Appraisal board ousts Buzzard

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

Charles Buzzard was in for a rude awakening when he reported for work Friday morning at the Gray County Appraisal District.

The Gray County chief appraiser was summoned into his office by district board members, who told him he was fired.

The board had terminated Buzzard Thursday night at a rescheduled meeting. The vote was unanimous.

Buzzard, 36, who was coaching at the Southwest Bambino Baseball Tournament in Plainview and didn't attend the Thursday meeting, sensed it was coming.

"The board had asked for my resignation in June," Buzzard said Saturday. "But they did not show me good cause."

GCAD board President Ken Fields confirmed Buzzard's termination.

Fields said Friday that although the board felt Buzzard had been doing a good job, board members "felt it was time to for some new blood."

Board member Jim Olson said Saturday that the board had no personality problems with Buzzard.

"He did a good job setting up the appraisal district," Olson said.

Buzzard said he's "really not sure" why the board terminated him.

"There reportedly were some complaints from the staff that I was coming in at 8:30 instead of 8 a.m., although I had worked several late days," Buzzard said.

"And they said they had complaints from taxpayers and the entities about the way I've been doing things, but there's no documentation."

Olson said he could not verify complaints about Buzzard's reported tardiness.

But Fields said the GCAD board had complaints that rolls for the school and county were late.

Buzzard said Saturday night that the tax rolls were late because the entities were late in setting their tax rates.

Judy Morris of McLean, a real estate appraiser for the GCAD, has been named interim appraiser until the board finds a new chief appraiser.

Fields said the board will discuss hiring a new appraiser within a week to 10 days.

He observed that the board is looking for someone with a "high level of management skills." Olson said Saturday that the board is seeking "someone with good management ability and experience."

Neither Fields nor Olson would elaborate on what type of management skills the board is looking for.

Buzzard, a Pampa Chamber of Commerce Gold Coat, Rotary Club member and Little League Bambino baseball coach, said he's going to start looking for a new job.

"I know of some opportunities in south Texas," he said. "There's nothing here for me."

Buzzard helped establish the Gray County Appraisal District in 1982. Sept. 14 would have marked his fifth year as chief appraiser.

He was the Wheeler County chief appraiser for two years before that, having helped set up that agency, he said. Buzzard said he also was appraiser for the city of Pampa and the Pampa Independent School District.

GCAD board member Sammy Haynes of McLean said Saturday that the board's action was prompted by "a lot of little things."

"The only thing I can say is that it would See BUZZARD, Page 2

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

PANTEX — Drivers on U.S. 60 in western Carson County can see miles of Texas flatlands without noticing anything more imposing than a grain elevator.

North of the highway between Panhandle and Amarillo, obscured by the railroad tracks that run alongside the highway, is the Pantex Nuclear Weapons Assembly Plant. The buildings and barricades of this massive complex can be seen from the highway, but not enough to disrupt the broad horizon. The only identification on the highway is a green sign with an arrow and the designation "Pantex Plant."

It is not a tourist attraction. Still, every August, travelers from downstate, Oklahoma, Kansas and both coasts make a pilgrimage to the plant.

But they don't come to marvel at its magnitude. They come to warn of what they believe is its danger.

About 75 people were assembled here Friday for the fourth annual Pantex Pilgrimage and Peace Camp. Some of the campers were members of a bicycle brigade that rode up from Comanche Peak Nuclear Power Plant near Waco. Others brought cars, trucks and camper trailers. Up to 75 more were expected Saturday and today.

The "Peace Camp," sponsored by the Red River Peace Network, was set up Thursday — the 42nd anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima — on a dry plain across the highway from the plant.

It ends today — the 42nd anniversary of the bombing of Nagasaki — with a commemoration featuring Bishop L.T. Mattheisen of the Amarillo Diocese. The protesters are planning "direct action" or civil disobedience at the east gates of Pantex following the worship service today.

During the Peace Camp, protesters conducted workshops on peacemaking and "truck watching," heard speakers denounce nuclear testing and listened to folk music and New Wave rock.

Thursday and Friday, 15 to 30 of the protesters lined up in front of the east gate of Pantex and held up peace banners as Pantex workers left for home.

The 75 people assembled at the Peace Camp Friday saw their stay as a vigil, not a vacation. The camp — a collection of two mobile homes, camper trailers, pup tents, revival tents and Army medical tents — lacked the luxuries found in a cheap

More tankers steam through Persian Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Three Kuwaiti tankers flying the Stars and Stripes and escorted by four U.S. warships sailed up the Persian Gulf Saturday after a secrecy-shrouded departure and transit of the dangerous Strait of Hormuz.

Gulf-based shipping companies said their monitoring of marine communications indicated smooth sailing for the convoy — the second to move up the waterway under President Reagan's plan of reflagging 11 Kuwaiti tankers to afford them U.S. military protection.

The companies said the U.S. warships jammed Iranian radar and maintained radio silence during the 5½-hour passage through the strait, where vessels come within range of Iran's coastal anti-ship missile batteries.

An Iranian frigate was observed trailing the convoy, but remained several miles back and did not cause the warships to react visibly, a shipping source said. The navy has said an Iranian frigate shadowed the first convoy as it moved south through the gulf the previous weekend.

Before dawn Saturday, the 46,723-ton Gas King, 81,283-ton Sea Isle City, and 79,999-ton Ocean City and their escorts had weighed anchor about 50 miles outside the strait, where Iranian naval forces ended four days of military exercises at midnight Friday.

The strait is 70 miles wide at each end and about 24 miles wide at the center.

Once through the passage, the escorting missile frigate USS Crommelin began broadcasting warnings to other shipping to keep at least 2,000 yards from the convoy — and ships were obeying, the monitors said.

By dusk, the seven-ship flotilla was reported past Dubai, in the United Arab Emirates, and moving at about 15 to 16 knots on a course that would bring its 600-mile voyage to an end off Kuwait late Sunday.

However, one shipping source said the U.S. escorts would likely vary the speed to keep the convoy's progress unpredictable and make sure it passes through certain danger areas during daylight, when hazards are more visible. This could delay its arrival to as late as Monday, he said.

The source, like the shipping companies, insisted on not being identified.

Pampa kids beat average on tests

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Visitors to Pampa school board chambers last week were greeted by a piece of computer paper with the words: "Fantastic! Hooray for teachers! Hooray for students!" scrawled in magic marker.

Three pieces of posterboard below the sign told why.

Success. Three graphs showed Pampa students placing well above the national average in the Metropolitan Standardized Achievement Tests, taken in grades one through 10 last year.

"The word of the year is fantastic," Assistant Superintendent Jane Steele said, pointing to the signs.

Superintendent Harry Griffith said Pampa is even further ahead of the state average on the tests.

But the students' success should come as no surprise.

"We've always done well" on these tests, said Steele, who is in charge of curriculum for the school district. "It's a testimony to what the teachers have done." Even areas in which students dropped slightly don't worry Steele and Griffith too much.

The tests show that only second-, fourth- and eighth-graders improved on their composite scores from last year. First graders were a few points lower in both math and reading than last year's class.

Steele noted that all of the drops were only a matter of a few points, with thousands of students' scores being computed across the country. None of the composite decreases were more than three percentage points.

"You're going to have a natural fluctuation from year to year," Steele said. "But that doesn't mean we won't look at these areas more closely."

Most of the Pampa scores hovered in the 60th percentile, 10 to 20 points above the national average of 50 in all areas. At each grade level, Pampa students topped the national and state averages in every subject — reading, language arts and math.

AIDS carrier got close to kids with gifts parents couldn't afford MARLIN (AP) — For 18 months, Jimmy Glenn Etheridge sold insurance to Marlin's low-income families and ingratiated himself with his clients and their sons.

Now, six weeks after his death, Marlin's 7,000 residents are trying to deal with the legacy left by Etheridge, one that could kill.

Etheridge brought AIDS, the distant danger, to town. He may have spread it to more than 50 of the young sons of his insurance clients, authorities say.

"He told them that he wanted to be like a big brother and take care of the kids," said G.J. Kouba, the policeman who found Etheridge's body June 30. "He bought them expensive gifts, all the things their mothers couldn't provide for them. He would do things with them, make them feel like they were worth doing something with ... but he had other ideas in mind."

Etheridge was shot to death by a 16-year-old boy described as a housemate, who Falls County District Attorney Thomas Sehon said would not be prosecuted.

After the boy told Kouba of a trunk containing homosexual magazines and Polaroid photos of Etheridge with young boys, investigators discovered computer files detailing explicitly his sexual contacts with boys.

The horror story grew when an autopsy showed Etheridge had been exposed to acquired immune deficiency syndrome, the disease that kills by destroying the body's ability to fight infection. Experts believe sexual contact is among the leading ways AIDS is spread.

It is juvenile probation officer Debra Coca's job to contact the families of the 54 children whose Reading scores jumped in the second, seventh and 10th grades, while math scores improved or stayed the same at five grade levels. Language arts scores improved or remained the same in all classes except fourth, seventh and 10th.

She said TEAMS are simply a pass-fail test, while the Metropolitan Achievement Tests are different from TEAMS (Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills), which are given to students in odd-numbered grades.

TEAMS tests results were released about two months ago, except for first-grade results, which were received by the district last week and released in conjunction with the Metropolitan Achievement Tests.

The results showed first-graders improving in math and writing composition on the TEAMS, while slipping slightly on the reading section:

- In math, 90 percent mastered eight basic objectives compared to 87 percent in 1985-86.
- In reading, 82 percent mastered nine basic objectives in 1986-87, compared to 83 percent the year before.
- In writing composition, 85 percent mastered four objectives, compared to 81 percent in 1985-86.

Gulf

The convoy made a surprise departure, apparently in an effort to confuse the Iranians, who repeatedly threatened to launch suicide boat and other attacks against the American vessels.

