ECONOMIC RECOVERY PLAN

Here are chamber recommendations in a two-year plan to boost current businesses and attract new industry.

- FIRST YEAR Establish an industrial development program that includes compiling and updating industrial site and economic information, a direct-mail program and a local manufacturing management group.
- Initiate citywide retail promotion.
- Investigate opportunities for promoting conventions and tourism.
- Establish international development programs.

SECOND YEAR

- ■ Use Computer-Aided Design (CAD) for industrial site presentation, direct-mail program, financing program, a possible revolving loan program and small business incubation program for new companies.
- Establish quality retail promotion in a citywide, yearlong campaign.
- Expand activities in tourism and convention promotions.
- Establish international development program by computerizing trade leads from the Department of Commerce for local interested businesses

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce has outlined a two-year economic development plan to boost Pampa's economy and battle the effects of the area's economic slump.

Chamber Manager Bruce Barton explained the plan at Altrusa Club's Executive Women's Dinner Monday night in the Starlight Room of Coronado

"I think with our assets, we have a way to go to establish and keep a strong economic development program, even when things are good. Even when unemployment is very low, we have to attract new business and industry and keep diversifying our economy," Barton said.

The main goals of the plan, developed by chamber members and finalized at last Wednesday's chamber board meeting, are to boost economic development, attract conventions, develop industry and small businesses, continue participation in

A new computer system, installed at the chamber three weeks ago, is already in use to help accomplish these goals. The system consists of a base unit and two terminals.

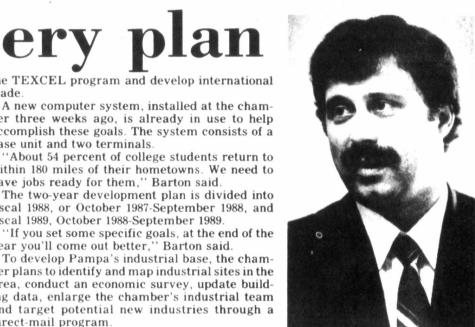

'About 54 percent of college students return to within 180 miles of their hometowns. We need to have jobs ready for them," Barton said.

fiscal 1988, or October 1987-September 1988, and fiscal 1989, October 1988-September 1989

"If you set some specific goals, at the end of the year you'll come out better," Barton said.

To develop Pampa's industrial base, the chamber plans to identify and map industrial sites in the area, conduct an economic survey, update building data, enlarge the chamber's industrial team and target potential new industries through a direct-mail program.

Reagan backs Contras via secret radio transmission

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) President Reagan gave a speech on the Contras' clandestine radio station assuring the rebels their struggle against Nicaragua's leftist government "has and always will have our support.

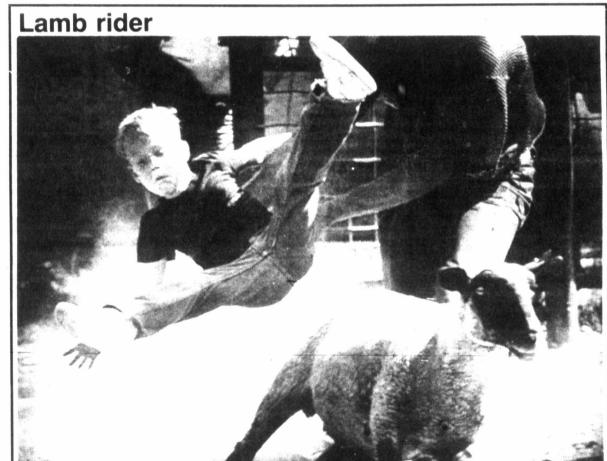

Reagan's unusual message, broadcast three days before he is to meet with Contra rebels in Los Angeles, was heard in parts of Nicaragua despite the Sandinista government's jamming of the rebels' "Radio Liberation." It was also heard faintly in neighboring Costa Rica.

The 3-minute taped address was scheduled to be broadcast three times Monday night and two times today. Listeners heard Reagan speak in English first, followed by a Spanish transla-

The talk addressed a peace plan signed by five Central American presidents, including Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, in Guatemala on Aug. 7. One of the plan's provisions is an end to foreign support for insurgent movements in the region.

Reagan did not reject the accord, but questioned the Sandinistas' commitment to it.

District judge opens door to home school

By WALTER C. PUTNAM Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON — Three years ago, Cheryl Leeper took her children out of school to teach them at home

"I couldn't imagine it being illegal," she said.

She found out otherwise a few weeks later. A letter from the school district informed her and her husband, Gary, that they were violating Texas' compulsory school attendance law

For weeks, they worried that they might be prosecuted.

"One day when the doorbell rang, the kids jumped under the table," Mrs. Leeper said. "They said, 'It's the truant officer! He's coming to get us!

"It was the UPS man." It was also an illustration of the pressure of living outside the law. We decided we had to do something," Mrs. Leeper said.

What the Leepers did was file a class-action suit with other parents who felt they could educate their children better than the public schools

They won when a state district judge ruled that a home school is a private school in the context of the law, as long as it uses a clear curriculum and follows other guidelines for proper education. 'There is no constitutional provision or statute in this state which requires a child of school age to attend a public school,' wrote Judge Charles J. Murray in his April 13 opinion.

He enjoined school attendance officers across the state from enforcing the 1915 compulsory attendance law against parents who teach their children at home.

The ruling threw the law in Texas into a state of limbo in which any parent, in effect, can keep his children out of school by claiming they are being taught at

The state attorney general's office has not decided whether to appeal, spokesman Ron Dusek

Home-schoolers believe the issue is far from over "but the state's position has been severely mauled," said Leeper, a computer coordinator with Mobil Oil in this community between Dallas and Fort Worth

He said Christopher, 12, and Brandon, 10, started falling be hind in reading and mathema-

"As soon as you get behind in those two basic areas, you're lost." he said

Since then, the Leepers have developed other reservations about public schools, including the moral climate. But at first "it was purely academic," said Mrs. Leeper.

She took up the role of teacher. During the school year, she spent about three hours a day instructing the children in reading, math, geography and other subjects by texts chosen by a Christian educational organization. The boys'

On Jan. 18, 1985, Jim and Nancy Montague of Phillips, the parents of seven children, were summoned to the Hutchinson County Courthouse.

On arrival, the Montagues were promptly arrested on warrants issued by Justice of the Peace Nadean Spinks. They were released from the county jail only after producing bonds totaling

Beyond the arrests, the Montagues' cases never were prosecuted, although the couple initially faced fines of up to $100 a day.

The Montagues' crime was one of conscience. They were charged with five counts each of violating the state's compulsory attendance law, part of the Texas Education Code. The complaints were signed by Bryan Hanna, principal of Phillips Elementary School, who questioned why the couple's five school-age children, ages 6 to 13, didn't return to school after the 1984-85 year.

To the Montagues, the reason was simple. They were teaching their children at home.

Montague, at the time a Phillips Petroleum Co. employee, told the Borger News-Herald: "We see a need for the law to make sure that children are educated, but we choose to do it in another way. He and his wife vowed to fight the case all the month that the law, as he and other school officials interpreted it, left him no choice but to bring complaints against the Montagues, even if Hanna disagreed with the law

"There were children living in our district who weren't coming to school," Hanna said. "I did what I was supposed to do. I handed it over to the courts.

The Montagues weren't alone. More than an estimated 10,000 Texas schoolchildren are taught at home, and, since 1981, roughly 80 of the families involved have faced legal action.

This morning, the judge observed that the insurance increase may prompt the county to dip into the surplus.

In other business Monday, commissioners heard a request from Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed to add a dog to his staff. Reed said the trained dog would be used to sniff out illegal drugs.

"The dog will be a great use in checking out the cars on the highways believed to be transporting drugs through the county," Reed told commissioners.

The cost of the dog and training would be about $3,500, Reed said. adding that he also hopes to be able to use the dog to detect drugs in county schools.

Reed is seeking private donations to help pay for the dog. The commissionrs tabled any action on Reed's request.

The sources said the vessels sailed with four warship escorts as other U.S. Navy units shepherded another convoy out of the waterway.

The latter convoy of four tankers included the 401,382-ton supertanker Bridgeton, damaged by a mine on its first voyage north through the gulf on July 24. It was the second convoy to return from Kuwait loaded with oil under a Reagan administration plan to shield the emirate's tankers from Iranian attack

The executives, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the convoy had cleared the 110-mile Strait of Hormuz and was off the United Arab Emirates at nightfall Monday.

