Plan would give Pampa teachers extra pay hikes

more experience in the Pampa school system.

Pampa public school teachers may get a smaller pay raise this year than that recommended by the state.

But under a proposal presented during a budget workshop session Thursday night, the teachers would receive raises over more years than the state schedules, and those with 10 or more years experience would receive a higher salary than the top pay recommended by the state.

Superintendent Harry Griffith presented a teachers and administrators committee report that proposes returning to an 18-step pay scale instead of the state's 10-step plan.

The local plan would give teachers and other school personnel an $80 monthly pay raise, $34 less than the $114 monthly raise recommended by the state.

Keeping the local supplement of $2,600 for bachelor's degrees and $2,800 for master's degrees, the Pampa scale would establish a salary base respectively of $32,900 and $33,100 yearly for teachers reaching 18 years or

Under the state's scale, maximum teacher pay — including the local supplement — would be reached at 10 years. The state scale ends at 10 years, providing for no additional pay raises after that point.

Griffith, addressing the school board members, said he is "morally opposed to freezing salaries" just because personnel have attained 10 years' experience.

"But Pampa's only got so much money," he said, adding that the district can't afford to continue stretching salaries by $1,140 every year for each teacher.

Since the last budget workshop session on July 30, a committee of teachers and administrators has been working to develop a plan that would allow raises but also keep within the district's available funds.

Texas State Teachers Association Pampa representative Charles Rand explained the proposed pay scale presented by the committee. He said the state's 10-step scale increases salaries by Plane almost hits Reagan's helicopter

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The pilot of a small airplane that came dangerously close to President Reagan's helicopter had no criminal intent and was released today, the Secret Service said.

The pilot of the president's helicopter, carrying Reagan to his ranch north of here in the Santa Ynez mountains, was forced to take evasive action Thursday when the small plane came within several hundred feet of the helicopter.

Rich Adams, a spokesman for the Secret Service in Washington, said interviews "showed there was no criminal intent on the part of the pilot or the passenger and subsequently no arrests were made."

Adams declined to identify either person aboard the small plane and refused to elaborate on the pilot's explanation for how the incident occurred.

Reagan and aides with him did not notice the Piper Archer aircraft flying in restricted airspace over the president's Rancho del Cielo.

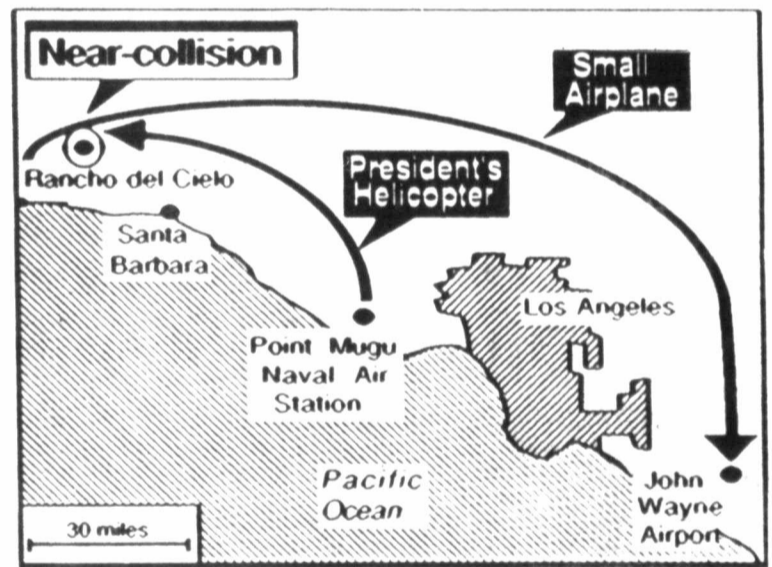

First lady Nancy Reagan, planning to join the president later to begin their 25-day California vacation, was not aboard.

At its closest point, the plane was about 200 to 300 feet in front of the helicopter and about 150 feet lower — within the distance classified as a near-collision by the Federal Aviation Administration, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Adams said the airplane's pilot and a passenger were detained for questioning after they landed at John Wayne Airport in Orange County, about 100 miles south of here. He said no charges would be filed against the two.

The pilot, according to CBS-TV, told investigators that he was tired, had taken out his contact lenses and handed them to the passenger, who dropped them. The plane inadvertently strayed into restricted air space over the president's ranch as the two searched the floor of the aircraft for the lenses, CBS said, citing an unidentified FAA official who termed the story "cockamamie."

Early today, Secret Service agents escorted a man who apparently was the pilot from the airport terminal to a waiting car. The man was not in handcuffs, but he walked with a gray leather jacket covering his head.

Reunion air show to dazzle Pampa

Activities in the 15th annual Pampa Army Air Field reunion will continue through Saturday, with a parade, museum dedication, air show and annual banquet on tap for the public.

Among the special guests attending the reunion activities are former members of the Tokyo Raiders who participated in Gen. James H. "Jimmy" Doolittle's bombing raid on Tokyo, Japan, in 1942.

Association members were continuing their visits today, with golfing available at the Pampa Country Club and a noon luncheon on the schedule. A banquet will be held at 7 p.m. today at the Coronado Inn Starlight Room.

Thursday, the convention included tours of industrial plants and homes and a banquet at the Coronado Inn, headquarters for the reunion of former pilots, military officials, civilian personnel and other workers at the former World War II air field training base once located east of the city.

But Saturday will be the big day, for both association members and Pampa area residents. A military parade will get under way at 10:30 a.m., forming at the Cuyler Street underpass. The parade will proceed north on Cuyler to Francis, where it will turn west on Francis to Ward.

Turning right on Ward, the procession will go to Memorial Park for the museum dedication.

Pampa Army Air Field Reunion Association Executive Secretary Nina Spoonemore said Thursday that she still had been receiving calls earlier this week from groups and individuals wanting to have entries in the parade.

Leading the parade will be veterans, many dragging out their old uniforms for the occasion or, for those still in the military, wearing their new ones. Military units, antique cars, an old-fashioned calliope and other entries will join in the procession, with a B-25 bomber planning to fly over to salute the parade and spectators.

The museum dedication will begin at 11:30 a.m. at the former Pump Station No. 1 building on the south end of Memorial Park, located at Montagu, Ward and Hobart streets. Military, association, city and county officials will participate in the ceremony.

Special participants in the dedication will be members of the Tokyo Raiders, the group participating in the U.S. bombing raid on Tokyo on April 18, 1942. Among the Raiders here are Gen. Richard Knobloch, who will be the featured speaker at the Saturday

Tokyo Raiders pounded U.S. resolve into enemy

More than 45 years ago, an American general and 79 servicemen chosen for a secret air mission left sail from the San Francisco coast on the carrier U.S.S. Hornet.

It was only after they left the coast that the crew members, led by Gen. James H. "Jimmy" Doolittle, learned their destination: Tokyo, Japan.

Doolittle later recalled that the mission had been planned in top secrecy, with speed essential for what was to be America's first major attack on the island empire.

All those associated with the mission were sworn to silence, and none of the crews were told what was behind the unusual training.

volunteers. They knew they were going on a dangerous mission. When the crews and the Navy were told their destination, a great cheer rose up.

Doolittle had planned the bombing raid, what was to be a daring act of war to give Americans a taste of victory and powerful enough to give the confident Japanese a taste of pending defeat.

Doolittle, in an interview after he had retired as a three-star general, recalled that from the beginning, the mission was simple: "Give America something to cheer about."

After the bombing of Pearl Harbor, the mood in America was dark. President Franklin D. Roosevelt began pressuring the military to do something positive. Navy Captain Francis Low conceived a plan while he was the rate the school would levy to collect the same amount as in the prior year.

LEFORS — School taxes may increase beyond $1 per $100 valuation to maintain the $1.16 million school budget adopted Thursday by the Lefors school board.

Trustees adopted the budget 4-2 Thursday, with trustees Virginia Archer and Leon Goldsmith casting opposing votes. Trustee Joe Watson was not at the meeting.

The budget is up about $40,000 from the previous $1.12 million spending plan because of a $100,000 maintenance project.

The budget calls for a tax rate of $1.05 per $100 valuation, which is up 19 cents from the current rate of 86 cents. However, it is 6 cents lower than the school's effective tax rate of $1.11 cents —

Despite the tax increase, the school district would use $50,722 from surplus money to fund the new budget.

The tax rate is scheduled to be approved at the board's September meeting.

In figuring the tax rate, trustees found themselves squeezed between two unpleasant forces.

■ On one end are major building repairs and what trustees feel is a need to keep up the quality of district programs. At $213,580, plant maintenance is second only to instructional service (teacher payroll and supplies) as the top budget item. The district budgeted $100,000 of the maintenance money for improvements to the school's heating, lighting

White Deer-Skellytown trustees try to hold line despite oil drop

WHITE DEER — School officials here are determined to hold the line on the school tax rate, despite plummeting property values and a proposed $100,000 budget increase.

White Deer Skellytown ISD Superintendent Tom Harkey confirmed today that trustees plan to stay with the current school tax rate of 75 cents per $100 valuation. The district's effective tax rate is $1.01.

Trustees discussed a proposed $2.6 million preliminary budget Monday at their regular meeting. But they took no action, because the final budget is not yet ready for presentation. Teacher payroll increases pushed the proposed budget up $100,000 from the 1987 budget of $2.5 million.

White Deer taxpayers will have the opportunity to express their opinions at a public budget hearing Aug. 27 at the school administration offices.

"We haven't set the tax rate yet, but we're sure going to try to keep it at 75 cents," Harkey said, adding that holding the tax line taut will mean pulling up to $400,000 from the school's $800,000 surplus.

"We could be hurt in the future," but we don't know that," Harkey added. "We're just hoping we're doing the right thing."

"We hope that when you stand still, you don't get blown backwards," he said.

Pay

$1,140 yearly. The district's proposed 18-step scale would have varying increases averaging $800 a year, but would continue to provide increases above the 10-year cutoff in the state's plan.

Griffith said the smaller monthly raise would save the district money initially, establishing a "cost break-even approach ... so we won't have to raise taxes every year" to cover salary increases.

"We want to stop pitting taxpayers against teachers" and vice versa, he said, adding that the new salary program would be more equitable over the long run. He said the new scale would be more cost effective to the community and be a morale builder for local teachers.

The new scale also would benefit teachers remaining in the district for a long time since their retirement income is based on the money they earn. By receiving the higher salaries past 10 years, teachers will earn higher retirement income payments, Griffith explained.

Pampa Classroom Teachers Association representative Lee Carter said both the state and local plans have some inequities. The state's plan, if implemented, would lump currently employed teachers into blocks ranging from one year to six years based on years of employment.

The local plan, he noted, would have yearly salary increases ranging from $600 to $990 during the conversion, depending on years of experience. But the benefits would balance out more equitably over the years for those remaining in the district a long time.

Griffith said both administrators and teachers are recommending the locally developed plan, with committee members reporting that teachers have enthusiastically accepted the proposal.

Griffith said the teachers recognize salaries may have to be frozen at some time, but the local plan makes that less likely to occur in the next few years.

In other matters during the session that lasted more than four hours, the board also discussed the proposed 1987-1988 school budget, just under a 2 percent increase from the current budget.

Griffith, firming up figures from the ones presented at the last workshop, estimated total expenditures at approximately $12.05 million, including the teachers' salary raise and additional capital outlays. With estimated revenues of $11.67 million based on a tax rate of 86 cents per $100 valuation, that would leave a deficit of just under $382,000.

The deficit could be made up by dipping into the district's reserves, he said.

Griffith said the budget "is very tight," noting that the district is facing problems with equipment that will have to be replaced at some time. He said efforts are being made to work with what is available for now, replacing only what is essential for continued operations.

He said the budget includes elimination of nine personnel positions, with a salary savings of $231,500. But five additional positions are being added, along with lunchroom monitors and elementary team leaders, with salaries of $94,000, leaving a net decrease of $137,500 in salaries.

Even with some increases in most areas, the Pampa district is still spending $816 less per student than the state average and $494 less than the average of 10 other school districts of similar size and geography, Griffith said.

But the budget maintains a quality education program for all elementary and secondary students, he said, though there are some areas that could use more funds to maintain that quality in future years.

Board President Joe VanZandt said the district "is getting dangerously low" by dipping into its reserves, adding that it needs to be carefully watched.

The 86-cent tax rate would be 14.2 cents above the current rate of 71.8 cents and about 6.4 cents above the effective tax rate of 79.6 cents. The effective rate is the amount needed to raise the same amount of property tax revenue as was raised in the past year.

The board expressed general support of the budget and tax rate. The budget adoption vote will be taken in a meeting at 6 p.m. Wednesday, with the tax rate to be considered in later meetings.

In other matters following an executive session, the board accepted the resignations of Deana Milliron as Pampa High School math teacher and Troy Ann Dennis as Travis Elementary part-time kindergarten teacher.