On Friday, Pentagon officials in Washington said the operation probably would until U.S. minesweeping helicopters arrive in the gulf in five or six days.

During the first operation on July 24, the reflagged tanker Bridgeton hit a mine near Iranian-held Farsi Island in the gulf and the Pentagon was criticized for having no minesweepers in the region. Iran said "invisible hands" laid the mine.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted President Ali Khamenei as saying clashes were inevitable if foreign warships try to impose their will in the gulf.

Khamenei, speaking Friday during Iranian naval maneuvers, said Iran was capable of confronting American and French warships and "any invasion" in the Persian Gulf, IRNA said. A convoy of four French warships was reportedly on its way to the region.

Kuwait sought U.S. flag protection after Iran last September began attacking ships owned by or serving the emirate, Iraq's western neighbor at the northern end of the gulf.

Half of patents go to foreigners

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last year foreigners accounted for almost half of the patents granted by the U.S. government with the largest number going to the Japanese, the head of the U.S. Patent Office said Saturday.

Patent Commissioner Donald J. Quigg said the heavy demand by foreigners for patents was a disturbing trend which showed that the United States is losing ground in the development of new technology in this the bicentennial year of the Constitution, the document that established the patent system.

"For too many years, we have done far too little to ensure that by our next centennial one of our most precious national treasures, the American inventor, will still be a surviving species," Quigg said in a report to the American Bar Association's patent and trademark section.

U.S. residents were granted 38,124 patents last year, 54 percent of the total, while foreigners from 100 countries accounted for nearly 33,000 of the patents granted last year, the report said.

The Japanese were awarded two of every five foreign patents for a total of 13,857 in 1986, by far the largest number of any foreign nation.

Quigg said that where 20 years ago, American inventors obtained 50 times the number of patents that Japanese inventors obtained, that ratio had shrunk to less than 3-to-1 last year.

"The reality of nearly 33,000

U.S. patents being granted to (foreigners) with an eye on our markets must give us pause," Quigg said in the remarks, which were released in Washington.

To counter this trend, Quigg said more attention should be focused on education.

He said the Patent Office had launched "Project XL," a cooperative program with educators aimed at fostering analytical thinking in classrooms.

"Our nation's schools are filled with potential Edisons and Marconis," he said, but "the education that America's school children receive has not measured up compared to that of the children in other countries. We are particularly weak in science and in math."

Firm gets contract for nuke dump site

AMARILLO (AP) — The Department of Energy will announce on Monday selection of a Massachusetts engineering firm to conduct site characterization at the proposed nuclear waste dump in Deaf Smith County, the Amarillo Globe-News reported Saturday.

Stone & Webster Engineering Corp. of Boston beat out Westinghouse Inc. to win the three-year, $320 million contract for detailed examination of the Texas site, the newspaper quoted congressional sources, who preferred to remain anonymous, as saying.

Texas is one of three states being considered for the nation's first underground dump for the nuclear wastes piling up at commercial reactors around the country.

The Stone & Webster contract runs for three years, but it allows seven one-year extensions with fees to be negotiated, the newspaper said.

DOE expects Stone & Webster will move several hundred employees to Amarillo starting in late summer, a source told the newspaper.

Based in Boston, Stone & Webster employs 11,000 and had gross sales of $303.9 million in 1986.

Stone & Webster builds large, technological projects which have ranged from the first commercial nuclear power plant to a hydroelectric station with the world's largest turbines.

"We have been involved in preliminary site work in Deaf Smith County already," company spokesman John Harris said.

Teen charged with rattling baby's brain to stop crying

HOUSTON (AP) — A 3½-month-old child remained in critical condition Saturday, a day after his teen-age father was taken into custody for allegedly shaking the child severely to make him stop crying, authorities said.

"The child's brain was shaken so violently that it tore from the membrane," said police Sgt. William Stoney. "He's in a coma and not expected to live."

The baby was in critical condition at Hermann Hospital in the pediatric critical care unit Saturday, said a hospital spokeswoman who asked not to be identified.

The child's 14-year-old father was taken into custody Friday in connection with the shaking, which occurred about 1 p.m. Monday at a Houston apartment complex.

The teen-ager, who was not named because of his age, could not be charged as an adult because he is under 15, the legal age at which a juvenile may be certified for trial as an adult, investigators said.

Stoney said the infant and his 16-year-old mother live in Mobile, Ala., and were visiting the father and her relatives at the apartment complex.

While the mother was outside the apartment briefly, the father apparently became frustrated and shook the baby because he wouldn't stop crying, Stoney said. The mother returned and telephoned for help when she found the father trying to give the child cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

The father first claimed the child had rolled off a cot, but later admitted shaking his son, Stoney said.

"He was just trying to shut the baby up," he said.

Many people do not realize that shaking a child can be fatal, said Lee McCuiston, a social worker handling abused and neglected children at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston. She said child under 3 are especially vulnerable to shaken baby syndrome.

Shaking can cause a whiplash effect that tears the membrane connecting the brain to the skull, she said. The resulting bleeding can cause blindness, deafness, seizures, mental retardation or death, she said.

Davis says he has $700 million in debt

DALLAS (AP) — Industrialist Cullen Davis, who once estimated his worth at more than $100 million, will list potential personal and business debts of about $700 million, says his bankruptcy attorney.

The attorney, Eddie Roush Jr., said Davis would list assets of less than $5 million in court filings next month.

The $700 million includes about $500 million owned by the family oil business, Kendavis Industries International, which is also in bankruptcy court proceedings, Roush said.

Davis incurred up to another $200 million in personal debt as a result of real estate deals and investments, Roush said.

"It's shocking that it could happen," said Roush, who has counseled Davis on business matters for the past year. "I got to him too late."

Roush said Davis, who filed for voluntary liquidation of assets under Chapter 7 under the U.S. Bankruptcy Code in July, would include corporate claims in the personal filing, because there have been indications that the corporate creditors may attempt to use Davis' personal assets to pay off family business debts.

"If I don't schedule it (in Davis' personal bankruptcy case), I can't discharge it," Roush said.

Davis' estate had a bank balance of $1,600 Thursday, but Roush said a lawsuit filed by Davis against his family business could net him and his brother, Kenneth Davis, more than $4 million. That lawsuit is scheduled for trial next month.

The Davis brothers were once listed among the 400 wealthiest Americans by Forbes magazine, and Cullen Davis was one of the richest men ever tried for murder. He was accused of killing his stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn.

Gray County Tax Assessor-Collector Margie Gray has reminded county residents that the motor vehicle sales tax will increase to 6 percent effective Sept. 1.

The increase was recently passed by the state Legislature.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock has released guidelines for tax assessors-collectors to use in determining whether to collect the old 5 percent rate or the new 6 percent charge.

Bullock said if the title is assigned on or after Sept. 1, then the 6 percent rate must be collected unless a bill of sale or invoice is presented showing the delivery of the vehicle took place before Sept. 1.

If a purchase order, buyer's order, work sheet or quote is placed before Sept. 1 but possession or delivery does not take place until Sept. 1 or later, then the 6 percent rate applies, Bullock said.

Bullock said the beginning date for figuring penalties will still be the date of assignment of the title. The use tax will be collected at 6 percent if the vehicle is brought into the state after Sept. 1. Penalty will be figured from the date the vehicle is brought in.

Photographer charged

AUSTIN (AP) — A photographer has been charged with attempted sexual assault after a woman told police that a man lured her into posing for him and slipped her a drug before trying to assault her.

Thomas Mulvanity, 29, was arrested Thursday night by police and was being held Friday on $10,000 bond, said Sgt. Mike Huckabay of the Austin Police Department sex crimes unit. Huckabay said Mulvanity operates Tom III Photography.

Huckabay said the man met a woman and her fiancée in a pawn shop Wednesday, struck up a conversation with her by telling them he was a photographer for a news service and eventually scheduled an appointment for a photo session for $25 an hour.

The woman was taken to Bull Creek Park, where the man said he wanted to take photographs of her to get her accustomed to the camera, Huckabay said. He said the man gave the woman a pill so she would not lose her salt in the sun, but the woman fought the effects of the drug and apparently did not lose consciousness.

Husband charged after wife's head and arms are identified

AUSTIN (AP) — A soldier whose wife was seven months pregnant was charged Saturday in her murder following identification of her severed head and arms, which were found in a trash bin a week ago.

The dead woman was identified as Lisa Marie Chappelle, 19, and Killeen officials charged Pfc. Ernest Jack Chappelle with her murder. Chappelle, 22, is stationed at Fort Hood in Killeen.

The cause of the woman's death has not been determined, but Austin police spokeswoman Kellye Norris said the Travis County medical examiner had stated that a knife with a 3-inch blade was used to dismember the body.

"Austin and Killeen police issued statements in the case Saturday, and said the Army at Fort Hood had joined the investigation.

Austin Police Sgt. Jim Kortan said he hoped the announcement of Chappelle's arrest "will allow the citizens of Austin to possibly sleep a little easier tonight."

The body parts were discovered by transients Aug. 1 in a dumpster at a convenience store near the University of Texas campus.

Kortan told a Saturday news conference at police headquarters that family members reported the 5-foot-9, 160-pound woman missing Thursday to Killeen officials and they notified Austin homicide investigators of her disappearance Friday.

Kortan refused to comment on most questions, saying the investigation was continuing. He said, however, the main lead in breaking the case "was the fact that we believed the woman to be pregnant."

"And as soon as they got a report in Killeen, they did notify us of this possibility of a missing person," he said.

He would not say whether the rest of the woman's body had been found.

Kortan said the woman was identified as the murder victim late Friday, and Chappelle was arrested in Killeen early Saturday.

