Peace plan would clip Soviet claws

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Jim Wright today greeted as "very positive" the early responses of Nicaraguan officials to the Central American peace initiative he and President Reagan devised, but the plan was being viewed warily in Congress.

Wright told reporters he already had received a letter from Nicaraguan Vice President Sergio Ramirez reporting that the Managua government's first reaction was positive. "All the points are worthy to be discussed in a very positive way," he quoted Ramirez as saying.

"It's a very positive response to our initiative. I should think we'd say, 'Hurray, fine, let's get going — the sooner the better,'" Wright said.

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, who was meeting with other Central American heads of state today in Guatemala City to discuss regional peace, said Wednesday he was willing to discuss the peace plan, which would ask his government to restore democratic freedoms, shun Soviet bloc military aid and agree to a cease-fire in return for a suspension of U.S. military aid to the Contra rebels battling his Sandinista regime.

"The government of Nicaragua invites the government of the United States to immediately initiate negotiations in Washington, Managua or in a third country to have an unconditional dialogue to discuss the said (American) initiative," Ortega said.

That response, with its reference to "unconditional dialogue," drew criticism from Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, who said late Wednesday that Ortega seemed to be wanting to avoid negotiations with the Contras.

"What they'd like to do apparently is to delay more and try to make it out as if this were a U.S.-Nicaraguan struggle,"

Abrams said on ABC's "Nightline" program. "It isn't. It's a war among Nicaraguans."

"I think their purpose is probably to delay as much as possible but not be blamed for turning down the president's plan," he said.

But Wright said today that Abrams had not been present in any of the discussions on the peace plan and was not representing the administration's position.

He called Abrams' comments "counterproductive," and added: "In my view, that would constitute bad faith in the beginning."

Texans say gulf crisis could push oil to $50

HOUSTON (AP) — An energy crisis worse than that of the 1970s could befall the United States if oil shipments are disrupted through the Strait of Hormuz, two experts said.

"We would go very quickly past $30, $40, $50 (per barrel of oil), somewhere up there," said Arved Teleki, president of Houston-based Hydrocarbon Consultants Inc. "There is no telling."

Teleki and George P. Mitchell, chairman of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp., on Wednesday held a news conference to outline implications for the United States of a disruption of supplies.

"You're going to go through the '70s cycle of gas lines, school shutdowns and problems all over the nation," said George P. Mitchell, chairman of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. "The national security is at stake."

"Last year, the United States consumed more oil than the year before and produced less, with imports filling the void," Mitchell said. "This year will be the same: Higher consumption, lower production and increased imports."

Teleki agreed. "We are up against a very, very confused, confusing, disturbed, complicated situation," Teleki said.

Iran is threatening to attack Kuwaiti oil tankers and U.S. military convoys escorting them. Iran and Iraq have been at war for seven years.

Teleki estimated that a 90-day disruption of access through the Strait of Hormuz could drive oil prices as high as $55 per barrel, assuming roughly 8.5 million barrels per day are taken off the market as a result.

If a short-term crisis passed with no major conflagration, prices would stabilize around $30 per barrel, he said, emphasizing that a number of factors could change his scenario.

AIDS-infected child molester likely was a victim of abuse

MARLIN (AP) — A man who officials fear may have given AIDS to as many as 40 children was a victim of sexual abuse as a child, a former police officer said.

Greg Kouba, who investigated the death of Jimmy G. Etheridge, said Etheridge's former wife told him that Etheridge was sexually molested over a few years.

Etheridge, 37, was found dead in his bedroom June 30. Police say he had been shot in the head, probably just before dawn that day. An autopsy showed Etheridge had been exposed to the AIDS virus.

Officials say Etheridge may have passed the virus to children with whom he had sexual relations.

Debra Coca, chief Falls County juvenile probation officer, said officials found computer records in Etheridge's home indicating he may have had sexual relations with as many as 40 children in Louisiana, Arkansas, Mexico and Texas, including at least 10 in Marlin and some in Waco.

Five children in this small community near Waco have had confidential tests for exposure to AIDS after it was learned they were molested, authorities said Wednesday.

Schneider tenants measure curtains as opening nears

Pampa residents have been waiting since the mid-1960s for a rebirth of the vacant and old Schneider Hotel.

They must wait yet one more month while construction workers finish converting the old hotel into an apartment complex for senior citizens and handicapped people.

The historic six-story building at the corner of Frost and Atchison, now designated the Schneider House, was supposed to open its French doors to apartment dwellers in mid-July.

But with sawdust still on the lobby floor, toilets still missing from some of the apartment bathrooms, parking lots still unpaved and wood still unpainted, the once-grand hotel's grand reopening has been delayed until later this month.

Schneider House Manager Pat Bolton said it may be late August or early September before the apartments are open to the public.

The 52-unit apartment complex has been funded through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Bill exempts Pampa from paying for sleep

With the stroke of a pen Wednesday, Gov. Bill Clements saved the city of Pampa about $80,000 — or much more.

Clements signed a bill that exempts Pampa from a new state law dealing with the work week for firefighters. The bill was sponsored by Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, and Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, and was among 24 measures signed by the governor Wednesday.

"I can sleep a lot easier now," City Manager Bob Hart said today. "While we anticipated him signing the bill, it was certainly a relief when Rep. Whaley's office called yesterday when the bill was signed."

The new measure essentially allows Pampa to continue paying its firefighters for a 40-hour work week instead of the 53-hour week required by a law passed during the regular session.

The 53-hour law was enacted as a means of meeting federal Fair Labor Standards requirements. But, Hart said, the law addressed only one of two options for paying firefighters in the act.

He explained that cities wanting to use a 40-hour week can remove eating and sleeping time from the firefighters' time, and pay overtime beyond 40 hours. The 40-hour week also was chosen because it allows firefighters to conduct building inspections, Hart said.

Hart said changing to a 53-hour week would have cost the city about $80,000.

Gulf forces stage largest military effort since Vietnam

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's decision to provide protection to Kuwaiti oil tankers in the Persian Gulf is forcing the Pentagon into one of the largest deployments of American forces since the Vietnam War.

By the end of the month, U.S. Navy forces alone in the region will include at least 24 combat and support ships carrying more than 15,000 sailors and officers.

That total does not include military personnel posted in several Persian Gulf countries such as Saudi Arabia and Oman where Air Force and Navy surveillance aircraft, respectively, are based, and in Bahrain, where the Navy's Mideast Task Force has a small support facility.

Although the Pentagon refuses to disclose the precise number of American servicemen in those three countries, the total could be as high as 2,000.

The last time such a large American force was gathered for a single mission was in early 1986, when the Navy combined three aircraft carrier battle groups for operations across Libya's "Line of Death" in the Gulf of Sidra.

At least 25,000 men and more than 30 ships were involved in those maneuvers; each aircraft carrier carried at least 5,000 men.

The Libyan operations were short-lived, however, as were other recent missions such as the 1983 invasion of Grenada and the deployment of Marines to Lebanon that same year.

Reagan administration officials have said Navy escorts for Kuwaiti tankers will continue as long as those ships are threatened with attack by Iran.

That open-ended commitment — Iran has vowed to continue attacking Kuwaiti ships as part of its 7-year-old war with Iraq — has been coupled in recent weeks with the realization that U.S. forces must be bolstered to deal with the threat of underwater mines and speedboat attacks.

The result is a slowly building commitment of American forces to one of the most difficult regions in the world in which to mount operations.

Since May 17, when the USS Stark was inadvertently attacked by an Iraqi warplane, the number of Navy warships posted inside the gulf has grown.

From three destroyers and three frigates, the Navy now has eight warships in the gulf — three cruisers, one destroyer and four frigates — in addition to the command ship LaSalle.

Two other large Navy ships are either on the way or soon will be: The helicopter carrier Guadalcanal will bring mine-sweeping choppers to the gulf, while the amphibious landing ship Raleigh is steaming with small mine-sweeping boats and SEAL fast-attack boats.

Just outside the gulf, patrolling in the northern Arabian Sea and directly supporting the convoy operations, is another Navy battle group headed by the carrier Constellation. Approximately 5,000 sailors and airmen are on the "Connie."

Steaming with that carrier is one of the Navy's most modern Aegis-class cruisers, the Valley Forge, plus one destroyer, two frigates and two support ships.

Now in the Pacific Ocean and steaming toward the gulf is another Navy battle group headed by the giant battleship Missouri. That group, expected to arrive within the next 10 days or so, is known to include another Aegis cruiser, the Bunker Hill, the nuclear-powered cruiser Long Beach, one destroyer, one frigate and one support ship.

The Navy also has dispatched small teams of underwater demolition experts to the gulf along with a team of sonar technicians. Pentagon sources disclosed Wednesday that several Army helicopter gunships also had been ordered to the gulf to help Navy warships defend the tankers against speedboat attacks.

Pentagon officials speaking on condition they not be named said the mix of U.S. forces in the region can be expected to change over time.