The convoy included the 290,085-ton supertanker Middleton, the 81,283-ton Surf City and the 79,999-ton Chesapeake City, they said. In the past Iran has attacked Kuwait's ships, charging that the emirate aids Iraq, Iran's enemy in the 7-year-old gulf war.

A U.S. destroyer and frigate warned off two small boats Monday after they approached the convoy led by the supertanker Bridgeton, which hit a mine July 24 near Farsi island, the Pentagon said.

The warships fired flares and sent verbal warnings to the dhows, but they did not veer away. When they came within eight miles of the convoy, the destroyer Kidd and frigate Cromme-lin sailed up to confront them, firing machine-gun blasts across their bows, the Pentagon said.

It was unclear whether the dhows were sail-powered or motorized, said the Pentagon, which did not disclose the incident's location. Arab dhows and ships or helicopters chartered by foreign reporters several times have approached convoys and been warned away

In a separate incident Monday involving the same convoy, U.S. helicopters and warships chased away an Iranian warship that had shadowed them.

Officers aboard the helicopter carrier Guadalcanal said the Iranian vessel presented no overt threat as it neared the convoy at the point where the Strait of Hormuz meets the Persian Gulf.

County to talk budget Tuesday City briefs

Budget discussions begin at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday for Gray County commissioners amid declining property values that threaten either the county's 21.6cent tax rate or $4.5 million reserve fund

Wednesday's special meeting will be the first concerning the 1988 county budget, although commissioners have been receiving requests from county office holders and various agencies seeking assistance

The current tax rate of 21.6 cents per $100 valuation funds a $4.18 million budget. Commissioners didn't raise taxes last year, cutting about $300,000 from the budget.

But property values - especially minerals — have dropped about $100 million from last year, commissioners said during their Aug. 14 meeting. Representatives from public libraries in Pampa and McLean pleaded for county help during the Aug. 14 meeting. They said the libraries could lose state funding if local tax support dips too low Commissioners also face the prospect of either refurbishing the courthouse or building a new one to make up for decreasing office space and to meet demands for a public elevator accessible to the handicapped.

Hance, twice rejected by voters in bids for statewide office, was appointed by Gov. Bill Clements to replace Democrat Mack Wallace, who is resigning.

'I will fight for the roughnecks and oil field workers throughout the state of Texas," Hance said Monday as he announced his acceptance.

Hance, 44, will become the first Republican on the three-member panel that regulates the trucking and oil and gas industries.

He said he promised Clements he would run for the commission post in 1988 to complete Wallace's unexpired term, which ends in 1990. Hance said he made no commitment about a 1990

"We agreed that 1990 is just too far in the future," Hance said. "So many things can happen in two years.'

Hance said his acceptance of the RRC job will force him to give up an earlier appointment from Clements to the Texas College and University Sytstem Coordinating Board. In addition, he said, he will have to sell his interest in the law firm in which he is currently a Hance said he plans to use his experience as a former congressman in the $70,000-a-year RRC post to exert influence in Washington on behalf of Texas energy producers. He said he plans to work with state and federal officials, as well as with members of the energy industry, to develop a policy to strengthen domestic energy production.

"We just can't afford to let the oil and gas industry go down the drain, considering the national security and economic importance of the industry. We're on the verge of losing the industry if we don't do something, and we just can't let that happen," he said.

Democrats who rapped the appointment said Hance might be using the position to re-ignite a stalled political career. Hance was defeated by Lloyd Doggett of Austin in the 1984 Democratic race for a U.S. Senate nominee. Republican Phil Gramm defeated Doggett

In 1986, after jumping to the GOP, Hance ran third in the Republican gubernatorial primary, which was won by Clements.

"Finally, by the grace of the least credible governor in recent history, Kent Hance holds statewide office, said Bob Slagle of Sherman, chairman of the Texas Democratic Party, "even though he has yet to become a statewide elected official."

"Perhaps he will use this office as a stepping stone for higher office in 1990, Slagle said.

Hance said, "Who knows what might be down the road? I learned a long time ago in politics never to say never.'

Clements was vacationing in Aspen,

Colo., Monday but released a statement in which he called Hance "an experienced legislator, a dedicated public servant, a man of much talent and ability."

Hance operates a law practice with the Dallas-based Boyd, Veigel & Hance law firm and has lobbied on behalf of oil interests, a fact noted Monday by state Rep. Clint Hackney, D-Houston, who is a 1988 candidate for the commission seat that Hance will get.

"It is a typical appointment for the Clements administration, where he chooses someone who has ties to the industry being regulated, which is akin to a fox guarding the henhouse," Hackney

He called Hance "a man of no convic-

Police say 7-year-old case over

AUSTIN (AP) - For seven years until last week, police were unable to identify a murder victim whose head was found floating in Town Lake.

On Monday, they said they had laid the case to rest with the discovery that the killer died of natural causes last year without ever being suspected

"I'm satisfied, and my superiors are satisfied, that the case is over," said Austin police Sgt. James Beck, who investigated the case since the beginning. "All that is left now is to finish the re-

The remains of 30-year-old Mahlon Ray Turner, whose head was found in the lake June 29, 1980, were buried in his Oklahoma hometown near the Texas border

Beck said that an informer had told investigators that Turner was killed and dismembered sometime between June 22 and June 24, 1980, after a "disturbance that just got out of hand real quick.

The assailant, who authorities said was middleaged, died of natural causes last year and is buried in a Central Texas city, which Beck did not identify. Beck said he does not know if the assailant had any other previous criminal history. He said he did not know what happened to the weapons that were used to kill and dismember Turner.

Turner's remains were discarded in five separate locations between Austin and San Antonio, and his head was discovered floating in Town Lake by a jogger. Turner's hand and foot were found in 1980 in a concrete-filled cooler in a San Antonio

Feds will turn elite private school into a low-risk prison

BRYAN (AP) — The students may leave, and the convicts may move in to a 31-acre historic private school, officials say.

Earlier this month, federal officials met with Bryan community leaders to discuss converting the Allen Academy to a minimum-security prison camp, the Houston Chronicle reported Monday.

"It's going to be a club-Fed type of facility," said Don Miller, dean of students. "The (federal) folks already said they will go head-to-head with Texas A&M for the prettiest campus in town.

The academy is listed in the national register of historic places, and has several buildings reminiscent of the Alamo. Academy officials plan to relocate elsewhere in Bryan, the newspaper said.

Federal officials are struggling with a prison crowding crisis much worse than that of Texas. The federal system has a capacity of less than 28,000, but the inmate head-count is almost 44,000, said Kathy Morse, prison spokeswoman.

Some Bryan residents support the move because only the best-behaving federal inmates serving short sentences are supposed to be housed at the camp, said the Rev. Richard Maples of the First facilities usually are convicted of white-collar crimes, such as tax evasion, bank fraud or computer theft, said bureau spokesman Kevin McMahon.

The camp would house about 250 male and female prisoners, employ a staff of about 125 and have an annual budget of about $6 million, McMahon said. It will be six to nine months before the government decides whether it wants to purchase the school, he said.

The boarding school was first established in Madisonville in 1886 and moved to the stately Bryan campus in 1899.

The academy will move regardless of the decision of the federal prison officials, said Jerry E. Holbert, the academy headmaster.

Bryan Forward, a city-appointed advisory group, recently voted to support the prison camp, which would bring in 50 to 60 new jobs and a yearly injection of about $2 million of new money into the area, Maples said. The group is trying to raise public support for the prison effort.

'We would hate to see it run off because people didn't have all the facts about it," said Louis Newman, owner of Newman Printing Co. and chairman of Bryan Forward.

HOUSTON (AP) — It's not a cure for AIDS, but researchers at Baylor College of Medicine announced a substance that in laboratory tests was shown to prevent infection caused by the disease.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Fairness Doctrine stifled controversy

The Federal Communications Commission deserves hearty congratulations for its unanimous decision to eliminate the so-called "Fairness Doctrine," which required broadcasters to air contrasting viewpoints on issues considered to be of public importance. The electronic media are best viewed as the press with new technology, indeed with vastly more frequencies today than were thought possible when the airwaves were seen as a "public monopoly." The doctrine despite a 1969 Supreme Court decision to the contrary — was clearly, in our view, an unconstitutional in-fringement on freedom of the press and an intolerable government intrusion into the editorial process. One can understand the good intentions behind the doctrine — opening up the airwaves to a wide variety of opinions. But it achieved the opposite of its stated goal. In practice, the doctrine's chilling effect contributed to the mass media's blandness, discouraging wide ranging discussion of controversial issues because of uncertainty about which litigious spokesmen the government might force onto the air. When some courts decided that paid advertising dealing with controversial issues required stations to provide free compensatory time to opposing viewpoints, the predictable result was the virtual elimination of issues

Protecting freedom of the press doesn't guarantee that all viewpoints will be aired, but within the free print media you can find a vastly more diverse variety of viewpoints than on the controlled electronic media. It may take a while for broadcasters to cast off their old habits and start stretching the limits (and some stations may never see a market for controversy), but this decision should eventually mean more access to broadcast time for more viewpoints.