Chappelle was in custody under $1 million bond, according to Killeen Police Lt. J.W. Dunn, who said Chappelle would be transferred to Bell County Jail.

Energy sector shows job growth

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas jobless rate took its first dip this summer with a 0.3 percent drop to 8.3 percent last month, officials say.

Nearly 100,000 Texans found work in July, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported Friday, while 703,000 others were still looking for jobs. The state's total labor force neared the 8.5 million mark.

The slight improvement doesn't signal a rapid recovery, officials said.

"Due to the nature of the economic problems of the last two years, improvement is likely to continue to be agonizingly slow," said BLS regional commissioner Bryan Richey.

The agency estimates Texas' mining and energy sector gained 200 jobs between May and June, the first increase since March 1985. The lift was not statistically significant, but it was a psychological boost, Richey said.

St. Vincent's sets registration

Registration for classes at St. Vincent de Paul Elementary School will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, for the next two weeks.

Principal Tina Eberz said a birth certificate, record of immunizations and a report card from a prior school are needed for children entering the school for the first time.

Children who have attended St.

Vincent's in the past will need only their updated immunization records, Eberz said.

Supply lists and parent handbooks will be distributed during registration at the school, located at 2300 N. Hobart St.

School will begin at 8 a.m. Sept. 1 for kindergarten through fifth-grade students. Pre-kindergarten will begin at 8:15 a.m.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Federalist papers provide new insight

Two hundred years ago the Constitution, after the convention delegates hammered it out in Philadelphia, almost disintegrated. The Federalist, written not for learned journals but for a popular newspaper in New York, helped convince the young American nation of the advisability of ratification.

One question posed to the Federalist writers, John Jay, Alexander Hamilton, and James Madison, was whether the Constitution would grant the president too much power in conducting foreign policy. John Jay's response, Federalist 64, written March 7, 1788, in the New York Packet, bears directly on the Iran-Contra hearings in Congress.

"It seldom happens in the negotiation of treaties, of whatever nature, but that perfect secrecy and immediate dispatch are sometimes requisite. There are cases where the most useful intelligence may be obtained, if the persons possessing it can be relieved from apprehensions of discovery ... and there doubtless are many ... who would rely on the secrecy of the president, but who would not confide in that of the Senate, and still less in that of a large popular assembly. The convention has done well, therefore, in so disposing of the power of making treaties, that although the president must, informing them, act by the advice and consent of the Senate, yet he will be able to manage the business of intelligence in such a manner as prudence may suggest.

"... there frequently are occasions when days, nay, even when hours, are precious. The loss of a battle, the death of a prince, the removal of a minister, or other circumstances intervening to change the present posture and aspect of affairs, may turn the most favorable tide into a course opposite to our wishes.

"... Those matters which in negotiations usually require the most secrecy and the most dispatch, are those preparatory and auxiliary measures which are not otherwise important in a national view, then as they tend to facilitate the attainment of the objects of the negotiation. For these, the president will find no difficulty to provide; and should any circumstance occur which requires the advice and consent of the Senate, he may at any time convene them...

"All constitutional acts of power, whether in the executive or the judicial department, have as much legal validity and obligation as if they proceeded from the legislature ... It surely does not follow, that because they have given the power of making laws to the legislature, that therefore they should likewise give them power to do every other act of sovereignty by which the citizens are to be bound and affected."

Those politicians — Sen. Tribble? Sen. Rudman? — who presume to lecture Messrs. North and Poindexter on how to be good Boy Scouts would surely earn a failing grade in any seminar on The Federalist.

Theft labeled 'economic justice'

Speaking to an Iowa audience, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, an undeclared presidential candidate, said the campaign issue for 1988 should be economic justice. But that was the 1980 and 1984 issue! And we're still no closer to economic justice.

I guess different people have different definitions of economic justice. This was apparent during a 1982 meeting at the Manhattan Institute, a New York-based think tank. A panel discussion topic was economic justice. After sitting through the debate, I brought it to the panel's attention that while we spent the morning talking about economic justice no one had bothered to define it.

In a somewhat rattled voice, a key Reagan administration official said, "OK, Williams, what's your definition of economic justice?" I answered that economic justice at least includes a set of circumstances whereby I keep my earnings, and you keep yours; government doesn't take your money and give it to me, nor does it take mine to give to you.

He replied that the administration doesn't have such a draconian definition of economic justice. So I asked, "Since you speak for the Reagan administration, what percentage of my earnings belongs to somebody else?" Of course, he had no answer.

Indeed, economic justice should be a 1988 campaign issue! We could debate whether one class of citizens should be taxed at ever-increasing rates to support another class that has more income and wealth, as is the case with Social Security. A young head of household with a wife and kids, struggling to make ends meet on $20,000 per year, has to part with a large chunk of it to support a retiree who most likely owns a home and has much more in the bank.

Social Security is nothing more than an inter-generation income transfer between worker-taxpayers and retirees. Of course, a politician will tell the young man to take heart, his turn will come. But there's the problem. In order to maintain present benefits, when today's 25-year-old retires, the Social Security tax will be 27 percent, or possibly 45 percent. A 45 percent Social Security tax couldn't be pushed through Congress today, and I don't suspect it will be much easier to push through in 2040. So today's 25-year-old will never see a Social Security check. And even if he did, he'd have to live to age 93 to recoup what he'd paid out in taxes.

Another economic justice issue is corporate welfare. Under the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Urban Development Action Grant (UDAG) program, Corning Glass Works received $1.5 million to upgrade one of its melting furnaces — by the way, Corning's sales last year hit nearly $2 billion.

And UDAG gave $15 million of our earnings to the city of Detroit to clear a plant site for Chrysler Corp. Chrysler's earnings last year: $21.2 billion.

UDAG also gave the Harbour View Hotel Corp. $3.4 million to help renovate a 337-room Hilton Hotel that will have a tennis court and swimming pool. The list of corporate welfare goes on and on. There's welfare for the elite.

While you and I work to pay the tab, government does it out for things like a $40,000 study entitled, "Food Preferences and Society Identity," a $97,000 grant to study behavior and social relationships in a Peruvian brothel, and the vital National Institutes of Health $163,254 grant to study food-foraging habits of the Ache people in eastern Paraguay. Then there's the $3.4 million ad campaign to get more Americans to write letters to one another.

Jesse Jackson's right. Economic justice is a timely issue for 1988. The debate question is: What is the moral basis for confiscating one man's earnings and giving them to another?

Delta usually gets you there

Delta Air Lines has appointed a special committee to investigate all the problems it's been having lately with things like near mid-air collisions and landing at wrong airports.

I've been a loyal Delta patron for many years, and, quite frankly, I believe Delta has been getting a raw deal in the press.

Because of this, I decided to launch my own investigation of Delta's recent misfortunes. I called one of my many sources with the airline, and he explained what really happened with the celebrated incidents of the past few weeks.

I promised not to use the source's name if he would be completely frank with me, an old journalistic tool that is often necessary to use when getting at the truth, or getting at somebody.

I asked about the fact a Delta pilot landed in Frankfort, Ky., when he was supposed to land at Lexington.

"Picky, picky, picky," began my source. "At least we got the right state. Plus, it was night and the crew couldn't look out the window and find the K mart where they're supposed to hang a right when they are landing in Lexington."

That explained that, so I asked about the near collision over Newfoundland that was caused when a Delta jet went 60 miles off course into the airspace of a Continental airliner.

"I have talked to the pilots, and they said they were trying to dodge Halley's Comet," my source explained.

I was somewhat skeptical of this due to the fact that Halley's Comet only comes around about once in every lifetime. My source would not budge, however.

"In the immortal words of Ollie North, 'It's our story, and we're sticking to it,'" he said.

Then I wanted to know what happened when a Delta pilot cut off the engines during takeoff from San Diego and nearly dumped the plane into the Pacific Ocean.

"The pilot is a real cut-up and he was just

"At least he doesn't put a lampshade on his head while flying anymore. And what's the big deal here? The seat cushions could have been used as flotation, and everybody could have paddled back to shore if he hadn't got the engines to start up again."

A Delta jet also landed on the wrong runway at the Boston airport.

"Runways all look alike," my source said. "They're long and narrow with a bunch of numbers on them. What, you've never turned up a one-way street before?"

There was one more thing I wanted to ask, and that was about the Delta jet that took off without clearance.

"We didn't take off without clearance," my source said. "We took off without Clarence. Clarence Elrod, the navigator, who got lost on the way to the airport."

Completely satisfied that all the incidents were not anything to be concerned about, I thanked my source for his time and honesty, and I think I can say without hesitation that Delta still gets you there.

With or without Clarence.

Texts wipe out religious history

For educators, this has been a season of uncomfortable soul-searching. The first shock was a widely hailed report admitting that today's students aren't taught enough about their own heritage. Even the heads of major teacher unions signed on to its conclusions.

Now comes a document insisting that most social studies textbooks "virtually ignore" the role of religion in American and world history.

The study boasts a non-partisan sponsor, too: The 80,000-member Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development, a group as mainstream and blandly respectable as its name suggests.

Longtime textbook critics can finally relax. What they've been arguing from the fringe for years — often while enduring charges of "censorship" from people who never bothered to look the word up — has at last been broadly acknowledged. American social studies textbooks consign religion to the same non-status that official Soviet history reserves for Trotsky.

Religion's vital role in American history induces unease in textbook publishers and some teachers. Some have even come to believe classroom notice of religion flirts with outright illegality.

As the report notes, educators worry "that the constitutional wall separating church and state might be breached" if history were told as it really occurred.

For Professor Paul C. Vitz of New York University, this summer's reports must be especially satisfying. Two years ago he released the first major study outlining the extent to which textbooks ignore religion and traditional values. Now his views may become commonplace.

