'The Road to Ruin'

The Secretary of the Treasury professes to believe that Governor Roosevelt may be secretly in sympathy with proposals to inflate the currency. In his speeches at Cincinnati and Toledo Mr. Mills has been warning the country that to elect Roosevelt "means" that we shall take "The Road to Ruin". This is a serious charge and calls for careful examination. If it is true, it is conceivably true. Governor Roosevelt deserves to be overwhelmingly defeated. If it is not true, if it is clearly and demonstrably not true, then Mr. Mills is not only unfair to the Governor but he is attacking the national credit for partisan ends.

It is necessary, therefore, to examine in detail the specifications offered by Mr. Mills to show that Mr. Roosevelt has refused to make clear that he is a convinced upholder of an orthodox fiscal policy. They are contained in his Cincinnati speech of October 25.

1. "No one knows whether he (Mr. Roosevelt) approves or disapproves of the measure providing for the issuance of greenbacks which passed the House of Representatives, the Democrats voting 3 to 1 in its favor." This, of course, refers to the Patman bonus bill and on that Mr. Roosevelt said in Pittsburgh on October 19, as he had said in April, that the government could not afford a deficit. This is far from being a wholly satisfactory declaration against the bonus, but it is an absolutely clear repudiation of inflation. A man who will not consider an expenditure, till he has definitely repudiated it, is not likely to be a supporter of the printing press. Mr. Mills' charge on this point is without any foundation whatsoever.

2. "No one knows whether he approves or disapproves of the huge program of uneconomic public works expenditures that would wreck all hope of a balanced budget, which passed the House of Representatives with the Democrats voting 190 to 10 in its favor." Mr. Mills has not read Governor Roosevelt's speech of October 13 on the subject of relief. In that speech he said: "All public works—including Federal—must be considered from the point of view of the ability of the government treasury to pay for them. There are two ways of paying for public works. One is by the sale of bonds. In principle such bonds should be issued only to pay for self-sustaining projects or for structures which will without doubt, have a useful life over a long period of years. The other method of payment is from current revenues, which in these days means in most cases added taxes. And we all know that there is a very definite limit to the increase of taxes over the present level." I do not believe that Mr. Mills himself has ever stated the matter more clearly or more concisely, and with that speech on the record it is not fair to say that Governor Roosevelt's position on public works legislation is unknown.

3. "No one knows whether he approves or disapproves of the measure which instructs the Secretary of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board to manipulate prices." This refers to the Goldborough bill. It is true that Governor Roosevelt has not specifically denounced the measure, but I submit that there is not one particle of evidence indicating his sympathy with it, and there is ample evidence to show that he is proposing to deal with the problem of low prices by a wholly different method than that of the Goldborough bill. The most important evidence of this is in his farm program, which aims to raise prices by a voluntary control of production and an excise tax on the product. I do not say the program is workable, but I do say that it is not even remotely sympathetic with the Goldborough bill.

4. "No one knows whether he approves or disapproves of the Steagall bill to guarantee bank deposits." Mr. Mills has evidently forgotten that the proposal to guarantee bank deposits was proposed by the Democrats in 1912, and that Mr. McAdoo then took the proposal to the floor of the convention, where it was opposed by Senator Glass and voted down. That settled the issue, and I do not see why Governor Roosevelt, who has repeatedly gone out of his way to express his admiration for Senator Glass, should be accused of evading an issue that was specifically and unequivocally rejected by the Democratic convention.

No one knows whether he approves or disapproves of his running the measure to put the Federal government into the commercial banking business." Governor Roosevelt has not approved the measure. Speaker Garner has been silent. The Democratic platform does not approve the measure. Mr. Roosevelt is not Mr. Hoover's man, is he? Take the stump against Mr. Garner and denounce him? He will probably do that the day after Mr. Mills takes the stump and denounces Vice-President Curtis for his views on prohibition. But not sooner, and it is a piece of synthetic naïveté to expect it.

These five points cover all of Mr. Mills' evidence purporting to show that Governor Roosevelt is evasive or secretly in sympathy with a program of inflation. Let us look now at the conclusions that Mr. Mills draws from his evidence: "As sure as the sun will rise tomorrow, some such program will make its appearance in the next Congress, should it be called together in March. . . . If the Democratic candidate for the Presidency doesn't approve of this measure, then he owes it to the country to say so."