The board employed Mary Preston for PHS math, Mary Arellano for Mann Elementary second grade and Janie Williams for Travis part-time kindergarten. Trustees also appointed head football coach Dennis Cavalier as athletic director and reassigned Donna Turner from Travis physical education to Baker Elementary physical education.

watching pilots practicing bombing runs on simulated Japanese aircraft painted on a Florida airstrip.

The military quickly approved the idea of using medium-size bombers to raid Tokyo. Roosevelt also approved the mission, calling on premier aviator and militarist Doolittle to plan and lead the raid.

Army General Henry H. "Hap" Arnold, in his memoirs Global Mission, recalls, "The selection of Doolittle to lead this nearly suicidal mission was a natural one. He was fearless, technically brilliant, and a leader who could not only be counted upon to do a job himself if it were humanly possible, but could impart that spirit to others."

The modified Mitchell B-25 bombers, equipped with extra fuel tanks, took off early on the morning of April 18, 1942, from the carrier and arrived over Japan shortly after noon.

Doolittle later recalled that though the Japanese sighted the approaching American aircraft on the morning of April 18, 1942, "we still achieved complete surprise."

After dropping their bombs, the crews flew toward refuge in China. But all of the B-25 bombers were lost. Fifteen of the planes crashed in or near the China Sea.

One was flown to Valdivostok, Russia, where it still remains in the hands of the Soviet Union. Seven of the Raiders were killed — three by execution. Many others were injured, some seriously.

Doolittle himself crashed on a mountain top in Southern China, where he was taken to safety by friendly militiamen. Despite the loss of the aircraft, most of the raiders lived to fight again.

In spite of the setbacks, the raid was considered a success. It gave Japan the warning that America was determined to fight. And it gave an immediate boost to U.S. morale. The raid also earned Doolittle his Medal of Honor.

Lefors

The dilemma divided the school board.

Trustee Arnold Story supported a tax rate of $1.07 per $100 valuation to keep from digging too deep into the surplus. At $1.07, the school would pull $36,000 from the carry-over.

Said Story: "Schools are using their surplus now. But it's going to kill them later."

But Archer stood firm against pushing the rate above $1. She felt the school can afford to go into the surplus.

"It's too big of an increase," Archer said of the tax proposal. "That's asking too much from the taxpayers."

A $1 tax rate would pull $112,000 from the surplus.

Trustees were also concerned with how the proposed tax would compare with other area districts. Of area schools, only McLean (which is proposing a tax rate increase from $1 to $1.10 or $1.12) and Mobeetie (which has not yet proposed a 1988 tax rate, but has a current rate of $1.15) have higher tax rates.

Groom trustees dropped that district's rate from $1.08 to 93 cents Tuesday.

"Groom got all our federal money," one Lefors trustee observed.

In other business Thursday, trustees: appointed Superintendent Ross and High School Principal Bill Crockett as career ladder teacher appraisers; hired Cynthia Weibling of Perryton as a fourth-grade teacher; examined the high school class schedule and the teacher inservice schedule.

Texas/Regional

State held in contempt over mental helath facility

DALLAS (AP)—A federal judge held Texas mental health officials in contempt of court, saying school officials failed to live up to a 1983 agreement to make improvements in conditions at the Fort Worth State School.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders issued the opinion Thursday in the long-running Leslz case, a class-action lawsuit brought against the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Sanders said the school's unacceptable conditions violate client's constitutional rights.

The opinion concluded that lack of funding is at the core of the school's inadequacies. "By defendants' own admission, Texas ranks '51st out of 50' states in financial commitment to its mentally retarded citizens," the opinion states, quoting testimony from department Commissioner Gary Miller.

"A generally caring and concerned staff cannot make up for that deficiency," the opinion stated. Sanders did not elaborate on the opinion.

Both sides have 60 days to suggest remedies for improving conditions at the school.

Although the order is interlocutory, meaning technically it can't be appealed, state officials said they would try to overthrow the ruling.

"All I can say today is that we're disappointed, that we're evaluating the court's opinion and that we will undoubtedly appeal," said Scott McCown, an assistant attorney general who has worked on the case.

David Ferleger, who represents the plaintiffs, hailed the opinion as a vindication.

"I'm delighted that the court has agreed that conditions of the institution are inhumane and intolerable," he said in a telephone interview from his Philadelphia office.

"I'm glad that it's no longer my word against the state's," he said.

The plaintiffs had asked for an evidentiary hearing on whether the state was complying with a 1983 settlement to the Leslz case which mandated improvements at the school. The hearing was held from June 29 to July 7.

A summary of the 93-page opinion said that state officials violated the federal constitutional rights of clients at FWSS by failing to provide constitutionally adequate medical care, safety, training and treatment, and freedom from undue restraint.

"Further, defendants have breached their obligations to provide these services with required respect for clients' dignity and personal autonomy," the summary states.

The opinion lists several horror stories witnesses testified to, including the case of one client who died after workers discontinued use of a screen designed to prevent him from putting things in his mouth. The male client died following surgery to remove multiple foreign objects including portions of a plastic sponge and glove.

In another case, a client diagnosed by hospital officials as having a dislocated hip was not treated for four months, the opinion said.

There were 52 confirmed cases of abuse and neglect at FWSS during the last 2½ years, nearly twice the rate of the state average, the opinion stated.

Miller's office referred all questions on the opinion to McCown, who said he could not comment on what remedies the state might suggest. A telephone call by The Associated Press to the FWSS superintendent was not returned.

Ferleger has previously suggested that the school should be fined as a remedy. He has said the state should pay $20 a day for each client who has been there since the 1983 settlement, which comes to a rough total of $11.5 million.

He said Thursday he hopes the opinion will cause state mental health officials to change their viewpoint.

"First, I hold out an olive branch to the new board chairman and say, 'Let's you and I sit down and solve this by the state agreeing to take this case seriously,'" he said. Failing that, the court should impose massive fines or take over the operation by appointing a special master to run the institution, he said.

Ferleger said he thinks the state will opt to place more clients in community homes rather than spend additional money on the school.

"To fix up FWSS the budget would have to be doubled or tripled," he said.

The opinion stated that testimony in the hearing revealed state school officials could not afford to repair air conditioning and parents must donate educational supplies.

The original 1983 settlement called for placing more clients in community homes but a U.S. 5th Circuit Court ruling knocked that provision out of the settlement.

Ferleger said the opinion may lead the state to initiate its own program of community placement.

The Leslz case covers all 13 state schools.

Earlier this year, however, after four residents died in three months, the attorney for the residents asked Sanders to hold the school in contempt, contending that conditions had deteriorated since 1983.

Ferleger said the deaths are the "tip of the iceberg of the overall inadequacy."

District attorney blames prisons for stepping down

PECOS (AP)—District Attorney Jack McGowen is resigning next month and says part of the reason is that he's tired of sending defendants to prison, only to see them released before the ink is dry on their convictions.

"I have a hard time looking the people of the community in the eye when I send a drug dealer up for 12 years and then he is released in a year," said McGowen, whose resignation is effective Sept. 1.

"I just think the public is being deceived into thinking that we are rehabilitating or punishing them, when in reality, we are processing papers and turning them loose at a ridiculous rate," he said recently.

McGowen, who serves Reeves, Ward and Loving counties, announced his resignation July 31 in a letter to Gov. Bill Clements.

He said his decision resulted from the "hectic pace and general dissatisfaction with sending defendants to prison only to have them released so early that the paperwork is not always finished."

"It's frustrating to deal with that, and I've got better things to do," McGowen said. "It would be different if the state would keep them for the times the juries send them for."

Prisoners become eligible for parole after serving one-third of their sentence, he said. Prison time is tabulated by adding the number of days spent in county jail and state prison, and days earned for good behavior.

"For every day you serve, you get credit, roughly, for 12 days in prison," he said. "A person that served just under a year in prison, his 'slip' shows he served three years, four months."

A prisoner serving a 12-year term or less, McGowen said, is eligible to get out in one year.

On Wednesday, there were 38,709 prisoners in TDC, which was 95.63 percent of capacity. Between September 1985 and August 1986, 29,347 inmates were released on parole, said Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown.

'Body substance isolation' initiated

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP)—Health-care workers at a local hospital will soon be wearing masks, gloves, aprons and goggles as part of a program designed to prevent the spread of AIDS and other infectious diseases.

"It will be an expense," said Betty J. Condor, director of Infection Control at Memorial Medical Center. "But it is necessary to protect patients and health-care workers."

The "Body Substance Isolation" system, to take effect Sept. 1, focuses on isolating body substances from the hands of workers, primarily by the increased use of hand-washing and gloves.

Protective masks, thick plastic aprons, eye goggles and containers to dispose of "sharps," such as hypodermic needles, are also key elements of the new system, Ms. Condor said Wednesday. The hospital is operated by the Nueces County Hospital District.

She said concerns about the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome to health-care workers were a primary factor in deciding to implement the program, but that control of other infectious diseases also was considered. She said it was too early to know how much the program would cost.

EXTRA, EXTRA: Elvis is Alive!

Boy, was I ever wrong! I thought for sure Elvis died 10 years ago. I have been corrected, though. It was just this week that I picked up my copy of The National Examiner (at the supermarket checkout counter, of course).

Elvis is on the cover, and the headline reads, "Ten years after his 'death' top researchers reveal ... Elvis is Alive!!!"

In its Aug. 11 issue, the Examiner startlingly reveals that "Elvis Presley's long-time manager, Col. Tom Parker, arranged for The King to fake his own death so he could lead a normal life."

Calling Elvis' death "an elaborate hoax," the magazine said they have proof that he is alive in the form of a tape recording made four years after his "death."

What an example of fine journalism this is, huh? Do people really fall for this stuff?

Whether or not readers actually believe what they read in these tabloids, they do buy them up by the millions.

Could it really be that Elvis is alive? Gosh ... I wonder!

After all, for years, some people have believed Kennedy is alive and well and living in the basement of Dallas' Parkland Hospital.

Hey, maybe Elvis is alive and is actually performing as an impersonator of himself.

Kinda makes you do some thinkin', doesn't it? Geez, how much do these "journalists" think the American people will fall for?

If the Elvis fable weren't enough, the same issue of the Examiner has other incredible—but true—stories that are capped off with eye-grabbing headlines in the same issue. Witness these jewels:

☞ "Minutes after she's thrown from the ring ... Woman wrestler gives birth to 50-pound baby." Talk about inducing labor. That must have been painful.

☞ "Figs and Limes help fight arthritis and cancer." You know, come to think of it, that pain in my back suddenly disappeared right after I ate that fig newton the other day.

☞ "Prince Andy warns Fergie: Lay off the booze." As we used to say in my hometown when expressing doubt about something, "Yeah, buddy!"

And those are just the headlines on the magazine's cover.

Inside, one can find even more wonderments:

☞ "Two ex-nuns in sexual hijinks!" Following the

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

headline, we get this introduction to the tasteless story: "In an unbelievable sexual escapade, an ex-nun happily handed over her would-be priest husband to her best friend so that she could then move in with her lesbian lover—who is another ex-nun she met in the convent."

☞ "Enraged camel reduces rapist to mangled bits of flesh and bones ... out of revenge for his mistress."

☞ "Mild-mannered neat-freak slays his wife over misplaced mustard."

Yeah, buddy!

☞ "Girl boss has sex change operation ... and gets a raise."

☞ "Sailor's fiancée runs off with mailman ... after he sends her hundreds of letters."

☞ "Pregnant mom shot 200 times by thugs."

☞ "Tot trapped in toilet."

☞ "The true-life story of ... The man who died twice."

And the Examiner has some hefty competition this week. The latest edition of The Sun has this headline for its top story: "Half-boy, half-girl makes self pregnant ... She's both mom and dad to 2 kids!"

My all-time favorite appeared on the stands a few years ago. I don't remember which tabloid it was, but the banner headline read, "Man chops head off with chain saw ... and lives to tell about it!"

What will these rags think of next? They'll probably try to sue me for writing this. I can see their headline now: "We're suing Woody Allen look-alike ... Small town writer claims we exhumed the body of Elvis!"

Yeah, buddy!

Boy is given probation in shootings

HOUSTON (AP)—A 10-year-old boy who received a year's probation for fatally shooting his father and wounding his mother now wants to put the episode behind him, his attorney says.

"He's very relieved that everything is over with. He wants to get back to being a 10-year-old again," attorney Warren Cole said Thursday. "I don't think he poses any threat to society."

On Mother's Day, Michael Simon pulled the family's loaded .38-caliber handgun from its hiding place in the cushions of a living room loveseat and started firing after being told he could not play outside, police said.

The boy's father, Edward Simon Sr., 45, was pronounced dead at the scene with a bullet wound to the head. After the gun was emptied, the boy's mother, Mary Simon, 47, staggered outside and cried for help.

The boy fled the scene, but was picked up by police about 90 minutes later and gave a videotaped interview to police.

The boy has been placed in the custody of a 26-year-old brother, and will undergo counseling, Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Godwin said.