On Capitol Hill, members of Congress suggested that most moderate lawmakers seemed to be accepting the initiative in principle, although questioning some of its specifics and doubting its chances for success.
"The speaker has undertaken an enormous risk," said Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., a staunch opponent of Contra aid. But he added that the agreement means "the credibility of this administration is on the line."
"This administration has pursued six years of war. It just seems to me they could pursue 60 days of peace," Bonior said.
Skepticism was greatest among the most conservative and most liberal members, with some rejecting the idea outright.
Conservative Republican Sen. Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming called it "the least promising initiative I have ever heard of," saying the move invited stalling by the Sandinistas.
Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., said the Iran-Contra hearings, and in particular the testimony of Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, had swung public opinion in favor of Contra aid, and that the diplomatic plan amounted to "snatching defeat from the jaws of victory." But he conceded his view was not widespread among Republicans.
Rep. George Brown, D-Calif., said he was skeptical about it and that "anybody who would buy into this ought to have his head examined."
Brown said the administration initiative, coming less than two months before Contra aid expires and when the administration is suffering in the polls from the Iran-Contra affair, "seems a self-serving device to try to reverse their problems."
He and other Democrats said they feared the plan was a trap, an effort by the White House intended to fail so that the administration could point fingers at Managua and boost its chances for winning military aid.
But both Wright and House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., said they believed a majority of their parties' members supported the initiative.
Supportive statements also came from their Senate counterparts, Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., and Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Plan
Contra political leaders met with Reagan on Wednesday after the proposal was announced. They indicated that while they welcomed the plan and were willing to negotiate a cease-fire, they likely would have reservations about specific points.
Reagan called the development a "general agreement" with congressional leaders to put aside the military option and pursue a diplomatic track toward Central American peace, at least until Sept. 30, when $100 million in U.S. aid to the rebels runs out.
The plan was being offered for consideration at a meeting today in Guatemala between Ortega and the presidents of the other four Central American nations, meeting to discuss a similar proposal by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias.
Neither Contra backers nor opponents made any commitment on what would happen on military aid should the initiative fail. The White House made it clear it would seek a renewal, and congressional opponents said they would fight such a request.
Wright said he believed the initiative represented the best hope for Central American peace in a decade, and cited a positive letter from the Nicaraguan ambassador to Washington, Carlos Tunnerman.
The plan calls for an immediate cease-fire in Nicaragua followed by negotiations to be completed by Sept. 30. During that period, the administration would refrain from asking for renewed Contra aid, and the Nicaraguans would lift their state of emergency and restore civil rights and liberties.
After Sept. 30, the United States would suspend Contra aid, and Nicaragua would agree to stop receiving aid from Cuba and the Soviet Union and would set a timetable for new elections. Negotiations between the United States, Nicaragua and other nations of the region would follow immediately, aimed at eliminating foreign military personnel in Central America and setting up a regional security agreement.

Texas banker's wife found shot to death
KERRVILLE (AP) — The body of Joyce Louise Walters, wife of a Kerrville banker, was found today on the couple's ranch south of Kerrville, a spokesman for the family confirmed.
The body was found on the couple's 9,000-acre Prison Canyon Ranch, and Mrs. Walters had been shot, said Mike Sullivan, a vice president of the Bank of Kerrville.
Mrs. Walters' husband, Roland Walters, is the bank's chairman of the board.
"I was informed by one of our directors, Gordon Monroe, that Joyce had been found on the ranch. That was at about 8:30 this morning," Sullivan told The Associated Press.
"We don't have any other detailed information at this point. We're awaiting official word like everyone else," Sullivan added.
Asked if she was shot, Sullivan said, "I think that is correct."
A news conference was scheduled at noon CDT today. However, it was scheduled before news surfaced about the finding of the body. Kerr County Sheriff Cliff Greeson held two news conferences on Wednesday to discuss the status of the search.
Authorities had searched for Mrs. Walters, 44, after her clothing and jewelry were found Tuesday morning in Verde Creek near a store the woman owned and operated at Camp Verde, about one-third mile from where the clothing was found and several miles from the Walters' home.
Greeson said Walters called him to report his wife missing and that the first item of clothing

The manager said the delay is putting a strain on residents who are currently staying in HUD-funded housing and whose annual contracts expired before July.

But the delay isn't dampening residents' desire to move into the refurbished building, Bolton said, noting that about half of the apartments have already been reserved.

"We're trying to keep the excitement going," she said.
Bolton said another plus will be a park across Russell Street from the apartments — where the old Pampa Motel used to be. She said developer Robert Caplan of Houston will donate an ornate gazebo for the park, which also will feature brick walkways and Victorian-style park benches.

Convicted lawyer chastised by judge

PECOS (AP) — A former trial lawyer was sentenced to 25 years for continuing criminal enterprise and 20 years for cocaine smuggling by a judge who lectured him for squandering his opportunities.

"You flat misspent your life," U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton II said before sentencing ex-trial lawyer, John Webster Flanagan, 63, of Austin.

Flanagan was sentenced to 25 years imprisonment for continuing criminal enterprise and to three concurrent 20-year sentences for cocaine smuggling.

Before pronouncing sentence, Bunton briefly reviewed Flanagan's criminal life following his 1969 conviction for income tax evasion and subsequent convictions for cocaine and marijuana smuggling.

Flanagan was suspended from the State Bar of Texas in 1970 and was disbarred in 1972.

Since then, Bunton noted the government has recorded "page after page after page of Flanagan's escapades in dealing in dope," among other wrongdoings.

In his plea, Flanagan told the judge that "there's not too much I can say that you don't already know. I can't tell you much about age."

Bunton is 72. "Age doesn't affect my outlook," Flanagan said. But he asked for a sentence which would at least give him hope of "getting out of the penitentiary before I die."

Bunton said many defendants in drug cases are poor and not very smart, allowing themselves to be used as paid mules hauling marijuana and cocaine into the United States from Mexico and Central and South America.

But Flanagan had three college degrees, including those in engineering and law, and once commanded good fees and respect as a practicing attorney, Bunton said.

"Mr. Flanagan, it is with a heavy heart that I sentence you," Bunton said.

Following a 1½-day jury trial in early July, Flanagan was convicted in Pecos on July 2 of the charges. A continuing-criminal-enterprise conviction carries a mandatory 20-year sentence and a possible life sentence.

In the trial's closing arguments, Assistant U.S. Attorney Mike McDonald of El Paso noted that Flanagan in 1986 had imported 1,650 pounds of cocaine, valued at $1,500 per ounce. The poundage would amount to almost $40 million in illicit sales, and Flanagan's cut of the imported drug would be about $2 million.

Flanagan has been held without bail in the Reeves County Jail since early 1987.

Firm builds better garbage trap

By JOHN CLIFT
Denison Herald

GUNTER (AP) — There is more to getting rid of garbage than putting it on a barge and sending it to sea, or fighting over a landfill.

Here in the corner of southwest Grayson County the Taylor Tank Co. is building an answer. Not the entire project, but a very vital part of a fired solid waste disposal plant.

"What we are building is a unit that operates more or less like a muffler on an auto. This is a giant separator for a fire solid waste disposal unit. As the waste is burned in an incinerator, a spray of water in this unit produces a residue that is heated and creates a steam that can make electricity," explained Chauncey Taylor, who heads the Gunter company.

The unit has been approved by the Environmental Protection Agency, Taylor says, and it is the second unit that Taylor has built. The first is firing a waste disposal plant in Deer Park.

Taylor is building the unit for Rollins Environmental Corp., which is tied to the German-based firm of Lurgi Babcock in a joint venture. Rollins is following a design created by Ford, Bacon and Davis of Salt Lake City.

While the units Taylor is constructing now are for larger cities, and run into millions of dollars to be placed in operation, they are the key to getting rid of America's growing trash problem, Taylor said.

"I predict before too many more decades, America will be utilizing this system to get rid of its garbage. It already is in use in Germany. Even small towns utilize it. Rather than sewer lines, they have underground conveyor systems with a manhole cover adjacent to every house.

"A family simply dumps their trash down the manhole onto the conveyor," Taylor said. "It is funnelled to the incinerator where a unit designed to fit that town's needs burns the trash and creates enough steam to make the electricity for the entire city."

The Taylor Tank Co. also is building lead pots that are used for recycling old batteries.

"At present, batteries are dumped into lakes, buried or burned and are putting a lot of toxic acids into our water system and ground. With lead pots, these batteries can be melted down and the lead in them then recycled into the building of new batteries," Taylor said.

The trash incinerator project Taylor is building is just one part of a multi-faceted contraption.

Retail leading Houston bankruptcies

HOUSTON (AP) — Local retail failures continue to accelerate and represent 43 percent of all business bankruptcies in the area for the second quarter of this year, an accounting firm survey shows.

Retail failures have risen during the most recent four quarters and remain near the record level at 186 in the second quarter, a survey released Wednesday by the accounting firm of Price Waterhouse shows. During the second quarter of 1986, 84 retail failures were reported.

"While the number of failures is increasing, most are relatively small businesses," the survey says. "Retail sales through May have improved substantially in Houston, increasing 12.4 percent over the prior year."

Real estate and construction failures were slightly lower in the second quarter at 117 compared to 122 for the first quarter of this year, the survey showed. Eighty-three real estate and construction failures were posted in the second quarter of 1986.

The failures for the second quarter of 1987 make up 27 percent of all area bankruptcies.

In dollar terms, real estate and construction failures continue to make up the largest portion of business bankruptcies. The 10 largest business bankruptcies for the second quarter all were related to real estate.

"Much of this trend in real estate and construction failures can be attributed to the decrease in occupancy levels. Houston office vacancy rates averaged 31.3 percent during the second quarter," the survey said. Year-end 1986 statistics showed an overall vacancy rate of 29.8 percent.

The survey also showed oil and gas industry failures dropped to 10 during the second quarter, versus 45 during the same period in 1986 and 14 in the first quarter.

"This result, the best performance in two years, is attributable to the oil price increase during the past nine months coupled with the fact that companies surviving to 1987 have been the most viable competitors," the firm reported.

Only 2 percent of the failures recorded were oil- and gas-related, compared to 36 percent of all business failures five years ago.

Six percent of all failures this quarter were restaurants and 5 percent were manufacturing, the survey showed.

Analysts in the banking industry expect the high rate of failures of financial institutions to continue as bad real estate and energy loans take their toll, primarily on the state's smaller banking facilities, the firm reported.

Through June, there have been 31 Texas financial institutions closed. For the first half of 1987, five more Texas financial institutions have failed than during all of 1986.

Commission awaiting 'lemon law' help

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Motor Vehicle Commission, which is swamped with "Lemon Law" complaints, is waiting to see if Gov. Bill Clements will OK increased appropriations to help deal with the complaints.

The Legislature this year approved four additional lawyers and several support staffers to help the commission sort out complaints from Texans who have problems with their cars and trucks.

Clements' office said he would announce his decisions today on the appropriations bill approved in the recent special session.

"I think it's working great," commission member Sally Hermann of Alvin said Wednesday of the Lemon Law. "But it's taking a little bit too long to get anything done."

Currently, it takes about two years for a consumer to get a commission hearing on a Lemon Law complaint. Henri Ten Brink, the commission's assistant director for enforcement, said there are about 2,000 complaints pending.

Ten Brink said the additional staff would allow the commission to hear up to 40 cases a month, instead of the current six. Cases ruled on Wednesday by the commission included some involving complaints that began in 1985.

