticks. (I've often wondered what happened to that guy. His act, which often has reminded me of my life, was so stressful it probably eventually killed him.)

But after I saw Elvis, with his black locks flowing as he gyrated, the guy with the plates lost a great deal of my interest.

The King had called out to me with his manner and his music. I decided to wear my hair like his.

It wasn't easy. I had to fight my mother to stay out of the barber's chair.

She used numerous terms and phrases to describe my ever-lengthening hair. "Disgraceful," "utterly appalling," and "this is the thanks I get for bearing you," come to mind.

She even made me hide in the closet when company came so they wouldn't see my hair.

Lewis Grizzard

"Where's Lewis," company would ask.

"Away at camp."

"Around here somewhere?"

"No," my mother would answer. "In China."

When my hair had grown to what I considered a suitable length, I stood in front of the bathroom mirror and tried to make it look just like Elvis.

But I had the family cowlick and I had worn my hair in a flattop for so long, it wouldn't sweep back on the sides, thus forming the appearance of a duck's behind at the back of my head.

No problem.

I reached up to the jar that held my flattop wax, got myself a handful and lubed down my hair. I swept it back on both sides, turned up the collar on my shirt and walked out of the bathroom.

My mother saw me and screamed something about the need for better methods of birth control.

My dog saw me and ran. When I got to school my classmates thought I was a new kid and threw rocks at me. My teachers sent me to the principal, who asked if I had been wetting the bed lately.

I mentioned Elvis wore his hair in a fashion similar to mine, and the principal proceeded to lecture me on the fact Elvis was singing the devil's music and ought to be stopped before every girl in school got pregnant.

The reaction to my hair was so extreme I washed out the grease after school, using up an entire bar of soap, and the very next Saturday I had the barber return my flattop.

But Elvis had touched what iconoclast was in me; and, if even for just one day, I was a rebel, a tradition-router and a statement-maker.

That was 30 years ago, on Aug. 16, Elvis was 10 years gone from us, and Greasy Kid Stuff here is nearly 41.

I guess you get so busy spinning those plates, you don't notice what happened to all that time you had left.

If you go to Memphis this month, remember me and my hair to Graceland. We were there, a long time ago, when the King assumed his throne.

"Hi, hon! How was the bullet situation on the freeway today?"

Marilyn Monroe controlled men with sex

By Sarah Overstreet

As I was standing in the supermarket line a few days ago, Marilyn Monroe stared back at me from the covers of magazines. I was surprised that it has been 25 years since she died, and even more surprised at the sadness and shock that still wells up in me when I think about it.

Marilyn Monroe was the second woman I wanted to be just like when I grew up, my mother being first. I didn't know why she attracted me then, and I'm scarcely more enlightened now. I suspect it must have had something to do with the way men in my small world reacted to her (at the tender age of 5 I had already learned that men's reactions to me would be crucial later on), although I don't remember anything specific to prove it.

My girlfriends' admiration of Marilyn must have influenced me, although I don't know why they wanted to emulate her either. On the most basic level I can interpret, I know this is one sure reason I wanted to be just like her: Marilyn Monroe was pretty, and I wanted to be pretty. By the time I was old enough to notice Marilyn, I had learned another significant truth from my limited experience with my culture — the importance of being pretty. (I'm not saying this isn't a sad commentary on society. What I'm saying is that at the age of 5, I didn't care.) Being pretty was the key to having people like you and want to be around you. When you're 5 years old, not that many people are dying for your company, even other 5-year-olds.

Still, I would have thought maturity would have given me a colder perspective on Marilyn. Neither her sad history of abuse nor the insecurities that drove her to drugs and death can account for the sense of loss I feel 25 years after her death. There are sadder stories among people I know.

I suspect that my fondness for Marilyn, and my sadness over her tragic death, have more to do with my struggle with my own sexuality and my growing consciousness of myself as a woman. There's a fine line between healthy appreciation of sexual attractiveness by the opposite sex, and the exploitation of that sexual attractiveness to control and dominate the opposite sex. I haven't always been able to tell the difference, and I'm sure Marilyn couldn't. She went with whatever was advantageous at the time. I suspect I have, too — and like Marilyn, I've done it both out of ignorance and a desire to be desired.

All of us, men and women, are pulled a multitude of ways as we try to establish identities that give us what we need, satisfy our egos and keep us from being outcasts of society. As the idealism and common sense of feminism jerked me one way, the pragmatism of acknowledging our culture as it is pulled me another.

At the age of almost 36 — the age at which Marilyn Monroe died — I want an identity based on achievement, compassion and understanding for others, and a basic conformity to physical standards I know other people consider attractive. I know that's not a popular philosophy among intellectuals to whom the mind is more important than its casing, but I can't help it. I'm not attracted to a guy with a Robert Bork beard and a John Belushi belly, and I wouldn't expect the kind of man I like to run after Margaret Mead, either.

Alas, Marilyn, what debate you have wrought among women of my generation. Do we hate you for the stereotype you portrayed and the exploitation you allowed, or honor you for the strength with which you fought for an honorable identity against pretty slim odds?

All I can say for sure is this, Marilyn: You influenced my generation of women like no other I know of. We saw where you started, how your life progressed, and where it all ended. It's a powerful lesson that makes more of an impression on the heart than it does sense in the mind.

Administration now predicting more red ink

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, which earlier this year was predicting a gradual decline in the deficit, now says the red ink will get worse before it gets better.

At the same time, the administration is postponing plans to send Congress a new set of options for reducing federal spending.

