John Kendall trades cleats for paddle

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

When John Kendall was a football coach, everybody called him coach.

Even after he was named full-time athletic director in January, most people still called him coach.

But, come September, Pampa High School students should consider calling him, "Sir."

Pampa school trustees named Kendall, 42, the high school's vice principal Tuesday night, following a 90-minute closed session to discuss personnel matters. He replaces Tim Powers, who was named principal at Lamar Elementary School on July 7.

Kendall's contract is for two years, and his salary will be set when the school budget is finalized. He earned $40,300 last year, but school board President Joe VanZandt said today that Kendall probably will take a cut in pay as vice principal.

Powers earned $30,000 as vice principal last year, but had only nine years' teaching experience, compared with Kendall's 20. Texas bases teacher salaries on years of experience.

Kendall said today that the cut in salary will occur because the vice principal isn't on a 12-month contract like the athletic director. He said he was aware of that when he applied for the position.

"A guy hates to give up money any time, but I think I'll be better off in the long run," Kendall said from his hotel room in Commerce, where he is taking classes in administration. "I wanted to stay in education, and I think the administration route is the way I want to go."

Kendall said that, after 20 years of coaching, he felt it was time for a change. He called leaving athletics a "hard decision."

Superintendent Harry Griffith said Kendall was one of three candidates who applied for the vice principal's post after Powers was moved to Lamar.

"We really think John will make an outstanding assistant

Soccer association kicks in to establish sport

Shocker Field became "Soccer Field" following action Tuesday night by Pampa school trustees.

The board unofficially changed the name of the football practice field by officially approving a boys soccer program at Pampa High School.

"I've been waiting to do this for four years. Thanks," Pampa Soccer Association President Miles Cook told trustees after the unanimous vote.

Steve Phillips, president of the high school Soccer Booster Club, praised trustees for initiating the program, and said the success of soccer enthusiasts after four years of requests is due largely to Superintendent Harry Griffith's work on the proposal.

In creating the soccer program, trustees accepted most of a proposal submitted at the board's request by Athletic Director John Kendall.

The soccer proposal was Kendall's last official duty as athletic director. He was named Pampa High School vice principal later in Tuesday night's meeting.

Following the board action:

■ A boys soccer team at the high school will take the field in April, with a girls program tentatively scheduled to start a year later. The team will play its home games on Shocker Field, located adjacent to Harvester Field.

■ All games will be played against the four Amarillo high schools, and will be handled through the physical education department. Soccer won't be a University Interscholastic League sanctioned sport in Pampa or Amarillo because the UIL season begins in January, when Panhandle weather doesn't permit outdoor sports.

Griffith

Phillips

■ A soccer coach will be named by the board later this month. Griffith said Kendall has found a current high school teacher with coaching experience, who played soccer in college.

■ The cost of the program to the district remains in question, but Griffith promised trustees firm figures in time for their Aug. 13 budget workshop. Kendall has estimated the first-year cost of the program at about $8,600, but Griffith has said the program could cost as little as $4,000 because of equipment and personnel to be donated by the soccer association, and because Kendall's figures include both a boys and girls team.

"This is another example of the Pampa community coming forward to help the Pampa school district," Griffith said of the soccer association's pledge to help with establishing the program. He said he considers the program "extremely cost-effective" because of the number of students it will benefit.

Roughly 500 youngsters currently participate in Pampa's youth soccer program.

Cook said the main reason for not fielding a girls soccer team this year is that a coach couldn't be found.

"It would be reasonably unfeasible for one coach to coach girls and boys soccer," Cook said.

Cook called the board's action a "wise decision" and said it will make a number of students happy. He reiterated the soccer association's pledge to help out in any way it can.

"All they have to do is ask us," he said.

School officials predict that roughly 40 students will try out for soccer.

Cook noted that intramural soccer is played at the Lubbock high schools, and added that Borger school trustees also are looking into a proposal to create a high school soccer program. Dumas also has a strong youth program, he said.

If enough Panhandle schools start playing soccer, he said, the UIL will have to make it a spring sport to allow the Panhandle schools to participate in the state soccer tournament, held every April.

In other action Tuesday, trustees: ■ approved a bid for student insurance from the Hank Holt Agency in Canyon representing National Federation Student Protection Trust, at an annual cost of $17 per student for in-school coverage and $47 for 24-hour coverage;

■ hired Hairston, Walsh and Anderson — an Austin firm specializing in school law — at $400 a year.

Pampa girl hit by car

An 8-year-old Pampa girl was listed in serious condition at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo today, after she was run over by a car late Tuesday and taken to Coronado Hospital by the car's driver.

Melodee Brooke Marlow, 524 Magnolia St., suffered a fractured skull and numerous cuts and abrasions in the accident, which occurred in the 500 block of Magnolia.

Teresa Locke, 37, 610 Magnolia, was cited by police for failure to yield the right of way to a pedestrian.

The youngster got out of Locke's 1980 Ford shortly after 11 p.m. and crossed in front of the vehicle, according to Officer Richard Pack's report. Lock pulled away from the curb, and the car struck the child, the report said.

An ambulance was called, but before it arrived, Locke drove Marlow to Coronado Hospital. The youngster was stabilized in the Coronado emergency room, before being transported by Rural-Metro ambulance to the Amarillo hospital, where she was admitted to the pediatric intensive care ward.

Jim Dickson, of Washington, D.C., left Newport, R.I., today to sail alone across the Atlantic to Plymouth, England. Dickson, who has been legally blind since age 7, expects the trip in his 36-foot sailboat to take about 30 days. Dickson will be guided on the journey by a computer that figures the boat's position.

Iranian sub may lurk under gulf

Martyrs continue maneuvers

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An Iranian military commander announced that Tehran would deploy its first submarine this week, and he said Iran's missiles are prepared for launching in case of provocation in the Persian Gulf, official media reported today.

The Iranian news agency quoted Mohsen Rezaie, the commander of the Revolutionary Guards, as saying the submarine would be launched during the three-day war games codenamed "Martyrdom" that began at midnight Monday.

Iran has been at war with Iraq since 1980. But Rezaie told reporters the naval maneuvers were being staged to increase Iran's capacity "to confront plots of the United States and international arrogance," according to the Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus.

Iran has threatened U.S. vessels in the Persian Gulf since the Reagan administration agreed to reregister and protect 11 Kuwaiti tankers plying the waterway. Tehran has stepped up its threats since Friday's killing of hundreds of Iranian pilgrims in a clash with Saudi Arabian police in Mecca.

Today's IRNA announcement was believed to be the first time the Iranians have said they have a submarine. It was not possible to independently confirm the report, which offered no details on the underwater craft. The London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies lists no submarines in the Iranian navy.

Rezaie said that during the maneuvers, the Revolutionary Guards, devoted followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, are battling hypothetical targets with surface-to-ship and surface-to-air missiles. He added, however, that the surface-to-ship missiles would not be fired against vessels in the gulf "except for an untoward incident instigated by an enemy," IRNA reported.

Iran reportedly has Chinese-made Silk-worm anti-ship missiles with a range of 50 miles positioned on the northern side of the Strait of Hormuz, the entrance to the gulf. The missiles could hit any vessel negotiating the narrow passage.

On the first day of the exercises, Iranian speedboats attacked dummy "enemy ships" and anti-aircraft fire crackled along the Iranian coast. Shipping traffic slowed to a crawl in the Strait of Hormuz.

In Washington, the Defense Department's chief spokesman, Robert Sims, said the Iranian naval maneuvers did not affect the United States.

"We will continue to operate ... in a normal way in the gulf," he told a news conference in Washington. But other officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the U.S. Navy would not begin escorting the reflagged Kuwaiti tanker Bridgeton on its 500-mile return trip through the gulf until next week, after the Iranian exercises concluded.

Groom sets budget; city tax rate drops

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

GROOM — City Council members dropped 8 cents from the city tax rate Tuesday to fund a $62,110 budget.

The city tax rate drops 3 percent, from 68 cents per $100 valuation to 60 cents.

But residents here may not feel that much of a tax decrease because city property values increased from $9.8 million to $10.9 million after reappraisal. Carson County Chief Appraiser Diana Lavake said the reappraisal, done every five years, brought older properties in line with current market values. About nine-tenths of the city property values come from real estate.

In preparing the budget, City Secretary Pat Ashford anticipated taxable values of $11 million.

Ashford said that the total budget — comprising $62,110 for the general fund and $124,464 for the water fund — is about the same as last year's.

According to Ashford, 45 cents of the 60-cent tax rate will go to the general fund while 15 cents goes to a sinking fund to pay for a new water well.

Ashford estimates that the tax will bring in $67,055. Additional general fund revenue will come from $13,091 in franchise tax collection and $5,000 in delinquent taxes. About $9,772 of the revenues will go to pay off the water well debt.

The secretary anticipates a balance of $32,174 at the end of the 1988 fiscal year, plus $40,000 in certificates of deposit, bringing the total balance to $72,000.

At $22,500, salaries for Ashford, the city fire marshal and half of principal," Griffith said. "I think he's done an outstanding job as athletic director, and I think he'll do an outstanding job as assistant principal."

High School Principal Oran Chappell said two of Kendall's primary duties will be student discipline and working with the Impact drug prevention program at the high school. He said he plans to meet with Kendall and Assistant Principal Pat Farmer — and seek input from teachers — before determining Kendall's other duties.

Chappell said Kendall has strong organizational and paperwork skills and will make a "strong, caring vice-principal." Chappell said he regretted pulling Kendall out of the athletic department.

"When you look at candidates for vice principal, the people that you look at that you really want, you always are pulling them out of positions that you regret,"

Chappell said.

Kendall came to Pampa in 1982, two years after he led his Liberal, Kan., high school football team to a state championship. He was unable to duplicate that success in Texas, falling from a 5-5 season in 1983 to a disastrous 0-10 season last year.

In January, he was named full-time athletic director, and led the search for his coaching successor, Dennis Cavalier of Chickasha, Okla.

VanZandt said a replacement for Kendall in the athletic department probably will be named later this month.

In other personnel action Tuesday, trustees hired Griffith's wife Sally to head the district's "students at-risk" program. The program is mandated by the state board of education, and requires school districts to counsel potential dropouts or candidates for alcohol or drug abuse.

Griffith said, although a state grant application was rejected, the district has received about $12,300 in federal funds for the program. He estimated total cost of the program at about $30,000.

Mrs. Griffith's salary will be set when the budget is finalized later this month. She has 14 years of experience, and master's degrees in social work and business administration.

Trustees also: named Don Nelson vocational director for a two-year contract; accepted resignations from Cynthia Anderson (Travis physical education), Beverly Adams (high school reading), Phil Hall (middle school math and coach), Stacie Hall (Baker special education), Jerry Davis (high school and Baker physical education), Elicia Davis (Mann fifth grade), LaDonna Allen (Austin third grade), Rhonda Kondo (Mann second grade) and John Charles (middle school physical education); and employed Anne T. Smith (high school reading), Sherry Seaborn (high school history), Sam Haynes (middle school physical education) and Mike Shklar (high school physical education).

The Water Department salary takes up the largest chunk of the general fund budget. Another $12,000 goes for insurance and bonds, while $3,000 will pay for animal control.

The city will also spend $2,500 for a utility billing computer software system.

The 1988 water budget was caught off balance by the closing of the city landfill in April.

Ashford said the Texas Department of Health ordered the city landfill closed because the city had no landfill permit. The city is renting a 30-yard Dumpster from Browning Ferris Industries (B.F.I.) of Amarillo — which provides regular city trash service — while they decide what to do about disposal of large trash items. One option may be to buy a giant trash compactor.

Ashford says B.F.I. is charging the city $1,200 to rent the massive Dumpster and $3,500 to empty it. The city is charging a $1 monthly meter assessment to pay for the Dumpster and expects to receive $2,640 from the assessment collection.

Ashford budgeted $34,500 for regular trash service.

Another major expense is a transfer of $7,104 to a special volunteer fire department account for final payment on a new fire truck.

For the city road fund, which is funded through sales tax collections, Ashford expects collections of $21,000. But the only expense will be $3,000 for road supplies.