In addition to the recommended fund increase, lawmakers this year voted unanimously to eliminate auto dealers from the commission. Until the law was changed this year, the commission included five dealers and four members of the public. Under the new law, which was backed by the Texas Auto Dealers Association, the commission has been reduced to six members, none of them auto dealers.

Wednesday's meeting was the first at which there were no auto dealers on the commission.

"We felt that the time had come to modify the makeup of the commission to rid it of the continuing controversy that we have with manufacturers over the fact that the majority of the members were dealers," said Gene Fondren, TADA's executive director.

Fondren said TADA's support for the change was sparked in part by court rulings indicating disfavor with having auto dealers involved in regulating auto dealers.

Commission member Hermann, owner of a water line construction company, said the dealers would be missed.

"I felt they gave some insight into some of the problems that the public members were not able to see right off the bat. I think they were a very valuable asset," she said.

Erwin Elias of Waco, a Baylor law professor and commission member, said, "It's not going to make too much difference on the consumer matters because the dealers were disqualifying themselves (from selected cases) so frequently anyway."

For example, if a Ford dealer was on the commission, he or she would not participate in Lemon Law complaints involving a Ford vehicle.

The new bill also added a $35 fee for filing Lemon Law complaints. Officials hope that will discourage frivolous filings and raise money for processing complaints. The fee can be recovered from the manufacturer if the commission orders the car maker to buy the car back from the consumer.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Trade bill transmits an economic ailment

Protectionism is a kind of economic AIDS: It turns an economy's immune system against itself. That's just what the Senate trade bill passed last month would do by assaulting the American economy from within. It would drastically weaken our incentives to innovate the only real way to beat the competition in the turmoil of world trade.

The gargantuan, unreadable, 1,100-page Senate bill is not yet written into law; it's headed for a Senate-House conference where it will be merged with an even more protectionist House bill. But the Senate bill may already be hurting Americans. The stock market staggered down by 40 points after the Senate action, perhaps because investors were wondering how much the final trade bill would hurt them.

Really, all this is unnecessary. Maybe our representatives are blind to what's really happening. In June this year, Japanese imports of American food jumped up an astonishing 73.9 percent over June 1986; chemical imports are up 43.9 percent; timber, 35 percent; machinery, 19.6 percent. In contrast, Japanese exports to the United States are down 2.4 percent.

Sure, Japan has protectionist policies. But it's currently pulling down its barriers. Why punish the Japanese? Instead, we should provide them a good example by liberating our own trade.

Maybe it's futile to look for rationality behind Congress' actions. More is likely at work here than pure economics. No reputable economist nowadays, including those advising Congress, supports protectionism of any sort at all. Maybe we're really seeing a hidden form of bigotry.

After all, the Senate and House didn't aim their bills at West Germany, whose export-import imbalance is as extreme as Japan's. Tokyo remains the main target because it's seen as new "Yellow Peril." All those fanatical samurai working overtime to undermine our decent American workers, don't you see?

The funny thing is that this new type of "Jap"-bashing has made some awfully strange bedfellows. Sen. Daniel Inouye and Spark Matsunaga, both of Japanese ancestry, voted for the bill, as did Sen. Alan Cranston, who is supposed to represent the many Californians of Japanese descent.

Thus another form of internal dissolution is advanced: pitting one race of Americans against another. Our great melting pot is turned into a boiling cauldron. President Reagan plans to veto the bill. However, 71 senators voted for the bill, while only 27 opposed it, indicating a veto might be overridden.

There is some hope. While the bill sits in Senate-House conference, it will take months to figure out what any of it says. By then perhaps the current "Yellow Peril"-mania will have died down, and the warnings of economists, businessmen, and the stock market will have been heard.

Otherwise, Congress will inject us with an economic disease that will disable our industries from within.

Busting hookers costs dearly

In the last couple of decades, American attitudes and laws about matters of the flesh have changed dramatically. Sex outside of marriage, for better or worse, is now commonplace. In most places, the law no longer criminalizes adultery. Until the outbreak of AIDS, homosexuality had gained considerable social acceptance, and for the most part gays no longer fear prosecution, at least for private, non-commercial acts between consenting adults. Pornography that would make Hugh Hefner blush is available in every video store.

But in one major area, the law has remained resolutely Victorian. Prostitution, though not exactly a new phenomenon, is still legally forbidden everywhere except in parts of Nevada. And these laws, unlike those affecting dirty movies, aren't there just for show. Police still routinely arrest prostitutes, prosecutors still indict them and judges still sentence them to jail.

The problem is not that commercial sex is an exception to Americans' tolerance of how others satisfy their sexual appetites. A 1977 Time magazine poll made the startling discovery that 59 percent of Americans thought prostitution should be permitted, either without restriction or with some regulation.

But, with the admirable exception of a few counties in Nevada, our laws haven't caught up with our libertarian attitudes. The reason is that those Americans who favor prohibition attach greater importance to the issue than those who believe people's sex lives are their own business, even when federal reserve notes are exchanged. So politicians shy away from any hint of openmindedness.

As in the case of marijuana, the utter futility of our prostitution laws discourages the tolerant majority from insisting on repeal. Because anyone who wants a woman's (or man's) services can easily get them, who cares what the law says?

But futile laws aren't necessarily harmless ones. The American people would be even more critical of our intolerant policy if they knew how costly it is, in both money and safety. What most people don't realize is the inevitable trade-off involved in enforcing the prostitution laws: If a policeman is raiding a massage parlor, he's not going to be investigating robberies. A jail cell occupied by a streetwalker can't be reserved for a child abuser or a drunk driver.

One reason the trade-off is ignored is because it's hard to measure. But now it has been measured. Thanks to the heroic work of Julie Pearl, a recent graduate of the University of California's Hastings College of the Law, we can now see what we sacrifice in dollars and diverted resources by treating prostitutes as criminals, and the picture is appalling.

Pearl's exhaustive study of 16 major cities, summarized in her article in the April 1987 issue of the Hastings Law Journal, found that together they spend more than $120 million a year to combat commercial sex, including expenses associated with police, courts and jails.

More alarming than the monetary expense is the drain on police time. In the average city, says Pearl, the number of arrests for prostitution equals the number of arrests for all violent crimes. One result is that in 72 percent of all reported violent crimes, police make no arrest. They're too busy locking up call girls to waste time on muggers.

Each arrest consumes valuable police time, making life easier for real criminals. In the typical case, Pearl found, the time spent by the arresting officer booking the suspect, writing a report, testifying in court and the like adds up to 21 hours. To take one hooker off the street for a few hours takes a policeman off the street for the equivalent of nearly three working days.

It's commonly assumed that crackdowns on prostitution also deter other street crimes, but Pearl's evidence points in the opposite direction. In New York City, an effort to clean up Times Square nearly doubled the number of arrests for prostitution. But the rate of serious crimes in the same area rose by as much as 40 percent, while arrest rates dropped. Houston had a similar experience. "Even the most vigorous police battles against prostitution yield Pyrrhic victories at best," writes Pearl.

Unfortunately, this news comes just as the AIDS epidemic is providing a new excuse for laws against commercial sex. But the impulse is exactly the wrong one. At Nevada's famous Chicken Ranch, a legal brothel, the proprietor attracts customers with strict health regulations on his employees. In a furtive illegal market such precautions are much less feasible.

AIDS is just one more empty pretext for our mindless laws against prostitution, which draw resources away from truly dangerous crimes without ever making much progress against the vice they aim to eradicate.

Prohibitionists insist we can't afford to sanction commercial sex, but Pearl's evidence makes it clear we can't afford not to.

Never thought I'd see the day

A lot of things have happened I never thought I would see happen.

I never thought I'd be able to see outright nakedness on my television.

I never thought I would see people go into a bar and order a $2.50 bottle of water.

I never thought I would see grown men wearing earrings or women wearing Jockey shorts.

Air-conditioned doghouses amaze me, along with cars and vending machines that talk, and women umpires.

But, now, in the immortal words of my mother when I told her socks had gone to $3 a pair, "Don't that beat all?"

This just in from the always fashion-conscious New York Times:

"... In June, a store called American Retro in the West End of London began selling a product called Safe-Fax, a $30 condom holder (in brown, black or burgundy leather) ..."

Thirty-dollar leather (in brown, black or burgundy) condom holders. The memories began coming back so vividly.

The first condom (you have to say "condom," you can't say what we really called them, just yet) I ever saw was the one my friend brought to school when we were in second grade.

He found it in his parents' medicine cabinet

Lewis Grizzard

while looking for milk of magnesia to give his cat.

My friend showed the thing to me, but neither of us had any idea what it was. Naturally, it took us about four seconds to determine it was some sort of balloon.

My friend blew it up and tried to twist and turn it around to make it look like a dog. We'd seen a clown do that with a balloon at the circus.

The teacher spotted us, however, and rushed over and snatched our balloon-condom away.

"Never let me see you with something like that again!" she ranted.

"What," my friend asked, "I should have tried to make a bunny rabbit?"

It didn't take us very long after that to find out exactly what these items were and what they were used for.

As we got older, we wanted to have a condom of our own. I am convinced nobody actually had sex in this country before 1965, but just in case the impossible might occur, we wanted to be ready.

After we purchased our condoms from a machine in the local truck stop, the problem was where to keep them.

All mothers rummage through their children's drawers looking for evidence, so it wouldn't be a good idea to hide them there.

What we did was put them in our wallets. In no time at all, the condom made an imprint in the wallet that gave away exactly what it was, so I took to sleeping with my wallet so my mother wouldn't see it and think I was perverted and give me milk of magnesia.

How timid were those days. How naive we were. But sometimes when I read The New York Times, I sort of miss those timid, naive times.

Thirty-dollar leather (in brown, black or burgundy) condom holders. For the modern man, or woman, I suppose, who doesn't want to get everything.

Moynihan details talks with Big Russian

By Ben Wattenberg

I am one of a select number of Americans — there are only 1.2 million of us — who receive, for free, what may well be the most interesting, erudite and informative political publication of the moment. It is called "Letter to New York," it never talks down to its readers, and its author is Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan. Anyone who wants it need only write the senator.