Even the ultra-liberal People for the American Way has acknowledged similar deficiencies.

For his study, Vitz considered 10 major sets of textbooks for grades one through six. Typical of his findings is the following:

"There is not one reference in any of these (fifth grade) books to such important religious events as: the Salem Witch Trials; the Great Awakening of the 1740s; the great revivals of the 1830s and 1840s; the great urban revivals of the 1870-1890 period; the liberal and conservative Protestant split in the early 20th century; or the born-again movement of the 1960s and '70s."

Nor was there reference to the Catholic school system, and only sparse mention of the mid 19th century prejudice that convinced Catholic immigrants they needed to control their own education.

As for appreciation of American religious energy and inventiveness, forget it. Never mind that ours is a nation that spawns new religions with amazing fertility. Vitz found hardly a word about the Christian Scientists, Jehovah's Witnesses, Seventh Day Adventists, Mormons, Black Muslims and other uniquely American expressions of faith.

Instead he discovered, in one textbook, a list of 450 "important" events in U.S. history that failed to mention a single aspect of religion over the past 130 years — even as it cluttered the chronology with such forgettable moments as the creation of the Department of Transportation in 1966.

This is history? Yes, but of an odd kind: a coy and soulless discipline produced for the greatest number of states and school districts, themselves wary of the slightest curricular controversy.

Better to stupefy our children, apparently, than to risk stimulating them. Thanks to Vitz and others, textbook publishers may not get away with this much longer. As the latest report only confirms, their evasions have been utterly exposed.

Parents to blame for bathroom mess

To the editor:
The blame for the graffiti in the Cinema IV bathrooms belongs to the children's parents, not Mr. and Mrs. Norrod.
The children should be taught how to respect property at home, not by theater owners or any other business owners.
Mr. and Mrs. Norrod are as disgusted with the mess as anyone. When they first opened, they kept the bathrooms clean, but it soon became a time-consuming and losing effort.
Mr. and Mrs. Norrod have always put on the latest movies, and we should pull together as a town and support our local and only theater.

Kennel club invites dog lovers to join

To the editor:
I would like to acquaint area residents with a new organization to serve Pampa and area residents. It has been in existence only a few months. It is the Top O' Texas Kennel Club.
There was much response to our club, which is oriented to families, as well as individuals.
Our club is for anyone who has the best interests of dogs in mind. For people interested in improving their dogs' breeds, owning a family pet, training dogs in obedience, showing them, or just loving them, our club can be of assistance.
We plan to have fun matches, orientations, displays, demonstrations, training classes, guest speakers, and sanctioned obedience and shows.
Our organization can help the economy of Pampa. During a recent show in Amarillo, more than 2,000 people were present — 80 percent were from out of town. The hotels and motels, restaurants and shopping areas really benefitted from this.
We encourage anyone with an AKC dog or even a rare breed to visit our meetings. We also extend an invitation to 4-Hers and Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts who need a place to start or extend a pet project. We have designed a junior division for the kids in mind.
The Top O' Texas Kennel Club will have a Chautauqua demonstration of the various breeds in our club as well as rare breeds and rarely seen breeds.
We want anyone who is interested in helping our new organization grow and develop to come to our meeting at 8 p.m. Monday in the Pampa Community Building just south of Energas Co.

Pampa poured out help in trying time

To the editor:
At 7:45 p.m. May 26, my husband and I were involved in a automobile accident.
It was raining. At the corner of Hobart and Decatur, our car was damaged greatly. An ambulance was called because of a head and ankle injury.
We wish to say the city of Pampa really came to our aid. Officer Katie Morris was first on the scene. She was so caring and helpful, as were the paramedics and emergency personnel. Pampa can be proud of Coronado Hospital and its facilities.
Dr. Juan and Dr. Edwards cared for me. They and their staff were so great.

Our car was ready for us to pick up in less than two weeks. Heritage Ford did a super job and we could return home.
When the accident occurred, we were on our way to Minneapolis, Minn., to a family reunion. Even though plans had to be canceled, we were able to spend the time with our granddaughter, her husband and three great-grandchildren, more time than we've ever had with them.
We enjoyed the city with its many parks and lovely homes, the good restaurants and even the rain.
Everyone we met was so friendly, loving and concerned that it made us feel at home.
Here's hoping we Californians will be as gracious as Texans when you come to visit us.

City talks projects but can't heat pool

To the editor:
I read with interest Warren Hasse's column of July 31, which reported the city says there is no money to heat the swimming pool.
I wonder if this is the same money we don't have for a municipal golf course?
It seems to me the zenith of mismanagement and hypocrisy to waste the time of planners and city officials on the proposed recreation park improvements listed in the Aug. 2 paper.
I intend to voice my objection to this farce at the public hearing, and I hope other citizens who feel this way will also voice their opinions.

Carrier rates high for caring service

To the editor:
We consider ourselves fortunate indeed to have Cory Wagner as our carrier. She handles route #230 up here in the northwest section of Pampa. We can make the unequivocal statement that she is the best we have ever seen in her capacity.
This is no idle statement because we have lived through, and run the gamut of, carriers of all types — from efficient to the slipshod (the latter of which, unfortunately, appear at times to outnumber the good ones!).
As one example of Cory's concern for her patrons, she found out that we "Golden Agers" were temporarily incapacitated because of illness and took it upon herself to see that our paper was carefully placed just outside our front door so that we didn't have to go outside to get it.
In addition, she always inquires after our well-being. Let's just say she's involved — something so rare these days that it should be treasured when found. That we do!

Let's hope that you acquire more carriers of Cory's class!

What's the big fuss about popular dress?

To the editor:
I'm writing about what they're doing in Groom. I agree about Spuds McKenzie. They shouldn't wear the Spuds T-shirts in the Groom school because of advertisement of beer.
But I don't see what's wrong with guys wearing earrings, or the popular haircuts or the so-called "high waters."
When our nation was started, George Washington wore those real short pants and stockings and long hair! It was acceptable then, why not now? They should let them wear it as long as it's in good taste.
What's the big fuss?

Whaley has grown fangs and claws

To the editor:
I've read with interest various letters written by Rep. Foster Whaley to The Pampa News.
I've known Foster for a good number of years. He has been a good representative, although I've always thought of him as a "pussy cat." In the last couple of years, whether because of experience, age, maturity or what have you, he has turned into a "tiger."
When I left Pampa, I told Foster that I would probably be in another district and that I regretted that, since I hated to lose him as my representative. It turned out, as he quickly informed me, that I'm just a few hundred feet inside the line of his district.
So it's nice that I still have a "tiger" in Austin representing me.
Go get 'em, Foster — you're doing a great job!

Survey can't find problems downtown

To the editor:
Whoopie! Bully! And all that!
The recent hoopla about the survey asking Pampans to comment about the depressed downtown area was as informational and clear as a politician's promises.
If Lynn Moulton had anything to do with it, she most certainly is overpaid at any price.
I believe we have third- and fourth-graders who could have done a better job in our schools with the "survey."
Downtown rent prices are way out of line when compared with our depressed economy. But it seems the owners of downtown properties would rather let their buildings stand empty than charge reasonable rents.
Prices at downtown stores are generally higher than at discount stores, and the variety of goods offered is just not there.
There also are no meter maids at the malls to issue parking tickets. With the emptiness of downtown, would somebody explain why tires are marked every time one parks downtown?

Service probably is biggest advantage mall stores have over those downtown.
This family regularly shops only two stores downtown.
Why should a family that is having to watch every dollar spent pay $45 for a "formal" shirt at a downtown store, when we were able to buy that shirt for $22.50 in Amarillo? On the same trip, we bought gasoline for 82.9 cents a gallon and produce we use in our business for 99 cents a pound less than here.
We try to buy locally, even paying more sometimes, because we realize that as Pampa goes so goes our business. But there is a limit to all things.
I called about a building downtown that was for rent. I identified myself, and the rent was quoted at $800 a month. Later, I called back, not saying who I was, and the rent was lower.
One of perhaps many things that are wrong downtown!

Comics page better but needs Far Side

To the editor:
As an avid reader and sometimes contributor to your paper, I would like to comment on a few things I've seen since I returned from my vacation.
Calvin and Hobbes by Bill Watterson is without doubt the funniest strip I've ever read. The main reason for this is not the often hilarious dialogues that Calvin exchanges with his "imaginary" tiger Hobbes, but that the drawings each day are the most wonderful to ever appear in the newspaper.
Sure, it's "cute," but it is more insightful than any of that other drivel that appears on the comics page. The only reason Paul Pinkham has not "seen anything to justify its exalted status" is that it has not been running that long. It took me three years before I even began to appreciate the strip. Just give it a while, and you'll understand why it's "one of the hottest strips on the market," (which is, incidentally, Jerry Ammerman's The Neighborhood).
I would like to commend The News for making some changes in the comics section. I remember some of these that appear from when I moved here 10 years ago. Still you can do better.
Scrap The Family Circus. Add Robotman. Scrap Steve Canyon on Sunday. What's the point if it is not in daily. Same goes for Doonesbury and Funky Winkerbean. It's difficult to keep up with a strip one day a week.
Scrap the Far Side knock-off for the real thing. We need that in the Panhandle. We live there. How about Bloom County? And finally, put Prince Valiant to rest. If I wanted that, I'd watch Family Classics.
I'd like to bravo Pattye Hopkins for her views on our local theater.
Am I right in assuming that Pampans would go to the show more if there were daily matinees for $2 before 6 p.m., if "remodeling" meant more than vacuuming and if Jerry Norrod would bring something we wanted to see? Heaven forbid! And on the day it opened, too.
I pleaded in my high school column for someone with money to open the Capri, then maybe some of the other folks in this town could see the great summer movies, such as La Bamba, Robocop, and Benji the Hunted.
I wish Norrod would get sick of playing it safe with Eddie Murphy. It takes money to make money, so give us a clean facility. Get wise and get rich.
One more thing: Paul, what's your sign? You didn't mention it.
Excuse me while I go burn Kit n' Carlyle.