Ms. Godwin said the boy admitted to voluntary manslaughter in his father's death and aggravated assault in the shooting of his mother. He had originally faced a murder charge, she said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Glare of truth aids battle with Soviets

Afghanistan is the unseen war. Since the Soviet Red Army's invasion in 1979, the country has suffered more than any other in carnage and devastation.

The Kremlin has conducted a calculated war of genocide, purposely obliterating whole cities, burning crop fields, and kidnapping Afghan children for brainwashing back in the Soviet Union. Through it all, few American reporters have proved brave enough to cover the war, Moscow having long ago put out the word: All Western reporters will be shot on sight.

As a result, the American public remains largely ignorant of what's going on there. Only a few stories have appeared in newspapers; the evening news shows run only infrequent and spotty coverage. That's why the "CBS News Special: The Battle for Afghanistan" is so rare. It shows, as has no American-produced documentary, what life is like in a country being methodically communized.

For this is no simple war of conquest. This is war being conducted according to the harsh dictates of Leninist ideology. "Dictatorship is power based directly on violence. Violence in the 20th century — as in the epoch of civilization generally — is neither a fist nor a club, but troops," wrote Vladimir Lenin, whom Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev openly emulates to the point of worship.

Lenin also said: "In what sense do we repudiate ethics and morality? In the sense that they were preached by the bourgeoisie, who declared that ethics were God's commandments. We, of course, say we do not believe in God... We repudiate all morality that is taken outside human class concepts." In other words, communists can do, literally, anything — as in Afghanistan.

For this reason, isn't it funny that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the butcher of Afghanistan, is considered a "man of peace" by so many in Congress? And that our media — including CBS in its more giddy moments — fawn over his mendacious glasnost (openness) promises?

For the Soviets, Afghanistan is but a staging area for a later assault on a long-coveted warm-water port, in Iran or Pakistan, or to seize Middle Eastern oil fields.

Yet one thing has stood in the Soviets' path of conquest: The Afghan people. Fiercely independent and incomparable warriors, the Afghan mujahedeen have stayed off more than 100,000 crack Red Army troops, including several detachments of Spetsnaz (special units modeled after Hitler's SS).

So far, the Afghans, with critical arms shipments from the United States, Britain, and other countries, have prevented a complete Soviet conquest — but only barely.

Publicity is essential to the Afghan freedom fighters' cause. The Kremlin, especially with Gorbachev's latest PR campaign in full swing, can't stand the glare of truth. The more people who know of the horror that Gorbachev and his henchmen are committing in Afghanistan, the tougher it will be for the Soviets to remain there.

Trade bill grants special favor

WASHINGTON — Clayton Yeutter, the U.S. ambassador for trade, is a big, balding man with the let's-make-a-deal smile of a good truck salesman. He will need all his skills to get an acceptable trade bill out of Congress, but like any good salesman, he's optimistic. "It can be done," he says.

Then he adds, "but it won't be easy." Indeed it won't. The House of Representatives passed its version of a trade bill on April 30. The vote was 290-137, with 43 Republicans joining 247 Democrats to create a bloc exactly large enough, if everyone held fast, to override a presidential veto. The Senate came along with its version on July 21 with a vote of 71-27. Again, if the 71 senators should stick together, a veto could be overturned.

The conflicting bills now go to a conference committee that promises to be the granddaddy of all such committees. Each of the bills runs to a thousand pages. It is likely that not even the principal sponsors understand all of the provisions that have been larded into the meat of the issue. The Senate alone added 120 amendments on the floor.

This much is clear, Yeutter says: Both bills contain good that is bad, and some that is good. If the good parts are preserved in conference, and the bad parts are dropped, the president willingly will sign the measure. On the other hand, if Congress sends the president a bill dominated by the bad parts — no way!

Yeutter has specifically in mind the original Gephardt amendment in the House. This is protectionism in its most virulent form. It would tie President Reagan and his successor in a straitjacket. It flies in the face of the international

James J. Kilpatrick

General Agreement of Tariffs and Trade (GATT). It would positively invite retaliation by such trading partners as Japan, South Korea and Taiwan.

Under the Gephardt proposal, Japan could be required to reduce its trade imbalance with the United States by 10 percent a year. Suppose this excess of exports over imports amounted to $60 billion in a critical year. A reduction of $6 billion would have to be made. But under GATT, Yeutter explains, Japan automatically would have the right to enforce an equivalent reduction in U.S. imports. We could then say goodbye to $6 billion worth of trade in U.S. wheat, tobacco, semi-conductors and other products. Says Yeutter: "We would get clobbered."

A Senate version of Gephardt is "not all that bad — it's just almost as bad." The vice in both versions is that they drastically limit the discretionary power of a president to cope with unfair trade practices.

Worse even than the Gephardt amendment, in Yeutter's view, is Section 201 of the Senate bill. It would compel a president to succor ailing domestic industries that are suffering, not from unfair competition but from fair competition from abroad. The footwear industry is a prime example. U.S. manufacturers are being whipped in the marketplace because foreign-made shoes are better buys. But Section 201, willy-nilly, would grant the industry protective tariffs and quotas for a period of years while it struggled for the unattainable goal of head-to-head competition.

Yeutter has a long list of objections. Both bills would require companies to give advance notice before closing a plant or laying off workers. The Senate bill would apply to companies employing as few as 11 persons. The provisions would make it increasingly difficult for a manufacturer to close an inefficient plant. "This would not improve international competition at all."

Both bills have long and costly provisions for restraining workers displaced by the pressures of international trade. Yeutter is skeptical. The concept is fine in theory, he says, "but such programs don't do much in practice." The president will accept a reasonable training provision; he won't accept a budget-buster.

Yeutter had nothing to say about repeal of the windfall tax on excess oil revenues. This is a pet provision of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas; it probably will stay in the bill. Neither did Yeutter comment on a proposal to pay $264 million in tariff rebates to a few major sugar refiners. The kickback strikes most observers, except for the sugar refiners, as unconscionable, but when you're wrangling over grand issues of protectionism and world trade, a little ol' sop to the sugar boys may not greatly matter. The conference committee will report in October. The nation needs a good trade bill. Don't hold your breath till we get one.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Aug. 14, the 226th day of 1987. There are 139 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 14, 1945, President Harry S. Truman announced that Japan had unconditionally surrendered, ending the hostilities of World War II. Capitulation came several days after the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and after Emperor Hirohito called upon Japan's war council to give up.

On this date:
In 1848, the Oregon Territory was established.

In 1900, international forces including U.S. Marines entered Beijing to put down the Boxer Rebellion, which was aimed at ridding China of foreigners.

In 1917, China declared war on Germany and Austria at the start of World War I.

In 1935, the Social Security Act became law, creating unemployment insurance and pension plans for the elderly.

In 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill signed the Atlantic Charter.

In 1947, Pakistan became independent of British rule.

In 1951, newspaper publisher William Randolph Hearst died in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Vehicles will switch to alcohol

In Brazil, more than 90 percent of all new Brazilian-made cars are powered by ethanol made from sugar cane.

We're next! The automotive industry ever since the first Henry Ford has known that alcohol is a better car fuel than gasoline.

It burns cleaner and safer. Because it does not "explode," as gasoline does, race cars at Indianapolis have run only on alcohol for the last 14 years.

Now we have further incentives. Alcohol made from corn — ethanol — is a fuel extender and an octane enhancer. Your present car runs better with a 10 percent mix of alcohol in the gas tank.

At the same time we are reducing pollution from carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons.

Enough alcohol in our cars and we will no longer be at the mercy of Mideast oil producers.

Our farmers will have a new non-food use for their corn.

Thus, with conversion to ethanol car fuel we will reduce our foreign trade imbalance, reduce pollution and reduce the cost of farm subsidies.

We are getting there:

Paul Harvey

Eight years ago alcohol fuel was available almost nowhere. Today it has won an 8 percent share of the entire motor fuel market and in some states that is as much as 20 or 30 percent.

The bureaucracy moves tediously, agonizingly slowly — yet, the Environmental Protection Agency is urging states to adopt alternative fuels in order to meet mandatory air quality standards.

The General Services Administration is asking the automotive industry to produce 5,000 "flexible fuel" vehicles within the next year.

The Urban Mass Transportation Administration has authorized more use of ethanol-fueled buses.

Vice President George Bush has been a big help.

The presidential task force he heads has accelerated the effort.

Annual ethanol production is up from 20 million gallons to 750 million gallons.

And from an economic point of view there are a variety of fringe benefits.

Fuel alcohol consumed 250 million bushels of corn last year.

When corn is used to make alcohol, only the starch is utilized. This leaves the rest of the grain — protein and edible oils — for other purposes, such as food for people and feed for cattle.

Now about the cost.

Gasoline now costs $1 a gallon, and that price is rising.

Ethanol now costs $1.25 a gallon, and that cost is coming down.

Any day now it will be cheaper to drive a car on alcohol than on gasoline.

Two Illinois congressmen are calling for gradual nationwide availability of ethanol-blended fuel.

It won't be long now!

Writer exposed dangers of communism

By William A. Rusher

When I was an undergraduate at Princeton in 1941, I was required to read a book called "The Managerial Revolution" by James Burnham. Burnham had noticed that corporations were no longer being run by their owners, but rather by a brand-new group he called the "managers." He further noticed that these managers closely resembled the technocrats who were increasingly running things in the Soviet Union, and concluded that we might be witnessing the birth of a new class, in the strict Marxist sense, which would seize power from both the capitalist owners and the Marxist ideologues.

In later years, after Burnham had helped Bill Buckley found National Review in 1955 and I had become its publisher in 1957, I had the privilege of meeting Jim and getting to know him well. By then the focus of his attention had shifted from the managerial "class" to the Cold War and the worldwide advance of communism, but the basic cast of his mind remained unchanged: He was the supreme realist, coldly analytical, implacably logical, proudly unsentimental. In his youth he had toyed at some length with Trotskyism; at National Review he concentrated undeviatingly on the menace he now believed communism represented. But throughout his life the central question of politics remained, for him, "Who shall be master in the house?"

Like all points of view, of course, this one has its limitations. At National Review, it precipitated many an intramural quarrel between Burnham and our house metaphysician, the late Frank Meyer. Meyer, whose column in the magazine was entitled "Principles and Heresies," liked to discuss such matters as whether political freedom is a moral necessity. Burnham, whose column was long called "The Third World War" and later "The Protracted Conflict," was much more likely to want to know what the noted Kurd leader Khalid Bagdash was doing in Damascus last week.

As a conservative ideologue with my own fish to fry, I had a run-in or two of my own with Jim's sometimes rather ruthless pragmatism. I vividly recall the day early in 1968 when he came into my office at National Review and suggested we form an in-house coalition to work for a Rockefeller-Reagan ticket (in that order) to head off Richard Nixon at the pass. I frostily declined what Jim would undoubtedly have admitted was, in technical terms, an "unprincipled coalition."

But on the basics — above all, on the need to stop communism — Jim Burnham was a rock. President Reagan generously recognized this when, in 1983, he conferred on him our nation's highest civilian award, the Medal of Freedom. By then Jim had retired from National Review, felled by a stroke in 1978. But he soldiered on, largely silent now but sustained by his family and friends, until his death from cancer on July 28, at the age of 81.

By coincidence James Reston, the longtime New York Times reporter and columnist, announced his retirement less than one week later, at 76: I couldn't help reflecting what different ways Burnham and Reston — almost the archetypal liberal — had of looking at the world.

In his farewell column, Reston duly noted the worldwide retreat of socialist concepts of economics, but felt obliged to add that Reaganomics isn't doing so well either. He then alluded to one of the unintended consequences of such lofty relativism by remarking that he "would feel better if marriage were more popular." Finally, he ended his lifelong love affair with the plebs by promising to "try to bring back the smoke-filled room so that the next presidential candidates will be chosen by people who know something about them."

Jim Burnham would have been amused. Maybe, he might have wised-cracked, there's even hope for Scotty Reston.

Feds recommend routine testing for some Americans

ATLANTA (AP) — Long-awaited federal recommendations urge doctors and clinics to give routine but not mandatory AIDS tests to members of groups considered most likely to get the deadly disease.

The U.S. Public Health Service's recommendations Thursday also stressed the need for "every reasonable effort ... to improve confidentiality of test results."

The recommendations do not include mandatory testing for all hospital patients and couples seeking marriage licenses, ideas that met with harsh criticism by AIDS activists and civil liberties groups when presented at a public meeting in Atlanta in February.

The agency said that while "individuals have the right to decline," health professionals should begin "routine counseling and testing" for exposure to the AIDS virus for:

- Patients with sexually transmitted diseases.
- Drug abusers who inject narcotics, especially if they have shared needles with infected people.
- Women of childbearing age at risk for AIDS infection, chiefly through drug abuse or sexual contact.
- Patients infected with tuberculosis, which can be compounded by an AIDS infection.
- Sex partners of infected people.
- Male and female prostitutes.