Most of the special-interest guardians, left and right, of the old "Fairness Doctrine" have been resorting to demagoguery. Media critics should criticize vigorously, but they shouldn't have the power of government available to force the media to put their pet spokesmen on the air. It's more complicated to deal with a free press than with a controlled press, but that's a small price to pay for the vigor and variety that freedom unleashes.

Federal loans bear hidden cost

One way to get a federal program is to find an idea that most people find so compelling they don't mind bearing the costs involved. That's how we got Social Security, the Clean Air Act and the abolition of the military draft. Another way is to find something that most people find appealing and make it appear there are no costs involved. That's how we got innumerable federal credit programs.

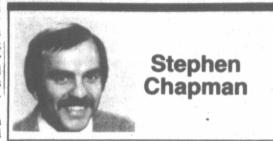

These programs channel loans and loan guarantees to various politically powerful groups - farmers, homebuyers, exporters, veterans, small businessmen, college students and more. They were enacted because they appear to provide benefits free, and they survive because of the "billion-dollar headache syndrome." As Harvard political scientist Herman Leonard explains, "If it is too much of a headache to figure out what is going on, the program may be left alone.

Some members of Congress, including Sens. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., and Pete Domenici, R-N.M., have invented aspirin. They are pushing new rules that would make the costs of such lending clearer and less subject to confusing manipulation, an idea proposed for years by good government types and more recently by the Reagan administration. The Senate has approved a credit reform measure, but the House so far has balked.

This is one instance where procedure is inseparable from substance. Credit programs are attractive not because they are a particularly effective way of addressing problems, but because they are a politically painless way of doing so. If Congress wants to help veterans or farmers by spending money, it has to finance its generosity by imposing new taxes or incurring or securing credit, the cost may not show up in stuck with $8 billion in bad loans.

NEVER KEEP YOUR PRESIDENT FROM THE TRUTH! TELL IT TO ME STRAIGHT.

the budget at all — and if it does show up, the actual expense may be very different from the number stated.

That explains why, as federal spending has come under increasing scrutiny, federal credit has exploded. Between 1970 and 1986, direct government loans increased from $10 billion a year to $41 billion, and loan guarantees rose from $27 billion to $159 bilion. In recent years, the growth in "hidden spending" has far outrun increases in explicit spending.

Some direct loans require a direct appropriation out of the budget, just like other programs, but they tend to be treated more leniently than expenditures. The prevailing attitude on Capitol Hill is that since the government will get its money back, loans don't cost anything. Loan guarantees are even more insidious. They incur an obligation — to repay a loan if the borrower doesn't — but they require no money up front, making them especially tempting.

Both types of credit help place burdens on the taxpayers that are not usually publicized. Much of the money lent by Washington never gets paid back. The Small Business Administration and the student loan program are notorious for high new debt. If it decides to help them by extending default rates. Last year, the government got

YOUR FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC POLICIES ARE A HUGE SUCCES

But loans that are repaid aren't free. A lot of federal loans are made at below-market rates, in order to assist favored borrowers. Some disaster loans, for example, go at 4 percent, a rate that has long since vanished from the world of commercial bank loans. When the government borrows money at 6 percent or 7 percent and lends it at 4 percent, it absorbs the difference. Many beneficiaries would have to pay more than the usual market rate if they had to borrow privately, if they could get loans at all. So Washington's subsidy is even greater than it

he

me

he

The broader costs are still more elusive. In the commercial market, loans flow to the most productive uses, which enhances economic efficiency. In a government-directed system, loans are allocated for political purposes, which usually impairs economic efficiency.

As Washington's credit role expands, so does the damage. Herman Leonard calculated that by 1983, "57 percent of all credit being advanced flowed to or through the federal government." By increasing the total demand for credit, the government also bids up interest rates for everyone not blessed by a subsidy.

The first step toward containing this expansion is to recognize and measure the costs, by requiring that all loans and loan guarantees spell out the estimated subsidy. The second step is to require that funds be appropriated at the outset to cover all likely expenses

These changes would force members to confront the real effect of these ventures, besides enabling them to make rational comparisons among competing programs. And Congress would no longer be able to reap the political gains of providing credit while fobbing off the political costs on future Congresses. An honest approach to federal lending may be bad for special interests, but it's good for democracy.

Poor land sows decline of black farmer

By Robert Walters

HARD CASH, Miss. (NEA) - In the early 1930s, the number of black farmers in Mississippi peaked at more than 180,000. By the early 1980s, that figure had been slashed by more than 97 percent and fewer than 5,000 remained.

That pattern has been evident throughout the South, where most of the farms owned by blacks have been located, and elsewhere in the nation. Although blacks ran about 14 percent of the country's farms during much of the first half of this century, they now operate only 2 percent.

Although the number of farm operators of all races has plunged, the decline among blacks has been especially precipitous - and there are indications that it could continue until there are very few black farmers left.

"Many black farm families would be better off if they left agriculture," a U.S. Department of Agriculture report issued last year bluntly suggested.

The adversity facing blacks in their efforts to acquire and retain their own land is rooted in the racial attitudes of the South," noted a 1982 report issued by the U.S. Civil Rights Commission. "The freedom gained by 4 million slaves after the Civil War did not transfer economic independence to most blacks."

Decades of slavery had precluded blacks from saving or inheriting money, thus denying them the opportunity to buy their own land. A federal government plan to confiscate land from backers of the Confederacy and redistribute it to newly freed slaves was abandoned months after it was launched in 1865.

"While the plantation system was shaken by the Civil War, it was not destroyed," notes the Civil Rights Commission report. "Sharecropping replaced slavery as the prevailing relationship between white land owners and black farmers without land ... Sharecropping, while a more subtle form of dominance than slavery, yielded similar patterns of control and subservience.

Blacks were perennially indebted to white farmers and merchants and were often offered only the least arable land. Also, they were rarely able to rotate crops to rejuvenate their soil because white lenders would extend them financing only for cotton, a safe cash crop. Nevertheless, improved economic conditions early in this century allowed many blacks to buy their own land — a trend that peaked in 1920 when there were 915,000 black farmers in the South and another 10,000 elsewhere in the country.

But the subsequent ascendancy of the boll weevil, whose larvae consume cotton, and the collapse of the cotton market spurred many blacks to abandon their land and begin a decades-long migration to the industrialized North.

Racism was another major compo nent of the blacks' plight. Of the 3,659 lynchings recorded in this country between 1882 and 1937, the vast majority occurred in the rural South.

Contemporary racism has taken more subtle forms. A 1983 USDA report showed that blacks held only 0.08 percent of all seats on the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service committees

By 1982 (the most recent year for which statistics are available) the number of black-operated farms had shrunk to 31,000 in the South and 2,000 elsewhere in the nation - about 4 percent of the peak totals earlier in the century.

Those numbers reveal only part of the plight of black farmers. Farms owned by blacks, for example, average only one-fourth the size of all farms in the country.

With few young blacks interested in agriculture, black farmers are twice as likely as other farm operators to be 65 or older. They also are twice as likely to have annual sales of less than $2,500

"Most black-operated farms are very small and cannot provide enough income to adequately support a family," says last year's USDA report. The nation is witnessing the end of an Lonetree showed little emotion when the jury announced the sentence Monday after less than three hours of deliberations, said defense attorney William Kunstler, who promised to file an appeal.

The eight Marine jurors also ordered a $5,000 fine, a dishonorable discharge with no pay or benefits, and a reduction in rank to the lowest pay scale.

Lonetree, 25 of St. Paul, Minn., would be eligible for parole in 10 years.

Before being sentenced, Lonetree made a brief, unsworn statement in which he told the jurors he would accept whatever penalty they imposed.

"I'm not going to blame anybody." ssaid Lonetree, who called himself "a devoted anti-communist."

Kunstler and defense attorney Michael Stuhff had predicted the jurors would impose the maximum life sentence after convicting him of all 13 espionage counts, the most serious alleging he provided the Soviet KGB the identities of CIA agents and the floor plans of the U.S. Embassies in Moscow

Lonetree was accused of becoming a spy after becoming involved with a Soviet translator, Violetta Sanni, while he was stationed as a guard at the Moscow embassy.