Bargains acquired at garage sale quickly fill garage

Texas guest columnist

By PETE LITTERSKI
Greenville Herald Banner
GREENVILLE (AP) — I stopped by a garage sale on the way to the office.
And I'm proud of myself.
I didn't buy a single "that would."
You know what I'm talking about.
Do you remember the old dresser tucked back in the corner of your garage?

Don't you remember saying, "That would look great in the guest room if we just stripped off the old paint and put some stain on it."
Or how about the dress way back in the far reaches of your closet — the lime green with purple polka dots number you picked up for a quarter about four years ago.
Back then you said, "That would make a great costume for my husband."
Well, three Halloweens have passed and your spouse is still refusing to even try the dress on for size.
Don't worry, you're not alone.

Just ask my wife.
She may be a practical shopper when it comes to garage sales, but she's married to a "that would" addict.
There was the camping kitchen I once bought. It looked almost like an old-fashioned cooler, but when its aluminum sides folded down there was a propane-fired cooktop full of plates, cups and silverware on the other side.
"That would" have been a good buy if it hadn't burst into a ball of flames the first time we tired to use it. Fortunately the guy in the RV next to us had a fire extinguisher and we subdued the flames before they engulfed the whole picnic table.
The shovel I bought at another garage sale sure seemed like a good deal for a buck.
It "would" have been if the handle hadn't been in good shape. The first time I tried to pry a stubborn rock out of a hole, the handle failed to yield so the rusty blade had no alternative ... it snapped.
Not all "that would" are necessarily bad buys.
Every time I see a nice old frame holding someone's paint-by-number landscape I'm ready to lay out a quarter. I tell myself, "That would sure look nice with the photo I took of the girls on vacation last year."

State probes horses' deaths in race

CLAREMORE, Okla. (AP) — It will be next week before Rogers County authorities decide whether to prosecute in the case of at least seven horses that died in Catoosa overland races.
Prosecutors have been reviewing the sheriff's department report on the June 13 races since receiving the 175-page document July 27.
Following a joint review of the case Friday by the district attorney's office and sheriff's department, sheriff's investigator Allen Bird said he felt good about charges eventually being filed.

"I know people think it's been shoveled under the carpet and forgotten about, but it hasn't," he said.
The investigation concerns a series of distance races coordinated by promoter Bill McAnally at a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers trail. The bodies of seven horses were found following the races.
A petition urging the prosecution of McAnally and the riders of the seven horses was filed Thursday with the district attorney's office and other state officials.

Reagan to blame aide in Iran scandal

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, in a speech Wednesday, will say he never would have condoned the diversion of Iran arms-sales profits and will dispute Adm. John Poindexter's assertion that "the buck stops here with me," officials say.

Reagan, trying to recover from the worse crisis of his presidency, will say he should have been told in advance about what Poindexter, his onetime national security adviser, and Lt. Col. Oliver North, one of his aides, were doing.

Reagan, after refusing comment during 11 weeks of testimony in Congress' Iran-Contra hearings, will address the nation from the Oval Office at 8 p.m. EDT, the night before departing on a 25-day vacation that will keep him out of public view.

An administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Reagan will admit to mistakes, and say he learned important lessons from the affair.

"It's time to accept responsibility and then move on," the official said, adding that fully half the speech focuses on the future rather than the past.

The official said Reagan would not deal with the conflicting testimony of current and former aides. "Once you start trying to answer individual questions, where do you ever end? ... It will not be like standing in front of a news conference."

Poindexter testified under oath that he deliberately shielded Reagan from knowledge about the diversion of profits, to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua, in order to protect the president. Reagan will say he should have been told in advance and that Poindexter was wrong in saying the buck stops with him, according to one official.

The official said that Reagan is "much more disturbed and angry about being deceived by the NSC (National Security Council) than people have generally recognized."

Presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater said the president "will discuss his reactions to the Iran-Contra issues and his agenda of policy and political activities" for the final 17 months of his administration.

Another component of the speech will be the "peace initiative" Reagan proposed last week for Nicaragua, offering to hold back on new aid requests for anti-government rebels in exchange for a cease-fire and democratic reforms by the Marxist government.

Nothing in the hearings contradicted Reagan's contention that he did not know about the diversion of Iran arms-sale profits to the Contras.

However, there was a wealth of testimony about deceit and dissension among Cabinet officials, cover-up stories, shredding of documents and conflicting descriptions of Reagan both as a confused, detached leader and a hands-on chief executive.

The whole episode has shaken Reagan's credibility, produced a near-complete overhaul in the White House staff and distracted the administration from other subjects. Polls show a majority of Americans feel Reagan has not told the truth about the affair, although a Washington Post-ABC News survey published Friday showed some improvement in Reagan's standing.

Fitzwater acknowledged that the speech would not put the matter finally to rest, noting that the independent counsel is still conducting his criminal investigation.

"We have not heard from them, yet, really, in terms of indictments and their judgments about what happened. We'll have reports from the (congressional) committee and other things that will erupt from time to time, so this is an issue that'll be with us for the rest of the administration."

Minorities at risk in AIDS wildfire

ATLANTA (AP) — A nonsense education campaign targeted at blacks and Hispanics is needed to curb the spread of AIDS in minority communities, which have accounted for 38 percent of the virus' victims, doctors said Saturday at a federal conference.

The conference on AIDS and minorities at the Centers for Disease Control came as the agency prepared a new $7 million campaign to educate minorities about the fatal disease. An additional $3 million will be added in the next fiscal year.

Dramatic statistics about the incidence of acquired immune deficiency syndrome formed the background of the two-day conference. Blacks and Hispanics, 19 percent of the U.S. population, account for 38 percent of all reported cases of AIDS. Among children with AIDS, 80 percent are black or Hispanic. And according to the CDC, there are distinct racial breakdowns in the way AIDS patients get the disease: injectable drug abuse or heterosexual transmission account for 45 percent of black cases and 39 percent of Hispanic cases, compared to just 6 percent among white AIDS patients, the vast majority of whom are homosexual or bisexual men.

Dr. Donald Hopkins, deputy director of the CDC and the agency's top black official, called for tough talk in black and Hispanic communities about those groups' key risk factors for AIDS.

"AIDS will not be controlled in blacks and Hispanics without control of IV drug abuse and increased ... treatment for drug abuse," he said, adding that sexual promiscuity cannot be ignored, either.

Escapees shot; hostage freed after wild chase

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — One fugitive was shot and killed Saturday and a second wounded in a shootout with police, ending a three-state chase that began when they escaped from a Mississippi county jail and took a woman hostage.

The woman was rescued unharmed, said Arkansas State Police.

The dead man was David Lynn Bainer, 30, said Mississippi Highway Patrol spokeswoman Shirley Rutland. He had been held in the Tate County Jail in Senatobia, Miss., near the Tennessee border, on rape and kidnapping charges, authorities in Mississippi said.

Bonnie Simpson, a dispatcher for the Tate County sheriff's department, said Bainer and his cellmate, Christopher James Carbin, 24, both of the Memphis, Tenn., area, escaped from the jail shortly before 9 a.m., taking a woman hostage.

Shots were fired during the escape, but no one was injured, said Mississippi Highway Patrol dispatcher Danny Beavers.

The escapees apparently headed north on Interstate 55 after having crossed the Mississippi River at Memphis, said Larry Patton, dispatcher for the Arkansas State Police at Jonesboro. He said they traded shots with police sometime before noon at a roadblock on the interstate in Mississippi County, Ark., north of Osceola. After the escapees ran the roadblock, he said, they turned back south and left the interstate at the Osceola exit.

Patton said details of the confrontation were sketchy, but it apparently ended in a field about five miles west of Osceola, about 65 miles north of Memphis.

In the shootout, Carbin was injured and taken to a hospital at Osceola, said Ms. Rutland. He was in jail on armed robbery charges.

The woman was not named by authorities, and it could not be learned how she had been taken hostage.

Germaine performs in 'thank-you concert.'

Deformed, blind boy performs in hospital

DALLAS (AP) — A 4-year-old Baltimore boy who first played the piano when he was 8 months old gave a thank-you concert of Bach and Beethoven, Schumann and Stevie Wonder at a Dallas hospital where he underwent surgery to correct a deformity that has left him blind since birth.

Jermaine Gardner was born with Facial Clefting Syndrome — his eye sockets too far apart, his nose without a bridge, his forehead a deformed bulge. And he couldn't see out of the only eye he had.

When his parents, James and Jacqui-Kess Gardner, telephoned their other son to tell him of his brother's birth — and his deformities — they didn't expect his reaction.

"Oh," said Jamal, then 4. "Is that all? Bring him home and we'll be his eyes."

They've been more than just Jermaine's eyes over the past four years.

Mrs. Gardner, a hairdresser who also plays the piano, said she often would hold the boy on her lap when Jamal played the piano. She said she would place the baby's hands on the keys, hoping for some miracle.

Then one day, Jamal paused and Jermaine began to play what he had just heard, Mrs. Gardner said. "He couldn't walk, but he could sit up," she said.

At 8 months old, he also could play.

By the time he was 13 months old, he was playing Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata," Mrs. Gardner said. He could immediately reproduce every classical music tape his parents could get when he was 2 years old, she said.

The boy also showed other signs of an above-normal intelligence, memorizing every state and its capital and names of dozens of classical composers, she said.

Jermaine now practices up to four hours daily and takes weekly lessons in technique at the Maryland School for the Blind, his mother said. His repertoire includes almost 200 classical compositions, which his mother said he prefers to popular music he calls junk — except, apparently, Stevie Wonder.