The final recommendations, according to federal health officials, are directed at medical practitioners. "We're hoping health practitioners ... would take advantage of the opportunity when they see persons at increased risk, in virtually every setting," said Dr. James Curran, chief of the AIDS task force at the national Centers for Disease Control, a Public Health Service unit based here.

According to the CDC, "routine counseling and testing is defined as a policy to provide these services to all clients after informing them that testing will be done. Except where testing is required by law, individuals have the right to decline to be tested without being denied health care or other services."

The idea is "to reduce further spread of infection," with priority on "persons who are most likely to be infected or who practice high-risk behaviors," the CDC said.

AIDS, reported most often among homosexual men and drug abusers, is transmitted most frequently through sex or sharing of hypodermic needles or syringes. It also can be transmitted from mother to unborn child and through transfusions of tainted blood or blood products.

The Public Health Service recommended that AIDS testing should be available to all Americans who believes they are at risk.

Further, the CDC called for prison systems to study means of testing their inmates. Federal inmates already are under a testing program.

The CDC said state and local officials should decide about routine, or even mandatory, AIDS tests for engaged couples, taking into account "the prevalence of HIV (AIDS virus) infection in the area."

While confidentiality is crucial to increasing the number of people being tested, "it is of equal or greater importance that the public perceive that persons found to be positive will not be subject to inappropriate discrimination," the CDC said.

Federal health officials estimate that between 1 million and 1.5 million Americans are infected with the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

There is something new from the IRS: 40 new tax forms

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you thought there was a lot of paperwork involved in your home-equity loan or IRA account, wait until you see what the Internal Revenue Service has waiting for you.

For the home equity loan, it's called Form 8589 and it can get complicated. The IRS estimates that as many as half the 27 million couples and individuals with deductible home mortgage interest will have to file the form with their tax returns next year.

The two-page form and its four pages of instructions were made public Thursday. At the same time, the IRS released new forms that will be required of taxpayers who make non-deductible contributions to Individual Retirement Accounts and of those whose passive investments result in losses.

The new forms are among about 40 being created as a result of the big tax overhaul enacted last year.

"They basically reflect what Congress did to the tax law," said Arthur Altman, chairman of the IRS tax-forms committee. He said the agency has not had an easy time translating congressional intent into understandable forms.

The mortgage-interest form has been especially troublesome. "This easy-sounding provision has turned out to be a very difficult one for us to administer," Altman said.

As part of the tax overhaul, Congress agreed that interest on home mortgages (for one or two homes) generally would remain fully deductible. But the lawmakers added a couple of conditions:

—A full deduction will be allowed on mortgages, including home-equity loans, taken out after Aug.

16, 1986, only if the mortgage loan does not exceed the fair market value of the property.

—With two exceptions, a deductible mortgage may not exceed the purchase price of the house plus the cost of improvements. Those exceptions: part of the proceeds of the loan may be used for education or medical expenses.

The new Form 8589 will be required of any taxpayer who took out a home loan after last Aug. 16 (the date Senate and House negotiators completed work on the giant tax law) and used part of the proceeds for anything other than buying a house, or who refinanced an earlier mortgage after that date. The form will be used to calculate the allowable mortgage deduction.

Altman estimated that about 4 million people need to fill out only the first eight lines on the form. Those who used part of the loan for other purposes will have to complete one or both of the remaining parts.

Millions of taxpayers will have to file another new form, 8606, to determine how much, if any, of their 1987 IRA contribution is deductible. That is because the law denies a fully deductible IRA to workers who are covered by company pensions and earn more than $25,000 (if single) or $40,000 (if filing a joint return).

Covered workers are allowed partial IRA deductions if they earn up to $9,999 above those levels. Once income hits $35,000 (single) or $50,000 (joint) no deduction is permitted, but a worker may set aside up to $2,000 a year and the interest earned on that contribution remains tax-free until withdrawn.

Any worker who makes a non-deductible IRA contribution must file the new form.

Airlines object to government probe of their flight schedules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's airlines say a new government investigation of schedule-related delays at four more major U.S. airports misses the real cause of late flights.

The basic problem, say airline representatives, is that the airport and air traffic control system cannot meet the demands of growing air traffic.

The Department of Transportation said Thursday that it will study airline scheduling at Denver's Stapleton International Airport, Newark International Airport in New Jersey, New York's LaGuardia International Airport and San Francisco International Airport.

The carriers involved could face penalties of up to $1,000 per violation per day, said Transportation Department spokesman Bob Marx.

The department since April has been studying scheduling problems at four other large airports: Chicago's O'Hare International, Atlanta, Boston and Dallas-Fort Worth.

"DOT's ongoing investigation is an effort to distract consumer attention from the government's failure to improve the air traffic control system, and nothing more," said Clark Onstead, a vice president of Texas Air Corp., which owns Eastern Airlines, Continental Airlines and others. "It's a clever PR ploy."

Stephen Hayes of the Air Transport Association, which represents the nation's major airlines, said airline schedules may lead to some delays but "the problem won't get solved in any significant way until we increase airport capacity."

The Transportation Department's interest was piqued by the investigations begun in April.

"The information obtained from our current investigations suggests that airline scheduling problems are widespread and that expansion of our investigation is warranted," said Transportation Secretary Elizabeth H. Dole.

According to department statistics, about two out of every three airline delays are caused by weather. But airline scheduling procedures have come under fire for many of the others.

A disproportionate number of flights leave airports in the early mornings and late afternoons in an effort to accommodate travelers. This creates rush hours with frequent backups as planes head toward runways and terminals.

Critics also complain that airlines sometimes promise that flights will arrive at specific times, even though they consistently reach their destinations much later. This raises questions of deceptive advertising and of unfair methods of competition, both of which are prohibited by law.

Information from the investigations that commenced in April is being funneled to the department's enforcement office for possible action. Airlines could be fined.

Bork debate spills out of Washington

By The Associated Press

President Reagan is on vacation and so is Congress, but there's no break in the debate over Robert H. Bork's Supreme Court nomination.

Both the president and Senate Republican leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., complained Thursday that the Democratic-controlled Senate is stalling on the nomination.

"The American people want to see a full complement of nine justices on the bench when the Supreme Court reconvenes," Reagan said in a speech in North Platte, Neb.

But the man controlling the pace, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said Bork is "not a moderate fellow" and the nomination is caught in the middle of "a major, major philosophical disagreement."

Speaking at a ranch in North Platte, Reagan recalled that former Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., whom Bork would replace, "said that it wasn't fair to the Supreme Court, or the parties with cases before it, for the court to operate at less than full strength."

"Well, since last June, that's just what's happened. The approval process for Judge Bork's nomination is already the longest in 25 years."

The president said the workload of the justices' law clerks in preparing for the court's fall term, which begins in October, has reached the breaking point.

"The delays and added burdens that have already occurred can't be undone," Reagan said. "But what can be done is completing the confirmation process well before the Supreme Court begins its October term."

Biden, in Logan, Iowa, where he is campaigning for president, said, "It's always a boost to a candidate when the president comes to his defense."

But he said he doubted that senators holding the key swing votes will be influenced.

Anchorage declared safe after mines found

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A busy anchorage just south of the Persian Gulf where six mines were found was declared safe for shipping, but four nations were searching for more explosives, officials said.

Iran, which has been accused of laying the mines, offered to help in the search.

At the head of the gulf, Kuwaiti tankers flying American flags were loading cargoes in preparation for their trip south under U.S. Navy escort.

A dispatch from Iran's official news agency Thursday quoted a naval commander as saying his ships would start minesweeping operations today, in international waters not specified, but would not work in the Fujairah area without permission.

Fujairah is one of seven sheikdoms that make up the United Arab Emirates. The anchorage area is 30 miles south of the Strait of Hormuz, the narrow passage to the gulf.

Tankers transship oil and ships take on supplies in the anchorage, which is also used to assemble the northbound convoys of U.S. warships escorting re-flagged Kuwaiti tankers up the gulf.

In Washington, the Pentagon said Thursday that Iran probably planted the mines.

"We believe that it is quite likely, in fact almost certainly, the Iranians who left those mines there, presumably in hopes of placing them in front of our most recent tanker-escort group," said chief spokesman Robert Sims.

The anchorage had been considered a safe haven from the 7-year-old war between Iran and Iraq. That came to an end Monday, when the U.S.-operated supertanker Texaco Caribbean struck a mine there.

The anchorage, where up to 50 ships from many nations can be seen at once, was closed to traffic earlier Thursday.

Several shipping executives said they believed the "spiked globe" mines, which explode on contact, were free-floating and not tethered.

Col. Saeed Samsoun, the Fujairah police chief, said after nightfall Thursday that a search of the coastal area found it free of mines, and "full safety" for international navigation had been ensured.

The American oil companies Mobil and Chevron told their tankers to avoid the anchorage and to stay at least 25 miles from shore.

Executives of shipping companies said the average number of ships near the Strait of Hormuz was down by more than half to about 20 since the mine scare began.

Naval units of the two southern gulf countries, the United Arab Emirates and Oman, were searching for mines and the U.S. Navy was said to be helping farther from shore. A well-placed source in Saudi Arabia said that country's minesweepers also were in the area.

Pentagon officials said the USS Guadalcanal, a helicopter carrier equipped with eight minesweeping Sea Stallions, would not arrive in the region for another week.

Six minesweeping ships from Britain and France are due in several weeks. The Minneapolis Star quoted U.S. government officials as saying Italy and The Netherlands also would send minesweepers, but there was no confirmation.

Coast guard patrols in Fujairah ordered ships away from the 35-square-mile area after an Arab vessel reported sighting the sixth mine early Thursday.

Saudi police said in a delayed report that a Saudi Arabian coast guard vessel hit a mine at the northern end of the gulf Wednesday and two crewmen were slightly injured.

The Saudi coast guard vessel hit the mine 10-20 miles off Khafji, more than 500 miles northwest of the Fujairah anchorage.

Mexican government spending heavily on pro-nuclear campaign

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Faced with growing opposition to the Laguna Verde nuclear plant, the Mexican government is mounting a massive publicity campaign to convince people they have nothing to fear from Mexico's first atomic plant.

"A nuclear electric plant cannot explode like an atomic bomb," says one of the government's full-page newspaper advertisements. "A bomb and a nuclear electric plant are as different as war and peace."

The promotional effort, which according to the news magazine Proceso will cost up to $1.3 million, hit the newspapers as the plant's expected start-up tests approach.

Work began in 1973 on the twin-reactor plant, situated on the Gulf of Mexico shoreline about 45 miles (70 km) north of Veracruz, a city of 500,000 people.

The plant has two General Electric BWR-5 reactors, each using 20 tons of enriched uranium and each capable of producing 657 megawatts.

Completion has been hindered by construction delays, changes in presidential administrations and a worsening economic crisis that began in 1982. Opponents note that the delays have raised the estimated construction costs from $1.5 billion in 1980 to the latest estimate of $3.5 billion.

However, the plant remains a pet project of President Miguel de la Madrid, who last year said he wanted it in operation by the end of 1987.

This week, Fernando Hiriart, director of the Federal Electricity Commission or CFE, which operates the plant, said the first reactor would be in operation within two to three months. He said the second reactor would be operational in 1990 and there were plans for building four more nuclear plants in Mexico by the year 2000.

Hiriart and officials involved in the project have said the plant will not operate until everyone is satisfied it can function safely, including the International Atomic Energy Organization, which is scheduled to inspect the plant next month.

But ecologists scoff at the safety assurances and have continued leading efforts against it, including petitioning de la Madrid to close the plant.

The ecologists charge that the plant's technology is already obsolete and that the reactor has a faulty containment system that could result in an accident as serious as Chernobyl.

Opposition has also come from Roman Catholic authorities in the state of Veracruz. In a message issued last Christmas and Easter, the archbishop of the state capital of Jalapa and six bishops said they were "very concerned about the immediate risks of lethal contamination that the Laguna Verde plant can mean."

Father postpones daughter's marriage to accused killer

KERRVILLE (AP) — A man who postponed his teen-age daughter's wedding to a man accused of killing a banker's wife said he would support the match if she wanted it later.

James Barts said he wants to give his 16-year-old daughter, Tonya, time to reconsider her decision to marry Raymond Charles Tabares.

Authorities accused Tabares, 18, of murder in the slaying of Joyce Louise Walters, the wife of Roland Walters. He is the Bank of Kerrville's chairman of the board.

Tabares and Miss Barts were engaged last spring after they met at Center Point High School. Miss Barts, after Tabares' arrest last week, said she still intended to marry him and a tentative ceremony was set for Sunday.

On Wednesday, Barts decided not to sign a release allowing his daughter to marry Tabares and a marriage license was yet to be obtained.

A minor's parents must sign a release form to allow a child to marry.

"Right now, I'm thinking about it," said Barts. "I met with the sheriff and I agreed that later on in life, it could get hard on her, especially visiting him once a week in jail."