The remaining revenue will be added to an estimated existing balance of $29,000, with the balance then expected to total $47,000. This will enable the city to begin its five-year seal-coating plan in 1989.

Ashford said the city's three main goals for the 1987-88 year will be to continue analysis of a landfill alternative, to continue to upgrade the city water system and to consider a method to upgrade city streets, curbs and gutters.

The city had just adopted its budget when they approved a revised city retirement plan which would require an increase of $338 from the pension fund. The new municipal retirement system, the result of legislation from the regular session of the Texas Legislature, would provide three benefits:

■ Retirement at any age with 25 years of experience.

■ Survivor benefits for the spouses of deceased employees who are vested at the time of death.

■ Occupational disability retirement allowing benefits for employees who become disabled to perform their job.

In other business, city officials tabled action on a request by the Groom Volunteer Ambulance Society to help pay for the addition of a paramedic. Ambulance representatives estimate it would cost $10,000 to add a paramedic to their team.

Council members also approved the sale of Golden Spread Cable Television to James Doucette, owner of Cablevision of Texas, located in Lockney.

Guards shoot gunman at Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP)—An unidentified man was shot and seriously wounded by a security guard at one of the main entrances to the Pentagon this morning when he brandished a handgun and tried to run toward the National Command Center.

The shooting occurred at approximately 8:10 a.m. at the Pentagon's River Entrance, said William Caldwell, a Pentagon spokesman.

The River Entrance is one of three main entrances to the Pentagon building and is located one floor below the offices of Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger. Just beyond the River Entrance is a main corridor leading to the National Command Center, the heavily secured area of the building used by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

According to Caldwell, the incident began when the unidentified man was stopped at the security checkpoint by a Federal Protective Service guard of the General Services Administration.

"The man produced a gun and proceeded to run past the guard and make a dash toward the National Command Center," said Caldwell.

"The guard ordered the man to stop and he turned around, facing the officer and brandishing the gun in his hand. The guard then fired two shots, one of which struck the man."

Caldwell said the unidentified man, believed to be in his 30s, was taken to the National Orthopedic Hospital in nearby Arlington, Va.

Initial reports from the hospital indicated the man was in critical condition.

"An investigation has been initiated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Federal Protective Service," Caldwell said.

The Pentagon and General Services Administration, which is responsible for overseeing the operation of the Pentagon, declined to identify the guard involved in the shooting.

The GSA assigns FPS security guards to each entrance of the Pentagon.

Caldwell said no one else was injured in the incident.

Oil prices slide on Mideast quiet

NEW YORK (AP)—Oil futures prices continued to slide in early trading today in the absence of major developments in the Middle East.

The futures market remained on edge, however, with traders still worried that further violence or political unrest in the region could lead to a disruption of oil shipments through the Persian Gulf.

In late morning trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for September delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude oil, lost 44 cents to $21.53 per 42-gallon barrel.

The contract dropped 19 cents Tuesday to settle at $21.97 a barrel, after shooting up 79 cents in Monday's session.

Prices for refined oil products also lost a bit more ground today. The September contract for wholesale unleaded gasoline was off nearly a cent to 55.10 cents a gallon, while the near-term contract for wholesale No. 2 heating oil declined slightly more than half a cent to 55.80 cents a gallon.

Analysts said supply and demand fundamentals do not support the recently inflated prices, but traders are reluctant to sell off sharply in the face of continuing tensions in the Gulf.

"Prices are still holding at critical levels," Michael Himmel, an analyst with the investment firm Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc., said Tuesday.

The crude oil contract traded in a narrow range between a low of $21.81 and a high of $22.16 a barrel during Tuesday's session. Trading was described as light and dominated by speculators grabbing profits from Monday's price surge.

The United States has pledged to keep the Gulf open to oil traffic despite increasing military threats from Iran and growing political unrest throughout the Middle East.

"The market is going to explore on the upside on any news coming out of the Middle East, and it will have a tendency to settle off in absence of such news," said analyst Himmel.

The oil market vented a fury of nervous energy Monday in the wake of bloody clashes over the weekend between Iranian pilgrims and Saudi Arabian security forces in the holy city of Mecca. The confrontation resulted in hundreds of Iranian casualties, aggravating tensions within the Arab world and prompting renewed anti-American threats from Iranian officials.

Iran also launched three days of military exercises designed to demonstrate its readiness to carry out suicide missions against the U.S. Navy in the Gulf.

Although the Pentagon downplayed the significance of those maneuvers, several officials said it was unlikely another oil convoy would be mounted before next week.

Salesman exposed boys to AIDS

MARLIN (AP)—Juvenile authorities say they are warning children listed in an insurance salesman's computer records that the man may have exposed them to the AIDS virus through sexual contact.

Jimmy G. Ethridge, 38, of Marlin, who was found in an autopsy to have carried the virus, may have exposed as many as 40 children to the virus linked to the fatal and incurable disease, said Debra Coca, a Falls County juvenile probation officer.

She said anyone with whom Ethridge had sexual relations has an 80 percent chance of contracting acquired immune deficiency syndrome, a disease that weakens the body's ability to fight germs.

AIDS is caused by a virus believed passed through the blood and semen. It cripples the body's ability to fight germs and disease. Groups at highest risk are homosexual men and intravenous drug users.

Ms. Coca said she has interviewed 10 of the 40 children.

Most of the 40 children were Hispanic or black and between 13 and 16 years old, although some were as young as 7, Ms. Coca said.

All 10 children who were interviewed Monday and Tuesday are Marlin residents, Ms. Coca said. Many of them agreed to take an AIDS test, she said.

The rest of the 40 children live in Louisiana, Arkansas and Mexico, Ms. Coca said. She said an unknown number of the children live in Waco.

Ms. Coca said she plans to send letters telling the other children about the case and advising them to seek medical care.

Ethridge was found in his bedroom with a bullet wound to his head. A 16-year-old Marlin boy, who apparently was living with Ethridge, was a suspect but authorities said there was not enough evidence to prosecute him for the death.

During the investigation, police found enlarged photographs of nude children and a computer containing information about them, Ms. Coca said.

The addresses and names of the 40 children were discovered after the computer code was broken Tuesday, Ms. Coca said. Ethridge apparently kept files about those boys he had "long-term relations with," Ms. Coca said. The files included addresses, names, telephone numbers and dates when Ethridge met the boys, she said.

For "short-term" relations, Ethridge apparently kept computer stories on what transpired, Ms. Coca said.

Brothers stepping down in family business case

BEAUMONT (AP) — Family members of a prominent Port Arthur shipping family settled a civil dispute over the operation of the family's marine businesses, lawyers in the case said.

As part of the settlement, brothers Henry Fredeman II, 46, and William F. Fredeman Jr., 50, resigned as directors, officers and employees of the family owned and operated marine businesses located in Port Arthur and Lake Charles, La., Houston attorney John P. Melko said Tuesday.

James Crawford, husband of Sydalise Fredeman Crawford and brother-in-law of Henry and William Fredeman, now is chief executive officer and president of the family companies, Melko said.

Melko represented Mrs. Crawford of Lake Charles, La., who in June asked State District Judge Gary Sanderson for a permanent injunction to prevent her brothers and a sister, Mary Carmen Crain of New Jersey, from taking any action on behalf of Port Arthur Towing Co. and its subsidiaries Channel Fueling Service Inc. and Fredeman Shipyard.

Beaumont lawyer Wayne Reaud, who represented the Fredeman brothers and Ms. Crain in the dispute, could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Lake Charles lawyer Edwin Hunter, who represented Port Arthur Towing in the case, said Channel Fueling is an inactive subsidiary of Port Arthur Towing. The parent company has formed another fueling operation at its Port Arthur dock, Certified Fuel Service. Another subsidiary, Lake Charles Fueling Service, is based at the Fredeman Shipyard in Lake Charles.

Mrs. Crawford alleged in requesting the injunction that her brothers had neglected and mismanaged the businesses, and had continued to act as directors of the companies despite their removal as officers and directors May 29.

Before the settlement, Henry Fredeman was president of Channel Fueling, William Fredeman was president of Port Arthur Towing and James Crawford was president of Fredeman Shipyard.

Ms. Crain will join the companies' board of directors under the settlement, Melko said.

"I don't anticipate any more changes," Melko said. "The companies will continue to do business and the family hopes that at least this is behind them ... Like every settlement there were points that everyone would like to turn out differently but I think it's a settlement everyone can live with and work with."

Henry and William Fredeman also resigned as executors of their parents' estate, Melko said, leaving Mrs. Crawford as the estate's independent administrator. Capt. William F. Fredeman Sr. died Nov. 25, 1986. His wife, Sydalise Fredeman, died Jan. 14, 1987.

While lawyers Tuesday worked on legal matters involving the family in state district court, other lawyers representing family members worked on related matters in federal court.

U.S. District Judge Sam Hall on Monday sentenced Henry Fredeman and William F. Fredeman Jr. each to 10 years probation in a criminal case involving the operation of the family's businesses. Hall on Tuesday dismissed all pending criminal charges against all defendants, including two whose cases he earlier severed from the group.

Lawyers who represented the Fredeman brothers and the family's businesses in the criminal case have asked U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, chief justice of the Eastern District of Texas, to prevent civil lawyers access to various records and information from the criminal case. Justice has scheduled a hearing today to consider the request.

Congressman claims hearings fleshed out Iran-Contra facts

BEAUMONT (AP) — U.S. Rep. Jack Brooks thinks the Iran-Contra investigation succeeded in fleshing out the main facts in 14 weeks of sometimes numbing testimony and in the future may prevent a similar government within a government.

"I think the hearings accomplished a great deal," Brooks, D-Beaumont, said in a telephone interview with the Beaumont Enterprise from his Washington office Tuesday evening.

Among the main accomplishments he cited: "It exposed the government within a government that Adm. (John) Poindexter, Col. (Oliver) North and CIA Director (William) Casey had created."

"(The hearings) showed the president rejected the counsel and advice of his long-trusted advisers, Secretary of State (George) Shultz and Secretary of Defense (Caspar) Weinberger, and they were essentially frozen out of the most serious foreign policy decision of the nation."

"The hearings exposed just how deeply involved the nation was in shipping weapons to a terrorist state in negotiation for the release of hostages, and they showed the extent to which the administration was willing to bend and sometimes break the law to promote their particular methods of aiding the contras."

"The hearings exposed an incredible amount of lying to Congress, and even to members of the administration, and an eagerness to shred documents that would have shown what they were doing," Brooks said.

He concluded, "The hearings focused the American people's attention on just how fragile our constitutional system can be and how it can be abused, and how absolutely essential it is that we all be vigilant at all times to protect our governmental institutions and our system of laws."

The committee learned little from several CIA agents who testified Tuesday in a closed session, Brooks said.

"They could have testified on the front steps," he said. "I'll bet if you asked one of them what his name was, he'd tell you, 'I don't deny that I have one, but I don't recall what it is.'"

After it completes hearings in closed sessions this week, the committee will continue to take depositions and meet again, probably in early September, to wrap up the report, he said.

Brooks said some of the discrepancies in previous testimony probably would be cleared.

He questioned the knowledge of Casey, who died before the hearings started.

"North said Casey knew all about it ... Meese said Casey told him he didn't know. Which one of them is lying and which one of them is telling the truth? You'll never resolve that. They both told different stories under oath," he said.

Brooks tends to believe the Cabinet officials, who testified they had opposed the plan and advised Reagan against it, "and that's what the record reflected," he said. "They were not fully informed by Admiral Poindexter and nobody found records of (Poindexter) laying out a complete rundown of the little scheme, addressed to Weinberger, Schultz or Regan."

Suspect in Good Samaritan's murder sang in church choir

DALLAS (AP) — A high school senior accused of the murder of a champion college gymnast was a member of the honor roll, competed in school talent and beauty contests and sang in her church choir.

The mother of Sheila Hill, charged in connection with the Saturday shooting death of a man trying to retrieve a purse snatched from a woman at a shopping mall, said she had not talked with her 17-year-old daughter since the girl's arrest.

"I sit down and think, Lord, why ...," Hazel Pugh told The Dallas Morning News. "But I just don't know why."