His first performance on a national newscast caught the attention of Wonder's friends, who flew Jermaine to Beverly Hills, Calif., to play at Wonder's birthday party.

Another performance on a national newscast in April drew the attention of the Foundation for Craniofacial Deformities in Dallas, and foundation officials called the Gardners to offer help.

On Friday, less than a week after facial surgery in Medical City Dallas hospital financed mostly by the foundation, Jermaine played for almost an hour in a thank-you concert. More than 200 visitors, patients and hospital workers who stopped to listen were mesmerized by the music.

Doctors said the reconstructive surgery was a seven-hour procedure to reform the boy's face and build a new nose.

Two protesters deliver 'no nukes' message to departing Pantex workers Friday.

tourist motel. The shade of the tents or the trailers offered little refuge from the dry, throat-parching heat. The sun dried the area so much that fires were prohibited and smoking allowed only in designated areas. The warm water — hosed in through makeshift faucets or 50-gallon drums — seemed only to intensify the thirst. Campers had to bring their own water to a make-shift shower stall. Any type of refreshment was brought by each family and eaten at an Army tent designated, "Atomic Cafe."

To the protesters, the message meant more than a weekend of discomfort.

Lon Burnham is a worker with the Dallas Peace Center. Don Gardner is an Austin-based "tree doctor" and peace worker. While other protesters were attending a "non-violence training" session under a tent, they sat at the Camp's registration table and got sunburned.

This is Burnham's third year at the Peace Camp.

"This is an important witness," Burnham said, adding that the Pantex Plant is a powerful reminder of the reality of nuclear war.

"One thing about the nuclear weapons industry is that it's kind of invisible," he said. "But the plant shows that it's real."

"At night, it's particularly disturbing. The plant is all lit up. You can see the light for 30 or 40 miles," Burnham added.

Gardner has been taking his family to the Peace Camp for two years. The pilgrimage reminds him how widespread nuclear weapons are.

"Too many people are concerned about the Soviet-American build-up. But it's not just there," Gardner said. "It's also in Pakistan, India, even South Africa. Some think that Iraq has the capability."

Bob Henschen teaches history at a Houston high school. He spent Friday with a group training for "peacekeeping" at the camp. He explained that these "peacekeepers" were to patrol the camp during the protest to make sure the "pilgrims" follow the camp rules:

- Keep an attitude of openness and respect to all people including law enforcement authorities and Pantex workers.
- Refrain from insults, swearing or verbal attacks. No physical violence or threatening motions, even in response to aggression.
- Alcohol, drugs and weapons are forbidden.

According to Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed, the peacekeepers have done a good job keeping the peace this weekend, just as they have at past Peace Camps.

"They've been real good," Reed said Saturday evening after spending the afternoon patrolling the Peace Camp. "I've never had problems with them dope-wise or anything."

Reed doesn't anticipate any problems with the "direct action" planned for Sunday afternoon. He hadn't heard of any plans for civil disobedience. Still, he will send deputies to the service Sunday.

"There isn't any traffic at Pantex until 4 p.m., when the shift changes, and there's not that many people," he said. "They can jump up and down and do whatever they want to. There won't be anybody there."

Earthquake rocks Chile

ARICA, Chile (AP) — A strong earthquake rocked northern Chile on Saturday, killing one person and injuring at least six people, police said.

The quake triggered landslides, damaged older homes and sparked panic when it struck about 11:50 a.m. It sent residents scurrying into the streets in fright and knocked out electrical service in Arica, a Pacific port city 1,270 miles north of Santiago near the border with Peru.

The city of Iquique, 190 miles south of Arica, also was blacked out by the quake, according to witnesses.

National police in Santiago issued a communique confirming one death, that of an 11-year-old smothered in a landslide, and at least six injuries.

The Pacific Tsunami Warning Center in Honolulu said the earthquake registered 6.8 on the Richter scale.

Costa Rica President Oscar Arias Sanchez and wife Margarita Penon arrive home from Guatemala Saturday after signing peace plan.

Rebels hold key in Latin conflict

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Five Central American presidents signed a pact designed to end domestic insurgencies that have made the region an arena for superpower rivalry, but rebel groups did not say whether they would comply.

The success of the fragile 11-point plan depends on the willingness of U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebels and leftist guerrillas in El Salvador to lay down their arms.

The agreement signed Friday by the presidents of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica also fails to set terms for verification and arms limitation in the region — longstanding stumbling blocks to peace.

The pact calls for a cease-fire within 3½ months in the Nicaragua and El Salvador civil wars, reconciliation between those governments and their opposition groups, steps to assure democracy throughout Central America, an end to outside aid to rebel forces and an end to the use of any country's territory by rebels trying to destabilize another country.

It gives the five nations' foreign ministers 90 days to complete the difficult task of working out details of these provisions and "rules ... of compliance."

President Vinicio Cerezo of Guatemala hailed the document as a "historic achievement" during a signing ceremony in the ornate National Palace that closed the five leaders' two-day summit.

The Nicaraguan Resistance, the largest Contra rebel group fighting to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, issued a statement in Guatemala City saying it generally supported the peace plan.

Scientists study mind's power to bend spoons, grow wheat

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — Scientists who investigate such mysteries as psychic spoon-bending, mind-reading and things that go bump in the night wound up an international conference Saturday saying there's something out there, but they aren't sure what.

"There is now enough information from research to suggest that some odd things do happen, but there's no cohesive theory as to why and how they happen," said professor Robert L. Morris of Edinburgh University.

Morris, a 45-year-old American and Britain's first professor of parapsychology, said in an interview that his science deals with "curious things that aren't explained."

Morris, formerly of Syracuse University, New York, joined 140 other scientists in the field to discuss their work in Edinburgh at the five-day, 30th annual conference of the Parapsychological Association.

A note of caution about believing fantastic stories was sounded by Dr. John Beloff, a retired Edinburgh University psychologist who organized the meeting with Morris.

"I consider that excessive credulity does far more harm than excessive incredulity," said Beloff.

In his address on the credibility of psychic claims, Beloff said there were fewer cases around of alleged psychic activity than there used to be.

He said Uri Geller, who gained fame with his ability to bend spoons by thought alone, "has taken a terrible battering and the mini-Gellers have become even scarcer."

But from time to time, there were amazing claims, Beloff said. "Our ancestors called them miracles or witchcraft but modern researchers should adopt a neutral term such as 'extreme phenomena,'" he said.

The power of mind over matter, like spoon-bending or rolling a string of winning combinations with dice by apparent will-power, is called psychokinesis or PK.

In a PK case cited by Alok Saklani of Garwhal University in Srinagar, India, a Himalayan shaman or faith-healer persuaded one group of wheat seeds to germinate more abundantly than another group, seemingly by concentrating her thoughts.

100 feared dead in bus plunge into Indian canal

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — State police in Uttar Pradesh said Saturday they feared as many as 100 people died when an overcrowded bus plunged into a canal.

The United News of India today quoted police as saying 68 bodies had been recovered.

The bus was carrying 136 passengers when the accident occurred Friday 108 miles northeast of the state capital of Lucknow.

UNI quoted an official report as saying there were conflicting versions of the accident.

The bus reportedly was very overcrowded with some people sitting on the roof, it said. The ticket-taker ordered some passengers to disembark, but they refused and the ticket-taker got off. The driver also got off, UNI said.

Some passengers tried to get out of the bus and, in the scramble, the gear shift lever or brake lever was pushed and the bus started rolling and fell into the canal, the agency reported.

UNI, quoting an official report, said the driver and ticket-taker fled.

Buses crash head-on; 15 die

SUKKUR, Pakistan (AP) — Two passenger buses crashed head-on near a village in southeastern Pakistan, killing 15 people and injuring more than a dozen, police said Saturday.

The accident occurred Friday night near the desert village of Surhud, 225 miles north of Karachi, when one of the buses tried to pass another vehicle, said police officers who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Four of the injured remained in critical condition today, police said.

Kiowa District Scout leaders push to sign 1,200 members

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

Concerted plans are under way for a big push to get more youths involved in Pampa Boy Scout activities with a membership drive for the Kiowa District scheduled in September.

A citywide roundup will be held at 7 p.m. Sept. 15 at the M.K. Brown Auditorium for scouts, boys interested in becoming scouts, parents and scouting leaders.

District Executive Bob Sharp, who took over the post last month, said the roundup will give boys a chance to "find out what scouting is all about." The roundup will provide information about scouting programs, costs and activities and an opportunity for talks with the various unit leaders.

Registration of scouts will also be part of the roundup, Sharp noted, with a strong effort to be made this year to increase membership in the Cub, Boy Scout and Explorers units.

Sharp said the district is setting a goal of having 1,200 youths enrolled in scouting units by the end of the year.

Helping to make the big membership push are District Chairman Bob Hart and Membership Chairman J.D. Ray.

Hart said all the auditorium facilities will be available for the membership drive roundup next month, with meetings being held in the auditorium, the Heritage Room, the lobby, "wherever's there space."

He encouraged all scouting and unit leaders to be present for the meeting. Hart said parents are also invited and encouraged to attend the roundup with their children.

Ray noted that the various unit leaders are in the process of setting goals, making plans for the year and undertaking recruitment efforts. He said he expects an exciting time for scouting activities in the coming year.

Ray stressed that the roundup is a general event for all Cub and Boy Scout members, would-be members and leaders. Instead of having separate school nights throughout the city, there will be the one large, citywide meeting at the auditorium, as was held last year.

Sharp said boys — and girls in the Explorer programs — joining in September will have a month or more to get prepared for later fall activities such as outdoor campouts, field trips and other events.

"By getting in early, they will have a chance to have some training and preparation" before the activities begin, Sharp said.