The prosecution said he was a coldhearted traitor.

"A message needs to be sent out, a punishment needs to be made, that crimes like this will not be tolerated," said the chief military prosecutor, Marine Maj. David L. Beck.

"This accused traded, like so many pawns, the people he betrayed by putting them on a KGB target list, for reasons of his own lust and his own selfishness," said another prosecutor, Marine Maj. Frank R. Short.

But Stuhff contended that a life sentence would serve no purpose, and said Lonetree made a big mistake.

"What do you achieve by being unduly harsh on Sergeant Lonetree?" Stuhff

"I think it's fair to say he screwed up," he said. "He should have recognized what Violetta was. He should have recognized what she was doing and why she was doing it."

Lonetree's lawyers, who presented no witnesses during the trial, promised an appeal, saying the military judge, Navy Capt. Philip F. Roberts, railroaded Lonetree. The chief spokeswoman for Quantico, Lt. Col. Bobbi Weinberger, said the judge would not make a statement. Beck said he was "just glad that it's over" and that "It's a shame that somebody gets involved in espionage like

A sentence review, expected to take at least two months, must be completed before Lonetree begins serving his sentence at the U.S. Army-run prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bayard Rustin was among the nation's most eloquent fighters for civil rights and his legacy will endure, said Coretta Scott King after the death of the architect of her husband's 1963 "I have a dream" rally.

"Bayard Rustin will be sorely missed, but his shining example will provide a bright beacon of hope for freedom-loving people everywhere," the widow of Dr. Martin Luther King said after Rustin's death was announced Monday

Rustin, 75, died Sunday at Lenox Hill Hospital, where he underwent surgery two days before for a ruptured appendix, said Norman Hill, president of the A. Philip Randolph Institute.

Rustin, co-chairman of the civil rights institute, went to the hospital with stomach pains after returning from a trip to Haiti with a labor group to assess prospects for democratic change in the Caribbean nation, Hill said.

The 1963 civil rights March on Washington orchestrated by Rustin "changed the nation," said Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., who said of Rustin, "He taught us love and he gave us peace."

"The nation has lost an ardent, eloquent advocate of personal freedom for men and women wherever in the world they are less than free," said John W. Riehm, president of Freedom House, the human rights organization whose executive committee Rustin chaired for five years.

A pioner, planner and thinker of the civil rights, peace and labor movements all his adult life, Rustin survived a major heart attack in 1971.

He was arrested more than two dozen times, and came under fire from radical blacks during the upheavals of the 1960s and '70s for counseling against violence and black separatism. 'We shared the trenches for many years,'' recalled James Farmer, former national director with the Congress for Racial Equality. "He was a stylish, brilliant leader and man.'

Rustin, who spent 21/2 years in jail as a conscientious objector during World War II, was an early opponent of the Vietnam War. His last arrest came three years ago in New Haven, Conn., for demonstrating with strikers against Yale University.

Rustin's activism began in his high school years in West Chester, Pa., where he was born March 17, 1912. While traveling as a member of a high school football team, Rustin was refused service at a restaurant and thrown out.

"From that point on, I took the conviction that I would not accept segregation," he said.

As a Quaker seeking a forum for his pacifist and anti-bigotry sentiments, Rustin joined the Young Communist League in 1936. Five years later, he left the communists, saying, "It was inescapably clear that I had been wrong.

Rustin participated in the first Freedom Ride against segregation in 1947, and wound up doing  $30\,$ days on a North Carolina chain gang.

In 1955, he went to Montgomery, Ala., to help King organize a bus boycott that became a landmark civil rights victory. Eight years later, his organizational skills brought 200,000 people to march on Washington and hear the speech in which King described his dream of racial equality

When King was slain, Rustin organized the march of mourning.

In an interview recently in the Village Voice, Rustin said that to take a leading role in the civil rights movement, he had to overcome unspoken prejudice about his homosexuality and concerns that it would undermine King's efforts.

Rustin's survivors include three sisters.

Methodist Church suspends lesbian minister from pulpit

Church suspended a lesbian minister after a church trial she had demanded to contest a prohibition against homosexuals serving in the 10-million-member denomination's clergy A jury of ministers found Rose Mary Denman in violation of the rule Monday, but imposed the most lenient sentence available, suspending her from her ministry until United Methodist ministers from New Hampshire gather for their annual meeting in June.

The jury of nine men and four women could have removed Denman from the ministry or expelled her from the church.

Denman, 40, had said she expected to be found in violation of the rule and would transfer her ministry to the Unitarian Universalist Association, which accepts homosexuals. But she found a measure of victory in the lenient sentence.

'That feels good. They were men and women of integrity." Denman said, fighting back tears but appearing happy as the sentence was announced. 'They were telling the church they were not sure the church has behaved like the church.

Bishop George Bashore of Boston, who filed the complaint against Denman, said the verdict showed that the jurors concur with the church poli-

DOVER, N.H. (AP) — The United Methodist cy adopted three years ago, that homosexuality is "incompatible with Christian teaching."

He said the sentence reflected an attempt to make "the most caring and merciful decision" possible under the circumstances.

The jury chairwoman, the Rev. Janet E. Smith-Rushton, of South Walpole, Mass., said the jurors reaffirmed their belief in the church's view that homosexuals are "individuals of sacred worth" and entitled to the church's guidance

Throughout the trial, Denman, her lover and a group of allies wore small pink triangles, a symbol the Nazis' required homosexuals to wear in concentration camps

Denman has been on leave from her two parishes in Conway, N.H., and lives in Portland, Maine.

Denman, a divorced mother of one child, testified that until a few years ago she was "a right-wing charismatic" who vehemently opposed homosexuality

She said her view changed when she was recovering from surgery and invited a friend, the divorced wife of another United Methodist minister, to move in with her to help with the chores.

Toward the end of the summer, she told me she loved me," Denman said. "That scared me, and I told her I was straight.

The 15 animals caught Monday, when the roundup began, were being held at the Monterey Bay Aquarium in Monterey, pending capture of at least nine others, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials said.

Four boats were used Monday, and another sweep was expected today.

TREATMENT FOR STIFF NECK

If you're suffering from a stiff neck, don't wait for it to take care of itself when treatment is available to correct it.

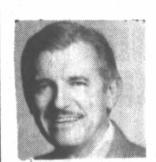

Of all the bones in the spinal column, none are more easily injured or more vulnerable than the seven vertebrae in the neck. None aremoved more often. We are constantly turning our heads to look at people and things.

Neck stiffness can have many causes, from sudden and violent accidents to such simple activities as painting a ceiling or just sitting reading a book for a long time. But there's nothing simple about the

A careful examination will reveal the source of the pain and how best to treat it. Any misaligned vertebrae in the spinal column should be properly adjusted so there will be no abnormal pressure on your nervous system. Treatment may also include exercises for the cervical muscles such as gently rotating your head in all directions. This can help restore muscle strength and tone.

HOME SCHOOL: SOLOMON'S CLASSROOM

standardized test scores have improved steadily

The Leepers are among thousands of parents in Texas who have taught their children at home. Nationally, the issue of whether home teaching qualifies as schooling has been around for 20 years or more. It has been an issue in Texas since the beginning of this decade.

Judge Murray noted that prosecutions did not begin until after 1981, when the Texas Education Agency adopted guidelines for private schools that excluded home schooling. In his ruling, Murray found that the TEA had no authority to define private schools because its domain is confined to public schools

In Upshur County in East Texas, a couple had been in jail for more than a month to pay off a fine and court costs stemming from a violation of the compulsory attendance law. Jack and Diana Howell said their attorney was God, and he did not want them to pay what escalated from a $5 fine imposed by a justice of the peace in January 1986 to $8,000 as they went through

The alternative was jail, to the tune of $15 per day. Howell held a May 27 jailhouse news conference in which he declared that God "commanded us to remove our children from public schools and to teach them at home."

F. Patrick Whelan, legal counsel for the TEA and a defendant in the Leeper suit, said the Howell case began before the Leeper case. The Howells' troubles, he actually went to juries. Only two

Opposition to home schooling in Texas has its roots in the state's compulsory education law, requiring school attendance for all school-age children. The following shows the development of laws regarding compulsory attendance and home schooling:

■ 1915 — With an exemption for private schools, Texas passes its compulsory attendance laws to keep parents from taking their children out of school to work in the fields. At the time, about 70 percent of Texas children are educated by their parents. For 66 years, the law goes untested with regard to parents educating their children inside the home.