She said her daughter sang in the church choir and sometimes read from the Bible during services.

"She said she wanted to be a model," Pugh said. "She is always talking about being a model."

On Tuesday, the teen-ager was being held without bond in Richardson City Jail on capital murder charges in connection with the shooting death of Glenn Michael "Mike" Sims, police said. She also was charged with attempted capital murder and burglary of a motor vehicle, in connection with the purse-snatching. Bond on those charges totaled $101,000.

A 23-year-old woman, accused of driving the car in which Miss Hill fled the scene of the purse-snatching, also was charged with capital murder and car burglary.

Police say Sims was shot and killed after he followed the two women and tried to retrieve the purse they are accused of stealing.

Hill was a "B" student at Madison High School before she transferred to Lincoln High School at the request of the principal, who wouldn't discuss the reasons for the transfer.

Sylvanna Quiroga of Dallas also was arrested and charged in connection with the Sims shooting.

Quiroga said she met Hill Saturday and asked her to come to a party in Plano, a nearby suburb.

Hill didn't want to swim when they arrived, according to Quiroga, and the pair went to the Richardson shopping center where the purse-snatching occurred.

Quiroga contends she stopped her car after Sims continued to chase them and "begged" him to stop. "I said, 'Please man, we'll never do this again.'"

Auction to have Sam Houston documents

WACO (AP) — Three antique land grants signed by Sam Houston when he was president of the Republic of Texas will be auctioned next week.

The documents date back to 1844, said Wendell Stafford, of A&S Auctions, which is holding the auction Aug. 15 in nearby Bellmead.

"We're expecting people from all over the state," said Stafford. "It's the first time we've had a collection like this."

The land grants are rare because they're signed and in good condition, said Scotty Flanks, owner of A&S Auctions. The items up for bid can be previewed three days before the auction, he said.

Stafford speculated an 1844 land grant giving 640 acres to a man named John Holliday will probably fetch the highest price among the documents, but couldn't say how much it might be worth.

"It's the best preserved of the bunch," he said.

Stafford said the history of the land grants is unknown.

"The original owner didn't tell us anything," he said.

Houston McGaugh, director of The Star of Republic Museum in Navasota, said it's almost impossible to estimate the value of the documents.

"When you get historical artifacts, you're dealing out of the realm of fixed prices. It all depends on the information surrounding the document and how much somebody's willing to pay," he said.

McGaugh said the land grants might be rare, depending on whether the grants deed land to a Civil War soldier or to an individual for another reason.

"Back then, there wasn't any money to pay the Confederate soldiers, so they gave them land. There might be hundreds of those deeds floating around," he said.

The land grants were acquired from the estate of a prominent Coryell County family, he said. The family, which is liquidating its estate, asked not to be identified, he said. Stafford estimated the documents have probably been in the family's possession since 1889.

Viewers see 'hard-core' real estate film

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A hard-core "skin flick" was shown inadvertently on a cable channel instead of a showcase of homes for sale in the San Antonio area, officials at Rogers Cable TV said.

Instead of homes for sale, viewers were exposed for about five minutes Tuesday night to naked people in sexual encounters.

"We don't know what happened," said John Gonzales, a dispatch supervisor for Rogers Cable TV.

Gonzales said The Real Estate Showcase, which began about 10:30 p.m. Tuesday, was interrupted by Indecent Pleasures, which was starting at the same time on a pay channel.

Engineers had their monitors on, but they were not watching the Real Estate channel and did not know Indecent Pleasures was being broadcast, Gonzales said. It was not until a horrified customer called Rogers Cable TV, after the movie had been on about five minutes, that the mistake was corrected, Gonzales said.

The channel feed was cut, and the message "One Moment Please" was displayed until 11:04 p.m., at which time the real estate feature returned.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Centralized welfare stays out of touch

For 20 years America's welfare system has bred crime and poverty. It has split families, made generations dependent on federal payouts, and devastated vast sections of our cities.

True welfare reform would shift federal responsibility and control back to states, counties, cities, and private groups. It's well known that decentralized welfare works better than centralized, and that best of all is self-reliance; the higher control extends, the more bureaucracy hampers true help to the poor.

Unfortunately, a plan offered by Sen. Daniel Moynihan only partly deals with these realities; it has some good points, but mostly would make matters worse.

The Moynihan plan's main tack is to shift responsibility back to the states, at least a sensible idea, while maintaining federal control, the worst idea possible. For example, it would make states require welfare recipients to take part in job programs, which usually means makework. A better tack would be to let states set up job-search programs, helping people find real jobs for the long haul.

There are tens of thousands of jobs available throughout America. But because many involve menial work, welfare looks better to a lot of people. Because industries differ greatly across America, states are more suited than the feds to finding programs that work in their areas.

The Moynihan plan would require states to give welfare not just to one-parent households, which encourages fathers to leave, but two-parent families as well. That's fine, but do states need to be told that? After all, it was Lyndon Johnson's ADC program that limited welfare to one-parent households, beginning the devastation of poor families.

A better idea for federal action would be for Congress to exempt poor families from Social Security payments, much as last year's tax reform exempted them from the income tax. Congress should also restrain itself from killing jobs by raising the minimum wage.

In other ways the Moynihan plan uses wrong ends to achieve the right goal of ending the toll welfare takes on families. It would require employers to withhold paternity payments from employees' checks automatically, deputizing employers as federal collection officers.

On the positive side, the Moynihan plan would extend Medicare payments until nine months after a person gets a job, allowing time for private health plans to kick in. This may cost money in the short run, but by encouraging welfare recipients to find jobs, it will easily pay for itself by reducing welfare rolls.

The main problem with the Moynihan plan, in brief, is that it does not encourage enough diversity in fighting poverty. It would keep state, local, and private efforts on a leash, discouraging them from developing localized programs that work. Far from reforming welfare, the Moynihan plan would give us another grandiose exercise in futility. Taxpayers would again foot the bill for programs that ultimately will hurt the poor.

Doctrine unfairly limits awards

WASHINGTON — Forty years ago, more or less, bad things happened to Rudolph Feres, Arthur Jefferson and Dudley Griggs. All of them were in the Army. Feres died in a barracks fire at Pine Camp, N.Y. Jefferson went through an abdominal operation flawed by serious malpractice. Griggs died for want of proper treatment by Army surgeons.

All three figured in lawsuits brought at the time against the United States government. The suits sought damages above and beyond the compensation given them under federal law. The question was whether the Federal Tort Claims Act of 1946 (FTCA) permitted servicemen to sue the government. Speaking for a unanimous Supreme Court in 1950, Justice Robert Jackson ruled that military personnel may not bring suit for injuries that "arise out of or are in the course of activity incident to service." This is the "Feres doctrine."

With few exceptions, the Supreme Court has adhered to Jackson's reasoning ever since. Now the Feres doctrine is under double attack. It barely survived this past term of the Supreme Court; dissenting in a 5-4 case in May, Justice Antonin Scalia termed the Feres rule "clearly wrong." And in the House of Representatives, Congressman Barney Frank of Massachusetts has introduced a bill to permit men and women in the armed forces to sue for malpractice by service doctors.

The Justice Department opposes Frank's bill, but the measure strikes me as altogether fair. The armed services have attracted some first-rate physicians; the level of medical care, on the whole, is regarded as reasonably high. But the armed services also have attracted some second-rate doctors who couldn't hack it in civilian practice. There is no valid reason—at least none that I can see — why a soldier or sailor who suffers from botched surgery should not be able to sue as civilians can sue.

Justice Jackson himself seemed a little uncertain in his 1950 opinion. He found no legislative record to guide the court in construing the FTCA. "If we misinterpret the act," he remarked, "at least Congress possesses a ready remedy." The ambiguous language of the FTCA sought to make the government liable "in the same manner and to the same extent as a private individual under like circumstances."

Jackson reasoned that no "private individual" could be legally analogous to a soldier in the Army, for no one has power to mobilize a private army. Besides, said Jackson, the law "makes no sense" if it results in suits brought by military personnel, subject to frequent transfers, under the applicable tort law of the state in which the injury occurs. Anyhow, he noted, the government maintains a system of compensation that is fair and efficient. Military discipline would suffer if troops could sue their officers for wrongful acts.

To Justices Scalia, Stevens, Brennan and

Marshall, this reasoning is specious. They are ready to junk the Feres doctrine altogether, or at least to poke holes in the rule that would give men and women in service a better break. That is Rep. Frank's idea also.

Go back to the case of Arthur Jefferson. Eight months after his operation at an Army hospital in Maryland, Jefferson had to have a second operation. To their surprise and chagrin, surgeons found in his stomach "a towel 30 inches long by 18 inches wide, marked 'Medical Department, U.S. Army.'"

Jefferson received lump-sum compensation of $3,645 at the time. The court estimated that, given his life expectancy, he would receive installments totaling $32,000 before his death. It wasn't much. Frank's bill would let malpractice plaintiffs go to court under FTCA.

Frank's bill would not address the indefensible damage inflicted by the Army upon Master Sgt. James B. Stanley. He was one of a thousand soldiers, you may recall, who in 1958 were gulled into experiments, without their consent, to determine the effect of LSD on humans. Neither would it help the widow of Lt. Cmdr. Horton Winfield Johnson, a Coast Guard helicopter pilot who died, it is alleged, when FAA controllers erred in supervising a rescue flight in Hawaii. The Supreme Court applied the Feres doctrine to both cases this past term.

Something is sorely wrong here. The original Feres plaintiffs of 1950 suffered damages that had little to do with the peculiar circumstances of military service. A defective furnace led to Feres' death. Incompetent surgery figured in the other two cases. The Congressional Budget office estimates that Frank's bill would cost the taxpayers no more than $25 million in FTCA damages a year. It would be money fairly spent.

CONGRESS THROWS A NATIONAL SECURITY THREAT OUT OF NORTH AMERICA

Goetz fired in reasonable fear

You think the trial of Bernhard Goetz is over? Not by a long shot.

Nor is it yet over for the jury in that historic trial.

The rafters still ring with allegations of "racism," alleging that Goetz was found not guilty because he is white.

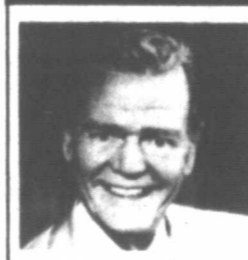

Jurors are trying to put the trial behind them, to keep a low personal profile. But some jurors are so angry at charges of racism that they are making themselves available for interviews.

Four of them told a Phil Donahue audience that they were "insulted" to be accused of racism by people who were not in that jury room, who did not know and could not know the careful manner in which the jurors kept their judgment free of black and white. There were blacks on the jury, yet the decision was unanimous.

The sentiment in the Donahue audience was almost unanimously in favor of the verdict.

The jury had been charged to determine whether Goetz's fear of the four who confronted him was "reasonable fear."

New York University law professor Stephen Gillers, says, "Reasonableness is situational."

Paul Harvey

Would a reasonable person, having been mugged twice and physically abused as Goetz had been — would he respond as Goetz responded?

The jury said yes.

But such is the inevitable racial polarization that the two black jurors are now refusing public appearances. And if they fear retaliation from firebrand blacks, they will have to live with that fear for a very long time.

In New York City subways the number of robbery victims last year was about evenly divided, black and white; about 2,000 of each.

But the robbers were overwhelmingly black — by a ratio of 30-to-one.

So subway riders will admit that this is a factor in their fear, and might "reasonably" have contributed to Goetz's fear.

And the fact that one of the youths delivered several frightening outbursts in the courtroom — though it was not supposed to be considered by the jury — did tend to justify the "reasonableness" of Goetz's response.

The president of the National Conference of Black Lawyers, Wilhelm Joseph, says, "Whites consider most black men threatening."

Yet, last year in New York a black man killed a white man who was menacing subway passengers, and the black man was not even indicted.

Is it now open season on anybody who appears menacing? Hardly. After what Goetz has gone through — and is yet to go through — no "reasonable" person is likely to go looking for trouble.

Roy Innes, the "reasonable" voice of the Congress of Racial Equality, is convinced that the Goetz jury was not influenced by race and that "if those four boys had been sitting on the subway doing their algebra homework, Goetz would never have pulled that gun."