Now, there are lots of congressional newsletters; in fact, too many, coming out too often. The art form might be called Neo-Self-Congratulatory. That is not Moynihan's way, but he's not an ordinary politician. He has served four presidents in domestic and foreign posts. He has a Ph.D. in public international law. He was a professor at Harvard and MIT. Now 60, he knows a great deal about a great deal, and, as a teacher, loves to tell you about it, in person, or in a prose style that is somehow classical, anecdotal and meandering yet ordered, uniquely his own, subject to caricature but never imitation. Most everyone in the policy community has disagreed with him at one point or another, including me, but he is surely one of our most knowledgeable legislators.

All this suffices his bimonthly pamphleteering, that's his word, which he assures me, has a noble history in American letters.

Professor Moynihan's current newsletter is about arms control. He tells us he is writing it on an Air Force plane coming back from the Geneva arms talks, and that the plane bears the logo "The United States of America," designed by Raymond Loewy at the request of Jacqueline Kennedy. He introduces us to "The Big Russian," a high Soviet official he met with and dined with in Geneva.

Moynihan sketches in the tortured recent history of nuclear arms control: After the signing of SALT I in 1972, the Soviets deployed the new SS-20, an intermediate-range missile threatening our Western European allies. This was "a particularly unnerving exercise of bad faith on the part of the Soviets." After SALT II in 1979, it was apparent to Moynihan that "Somehow, insanely, arms agreements were leading to more arms."

He had an odd admirer. Moynihan recounts a 1979 call from the presidential Ronald Reagan, endorsing a Moynihan article saying that the two superpowers had to negotiate down, not up. Of Reagan's view of what was happening in the 1970s, he says, "Reagan watched this sequence with considerable clarity...."

But now, finally, there is the likelihood of the first cut in missile history, a U.S.-USSR treaty banning intermediate-range missiles on both sides. Is it a good deal for us? "It's a risk worth taking," says Moynihan; it might take us away from "unending escalation." Moynihan has been critical of Ronald Reagan's presidency, but on arms control he gives him high marks. Today, Moynihan notes, the proposed treaty scares some conservatives "who never believed this president really wanted reductions. But he did."

As he listens to the Big Russian (a well-placed source says it's Vorontsev, the deputy foreign minister), Moynihan speculates about what's been going on: Since the advent of glasnost, the Soviets have changed — on the surface. Thus, the Big Russian actually deprecates the Soviet involvement in Afghanistan. Gorbachev looks wistfully at a market economy as a way of bailing out Marxist economic stagnation.

What does it all mean? Could it be a third Russian revolution, Moynihan asks. Maybe. In 1917, Kerensky brought about a democratic revolution. Lenin brought about a totalitarian revolution. What of Gorbachev's glasnost? Moynihan muses: "The force Gorbachev is setting in motion could lead to (Soviet) breakup...."

How will it turn out? Don't know. But, as it is happening, 1.2 million of us will be likely taught history on the fly, with details, by a professor/politician who still thinks Americans might like to know about Raymond Loewy and Kerensky.

Alzheimer's drug testing under way

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)— A two-year clinical trial of an experimental drug that may help control memory loss in some patients with Alzheimer's disease was announced today by the federal government.

The plan calls for approximately 300 Alzheimer patients to be given the drug — tetrahydroaminoacridine, or THA — at 17 research sites across the nation.

The study follows a report by William K. Summers last November in The New England Journal of Medicine in which he described favorable results, with minimal side-effects, in 16 of 17 patients treated with THA.

"One patient was able to resume most of her homemaking tasks, one was able to resume employment on a part-time basis, and one retired subject was able to resume playing golf daily," the California physician said in his report.

Other drugs have been tried in the past, but either did not work or had side-effects that rendered them unacceptable.

Although researchers are hopeful THA may prove helpful in treating the memory loss associated with early stages of Alzheimer's disease, they caution that it is not expected to stop or reverse the disease's course.

That is because THA seems to modify memory loss by blocking the brain's normally rapid breakdown of a chemical messenger called acetylcholine that helps control memory.

However, brain cells die as Alzheimer's disease progresses and a drug such as THA that affects the breakdown of acetylcholine can work only as long as there are enough living cells to produce sufficient levels of the chemical, which is just one of the brain chemicals affected by the disease.

The clinical trials were announced by Robert E. Windom, assistant health and human services secretary, who oversees the Food and Drug Administration and other elements of the U.S. Public Health Service.

He said the National Institute on Aging will provide $1.9 million for the study, the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association $250,000 and the Warner-Lambert Co., manufacturer of the drug, $3 million.

Although the clinical trials are scheduled to last two years, important answers may come sooner.

"We expect to know within a year whether the drug might benefit Alzheimer patients," said Andrew Monjan, acting associate director of the National Institute on Aging's program on neuroscience and neuropsychology of aging.

If the trial results are favorable, it is likely Warner-Lambert will apply to the FDA for permission to market the drug.

Alzheimer's is the major cause of senility among the elderly. An estimated 1.5 million to 3 million Americans have the illness, causing more than 100,000 deaths annually.

Chiropractors make pet adjustments

By PHYLLIS MENSING
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP)— Is Bowser growling about an aching back? Does Kitty have a kink in her slink?

For many pet owners, the answer to the growls, howls and squawks is an animal chiropractor. A rub here, an adjustment there, has helped a dog walk, made a cat purr, and even improved a parakeet's love life, they say.

"I just think animals deserve the best treatment we can give them," said Sharon Willoughby, who gave up a 13-year veterinary practice to become an animal chiropractor.

The Port Byron resident estimates there are between 100 to 200 animal chiropractors across the country, but no one really keeps count because they aren't licensed. Yet, pet owners say chiropractors have worked wonders.

Darryl Coty, of LaPorte, Ind., asked Willoughby to take a look at her parakeet because the bird wouldn't move from the bottom of its cage. Willoughby adjusted the bird's neck, and Coty said the difference was incredible.

"She started preening her feathers, she became friendly, even amorous with her mate," Coty said.

Carol Robinson of suburban Chicago, said chiropractic treatment stimulated the muscles of Lexie, her Doberman, allowing the dog to stand briefly, after being paralyzed for a year.

Willoughby also works on horses, using a couple of bales of hay to stand on.

"Some people use mallets because horses' vertebrae are bigger," she said. "But I just use my hand. I use the horse's height at a lever."

That kind of work can be hazardous, though.

Daniel Kamen, a chiropractor from Buffalo Grove found that out when he tried to work on a giraffe. The animal promptly flung him to the ground when he tried to adjust its neck.

"That's the first time a patient treated me," said Kamen, who also treats his visitors to an endless supply of corny jokes. He has started a newsletter for animal chiropractors called "Animal Crackers."

"The skeptics we get are pretty much skeptical of chiropractors in general," he said last week. "And a lot of them are skeptical because this is so new."

So new, in fact, that the American Veterinary Medical Association says it needs more study. Currently, only vets may be licensed to treat animals. Kamen, because he's not a vet, doesn't charge for his services.

It may be a year before the association develops any policy, he said.

Kamen gives a filly the Four Truths exam.

McDonald's to change its burger wrap

WASHINGTON (AP)— The Big Mac will look and taste the same, but fast-food colossus McDonald's says the sandwich will begin doing its part to help the global environment.

In action hailed on Capitol Hill as a model for the eat-and-run industry, McDonald's announced a plan to phase out use in the United States of foam containers manufactured with chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs.

Scientists say those chemicals, in wide and increasing use around the world, are destroying the atmospheric ozone layer that helps protect humans from the sun's cancer-causing, ultraviolet rays.

The Reagan administration, warning of increased risks of skin cancer, has been negotiating this year with other industrialized nations in an effort to have CFC production decreased by as much as 95 percent worldwide.

Clifford Raber, government relations vice president for McDonald's, said Wednesday that the world's largest restaurant chain "made this decision with the full recognition that McDonald's packaging represents only a minute portion of total CFC usage."

"While our decision will not have any realistic impact upon the level of CFCs being emitted, we do believe it could be helpful in persuading others to make similar decisions," Raber said in a letter to Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt.

Last February, Stafford asked McDonald's to stop using containers made with CFCs, which also serve as refrigerants and solvents, especially in the production of computer chips.

Stafford, one of the leading environmentalists in Congress, hailed the action.

"I commend the company for its responsible and imaginative leadership and I trust that the rest of the fast-food industry will follow suit," Stafford said.

He expressed hope that other industries "can find alternatives to the use of CFCs."

Raber said McDonald's had been studying the issue before Stafford's request. He said containers made with CFCs will be phased out in the United States over the next 18 months.

Lana Ehrsam, a company spokeswoman, said the change eventually could be extended to McDonald's outlets in other countries, where 2,000 of the chain's 9,400 restaurants are located.

Ehrsam said McDonald's U.S. products would continue to be sold in foam packages, but they will be manufactured with hydrocarbon-based blowing agents.

"We don't anticipate any added costs to our customers," she said.

Raber acknowledged only that CFCs have a "possible impact" on the environment, but he said McDonald's believes its decision "is the most responsible available to us at this time and that it will contribute to a better environment for people everywhere."

Hiroshima

Japanese observe nuclear anniversary

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — A moment of silence enveloped Hiroshima and doves soared over the once-devastated city today as Japan recalled the blinding flash 42 years ago that jarred the world into the nuclear age.

"I hope that on this day, the world's 5 billion people will think about what happened here," Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone told about 55,000 people gathered at Hiroshima Memorial Peace Park.

"I pledge that we will build peace on this earth," he added.

At 8:15 a.m., the city of 1 million observed a moment of silence, punctured by the solemn tolling of a bell, as it remembered the more than 140,000 victims of the Aug. 6, 1945 bombing.

A U.S. B-29 bomber dropped "Little Boy," the first atomic bomb used against humans, on this regional military headquarters for southern Japan. Three days later, a second U.S. bomb devastated Nagasaki, killing an estimated 70,000 people.

The Japanese government surrendered unconditionally on Aug. 15, 1945, to end World War II.

Hiroshima has been rebuilt and "the oleanders are blooming now as if nothing happened here," Nakasone said. "But in the minds of the people, the scars of the bombing must still remain."