In its midyear budget review, the White House said the deficit for fiscal 1987, which ends Sept. 30, will be about $159 billion. That's a dramatic decrease from fiscal 1986, which added nearly $221 billion to the government's debt.

But the administration has dumped its January prediction that future deficits would remain on a downward path without any new spending cuts or new taxes.

And even the relatively good news for this year comes with a catch — the 1987 estimate reduction is largely the result of a one-time-only government windfall under the new tax laws.

The president's fiscal 1988 deficit estimate, meanwhile, has risen to more than $161 billion, and the report says the deficit will rise again in fiscal 1989 unless action is taken. The deficits would not begin to decline until fiscal 1990 and more than $100 billion in red ink would remain in fiscal 1992, a year after the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law calls for a balanced budget.

Earlier this summer, the White House announced it would ask federal agencies to find more places to cut spending. The goal was to offer Congress a last chance to bring the fiscal 1988 deficit down to Gramm-Rudman's interim goal of a deficit next year no larger than $108 billion.

But the review released Monday had no mention of the cuts, instead noting that Congress has been discussing easing the targets.

Ed Dale, spokesman for the president's Office of Management and Budget, said the cost-cutting initiative will be saved for later.

"That'll be good reserve ammunition for the 1989 budget," he said.

But Peter Davis, a Washington-based vice president of Prudential Bache, said "they've thrown in the towel on Gramm-Rudman." He called the review "an open admission that Gramm-Rudman can't be met."

Most of the review focused on what the deficit numbers would be if Congress stopped rejecting Reagan's proposals to cut domestic spending and sell off government holdings. Those figures showed a lower deficit than under "current services," but one that still would miss the Gramm-Rudman targets.

The report said $123 billion in red ink would remain next year even if all of Reagan's suggestions were accepted — $15 billion above the target.

Congress is on its summer vacation, but the Democratic-controlled House Budget Committee released a statement calling the report "a continuation of the administration's rose-colored glasses view of the budget."

The Congressional Budget Office, a non-partisan agency, releases its own budget update Wednesday.

White House is softening conditions for budget talks

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — White House officials are retreating from President Reagan's statement that Congress must agree to vote on a balanced budget amendment before he'll negotiate with lawmakers on fiscal 1988 spending.

While administration officials in Washington were estimating a $158.4 billion federal deficit for this fiscal year, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater sought Monday to separate the issue of a balanced budget amendment from discussions of spending cuts in the new budget year beginning Oct. 1.

"It's a kind of dual-track thing," the spokesman told reporters who accompanied Reagan to California for the president's annual summer vacation at his mountaintop ranch.

In his nationally broadcast address Wednesday night, Reagan said, "We desperately need the power of a constitutional amendment to help us balance the budget."

He added, "To get things moving, I am proposing tonight: if Congress agrees to schedule an up or down vote this year on our balanced budget amendment, then I will agree to negotiate on every spending item in the budget."

But administration officials, including Fitzwater, began softening that position the next day. One senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Reagan was not willing to discuss tax increases, but that possible cuts in planned military spending "will be a part of the negotiation."

Asked Monday whether he stood by such statements separating the issues of the balanced budget amendment and 1988 spending cuts, Fitzwater replied, "We'll leave it the way it is. Yes, leave the missing link."

In other developments: —Administration officials in Washington estimated that the budget deficit will ease to $158.4 billion this year, down sharply from last year's record $220.7 billion. But most of that will be from a one-time-only government windfall under the new tax laws.

The White House Office of Management and Budget conceded that the deficit will creep up again in 1988 and 1989 unless action is taken to reduce the gap between receipts and spending.

—Fitzwater confirmed that the administration plans to notify Congress formally sometime before the end of the year of a planned $1 billion weapons sale to Saudi Arabia.

Reagan, who has been horse-riding and doing chores on the ranch as well as keeping up on paperwork, has "no plans at this time" to call individual members of Congress to discuss the Persian Gulf, Saudi arms sales, budget differences or Central America policy, Fitzwater said.

But he said "there will be a lot of activities" next week when Reagan travels to Los Angeles to, among other things, deliver a major address on East-West relations.

The administration is locked in a virtual stalemate with Congress over the spending priorities and revenue-raising features of a congressional budget blueprint for fiscal 1988.

Reagan's own budget plan calls for about the same amount of spending — $1 trillion — and neither plan would come close to meeting the $108 billion deficit target in the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law. The similarities, however, end there.

Congress would deal with the deficit problem by raising taxes to the tune of $19.3 billion, and more than $64 billion over three years. Reagan opposes any significant tax increases. Reagan's budget proposal also calls for more military spending and less spending on domestic social programs.

Envoys are returning to Central America after strategy session

WASHINGTON (AP) — The heads of U.S. missions in five Central American nations are returning to their posts today following a Reagan administration strategy session on the peace plan under consideration in the region.

The envoys met Monday in Washington to hear the administration's position on the peace plan adopted Aug. 7 in Guatemala by the presidents of five Central American countries.

What they are taking back with them to the foreign ministers of the Central American states is an analysis of how each provision in the proposed plan could be implemented, said a State Department official. The foreign ministers are meeting Wednesday in El Salvador to discuss the plan, which calls for an end to U.S. aid for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels and democratic reforms in Nicaragua.

Speaking on condition of anonymity, the official added that "right now we have nothing to go with. We've made clear that it's the specific provisions that will make it a workable treaty."

The diplomats, who were joined by officials from the White House and the Pentagon, went through each provision and also reported on how the Central American leaders view their implementation, said the official.