Postal Service delivers phony numbers

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When a senior federal official recently complained that "postal service is bad and customers are unhappy," an indignant Postmaster General Preston R. Tisch cited "service performance percentages" to rebut the criticism.

Although few outsiders have ever heard of those performance standards, they are the Postal Service's single most important indicator of its ability to deliver mail in a timely manner.

Postal Service officials ought to know the dangers of relying upon statistics: More than a century ago, British statesman Benjamin Disraeli noted that "there are three kinds of lies — lies, damned lies and statistics." More recently, author Rex Stout explained, "There are two kinds of statistics — the kind you look up and the kind you make up."

However, more than a decade ago, the Postal Service established elaborate performance standards for delivery of every class of mail it carries, from Express Mail to Parcel Post.

Stamped, first-class letters addressed to destination in the same metropolitan area in which they are mailed are to be delivered the next day. Those mailed to recipients within 500 to 600 miles are to be delivered within two days and all others are to be delivered within three days.

The Postal Service regularly conducts tests to determine its ability to meet those standards, with favorable results ballyhooed by the quasi-government agency. "Stamped, overnight first-class mail was delivered at a record-equaling 95.5 percent on-time pace," Tisch boasts in his 1986 annual report.

Similarly, when Federal Trade Commission Chairman Daniel Oliver recently was openly critical of Tisch's organization, the postmaster general lectured him: "The Postal Service (in 1986) broke past records of mail delivery performance in six out of nine measured categories and tied the record for the seventh."

With those performance standards now firmly entrenched as the universal measure of competence, producing constantly improving numbers for the agency's senior management has become an all-consuming task for local postmasters.

In cities throughout the country, the final weekday pickup of outgoing mail from most downtown office buildings traditionally has been at 5 p.m. or slightly later, a logical schedule that coincides with the end of the business day.

But that timetable makes it difficult for the Postal Service to meet its performance standards — so the last daily collections have been moved back to 4 p.m.

Here in Washington, 79 of the city's approximately 2,500 mail boxes and chutes long had a final weekday pickup time of 6:30 p.m. Earlier this year, however, the Postal Service moved to abolish that service because, explained a spokesman, "we want to make sure we can meet our standards." The Washington Post, in a devastating editorial suggested that the principle could be universally applied to improve efficiency: "If there's not enough time to get something done on time, drop the task and keep your standards high."

Corner-cutting by the Postal Service is hardly new. An earlier scheme discouraged mail delivery to the front door to those moving into new residential areas — in the name of improving the agency's efficiency.

Instead, most people who live in new subdivisions can receive their mail only at "centralized delivery" facilities that serve entire neighborhoods with receptacles similar to those used in apartment buildings.

Customer protests forced the Postal Service to abandon its plan to halt late pickups at selected mailboxes in Washington, but the agency has abandoned the once-inviolable 5 p.m. final pickup time at thousands of other boxes and chutes here and in other cities.

While the statistics are improving, the service is deteriorating.

Nation

Middle third of nation cooler, but heat still lingers in South

By The Associated Press

A cold front freed the middle third of the nation from the muggy grip blamed for at least 96 deaths in 14 states, but the heat wave entered a 19th day today from Virginia to northeast Texas.

"The horses are a little less sweaty, fresher, friskier and they've probably got a better appetite," said Matt Weston, a security guard at Arlington Park racetrack in Illinois.

"I know my appetite is a little better ... and I haven't done any exercising."

The wave of relief moved southeast Tuesday from the central Plains across the Ohio and mid-Mississippi valleys to Arkansas and Tennessee. The southeastern boundary of the cooler air extended today from northeastern New York State through north-central Texas, said Harry Gordon of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, Mo.

Temperatures throughout Indiana dropped below 90 Tuesday for the first time since mid-July. A heat shelter in Chattanooga, Tenn., sat empty.

The Alabama Department of Public Health lifted a 3-day-old heat alert as the front brought rain to the state. Following the rain, the front was expected to bring drier air to the state, which has endured 95 percent humidity for days. Temperatures should reach the low- to mid-90s today, a moderate break from heat that set a record of 98 degrees Tuesday in Huntsville.

Other records Tuesday included 98 at Greensboro, N.C.; 97 at Baltimore's airport and at Washington, D.C.

The weather service forecast highs from the middle 90s to around 100 degrees today from parts of the lower Mississippi Valley through the southern Plains and southern Plateau. The rest of the nation's eastern two-thirds should get highs in the 80s and 90s, except for 70s from the Great Lakes through New England.

As the cold front collided with stagnant masses of hot, humid air, storms formed, including funnel clouds Tuesday evening in northeastern Arkansas, and hail and lightning elsewhere in the state. The temperature in Jonesboro, Ark., plunged from a high of 96 to 73 by mid-evening.

The power of the storms unleashed by the front was apparent in central Ohio, where crews were still working Tuesday night to restore power to the last hundred or so homes of 75,000 that lost electricity Sunday.

Residents of Cheyenne, Wyo., were cleaning up from a storm that dropped golfball-sized hail for about 30 minutes Monday. Damage is estimated at $27 million and insurance companies are expecting more than 20,000 claims, according to the Western Insurance Information Service in Denver.

Farmers and their bankers worried about crop damage from the hot blast. Most corn and soybeans in the Midwest escaped major damage, but slightly lower yields this fall seemed inevitable.

"For each 100-degree day we've had, we think it has taken five bushels (per acre) off the corn yield, about two bushels off the milo and probably one bushel off beans," said banker Gordon Benitz of Pawnee County, Neb.

From farms to inner-cities, people adapted their work and play to beat the heat.

Road crews in Arkansas poured concrete at an Interstate 430 bridge at night to prevent it from cracking.

Two planes collide, none injured

LANCASTER, Calif. (AP) — A small plane collided with a commuter airliner over the Mojave Desert, but pilots of both damaged aircraft landed safely and the 11 people aboard walked away uninjured.

The accident was one of three involving small planes in the Los Angeles area Tuesday. The two earlier accidents involved crash landings, one of which caused cuts and bruises to two motorists on the ground.

In the collision, tragedy was averted 5,800 feet above the Antelope Valley when the pilot of the Trans World Express commuter carrier dived after spotting the small craft, officials said.

The twin-engine DeHavilland DHC-6 was on final approach to Lancaster's Fox Field when it was clipped by the single-engine Cessna 172 shortly after noon, said Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Elly Brekke.

"The pilot took some evasive action to avoid a more disastrous accident," Brekke said. "The Cessna struck the tail end of the DeHavilland with the Cessna's left wing."

The planes were flying without radar guidance under visual flight rules. "It's see and be seen," said Bob Harik, air traffic manager for the FAA at nearby Edwards Air Force Base.

The Cessna pilot, identified as Roger T. Jones, 31, a Ventura flight instructor, told an FAA investigator after landing that he did not see the other plane before the collision.

Other than Jones, none of the passengers or pilots were immediately identified.

The Trans World Express flight, which landed at Fox Field, 50 miles north of downtown Los Angeles, was carrying six passengers and a crew of two from Los Angeles International Airport. Trans World Express, owned by Resort Commuter Inc., is a small company that coordinates its schedules with Trans World Airlines.

The private Cessna was flying from Oxnard to Las Vegas, Nev., with three people aboard, Brekke said.

Right after impact, the Cessna pilot declared "mayday" and was directed to land at Palmdale Airport, 12 miles away.

The accident also renewed concerns caused by a series of near-misses in Southern California's crowded skies and the Aug. 31, 1986, crash of an Aeromexico jetliner and a Cessna over Cerritos, which killed 82 people.

'Costs not a factor in nuclear safety'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is being ordered to rewrite its rules to exclude cost as a factor in determining if nuclear plants need upgrading to meet minimum safety standards.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Tuesday that using cost-benefit analysis in defining compliance with minimum safety standards was a violation of the Atomic Energy Act.

"The overall focus and purposes of the act, as reflected in its history, support the conclusion that the commission may not consider economic costs in ensuring the adequate protection of health and safety," the court said in an opinion by Judge Abner Mikva.

The NRC "must determine the content of the adequate-protection standard without reference to economic costs; the commission must then apply that standard to individual applicants and licensees notwithstanding any pleas of poverty," Mikva said.

The court overturned the 1985 NRC rule, which was challenged by the Union of Concerned Scientists. Diane Curran, an attorney for the group, called the ruling "a clear mandate to the NRC that safety comes first."

She said the NRC must consider how to upgrade the safety of many existing nuclear power plants. "The major issue is going to be how to deal with them," she said.

New drug slows muscle deterioration for children

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers have developed a drug treatment that slows muscle deterioration in children with severe muscular dystrophy, delaying their need to use wheelchairs full time by about two years, it was announced today.

Until now, there has been no treatment for Duchenne muscular dystrophy, the most severe form of the disease. It is rare in girls but occurs in about one in 4,000 boys, making it the most common childhood form of muscular dystrophy and among the most common of any inherited disorders.

Surgery and back and leg braces are used to relieve the disease's side effects, but unlike the new treatment, they do not delay muscle deterioration, said Donald Wood, director of research for the Muscular Dystrophy Association in New York.

A drawback of the new treatment is that it involves a drug, prednisone, with side effects that may be severe enough to prevent its use outside of carefully controlled experiments, Wood said.

Two studies reported in the current issue of the Archives of Neurology conclude that prednisone has long-term beneficial effects delaying the loss of walking ability by approximately two years, and that muscle and lung function improved over the short term.

"It's the first drug that in a controlled trial has been demonstrated to improve the strength of muscle in patients with Duchenne muscular dystrophy," Wood said.

Follow-up studies are under way to try to determine how the drug works, with the ultimate goal of developing treatments that would have a similar benefit but with fewer harmful side effects, Wood said.

"Just on the face of it, you'd hope to give every kid prednisone," Wood said. "The problem is there are side effects and they affect everyone — there are no exceptions."

The side effects of prednisone are well-known to doctors because it has been widely used for a long time, Wood said. They include weight gain of as much as 50 percent, mood changes and, after a year or more of treatment, the possible development of cataracts or osteoporosis, or weakening of the bones, Wood said.

Muscular dystrophy has been the focus of intense research in recent years by geneticists.

Freeway shootings continue

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bullets hit four more cars in apparently random road shootings, and authorities responded by offering rewards and compiling a "shooters profile."

None of the motorists or their passengers was injured Tuesday in the incidents, which brought to three dozen the number of shootings, rock-throwings and other attacks in Southern California since June 18.

The violence has left four people dead and 15 injured, and there have been 17 arrests.

The county Board of Supervisors offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone involved in a freeway shooting.

Another outbreak of shootings, four in two weeks, has occurred on Interstate 15 near Lehi, Utah. In the most recent incident, the first involving injury, a bullet shattered a window of a dairy truck and flying glass cut driver Gary D. Graves, police said.

The Southern California cases have been a mix of random snipings and outbursts of temper.

An enraged driver punched a woman in the face, breaking her glasses, in a confrontation after her car grazed his Tuesday afternoon, said Beverly Hills police Lt. David Griffey.

Witnesses noted the man's license number, and police arrested Arthur Lottie, 23, of Inglewood about three hours later on an assault charge.

In the year ahead, you are likely to set aside old interests that have neither produced a profit nor advanced your position in life. Your rewards will lie in the new.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A bit more self-discipline than usual may be required today regarding your health habits. Practice moderation when eating or drinking. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your luck today may be bounded by definite parameters. Rejections are possible if you press things too far. Try to play important matters close to the vest.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you hope to keep your household budget intact today, you might have to hide your mate's checkbook in order to counter his or her extravagant whims.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Things will work out well for you today, provided you can find someone to carry out your ideas. You may not do too much about them yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) As of this time, you should have accumulated a little surplus. Bank it for a rainy day, instead of blowing it on something frivolous.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Schedule your day so that you can take care of your more important needs later in the afternoon. Today you are a slow starter, but a strong finisher.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Associates are prepared to behave cooperatively toward you today, but don't make it a one-way street. Their assistance will cease if you are unresponsive.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try to select companions today who are on your wavelength philosophically. Involvements with individuals who aren't may not turn out too well.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you hope to exploit a present area of advantage, it will be necessary for you to make a more conscientious effort than you are now doing.