It is, as I have shown above, abundantly and specifically clear that Mr. Roosevelt is opposed to a program of inflation. The matter is not open to dispute, and in so far as the attempt is made to convey a contrary impression, it is misrepresentation. But while Mr. Mills' effort to frighten Governor Roosevelt as a potential inflationist is easily disposed of by an examination of the record, he has raised a consideration which is of the utmost interest, and is to my mind at least, the most immediately important issue of the whole campaign.

I agree with Mr. Mills that a program of inflation will make its appearance in the next Congress as it has in every other American Congress during a period of deep depression. I agree with him, too, in thinking that in the last analysis the defense against such a program depends upon the President in office.

The question is: who will be the better able to control the next Congress, Mr. Hoover or Mr. Roosevelt?

The next Congress, it is universally admitted, will be anti-Administration by a considerable majority in both houses. No last minute drive can alter that. The Democrats will certainly not fail to elect as many legislators as they did in 1930 and the Republican party in Congress is split as it has not been since 1912. There is no possibility of a Hoover majority in Congress. That is one of the absolute certainties. Even if Mr. Hoover were elected he would have an anti-Hoover majority on his hands.

The question then is whether Mr. Roosevelt, who is trusted by the majority in Congress, can do more toward a sound fiscal policy by his leadership than Mr. Hoover, who is distrusted, can do by his veto power. That is the issue that Mr. Mills has raised, and on that issue it seems to me clear that all the probabilities favor Mr. Roosevelt. For, with Mr. Roosevelt elected, the Democrats certainly will have every incentive not to "quarrel" with him for at least two years. He will control the patronage for

Exploration Of Pecos Riper Caves May Volve Link In Human History Chain Of North American Continent

DEL RIO, Texas—Exploration of kitchen middens and caves in the Pecos river region west of Del Rio may result in forging another link in the chain of human history on the North American continent.

Professor Jackson of the anthropological department of the University of Texas was through Del Rio last week heading an expedition to explore mounds found in Seminole Canyon of the Pecos.

Explored several months ago by W. G. Muter, local taxidermist, the overhanging cliff-caverns in the canyon provided specimens in splendid state of preservation which anthropological data at the University of Texas reveals to have belonged to types of vanished Americans of which little, almost nothing, is known.

Professor Jackson's expedition to the Pecos region was the result of a long and arduous search for a site where the remains of a primitive race might be found. His position will be not unlike that of Wilson in 1912 when he was able to take even Bryan into camp and use him to create the Federal Reserve System and to fortify the gold standard.

On the other hand, Mr. Hoover's position, should he by any chance be re-elected, would be as awkward as any imaginable. He will have no hold, either by right of leadership or by force of patronage or by reason of partisan self-interest over the dominant elements in Congress. All that he will have is his veto power and appeals to public opinion. He will confront an embittered Congress expressing the sentiments of embittered voters, and those who count upon him to govern effectively under such conditions are in my judgment relying on miracles and not upon political realities.

Therefore, for my own part, I ing, is known. The race known as "cud chewers" has long been extinct, the data available being discovered several months ago in caverns of the rugged Big Bend section.

However, specimens obtained from the caverns explored in the Big Bend section were not in the valuable state of preservation as those obtained by Mr. Muter in his exploration. Linking of the tribes was the result of discovery of "cuds" in the kitchen middens in Seminole Canyon.

According to scientists, the Indians chewed "cuds" of a variety of cactus leaves. Some indication of their relationship to the old "basket makers" people who lived 2,000 years ago was thought to have existed by the discovery of a woven hat. Prof. Jackson stated that the woven hat discovered by Mr. Muter is perhaps in the most splendid state of preservation of any specimen on the North American continent.

Included in Mr. Muter's collection is a rabbit skin garment woven together with a fiber resembling lechugia. This is the second rabbit fur garment of that type known to be in existence. Professor Jackson said. The robe enclosed the skeleton of a small baby which nestled in a finely woven basket.

Due to the fact that other caves explored further west revealed the skeleton of a baby similarly buried in the center of each cavern, hint at the gruesome thought that the infants were perhaps living sacrifices to a pagan god.

Indication that a tribe of Indians occupied the caves of the canyon was discovered by pictographs painted on the walls of the caverns. On picture of a crudely painted cowboy, while on another wall was a soldier on whose shoulder was painted two stars. The discovery of these paintings led members of the expedition to decide that two different tribes of Indians had occupied the caverns—perhaps hundreds of years apart. Other paintings so faint as to be almost undetectable gave rise to the idea.

Besides the basket, rabbit robe and hundreds of arrows, Mr. Muter has in his collection the skull of an adult human, contours of which are similar to those of the baby. The forehead is low with brows almost on a level with the flat top of the skull.