Housing shows first increase since February

By The Associated Press

Housing construction edged up 0.9 percent in July, the first monthly increase since February, as the housing industry finally showed signs of recovering from a jump in mortgage rates this spring, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said new homes and apartments were being built at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.61 million units last month.

Civil War documents found in safe deposit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI is examining another cache of rare Civil War documents allegedly stashed in a safe-deposit box by a writer accused of taking valuable letters from two government manuscript collections.

The trove of 191 documents, many believed to have been stolen from the National Archives, was found Monday during a search of the safe-deposit box rented under an assumed name by writer Charles Merrill Mount, the FBI said.

The search also turned up $18,400 in cash.

This photo received in Tokyo Monday shows Iranian Naval forces during mine-sweeping operation in Gulf of Oman Saturday, according to IRNA, the official news agency of Iran.

Carrier cruises through gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The U.S. helicopter carrier Guadalcanal steamed through the central Persian Gulf behind a mine-sweeping helicopter, and Iran claimed its navy had joined efforts to ferret out mines threatening shipping in the area.

Iran's President Ali Khamenei said the United States will suffer a "crushing blow" if its warships attack Iranian ships or ports. Iran has widely been blamed for laying the mines that have disrupted traffic in the Persian Gulf and the nearby Gulf of Oman.

Meanwhile, Iraq said its air force flew 90 combat missions Monday, striking an Iranian oilfield, two sugar plants and Iranian troops. Iran said its gunners shelled "military and industrial targets" in the Iraqi port of Umm Qasr in revenge.

The helicopters on the Guadalcanal are expected to help clear the way for the return voyage of three U.S.-flagged tankers in Kuwait. The U.S. Navy has refused comment on when the Kuwaiti tankers and their U.S. escorts will set sail.

The tankers are among 11 Kuwaiti vessels the Reagan administration has agreed to reflag and protect from Iran's attacks. Iran has targeted Kuwaiti ships in the past year, charging that the emirate supports Iraq in the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

One Pentagon source described the schedule of the U.S.-escorted convoy, the second to ply the gulf, as "fluid." Shipping sources said the tankers finished loading Saturday.

The Guadalcanal cruised the central gulf Monday behind one of its Sea Stallion choppers, which scouted for mines. Pentagon sources in Washington said the 602-foot warship and some smaller Mideast Force ships are also carrying helicopters from the Army's elite Special Operations Forces.

The Guadalcanal moved to within about 12 miles of Bahrain, an island state midway up the Persian Gulf, according to witnesses.

Tehran radio, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, reported that Iranian navy mine sweepers located and destroyed several mines Monday south of the Persian Gulf in the Gulf of Oman. There was no independent confirmation of the claim.

Saudi diplomat reported dead in Tehran

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — A Saudi Arabian diplomat has died at a Tehran hospital of injuries suffered in a mob attack on the Saudi Embassy, the government announced today.

A Foreign Ministry statement said that political attache Mousaed al-Ghamdi died Monday night "as a result of injuries inflicted upon him during the vile aggression on the (Saudi) embassy by demagogic elements in Tehran."

It also blamed "the inhuman attitude" of Iranian authorities. But Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted a source at the Iranian Foreign Ministry as saying al-Ghamdi died of a hemorrhage resulting from his transfer to Tehran.

Mayor says he'll take taxpayers to court in de-annexation dispute

PRIMERA (AP) — Taxpayers who want their money back are causing headaches for this city of 1,500 in the Rio Grande Valley.

They are from subdivisions a judge ordered de-annexed from the city in 1985 due to faulty annexation ordinances. The neighborhoods include some of the most modern, expensive homes in the area.

Primera continued sending property tax bills, while hoping for its fortunes to change in court, and nobody complained until last week.

A woman named Lupita Ramirez went to the county tax office with a delinquent tax bill from Primera.

"She came in and asked whether we could waive her penalty and interest, and the answer was no, unless there was an error," said Cameron County Tax Assessor Kermit Cromack.

County officials then discovered that her neighborhood, Los Rancheritos Subdivision II, was among the areas de-annexed by the judge in 1985. Ms. Ramirez later said she wanted her money back as far as she had paid, Cromack said.

"I can't figure out why this lady brought it up now," Mayor Ronald Harwell said Monday.

He said he may have to fight the refunds in court.

The tax dispute could be costly for the city whose entire property tax levy in 1986 was about $56,000.

"There's a lot of little problems, and really it's a mess, to tell you the truth," Harwell said, but added the amount of money involved is not enough to bankrupt the town just northwest of Harlingen.

He said the problem started several years ago during a dispute between Primera and Harlingen, when Harlingen wanted to build a sewer plant on the edge of Primera.

Primera opposed the facility, and maintained that the plant would be in its jurisdiction, but District Judge Menton Murray, ruled that all of Primera's annexations were invalid.

Gramm readying bill aimed at pollution of Rio Grande

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm plans to introduce legislation calling for a cleanup of the Rio Grande, saying the Valley's source of drinking water is threatened by raw sewage being poured into the river.

"If eventually forced to abandon the Rio Grande, a city like Brownsville would have to reach more than 100 miles overland to find the nearest supply of clean water at enormous expense to the people of the Valley," Gramm said.

"Some border cities are routinely forced to take drinking water upstream from the major pollution points, but, increasingly, there simply is no escape from contamination," the Texas Republican said in a statement Monday.

His bill would authorize the U.S. secretary of state to negotiate with the Mexican Ministry of Foreign Relations a set of agreements to include a long-term examination of the river's water quality and the joint creation of water treatment facilities.