Nakasone said the United States and Soviet Union had produced "bright news" with their moves toward an accord on deep cuts in medium-range nuclear weapons.

The 45-minute ceremony took place near a carpet of yellow chrysanthemums, the flower of mourning for the Japanese. A flame at the park that is to burn until all nuclear weapons disappear from the earth surged higher during the minute of silence.

As Nakasone spoke, protesters unfurled a banner demanding a new law granting more benefits to the 350,000 Japanese designated as A-bomb survivors.

In other parts of the park, groups of left-wing and ultra-nationalist right-wing demonstrators chanted slogans and made speeches over loudspeakers. They, too, stopped their activity during the minute of silence.

"It is increasingly important that future generations be told about the horrors of nuclear war," said Hiroshima Mayor Takeshi Araki. He said 5 million schoolchildren visited Hiroshima in the past 10 years.

A coalition of eight peace groups declared that the Japanese must fight not only nuclear weapons but also the Japanese militarism "that rounded up citizens of Hiroshima ... to go off and trample over countries of Asia" in the early years of the war.

The United States entered World War II after Japan attacked Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

The coalition said it wanted to erect a display in the peace park "showing what Japan did to other countries, so that we will not forget the country's past aggression against Asian peoples."

The coalition also pledged to seek a ban on nuclear weapons at U.S. military bases near Hiroshima.

Araki, the mayor, said the names of 4,619 A-bomb victims who had died in the past year had been added to a list kept in a marble cenotaph, bringing the total to 148,177.

Drug traffic grows despite long battles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexican drug traffic into the United States has skyrocketed despite a decade-long campaign against it, and House narcotics committee members voiced their anger at Mexico and the U.S. government.

"We don't even know ... whether there's anybody in these two great governments who understands the depth of this problem," said Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

Joseph E. Kelley of the General Accounting Office told the panel Wednesday that the aerial eradication of opium poppies and marijuana has been hampered by aircraft and personnel problems, but he said "there were broader issues requiring bilateral attention."

"For example, after more than a decade of activity, program managers still lack a complete picture of the extent and location of opium poppy and marijuana cultivation throughout Mexico," he said.

Formal agreements between the two governments fail to set annual eradication targets and don't specify ways to assess progress, Kelley said.

"This seems to be another case of spinning our wheels," said Frank J. Guarini, D-N.J. "A piece of paper doesn't make a damn bit of difference if there isn't a political will to clean up their house."

Kelley, associate director of GAO's national security and international affairs division, said the amount of drugs coming into the United States from Mexico has ballooned in recent years following sharp declines accomplished through aerial eradication.

"By 1980, the U.S. supply of Mexican heroin had dropped to less than 1.4 metric tons," Kelley testified. In 1986, "between 2 and 4 metric tons of heroin reaching the United States originated in Mexico," representing about 40 percent of the U.S. supply.

The eradication programs had reduced the supply of Mexican marijuana to just 6 percent of U.S. supply, or about 750 metric tons by 1982, he said. "However, by 1986, 37 percent of all imported marijuana available in the United States, or more than 3,000 metric tons, originated in Mexico."

Although statistics are inexact, Kelley said, "they do show that less than 40 percent of the total estimated cultivation of opium poppy and marijuana has been eradicated by the bilateral program."

Festival displays ethnic cultures

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — When Chiev and Thida Khus came to Texas from Cambodia eight years ago, the mixture of cultures confused them and they decided to learn more about America's melting pot.

Today, the couple are among 6,000 participants in the Texas Folklife Festival, where ethnic foods, dance and music will be displayed.

"We thought it was important for us to mix with the community and to make ourselves known and to introduce people to our community," said Mrs. Khus.

Mrs. Khus and the Khmer Society of San Antonio will feature barbecue chicken with lemon, Cambodian salad and fried bananas.

"Many of the people who come to our booth ask us about our recent trauma and what happened to us," she said. "They only know about the Khmer Rouge. We're Khmer, not Khmer Rouge and we have been doing a lot of explaining about that."

The Texas Folklife Festival is in its 15th year and more than 100,000 people are expected to participate in this year's festivities on the grounds of the University of Texas Institute of Texan Cultures.

"Each year we've been able to improve and refine the physical intentions, but the spirit of the festival and the intent is still intact," said Jo Ann Andera, the festival's director.

Andera was a tour guide at the first festival in 1972 and has been coordinating the overall event the past seven years.

She said many people have been participating in the event since it first began.

"It's just a massive effort of a lot of people all over the state of Texas and they just love it," she said. "There's just a sense of affection that's tremendous."

Food will include Belgian sauteed mussels, Norwegian stew called "Lapskaus," Polish cabbage rolls called "Golabki," to other more delights such as Vietnamese egg rolls, Irish, fish and chips and fajitas.

Gospel music, blues and bluegrass sounds, among others, will fill the air. Tapping from flamenco dancers, the girations from Indian dancers and the displays of poika steps also will entertain the crowds.

Spectators also will be able to take part in arts and crafts, from Mexican pinatas and pottery to sheep shearing and goose plucking.

Valerie Grace, a member of the Polish Arts and Culture Foundation of San Antonio, participated in the first festival in 1972.

"It was something we wanted to do," she said. "It has provided avenues for clubs such as our to be on stage as an ethnic group."

Andera said the food proprietors are members of non-profit groups and retain 80 percent of their earnings and reinvest it in their communities.

Congress addicted to debt?

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is racing to raise the national debt ceiling for the third time in four months to prevent the Treasury from being pushed into default.

But it's not like the Lone Ranger riding out to save humanity. It's like a junkie needing a fix.

Congress is addicted to debt bills.

Lawmakers could dispose of the Treasury's debt needs for years, simply by approving the credit that it already knows the government will need. Instead, Congress just keeps passing short-term debt bills, good for a year or two at the most and often only good for days.

The reason? Amendments. Congress loves to load the debt bill with items that often have nothing to do with the national debt. After waiting until the last minute to extend the government more debt, whatever gets attached to the debt bill is on a fast track to becoming law.

For Congress, creating an occasional debt crisis raises the pulse and gets the legislative juices running. Only a few times a year does a bill come along that must be passed, that speeds its way through the House and Senate and is signed by the president.

In the 1970s, annual cost-of-living increase for Social Security was the usual dressing on the debt bill. Then Congress made that automatic.

The House then decided to make the debt bill itself automatic, deemed to have passed when the House approves the budget. That left the Senate alone to think up amendments, and the Senate took complete advantage.

Last year's debt bill was loaded with everything from Indian fishing rights to free feed for drought-plagued livestock farmers.

The debt limit and the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law have now been linked since 1985. Even many conservatives view Gramm-Rudman as a logical excuse to vote for a debt bill.

The amendments help to sugar coat the bitter medicine, giving lawmakers an politically acceptable excuse to vote for a bill that Congress has no choice but to swallow.

"It has nothing to do with the realities of the debt ceiling," says Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., a member of the House task force on budget reform. "It has everything to do with legislative strategy."

Sometimes the fuss over the debt bill all seems a charade, since most lawmakers never would allow the Treasury actually to default. Congress has often pushed it to the brink, but never beyond.

Face summer skin hazards

By MARY MARTIN NIEPOLD

"Women have a reputation for being extremely loyal, loving and caring," said Mavis Michelle, vice president of training for Payot, a Paris-based skin-care cosmetics firm. "We're very giving — except when it comes to time for ourselves."

Michelle spends most of her time showing others how important it is to make room for a skin-care regimen; three weeks each month she criss-crosses the country to train Payot sales representatives and work directly with customers who need individual skin-care programs.

Michelle brings a wealth of expertise to her adviser position; during the 1960s, she was in charge of seminar development for Helena Rubinstein, and until last year she was vice president of international training for Orlane.

"I think most women have tried to make life easier for themselves — but one product can't do everything," Michelle said. Payot's skin-care products are divided into "groupings," or systems, that attack specific conditions of the skin such as sensitivity, aging or breakout, instead of skin types, the classification system many other skin-care lines employ.

Today's Payot products still contain many of the original formulations created by Russian-born physician-chemist Nadine Payot at her Parisian "Institut de Beaute" in 1925.

"Age has no respect for your skin," said Michelle. "Whether you're 18 or 88, it really has to do with skin condition."

Skin care is important any time of the year, but during the summer it is especially vital. Summertime brings additional pollens and pollution that activate allergic conditions, and overexposure to the sun can cause dehydration.

Skin can be irritated by the sun internally as well as externally. Tearing eyes and sneezing are internal allergic reactions to pollen and irritants; external reactions to the sun include blotching, freckles and burning.

Michelle pleads with women to remove all eye makeup. "Our eyes don't close completely at night, and sometimes they tear. Salt from tears are held into the old makeup, which then creeps above the eyelid and causes chapped areas and itching above the eye."

Because women tend to go to extremes with skin care — giving their skin either a "lick and a promise" or overdoing treatments — Michelle recommends finding a middle ground with a skin-care line that is formulated to treat specific conditions.

Eyes can tear from sunshine, smoke, air conditioning and makeup. An untreated condition merely brings on more tearing, allergic reactions and drying of skin in the eye area. Eventually, the sensitive eye area will wrinkle prematurely.

According to Michelle, "Evaporation is enemy number one." Skin must be moisturized daily, though you should avoid any product that is very heavy or emollient — it acts much like a cellophane wrap, retaining heat and causing skin to produce flord areas.

Avoid fatty soaps, which contain sediments that can irritate skin. These soaps also strip the skin of the natural oils that protect the skin's surface. Instead, use cleansing bars with a pH factor of 7 or specially formulated cleansing creams and gels geared to your particular skin condition.

"Sensitive" skin can mean many different things: skin that is very thin, contains broken capillaries, flushes very easily, reacts quickly to cool or warm temperatures, or becomes itchy or blotchy. Michelle offers these sensitive-skin tips:

- Dispose of any eye-area products that are one year old or older, and any mascara and liquid liners that you've had for two months or more.
- All tools for the eye area, as well as makeup sponges and brushes, should be washed before every application.
- Use cotton tips dipped in tea for cleaning the eye region.
- Stroke down, not up, when massaging the neck. This downward motion follows the return of the blood back to the heart and creates a natural flow that increases tautness.
- Never, ever put your fingers on your skin; it activates and intensifies irritations.
- Choose foundations that are homogenized. These are not oil free, but contain only natural oils.