Sharp and Ray explained that there are four basic programs in scouting: Tiger Cubs, for those in the first grade; Cub Scouts, second through fourth grade; Boy Scouts, ages 11-18, and Explorer Scouts, ages 14-21.

The Explorers programs are co-ed, Sharp said, with both boys and girls being in the units. Sharp said he hopes to be able to increase the number and variety of Explorer programs available this year.

Churches and civic clubs generally sponsor the Cub and Boy Scout units. Explorer units are more specific in scope, relating to a career field, hobby or a specific interest.

The roundup will involve exhibits and displays concerning scouting, a brief opening ceremony, discussion of scouting programs and individual unit meetings, with opportunity for registration.

Sharp said similar meetings are being planned in other cities in the district, including Miami, Lefors, Canadian, Wheeler, White Deer, Groom, Shamrock, McLean, Mobeetie, Clarendon, Wellington, Allison and Samnorwood.

More information on the roundups will be released later as plans are finalized, he said.

Boys Ranch plans annual holiday rodeo

BOYS RANCH — The 43rd annual Cal Farley's Boys Ranch Rodeo will be held over the Labor Day weekend when boys of all ages will be competing for awards and top honors.

More than 200 of the Ranch's boys will be riding calves, steers, bulls and broncs. Area riding clubs will participate in the grand entries for both performances, with up to 10,000 people expected to attend.

Performances will be held at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 6, and Monday, Sept. 7. Barbecue lunches will be sold each day beginning at noon.

The rodeo is an event for all of the boys. Those who do not compete as performers will sell barbecue beef plates, soft drinks and snow cones, or work at the many jobs required to conduct the rodeo.

The boys will compete for belt buckles and titles of Junior and Senior All-Around Cowboys. Specialty acts will include a wild steer race, a Future Farmers of America project parade, a calf scramble and the barrel races featuring little boys on stick horses.

Among the spectators will be many of the ranch graduates who return for their annual reunion. More than 4,000 boys have called the ranch "home" since 1939.

Some other special guests at this year's rodeo will include about 30 girls from Girlstown, U.S.A. Although the girls will not compete in the rodeo this year, they will have an opportunity to share the excitement and be part of the Labor Day festivities, said ranch manager Carl McMillen.

Since the ranch accepted the responsibility for Girlstown in April, activities for the girls' involvement have been held at the ranch and at the campuses in Borger and Whiteface.

Tickets are now being sold for the rodeo performances. More information or ticket reservations are available in Amarillo by calling 1-372-2341.

Workshops train adults to teach

Four workshops to train volunteers in adult literacy instruction programs are scheduled at Amarillo College during this month and the following three months.

Sponsored by the Amarillo Area Adult Literacy Council, the workshops will train volunteers to teach adults to read. The sessions will provide background and techniques needed to successfully tutor a student.

Conducting the Pampa adult literacy program is the Friends of the Library, a volunteer organization assisting the Lovett Memorial Library.

Friends President Nancy Hill said there are currently a number of local instructors working with the adult literacy program in Pampa. But more instructors are needed, she said, noting that there is a waiting list for adults who want to learn how to read.

Assisting in getting the local program going in the past year has been the Pampa Altrusa Club and the local Retired Teachers Association.

Hill said Pampa residents wanting to help with the local adult literacy program need to attend one of the four workshops to receive training and materials. The Friends will provide manuals and workbooks for those in the local program.

The training workshops are scheduled as follows:
▶ Aug. 10, Monday, and Aug. 12, Wednesday, 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., and Aug. 14, Friday, 9 a.m. to 12 p.m.

▶ Sept. 8, Tuesday, and Sept. 9, Wednesday, 5:30 p.m. to 9 p.m., and Sept. 11, Friday, 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

▶ Oct. 12, Monday, and Oct. 14, Wednesday, 12:30 p.m. to 4 p.m., and Oct. 16, Friday, 12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

▶ Nov. 20, Friday, 5:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., and Nov. 21, Saturday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

All workshops will be held at Amarillo College in the College Union Building's Badger Den, located on the second floor.

Hill said those attending must plan to be at all of the sessions for the workshop. But if they miss one session, they can make it up during one of the later workshops.

Those completing the required workshop can then help tutor an adult in the local adult literacy program. Instruction is conducted at the library, with the tutor and the student arranging meeting times convenient for them, Hill said.

Anyone interested in helping with the program and attending any of the workshops should contact Hill at 669-3467 or head librarian Dan Snider at 665-3981.

While pre-registration is suggested, it is not required for attendance at the workshops.

Pickens takes aim at Singer

DALLAS (AP) — T. Boone Pickens Jr. again is aiming at a major aerospace company, but analysts said the oilman may be investing in companies he considers undervalued rather than engineering a possible takeover.

Pickens announced Friday his investor group was seeking federal permission to acquire up to 15 percent of Singer Co. As with his recent move to acquire a similar stake in Boeing Co. it was unclear whether he was maneuvering for a possible takeover or just acquiring stock as a passive investor.

Jonathan Squires, of Conning International in Hartford, Conn., said Singer's stock was viewed as undervalued because it took a big writeoff in the second quarter, although its prospects in aerospace technology were well-regarded.

Singer posted a second-quarter loss of $20.2 million, largely because of a $45 million pre-tax charge for higher than expected costs in completing development of three aerospace electronics programs.

"He may be looking at certain aerospace companies, sees that their stock is undervalued, and is putting them into play," Squires said.

Pickens' Mesa Limited Partnership indicated it owned stock and options representing 4.4 percent of Stamford, Conn.-based Singer's 21 million outstanding common shares. The partnership said it was notifying the Federal Trade Commission and expected clearance to acquire up to 15 percent within 30 days.

Singer stock rose $4.62 1/2 to $51.50 Friday on the New York Stock Exchange.

Based on the current stock price, Singer had a market value of about $1.08 billion.

Mesa officials did not return telephone calls seeking further comment, and Singer declined to comment on the disclosure.

Mesa, which is based in Amarillo, late last month said it was acquiring $15 million in Boeing stock and got federal permission to acquire up to 15 percent of Boeing, the nation's biggest commercial aircraft maker and a major defense contractor.

Boeing's board of directors adopted a "poison pill" takeover defense following the disclosure and have been lobbying Washington state lawmakers to pass a tough anti-takeover law at their special session scheduled for Monday. Several legislative committees met Friday to determine whether to consider the bill.

Singer is a consumer and commercial electronics manufacturer that generates most of its revenue from its aerospace operations, which include defense contracting, flight simulators and navigation systems.

The company spun off 85 percent of its well-known sewing machine operations and its furniture business to stockholders in October 1986.

While Singer likely would be a much less expensive target than Boeing, which would cost nearly $8 billion at its current market price, analysts said Pickens' past strategy made a takeover unlikely.

Mideast calm sends oil below $21

By The Associated Press

The nation's jobless rate dropped to a decade-low 6 percent in July, the Labor Department said in a report that gave the financial markets a jubilant end to an uneasy week of war tremors in the Middle East.

The oil futures market continued to drift downward Friday, dropping crude oil prices below $21 a barrel, from a high of more than $22 earlier in the week.

In the unemployment report, the government said a record 112.7 million Americans were at work last month, an increase of 470,000 jobholders over June.

The number of jobless dropped by 36,000 to 7,244,000, the lowest since March 1980. That sent the civilian unemployment rate down 0.1 percentage point to match the 6 percent level last achieved in December 1979.

President Reagan hailed the employment numbers as a breakthrough for his economic policies.

"There were those who said the low rates of unemployment coupled with low rates of inflation simply were unattainable," Reagan said in a statement aimed at pushing his "economic bill of rights." The initiative opposes tax hikes, spending increases and bills that restrict imports of foreign-made products.

Despite the president's elation, Wall Street greeted the jobless news with a shrug. The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 blue-chip stocks made a few stabs above the 2,600 level, but finished the day with a small decline.

The Dow closed down 2.23 points at 2,592. It had jumped 27.58 points on Thursday to set a record closing high of 2,594.23.

Analysts said the market was held down by investors cashing in their gains from the market's recent rise, partly because of fears that any eruption in the Middle East might hurt the market Monday.

Oil traders, by contrast, appeared to have calmed their nerves. On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the bellwether September West Texas Intermediate crude oil contract settled at $20.99 per 42-gallon barrel.

Gold also lost ground Friday, dropping more than $15 an ounce in New York. Republic National Bank reported gold fell to a late bid of $453.50 an ounce from $468.70 late Thursday.

The July employment report showed that unusual growth in manufacturing payrolls spurred job gains.

The civilian unemployment rate has dropped a full percentage point from the 7 percent level of July 1986 and 4.7 percentage points from a recession high of 10.7 percent in November and December of 1982.

Bridges honored by peers

Bill Bridges of Pampa Insurance Agency has received the prestigious Certified Insurance Counselor designation, one of 102 insurance agents and insurance company representatives to receive the honor this year in Texas.

The CIC designates joined "the best and the brightest in their field today" during a ceremony held in Austin during the 1987 Professional Insurance Agents of Texas convention earlier this year.

The certificates awarded the CIC conferees signify their completion of a rigorous five-course series of institutes covering agency management, commercial casualty, commercial property, life and health, and personal insurance lines.

Dr. William Hold, president of the national Society of CIC, presented the certificates.

Firm grants KFC franchise Five Star Award for goals

Jack and Pat Ward, Kentucky Fried Chicken franchisees from Pampa, have become three-time winners of the Five Star Award given by KFC Corp. for meeting the company's highest standards for restaurant management, operations and customer satisfaction.

The Wards previously received the Five Star Award in 1985 and 1986. They operate four restaurants in Pampa, Dumas, Perryton and Liberal, Kan.