A flat square of rock with rudely worn center, no doubt used as a metate, was the only utensil found in the mound. The center had every indication of a patient hours of work in wearing out the hole into which fitted the top of the crude graph grinder.

Kitchen middens are refuse heaps and according to scientists are the greatest source of anthropological discoveries.

Request that Mr. Muter's collection be given to the state museum at Austin was refused by Mr. Muter who stated that he wanted to save

THE USES and abuses of the radio have accentuated the differences in the various schools of pronunciation extant in this country. Every announcer has his own way of pronouncing the simplest words. Politicians who from time to time assail the "big eat with campaign thunder" are in complete disagreement on the correct way to pronounce this word or that. Long-time members of the house and senate, regardless of their sectional origin, are apt to use the same pronunciations, with only slight variations.

To Mr. Coolidge postoffice is never simply postoffice, but "postiffs". He also uses "sieh" for such, at times. Mr. Roosevelt says "hoss" and Al Smith thinks "raddio" is about right.

But Mr. Hoover probably takes the cake for persistent and consistent mispronunciation. Paul Y. Anderson, writing in The Nation, recently listed a number of Hoovers, explaining that of course the president's pronunciation had nothing at all to do with his qualifications for office. Anyone who has "hooked ears" of the world as much as Mr. Hoover naturally would pick up a strange collection of tongue twisters. Both Mr. Hoover and Jack Garner say "hundred" for hundred, but that is about the only similarity.

The Combinations Will Work Wonders On These West Texas Complexions, Says Specialist

By O. R. P.
I've interviewed beauty specialists and beauty specialists. There's a difference, you know. I won't read off all the kinds, or the various funny things they tell me about my own weather-beaten mug or about their marvelous high-powered products, most of the products being the only beauty creams in captivity, to hear them talk. I'm becoming an authority—not on beauty treatments but on beauty specialists. For this reason I was pleasure to listen to Sara Freeland Thursday morning as she pat- ted cream over a customer's face, explaining the why and why-not. It was also a double-dyed—all wool—yard-wide—pleasure not to be sympathetically asked: how land, many a woman's skin responds more quickly out here than in many other places. She stresses the value in this climate of the faithful everyday treatment. Some of the creams do not require daily use but the basic treatment with the four necessary products is the foundation of a good complexion. It's a wise woman who knows her own complexion. That's a specialist's job. You will notice the various boxes of powder on Miss Freeland's dresser and the various little eye shadows and the kinds of rouge—they are to go with all the kinds of skin and coloring. During my short stay, she has a blonde, a brunette and a redhead. When you have the opportunity to let your face be beautified by an intelligent specialist—and this does Miss Freeland, as many Big Spring women will testify, why go to her every time she comes—you can feel safe in asking her questions you want answered frankly. If you'll be real honest with her, as no woman is, in discussing your bad features, you will be given advice about correcting them that you'd probably never learn under a hundred years yourself and by that time you wouldn't care; you'd be advising your grand daughter not to learn beauty secrets in the school of experience. I had a good time talking to Miss Freeland. And if I don't startle the old town with a peach-bloom complexion pretty soon, it won't be her fault; it'll be because I've become stingy again with my pennies and my minutes.

Bluebonnet Bridge Club Has Attractive Party At Mrs. Shive's

The Bluebonnet Bridge Club was beautifully entertained by Mrs. C. S. Shive at her home Wednesday afternoon. A profusion of roses and chrysanthemums from the hostess' garden furnished the floral decorations for the room.

Three lovely prizes were awarded. To Mrs. Ivey went a pair of hand-embroidered pillow cases for making club high score; to Mrs. Fahrenkamp two hand-made table covers for visitor's lunch; and to Mrs. Rush four hand-made towels for high cut.

The visitors of the day were: Mmes. Emil Fahrenkamp, J. L. Rush, Omar Pitman, Fred Primm, Clyde Waits, Jr., Jake Bishop and Harry Lester.

Refreshments of Osgood pie and coffee were served the guests and the following members: Mmes. H. C. Timmons; W. R. Ivey, E. D. Merrill, Sim O'Neal, Gus Pickle, J. B. Hodges, R. C. Carpenter, S. L. Baker, E. M. La Boff, W. D. McDonald.

Mrs. H. C. Timmons will be the next hostess.

Celebrates First Birthday By Party

Little Miss Barbara Caroline Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tracy T. Smith celebrated her first birthday Wednesday by inviting her small friends to play with her at the home of her grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Reagan.

She was the recipient of many attractive gifts. After games of sorts, the young guests were invited into the dining room to admire the cake with its one candle and to be served. Favors of balloons and animal crackers were distributed.