- "If you take care of your skin," said Michelle, "you can use anything that contains natural oils. The aim of any effective skin-care treatment is to maintain the balance and natural condition of the skin."

Pit bulldogs don't belong in any backyard

DEAR ABBY: Here in California, we are currently experiencing a hysteria about pit bulldog attacks on children and adults.

Six years ago, when my son was 10 years old, he was attacked in front of our house by a dog that was half-collie and half-German shepherd. My son did nothing to provoke the dog. I know; I was there. The boy suffered wounds on his face that required 60 stitches. The owners of the dog refused to pay the medical bills because that would have admitted wrongdoing. We sued these people who, by the way, were friends of ours. My son received $25,000 compensation, but in retrospect it was not enough. Due to the scars on his face, our son has been in psychological counseling twice to help him adjust to the social problems those scars left.

Abby, please tell your readers that it is against the law to keep a vicious animal, even if it is tied up in their backyard. If a child climbs over a fence to retrieve a baseball and is attacked by a dog, the owner is liable. Those "Beware of Dog" signs mean nothing. According to the law, the owner is liable for any injuries incurred.

My son is now 16 and he's still very self-conscious about his scarred face. He is also deathly afraid of dogs.

Parents should teach their children never to make direct eye contact with a dog. Dogs see this as a challenge. Try to walk away as slowly as possible, and if there is a large object nearby, pick it up — you may have to use it. Do not run! This is also interpreted as a challenge, and dogs can outrun humans.

I hope this has helped. I wish I had taught my children more than just never to pet strange animals. If my letter will save just one child the devastating trauma our son suffered, it would make my day.

DEBORAH FYLER-WERRIL, FULLERTON, CALIF.

DEAR DEBORAH: I am sure

Dear Abby

many readers will benefit from your letter. Thank you for sharing with others what you learned the hard way.

DEAR ABBY: With so much publicity about "vicious" dogs being killed lately, please repeat the enclosed article you wrote on that subject years ago. It speaks for those creatures who can't speak for themselves.

ROSEMARY BROWN, CLEARWATER, FLA.

DEAR ROSEMARY: With pleasure. Here it is:

dog is entitled to one bite, but if he bites twice, he has to be put to sleep. Is that true?

LOVES MY DOG

DEAR LOVES: "Laws" concerning dogs differ, depending on where one lives. However, it would seem apparent that a barking, growling dog on a chain is doing what he has been trained to do — protect his domain — and anyone who deliberately attempts to invade his territory is asking for trouble. Mail carriers, newspaper carriers and delivery people are usually instructed to "forget" the house that's being protected by man's best friend.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-son-in-law told me that one night he and a bunch of his buddies were sitting around in Vietnam when one of the guys made up the first few lines, then another soldier added a few more, and before they knew it, the entire poem about the monkey's disgrace was put together. They called it "The Unknown Soldier's Poem," because several soldiers made it up.

EX MOTHER-IN-LAW, CHIPPEWA FALLS, WIS.

DEAR ABBY: "The Monkey's Disgrace," published in the Oregonian, has been in my file for about 35 years. The author is Vera Bender. CLARA PEYROLLAZ, CARSON, WASH.

Microscope 'sees' with sound

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Ultrasound has been used for everything from detecting body organs to cleaning dirt-encrusted tools.

Now, ultrasound technology is being developed to produce a microscope that "sees" with sound instead of light. R.J. Dwayne Miller of the University of Rochester says he is investigating how ultrasound can create images of individual atoms.

Since ultrasonic waves are much shorter than those of light, an ultrasonic microscope would offer a better examination of the surface of objects. One use may be in the production of computer chips, where surfaces must meet exacting standards.

Exercise aids older adults

NEW YORK (AP) — Exercise helps older adults suffering from problems such as depression, anxiety, low self-concept and a feeling of loss of control, according to the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

It says researchers studied 42 people between the ages of 60 and 79. One group took part in aerobic dance and walking-running. The other group did not exercise. The aerobic exercisers improved in all areas, it says, while the non-exercisers showed no changes.

Niekro draws 10-day suspension

NEW YORK (AP) — Minnesota Twins pitcher Joe Niekro maintains he is innocent, but says he may not appeal his 10-day suspension for scuffing baseballs because of other factors.

American League President Dr. Bobby Brown suspended Niekro on Wednesday. On Monday night, Niekro was ejected from a game against California after umpires discovered he had an emery board and sandpaper in his back pocket.

The umpiring crew sent five allegedly scuffed balls from the game to the league office for examination.

"I don't have to scuff a knuckleball and I threw mainly knuckleballs," Niekro said.

The league said Niekro had informed it through the Twins that he would appeal the suspension, which would be held in abeyance pending a hearing yet to be scheduled. But after California's 6-1 victory over Minnesota on Wednesday, Niekro said he may not follow through with an appeal if a hearing date might serve to jeopardize his playoff eligibility.

Niekro said that if a hearing were scheduled for late August and his suspension upheld, he might be off the roster on Sept. 1.

"If I'm not on the roster Sept. 1, I may not be eligible for the playoffs," Niekro said.

"We'll just have to wait and see." Niekro has gone 5-8 with a 4.54 earned run average for the Twins, who are in a virtual tie with Oakland for the American League West lead. He said he would talk today to Twins executive vice president Andy MacPhail.

"I'll know the answers to those (questions) after talking to Mr. MacPhail," Niekro said.

The 42-year-old Niekro, the first player to be suspended for doctoring baseballs since Gaylord Perry was suspended for 10 days in 1982, is scheduled to pitch Friday night against the Athletics at Minneapolis.

Niekro said he uses sandpaper and emery, as do most knuckleballers, to manicure his fingernails.

Pampa Tennis Open canceled

The annual Pampa Tennis Open has been canceled this season because of renovations to the high school courts, PHS Coach Jay Barrett announced.

Last month, the Pampa board of trustees approved a $106,000 bid to repair the eight high school courts, which have been badly damaged by the elements.

Vibra-Whirl of Panhandle is handling the project and the work is expected to be completed this fall.

"They're not making much progress right now, but they're supposed to be finished in October," said Barrett.

Barrett said the four north courts will be finished in September and available for the fall tennis season.

"We'll have our first district matches in September and we'll have some non-district matches with some Amarillo teams to fill in before then," Barrett said.

The repair project also includes the installation of new fences around the south courts.

Earlier this week, members of the Pampa Tennis Club donated $4,000 to help with the repair costs.

Anyone interested in helping with the project may contact Barrett at 665-9422 or Barbara Guard at 669-3654.

Trustees have also approved a $51,000 bid from Vibra-Whirl to repair the high school track. Work is expected to start after the football season and is expected to be completed by mid-January.

Pampa foursome advances in Family Tennis Classic

Four Pampans have advanced in the Equitable Life Family Tennis Classic held in Amarillo.

PHS tennis coach Jay Barrett and his wife, Pam, won the Husband-Wife Doubles Tournament with a 7-6, 6-4 win over a Canadian team.

James and Allyson Thompson won the Brother-Sister Doubles title by defeating an Amarillo team.

All four advance into sectional play this weekend in Albuquerque, N.M. The winner there advances to the U.S. Open in New York City with all expenses paid.

Female umpire scores points at Southwest Regional

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

PLAINVIEW — Debbie Smith is 37-years-old, happily married and has two kids.

She also loves her hobby. But, it's not just your ordinary hobby. Not ordinary by female standards that is.

Smith is an umpire. And there are not a lot of female umpires around nowadays.

Smith, in Plainview this week as Umpire-in-Chief at the Southwest Regional Babe Ruth Tournament, is a native of Nashville, Ark. and has been an umpire since 1975.

The year she officially began umpiring just happens to coincide with the time period when the women's liberation movement was at its peak.

"I think it would've been kind of stupid to umpire for that reason (women's equality)," Smith said. "That was kind of the big thing back then, but if I was out there for that reason, I probably wouldn't have stayed too long and wouldn't have done a very good job."

In a profession filled with men, Smith says she is respected by coaches, players and fellow umpires alike. There have been only a few problems.

"One or two coaches in the past have tried to intimidate me, I guess because I'm a woman. But, they found out they couldn't."

"I'm sure sometimes when I walk out there, some coaches wonder if I know what I'm doing, wonder if it's 'that women's lib thing.' Once the game starts though, they realize they might as well forget that I'm a woman ump."

Smith is not only a woman ump, she is a seasoned veteran at calling games on the amateur level.

For 12 years, she has called games from the Babe Ruth Senior League to the Arkansas Intercollegiate Organization.

Calling the Bambino 10-12 year-old tournament marks the youngest group of kids she's worked with in quite awhile.

"I started out when my husband used to coach a Little League team. They had a practice game and I started more or less goofing around.

"Then, we had a couple ofumps who didn't show up and they asked me to call the game. That's when I got my start."

Smith admits that when her husband was a coach, the two of them got into a couple of on-field arguments, but otherwise, he is not against her hobby.

Smith has an 18-year-old son that has played in every level of Babe Ruth ball. He, too, has had a few problems with his mother, the ump.

"He doesn't like it when I call balls and strikes. He claims he doesn't get the corners like all the other players get."

When Smith works behind the plate she surprises many players who come to bat, for she does not call strikes with any reserve. She is not afraid to express that in her opinion a pitch was a strike. To put it more bluntly, she screams strikes louder and with as much confidence as any man.

"Sometimes the players are a little skeptical. I call strikes pretty loud so they may be kind of shocked when they come up the first time. Most of them don't expect a woman to call that loud."

"Then, some of the players will want to ask a question and they'll say, 'Mr. Ump, uh, sorry, Mrs. Ump ...'"

As for her co-workers, Smith said the male umpers she works with do not view her as a woman trying to do a job that has been primarily reserved for men.

Smith, who is a teacher and coach at Blevins, Ark., had nothing but kind words for the way the tourney in Plainview is being run.

"The teams are exceptional — not only in their playing but in their attitudes. The kids here are really mature."