■ 1981 — School districts push for prosecution of home-school parents under the compulsory attendance laws. Districts contend children must attend either public or "legitimate" private schools.

In the Panhandle, an estimated 150 to 200 families are involved in home schooling. In 1983, four former Clarendon families were turned in by Clarendon school Superintendent Jeff Walker. The parents included at least two teachers and a minister, who eventually started a church school in New Mexico.

Like Hanna, Walker said he reported the cases because he felt required to by law. He said that, once he reported the families, the school district's obligation under the law was cleared.

"I reported it, but didn't get involved," Walker said. "I didn't pay that much attention to it once I reported it."

Family members involved in the Phillips and Clarendon cases either could not be located or refused to be interviewed.

The Montagues and the Clarendon families ultimately were spared prosecution by a pending class action suit in Fort Worth. Both Hanna and Walker said local courts decided to await the outcome of the case - called Leeper vs. Arlington Independent School District — before deciding the Phillips and Clarendon cases

In April, State District Judge Charles Murray of Fort Worth ruled in favor of the home schoolers. Judge Murray ruled:

■ Home schools can legally be called private schools in Texas, provided they use a curriculum that includes instruction in reading, spelling, grammar, math and citizenship.

Texas Education Agency guidelines that school districts were using to prosecute home schoolers are invalid because the TEA has jurisdiction only over public schools.

The lawsuit also objected to passages in stories by anthropologist Margaret Mead, science fiction writer Isaac Asimov, and fairy tale author Hans Christian Andersen. Mrs. Frost said the families' attorneys will first ask all 16 judges of the 6th Circuit to review the three-judge panel's ruling. Michael Farris, a Washington, D.C., attorney representing the families, said he would appeal to the nation's highest court.

"We always viewed this level of the decision as just a whistlestop on the way to an ultimate decision by the U.S. Supreme Court," said Farris, reached by telephone. He represents Concerned Women for America, a Washington-based lobbying group retained on behalf of the families.

Rebecca Hagelin, a group spokeswoman, said the organization works to preserve the rights of families and Judeo-Christian traditions.

The parents sued the board in 1983, claiming that the required books violated their beliefs by teaching evolution, secular humanism, the occult.

"At last, the prayers and efforts of thousands of home schoolers have been answered," proclaimed the newsletter of the Washington-based Home School Legal Defense Association, a party to the suit.

"Judge Murray's ruling judicially recognizes the validity of home schools as being on an equal part with private and public schools," said John Whitehead, president of the Rutherford Institute in Manassas, Va., another party to the suit. "It's about time."

Kirk McCord, a Dallas attorney who formerly headed the Texas Home Educators Association said parents should have little trouble meeting the judge's curriculum requirements.

"The curriculum can be purchased, or it can be developed by a professional group," McCord said. But state education officials had a different reac-

Lozano said TEA and the state Board of Education are currently waiting for a final order from the judge - expected to be signed next month - before deciding whether to appeal the ruling.

Assistant Attorney General Kevin O'Hanlon, who represented TEA in Fort Worth, indicated that he is leaning against advising the state board to appeal. He said Murray's ruling still allows school districts to review alleged attendance violations on a case-by-case basis.

"It's not all that bad for the state," O'Hanlon

O'Hanlon and McCord, both of whom have reviewed a rough draft of Murray's final written order, said the pending order is merely a legal formality that will echo what the judge said in 'The judgment is not substantially going to change anything," McCord said. "I've seen the proposed judgment, and the language is no different than what the judge found.

HOUSTON (AP) - A new $100,000 AIDS education program formulated by the Harris County Medical Society for teens has been unveiled, but officials at the Houston Independent School District have not decided whether the students will see it.

Dr. Max Butler, the medical society's president, said the program is three-pronged and includes a videotape for teachers, a videotape for students ages 12-18 and a booklet written for those over age 16. It will be made available to schools and the public free of charge, he said.

The videotape will be shown to school nurses, health and physical education teachers, life science teachers and elementary school counselors beginning Thursday.

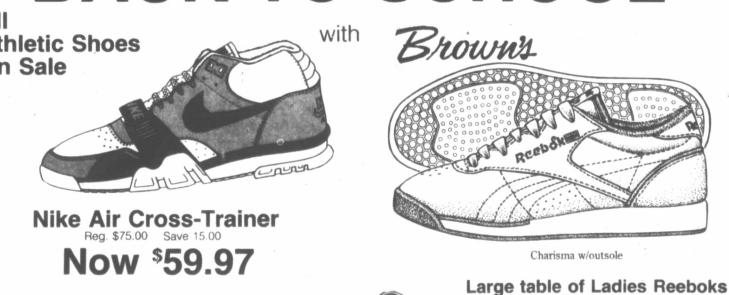

But Superintendent Joan Raymond declined to discuss whether it would be considered for use in the classroom or as a resource material for school health educators. She would not discuss whether the district will use the 15-minute videotape designed to explain AIDS to students as young as 12.

Tiny cottage 'lives bigger' with careful use of space

A home doesn't have to be big to feel big. It's how chairs. Four can dine comfortably that way you use the space you have that counts.

For example, the interior designers at Armstrong took a too-small kitchen and dining room in a little cottage and, by knocking out a wall here, adding a pass-through there and other deft remodeling touches, created a spacious multipurpose kitchen Then they decorated it in a romantic English country style, perfect for a cottage interior.

The first step was to expand the tiny kitchen by removing the wall between it and a hallway, gaining a valuable extra few feet. The only thing now standing between the kitchen and the former hallway is a counter extending from a square floor-to-ceiling pillar which contains shelves for books and a televi-

From a window seat in the former hallway you can watch TV, read or dine on a "trolley table" that parks under the counter when not in use. The window seat is big enough for two adults to sit side by side.

Since this is the sort of small house a young couple with a baby might own, the designers came up with still another use for the window seat. By lowering a detachable railing into grooves at the sides of the window seat, it becomes a playpen where baby can watch whatever's going on in the kitchen — and be

The color scheme is a dreamy and very English salmon and eggshell. The kitchen countertops and all walls in the suite are salmon. The kitchen cabinets and the built-in shelves and cabinets in the dining room-family room are painted eggshell. Originally they were dark wood, but "antiquing" (painting them and then wiping them with stain) transformed their looks entirely Eggshell, too, is the color of the Pearl Glaze nowax flooring which was installed throughout the entire suite to help unify the decor. Shimmery "pearlescent" chips embedded in the flooring pattern lend a special sparkle.

The new kitchen layout puts all major appliances within a 4-foot radius of the kitchen's center. There's loads of storage, too, including a closet just for cleaning supplies, another that holds four wooden folding chairs, a pantry for canned goods and a small-appliance garage

Arched moldings fixed to the ceiling in the former hallway give that part of the kitchen an arbor atmosphere. And the kitchen suite is accessorized in the English country style, with decorative china plates mounted on walls, a soup tureen in the shape of a rabbit, and petit point pillows on the window seat.

DEAR ABBY: I've never written for advice before, but this issue cannot be resolved by any other

About a year ago, my husband and I became aware of a "Peeping Tom" who occasionally looks into our bedroom window at night. Our bedroom is on the first floor, facing a woods, and would be considered very private. We also have blinds, but because I sometimes leave the bedroom windows open, the blinds blow to the side.

I have not called the police because the "Tom" is our next-door neighbor. He is a respected professional man and has always been a friend to my husband and me, and his wife and children are very dear to us. We are angry and frustrated and don't know what to do.

I'm on the verge of confronting him, and if I do, it will forever change our relationship with him. (I'm assuming he will deny it.) I've already told his wife that I'd seen "someone" at our window, and to ask her husband if he'd seen anyone in hopes that it would scare him away, but he keeps at it.

Any ideas? Or should I just be

DEAR UNEASY: Even respected professional men are not exempt from this kind of behavior. Your neighbor needs help. You and/or your husband should confront him and tell him that if he doesn't get professional help, you will be forced to tell his wife. And, if necessary, you will report him to the police. Although most "Peeping Toms" seldom go beyond "looking," their yictims feel threatened and their privacy is invaded.

Exercise may delay aging

Childhood asthma is serious

NEW YORK (AP) - New evidence indicates exercise may delay the aging process and decrease the effects of heart disease, reports the Reebok Aerobic

Information Bureau. A body's ability to deliver oxygen to working muscles declines about 15 percent each decade after you pass the age of 30 or 40. With a program of regular exercise, however, people aged 59 to 83 were able to delay and even stop this deterioration.