"I'm leaving it all up to her and I'll back her up on any decision," said Barts.

Kerr County Sheriff Cliff Greeson said Wednesday he was glad the wedding had been delayed. He earlier thought he could not prevent the couple from marrying.

"I think that is the thing to do — think about it awhile," Greeson told the San Antonio Express-News.

Tabares is being held in lieu of $500,000 bond. The couple, who have had three telephone conversations in the past week, were allowed to see each other for an hour Wednesday.

El Paso Electric rate hearing begins

AUSTIN (AP) — The $71.3 million rate increase sought by El Paso Electric Co. could leave the state unable to pay its utility bills in the area served by the company, an assistant attorney general says.

"We do request you keep the state of Texas and its taxpayers in mind when you're considering this case. We're one of the largest utility customers," Scott McCollough told Public Utility Commission examiners Thursday as they opened the rate hearing.

The hearing is expected to continue for up to eight weeks.

El Paso Electric wants to raise its rates by 33.3 percent. That would mean an increase of about $12 a month for residential customers who use 500 kilowatt-hours, spokesman Ken Perry said.

"We will show that the state of Texas does not have the money to pay its utility bills because the Legislature has seen fit to reduce state agency appropriations for utilities. In fact, the governor just last week line-item vetoed utility contingency funds for the College Coordinating Board," McCollough said.

"That means the largest (state) customer in the El Paso area, the University of Texas at El Paso, doesn't have any contingency funds for utilities," he added.

The state paid $2.3 million in El Paso Electric bills during the test year submitted by the company. McCollough said that would increase by at least $750,000 a year if the full increase is granted.

"This case, in litigation terms, is a lawsuit against the state of Texas and its taxpayers for three-quarters of a million dollars a year," he said.

El Paso City Council rejected the rate hike earlier this week.

Summer's heat causes no sweat for ice plant workers

DENISON (AP)—The weather outside is frightful: typical Texas middle-of-summer jungle heat. But summer is no sweat for 10 Denison laborers. Wrestling 40-pound loads, they work quickly in the big, chilly room, pausing only to wipe ice crystals from their faces. Fog-like fingers of vapor creep over the ice-covered floor. Millions of pounds of bagged ice loom up in the frigid gloom like plastic-covered glaciers, dwarfing the parka-clad workers. "The only thing I didn't like about working back there was that my moustache and eyebrows kept freezing up," said Anthony Pedraza, 22, production manager at the Fun Time Ice Co. in Denison. While other workers fight the summer heat, Fun Time's crew labors in a frozen land where the temperature ranges from 10 to 18 degrees

Fahrenheit. The cold, Pedraza said, is no problem. "I found that, if you're doing your job in there, cold ain't what you're worried about," said Pedraza, who spent his first year on the job working in the cold room. "You lift 40 pounds all day, that's hard work. I've seen guys in there wearing just a thin shirt at the end of the day because they're putting out so much heat, going and going and going." Workers choose what they wear. "Some guys wear tons of clothes," Pedraza said, "and some don't wear much. It depends on what you're used to." He tells new employees to dress warmly: double socks, jacket, a hood for the head. Pedraza has worked double shifts—16 hours at a time—in the big room.

Cartoonist gets inspiration from family, rural life

By ROGER KRAMER
Edwardsville Intelligencer

TROY, Ill. (AP)—Give Joe Rollins a quiet place to think, and chances are he'll come up with a cartoon.

Odds are also good his creation will be related to his upbringing on a farm near Greenfield or to family life at his home on the outskirts of Troy.

Rollins said his experiences, not much different from your average father, make his two regular cartoons—"Joe's Corner" and "Harold and Pam"—funny.

"Joe's Corner" appears in the Edwardsville Intelligencer's FYI weekly supplement. "Harold and Pam" can be found in the Troy Times-Tribune. Rollins also has had cartoons published in Country People and Women's World magazines.

"I was raised in a rural area, and in my quiet time, I would always draw," Rollins said.

"I would draw from the time I got home from school to the time I went to bed. Everybody knew that was what I was doing."

Rollins, 29, first published an 11-page comic book in Young Ambassador magazine, a Christian publication, 14 years ago.

While Rollins has moved out of the country, the country hasn't moved out of him. He rents a farmhouse with a barn and a large backyard. It's there that he finds the quiet time, and the inspiration, for many of his cartoons.

His wife, Janet, and his three daughters, Amanda, Amy Joe and Jennifer, provide much of the fodder for the cartoons.

"I draw mainly family-style cartoons. I get a lot of ideas from my kids," Rollins said.

One cartoon, for example, is of a bulldozer pulling into a home to clean the children's bedroom.

"That one really hit home, and I've had several people tell me that really hits home, too," he said.

Mrs. Rollins is one of his biggest fans. After Rollins spends 1½ hours three times a week thinking of ideas and about 15 minutes drawing them, his wife looks through them and tells him which one she likes—and doesn't like.

"I usually draw four or five drawings, and she tells me which one works the best," he said.

Rollins hasn't had formal art training outside of high school. "I went for a half semester at Lewis and Clark Community College. I took an art drawing class, and I knew soon that wasn't really what I was wanting," he said.

What Rollins has learned has been from reading other comic strips in the newspapers each day. He said many of the strips consist of "stick figures" and rely heavily on words to make their point.

"Some of the cartoons rely on 80 percent words and 20 percent art. I don't go for words that much. I go about half and half. If you have the right cartoon and the right words, everything falls into place," Rollins said.

What is the mystique of men and their hats?

By RHONDA MORAN
The Brazosport Facts

CLUTE (AP) — Judy Clifford is a soft-spoken woman with a normally sweet disposition, but her husband, S.M. "Buddy" Clifford Jr., saw a different side of her the day she finally had enough of opening the closet and getting pelted with caps.

"It got to where I would open the closet door and they would all come down on top of me," she said. "So I told him take them to work, or else."

Buddy Clifford's hat collection has topped 300, now safely displayed on shelves at his business, Anchor Safe and Lock Co. in Lake Jackson.

Richwood Police Chief Glenn Patton said he's had the same problem with his wife, even though his collection only includes about 50 hats.

"I have to hide them," he said, a little indignant, "because she'll get to cleaning house and throw them away."

"Sometimes I forget where I put one, and it's a surprise when I run across it again. But I can't leave them laying around because if she doesn't throw them out, my boy will grab 'em up and start wearing 'em," he said.

Richwood Public Works Director Mike Harper has a collection of about 150 hats displayed in his office at City Hall, and Patton claims he had to take his own hat collection home "to keep Harper out of it."

What is it about "gimme" hats — those baseball-style caps with advertisements or emblems on the front — that make ordinary people do extraordinary things to get them?

LeRoy Guillory of Freeport has about 500 hats hanging from the rafters of his business, LeRoy Net and Supply, and even he can't explain the mystique of the colorful caps.

"I've paid $100 or more for a cap that's being auctioned off for a charity," he said, "and sometimes I donate it back the next year so it can be auctioned again."

Not surprisingly, Guillory is often the only bidder, but that doesn't worry him.

Buddy Clifford's collection includes a battered red Delaware Punch hat given to him by his daughter and son-in-law, who spotted it floating down the Guadalupe River in New Braunfels and spent the better part of an hour trying to catch it for him.

Clifford's wife also tells of riding down the highway with Buddy at the wheel, passing up exits and going 10 miles out of the way just to pick up a cap lying in the middle of the road.

The Post Office Barber Shop in Clute has a sizeable hat collection decorating the walls along with mounted wildlife trophies an elk, a Japanese deer, a tarpon and a pheasant.

"Even with all the expensive trophies in here, there's more conversation about them hats," said Dorman Edison, barber and co-owner of the shop.

Edison and partner Ben Kubala started collecting the hats without really trying to.

"We got started by people coming in here to get their hair cut and forgetting their hats and caps," he said, combing and clipping as he talked.

"We'd keep them just in case anyone came back for them," he said. "We had about 21 caps in a box in the back when we decided to hang 'em up, and it's just grown from there."

Nowadays, the barbers wait a day or two before hanging up a cap left behind, but once it's up it stays.

"I guess a feller can get one back if he's big enough," Edison said.

An eye-catching green beret on a special hanger gets a lot of attention. Grinning, Edison noted, "It's controversial because a lot of customers say a real green beret should be black."

"That beret came from a feller named Simmons. He was in the Special Forces and had been in the Army for about 22 years."

Among the hundreds of caps in his collection, Guillory has some military caps, mostly from the U.S. Navy. He's got caps from the USS Ranger, the USS Merrill, the USS Kitty Hawk and others.

A royal blue cap with elegant gold lettering says simply "Queen Mary," a souvenir of yet another ship toured by the Freeport man.

A wool cap given to Guillory by a New England fisherman is among the more unusual hats now gathering dust in the rafters of his net shop.

Short-term debt erased at Cowboy Hall of Fame

By JUDY GIBBS
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The director of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center likes to think the financially troubled museum has weathered its roughest times in true western fashion.

"The Cowboy Hall is like the west — it's too tough to die," said Byron Price, who took over as director in January when the museum was $8 million in debt and had creditors pressing for payment.

"Our fever's broken but we're not well yet," Price said recently.

A massive fund-raising campaign, while still short of its $10 million goal, has erased all but $315,000 of the museum's short-term debt, and has whittled long-term debt to $1.42 million, Price said.

"In terms of our pledges, we can really eliminate all of our debt," Price said. "We have pledges on the books of $2.4 million, which we will collect. We will be using those pledges to liquidate our remaining debt."

Creditors have been paid off at 100 cents on the dollar, he said.

"That's another western tradition — paying off the debts we owe," said Price, who came to the Cowboy Hall from the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum in Canyon, Texas.

The Cowboy Hall is housed in a modern building in northeastern Oklahoma City, near the Oklahoma City Zoo and the new Remington Park pari-mutuel horse racing track, now under construction.

Through tall plate-glass windows, visitors can look out on a courtyard filled with fountains. The museum's modern galleries house an extensive western art collection, as well as worn lariats, spurs, saddles and memorabilia from famous cowboys and rodeo stars.

Like the Cowboy Hall, Price is a mixture of down-home and polish. He wears a plaid shirt and cowboy boots to work in a huge wood paneled office in the hall's basement, and he punctuates his speech with colloquial expressions that mix well with the hall's western theme.

"We're pulling in the same harness," Price said of the 17 members of the board of directors, reunited in July 1986 after settling out of court a bitter lawsuit over who would control the Cowboy Hall.

The number of visitors to the hall is up — 13 percent compared to the same period last year, when stories about the museum's financial troubles and the board of directors battle were frequent in the news.

But despite the increase, the year's attendance still will be far short of the 300,000-plus visitors annually who came in the late 1970s and early 1980s, Price said.

"We have to restore our credibility with the public and with our profession," Price said. "That's just a matter of time."

"I fully expect in a year we'll be up in the 200,000 attendance," he said.

While the $4-per-adult admission fee certainly helps, Price said gate receipts will never be enough to make the Cowboy Hall solvent. "You'll never live on your gate income. Most institutions like this need endowments," he said.

Establishing a $10 million endowment is one of Price's major goals for the Cowboy Hall. "That's not a great endowment by museum standards," he said, adding with a smile, "but it's a nice round figure."

Many major corporations that declined to contribute to pay off the Cowboy Hall's current debt indicated they might be willing to contribute when the financial problems are resolved. "They said, 'Check us when you get out of debt,'" Price said.

His other goal is to make repairs and improvements on the museum's building, now more than 20 years old, and "reverse some of the deterioration that occurred from a policy of deferred maintenance."

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

FAITHFUL AND OBEDIENT

The dog has a reputation for being faithful and obedient. Many have been known to give their lives in sacrifice for their master. How wonderful are the joys when we faithfully attend the Lord's house and obey his word. How great the praise when the Lord can say...

"Well done, thou good and faithful servant..."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Each night prizes will be given to the child bringing the most visitors to Bible school. There also will be puppets, skits and a penny march each evening. Bus transportation will be available to those needing a ride by calling 669-7967 before 6 p.m. The bus will be picking up children starting at 6 p.m. Graduation for the Vacation Bible School will be at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 23, in the church auditorium. Rev. Bill Pierce, pastor, invited children to "come and be with us in Vacation Bible School."

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Consider it pure joy, my brothers, whenever you face trials of many kinds, because you know that the testing of your faith develops perseverance. Perseverance must finish its work so that you may be mature and complete, not lacking anything. (James 1:2-4 NIV)

When I was a child, the property on which my family lived had an arboretum of elm, persimmon and oak trees. The shade area had been cleared of the brush and briar which grew densely in the woods surrounding our land. The cleared umbrage provided my sister and me a perfect play area. Daddy made us old-fashioned rope-and-board swings and tied them to sturdy tree limbs. The swings made for plenty fine playing; however, we didn't discover the diversity of play afforded us by the swings until one of them broke.