An estimated 12 to 15 billion tons of raw sewage are dumped into the river each year between El Paso and Brownsville, although there has been no comprehensive study on the problem, the senator said.

Gramm, who co-authored the landmark Gramm-Rudman-Hollings anti-deficit legislation, is willing to have the United States help pay for cleaning up the river in his home state.

"The time is now to begin a comprehensive effort to eliminate the contamination that threatens the health and safety of people all along the border," Gramm said.

Gramm wants the International Boundary Water Commission to supervise the planning, construction, operation and maintenance of waste treatment plants.

Earlier this month, Bustamante and Rep. Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi, told a group of visiting Mexican officials that the pollution problem is worsening because maquiladoras, manufacturing operations with plants on both sides of the border, are attracting unemployed workers from the interior to the border.

Nuclear project expected to cost billions more than early estimates

AUSTIN (AP) — The troubled South Texas Nuclear Project is expected to cost between $1.5 billion and $3 billion more than the current $5.5 billion estimate, a utility consultant hired by critics of the project says.

Paul Chernick of Boston, a consultant, also concluded in testimony filed Monday with the Texas Public Utility Commission that the project's Unit 2 reactor will probably not be completed until 1991, two years behind the current schedule.

Chernick's predictions were included in 350 pages of testimony filed as part of an inquiry by the commission on the economic viability of the project's Unit 2 reactor. The predictions are based on a statistical analysis of what has occurred at other nuclear plants nationwide.

Chernick, who correctly predicted delays and overruns at several other nuclear projects, is considered an expert on power plant costs.

The consultant was hired by the Committee for Consumer Rate Relief, a Houston group that has been battling Houston Lighting & Power Co. over electric rates, to review the project. HL&P is the managing partner for the South Texas project.

Other partners are the cities of Austin and San Antonio and Central Power & Light Co. of Corpus Christi.

An HL&P official said the company had not had a chance to review Chernick's testimony, but strongly disagreed with his conclusions.

"His numbers are simply not close to what we believe will occur," said HL&P spokesman Graham Painter.

Chernick's analysis showed that HL&P's schedule for going from fuel loading to commercial operation at the South Texas project is optimistic.

The time between fuel load and full-power operation has averaged 13 months for 34 recently commissioned nuclear plants, he said. HL&P currently predicts a five-month, low-power testing period for its Unit 1 reactor and six months for Unit 2, he said.

HL&P initially planned to receive a low-power license in June from the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission to load fuel and conduct the tests necessary to obtain permission to begin commercial operation for Unit 1 in December.

Security problems at the project have delayed the federal power license. HL&P officials said Monday that they are prepared to load fuel and are awaiting the final go-ahead from federal regulators.

The project is already seven years behind the initial schedule and more than five times the initial cost set in 1973 for the controversial project, which is being built near Bay City.

The official cost estimate is currently $5.5 billion to construct the twin-unit, 2.5 million kilowatt project. Last week HL&P revealed that it had overspent its 1987 budget through July by $50 million, and the overrun for the year could reach $100 million.

Chernick also predicted that the project is likely to operate only 25-30 years as opposed to the 35-40 years as its owners promised.

The information from Chernick's review should provide persuasive evidence that Unit 2 should be halted on economic grounds, a spokesman for the consumer group says.

"Mr. Chernick has a good track record of predicting the actual costs and schedules for nuclear power plants," said Bryan Baker, staff director for the group. "We think his statistical analysis is a valid way of making similar predictions for the South Texas Nuclear Project, rather than the wishful thinking as practiced by HL&P."

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Giggling girlfriends are met mainly with frowns

DEAR ABBY: Last week my closest friend and I decided to take a day off just to have fun. We are both married women in our 30s and hold responsible jobs. We are not crazy, and we're not on drugs or alcohol — we just love to laugh.

We drove to Solvang, a small Danish community, for a day of sightseeing and relaxation. While browsing through one of the many shops, we came upon a lamp. I can't describe it, but it was the ugliest thing either of us had ever seen. We started to giggle, then laugh, then roar at the thought of anyone spending $850 for that monstrosity! We hastily left the shop lest we offend the owner, and collapsed on a bench outside. We were both in one of those moods when everything was hilarious, and we spent the entire day in stitches.

Passers-by made comments, indicating that they thought we were either drunk or high on drugs. A waitress in one restaurant said she couldn't serve us "anything more" to drink! Of course, this made us laugh all the harder.

Abby, when did it become a crime to laugh heartily? We were not obnoxious — just a little noisy perhaps. We left every store when we felt the urge to break up, and by the time we got outside tears were running down our faces. But, so what? Laughter is good for the soul.

This is probably too long for your column, but it's important to remind people that it's OK to laugh. So if you see someone laughing loudly (even hysterically), don't condemn him — join him.

Somehow I think you will understand, Abby. And yes, you may use my name.

CATHLEEN KALBREIER,
WESTMINSTER, CALIF.

DEAR CATHLEEN: You bet I understand. A friend with whom you can enjoy a hearty laugh is a treasure. Cherish that person and unleash your laughter to the max. And if others misread your natural exhilaration, it's their problem.

DEAR ABBY: I see by your column that bowed legs can be corrected by surgery. They've certainly come a long way in modern medicine, haven't they?

I also heard that it's possible for very tall people to reduce their height by having four inches of bone surgically removed from their legs. But then their arms would hang down to their knees. Wouldn't that look worse than being four inches too tall?

G.B. IN L.A.

DEAR G.B.: No ethical orthopedic surgeon would undertake to surgically remove bone from the leg for cosmetic reasons only. Somebody must have been pulling yours.