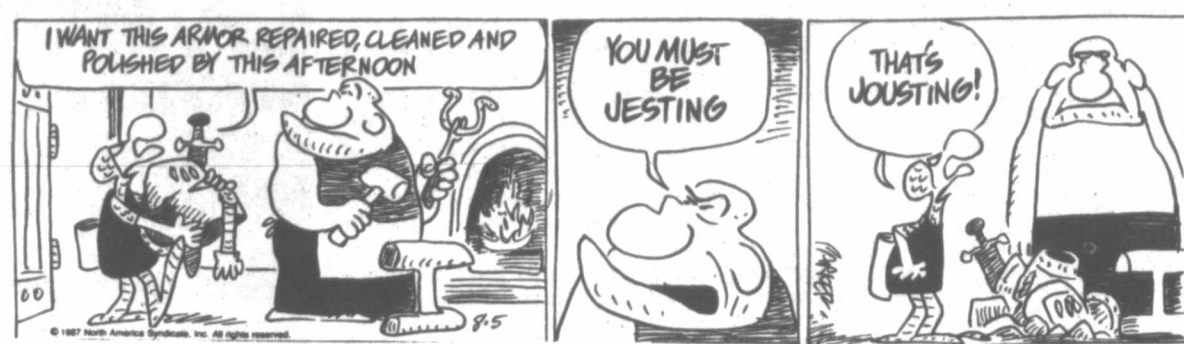

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A decision to which you've given considerable thought could misfire today if you start making last-minute changes. Stick to your blueprint.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be cautious today when dealing with people or firms about whom you know little. If you are too naive, there's a chance you might be deceived.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't expect too much today in a commercial way from someone you only know socially. This is a person who tries to keep the two worlds separate.

Chilean jetliner crashes; American reported killed

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A Chilean jetliner with 33 people on board broke in half and burst into flames after a tire blew out on impact. One passenger, a U.S. citizen, was killed, airline officials said.

Television broadcasts monitored in Santiago showed the Lan Chile Boeing 737 engulfed in flames on the runway, its fuselage split in two, following the Tuesday evening crash in the northern city of Calama. Firefighters, working under bright lights, sprayed foam on the wreckage.

The government news agency Orbe said 10 people were injured in the crash, including a flight attendant who required emergency surgery.

Airline officials said Ronald Josey, an employee of Peoria, Ill.-based Caterpillar Inc., was killed. His age and hometown were not released.

Gil Nolde, a spokesman for the equipment company, said by telephone late Tuesday from Peoria that he did not recognize Josey's name.

There was no telephone listing for a Ronald Josey in Peoria or nearby cities.

"The plane broke in half, right at the section where I was," said Sergio Stoppel, a doctor on board. "The roof fell in and several things, including chairs, went flying."

"Smoke broke out in the rear section. We unlatched our seatbelts to get out the front door, which was stuck. By the time we got it open the plane was starting to burn," Stoppel said.

"If I didn't die tonight, I'm going to live to an old age."

Flight 052 originated in Santiago and stopped in Antofagasta, Chile before flying to Calama, in the heart of Chile's copper mining district in the Atacama desert.

Earlier, Orbe quoted national police as saying two people — a U.S. citizen and a flight attendant — were killed.

The jet was carrying 27 passengers and a crew of six when it descended to land at about 6:20 p.m. in Calama.

Protest in silence

Soviet Union, Iran announce large-scale economic projects

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union and Iran have agreed to cooperate in large-scale economic projects and have condemned "dangerous actions" by the United States in the Persian Gulf, Pravda said today.

The Communist Party daily said Soviet First Deputy Foreign Minister Yuli M. Vorontsov held talks with top Iranian officials, including President Ali Khamenei, during a trip to Tehran that ended Tuesday.

Vorontsov is on a three-nation tour of the Middle East and Persian Gulf region that Soviet media say is aimed at helping negotiate an end to the nearly 7-year-old war between Iran and Iraq. Vorontsov has already visited Iraq and Syria.

Pravda published a dispatch from the official Tass news agency that said the Soviet Union and Iran "declared for the implementation of large-scale projects of mutually beneficial economic cooperation." The report gave no specifics.

Both sides expressed interest in further developing political contacts, the report said, without providing any details.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, reported that Vorontsov said the Soviet Union was willing to consider cooperation on long-term projects in the fields of energy and industry, including steel production.

The agency, monitored in Cyprus, said Vorontsov said he expected Iranian representatives to visit Moscow for talks on the projects. It gave no details.

The Soviet report said that during discussions on the situation in the Persian Gulf, the Soviets and Iranians expressed "mutual concern over U.S. dangerous actions and over the unprecedented buildup of the U.S. military presence in the area."

The Reagan administration has agreed to reflag Kuwaiti tankers and provide them with U.S. Navy protection to defend them from Iranian attacks. Tehran accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq in the war.

The Soviet Union has called for the removal of all foreign naval forces from the strategic waterway. The report published by Pravda said Iran supported the Kremlin stance on "withdrawal of all naval ships of non-gulf countries from the gulf as soon as possible."

Toss cooked spaghetti with fresh vegetables, salami, olives, salad dressing and parmesan cheese for a super supper salad.

Salads can be entrees

The summer salad cook has a bounty of fresh produce at his or her fingertips, from an array of greens to colorful fresh fruits and vegetables. Combined with pasta or rice and a creamy salad dressing, they are perfect for quick, cooling summer main dishes.

But a salad is only as good as its dressing — one that enhances the flavors of the other ingredients in the salad bowl.

These two entree salads have completely different characters, yet they count on tangy mayonnaise-type white salad dressing for their special flavor flair.

For Summertime Pasta Salad, made with cooked spaghetti, fresh vegetables, salami and olives, white salad dressing is blended with milk, grated Parmesan cheese and parsley. After the salad has been chilled, additional salad dressing may be added to taste before serving. To complete the menu, serve with warmed bread and melon wedges with fresh lime for dessert.

The salad dressing takes on an Oriental flavor with the addition of chopped green onion, soy sauce and ginger in this recipe for Oriental Chicken Salad. The special dressing is then blended with cooked chicken and rice plus crisp pea pods and fresh peach and plum slices. Chill the salad, then serve on lettuce-lined plates with breadsticks or rolls. For a frosted look, chill the salad plates.

Chocolate, raspberries take the cake in recipe contest grand prize winner

Sinfully delicious Chocolate Raspberry Truffle Cheesecake clinched the $5,000 grand prize in the "Philly" Cheesecake Lovers Recipe Contest. Winning the judges' unanimous approval over thousands of other entries, this luscious combination of chocolate and raspberry exemplifies today's creative cooking talents. Mary King, a homemaker from Concordia, Kan., is the proud winner.

A slice of the best-of-contest winner reveals a creamy vanilla filling studded with dark chocolate raspberry truffles. Easy to prepare, the truffle mixture is a simple combination of chocolate, raspberry preserves and cream cheese. The chocolate cookie crumb crust, rich chocolate glaze and fresh raspberry garnish add the finishing touches to this $5,000 dessert spectacular.

The Cheesecake Lovers Recipe Contest showcased America's love of cheesecake and creative flair for preparing desserts. Many entries incorporated interesting "spirits," from peach and apple schnapps to cappuccino and praline liqueurs. For added texture and flavor, nuts of all manner were added to fillings, toppings and crusts.

Many contestants creatively used gingersnaps, coconut macaroons and even fortune cookies and pretzels to add new dimension to crusts. Entries revealed that chocolate and fresh fruits remain all-time favorite additions to fillings, toppings and garnishes.

CHOCOLATE RASPBERRY TRUFFLE CHEESECAKE

Pampans' bookmarks to be distributed throughout area

Brock Lowrance and Shawn Dawes, both Pampa 8-year-olds, have designed bookmarks that will be distributed to public libraries in the top 26 counties of Texas.

The two participated in a bookmark drawing contest held during Lovett Memorial Library's summer reading program.

Their bookmarks were chosen for printing in Amarillo from about 30 entries in the contest, and they each also received five free passes to the city pool.

The bookmark contest, sponsored by Texas Panhandle Library System, was an optional activity for those participating in the summer reading program.

Theme of this summer's reading program was "Animal Antics," and each of the bookmark entries had to include those words in the design.

Each library in the system will receive an assortment of bookmarks that includes two designs from each summer program in the Texas Panhandle Library System, according to Lori Nock, assistant librarian.

This year's summer reading program drew 535 participants, "one of the most successful we've had," said Dan Snider, library director. Ages 3 through high school could participate in the program, and those attending represented ages 3 through eighth grade.

Reading logs were turned in by 215 participants. Each youth enrolled in the program kept a log of the books they read, and those reading 10 or more were eligible to turn in their logs and receive a certificate from the Texas State Library, which sponsors the summer program each year.

Prizes were awarded according to number of books read. A free hamburger at a local restaurant was awarded to each 10-book reader; hamburger and fries, 15 books; two free passes to the city pool, 20 books; buttons, book bags and pool passes, 25-40 books. Those reading 50 books received a poster.

About 400 pool passes were given out, Nock said.

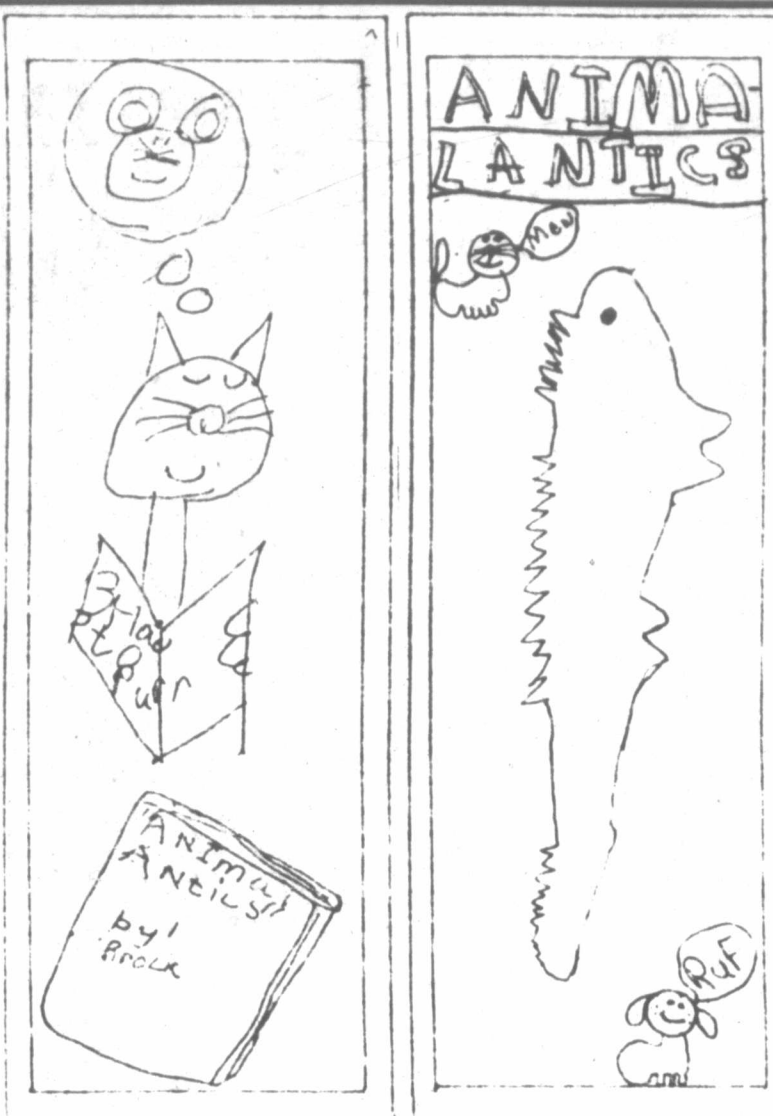

Special activities during the six-week program, which ran through June and the first two weeks of July, included McGruff the Crime Dog; Sandy Burns, head of Pampa Animal Control; an arts and crafts program, and two movies.