The following youngsters and their mothers were present: Vivien and Harry and Mrs. R. V. Middleton; Billy Jeanne and Mrs. W. B. Younger; Edmond and Mrs. Edmond Notestine; Marjio and Mrs. Ira Thutman; Bob Tom and Mrs. J. A. Coffey; Jimmie and Mrs. Allen Hodges; Frank Jr. and Mrs. Frank Heffley; Kathleen and Bill and Mrs. Jas. Little; Robert Noble and Mrs. Charles Read; and Mary Joe Wood.

Mrs. Steve Ford Has Pretty Party For Club

Mrs. Steve Ford was hostess to the members of the Ideal Bridge Club Wednesday afternoon for a very pretty party. Bowls of lovely chrysanthemums and fall roses adorned the room.

Mrs. Croft was the highest scorer for the club and Mrs. McNew for the members.

The guests of the afternoon were: Mmes. R. Homer McNew, H. B. Hurley, J. D. Biles, Lilburn Coffee and Vivian Nichols.

The members attending were: Mmes. L. W. Croft, W. B. Clark, M. M. Edwards, V. H. Flewelling, R. T. Piner, Ebb Hatch, W. W. Irkman, Buck Richardson, A. E. Service and Fred Stephens.

Mrs. Hatch will be the next hostess.

ally Democratic. He picked up three additional votes from the Republican regular; and one from the man who had no presidential choice.

W. D. Ushaw obtained his lone vote for president from a man who confessed that he could "not swallow the liquor views of the two principal candidates." Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate who will undoubtedly run third in national balloting, was left out of the picture here.

On the face of returns of the straw vote, it is indicated that Bullington will put up a game scrap in the Big Spring boxes here Tuesday. He may carry one or two of the larger precincts, but the rural section will be strong Ferguson land.

Bullington probably will not approach the number needed to carry this county, it is indicated, but he is going to poll a far stronger vote than any Republican candidate since this section became Howard county. As for the presidential vote, one can imagine that he hears Roosevelt chuckle in fat way Hyde Park.

BOX SUPPER

There will be a box supper at the Wesley Memorial Church Friday evening to which everybody who wants to help raise funds for the preacher is invited to attend. A nice program has been prepared and coffee will be served with the supper brought by the guests.

CALL OF THE WEST

BY E. S. MONTGOMERY

CHAPTER XXXVIII
 Doona was up early and down to the corral before the rest of the camp was stirring. She was nowhere in sight so Doona saddled the camp horse. She galloped up the slope toward Pass Creek. She met the hunter as she galloped out at the top of Pass Creek divide. The world below her on each side was hidden in a misty shadow. Only the water was aglow with the golden splendor of the sun.

Doona sat on her horse and looked down into the valley. She was about to start. She was sure the adventure beckoned to her. She was sure that she would soon know the secret of all the trouble in the Three Rivers country.

The trail was rough and twisted for a half mile. Then several of the trails joined it, apparently coming from above. But from different angles and it became a bewildering pathway that showed recent heavy use. Doona pushed on along this path and then from right over the top of a hill she saw a man on a horse.

Diagonally she, but the man's face was a mass of brown and white stripes. His head was bent back and his eyes were staring.

Doona's eyes sparkled with interest as she watched the man at work. A heavy voice bellowed an order and Doona stopped. She recognized the voice—Swergin was directing the work. It was plain that the timber was being cut out without checking if it was not being unnecessarily stopped by the boss.

ST. MARY'S VERSATILE BACK

Angel Brovelli, St. Mary's halfback, well known to Forum, will play in the game with the Big Spring team. He was a big factor in St. Mary's victory over the Big Spring team. The Gael power house passes, punts, carries the ball and is a deadly blocker and defensive man. (Associated Press Photo)

110-Pound School Prankster Breaks Out With Touchdown Fever On First And Only Day Of Work On Gridiron

thing we can't figure out. Neel and Townsend, however, may be drafted into service if the jinx doesn't let up. Hare and Woods, two other halfbacks, are ineligible for this week's game.

The forward wall, with the exception of Coots and Roberts, is in good physical condition. Jack Dean and Charlie Vines are slated for the starting wing positions over Olle Cordell, who did not see action at McCamee. Reid and Armstrong, who both played nice games against the Badgers, will handle the tackles, with Smith and Martin on guards as usual. Dyer will be the center with Bob Flowers held in reserve and ready to see action at either guard or the pivot post.