DEAR ABBY: I liked your answer to "Hurting in Brooklyn," who had given her mother a jewelry box and was angry with her for giving it to one of her grandchildren. You said, "Once a gift is given, it is the property of the recipient to do with as he/she pleases." I agree with you 100 percent.

I would like to add that once a gift is given it should never be mentioned by the giver again, as in, "How come I never see you wearing the sweater I gave you? Was it the wrong size?"

The answer may be, "No. I just didn't like it, so I sold it at the flea market."

MICHAEL TYLER SARLOW,
FORT WORTH, TEXAS

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61064.)

Microwave is now a 'must'

CHICAGO — Microwave ovens, considered a necessity by many consumers, are moving to locations that reflect that status, according to the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers (AHAM).

The results of a Good Housekeeping Institute survey shows that microwave ovens have left their mark on over 18 percent of U.S. kitchens by becoming an integral, permanent part of the room.

Approximately two-thirds of the 88.8 million U.S. households own at least one microwave oven, according to industry estimates.

Owners no longer are limited to the constraints of five years ago, when a countertop or cart were the only places to locate the appliance. Nowadays, 5.3 percent hang their microwaves under a cabinet, another 5.3 percent mount them above the range, 4.7 percent build them into a wall, and 3 percent buy their regular oven with a microwave capability.

In previous years, consumers were forced to forfeit counter space or add a cart in order to incorporate the appliance into the kitchen — and millions did.

Mirrored walls can add light to any room

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Most people interested in decorating know mirrored walls can visually expand the apparent size of a room that is too small or the depth of a room that is too narrow.

But did you know mirrors also can compensate for lack of available natural light and impart a contemporary feeling to any size room?

These are a few of the tricks designers played with mirrors in a competition sponsored by the National Association of Mirror Manufacturers and the American Society of Interior Designers. Four winners in the residential category and four winners for commercial entries were announced at the annual meeting of ASID in Toronto this summer.

Arthur Mullen, of Pensacola, Fla., received first prize in the residential category for a bedroom with mirrored walls that reflect etched glass panels mounted in the ceiling and bed headboard. The acrylic bedroom ceiling has thousands of tiny lights embedded which creates a starlike effect. The lights are guaranteed for life, according to the designer.

Mullen also took a fourth place award for a trompe l'oeil installation in which vertical acrylic rods are mounted in front of mirrored walls and doors in a bedroom hallway.

He said he discovered by accident that acrylic actually carries light, so it was possible to light the entire surface of the wall by mounting a fluorescent tube in the ceiling.

This light is transported by the rods, and these are in turn reflected by the mirrored walls.

"The whole room in effect becomes a light fixture. It was a dinky little hall and now when you walk in there it is like a little trip into fantasy. It gives a sensational feeling," he said.

Both installations are part of the same condominium, which cost about $2.5 million to decorate and took two years to complete.

The designer noted that extensive wall mirroring is both a costly and a difficult installation.

Bunt single keeps Molitor's hit streak alive

By The Associated Press

The records show Milwaukee's Paul Molitor has hit in 32 straight games, the longest streak of the 1980s and the longest in the American League in 38 years. How he got there doesn't matter.

Molitor's third-inning bunt single was his only hit in three official at-bats Monday night in the Brewers' 5-3 victory over host Cleveland. The streak broke a tie with Ken Landreaux for the longest of the '80s. In 1980, Landreaux hit in 31 straight for Minnesota.

"I take a look down there every at-bat. Some third basemen completely take that away from you," Molitor said of his single, the first bunt hit during his streak.

Molitor's streak is the longest in the major leagues since Pete Rose hit in 44 straight games for Cincinnati in 1978. It's the longest in the AL since Dom DiMaggio hit in 34 straight for the Boston Red Sox in 1949. Joe DiMaggio set the major-league record with a 56-game hitting streak for the New York Yankees in 1941.

During the streak, Molitor is 54-for-132 (.409) and he's batting .362 for the season.

Milwaukee's Mark Knudson, 3-3, allowed nine hits en route to his first career complete game.

Elsewhere in the AL, Chicago edged Boston 2-1, Minnesota defeated Seattle 4-2, Kansas City nipped Texas 7-6 and California tripped Oakland 6-4.

Twins 4, Mariners 2

Tom Brunansky hit a two-run homer as Minnesota completed a four-game sweep of Seattle and improved to 42-18 at the Metrodome.

Les Straker, 6-7, allowed five hits in 6 1-3 innings. Reliever Jeff Reardon got the last four outs for his 24th save.

Loser Mark Langston, 13-10, struck out seven to increase his major league-leading total to 195.

White Sox 2, Red Sox 1

Dave LaPoint pitched six-hit ball for seven innings and Greg Walker and Ron Hassey drove in the runs for Chicago at Comiskey Park.

Astros sweep Braves

HOUSTON (AP) — Billy Hatcher and the scuffed ball controversy heated up as the Houston Astros completed a four-game sweep of Atlanta, prompting Braves Manager Chuck Tanner to say his team's playoff hopes may have ended.

Hatcher, the Astros left fielder, had four hits, including his 10th homer, and scored three runs to lead the Astros an 11-2 victory over the Braves in the only National League game Monday night.

"They sure pounded our heads in," Tanner said after the Astros outscored the Braves 33-8 in the four-game series. "This probably knocked us out of it."

The scuffed ball controversy began when both benches cleared after Rick Mahler, pitching in a rare relief role, hit batters Kevin Bass and Glenn Davis to start the Houston sixth inning.