Dr. Ron Easley, Pampa veterinarian, gave a program on pets, and children were allowed to bring their pets to the program. Each pet received an award.

"We had horned toads, kittens, dogs, gerbils and guinea pigs," Snider said.

Each school in the Pampa Independent School District will receive a list of the names of their students who completed the program, Nock said.

Those who were unable to attend the end-of-the-program party may still pick up their certificates at the library, Nock said.

Pampa 8-year-olds Brock Lowrance and Shawn Dawes designed the winning bookmarks in this summer's reading program at Lovett Memorial Library. At left is Brock's design, with Shawn's at right.

Linda Granillo, 9, of Pampa shows her certificate of participation to friends at Lovett Memorial Library's summer reading program party recently. Linda was one of 535 participants and one of 215 who earned certificates by reading 10 or more books during the six-week program. She is the daughter of Rose and Hector Granillo.

Peachy deal turns rotten for orchard sellers

DEAR ABBY: Our problem is failure. Now, in our late 60s, my husband and I have lost all of our savings in an effort to do more for our children, especially our 40-year-old son who talked us into mortgaging our farm and going into debt to purchase a nearby peach orchard in Georgia.

We desperately need to sell our peach orchard. There are so many people with so much money now; surely the prospect of expenses deductible from income tax should appeal to them. And the expense of operating a peach orchard is considerable, and it's deductible.

Abby, can you help us find a buyer?

NEEDS A BUYER

P.S. Our son is tall, blond, handsome and unmarried. Many girls have tried to land him. My only other hope is that some wealthy girl who loves horses as we all do will show up.

DEAR NEEDS: I urge you to advertise in your newspaper and contact an agent whose business it is to sell such properties. If that doesn't bear fruit, forget the orchard and advertise your son. (Only kidding.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a real couch potato. Now, don't get me wrong, I like TV as much as the next person, but here's my problem: He stays up until all hours watching old movies and reruns and then comes to bed late. It's not that he ignores me or is trying to avoid sex — it's just the opposite. He wakes me up at 2 or 3 a.m. wanting to be romantic.

I have asked him to come to bed first, then watch TV afterward, but he says it takes away all the spontaneity. But, Abby, once I go to sleep I would like to stay asleep.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

What do you think?
MRS. COUCH POTATO,
GLENDALE HEIGHTS, ILL.

DEAR MRS. POTATO: Forget spontaneity and plan ahead. Talk this out together while you're both wide awake.

DEAR ABBY: This October, my husband and I will have been married for five years, and I have never sent thank-you notes to relatives and friends who gave us wedding gifts. Needless to say, I feel terribly guilty about this.

Is there a way I can now, at this late date, send the thank-yous along with an apology? I guess what I'm hoping for is a "magic phrase" that I can incorporate into the "thank-you" note which will enable them to forgive me, and, I hope, to understand that I not only want to thank them, but also want to correct this seemingly rude omission.

Thank you in advance, Abby!

C.H.M. IN BRAINTREE, MASS.

DEAR C.H.M.: The "magic phrase" is: "We are profoundly embarrassed to be writing at this very late date to thank you for the beautiful ice bucket you gave us when we were married."

"Please forgive us for what must seem an inexcusably tardy acknowledgment. Believe us to be terribly ashamed. However, the pleasure we have received from that wonderful ice bucket would warm your heart" etc.

I hope you have kept a list of what each giver gave because if you can make an identifying comment about the gift, you may be more readily forgiven. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I'm having a bridal shower for my daughter who is getting married. Must I invite all the people I am having at the shower to the wedding, too? My sister says that everyone coming to the shower must be invited to the wedding, too. I say, "Not so!" What do you say?

THE BRIDE'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: It's true. Score: sister, 1; you, 0.

And by the way, Mother, bridal showers should not be given by close family members. Friends, aunts, cousins, sisters, Mothers, no!

DEAR ABBY: I'm having a bridal

Library to return genealogy books downstairs

Lovett Memorial Library will once again house its collection of genealogical books, owned by Pampa Genealogical Society, in the library's Texas Room on the main floor.

The books had been moved upstairs "a couple of months ago" to make room in the Texas Room for other collections, said library director Dan Snider.

"My original idea was to set up a genealogical room upstairs. It'd be quiet and out of the way, where they could do their work. But a lady mentioned that (many of) those who use these records are elderly and have trouble climbing stairs," Snider said.

A collection of art books will be moved to the arts and crafts room in order to make space available for the genealogical books.

"We will move the art books as soon as we get new shelving put up in the arts room. I'll try to get the genealogical books moved this week and then do the other shifting around later," Snider said.

There are between 30 and 40 books in the genealogical collection, which is on loan to the library by the Pampa Genealogical Society. The society retained ownership of the books when they were placed in the library, Snider said.

"We told people we'd be glad to go up and get them for them," Snider said of those asking for the books after they were moved upstairs.

But when the books are back in the Texas Room, genealogical patrons won't have to make that request again.

Spicy squash side dish cooks in microwave oven

By NANCY BYAL

There's plenty of kick to this squash side dish, thanks to cumin and chili peppers.

MICROWAVE ACORN SQUASH

- 1 medium-large acorn squash (1 1/4 to 1 1/2 pounds)
- 1/4 cup sliced celery
- 1/4 cup chopped onion
- 2 of a 4-ounce can diced green chili peppers
- 1 tablespoon margarine or butter
- 1 teaspoon cumin seed, ground, or ground cumin
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 cup loose-pack frozen corn
- 1 tablespoon sunflower nuts

Prick squash in several places with a long-tined fork. Place squash in a microwave-safe 12x7 1/2 x 2-inch baking dish. Microwave, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) 6 to 8 minutes or until squash is tender when pricked through the shell with a fork, rearranging after half the cooking time. Let stand 5 minutes. Cut in half lengthwise; remove seeds. Scoop out cooked squash pulp, leaving a 1/4- to 1/2-inch shell. Place squash pulp in a medium mixing bowl; set aside.

Meanwhile in a microwave-safe 1-quart casserole cook celery, onion, chili peppers, margarine, cumin, garlic salt and pepper, covered, on high 2 to 3 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Mash reserved squash pulp. Stir in celery mixture, corn and sunflower nuts. Spoon mixture into shells. Return to 12x7 1/2 x 2-inch baking dish. Cook, uncovered, on high 4 to 6 minutes or until heated through. Makes 2 servings.

Cardinals' lead slips in NL East

By The Associated Press

It's do or die time for Tim Lincecum and the Montreal Expos, and both came out alive and kicking against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Raines singled to spark a four-run fifth inning and hit a two-run homer in the sixth as Montreal rallied from a five-run deficit to beat St. Louis 10-5 at Olympic Stadium Tuesday night.

The loss reduced the Cardinals' lead to 5½ games over second-place New York in the National League East. The Expos are third, six games back.

"It was a very important game for us because we would have been eight games out if we lost," Raines said. "And it would have left us with no chance to win this series, which we felt we had to."

The Montreal bullpen turned in an excellent performance with Bob McClure, 5-1, pitching three innings of one-hit ball and Jeff Parrett tossing four perfect innings for his fourth save.

Elsewhere, New York beat Philadelphia 5-3, Chicago edged Pittsburgh 3-2 in 11 innings, Cincinnati pounded Los Angeles 10-4, Houston defeated San Francisco 5-4, and Atlanta outlasted San Diego 12-7.

The Expos, who snapped a three-game losing streak, were trailing 5-2 when Raines opened the fifth with a single. Mitch Webster and Hubie Brooks walked to load the bases and Tim Wallach drove in Raines with an infield out.

Andres Galarraga singled in Webster and Vance Law drove home Brooks with a base hit off starter Lee Tunnell, 4-3. Galarraga also scored on the play as third baseman Terry Pendleton made a wild throw trying to get Law going into second.

The Expos added three runs in the sixth, two on Raines' 11th home run and one on Law's sacrifice fly.

Cardinals' Tommy Herr stops a foul ball with his knee.

Dwight Gooden pitched six-hit ball for eight innings and struck out a season-high 11 as New York defeated visiting Philadelphia for the ninth time in 11 games this season.

It was the Mets' seventh victory in their last eight games and the Phillies' fourth straight loss.

Gooden, 9-3, walked three and the strikeouts marked the 33rd time he has been in double figures in his career, but only the second time in 13 starts this year.

Howard Johnson hit a two-run double in the eighth to give the Mets a 5-1 lead.

Cubs 3, Pirates 2

Andre Dawson hit his 32nd home run of the season in the 11th inning to lift Chicago over host Pittsburgh. It was only the third victory in 11 games for the Cubs against the last-place Pirates.

Dawson's homer equaled his career high set in 1983 with Montreal. Leading off the 11th, he hit an 0-1 pitch from reliever Brett Gideon, 1-2, deep into the lower right-field seats.

Mike Mason, called up earlier in the day from Class AAA Iowa, pitched two scoreless innings for the victory to improve to 3-1.

Reds 10, Dodgers 4

Bo Diaz continued his hot hitting against Los Angeles, driving in four runs with a pair of homers to pace Cincinnati.

Diaz hit a solo homer in the second inning off Tim Lincecum and a three-run homer in the fifth off Rick Honeycutt to help left-hander Guy Hoffman, 8-6, secure his first victory since July 3. Hoffman had lost his four previous decisions and was 1-5 in his last eight starts.

Diaz is hitting .429 with four homers and 11 doubles against the Dodgers this season.

Astros 5, Giants 4

Glenn Davis' two-out infield single in the eighth inning scored pinch-runner Buddy Biancalana as Houston defeated visiting San Francisco for its third straight victory.

With Biancalana at third and Alan Ashby at first and the score tied 4-4, Davis hit a grounder that was fielded behind second base by Robbie Thompson. Thompson's throw to

Pampa Bambinos defeat Oklahoma

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

PLAINVIEW — After dropping the opener in the Southwest Regionals, the Pampa National League All-Stars are coming back like a championship team.

And that championship game is in sight.

Jeff Tidwell stroked two home runs and combined with Tarin Peet to limit Broken Bow, Okla. to just three hits for a 6-2 win in the Bambino Tournament Tuesday night. The victory also avenged Pampa's 12-2 loss to the Oklahoma squad in the the tournament's opening game.

Pampa plays either Arkansas or Louisiana at 7:30 p.m. tonight. Pampa has now won two of three games, defeating Plainview 6-5 Monday night in the first game of the loser's bracket. A win tonight would put Pampa into the championship round at 5 p.m. Thursday. A victory there would put Pampa into the finals at 7:30 p.m. with the winner advancing to the Bambino World Series in Oakland, Calif. Aug. 15-22.

Besides Tidwell's two solo clouts, Dennis Graham added a two-run homer to Pampa's seven-hit attack against the Sooners. Graham's homer broke a 2-all tie in the second inning and Pampa was never threatened again as Peet and Tidwell combined to pitch four consecutive scoreless innings. Peet started and went three innings, allowing two hits while striking out three and walking one to notch the victory. Tidwell allowed just one hit over the final three innings to pick up the save. He struck out four and walked one.

Tidwell posed such a dangerous threat at the plate that he was given an intentional walk in the fifth inning with two outs and a runner on base. Pampa still got the run across, however, on Peet's infield single.

Pampa wasted little time in scoring. With two runners on in the first inning, Kurt West hit into a double play, but Will Winborne was able to slip around and score. Tidwell then unloaded the first of his two homers over the left field fence.

Broken Bow knotted the score at 2-all in the second inning on an RBI double by Bryan Williams and a run-scoring single by Ryan Ward.

With one out in the bottom of the second, Bryan Sims reached first on an infield single and Graham brought them both home when he golfed Jay Stow's pitch over the left field fence.

Tidwell struck again in the third inning with a shot that hit the light pole in center field, making the score 5-2.

Indianapolis more than just a motor oil city

IT USED TO BE a one-month city. Despite being the state capitol (second largest in the country to Boston) you never heard much about it. Oh, if you were a literature scholar you might go by and see John Whitcomb Riley's home. It's World War Memorial Plaza, Soldier's and Sailor's Monument coupled with the American Legion National Headquarters drew attention of some ex-military. Historians might want to stop at President Harrison's memorial home.