The combination of a single suspended rope and two children's imaginations is a potent brew. We played endless Tarzan and Jane scenes. We got pretty good with our Tarzan yells. However, we never did master the fine art of Tarzan and Jane swinging on the vine simultaneously; we'd always end up in the dirt (Oops! I mean, we'd always end up in the crocodile-infested river). With just a little altered thought, we were flying, singing Peter Pans. Or we were elegantly costumed, death-defying circus performers. Or we were brawling cowboys swooping down on barroom chandeliers to boot the bad guys in the teeth. Or we were rappelling mountain climbers. Of course, we were also little girls picking rope fibers from our hands, but we were undaunted and uninhibited in our fantasizing.

Christians' spiritual lives are like the swing. Status quo feels pleasant, functional, dependable and safe. And such periods of comfort are essential elements in the maintenance of Christian character. However, just as the broken swing excited the imaginations and challenged the creativity of two children, life's snags force us to open ourselves to the excitement and challenge of commitment expansion and faith possibilities. The sometimes painful soul stretching results in developed levels of Christian courage, integrity and vision. By the grace and ingenuity of our Lord, our brokenness becomes completeness! © 1987 Charlotte Barbaree

Catholic Family Service to have fund campaign Fellowship Baptist to observe pastor's 30th year

AMARILLO - Catholic Family Service Inc. will kick off its annual fund raising campaign with a summer celebration from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 20.

The block party will be held to benefit O'Brien House, the emergency shelter of Catholic Family Service, which is located at 1522 S. Van Buren. Highlighting the barbeque will be music provided by Facade.

This year's celebration will also celebrate the shelter's third year of operation in Amarillo. To express appreciation for supporters and contributors of O'Brien House, the staff of the shelter will serve hamburgers and hot dogs.

Donations of new household items for O'Brien House will be accepted at the door.

The O'Brien House Children's Emergency Shelter of CFS in Amarillo is part of the National Network of Runaway and Youth Services, offering a responsive and accessible shelter for runaway youth and 24-hour hotline services seven days a week.

Supplementing the shelter is the agency's Team Resources for Youth Family Counseling Center, providing crisis and long-term individual and family counseling, outreach, advocacy, referrals for medical, legal and health assistance, and follow-up services.

CFS of Amarillo was first established more than 50 years ago as a response by the Catholic Diocese of Amarillo to the needs arising from the Dust Bowl and Depression era.

Since that time, the agency has grown into a multi-service social work agency that enjoys widespread support in the region and which will serve an estimated 5,000 families, representing more than 17,000 individuals, in 1987.

The agency currently has four direct-service divisions operating 23 programs. The divisions are Community Services, Maternity and Adoption Services, Youth and Family Counseling Services, and Refugee and Citizenship Division.

Nazarenes set Vacation School

The First Church of the Nazarene, located at Buckler and West streets, will begin its Vacation Bible School at 6:30 p.m. Monday, Aug. 17.

The school will be held each evening Monday through Friday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., with the final program set for 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Aug. 23.

Highlights of the Vacation Bible School will be puppets, flannel-graph stories, Cookie the Clown, Bible stories, character-building stories, Bible memorization and the Sunshine Store, where children shop with the "bucks" earned at the school.

Theme of the school series is "On the Road to Heaven." Supervisor for the VBS is Mrs. Marie Ray of Borger, who said the emphasis of the school merits the attendance of the children in Pampa.

Church teen-agers to visit Six Flags

Thirty-three teen-agers from the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ will leave Sunday afternoon for a trip to Six Flags.

The group will be attending a youth rally entitled "Soul Lift." Speaker for the rally will be Wally Wilkerson of the Southside Church of Christ in Fort Worth.

Joyful Noise, a singing group from Little Rock, Ark., will be performing at the rally.

The group plans to return to Pampa on Tuesday evening.

Sponsors going with the teens are Youth Minister Keith Feerer, Dale and Sonda Meadows, Virgil and Mary Etta Smith, Joe and Neida Johnson, and Greg and Judy Sims.

Religion Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — An Episcopal school, the General Theological Seminary, has a new "Center for Jewish-Christian Studies and Relations," described as the first of its kind in a Christian seminary in the country.

Established by New York's Episcopal Diocese and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, the center aims to promote Jewish-Christian dialogue, examine Jewish roots of Christianity and counter anti-Semitism.

Fellowship Baptist Church, 622 E. Francis, will have a special Homecoming Sunday this weekend to mark the 30th anniversary of Rev. Earl Maddux as pastor and to dedicate the new Family Recreation Center.

Sunday School will begin at 10 a.m., with the morning worship service starting at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Rev. Maddux has invited former members, present members, friends and neighbors, "and the entire community" to attend the special occasion for the church.

Gorden Perryman of Amarillo will be the guest soloist for the morning homecoming service.

Special speaker for the day will be Brother Roy Jones of Del City, Okla.

Part of the service will include the dedication of the recently completed Family Recreation Center. The center will have facilities for basketball, volleyball and ping pong, along with a fellowship hall and a large kitchen.

Special services will continue during the week, with former members now serving as pastors speaking at the 7:30 p.m. services Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Guest speakers will be Rev. Billy G. Hill of Jal, N.M.; Rev. Ricky Timmons of Canadian and Rev. Jim Maddison of Nevada, Mo.

Born in Albertville, Ala., Rev. Maddux became pastor of Fellowship Baptist on Aug. 15, 1957. Prior to coming to Pampa, he had pastored at the Fundamental Baptist Church at Alvarado, serving there from November 1953 until coming to Fellowship Baptist.

He was ordained to the ministry in February 1954 at the Fellowship Baptist Church in Borger after he had already begun his pastorage at Alvarado.

Maddux recalls that when he came here, the church was meeting in the old Pennant Club cafe building in the 800 block of South Cuyler.

"There were probably about 75 members when I came here," he said. He remembers there were only 30 in attendance at his first Sunday School meeting here. "But the next week, there were 41," he said.

Since then, the congregation has grown to approximately 600 members, with the church helping to support 36 missionary families in the nation and other parts of the world.

The church is debt free, with all facilities paid for, Maddux said.

Rev. Maddux and his wife, Nevada, have two daughters, Debra Ann Redman of Ada, Okla., and Claudia Adams of Ardmore, Okla. The daughters are planning to be in attendance this Sunday for the special occasion.

The organizational meeting for the church was held on April 4, 1954 in a rented, glass-front building at 119 N. Ward. Rev. Gerald Martin from Windyville, Mo., was appointed as pastor.

The group adopted the name Fellowship Baptist Church and accepted its covenant and by-laws. A missionary family serving in Pakistan was adopted for support by the group.

The church continued to meet at the Ward location until a smaller, centrally located building on East Frederic was found. As the group grew, it moved to a former church building on North Timmers.

Then the old Pennant Club became available, and the church purchased it and began a renovation program.

Later, Rev. Martin submitted his resignation, and the church appointed Rev. Maddux as its new pastor on Aug. 15, 1957.

Rev. Earl Maddux

In April 1958, under Maddux's leadership, the church acquired a former church building at its present location at the corner of Francis and Warren streets. In April 1963, contracts were let and blueprints drawn up for a building program for construction of a new sanctuary. The old building, with its basement, held facilities for Sunday School and a fellowship hall.

A dedicatory service was held in November 1963 after completion of the new building. Former pastor Rev. Martin came from Sunnyside, Wash., to preside at the service.

In the past year the church began its new building program for construction of the Family Recreation Center, which will be dedicated this Sunday as part of the Homecoming Sunday activities.

Rev. Maddux said he would like to see a large crowd show up for the service to help him mark his anniversary with the church and to worship with the congregation as it observes its blessings received over the years.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican's court of appeals for marriage cases, the Roman Rota, last year decided 123 cases in favor of annulment, citing causes ranging from nymphomania to bigamy to a lack of witnesses at the wedding.

The U.S. National Catholic News Service says the figure represents an almost 20 percent increase from 1985, according to a recently released yearbook of Vatican activities.

Savers keep boots looking new

By BETH COTTEN
Syndication Associates, Inc.

Mount Everest not the highest peak on earth? That's what I read in the newspaper. New equipment apparently shows one of its neighbors a bit higher.

This can't exactly come as welcome news to those who have braved and conquered mighty Everest, but what a windfall for those who have scaled the other mountain!

Not that either one is an easy climb. These are the major leagues, light years from my daily routine, planned around making a few trips as possible up a single flight of stairs.

I'll never be a mountain climber — I'm too dedicated to the pursuit of making life easy. But I'm happy to expend some time and energy if it will save more later.

I took a few hours recently and made several boot savers to keep expensive boots from getting all wrinkly, especially during summer storage.

These simple, stuffed-fabric forms can be made to fit every pair of boots in your family. To give them character, add a soft-sculpted head to each one.

You can reproduce these boot savers — Clem and Clara Clodhopper and their feisty Aunt Bessie — in practically no time. Our detailed plans include full-size patterns and complete instructions for custom fitting and assembly and for creating the soft-sculpted heads.

Another work-saving project is our kitchen cozies. Conceal your appliances under pretty, appliqued covers, and messy-looking fingerprints disappear! Plans include patterns and instructions for the cozies and for three different applique motifs.

To order plans for the boot savers, specify Project No. 2138 and send $4.95; for the kitchen cozies, specify No. 1233, $5.95. Save a dollar by ordering both plans for only $9.90.

Whimsical characters keep boots from wrinkling and are inexpensive to make at home.

To make a boot saver, you'll need about 1/2 yard of medium-or-heavy-weight fabric for the body.

Begin by making a pattern for the body. It is horseshoe shaped, with each branch of the horseshoe fitting down into one boot, and has a neck extension at the top. Measure your boots to determine the width and length of each branch of the horseshoe. Add a 1/2-inch seam allowance all around the pattern, and cut two fabric body pieces. Place them right sides together and stitch the seam around the entire outer edge, leaving the neck open.

Clip the curves and turn the body right side out. Press the seam allowance to the inside around the neck opening. Stuff the body firmly with fiberfill.

The head can be made from nylon hose or stretchy knit fabric. Some stores sell a special soft-sculpting knit fabric.

Cut a 16-inch-diameter fabric circle. Gather it around a ball of fiberfill, making the head about 20 inches in circumference and 5 or 6 inches in vertical diameter. Use a long sharp needle and heavy-duty thread to sculpt eye lines and a mouth line.

To make the nose, cut a 3/4-inch circle of fabric and gather it around a small ball of stuffing. Sculpt nostril indentations on the nose and glue or whipstitch it to the face.

To finish Clem's face, I added felt eyebrows and a mustache, button eyes and yarn hair. For Clara, I added red felt lips, button eyes and yarn hair. I drew in her eyebrows using a felt marker.

For Aunt Bessie, I made the head from stuffed nylon hose. I sculpted the nose, in addition to the eye and mouth lines, instead of making a separate nose and attaching it to the face.

I used colored markers to fill in Aunt Bessie's facial details, and glued fiberfill to her head to create her white hair and eyebrows.

Whipstitch the head to the neck opening of the body, starting at the back and working several times around.

I made simple bonnets for Clara and Aunt Bessie, adding lace trim around Clara's neck to hide the whipstitching. Clem wears a purchased or homemade bandanna, western hat and sheriff's badge.

Fletchers to view video family tree at reunion

Descendants of WILLIAM and ELIZABETH FLETCHER will hold their 42nd annual family reunion on Saturday, Sept. 5 at Hart Springs, Gilchrist County, Trenton, Fla.

Last year, approximately 100 descendants attended the picnic and made a videotape of the family, following the oldest lineage to the present generation. Plans for this year's reunion include viewing that movie.

It is not known when WILLIAM was born, but his will was probated shortly after his death on Nov. 11, 1710 in Accomack County, Virginia. The will mentions his wife, ELIZABETH, and his children, WILLIAM, MATTHEW, THOMAS, BATTERTON, BRANDON, ELIZABETH, DOROTHY, MARY, ROSANAH and FRANCES.

Documentation has not been found to prove the theory that ELIZABETH's maiden name was SELVEY; however, all indications are that SELVEY would be the allied family name.

WILLIAM, son of WILLIAM and ELIZABETH, married first SARAH (maiden name unknown) and second LOUISA HENDRICKS. Shortly after his death in 1729, LOUISA had a son whom she named WILLIAM JR. In 1761 WILLIAM FLETCHER JR. and wife ELIZABETH MCINTOSH were living on Jeffrey's Creek, Pee Dee River, Cheraw District of South Carolina. After the Revolution, he moved to Effingham County, Georgia and in 1825 moved to Telfair County, where he died in 1831.

WILLIAM R. FLETCHER, son of WILLIAM JR. and ELIZABETH MCINTOSH FLETCHER, was born Jan. 5, 1811 in Bulloch County, Georgia. On Feb. 22, 1844, he married ELIZA EVALLINE BURNETT and moved to Madison County, Florida, where he homesteaded until his death on Aug. 9, 1858.