Brewers' Paul Molitor extends hitting streak to 32 games.

LaPoint is 2-0 since being acquired from St. Louis on July 30. Bobby Thigpen pitched the final two innings for his sixth save.

The White Sox scored a run in the fourth against starter Jeff Sellers, 4-6.

Royals 7, Rangers 6

Pinch-hitter Thad Bosley's run-scoring single with two outs in the ninth inning rallied Kansas City past Texas at Arlington.

Trailing 6-5, the Royals tied the score off reliever Jeff Russell after there were two outs and nobody on.

The Harvesters just ended the first week of three-a-day workouts. The Harvesters put on full gear for the first time Friday.

Sugar Ray signs contract as fight manager

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

Some fight manager. No cigar, no beer belly, and he answers to "Sugar."

Creased black slacks, a gray-black sports coat, a perfectly knotted tie, and that winning smile that outdazzled the ring lights when he beat Duran, Hearns, Hagler.

Sugar Ray Leonard is a fight manager who would be laughed out of any Grade B movie about boxing.

"He'll be a champion as a manager," Bobby Goodman, director of boxing of the Madison Square Garden, said Monday at a news conference. The occasion was the announcement that Leonard has entered into an agreement with the Garden to promote his pro boxing team, which has the sponsorship of a brewery.

Fight managers have been known to drink beer, especially if someone else is buying, but Leonard has got to be the first one to be sponsored by a beer.

Leonard's pro stable currently consists of one fighter, but he has offered contracts to three others. The signed fighter is middleweight Shawn O'Sullivan, who is scheduled to appear in a 10-round fight Thursday night at the Felt Forum.

That puts O'Sullivan one up on his boss. Leonard, a 1976 Olympic champion and one of nine men to win three pro titles, never fought in the Garden — the main arena, or the Forum.

"The only regret I had in my whole boxing career is I never fought in Madison Square Garden," Leonard said.

The first question most writers at the news conference wanted to ask did not concern Leonard's boxing past or the future of fledgling pros.

Leonard said through a club spokesman that he gave Ross, 30, the opportunity to retire or be waived.

Retirement
Veteran fullback Hokie Gajan of the New Orleans Saints announced his retirement rather than risk permanent injury by continuing to try for a comeback with the New Orleans Saints. Gajan, who will train to become a scout for the team, missed the last half of the 1985 season and all of last year with an injury to his right knee, then injured his left knee in non-contact drills two weeks ago.

Wright, last year's starting quarterback, was a holdout from the Packers camp and did not sign a 1987 contract until last Wednesday. He did not play when the Packers lost their preseason opener to Denver 20-14 Saturday.

Dolphins lose Marino, Offerdahl in exhibition game

NFL training camp roundup

By The Associated Press

While everybody else worried about Dan Marino, Don Shula worried about John Offerdahl.

Both Marino and Offerdahl were injured in Miami's 10-3 exhibition loss to the Chicago Bears. But while the All-Pro quarterback will only miss four weeks with a dislocated finger — and possibly be ready for the first game on Sept. 13 — Offerdahl won't return until about six weeks into the regular season.

"It's so disappointing because one of our objectives was to find people we liked defensively and build a unit on them. And John was going to be the foundation of that building," Shula said Monday.

The second-year linebacker, a Pro Bowler in his rookie season, was to have surgery on his right arm today to reattach the bicep muscle, torn during the second period Sunday night.

Offerdahl was hurt early in a series and didn't come out until the series was over. He said he thought it was a charley horse and he was embarrassed to ask the trainer to look at it.

"Our defense doesn't run around one person," the 6-foot-2, 232-pound Offerdahl said. "Maybe I'm an important part. But they will grow with me or without me. It's discouraging, but it doesn't do any good to pout."

Second-year linebacker Andy Hendel is expected to take Offerdahl's position in the interim.

On the other front, Miami may sign former Philadelphia Eagle Ron Jaworski to backup Don Strock, the Dolphins No. 2 quarterback. Rookie Jim Karsatos injured his knee in the Bears game and the only other quarterback in camp is veteran Jim Jensen.

Other Hurts

The St. Louis Cardinals' second-leading rusher and pass receiver last season, fullback Earl Ferrell, broke his right thumb during a blocking drill but might not miss any of the regular season.

Swaps

Linebacker Jack Del Rio was traded from the New Orleans Saints to the Kansas City Chiefs in exchange for an undisclosed draft choice.

Starters

Green Bay Packers Coach Forrest Gregg said he plans to start Randy Wright at quarterback Saturday in a preseason game against the Washington Redskins.

"I think we have to, provided he is far enough along," Gregg said. "We'll give him a chance in practice and see where he is as far as his arm."

Wright, last year's starting quarterback, was a holdout from the Packers camp and did not sign a 1987 contract until last Wednesday. He did not play when the Packers lost their preseason opener to Denver 20-14 Saturday.

U.S. leads medal race at Pan Am Games

Five athletes banned for failing drug tests

By BOB BAUM
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Bill Green, a U.S. silver medalist in the hammer throw, and five other athletes have been banned from the Pan American Games after failing drug tests.

Green tested positive for high levels of testosterone, an anabolic steroid, officials of the Pan American Sports Organization said Monday.

Green said he would challenge the result. In the meantime, he and two others will lose their medals.

The drug issue overshadowed the lightest day of competition so far at the 16-day games, which wind up Sunday.

Cuban boxers swept three matches from Americans, including a first-round knockout of world champion Darin Allen by Angel Espinosa.