Welcome, the San Francisco Giants said to Rick Reuschel. Welcome back, the New York Mets said to Rick Aguilera.

Glad to have you back, the Houston Astros said to Bob Knepper.

All three pitchers had strong outings Monday night to keep the two National League division races close.

San Francisco beat Philadelphia 6-1 as Reuschel allowed five hits in seven innings in his first appearance for the Giants after they acquired him in a trade with Pittsburgh last Friday.

The Giants remained a halfgame ahead of Houston in the West as the Astros defeated St. Louis 5-2 behind Knepper's seven-hitter and first complete game of the season. Knepper has a 4-1 record and an earned run average of 3.29 in his last six appearances after a 3-12 start.

The New York Mets moved within 31/2 games of the first-place Cardinals in the East with a 1-0 victory over Los Angeles. Aguilera, in his first appearance since May 20, returned from an elbow injury to shut out the Dodgers on four hits for 7 2-3 innings.

In the only other NL game, Pittsburgh defeated Cincinnati 5-4. The Giants got 12 hits against starter Bruce Ruffin, 10-10, and three relievers. Reuschel, 9-6 with a 2.69 ERA this season after shoulder surgery nearly ended his career in 1982, struck out a season-high eight batters and walked none as he won his first game since beat-plete game since Aug. 15, 1986 as five days, had a 6.35 ERA before Houston won for the 10th time in his turnaround.

"At the All-Star break, I was just thankful for the three days off," Knepper said. "I worked so hard between starts trying to figure out what was wrong, but nothing seemed to work."

Rookie Joe Magrane, 6-6, was the loser, allowing two runs on five hits in seven innings. Mets 1, Dodgers 0

New York got the only run it needed against Los Angeles when Keith Hernandez singled in the fourth inning.

Aguilera, 5-2, who sprained a ligament in his right elbow and was placed on the disabled list on May 21, retired 15 consecutive batters from the third inning until the eighth, when Glenn Hoffman singled with two outs.

"My goal was to give seven strong innings, and hope that I was effective," Aguilera said. "The biggest problem I could have now is to worry about the injury reoccurring. I'm just gonna forget about it, and hope it stays sound.'

Randy Myers got the last out in the eighth and Roger McDowell pitched the ninth for his 19th

Pirates 5, Reds 4

Pittsburgh snapped a fourgame losing streak and extended Cincinnati's string of losses to five as Bobby Bonilla hit a threerun homer and Doug Drabek allowed seven hits in seven innings.

Drabek, 6-10, won for the fourth time in his last five decisions as the Pirates won at home against the Reds for the first time in 10 games since Aug. 22, 1985.

The Reds' Tom Browning, 5-11, took the loss.

Pampa's Lady Harvesters lost the tourney. to Amarillo Tascosa 15-5, 15-7 in volleyball action Monday night.

'We were a little flat coming back from the Lubbock Tournament," said Pampa Coach Mike Lopez. "We just didn't move well."

Yolanda Brown blocked well at the net for the Lady Harvesters and teammate Deanye Waters was impressive in a reserve role. 'Tascosa spiked well on us and we just weren't able to put away our spikes," Lopez said. The Lady Harvesters placed

On Friday, the Lady Harvesters defeated Hereford in the first set 15-3, 15-7. They came back on Saturday to beat Lubbock Coronado 15-4, 16-14.

Pampa then lost two-out-ofthree to returning 4-A champs Lamesa. The scores in the set were 15-7, 6-15, 9-15.

Playing for third-place, Pampa defeated Borger 15-7, 3-15, 15-7. The Harvesters, now 4-2 on the season, host Caprock tonight at 6:30 p.m.

Rangers hold off Royals in

By CRAIG HORST AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) -Texas Manager Bobby Valentine was, surprisingly enough, smiling after watching two of his pitchers walk 10 batters in a nineinning game.

That's what watching one of the offending pitchers strike out George Brett to end the game with the tying runs on base will do for a manager.

Bobby Witt and Mitch Williams combined for 10 walks, but Williams got Brett swinging for the final out to preserve a 4-2 Rangers win over the Kansas City Royals on Monday night.

'He makes sure the lefthander is the last batter he faces,' Valentine joked after the lefthanded Williams struck out the lefthanded Brett with four righthanders due to bat next.

Williams put himself in a tight spot by walking Bill Pecota with one out. He struck out Willie Wilson, but then walked Kevin Seitzer to bring up Brett.

"Mitch is throwing the ball real well. He stood in the game and when he gets in a tight situation, he gets out of them," Valentine Williams had relieved Witt with one out in the eighth inning after Witt threatened to walk his ninth batter by throwing two balls to Lonnie Smith. "Bobby had a communication problem," Valentine said. "He said he felt fine. He wasn't fine."

Witt said he had trouble keeping his arm loose because of the unseasonably cool weather in Kansas City. Temperature at gametime was 60 degrees.

"Tonight, I had the toughest time staying loose," said Witt, who now has gone 49 straight starts in his career without completing a game. "We came here from Texas where it was 100 or 105, and I think it was 60 or 65 out there tonight.

'When I went out there in the eighth, I could feel my elbow stiffen up right away. It was a struggle all night.

"I knew I was six outs away. But you've got to think of the team. It was a good move on Bobby's part. I was glad he came out and yanked me.

Kansas City got just three hits in failing to take advantage of eight walks by Witt and two by Williams.

"We needed a couple of big hits and we were back in the game," Royals Manager Billy Gardner said. "Usually with that many walks, you score some runs with just a couple of hits. Witt got himself in trouble, then got himself out with strikeouts and good pitches."

Kansas City missed its best opportunity in the fourth inning, failing to score after Witt walked the bases full with one out.

Frank White hit a short fly to center and Steve Balboni popped out to second to end the inning.

The Royals got their runs when Brett walked in the sixth between strikeouts of Kevin Seitzer and Danny Tartabull. Smith singled and Frank White doubled to pick up the runners, but Balboni flied out to end the inning. Texas scored twice in the fourth for a 4-0 lead. Darrell Porter walked leading off and scored on a double by Tom O'Malley.

Curtis Wilkerson singled on the infield to move O'Malley to third, and O'Malley scored on Scott Fletcher's single behind second.

Ruben Sierra drove in a run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning and Fletcher doubled home Wilkerson after Wilkerson walked in the third.

Royals starter Mark Gubicza went nine innings and fell to 9-14 with the loss. Witt improved to 7-6, and Williams picked up his fourth save.

Baylor's Teaff sets

WACO, Texas (AP) — Baylor Coach Grant Teaff says the 1987 Bears want to become the first team in the school's history to go to three straight bowl games.

Teaff told the media on the Southwest Conference press tour Monday "that would be something very meaningful for us to

Two years ago Baylor defeated Louisiana State in the Liberty Bowl and downed Colorado in the Bluebonnet Bowl last year.

"We can't be over anxious this year as many young teams are," Teaff said. "This is not 1986 when we went into the season knowing we could overpower people."

Raider Club meets tonight

The local Texas Tech Red Raider Club will meet tonight in the Pampa Community Building's M.K. Brown Room on the first floor.

Assistant Athletic Director Jesse Sykes will be the featured speaker at the meeting, set to begin at 7:30 p.m.

Also included, a look at the Raiders upcoming football campaign, an '86 Tech highlight film and a slide show that will detail Tech's new athletic facility.

A door prize of tickets to a Red Raider home game will also be awarded.

All Tech alumni, fans and supporters are welcomed to attend. There is no admission fee.

Soccer registration scheduled Saturday at Pampa Mall

Registration for the Pampa Soccer Association fall season is scheduled Saturday at T-Shirts Plus in the Pampa Mall. Signup times are from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. A final signup will held Sept. 2 from 5 p.m. until

Registration fee is $20 per player, which includes uniforms and insurance. All players registering for the first time or who did not play last year should bring their birth certificates with them

New coaches and referees are also needed and are urged to register Saturday.

The Association also announced that a basic linesmen clinic will be held Aug. 30, starting at 1:30 p.m. at Southwest Park (field two) in Amarillo. There is no charge and the age group is for the Under 14 division or older.

A general meeting for referees will be held Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Southwestern Public Service Building, located across from Southwest Park.

Discussion topics include basic laws review, offside, game control and problems in PSA officiating.

MILWAUKEE (AP) - Once again, the Cleveland Indians find themselves standing in the way of The Streak.

The Milwaukee Brewers' Paul Molitor savaged the Indians last weekend with 10 hits in 20 at-bats. Molitor takes along his 38-game hitting streak tonight to face Cleveland's Ken Schrom in the opener of a three-game series.