Additional information about the reunion or the FLETCHER family can be obtained from RUBY MOBLEY, 6334 Victoria PK Ct., Jacksonville, Fla. Her telephone number is (904) 733-4358.

Allied family names include HENDRICKS, MCINTOSH, BURNETT, DELANY, BUSH, GOODBREAD and SLAUGHTER. Remember, if you are requesting information, enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope!

Immunizations required by Texas public schools

With all the back-to-school hustle and bustle, the Texas Medical Association reminds parents to take time out to immunize their children.

In fact, children must receive vaccinations for five diseases — diphtheria, tetanus, polio, measles and rubella — before they can enter Texas elementary and secondary schools. Certain vaccinations also must be given to children who attend day or child care centers.

Additionally, TMA recommends pertussis (whooping cough) and mumps immunization.

These seven major childhood diseases can in some cases cause complications like brain injury, ear infection and pneumonia, or even death. But they can all be prevented by immunization.

Some parents who hear about child deaths from vaccinations may decide not to have their children vaccinated. TMA notes that serious reactions are infrequent and that immunizations continue to play a major role in reducing illness and death at an early age. Smallpox, for example, has been completely wiped out due to immunizations.

If your child is ill at the time of immunization, be sure to tell the doctor.

For a free pamphlet, "Immunizations — Investing in a Healthy Future," write to Texas Medical Association, Communication Department, 1801 North Lamar Blvd., Austin, 78701 or call 512-477-6704, ext. 212.

One-way ticket is puzzling gift from son

DEAR ABBY: You've had so much in your column lately about gifts. I want to tell you what happened to me. First of all, I'm a widow, past 60, with grown children, and I know I'm hard to buy for, but last Christmas my son and daughter-in-law gave me a gift certificate for a one-way ticket to Phoenix!

Abby, my home is in Ohio, and I have been to Phoenix, and don't care to make my home there. They said I could go anywhere in the United States and they would pay for it — but it had to be one way. I told them there was no place in the U.S. I wanted to go — and stay — so they said, "Either take a one-way ticket, or you're out of luck!"

What is your opinion of this? — LIKES OHIO

DEAR LIKES OHIO: If this was supposed to be a joke, I don't think it's funny. If your son and daughter-in-law were encouraging you to travel, there are kinder ways to get their point across.

DEAR ABBY: Our son, I'll call him Derrick, is 18 and lives with a woman who has two small children and is 10 years older than he is. He is planning to marry her when she gets her divorce. Derrick seems happy living the way he is although he was raised in a Christian home. In this state, he can get married at 18 without parental consent.

Derrick is a big, strong, healthy kid, but he doesn't like to work, so he seldom holds a job for very long. He has obligations at the bank for a new truck and is looking for his father and me to bail him out. Should we help him financially, or let him sink or swim? — DERRICK'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: A young man who is old enough to marry without parental consent is old enough to pay his own bills. When he knows he has to hold down a job, he will.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl who needs your help to settle a dispute between my mom and me. My mom will not allow me to wear men's boxer shorts and a tank top in public. I am trying to tell her there is nothing wrong with it — it's the style. Lots of girls are wearing them.

Mom says it's gross for girls to wear boys' underwear in public. I would like to hear your opinion. Sign this... — THE BOXER REBELLION

DEAR BOXER REBELLION: Boxer shorts and tank tops are a summer fad that will probably fall out of favor when the first chill of autumn arrives. Gross? Not really. Unfeminine, perhaps, but not offensive. P.S. I like your signature. With that kind of creativity, you could write an advice column

Woman travels to promote Harlem Globetrotters games

By JOE A. SUBARTON
The Sunday Grit

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Cynthia A. Stearns has an unusual sales job: She tries to entice people in the United States and Canada to attend performances of the world-famous Harlem Globetrotters.

Stearns, a former Williamsport area woman, is the Globetrotters' domestic marketing director. This means she travels all over North America promoting the zany basketball team, somewhat like an "advance man" for a traveling circus.

She is based at the Globetrotters' headquarters in Los Angeles, and has been promoting the team since January.

"I am responsible for all the advertising, promotions and publicity for the team at every one of their games in the United States and Canada. Last year they had more than 100 bookings," she said.

Stearns received a bachelor's degree in education from Springfield College, Springfield, Mass., in 1980.

"It's kind of funny that I got involved with the Globetrotters since Springfield College is where basketball was invented and now I am working with the magicians of basketball," she said.

At Springfield, Stearns helped market the 1980 Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y. She then went on to Ohio University in Cincinnati for a master's degree in 1981 in sports administration.

While studying for her master's, Stearns worked as an intern at the 12,000-seat Sundome at the University of South Florida, in Tampa, Fla. She coordinated the installation of stages, basketball courts, sound systems and concessions.

Her association with the Globetrotters began when she was marketing coordinator from 1983-86 at Cincinnati's 16,000-seat Riverfront Coliseum.

There, at her first full-time job, she promoted concerts, basketball games and family shows, and became acquainted with the Globetrotters. When the Globetrotters sought a new marketing director early this year, she landed the job.

Before joining the Globetrotters' organization, Stearns also worked for the U.S. Hot Rod Association in Hot Springs, Ark. She was one of three marketing directors promoting weekend motor sports around the country, such things as truck and tractor pulls, motocross and indoor mud bog racing at arenas like the Spectrum in Philadelphia, the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J., and Pittsburgh's Civic Arena.

While marketing for the Hot Rod Association, Stearns attended the events and traveled with others to them.

But her job with the Globetrotters is different. She still travels a lot, but alone.

"I travel in advance of the games to set up promotions and to meet with the media people," Stearns said. "I don't travel with the team. I talk with the team on a daily basis but sometimes I only get to see them twice a month."

"If, for instance, the team is playing in Philadelphia in March, I would be there in December or January."

Stearns said a promotions director is hired when the team appears in international games because "we need someone to fluently speak the language of the country where (the Globetrotters) are appearing."

"In the fall, we will be traveling in China and will have a Chinese promoter," she added.

Tigers close gap in AL East

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Kansas City Royals didn't have much of a chance to extend their four-game winning streak once Jack Morris found out he was in control of all his pitches.

"I just felt like if I kept throwing good I would win," Morris said after he pitched a five-hitter and struck out 11 as the Detroit Tigers beat the Royals 4-1 Thursday night. "It's the first time in a long time that I've thrown all four of my pitches and had a pretty good idea of where they were going. It was just a good night for me."

Morris, 13-6, who walked only one, retired 16 consecutive batters from the second to the seventh inning. He gave up a solo homer to Jim Eisenreich in the eighth, then retired the Royals in order in the ninth to pull the Tigers within a half-game of first place Toronto in the American League East.

Matt Nokes drove in Detroit's first run with an infield out after Royals starter Mark Gubicza issued two walks and hit Alan Trammell with a pitch in the first inning. In the third, Trammell singled and scored on Nokes' double.

Gubicza, 9-12, issued his sixth walk, to Dave Bergman, leading off the sixth and Pat Sheridan tripled to put the Tigers ahead 3-0. Lou Whitaker followed with a sacrifice fly.

In other games:
White Sox 10, Blue Jays 3
A sellout crowd of 45,152 at Exhibition Stadium went home disappointed as Chicago left-hander Floyd Bannister outdueled Phil Niekro in his Toronto debut.

Bannister, 8-9, pitched a six-hitter and Niekro, 7-12, had five shutout innings before allowing a three-run homer to Donnie Hill in the sixth. Then the White Sox routed two relievers with seven runs in the eighth inning. Juan Beniquez's fourth-inning homer put the Blue Jays ahead 1-0, but Hill's homer in the sixth gave the White Sox a 3-1 lead.

The Blue Jays cut the deficit to 3-2 in the seventh on Kelly Gruber's RBI single, but Fred Manrique hit a three-run homer and Gary Redus a two-run shot in the eighth, highlighting Chicago's seven-run inning.

George Bell hit his 36th homer in the ninth. Angels 10, Twins 1

California cut Minnesota's lead to 2½ games in the West as the Twins failed to deliver in the clutch, stranding 10 baserunners in the first six innings off Mike Witt.

Witt, 14-8, allowed nine hits in the first six innings, but he and DeWayne Buice, who pitched the ninth, gave up no hits over the final three.

Doug DeCinces drove in two California runs with a homer and a single. Dick Schofield, making his first appearance since separating his left shoulder July 12, had three hits and drove in a run, helping the Angels beat Steve Carlton, 6-11.

Tigers' Pat Sheridan is out at home.

Joyner-Kersey ties world long jump mark.

Kersey equals world record in long jump

By RUSTY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Americans ran away from the Cubans in the medals race at the Pan Am Games. Jackie Joyner-Kersey jumped away with hers.

After four days, only 69 medals separated the United States from Cuba — traditional 1-2 rivals at these games. But the United States was on a roll Thursday, picking up medals from swimming to shooting.

By the end of the night the Americans had a pile of 40 more medals, 17 of them gold, while the Cubans added five.

The U.S. treasure chest now has 198 medals, 104 more than Cuba's.

The most treasured of the night was won at the Indiana University track, where Joyner-Kersey sailed 24 feet, 5½ inches into the air and landed with a world record in the long jump.

In gymnastics, a hobbled U.S. team still managed to win gold, but it didn't seem fair to at least one Cuban competitor.

"All the judges were partial for the North American team," Casimiro Suarez said. "I believe we competed a lot better than they did."

It was a good day for Americans even when medals weren't at stake.

U.S. boxers Andrew Maynard and Kelcie Banks won convincingly over two Argentinians in their opening bouts and meet the Cubans next.

The U.S. basketball team won its fourth straight in a rout, as usual, beating Venezuela 109-74. The Americans now advance to Sunday's quarterfinals.

U.S. women's softball team pitchers now have two no-hitters and two one-hitters. Michele Granger, who no-hit El Salvador on Sunday, one-hit Belize on Thursday for a 6-0 victory.

And the U.S. men's volleyball team — the defending Olympic and world champions — recouped from its Wednesday night loss to Brazil with a three-game sweep of the Dominican Republic.

TRACK AND FIELD

Joyner-Kersey, of East St. Louis, Ill., tied the record on her sixth and final jump.

The biggest upset, though, came in the men's 400 meters, where American Raymond Pierre came from behind in the final 80 meters to win the gold medal over 1983 world champion Bert Cameron of Jamaica.

Pierre, who attends Baylor, was sixth in this year's NCAA championships. The only U.S. entrant in the event, he won in a lifetime best 44.60 seconds. Cameron was second in 44.72.

American Coleen Sommer, of Chandler, Ariz., continued her comeback from an auto accident last year, winning the high jump at 6-5 and breaking the Pan-Am record.

Phillies above .500 mark under new manager

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia Manager Lee Elia says finishing with a winning season means a lot to the Phillies, even if it doesn't mean a trip to the playoffs.

The Phillies were expected to be a prime candidate for the National League East title this season after signing free-agent catcher Lance Parrish. But Parrish and the Phillies got off to an 8-18 start.

The club fired John Felske as manager on June 18 when it stood 29-32 and gave Elia the job. Since then the team is above .500.

Rick Schu's two-run double with two out in the 13th inning Thursday gave Philadelphia a 4-2 victory over the division-leading St. Louis Cardinals.

"I have to be happy with the way we're playing right now," Elia said. "If we don't play well enough to get back into it this year, it helps me decide what kind of club I've got for next year."

Schu's line drive off reliever Ken Dayley, 7-3, scored Luis Aguayo, who had singled, and Milt Thompson, who walked.

"Dayley got me out with a curveball the inning before so I was looking for a fastball I could hit," Schu said.

Winner Steve Bedrosian, 4-2, pitched two scoreless innings and Wally Ritchie got the last three outs for his second save.

In other games:
Giants 7, Astros 6

Robby Thompson doubled with one out in the 11th inning and scored on a two-out throwing error by shortstop Buddy Biancalana as San Francisco outlasted Houston at Candlestick Park.

Biancalana fielded a grounder by Kevin Mitchell, who was awarded an infield single, and threw the ball into the dirt, past first base, allowing Thompson to score the winning run. The error made a winner of reliever Craig Leferts, 3-4.

Mitchell went 4-for-6 for the Giants and drove in four runs, three with his 15th homer of the year. The Giants remained tied with Cincinnati for the NL West lead.

Cubs 7, Mets 5
Jody Davis' two-run single off the glove of right fielder Darryl Strawberry snapped an eighth-inning tie and gave Chicago a come-from-behind victory over New York at Wrigley Field.

The Mets led 5-0 after two innings but pitching ace Dwight Gooden was unable to hold it and was chased after five.

With score 5-5 and one out in the eighth, Jerry Mumphrey and Keith Moreland drew walks from Roger McDowell, and Luis Quinones reached when first baseman Keith Hernandez booted his grounder for an error to load the bases.

Davis followed with a deep fly and the ball glanced off Strawberry's glove at the warning track, allowing Mumphrey and Moreland to score.