Likewise, she has received no criticism from players or coaches in the tournament.

"She's doing a good job," Pampa All-Star Coach Charles Buzzard said. "According to the players, she calls a good game, but she does have a large strike zone."

Smith said she enjoys umpiring and intends to do it a few more years.

"I'll do it until I can't get out there on the field anymore."

Fall workouts kick off for area football teams

□ Fall workouts for area high school football teams begin next Monday, Aug. 10.

Pampa will be holding three-a-day practices; all other area teams will go the two-a-day route.

Most teams will begin scrimmaging other schools on Aug. 20.

The following is a list of area teams and their workout and scrimmage schedules:

□ The Canadian Wildcats will workout from 9-10:30 a.m. and from 6-8 p.m.

Canadian will scrimmage West Texas High School on Aug. 21 and at Guyton, Okla. on the 28th.

□ Groom's Tigers begin two-a-days Monday from 8-10 a.m. and 6-8 p.m.

According to head coach Terry

Coffee, the 6 p.m. start time is still tentative, though.

Groom will host Valley on Thursday Aug. 20 in its first scrimmage. A second scrimmage will be against Follett, but a time, place and date have not yet been determined.

□ The Tigers from McLean will have two-a-days from 6:30-8:30 a.m. and 6:30-8:30 p.m.

One set scrimmage for them is Aug. 28 against Claude. McLean will also meet Happy the week before, but the particulars have yet to be worked out.

□ For the Lefors Pirates, two-a-days are set for 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. Coach Johnny Crim said it's unknown how long each practice session will last.

The Pirates will scrimmage

By Jimmy Patterson

New Life Academy at Silvertown on Aug. 27. So far, that is the only scrimmage Lefors has scheduled.

□ The Shamrock Irish will practice each morning beginning Monday from 8-10 a.m. A definite time for evening workouts has not been set, but Coach Buck Buchanan is leaning toward 6:30 p.m.

The Irish will scrimmage at Sayre on Aug. 22 and will host Childress on the 27th.

□ The Miami Warriors will hold two-a-days from 6-8:15 a.m. and 7:30-10 p.m.

Practice games will be against Texline at home on Aug. 22 and at Silvertown on the 28th.

□ For the Wheeler Mustangs, morning workouts are set for 8 a.m. Afternoon session times are not decided, but may be held beginning at 3 or 4 p.m.

Wheeler will scrimmage at Gruver on Aug. 21 and Clarendon at home on the 28th.

□ Two-a-days in White Deer will be from 8-10 a.m. and 5-7 p.m.

Scrimmages are set for Aug. 21 against Vega and Aug. 28 against Fritch.

□ All teams open the regular season Friday, Sept. 4. McLean, Miami and Canadian open at home; all other areas schools will be on the road for the first night's action.

□ The 1987-88 National Football League pre-season schedule begins this Saturday, Aug. 8.

The Kansas City Chiefs will meet San Francisco in Canton, Ohio in the Hall of Fame game. Kickoff is set for 2:30 p.m. EST.

On Aug. 9, the AFC Champion Denver Broncos will meet the Los Angeles Rams in London's Wembley Stadium for this year's America Bowl. Game time is 6 p.m. Big Ben Time.

□ The first full week of preseason football begins a week from today with Houston hosting Kansas City and Seattle at the L.A. Rams. That's two games on two sides of the globe in just four days for what will probably be a very weary Rams squad.

Pampa Bambinos eliminated by Louisiana

NL All-Stars win two games

PLAINVIEW — No trip to Oakland for the Bambino National Championship this year.

But, the Pampa National League All-Stars shouldn't fret too much about it.

Although they were eliminated from the Southwestern Regional Tournament in Plainview Wednesday, losing to Louisiana 11-5, they still have plenty to be proud of.

Just making it to the tournament was a feat in itself, not too mention that as the third place team in the tourney, Pampa was just two games away from actually making it to Oakland for the finals.

Pampa also played the role of the spoiler in eliminating both host team Plainview and Oklahoma from the series.

Pampa overcame a 3-0 deficit in the bottom of the first inning Wednesday scoring three runs to tie the game.

With Chris Gilbert and Will Winborne on base due to free passes, Jeff Tidwell and Dennis Graham hit back-to-back singles to knock the two runners in. Tidwell then scored from third on a passed ball making it 3-3.

Pampa overcame another Louisiana one-run lead in the second as Justin Cornelsen reached base on an error and Gilbert beat out a bunt single.

A single by Will Winborne drove in Cornelsen, and Tidwell hit a one-bagger for his second RBI of the day, knocking in Winborne.

When Winborne crossed the plate, though, it represented the last run of the game and the year for Pampa. Louisiana went on to score seven more runs, including a two-run fourth inning homer by Joey Keener, for the final 11-5 tally.

Pampa's seven hits came from Gilbert (2-for-3), Winborne (1-for-3), Tidwell (2-for-4) and Graham (2-for-3).

Starting pitcher Chris Poole took both a pounding and the loss. Poole surrendered eight runs on 11 hits while walking just two and striking out two in 4 1-3 innings.

Louisiana will meet Arkansas tonight at 5 p.m. for the tournament championship.

Sherrard out for season

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Mike Sherrard's fractured right leg not only has put the gifted Dallas Cowboys' wide receiver out for the season, but forced Coach Tom Landry to rethink his entire passing game.

The Cowboys had planned to go deep to the fleet Sherrard this year after the 1986 first-round draft choice from UCLA averaged 18 yards per catch last season.

"We'd built our deep passing attack around him," Landry said.

Sherrard went down during a pass scrimmage against the San Diego Chargers on Wednesday.

He tripped over cornerback Carl Brazley and when Sherrard fell his left leg crossed over his right leg, causing the fracture.

"I did it to myself," Sherrard said as he was being loaded into an ambulance for the ride to a hospital. "It was just a freaky thing."

The Cowboys are coming off a 7-9 season, including a 1-7 finish.

Landry said "We'll have to build our passing game around somebody else now but you really can't afford to lose your top player."

"We have players who can play so someone else will have to take charge."

Landry wasn't certain who would take Sherrard's place.

The wide receiver position has been plagued by injuries.

Newly acquired wide receiver Rod Barksdale pulled a hamstring muscle in the scrimmage against the Chargers.

On Tuesday, Ray Alexander broke his arm and last week rookie wide receiver Everett Gay severely sprained an ankle.

Club President Tex Schramm said "It was a very freaky, sad thing to happen. I doubt he (Sherrard) has a chance to play this season. We're not concerned about this season. We're concerned about his future."

"It's a tremendous loss. He was one of the cornerstones of our off-season program. Everything was built around him. You hate to see it happen. For it to happen is a crime. Of all people...."

Sherrard's 41 pass receptions for 744 yards last year was the best performance by a Dallas rookie receiver since Bob Hayes caught 46 passes in 1965.

A walk-on at UCLA, Sherrard was the school's all-time leading receiver.

"Mike was going to be a big part of our offense this year," said tight end Doug Cosbie. "It's a little depressing. I really feel sorry for Mike. He had worked so hard."

"The whole thing about our team this year was to keep healthy. Now it looks like our whole passing game will have to be rethought."

Retired Dallas wide receiver Drew Pearson, who watched the incident from the sidelines, said "it's shocking. I had told him (Sherrard) earlier this week that if he avoided injury he was going to have an All-Pro season. This leaves a big void on the team."

Pearson added "Dallas really doesn't have another deep threat. Barksdale has great speed but he has a long ways to go. I don't see him helping by opening day."

The Cowboys obtained Barksdale Monday from the Los Angeles Raiders in a trade for cornerback Ron Fellows.

Sherrard was second in fan voting last year for the NFL rookie of the year. He caught five touchdown passes.

"At least we lost Mike early so we will have time to make a change," Cosbie said. "Emotionally this really hurts the team because we know what he can do."

Newsome still a handyman

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Timmy Newsome quietly goes about his job as the handyman for the Dallas Cowboys.

The Cowboys' fullback blocks, runs, and catches passes.

And he can play tight end if the need arises.

"He does everything we ask," says Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He's an excellent receiver with size, power and speed."

Newsome, No. 30 on your program, isn't bothered by autograph hounds when he goes to a restaurant for dinner.

"Nobody recognizes me but that's OK. Timmy Newsome's autograph isn't worth much," Newsome says. "That's no big deal."

Newsome had a career-high 48 pass receptions and was the Cowboys' third leading receiver last season.

He gained 411 yards with the catches. Newsome has caught passes in 23 straight games, longest streak on the club.

Scientists isolate new superconductor

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists say they've isolated bits of material showing evidence of superconductivity at room temperature, a finding that could help open the door to faster computers, bullet trains and advances in electrical power.

The finding was reported Wednesday by Colorado State University researchers, who said the material showed evidence of losing all resistance to electricity at temperatures up to 70 degrees in repeated tests over two days.

Other scientists have reported evidence of superconductivity at higher temperatures, but in tiny pockets of material that were not separated out from the test sample. Separation is needed for analysis and reproduction of material.

In addition, evidence for some prior high-temperature claims has failed to reappear when tests were repeated. "If confirmed by others, then the CSU (development) could be very exciting," said Northwestern University physics professor Arthur J. Freeman.

New, unconfirmed results from Japan indicate superconductivity at 86 degrees, reproduced over four days, and 122 degrees, reproduced over six to eight days, Freeman said in a telephone interview.

Those studies have not been published in scientific journals, but "scientists have been taking these reports seriously as indicating that something may well be there," he said.

Superconductivity is the ability of some materials to conduct electricity without resistance.

Until recently, scientists believed superconductors had to be chilled to hundreds of degrees below zero to work, a costly process that has severely limited practical uses.

Scientists recently have been producing materials that superconduct at far higher temperatures. Room-temperature superconductors would need no chilling at all.

Higher temperatures could open the door to smaller and faster computers, high-speed trains that float in a magnetic grip, and power lines that carry current without losing electricity.

"Time and time again, we have physically seen particles the diameter of a human hair show evidence of superconductivity at temperatures ranging from minus 319 degrees to 70 degrees Fahrenheit," Walajabad Sampath, CSU mechanical engineering professor, said Wednesday.