It is about an hour's drive to the state university at Bloomington; 45 minutes north to the second largest school, Purdue; and an hour westward to the school Larry Bird put on the national map, Indiana State. Only little old Butler U. (4,000 enrollment) has it's 246-acre campus in Indianapolis, Indiana, the city once heard of only each May.

That was, of course, due to the Indy 500. Time trials each May weekend culminated with the annual Memorial Day event which attracted 300,000 each May 30. The city recognized the event with a downtown street designed like a black-and-white checkered victory flag. But now the city can't really boast of being the '500 City', since the race takes place at Speedway, a suburb about six miles from the capitol, and boasting its own post office.

The reason Indianapolis went unrecognized for so long is because it is the nation's largest city not on navigable water. Once a strong, functioning agricultural and industrial center, many of those businesses moved to where cheaper water transportation was available, leaving the capitol city high and dry, so to speak.

But over the past 20 years, some things began to happen, initiated by an energetic and battling chamber of commerce and city government. If a car race could attract that many folks for one week (plus another 100-150,000 each time trial weekend) what could other sporting events do for this city in the midst of a huge population center? Coming into town on I-70 the signs start to tell you what has happened. "Market Square 5 miles". "Market Square one mile". "Market Square next exit" you read. That's the home of the Indiana Pacers, the pro basketball team they moved into town for the 1976-77 season. Then they rented a U-Haul, backed it up to a dressing room door in Baltimore, and before the Marylanders knew what hit them, their beloved Colts were Hoosier States. The same group of enthusiasts has been courting major league baseball for several years, and the once American Association stronghold will one day find itself battling Cincinnati, less than two hours away and Cleveland, just a hop, skip and a jump to the shores of Lake Erie.

Sports Forum

By Warren Hasse

The city raiders continued. They stole Kiwanis International Headquarters from Chicago, along with many industrial top offices and turned the city into a form of corporate raider. Under two Republican mayors, now U.S. Sen. Richard Lugar and William Hudnut, serving his third term, more than $2 billion has been invested by private firms in dozens of hotels, office buildings and retail complexes. The city backed that effort with construction of world class sports facilities, valued at an estimated $136 million. Included are a natatorium for swimming, a velodrome for cycling and as a result a half-dozen amateur sports federations — including those supervising gymnastics, diving and rowing — have shifted world or national headquarters to the city.

And this weekend, as the result of that relentless civic spirit, the Pan-American Games will be played in the United States for the first time since Chicago in 1959, the only other time in the USA. Some area folks can remember that one well, being members of the Gold Medal winning women's basketball team. Coached by Harley Redin of Wayland Baptist, some of the team members were Thelma Gay Ivey of Clarendon JC; Joyce Kite, Carla Lowry, Carolyn Miller, Patsy Neal, Marsha Scoggin and June Stewart of Wayland; and Evelyn Searles, who played for Amarillo restaurateur Bob Dowell's AAU Dolls team.

A half-million spectators are estimated for the 16-day event, serving 6,500 participants at a cost of $35 million. Total revenues are expected to hit $175 million (gate receipts, TV rights). And it will take 30,000 of the city's 700,000 population, dedicated volunteers all, to pull it off in world-class style. Meanwhile, only 140 miles away, the International Special Olympics is nearing conclusion of a nine-day run at South Bend and Notre Dame, producing another $25 million in revenue from 200,000 spectators.

Indianapolis has diversified its sports activity over the past decade, resulting in a gain of 6,100 new businesses and 89,400 jobs, according to Chamber of Commerce officials. It all started with an auto race in May. Energized by sports enthusiasm, dedicated and willing workers, and total community support, "Indiana-place" will be known world-wide, and favorably we're sure, when the Games conclude late this month.

Just another American success story. It could happen here.

Rohrer finally signs

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP)—Linebacker Jeff Rohrer, who missed five days of training camp and was fined $5,000, has a new two-year agreement with the Dallas Cowboys.

"I'm very happy and I just wish it hadn't come down to all the name-calling," Rohrer, the second leading tackler on the NFL team in 1986, said Tuesday.

The six-year veteran left camp last Thursday when he found out his $192,000 salary for his option year was less than the money made by Dallas' other starting linebackers, Eugene Lockhart and Mike Hegman.

He signed for $220,000 this year and $240,000 next year.

"We both have a deal we can live with," Rohrer said. "I wanted to be here and I wanted to play. I'm ready to hit somebody. We took the bull by the horns, cut out all the stuff, and did the deal."

With a scrimmage set for today against the San Diego Chargers, Rohrer said he was so pumped up he was "sleeping with my uniform on."

After Rohrer reported on Thursday, he was notified he was subject to the "Riggins rule."

It's a rule for players who report to camp and leave. A player who stays away from camp five days after he first reports is subject to being placed on a reserve roster where he can't go to any other team in the NFL.

"It was sort of a do or die situation tonight for me and the Cowboys," Rohrer said. "I wanted to play for the Cowboys. They could have waived me. I'm glad it worked out. We were mired down in a lot of nonsense."

Rohrer had a two-hour negotiation with vice president Joe Bailey of the Cowboys after talking to Coach Tom Landry.

"I owe Coach Landry a lot and I want to repay him someday," Rohrer said. "I'll have to pay the $5,000 fine but I'm willing to do that."

Bailey said "We're very pleased that Jeff is back and has agreed to a new contract. It's not our policy to announce the particulars of a package." Bailey added "that just leaves first round pick Danny Noonan of Nebraska out now. I see the ice beginning to thaw a little. I hope something breaks in short order."

Rohrer's 1986 season was his best as right outside linebacker for the Cowboys.

"Jeff is a smart, steady player and could have his best season. He has some catching up to do but he can do it," Landry said.

Rohrer, who went to Yale, did his own negotiating.

"I just wish it hadn't come to all this miscommunication," Rohrer said. "It's over now and it will be awhile before I have to do it again."

He is something of a free spirit. Last year he bet he could wear an earring for a month without Landry saying anything.

Landry never said a word about the earring and Rohrer won the bet.

Rohrer's 111 tackles were second to 121 by Lockhart. Rohrer also had two quarterback traps, forced four fumbles, and recovered one.

Rohrer signs autograph before reporting to camp. (AP Laserphoto)

Alford looks forward to being a Maverick

DALLAS (AP) — Indiana's Steve Alford says that he's looking forward to playing for Dallas Mavericks Coach John MacLeod after spending four years under the volatile Bobby Knight.

"With all the negative vibes under Coach Knight, it'll be a great transition to Coach MacLeod's positive program," said Alford, a two-time All-American who led the Hoosiers to the NCAA crown last spring.

Alford came to Dallas Tuesday for the first time since being chosen by the Mavericks as the 26th pick in the NBA draft.

"He's from Indiana, so I know he's a great individual," MacLeod said.

The 6-foot-2-inch guard said he has gained almost 10 pounds and lifted weights to make the transition to the professional ranks.

"I've got to work hard," Alford said. "Nothing would please me more than to make this my home."

Alford — accompanied by his wife, Tanya, whom he married July 11 — said he was glad Dallas had drafted him after being bypassed by the Indiana Pacers in the first round because they felt he was too slow and too short to be taken as the 11th overall pick.

"It's just a great break for me," he said. "This is a super organization. They know how to win. Top to bottom, all the people I've met here have been great."

They've given us a warm Texas welcome."

Alford has been busy with basketball camps and producing a training video since graduation from college. And he's getting ready for cow-milking duties as part of his new contract representing the Indiana Dairy Council.

Alford averaged 22 points a game last season as the Big Ten's most valuable player and won Indiana's MVP award four times.

"He's gotten more out of his abilities as anybody I've seen play college basketball," said Knight.

But like nearly all Hoosiers who successfully complete Knight's strict regimen, Alford values the experience.

"It's a great edge," he said. "No one else you could play for in college could give you that."

Asked about the role as a point guard he'll likely be called on to fill if he makes the Dallas team, Alford said he wasn't really a shooting guard at Indiana.

"Coach Knight doesn't really have that in his offense," he said. "He'd really rather play with five forwards."

"I took the shooting role that Randy Wittman (now with the Atlanta Hawks) had — I was the first 6-2 guy to play it," Alford said. "But I can handle the basketball. I'm excited about getting back to it."

Azinger ready to claim PGA title

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — A trend in golf's major championships over the last 4½ years may bode well for a player like Paul Azinger when the 69th PGA Championship gets underway on Thursday.

Eighteen different players have captured the last 18 majors. Azinger, a positive thinker, says he is ready to make it 19.

Azinger, a winner of three tournaments who sits atop the PGA Tour money list this season, came within an eyelash of being the 18th different major winner three weeks ago.

He carried the lead into the 71st hole of the British Open, but went bogey-bogey on the final two holes to finish in a second-place tie, one shot behind Britain's Nick Faldo.

Azinger said that nightmarish experience doesn't bother him at all.

"It feels like a long time ago to me," he said on Tuesday. "I thought about that golf tournament for two nights — the night of and the night after. It's not something that's obsessed me in any way." There is no clear-cut favorite in the field of 150 that will tackle the PGA National Golf Club course, a 7,002-yard layout.

Greg Norman, Tom Watson and Masters champion Larry Mize said the players could have difficulty putting all week. The greens lack a full cover of grass because of a recent problem with a fungus, making the speed of the greens inconsistent.

"I'm glad they're complaining about it," Azinger said. "It's a typical Florida golf course, like the ones I was raised on. I'll probably be more likely to cope with them than those guys from up north."

All of the players know the heat will be a problem — temperatures in the mid 90s with humidity to match, and the ever-present threat of afternoon thunder showers.

Because of Florida's history of afternoon showers, threesomes will go off from both the first and 10th tees during the first two rounds.

The tournament purse will be at least $800,000, with $140,000 going to the winner.

Espinoza receives sanction

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — World Boxing Association junior-featherweight champion Louie Espinoza of Phoenix said Tuesday that he has received sanction from the WBA to fight Mike Ayala on Aug. 15 in Ayala's hometown of San Antonio, Texas.

The sanction, issued by WBA ratings committee president Alberto Sarmiento in Caracas, Venezuela, also includes a No. 8 ranking for Ayala, who was unranked by the WBA despite scoring knockouts in each of his last three fights.

Ayala, 29, has a 44-4 record and is the former North American Boxing Federation champion at 122 pounds. Espinoza, 25, is 24-1 with 18 knockouts.

Espinoza won the vacant WBA title and became the state of Arizona's first native boxing champion here Jan. 16 with a fourth-round technical knockout of Tommy Valoy of the Dominican Republic and successfully defended it for the first time here July 15 with a 15th-round TKO of Venezuela's Manuel Vilchez.

On the same card that night at the Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum, Ayala posted a first-round knockout of Mexico's Gattito Juarez.

Paul Percifield, Espinoza's manager, said his fighter will be guaranteed at least $35,000 for the bout and a chance to earn as much as $70,000 with half of the net proceeds from live gate and cable television revenues.

Iran wanted to seize power, Saudis say

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP)— Saudi officials say thousands of Iranians in Mecca for the annual Muslim pilgrimage planned to seize the Grand Mosque and force pilgrims to proclaim Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini their religious leader.

The first plane load of Iranian pilgrims wounded in Friday's clashes in the holy city landed in Iran's capital of Tehran today, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said. The pilgrims reiterated Iranian officials' claims that Saudi authorities were to blame for the violence that left hundreds of people dead, according to the agency, which was monitored in Cyprus.

The plane also bore the bodies of 58 victims. According to officials in Mecca, who spoke on condition of anonymity, Iranians interrogated by authorities confessed they planned to take over the Grand Mosque in Mecca, where 2.1 million Muslims from 123 countries gathered for the annual hajj, or pilgrimage.

An estimated 157,000 Iranians were among those making this year's sojourn, which is required at least once of Muslims who can afford it.

The Iranians planned to lock pilgrims inside the huge mosque and force them to declare Khomeini, Iran's revolutionary patriarch, the religious leader of the world's 850 million Muslims, the officials said.

If the trapped pilgrims resisted, the plan called for killing the mosque's prayer leader and setting fire to parts of the building, the officials said.