Comedy featured Wednesday's workout as Walter Bunker, who has tormented coaches, players, and teachers unmercifully since he has been a high school student, was persuaded to try the gridiron game for one afternoon, and despite the fact that every member of the varsity line was anxious to tackle Bunker ferociously as no other line was ever anxious before, sprinted and side-stepped his way for two touchdowns and a dozen or more substantial gains.

Walter is now a full-fledged member of the Bovine squad and Bristow promises that he will see action sometime during the year. Colorado is scheduled against the Stanton Buffaloes this week-end, and it is almost certain that the Wolves will have an unbeaten and untied record when they invade Big Spring on Nov. 11. Until 1931 the Colorado game was the most bitterly-fought game on the local schedule, and with the Contrellmen every bit as strong as in other years it looms as one of the best drawing cards of the year.

Three fullbacks in District 3 are topping the individual scoring standings. Delker, San Angelo, leads the pack with 46 points, followed by Bud Hall of Colorado with 42. Henry Richbourg, Big Spring, has marked up 33.

Hall should regain the lead against Stanton this week-end unless he is held well under cover. Delker and Richbourg have the opportunity of stopping each other on Graveyard Field Saturday afternoon, and it would not surprise anyone if the job wasn't done as far as both parties are concerned.

Incidentally our prediction for the Bobcat-Steer melee is Big Spring 6, San Angelo 0.

How do we get that way? Just optimistic.

Your Check Becomes A BUSINESS ASSET

A check is more than a commonplace convenience. It is your personal representative in the business world. The name of the bank appearing upon it frequently serves as an index to your own stand in the eyes of those with whom you deal.

West Texas National Bank
'The Bank Where You Feel At Home'

practice. Bunker was issued a suit several times too large for him, but he did not mind. "The trouble with most of you football players now," he maintained, "is that you think too much of how you look to the pep squad. What we need around here is a little real school spirit."

The more Walter talked the surer the Steer players became that his one afternoon on the Bovine first string would be an eventful one.

True to his promise Coach Bristow started Bunker in the first string backfield and orders to his quarterback to give Walter the ball at any time he felt like carrying it. The Big Spring coach did, however, demote his outstanding linemen to the scrubs for the day. All of this, as you can easily understand, was done with a purpose in mind.

The first play of the practice game found the ball on the 30 yard line. "It is," the quarterback said in the huddle, "just the time for the great Bunker to carry the ball around end."

Bunker, still undaunted, agreed. The ball was snapped to him. In accordance with his instructions Walter started around the right wing. He stopped several yards away and looked back. Charging towards him was a wall of golden-clad man-mountains, and upon each one's face was a look that Bunker could not help but understand. "I have begun to put one foot in front of another at his fastest gait. There was a little side-stepping and twisting to be done as man after man flung himself at the 100 pound prankster, and Bunker passed the test with flying colors. Seventy yards for a touchdown—and thirty members of the Big Spring High football team, a trio of coaches, a dozen or more spectators, and one sports writer stood with mouths open and eyes bulging from their sockets!

He repeated the performance not ten minutes later, and during the interim he reeled off a dozen or more substantial gains against a varsity line that was positively sobbing in anger. Had his would-be tacklers connected with their savage dives, Bunker's day of pranks might have come to an end. But they didn't connect, the 110 pound recruit saw to that.

Now Obie Bristow has changed in his attitude towards the 17 year old fun-maker. He regards him as one of the best natural ball carriers he has ever seen in spite of his size, and mourns the fact that Walter's high school career will be over before he has had time to master sufficient fundamentals to warrant a starting berth in the Big Spring backfield. But don't be surprised at that if No. 0 doesn't go trotting into a game some week-end as a regular on the team that he has antagonized for three years.

Deputy Killed In Fight With Bandits

LAPPER, Mich. (AP)—A deputy sheriff was shot and killed and a bandit suspect wounded, probably fatally, and another official was wounded seriously Wednesday when officers opened fire on several men believed to be members of a bank robbery gang eight miles north of here.

The bandit was brought to a hospital here with a gun shot in his head. The number of men in the suspected gang was undetermined. Shooting occurred at a farm house in an isolated section near here.

How Doctors Treat Colds and Coughs

To break up a cold overnight and relieve the congestion that makes you cough, thousands of physicians are now recommending Calotabs, the nameless, calomel compound tablets that give you the effects of calomel and salts without the unpleasant effects of either.

One or two Calotabs at bedtime with a glass of sweet milk or water. Next morning your cold has vanished, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish, no danger.

Calotabs are sold in 10c and 35c packages at drug stores. (Adv)