A hit in each game of the set would move Molitor past Ty Cobb, who hit in 40 straight games in 1911, and into a tie with George Sisler for the third-longest hitting streak of the century in major league baseball. Sisler hit in 41 in a row in 1922.

The only players with longer consecutive-game batting streaks this century are Cincinnati's Pete Rose, 44 games in 1978, and the New York Yankees' Joe DiMaggio, whose 56game streak in 1941 has long been thought to be unbreakable.

It was the Indians who halted DiMaggio 46 years ago. 'Cleveland's staff is sort of a young staff and it makes it a little difficult when you haven't faced these pitchers a lot," Molitor said during an off-day on Monday.

Molitor is 3-for-6 with five RBI this season against Schrom. who is 5-10 and hass a 6.53 earned-run average. He had two doubles in three at-bats and drove in three runs against the right-hander last week.

'I've had some success against Kenny, but he's had his days where he's given me trouble as well. It will just be a matter of getting ahead in the count and getting some good pitches to hit," Molitor said.

The Indians' other scheduled starters are Rich Yett, 2-5, and Scott Bailes, 6-6. Molitor has not faced Yett this season, but had his troubles last week against Bailes. His only hit in four appearances against Bailes last weekend was a bunt single.

In the 38 games, Molitor has 67 hits in 160 at-bats, a healthy .419 average. For the season, he is hitting .371 and only a lack of plate appearances — he missed 44 games with injuries keeps his name off the top of the American League batting list. Boston's Wade Boggs leads with a .362 average

While the nation's baseball fans watch him, all Molitor can do is study the opposing pitcher.

"You just focus on who you're going to face rather than who you'd rather not face," Molitor said. "But you just try to maintain your own style and not adjust too much to what pitcher is out there on the hill."

Brewers catcher Bill Schroeder, who has been there throughout Molitor's streak, isn't so sure that DiMaggio's record is beyond reach.

'Everybody says it can't be done, that it's the one record that will never be broken," Schroeder said. "Who says it can't? He sprays the ball all over. He's the kind of hitter who

Kosar key to Browns' offense

AFC Central preview

By CHUCK MELVIN AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Browns learned the dangers of standing still in 1981, when they followed their 1980 AFC Central Division championship with an embarrassing 5-11 record

So off a 12-4 season that came with 37 seconds of the Super Bowl, owner Art Modell can't be accused of standing still, although the wisdom of his biggest off-season move remains to be seen. The Browns sent Pro Bowl linebacker Chip Banks to the San Diego Chargers last spring and have replaced him with rookie Mike Junkin of Duke, their No. 1 draft pick.

Coach Marty Schottenheimer has been open in his admiration of Junkin's college performance, but a two-week holdout at the start of training camp put a dent in Junkin's plan to step directly into the starting lineup

"He reminds me of the way Jack Lambert played," Schottenheimer said. "Now, you've got to remember, Mike was at Duke, and the other guy is on his way to the Hall of Fame.'

If Junkin can take over where Banks left off, the Browns should be favored to win their third straight AFC Central Division title. The division became a two-team race between the Browns and Cincinnati Bengals a year ago, and it should be the same in 1987.

Cleveland's 12-4 regular season got somewhat lost in the drama of its two overtime playoff games last year — a 23-20 victory over the New York Jets and the 23-20 loss to the Denver Broncos in which the Broncos tied the score with 37 seconds left in regulation after a 98-yard scoring drive directed by John Elway.

So the Browns must fight the tendency to overlook the task of winning their division, which wasn't as easy as it might have seemed in 1986

Cleveland was 5-1 in the division, splitting with Cincinnati and beating Houston and Pittsburgh twice each. But all four games against the Oilers and Steelers were close, and two went into overtime

Quarterback Bernie Kosar is the key to the Cleveland offense. He passed for 3,854 yards while throwing just 10 interceptions

Cleveland's running game, one of the league's best in 1985. suffered in 1986 because of injuries to backs Kevin Mack and Earnest Byner and because of the passing offense installed by offensive coordinator Lindy Infante. That option-filled system got off to a slow start, but Kosar felt comfortable with it by year's end.

"It's the second year with the same system and really the first time in about five or six years that the Browns have had the same system back to back, so it'll help all of us," he said. The Browns' respectable defense, built on the man-to-man coverage of cornerbacks Hanford dixon and Frank Minnifield, might make the difference in the divisional battles with Cincinnati, whose offense was the best in the NFL a year ago.

The offense was so good that Coach Sam Wyche sees no reason they cannot improve on their 10-6 mark, which left them a tiebreaker shy of making the playoffs in 1986. But the defense gave up 394 points, by far the worst in the division.

Quarterback Boomer Esiason passed for 3,959 yards and 24 touchdowns last year and has two of the best receivers in the league in Cris Collinsworth and Eddie Brown. Pro Bowl back James Brooks averaged 5.3 yards per carry and finished with 1,087 yards rushing and another 686 yards receiving.

No. 1 draft pick Jason Buck, who was expected to step right in an improve the pass rush, is a holdout, so defensive line coach Bill Urbanik is teaching his linemen karate techniques to improve their pass rush.

The Steelers' 1986 season was wrecked by a 1-6 start, and they finished at 6-10.

"The strength of the team right now is probably the rushing game. We have Earnest Jackson and Walter Abercrombie. They ranked third and fourth respectively in the conference rushing," said team spokesman Dan Edwards. Mark Malone returns for his third year as Pittsburgh's starting quarterback after a poor 1986 in which he passed for 2,444 yards with 18 interceptions. The Steeler passing game ranked last in the AFC as Coach Chuck Noll's team tumbled to its worst record since 1970.

The Steelers' hopes of rebounding this year suffered a blow when their top draft pick, cornerback Rod Woodson of Purdue, announced he was bypassing the team's contract offer to try out for the 1988 Olympics as a hurdler, although he may yet sign at some point.

The Oilers, 5-11 last year, are surprisingly confident for a team that has the worst overall record in the NFL the past

The reason? Coach Jerry Glanville revised his offense late in the year, and quarterback Warren Moon began to resemble the player he was in the Canadian Football League, leading Houston to four victories in the last six games he started.

The Oilers' offense has been set back by the holdouts of veteran offensive tackle Bruce Matthews and their firstround draft pick, fullback Alonzo Highsmith.

On defense, the Houston pass rush was weak. Ray Childress led the Oilers with five sacks.

Running back Mike Rozier, a disappointment in his two years with the Oilers, has his own plan for turning things around in Houston. He's switched his jersey number from 33 to 30 — the number he wore when he won the Heisman Trophy

U.S. Golf Amateur tees off today

AP Sports Writer

JUPITER, Fla. (AP) — Anyone who doesn't consider the U.S. Amateur as one of golf's major championships better not try to convince Arnold Palmer, who is mighty proud of having won the title in 1954.

'It's one of the most difficult tournaments I've every played in and won," Palmer said at the PGA Championship in nearby Palm Beach Gardens earlier this month. "Of all the championships, it deserves the category of a major." A field of 288 golfers culled from 4,084 entries were set for today's opening round of this year's Amateur, at Jupiter Hills Country Club. Defending champion Buddy Alexander and two-time winner Jay Siegel head the field for the six-day event. Alexander, the golf coach at Louisiana State University, beat Wake Forest golfer Chris Kite last year to win the title at Shoal Creek in Alabama. Kite has since turned pro-Siegel, of Newton Square, Pa., captured the title in 1984 and

The field was scheduled to begin 36 holes of medal play today on the two par-72 courses at Jupiter Hills. After each golfer plays one round on the 6,915-yard Hills course and one on the 6.542-yard Village Course, the field will be cut to the top 64 players for the match-play competition.

The field will be cut to 32 players in the first day of match play. The champion will have to survive two rounds Friday and two rounds Saturday before a 36-hole final match-play round for the title.

Most of the field earned spots in the Amateur at 64 qualifying tournaments, although 14 players had exemptions into the event. Among those are 17-year-old Brett Quigley of Barrington, R.I. and 57-year-old Bo Williams of Ocala. Quigley won the United States Golf Association Junior Amateur and Williams won the USGA Senior Amateur.

Other notable players in the field include NCAA champion Brian Watts of Oklahoma State, 1986 Amateur Public Links champion Billy Mayfair of Arizona State and Gary Nicklaus, a son of Jack Nicklaus

They will be playing courses regarded as among the best in the country. Both were designed by the late George Fazio, and the USGA requested no significant changes for the big event. The courses are built on a coastal ridge, which means they are more hilly than most Florida courses

The U.S. Amateur is the oldest golf competition in the country, having started in 1895. Its past champions include Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Gene Littler, Lanny Wadkins, Jerry Pate, Hal Sutton and five-time winner Bobby Jones.