Pershings obstacle in arms talk

GENEVA (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said today that U.S. nuclear warheads on West German Pershing 1-A missiles remained the major obstacle to a superpower agreement on eliminating intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

"Seventy-two U.S. nuclear warheads stand between us and an agreement on intermediate-range and shorter-range missiles," Shevardnadze told the 40-nation Geneva Conference on Disarmament.

He said that if the United States refused to give up the warheads, Soviet allies "could ask for the stationing of similar systems on their territories, and the Soviet Union could meet their request."

But that would result in an agreement that was "truncated, emasculated and anemic," said Shevardnadze, who was to meet during his two-day stay with chief U.S. arms control negotiator Max Kampelman.

Medium-range missiles have a range of 600 to 3,000 miles.

In a wide-ranging speech, Shevardnadze also appeared to make an important concession in the conference's negotiations on a chemical weapons ban.

He said the Soviets would "proceed from the need to make legally binding" the idea of mandatory inspections.

Previously, the Soviets had embraced so-called challenge inspections in principle but said they would reserve the right to refuse one on national security grounds.

A challenge inspection would allow a party which suspects another of cheating to call for an inspection of the other's facilities on short notice.

The United States has proposed inspections within a few days, while a British proposal calls for a 10-day limit. Shevardnadze did not say which time limit the Soviets would accept.

Shevardnadze also said the Soviet Union would open one military facility, in Shikhan, to conference members to "see standard items of our chemical weapons and observe the technology of destroying chemical weapons at a mobile facility."

He said a chemical weapons destruction plant under construction would be opened to experts later.

The U.S. delegate, Max Friedersdorf, said his delegation welcomed the "important" Soviet step.

Friedersdorf noted that other obstacles still remain to an agreement.

Parents say gunman thought he was a general

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — The gunman who was fatally shot when he charged past guards in the Pentagon had a history of mental illness and "hallucinations about who he was," his mother said.

Dwain Wallace, 30, of Youngstown, was shot once in the back by a guard Wednesday morning and died two hours later at a hospital from a wound to his heart, officials said.

Doris Wallace and her husband, Leroy, said their son was a patient at a Youngstown psychiatric hospital in recent years, and once was under the delusion he was an Army general.

"His doctor told us Dwain was very intelligent, and you wouldn't know he had problems," Mrs. Wallace told reporters outside her home here. "But sometimes he had hallucinations about who he was."

He transferred to a halfway house several months ago and told his parents Monday that he was going to Pittsburgh to seek work. Mrs. Wallace said her son called her long-distance Tuesday night and seemed all right.

Wallace reportedly told Pentagon guards he "wanted to talk to somebody about missiles" before he brandished a handgun and bolted past a checkpoint. He was hit by one of two shots fired by a guard at 8:05 a.m., and died at the National Orthopedic Hospital in Arlington, Va. Officials would not identify the guard who shot Wallace.

The shooting occurred directly beneath the offices of Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, who was having breakfast at the time with Secretary of State George Shultz and Lt. Gen. Colin Powell, deputy to White House National Security Adviser Frank Carlucci, said Col. Marvin Braman, a Pentagon spokesman.

The three heard the shots, but Pentagon officials said there was no evidence Wallace was attempting to reach Weinberger. Wallace's parents said he never served in the military.

His problems began while he was in college when it was discovered he had a "chemical imbalance," his mother said. Before that, she said he was a good student and a "remarkable son."

Wallace married an exchange student from Nigeria in 1977, according to Montgomery County records in Dayton. Wallace's parents said he was divorced and the father of a girl.

Anguished parents talk of son.

Names in the News

PLATTEVILLE, Wis. (AP) — When Maurice Douglass isn't trying to strip footballs out of opponents' hands for the Chicago Bears, he often can be found stripping off his clothes at Cincinnati nightclubs.

"I've worked as a male stripper at three clubs there for the past three or four years," the 23-year-old defensive back said Wednesday.

"The women, they're everywhere, they're all over you, grabbing you. They have guards up front to keep the women off the stage," said the soft-spoken Douglass, who played briefly in four games at the end of last season for the Bears.

Though he enjoys the attention, he says he does it for the money — $500 a week for three nights.

When Bears Coach Mike Ditka heard the news, he said, "Well, some got it and some don't."

run deeper than the anchor. Massive layoffs and budget cuts of $30 million over the past year have had a devastating effect on the longtime leader of network news, he said.

"Whatever we've been through, it's certainly time to put it in the past," he said.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Luciano Pavarotti's concerts here sold out within two hours, leaving many fans at the mercy of ticket scalpers.

Pavarotti's visit has created such a stir that scalpers holding tickets for his appearances Aug. 16-25 at the Teatro Colon opera house and Luna Park demand up to $250 for front-row seats, which were originally priced at $75.

Some fans had waited in line two days for tickets to La Boheme, which is on the program for Aug. 25.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Beastie Boys say they are preparing to sue the city for requiring "adult subject matter" warning labels on tickets for a Sunday concert here.

The three-man group's "Together Forever" tour, which began June 13 in Honolulu and ends in New York on Aug. 17, must print such warnings on tickets and concert advertisements only in Jacksonville, said Bill Adler, a spokesman for Rush Productions.

"It's just a warning, like a warning on a pack of cigarettes," City Council President Clarence Suggs said Wednesday night. He said city lawyers checked the law for constitutionality before it was approved.

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — A Nobel laureate whose contract with the Salk Institute will soon expire announced plans to join a nearby hospital research center.

Dr. Roger Guillemin, whose pioneering studies into chemical and hormonal control of the pituitary gland earned a 1977 Nobel Prize, said Wednesday he will begin working at The Whittier Institute for Diabetes and Endocrinology at Scripps Memorial Hospital in 1989, after his contract with Salk expires.

He will bring with him 35 Salk researchers and nearly $3.5 million in government grants and contracts.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida State University's football dormitory will be named after former Seminole running back Burt Reynolds, a school booster club official has announced.

Andy Miller, executive director of the Seminole Boosters, made the announcement Tuesday.

Reynolds, who was at Florida State in the 1950s, donated $58,000 toward the three-building structure, which was renovated and expanded by the Seminole Boosters Inc. at a cost of $1.8 million.

Soldier to be court-martialed after testing positive for AIDS

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An Army soldier stationed at Fort Sam Houston is being court-martialed after being accused of exposing several women to the AIDS virus, an official said.

No date has been set for the court-martial proceeding for Sgt. Richard Sargeant, a former medical instructor at the post's Academy of Health Sciences, said an Army official who asked not to be identified.

Sargeant, 27, faces charges of sodomy, aggravated assault, adultery, reckless endangerment and disobeying an officer, the official said Tuesday. The charges involve three women. The official said he could not discuss details of the alleged violations of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

The San Antonio Express-News reported that three charges originally brought against Sargeant on May 5 accuse him of committing sodomy with a female soldier, aggravated assault for engaging in sexual intercourse with the woman while knowing he carries the virus, and adultery with the woman.

Sargeant has since been accused of reckless endangerment for knowingly exposing the first married woman to the risk of contracting AIDS by engaging in sexual intercourse.

Three additional charges allege Sargeant disobeyed a superior commissioned officer in failing to obey an order to advise all prospective sexual partners of his condition and to wear a condom if he engaged in sexual intercourse; committed aggravated assault for engaging in sexual intercourse with a second woman and a third woman while knowing he was an AIDS carrier; engaged in adultery and reckless endangerment by having sexual intercourse with the second married woman and knowingly exposing the second woman.

Panel OKs more farm credit loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm real estate loans made by the Farm Credit System would be pooled and sold in a secondary market under the bailout plan being fashioned by the House Agriculture Committee.

Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, said that he hopes to wrap up work on the complex legislation as soon as the panel settles on the size of the federal bailout for the financially ailing system.

The 70-year-old system is a network of cooperatives that together represent the nation's largest farm lender with outstanding loans of $54.6 billion, a growing number of them non-performing. The system has been seeking $6 billion, although the panel is not expected to go that far.

Locked into high interest rates when the farm economy went into decline in the early 1980s, the system has been losing customers drawn by lower rates elsewhere.

The secondary market plan was attached to the bill on a voice vote along with provisions authorizing the separate sale of mortgage-backed securities on assorted other loans made by system lenders.

The plan was the product of a task force of Agriculture Committee members that has been meeting since last week. A number of secondary financial markets already exist, among them the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae).

A plan offered by Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, was the basis of the secondary market provision.

It would establish a federally chartered corporation within the Farm Credit System that would certify banks and insurance companies to make a secondary market by buying and pooling agricultural loans. That portion of the blueprint was favored by the banking industry.

Securities would be guaranteed through a line of credit at the Treasury. But a reserve fund equal to 10 percent of the pool's principal would be established and tapped to assure payment of principal and interest on securities before seeking government aid.

The Stallings plan was altered within the task force to include authorization for the system to sell mortgage-backed securities based on short-term operating, rural utility, community facility, export financing and agricultural cooperative loans.

Critics said such sales would amount to establishing another secondary market and give the system an unfair edge against banks and insurance companies. But supporters said it was necessary to keep the system competitive.

"Lord knows, if we're going to give them billions of dollars to bail them out over a long period of time, we'd better give them a competitive advantage in this competitive environment we've created," Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., told the panel.

The committee also approved a provision to establish a Temporary Assistance Corp. to administer the bailout of the system. It would have a five-member board of directors with three members named by the secretary of agriculture, one by the secretary of the treasury and one by the Farm Credit Administration board.

The Farm Credit Administration is the government agency that regulates the Farm Credit System, whose 37 large regional banks borrow money in Wall Street and lend it to some 450 farm-owned associations nationwide.

In other farm matters, the consumer advocacy group Public Voice is calling for revision of a proposed Food and Drug Administration rule regarding public health messages on food labels.

The organization issued a statement saying the proposal is not tough enough and should require FDA approval of claims before they go on food labels.

Public Voice Executive Director Ellen Haas said that "food manufacturers are already using health messages on food packages without federal guidance."

"FDA's proposal does not go far enough to ensure they are promoted in the context of a total, healthful diet," she said. "For example, the proposed rule does not prevent health claims for foods that can both inhibit and promote the same or another serious disease."