In softball, both the men's and women's teams won. Michele Granger pitched her second one-hitter.

The only medals awarded Monday were in fencing, where Cuba won the gold, the United States took the silver and Canada got the bronze.

Latest medal count: United States 326 overall; Cuba 147; and Canada 146.
Latest gold count: United States 150; Cuba 60; and Canada 26.

DRUG TESTING

In 1983, 19 athletes from 10 countries were disciplined at the games in Caracas, Venezuela, after failing drug tests. Eleven lost medals.

Besides Green, athletes disqualified included Bernardo Ocampo of Venezuela, a silver and bronze medalist in shooting; weightlifters Orlando Vasquez-Mendoza of Nicaragua, winner of three bronze medals; Javier Jimenez of Colombia; and Pedro Torres of Venezuela; and Elnes Bollings, a basketball player from the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Officials said Torres and Jimenez tested positive for steroids.

Ocampo, they said, was found to be using beta-blockers, drugs which slow the heart rate and can steady a shooter's hand.

Bollings tested positive, they said, for a stimulant found in cold and allergy medications. Officials said Vasquez used a diuretic to make weight in a lower class.

Vasquez Rana said two or three additional cases were being investigated, but declined to give details.

Green returned to California last week and was quoted by Stephen Sobel, vice president of the U.S. Olympic Committee as saying, "My response is no comment to everything."

He was unreachable by telephone Monday night.

In the past, drug-related offenses have resulted in a lifetime ban by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, world governing body for track and field. But the athletes can seek reinstatement after 18 months. Other federations have similar rules.

An 18-month suspension would keep an athlete out of the 1988 Olympics in Seoul.

PASO officials said they will meet to try to straighten out a dispute over details of the testing program.

BOXING

Espinosa, the world champion at 156 pounds, knocked Allen cold with a right hand midway through the first round at 165 pounds.

The other Cuban victories came at 112 pounds, where Adalberto Regaldo won a disputed 3-2 decision over Arthur Johnson, and at 132 pounds, where Julio Gonzalez scored a 5-0 decision over Patrick Byrd.

Welterweight Kenneth Gould was the only American to win Monday night, a 5-0 decision over Osvaldo Checao of Panama.

Cuba is 12-1 after sweeping the Americans. The United States is 9-3.

FENCING

Cuba's sabre team defeated the U.S. for the fifth straight time in Pan Am competition, 9-7.

SOFTBALL

Michele Granger from Placentia, Calif., threw her second one-hitter as the U.S. defeated Canada 1-0. The U.S. women are 7-0.

The U.S. men won, too, beating Canada 7-4 in 11 innings.

Rally

(AP Laserphoto)

Tens of thousands of workers carried out a massive rally in the southern South Korean industrial center of Ulsan, protesting an announcement by the Hyundai business group that it was shutting down six of its plants because of threats of wildcat strikes.

The action involving the huge South Korean conglomerate came as part of countrywide labor unrest in the wake of a series of democratic reforms agreed to by the ruling establishment.

Attack on Parliament injures 14 cabinet members, legislators

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Attackers hurled several hand grenades into a governing party meeting in the Parliament today, wounding four Cabinet members and 10 legislators, shortly before legislators were to discuss a new Tamil peace plan, witnesses said.

One of the grenades exploded 10 yards away from President Junius R. Jayewardene, but he was not injured, witnesses said.

One or more attackers threw the grenades at Jayewardene through an open door of a conference room where he was chairing a meeting, the witnesses said. The attackers slipped away in the ensuing confusion.

Some witnesses said Prime Minister Ranasinghe Premadasa suffered a leg wound in the attack, but Jayewardene later said the prime minister had escaped injury.

Among the wounded was National Security Minister Lalith Athulathmudali, officials said.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the attack, which came about 40 minutes before Parliament was to meet under tight security to discuss a peace accord aimed at ending a 4-year insurgency by Tamil rebels.

In a nationwide broadcast, Jayewardene blamed "Sinhalese terrorists."

"Fortunately the prime minister and I were not hurt," the 82-year-old president said. "I have blood marks on my coat on the left shoulder which I will keep as a memento."

The peace pact, which provides substantial autonomy to Tamils in eastern and northern Sri Lanka, has sparked violent protests by militant Sinhalese. More than 70 people were killed in clashes with police during three days of rioting after the peace agreement was signed.

The civil war has claimed an estimated 6,000 lives, including many Sinhalese who died in terrorist attacks blamed on Tamil rebels. The majority Sinhalese are mostly Buddhists, while the Tamils are mostly Hindus.

The peace agreement was signed July 29 by Jayewardene and the president of neighboring India, Rajiv Gandhi.

As part of the agreement, 6,000 Indian peacekeeping troops have been sent to Sri Lanka and Tamil rebels have slowly been turning over their weapons.

Tamils form 18 percent of Sri Lanka's population of 16 million people. They claim the majority Sinhalese discriminate against them in government jobs, education and language.

Tamil militants were fighting for an autonomous state. Many of the guerrilla groups maintain headquarters in southern India, where an estimated 60 million Tamils live.

Hess to be buried; officials warn of right-wing violence

BERLIN (AP) — Rudolf Hess, the last imprisoned member of Adolf Hitler's inner circle, will be buried in a remote Bavarian village, and the jail he occupied alone for 21 years will be destroyed, Allied authorities said.

Officials at several state police agencies said the Bonn Interior Ministry had issued a warning to be on guard for possible right-wing violence by admirers of Hess, who died Monday at the age of 93.