Angel Manager GENE MAUCH's solution to the drug problem: "If I had to blow up some country to keep them from making that stuff I'd blow it up and worry about it later." Mauch for President, anyone?

Mantle holds the record for having homered from both sides of the plate in a game ten times in his career, his last on August 12, 1964. EDDIE MURRAY has done it eight times, setting a record earlier this year when he did it in consecutive games.

Addition of BILL MADLOCK seems to have sparked the Detroit into the pennant chase. He is the Tigers' 26th third baseman since SPARKY ANDERSON became manager in June 1979.

Thinking his baseball career was over, pitcher LARRY SORENSON interviewed for a sales job last winter. "When I found out what the salary was I went home, took off my suit and went jogging for 40 minutes," says the Expos pitcher.

Former Ranger pitcher JON MATLOCK lives in Fort Worth and raises Egyptian-Arabian horses and sells real estate. Former Boston Red Sox infielder der RICO PETROCELLI is managing Birmingham in the Southern League, earning his way back to the majors.

Who holds the record for indoor home runs? Former Houston slugger Jim Wynn, with 97, a mark being threatened by the Twins' KENT HRBEK.

During the season Cards' manager WHITNEY HERZOG and Mets' boss DAVE JOHNSON are bitter opponents. Off the field they are partners in a fishing camp in Florida.

Using the same weight instructor NBA thinman MANUTE BOL does, St. Louis shortstop OZZIE SMITH gained 17 pounds during the winter, strength standing him in good stead during the torrid Busch Stadium heat along the Mississippi riverfront.

Hall of Fame a popularity contest? BROOKS ROBINSON (he's in) played 23 seasons, hit .287 lifetime and had 268 home runs. Former ChiCub third baseman RON SANTO (he's not in) hit 342 homers in 15 seasons and batted a career .277, and with his glove set six National League all-time fielding records and three major league all-time fielding marks. The difference? Brooksie got World Series exposure.

The largest ballpark in baseball history was Leeman Field at Pennington Gap, Va. in the Class D Appalachian League, where the fences measured, from left to right, 900 feet, 1,200 feet and 600 feet!

Did you know that there have been five clubs that won 100 or more games in a season, but finished second? The last was the 1983 Orioles. The 1909 Cubs won 104 and finished 6½ back of Pittsburgh.

That 'C' on the uniform of the Mets' KEITH HERNANDEZ indicates team captain, a throwover from hockey... And that minute, unreadable notation on the right sleeve of most uniforms is the name of the manufacturer, Spalding.

The outlook's a bit more brilliant for the Mudville Nine today, for Casey, legendary Casey, has made the Hall of Fame. A 6-4 bronze statue of Mighty Casey the hero who struck out in ERNEST THAYER's immortal "Casey At The Bat", has been unveiled at Cooperstown.

And MIKE MURPHY says he'd like to hear a phone conversation between Brewer slugger ROB DEER and Met pitcher RON DARLING: "Hello, Deer?" "Yes, Darling!"

Pampa opens volleyball season under new head coach

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

After a week of practice, new head coach Mike Lopez likes the way the Pampa High girls' volleyball squad is dishing out spikes, serves and sets. "The girls are working hard. I've put in a new offense and the girls have responded to it well," Lopez said.

After 18 years as a football coach, Lopez is looking forward to coaching a different sport. "It's a new challenge for me," added Lopez.

Lopez feels the Lady Harvesters have an excellent chance at repeating last year's trip to the bi-district playoffs. Pampa won nine of twelve District 1-4A matches last season to finish in the runner-up spot behind Levelland.

Overall, the Lady Harvesters were 16-13. "We have a lot of good depth and a lot of good players," Lopez says. "We've got the height and talent to stack up well against the rest of the district."

Pampa's '87 squad will be built around Tanya Lidy, Yolanda Brown, Keitha Clark, Schivonne Parker, Lisa Lindsey, Jeana Macon and Deana Waters.

"We've got some real good hitters and setters in this group," Lopez said. "They've all been giving me 110 percent effort."

Pampa opens the season Tuesday at Palo Duro. Pampa's home opener is Thursday at 6:30 p.m. against Amarillo High.

Among the district opponents, Dumas is expected to challenge Pampa for the top spot. Dumas loses four starters, but several standouts from last year's JV squad should take up the slack.

Defending champion Levelland was hit hard by graduation and the Lobos have a new coach in former Pampa Middle School teacher Samantha Smith.

Canyon enters varsity play for the first time, but the Eaglettes are a few years away from being a contender.

Their JV girls were 4-15. Lopez replaces Phil Hall, who coached the Lady Harvesters for four years. Hall is now coaching in the Dallas area.

Chiefs top Oilers

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP)—The Houston Oilers were literally kicked into submission by Kansas City's Nick Lowery in their NFL exhibition opener.

Lowery kicked six field goals, including a go-ahead 22-yarder with 7:58 to play Thursday night, leading the Chiefs to a 32-20 victory.

"There were no bombs out there, just routine field goals," Lowery said. "You have to give the offense credit for getting us in position."

"Every year it's like learning to kick over again under pressure. I've never made six field goals before, but I did make five against the (Los Angeles) Raiders in regular season."

Lowery hit field goals of 39 and 38 yards in the first half when the Chiefs took a 13-10 intermission lead.

He added kicks of 28, 19, 22 and 42 yards in the second half. Herman Heard ran 1-yard for a touchdown in the first quarter and Bill Kenney hit Darrell Colbert with a 40-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Tony Zendejas had field goals of 23 and 30 yards for the Oilers and Warren Moon hit Drew Hill with a 19-yard touchdown pass and Hubert Oliver ran 1-yard for another Oiler touchdown.

The Oilers played the game without starting running back Mike Rozier, who said he overslept and missed pre-game warm-ups.

Oiler Coach Jerry Glanville said it was a private matter between him and Rozier. "I came late to dress out, that's it," Rozier said. "I don't know if he (Glanville) wasn't going to play me or if it was because I was late."

"He asked me where I'd been and I told him. There was no big scene. I told him I'd overslept. It happens. I'm human just like you."

Glanville said he wanted to see as many players as possible. "When we had good people out there, good things happened," Glanville said. "(quarterback) Cody Carlson looked good and so did (running back) Ira Valentine."

Kansas City Coach Frank Ganz said he was pleased with rookies Christian Okoye and Colbert.

"They both looked like two fine offensive players," Ganz said. "They're showing skills and poise beyond their experience."

Lowery's fifth field goal came after eighth round draft choice Michael Clemens returned a punt 51 yards to the Oiler 10-yard line.

Cowboys, Chargers have injury-riddled rosters

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Perhaps the only comparison between Saturday's exhibition and a regular season meeting between the Dallas Cowboys and the San Diego Chargers is that both teams will be trying to work around lists of injured players that usually aren't so long so early.

"The only problem we have is that our injuries are about as long as your arm. We've never had this many injuries in camp," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said.

The Chargers, while not as bad off in long-term injuries, are holding back some of their best-known players.

The scorecards for the game at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium will be needed to keep track of the players who won't be seen on the field.

Dallas quarterback Danny White, still bothered by pain in the wrist of his throwing arm, which was broken last year, will start and play about a quarter Saturday. He will be followed by Steve Pelluer and either veteran Paul McDonald or rookie Kevin Sweeney.

The explosive Cowboy running back tandem of Tony Dorsett and Herschel Walker will probably be on the sidelines; Walker is out for two to three weeks with strained knee ligaments and Dorsett is recovering from arthroscopic surgery on both knees and may play some.

Wide receiver Mike Sherrard, who caught 41 passes for 744 yards and five touchdowns as a rookie last season, is out for the year with a broken leg.

"We had great hopes for him. We thought he could be a Pro Bowl player," Landry said.

The Chargers, meanwhile, are working around training camp injuries to Pro Bowl linebacker Chip Banks, (Achilles tendinitis), acquired in a draft day trade with the Cleveland Browns, and trying to make up for the season-long loss of defensive end Leslie O'Neal, who tore knee ligaments in a game against Indianapolis last November.

O'Neal was NFL's defensive rookie of the year in 1986 despite being injured late in the season.

Hill places at TAGS

Jamie Danner Hill of the Pampa Dolphins won three silver and two bronze medals in the Texas State Long Course Swimming Championships (TAGS) held recently in Austin at the University of Texas pool.

Jamie finished second in the 100 backstroke, 100 butterfly and 200 individual medley and third in the 50 backstroke and 50 butterfly. She also swam the 100 breaststroke and 100 freestyle, but did not reach the finals. She finished 11th in both events. She was also qualified to swim the 50 freestyle, 100 freestyle and 50 freestyle, but scratched those events because she was only allowed to compete in seven events.

In the 100 butterfly, Jamie was eased out by 4-100ths of a second for the gold medal. In the 200 individual medal, she lost the gold by 9-100ths of a second. She missed the silver medal by 1-100th of a second.

There were 771 swimmers from 36 of the 105 swim teams in Texas who qualified for the meet. Jamie scored 33 points for the Dolphins, which was good enough for a 17th-place finish in state competition.

Jamie will join eight of her teammates this weekend when they compete in the West Texas Championships at the Texas Tech pool in Lubbock. The Dolphins will then rest for a month before starting practice Sept. 14 for the Short Course Season.

Cross country workouts start

Cross country workouts starts Monday at the Pampa High School Fieldhouse, Coach Mark Elms announced.

Prospects should report to Elms at 8:30 a.m. Prospects should come prepared to practice, Elms said.

"We're hoping to get several out for both the boys' and girls' teams, Elms said.

Elms said a cross country schedule has not been released yet.

Arrival crush

Bodyguard Cla Raye, right, puts his arm around pop star Madonna as she is escorted through crowds of screaming fans at London's Heathrow Airport Thursday after flying in from New York aboard Concorde. Pickens-led group is eyeing takeover of California firm

AMARILLO (AP) — For the third time in as many weeks, corporate raider T. Boone Pickens Jr. has set his sights on a major corporation, the latest a natural resources firm and leading gold producer, officials say.

Ivanhoe Partners, a Texas general partnership owned by Pickens' Mesa Limited Partnership and two other companies, said in a press release Thursday it had acquired 9.1 percent, or 6.68 million, of Newmont Mining Corp.'s 67 million outstanding common shares for $379 million.

Two weeks ago, Pickens disclosed Mesa intended to buy up to 15 percent of aerospace and defense giant Boeing Co.'s stock. Last week, he announced similar intentions for Singer Co., another major aerospace corporation.

Mesa said it disclosed ownership of the Newmont shares to the Securities and Exchange Commission, which requires investors to disclose within 10 business days when they acquire 5 percent of a company's shares.

Neither Mesa nor Newmont officials were available for comment late Thursday.

Newmont, a New York-based international natural resources company, is a mining and oil and gas exploration company with large gold interests.

Newmont stock closed at $77 a share, down 25 cents, on the New York Stock Exchange Thursday. The acquisition announcement came after the market closed. Based on the current stock price, Newmont has a market value of about $5.14 billion.

Pickens, the general partner in Mesa Limited Partnership, has won acclaim for his failed but financially rewarding takeover attempts of large and well-known companies such as Gulf Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co. and Unocal Corp.

Grimm sues company over Titanic expedition

ABILENE (AP) — West Texas oilman Jack Grimm is suing a California corporation that is gathering artifacts from the wrecked Titanic, claiming he was squeezed out of a deal to share profits from the underwater expedition.

Grimm says The Westgate Group refused to honor a 1986 contract to share artifacts and profits of the expedition, deceived him about its ability to perform its part of the contract and later tried to cut him out of the deal altogether.

One of Grimm's companies, Titanic 1983 Inc., filed the suit in Abilene federal court Wednesday seeking half of the estimated $35.8 million profit expected from the North Atlantic expedition.

Named as defendants are The Westgate Group of Toluca Lake, Calif.; its president, John Joslyn; and its executive vice president, Doug Llewellyn, who hosts television's "The People's Court."

Since 1980, Grimm has spent more than $2 million on three expeditions to locate the wreck of the luxury liner that sank after colliding with an iceberg in 1912.

"This has been an important part of my life for seven years," Grimm told the Abilene Reporter-News Thursday. "Had we known they were going to handle the business this way, we would have been out there ourselves."

On Nov. 12, 1986, Grimm signed an agreement with Westgate calling for him to provide the expertise for the expedition and arrange for ships, submarines and equipment necessary to recover the Titanic's safes from two miles below the ocean's surface.

In return, Westgate would provide financing, documents related to the suit said. Under the contract, both parties would share equally in any return, the suit said.

Grimm said he arranged a contract with the French Institute for Research and Exploitation of the Sea for use of the three-man submersible Nautilie and its mother ship, the Nadir, for an expedition to take place in June 1987.

Westgate failed to arrange financing and "did not even acquire the funds necessary for a deposit to reserve the vessels," the suit said. As a result, the contract for the ships was canceled.