Nearly all Iranian Muslims are Shiites, a minority sect at odds for 1,300 years with the Sunni sect that includes the Saudi royal family and 85 percent of the world's Muslims. Khomeini has said the Saudi rulers are unfit to be custodians of Islam's holy sites.

In Tehran, the 35 returning pilgrims were greeted by Iranian Prime Minister Hussein Musavi, who praised their spirit of resistance and repeated allegations that the deaths were planned by the Saudis as agents of their United States advisors, IRNA said.

(AP Laserphoto)

Musavi, left, kneels next to caskets of pilgrims killed last week in Mecca.

The plane carrying the pilgrims landed in Tehran at 2:30 a.m. (10 p.m. CDT Tuesday), IRNA said.

Saudi authorities had been delaying the plane's departure from Jidda, 45 miles outside Mecca. Arab diplomats had said Tuesday they might hold the plane until four Saudi diplomats were allowed to leave Tehran.

IRNA quoted one pilgrim, Seyyed Rahim Dezfili, as saying that women pilgrims were the main target of Saudi police.

Without giving direct quotes, IRNA said Dezfili recounted that "pilgrims were subjected to a barrage of stones from nearby buildings and were also shot in the streets below, and when ambulances of the Iranian Red Crescent Society approached the scene, the Saudis riddled them with bullets as well."

The pilgrims' accounts contradicted Saudi claims that no shots were fired. Saudi officials said the violence grew out of an anti-American demonstration by the Iranians and that 402 people, including 275 Iranians, were killed.

When news of the Mecca violence broke in Tehran on Saturday, angry mobs attacked the Saudi Arabian Embassy and captured four diplomats. Saudi officials said Tuesday that one diplomat was still being held and they were seeking permission for all four to leave Tehran.

IRS promises not to grab kids' savings anymore

WASHINGTON (AP)— A red-faced Internal Revenue Service is taking steps to ensure that it never again grabs a child's savings to pay a parent's overdue taxes.

"We don't take money from people who don't owe us money," IRS Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs said Tuesday in outlining new procedures for seizing bank accounts to settle a tax debt.

Furthermore, Gibbs said, if any person can show us where we have taken an account that does not belong to a taxpayer who owes us money, we will move quickly to give it back.

The new safeguards are part of Gibbs' campaign for "trying to treat taxpayers like customers," an effort to rid the IRS of what some lawmakers have called a bully image.

Gibbs acknowledged in an interview that even his friends have pressed him to explain how the IRS could seize a child's savings to pay a bill the child did not owe. Several such cases have been publicized over the last few months.

"This is a situation in which we have been as frustrated as the taxpayers have," he said. "Some of the stories (about such seizures) indicate we are a large, uncaring, insensitive agency but, believe it or not... we haven't done this intentionally."

The IRS will continue searching for a permanent solution to the problem of seizing the wrong accounts, Gibbs said. In the meantime, the agency says:

■ It will not ask financial institutions to seize any account with a balance of less than $100.

■ Banks will be asked to freeze temporarily, rather than seize, any account that bears a name in addition to that of the delinquent taxpayer. The IRS then will try to determine the real owner; unless the bank receives directions to the contrary within 21 days, the account will be freed.

Under the old procedures, the IRS simply told a bank it was attaching the rights to an account bearing the name or Social Security number of a delinquent taxpayer. A child's account could be seized if it carried the Social Security number of a parent. "When parents or grandparents put their Social Security number on a child's account, we and the bank have no way of knowing it until the money is taken," Gibbs explained.

That happened last month to 12-year-old Garry D. Keffer of Chesapeake, Va. He had the foresight to take his complaint straight to the top — President Reagan — and to give his hometown newspaper a copy of the letter he wrote the president. Garry is getting his $10.35 back from the IRS.

Gibbs noted the new tax overhaul requires any child over the age of 4 who can be claimed as a dependent by a parent to have a Social Security number by next April 15. The commissioner recommended that parents wait no longer to get numbers for their children.

In a related announcement, the IRS reminded children who have summer jobs or other part-time jobs that in most cases, their wages are no longer exempt from withholding.

Names in the News

Selleck

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Even though Tom Selleck's character apparently died in last season's finale of Magnum, P.I., the actor is returning for an eighth TV season as the laid-back private eye.

"We keep saying to ourselves, we've got this little catch phrase, 'no showers, no dreams.' We haven't painted ourselves into a corner. I will say the story continues where it left off," he said Tuesday.

Selleck was referring to last year's shower scene in a Dallas season premier that allowed Patrick Duffy to come back after his character died with the explanation that "it was all a dream."

Last season's final episode of the Hawaii-based action series ended with Magnum, who had been shot, walking off into the heavens. Selleck would say only that Magnum had an "out of body" experience and was dying, not dead.

"You won't feel manipulated when you see it, I hope," he said.

Selleck said he agreed to another season for the rest of the cast and crew, but his one-year deal allows him to opt out mid-season. Therefore, there could be as few as 13 Magnum episodes this season, or as many as 22, he said.

Selleck said Magnum might return in TV movies.

LOS ANGELES (AP)— British actress Emily Lloyd, who plays a repressed, 1950s teen-ager in the movie Wish You Were Here, says she's fallen in love with the United States and would rather be an American.

"I'm really unhappy in England," she said. "I wish I could go to high school here and be a true USA kid."

The 16-year-old actress, critically acclaimed in her first movie role, said in a recent interview that she fell in love with the United States while visiting San Francisco a year ago.

Reflecting on the status of teen-agers in England today, she said, "I think there's a lot more freedom than in the '50s, but I think people's attitudes are bad. If the young speak up, they're completely put down."

Miss Lloyd returns to England in September to make another movie and hopes to return to the United States in December.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)— Ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov, hobbled by an ankle injury, has canceled part of a tour across the South.

Baryshnikov was scheduled to dance here Thursday in a benefit for the Big Bend Hospice. The tickets, which sold for $50, $100 and $200 each, will be refunded, said benefit chairman Marcia Elder.

"He felt badly about it," she said. "He expressed his sincere regrets."

Baryshnikov hurt his ankle during a performance in Atlanta last week. He re-injured it at a Sunday night performance in Jacksonville, and his doctor ordered the dancer to stay off his feet for seven to 10 days, Elder said.

Baryshnikov, who dances with the American Ballet Theater, also had to cancel dates at Birmingham, Ala., and Pensacola, Elder said.

LOS ANGELES (AP)— The producers of Valerie say they're "thrilled and delighted" to have actress Valerie Harper back following her salary dispute that caused her to miss an episode of the NBC sitcom.

Harper and her husband, co-executive producer Tony Cacciotti, refused to report for work on Monday, July 27, in a demand for a higher salary, said a Lorimar-Telepictures spokeswoman.

Lorimar and NBC declined to meet her demand and the show was filmed without her. Lorimar also filed a lawsuit against her, seeking to prevent her from working elsewhere during the remaining four years of her six-year contract.

Lorimar spokeswoman Barbara Brogliatti said she could not comment on the settlement.

There was no comment on Harper's present salary or how much she was asking, but Lorimar spokesman Barry Staggs said she is "one of the highest-paid performers in television," suggesting a salary in excess of $100,000 a week.

Bar codes speed up border crossings

WASHINGTON (AP)— The U.S. Customs Service is allowing maquiladora plants in Mexico to use a bar-code similar to that found on grocery items to identify cargo bound for the United States in an effort to speed border crossings.

"Certain companies we approve — we'll allow them to identify the items they bring across with bar codes," said Customs spokesman Dennis Murphy. "This system is used extensively on the northern border."

Murphy said Tuesday that special accommodations are being made on the border for the maquiladora plants because they are more tightly controlled environments that are less likely to be used by drug traffickers for smuggling. Maquiladoras manufacture goods with parts made in the United States and are permitted to ship the finished products back into the U.S. duty free.

The maquiladora program has created 250,000 jobs in Mexico, 150,000 jobs in Texas and 1 million across the United States, according to Murphy.

Future plans call for computerized links between Mexican maquiladoras and U.S. Customs officials so goods can be cleared through border crossings even before the cargo has even left the plant.

Murphy credited Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, for the program, saying the former economics professor "put a lot of heat on the Customs Service to improve the trade situation along the border."

On Tuesday morning, Gramm told members of the Texas Border Trade Alliance, a business and local government group, that they could look for a better flow of traffic across the clogged border.

There are 1,075 more Customs inspectors in the Southwest border region compared with 807 in 1985. Nine of every 10 graduates from the Customs academy are being sent to the U.S.-Mexican border.

Also taking part in discussions about border issues this week were the Mexican Customs Director General Jose Scall Garcia and his operations chief, Alberto Konik Tacher.

Ousted chief seeks sheriff's post

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—Charles Rodriguez, ousted from his job as police chief a year ago on charges of poor management, is thinking about running for the Bexar County Sheriff's post.

"You know, what I miss about the whole thing is the people I met and the tremendous amount of public support outside the Police Department," Rodriguez said. "That was great."

Rodriguez, 55, said if he runs for sheriff he will emphasize he once was chief of the San Antonio Police Department.

Rodriguez declined to name his supporters, but others believe his campaign will be rough.

"Nobody has been doing somersaults to his camp," said one Democratic county official, who asked for anonymity. "There are a lot of people who feel he didn't do a good job over there at the Police Department, that he didn't stand his guts, so how could he be a good politician, because you get bombarded for everything."

Rodriguez was fired last August after he failed to check in from vacation following the fatal shooting of officer Stephen R. Smith by fellow patrolman Farrell Tucker.

After Rodriguez returned from vacation, City Manager Lou Fox, who had selected Rodriguez for the job in 1983, asked for his resignation, culminating a bitter struggle between Rodriguez and city officials.

"Had I known there would be so much resistance when I got offered the job I wouldn't have taken it," Rodriguez told the San Antonio Light.

Although he was fired, Rodriguez stayed in San Antonio because he liked the city.

He now makes his living as a criminal justice instructor at Southwest Texas University in San Marcos and as a consultant to a company wanting to convert empty breweries into private prisons.

The police union was not an admirer of Rodriguez, who was accused of neglecting the department for public appearances to enhance his profile.

Others blamed Rodriguez for not taking a tougher stance on Smith, a suspected vigilante cop who allegedly planned to kill three top law enforcement officials before he was killed by Tucker.

Tucker was acquitted of a murder charge and is back on the force.

New Police Chief William O. Gibson, a former executive officer in Rodriguez's office, has the support of his policemen and city officials.

S&L head active in real estate

DALLAS (AP)—The man in charge of the state agency that regulates savings and loans is a partner in an active real estate firm with the former chairman of failed Vernon Savings Association of Dallas, according to state records.

Financial disclosure statements in Austin showed Texas Savings and Loan Commissioner L. Linton Bowman III is a partner with Patrick King, former chairman of Vernon, in Cottonwood Investments Inc., The Dallas Morning News reported Tuesday.

The Austin-based company developed condominiums and reportedly holds rental units, the newspaper said.

No one answered the telephone in the commissioner's office early Tuesday when calls were made by The Associated Press. On Monday, Bowman's office told The Dallas Morning News the commissioner was in Washington and unable to comment.

Two members of the Texas Finance Commission, which hires and fires the state's S&L and banking commissioners, said they do not believe Bowman's business dealings create a conflict of interest.

The records also show Bowman and his family sold stock he held in First Modern Savings of Greenville, where he was formerly an officer, to another small S&L controlled by Edwin T. McBirney III. McBirney merged the S&L with four others forming Sunbelt Savings Association, one of the most financially troubled thrifts.

"I have been aware of both transactions," said Ralph D. Reed, a commission member and a vice president of Central Texas Savings Association of Marlin. "This has all been public knowledge for years."

Reed said Bowman and his real estate partners attempted to liquidate their holdings to avoid the appearance of a conflict of interest, but the economic downturn made that difficult.

Federal regulators declared Vernon insolvent in March, disclosing that more than 95 percent of the thrift's loans were bad. Subsequently, regulators charged in a federal lawsuit that Vernon chairman King and six other former officers "looted" the S&L to buy a private yacht, a fleet of private aircraft and recreation properties.