Kramer turns patients into receivers

By MIKE NADEL AP Sports Writer

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) - During the last month, Tommy Kramer was one of the Hazelden Foundation's most popular residents - even if he did give out as many bruises as auto-Hazelden's rehabilitation center, which treats people for substance abuse, was the quarterback's home for 28 days after a July 24 arrest for driving while intoxicated.

"I signed a lot of autographs, but I expected that," said Kramer, the NFL's top-rated passer in 1986 who on Monday made his 1987 training camp debut. "But when we had meetings in our unit, I was treated just like everybody else.

Kramer, 32, coming off the best of his 10 NFL seasons, didn't want to lose his edge during the month of treatment for alcohol abuse. So he made receivers out of the other patients at the Center City, Minn., facility.

'Most of the guys in my unit there wanted to catch,'' he said after a morning workout. "One ran several patterns but never did catch anything. But one of the guys up there since my first day made a marked improvement.

Many of his Hazelden receivers took their shirts off during workouts, Kramer said. And "a lot of the guys ended up with little stars on their chests ... and bruises all over their arms." Asked what the difference was between the Kramer of a month ago and today's post-treatment version, he said: "There's not anything that you would notice." But he added that he would probably be a more private

"The things I do in my personal life, I'm going to try to make them more personal," he said.

Kramer refused to answer questions about his alcohol problem, saying he doesn't want his personal life aired publicly

He is scheduled to appear at a pretrial hearing Sept. 21 before Hennepin County District Judge Delores Orey. Last week, Kramer pleaded innocent to the DWI charge and if a settlement can't be reached, he would face a jury trial.

Kramer, whose last game came as the NFC's starter in the Pro Bowl, led the NFL with a passing proficiency rating of 92.6. He completed 208 of 372 passes for 3,000 yards and 24 touchdowns while throwing only 10 interceptions in leading the Vikings to a 9-7 record.

After two practices Monday, he felt "a little behind" but said he is confident that his workouts at Hazelden helped prepare him for the Sept. 13 season opener

'One thing I've always taken great pride in is my discipline in getting ready to play football," he said. "I worked a lot harder physically (at Hazelden) than I do at training camp.' He said his daily 2- to 21/2-hour workouts included distance running, sprints and dropbacks.

Kramer, who also underwent treatment at a California facility in 1982, said Hazelden's rules prohibited actual games. The rules also wouldn't allow him to fraternize with Ike Holt, a Vikings cornerback who returned to camp about two weeks ago after undergoing similar treatment.

Vikings Coach Jerry Burns said that Wade Wilson, who has backed up Kramer for six years and who has guided the Vikings to a 1-1 preseason record, would continue to work as the No. 1 quarterback in practice.

But Burns said Kramer would likely see some action in Saturday's exhibition against New England.

Citations against skinny-dippers to be dropped, prosecutor says

AUSTIN (AP) — Citations issued to three nude sunbathers at a popular Lake Travis nude beach will be voided because it's not against the law to do a little skinny-dipping in Texas, a prosecutor

The citations were issued Monday to three swimmers, two men and a woman, after an antipornography group complained to Travis County authorities.

Travis County Sheriff Doyne Bailey says the citations issued at Hippie Hollow will be voided because he and County Attorney Ken Oden determined that the swimmers committed no crime by skinny dipping in the rock, shrubbed cove.

Nude swimming or sunbathing at Lake Travis is technically illegal, but the sheriff's department receives few complaints about it, Bailey said. Besides, a sign at the beach's entrance warns patrons of possible nude bathers.

"Under this set of circumstances, it is stretching the law to penalize somebody for it," Bailey

"The fact is, it is not illegal in Texas to get naked," Oden said."It is not illegal in Texas even to go skinny-dipping.'

'It is only illegal to go skinny-dipping in public, and (to be) reckless in that you realize someone might be present who would be offended or alarmed, and you decided to do it anyway," Oden continued.

The citations were issued by a sheriff's deputy after complaints by members of Citizens Against Pornography, led by Executive Director Mark

"This is part of our overall program to clean up our city and county parks of indecent and lewd conduct," Weaver said.

He said the group objected to the sign, which reads: "Nude swimming or sunbathing may be occurring beyond this point. Consult attendant for details of nudity statutes.'

Weaver said the sign gives the impression that nudity is allowed, but it is his opinion violations of state law are occurring.

"I think he's got a good point," Bailey said.

Tip O'Neill talks candidly of politicians in new book

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thomas P. O'Neill, the colorful Boston Irishman who took his share of criticism from Republicans, the media and even some Democrats during his 50 years in public office, is now dishing it out.

The newly retired House speaker talks candidly and bluntly about the leading political figures of the past four decades in his new autobiography, "Man of the House: The Life and Political Memoirs of Tip O'Neill."

O'Neill calls Mikhail Gorbachev dangerous because he is an "appealing guy," Robert Kennedy a "self-important upstart" and Ronald Reagan a terrible president who would have made a great

O'Neill takes readers from his first dip into politics, working for Alfred E. Smith's presidential election in 1928 as a high school freshman in Cambridge, Mass., through his 34 years in the House. the last 10 as speaker. He retired in January at age

The Massachusetts Democrat praises Reagan, his longtime adversary, for his wit, sense of humor and communications skills. "He's the best public speaker I've ever seen," O'Neill writes.

But O'Neill attacks Reagan not only on his policies but on his handling of the job.

"Most of the time he was an actor reading lines, who didn't understand his own programs," O'Neill writes. "I hate to say it about such an agreeable man, but it was sinful that Ronald Reagan ever became president. But let me give him his due: he would have made a great king.'

He calls Jimmy Carter "the smartest public official I've ever known" on the issues, but one who failed because he refused to learn the ways of O'Neill places much of the blame on Carter's staff.

Discussing Soviet leader Gorbachev, O'Neill says: "He's a very appealing guy, which is what makes him so dangerous.

Historic, growing city awaits papal event visitors

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - When worshippers stream in to see Pope John Paul II next month, they will find a historic, growing metropolis voted the nation's most livable city and already accustomed to dealing with large

That may be a surprise to some out-of-state visitors who city officials say may have preconceived notions that San Antonio is a big, dusty Western town.

While the papal visit may have a direct economic impact of about $35 million, city officials are hoping for an indirect bonus — a boost to San Antonio's image. The international media coverage will be priceless, said Kathy Wine, spokeswoman for the San Antonio Visitors and Convention

Bureau. City and Catholic church officials do not know how many people to expect for the pope's visit on Sept. 13, but they believe the city's experience in handling 10 million visitors each year will enable them to accommodate the crowds

Second only to the military industry, tourism is San Antonio's No. 2 revenue-producer, accounting for $1 billion annually. The state's third-largest city, with a population of 900,000, plays host to more than 900 conventions each year.

"I think people are going to see a very courteous and concerted effort by the community to assure that the pope has a great visit here and that the people who are coming here have a comfortable stay," said Nick Milanovich. vice president of the Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce.

"This is a loving city and a growing city and all of those (things) will be very positive for us," he said.

The pope will celebrate an outdoor Mass to more than 500,000 people at a 144-acre site west of downtown. He later will be chauffeured through the streets of San Antonio along a parade route that passes by the Alamo on his way to address religious gatherings at several churches.

Neighborhood groups and merchants along the route already are sprucing up their communities and are preparing to hang banners to greet the pope.

Out-of-town visitors will be treated to historic sights and the River Walk, a picturesque conglomeration of retail shops and restaurants along the San Antonio River.

They also may stumble onto downtown building and road construction projects, but local officials believe the temporary congestion shows a vibrant city on the move.

City Manager Lou Fox said even though there is no specific clean-up operation by the city, San Antonio's image will be posi-

"We have one of the best freeway systems in the country. There will be some congestion, but our city is an event city and we anticipate things will go fairly smoothly," Fox said.

Historic preservation efforts and San Antonio's commitment to the arts catapulted the city to national prominence in June when the U.S. Conference of Mayors voted San Antonio the nation's most livable city among those with populations over

"I certainly think that favorable publicity will influence people to check it out for themselves. If it's a nice enough city to live in, it's a nice city to visit," said Ms.

"Texas is big and San Antonio is known for the Alamo, but the city also is known to have lots of trees, is green, has water and is a charming city," she said. Historic preservation also is a plus, she