A West German radio station reported that Hess was to be buried secretly today, with only a few family members present. It was not possible to immediately confirm the report, and an Allied official said this morning that the body was still in Berlin.

Neither family members nor the Hess family lawyer, Alfred Seidel, could be reached for comment on the report.

Hess rose to power at the side of Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler, eventually becoming deputy fuhrer of the Third Reich.

He was said to have been responsible for the Nazis' "Lebensraum" (living space) ideology, the idea that Germany needed more territory for all Germans. However, he was less powerful than other Hitler lieutenants.

The gaunt, stoop-shouldered Hess never renounced Hitler or the Holocaust. His cause of death was not given.

Allied authorities said Spandau prison, the Allied penitentiary where Hess was sent after being convicted of war crimes at the Nuremberg trials, would be demolished to make way for a British military shopping center. They did not say when it would be torn down.

Hessischer Rundfunk radio, without citing sources, said the burial was to be held near Munich as soon as possible, in an effort to prevent demonstrations by extremists.

Seidel said Monday that it had been Hess' wish to be buried at his family's plot in Wunsiedel, more than 100 miles northeast of Munich. He did not give further details.

Hess is survived by his 87-year-old wife, Ilse, and his son, Munich businessman Wolf-Ruediger.

Twenty-five right-wing extremists gathered to mourn Hess' death Monday at Spandau. Several youths clad in black leather broke through a police line to lay a wreath of carnations at the prison's main entrance.

Others chanted "Long Live Germany, Heil Germany."

Hess was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1946 and sent to Spandau. Six other Nazi leaders also served time at the jail, designed to hold up to 600 inmates, but by 1966 Hess was the only prisoner left.

Hess was kept largely cut off from the outside world throughout the years, and allowed only one visit a month from a family member.

Toward the end of his life, Hess had lung, heart and stomach ailments. He was nearly blind, increasingly depressed and attempted suicide three times while in prison.

The United States, Britain and France repeatedly asked that Hess be freed on humanitarian grounds, but the Soviet Union, the fourth Ally administering Spandau, refused.

Hess was born in Alexandria, Egypt, on April 26, 1884, son of a German exporter. After serving in World War I, he went to Munich, where he met Hitler and joined the Nazi movement.

The two were imprisoned after the "beer hall putsch" in which the Nazis tried to seize power in Bavaria in 1923. Hitler dictated his political tract "Mein Kampf" (My Struggle) to Hess in jail.

Council to sack conversion from cans to bags

DALLAS (AP) — A controversial plan to convert from trash cans to plastic bags is expected to be scrapped in favor of allowing residents to continue to set their refuse out in garbage cans.

The plan, tentatively approved by the Dallas City Council last month, has met with protests from the public.

The Dallas Times Herald reported today that seven of 11 council members indicated in an informal poll that they would vote against the plan, patterned after similar programs in Fort Worth and several area suburbs.

City officials had projected the plan would save the city up to $670,000 in its first year.

"I'm going to listen to the people, and they're worried about dogs and raccoons and varmints getting into the bags," said Councilman Jerry Rucker, who was absent from the initial trash-bag debate last month. "The trash-can lid serves a constructive purpose."

If the council decides to eliminate the plan before approving a final budget late next month, it would be forced to cut as much as $670,000 from elsewhere in City Manager Richard Knight's proposed budget or to raise taxes or sanitation fees.

Sanitation officials argue that would be a mistake and say similar programs in other cities have reduced litter and improved worker efficiency.

Sanitation officials say a bag-only system would allow them to cut 27 worker positions from the city payroll, because it would free the average worker from lifting an average of 5.2 tons of trash each day.

Officials of the anti-litter group Clean Dallas Inc. also support the plan, saying the fears of additional litter are unfounded.

Despite arguments for the plan, which is supported by Mayor Annette Strauss, most council members say residents won't accept a trash-can prohibition and blame sanitation officials for concocting an unrealistic scheme.

"You don't mess with people's garbage," said Councilman Craig Holcomb.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Kim Basinger has been slapped around in the movies but disputes notions that she's played a victim.

"I think we get the word 'victim' mixed up," she said in September's Glamour magazine. "I've played vulnerable women. ... In my estimation they were quite feisty and they won, always."

Basinger, now starring in the light-hearted comedy "Nadine," was struck by Sam Shepard in "Fool for Love," dragged through a swamp in handcuffs by Richard Gere in "No Mercy," and was the object of a sadomasochistic romance with Mickey Rourke in "9½ Weeks."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Barbara Bosson of "Hill Street Blues" gave the go-ahead to a wrecking crew as the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences signed a contract for its first permanent home.

Monday's ceremony included a champagne toast by Bosson.

The 6,000-member academy agreed to become the main tenant of a proposed 22-acre Community Redevelopment Agency project called The Academy.

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus is on the campaign trail again, this time with a potato in his pocket.

As part of a campaign to promote Idaho spuds, Andrus approaches a gray-haired shopper in a supermarket. "Do you know me?" he asks.

She says she doesn't.

Andrus whips a potato out of his pocket, proclaims that Idaho potatoes taste better and urges shoppers to look for the "Grown in Idaho" seal.

Andrus started his second assignment as star of the Idaho Potato Commission's promotions on Monday.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo says he's going to run. On foot, that is.

"I suffer from a bad back and it's been bothering me a great deal the last few weeks," Cuomo, 55, said Monday. "I've given myself 10 days to rid myself of my back pain, which I can do by discipline and some exercises."

"At the end of the 10 days, I'm going to start running again, regularly, maybe even religiously," said Cuomo, who has announced he would not run for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination.