Each "star" in the award represents an area of Kentucky Fried Chicken's highest operating goals, including quality in food, facilities and service; sanitation standards and promotion programs.

Franchises are evaluated annually.

In presenting the award, KFC's senior vice president of franchising and franchise services Bill Evans, said, "The Five Star Award is very difficult to earn, but it's worth the special effort because it assures customers that they will receive products carefully prepared according to Colonel Sanders' exacting specifications.

"The Wards and their staffs can be extremely proud of this accomplishment."

Pair tied for PGA lead Favorites wilt in sweltering heat

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — The favorites wilted in sweltering heat and allowed D.A. Weibring and Mark McCumber to move into a tie for the lead Saturday after three rounds of the 69th PGA national championship.

Weibring, playing with a chronically sore left wrist, did not miss a fairway and did not make a bogey en route to a 5-under-par 67 that tied the course record on PGA National Golf Club course.

The 34-year-old Weibring, whose only previous victory came in the 1979 Quad Cities Open, completed 54 holes in 212, four shots under par.

McCumber, who scored his sixth career victory last month in Williamsburg, Va., gained his share of the lead with a last-hole birdie that finished off a 69 in the hot and humid weather.

He, too, takes a 4-under-par total into Sunday's final round of the chase for the last of the game's four major titles.

Bobby Wadkins did another flip-flop with his brother Lanny and moved to within a single shot of the lead at 213. He shot a third-round 71.

Bobby, not yet a winner in 13 years on the PGA Tour, was the first-round leader, then gave way to Lanny, who shared the second-round lead with Ray Floyd.

Lanny Wadkins, Floyd and Seve Ballesteros of Spain — three of golf's more accomplished performers — each held the lead alone at one point or another during the third round.

Floyd, who counts two PGA titles among his four major championships, eventually birdied the final hole for a 73 that left him in a tie with Bobby Wadkins, one stroke back of the co-leaders.

Lanny Wadkins, the 1977 winner of this title, and Ballesteros were another shot back at 214. Lanny, who had an inconsistent putter, suffered through one stretch of four bogeys in five holes, and had a 74.

Ballesteros, twice a winner of the British Open and a two-time Masters champ, self-destructed by shooting two balls in the water over the last three holes.

He played those last three holes 6-2-6 and finished with an erratic round of par 72 that included five birdies, three bogeys and a double bogey.

The only other golfer under par after three rounds was Larry Nelson, a former U.S. Open and PGA title-holder. Nelson shot 73 and was one under at 215.

South African David Frost, with a 71, and Ben Crenshaw, with a 74, were next at par 216.

Extremely difficult bermuda rough, damaged greens and oppressive heat continued to be major factors.

A PGA spokesman said the official high for the day was 94 with 68 percent humidity. ABC-TV said the figures were 95 and 80. And a thermometer on the golf course registered 103.

Lanny Wadkins took the early lead with birdie putts of 12 and 25 feet on two of the first three holes, then let it get away with bogeys on four of the next five holes.

Floyd then took over. But only until he missed the green on the seventh, pitched through the green into deep rough and made double bogey.

That handed it over to Ballesteros, who got two shots in front with a 6-foot birdie putt on the 10th. He gave that shot back after driving into the rough on the 12th but still had a share of top spot going to the 16th.

There, he hit into the water and made double bogey, handing the lead over to Weibring and McCumber. McCumber two-putted from 30 feet for birdie-4 on the final hole.

Weibring got short irons inside of three feet to go three under on the first six holes.

"I didn't know how I stood in relation to the rest of the field. I figured I was doing pretty good," Weibring said. "But I just concentrated on staying calm, playing within myself, knocking off the holes one by one."

"I just wanted to keep in the same good, positive frame of mind and get it home," he said.

Weibring did that, and added a 12-foot putt for birdie on the 11th and another from 15 feet on the 15th.

Harvesters kick off practice Cavalier maps plan for exciting offense

By L.D. STRATE

Get ready Harvester fans. Get ready for an exciting, wide-open style of football when the Harvesters take the field under the direction of new head coach Dennis Cavalier.

"Basically, we'll be using a two sideout I-formation with a number of multiple shifts," said Cavalier, as he prepares to take the Harvesters into three-a-day workouts Monday.

Pampa's offense may not resemble the 'run and shoot' formation of the Houston Gunslingers of the now-defunct United States Football League, but it should be entertaining.

"It's not really fair to call us an I-formation team, because we'll be using everything from the two sideout to the traditionally West Texas style wing-t," added Cavalier. "We hope by using a lot of different motions we can get into situations where we can take advantage of the defense."

Cavalier's record as a head coach bears out his success with the multiple formation offense. His Wichita Southeast teams won two state championships and had a combined three-year record of 33-3. Fans at Chickasha, Okla. didn't know a state playoff from a state runoff when Cavalier arrived as head coach. Cavalier led the Fightin' Chicks into the state playoffs five of the six years he coached there before coming to Pampa. Chickasha's last trip to the playoffs came when the 42-year-old Pennsylvania native was two years old.

In preseason practice, the offense is usually behind the defense in terms of execution, but Cavalier believes that trend is changing.

"I think players on the defensive side of the ball are inclined to be more emotional and tend to be more mentally into the game, but I don't know if it's fair to say that now with the way the game is played today," Cavalier said. "Most teams today concentrate more on offense until you put on pads. It's hard to go both ways because you want to make sure no one gets hurt."

Weight-strength training is a big part of Cavalier's overall program, and he'll use it a lot during the season.

"I stress strength training throughout the year and I'll implement it during our practice times," Cavalier said. "Most coaches agree it's beneficial, but they're reluctant to admit it. They treat it like a stepchild, but I believe in it very strongly, not just for football, but for all sports."

Cavalier has added new equipment to the fieldhouse weight room, including four machines that develop the legs, hips, calves and neck. Cavalier has also brought in more bars and bulk weight to add to the present equipment.

"I'm just getting started. As the players get stronger, you have to keep adding more weight," he said.

Cavalier isn't guaranteeing a championship season right out of the gate, but he does plan a weight-strength program that can't help but benefit future athletes.

"We're going to get into strength training like it's never been done before in Pampa. I'd like to see all athletes involved in it."

Workouts begin Monday at 8:30 a.m. and around 70 prospects from the off-season conditioning program are expected for Cavalier's first Pampa practice.

"During the off-season there's a lot of players involved in different activities and we can't assume they will be in good condition when practice starts," Cavalier said. "We'll be starting from scratch. The major emphasis during preseason is conditioning, but we hope to teach a lot of football."

Cavalier, who was an all-stater in football and basketball, will stress defense in the morning drills and offense in the evenings with the kicking game sandwiched in between at the afternoon practice. Before and after each practice the Harvesters will be introduced to wind sprints and the weight-strength training program.

Saturday, the fans are invited to attend an intrasquad scrimmage, known as the "Pride Drill."

"This will be our first contact-type scrimmage," Cavalier said. "The varsity starts scrimmaging about 10 a.m., but we'll probably run the younger players in earlier, say around 9 a.m."

A photography session where fans can bring their cameras and take pictures of the players is planned for 1:30 a.m. Saturday.

Pampa opens the '87 season Sept. 11 against the Amarillo High Sandies. Kickoff time is 7:30 p.m. at Harvester Stadium. The Sandies' tilt will be the first of six home games for the Harvesters.

Pampa gets right into District 1-4A play the second week of the season against Hereford. That outing will be on the Whitefaces' field.

Scrimmage games are scheduled against Tascosa and Boys Ranch, but no dates have been set yet.

Physicals set for PMS athletes

Seventh grade boys and girls who plan to play middle school sports during the 1987-88 school year must get their physicals before school starts, according to Coach Dick Dunham.

Physicals will be given at the high school football fieldhouse with the following schedule: 7th grade boys: Thursday, Aug. 13, 1 p.m.; 7th grade girls, Thursday, Aug. 20, 1 p.m.; 9th grade girls, Thursday, Aug. 20, 1 p.m.

New eighth graders who plan on participating in athletics can get their physicals during one of the above-scheduled dates.

If more information is needed, Coach Dunham can be contacted at 669-6722, 665-2921 or 665-6758.

'Gooch' Csonka, six others inducted into Professional Football Hall of Fame

By CHUCK MELVIN
AP Sports Writer

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Miami fullback Larry Csonka considered himself an emotional football player, so he wasn't at all surprised when he had to fight back tears as he was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame on Saturday.

"My family is here, and this is where it gets tough," Csonka said several minutes into his acceptance speech on the front steps of the hall.

Struggling to get the words out, he said: "It's been a long and costly road, but we're here. I love you, mom. Just please don't call me 'Gooch' in front of these people."

Csonka, a native of nearby Stow, was one of seven players inducted into the Hall of Fame's 25th class.

Thousands of spectators jammed the bleachers and hills surrounding the hall for the two-hour ceremony.

Joining Csonka were his teammate from the Dolphins' perfect 1972 season, center Jim Langer; Kansas City Chiefs' quarterback Len Dawson; Pittsburgh Steelers' defensive tackle Joe Greene and running back John Henry Johnson; New York Jets' receiver Don Maynard; and Oakland Raiders' offensive guard Gene Upshaw.

Don Shula, the coach who guided the Dolphins to their 17-0 season in 1972, presented both Csonka and Langer for induction.

"Our offense had the keen ability to keep the ball away from opponents with long, time-consuming drive," Shula said. "He (Csonka) was simply the best fullback of his time. He was blood and guts and dirt all over him. In his career, high school, college and the pros, he had 12 broken noses."

Csonka rushed for 8,061 yards in his career, yet he fumbled only 21 times.

Langer, who played every down of the Dolphins' perfect season, said the Miami offensive line worked harder for Csonka because of the effect he had on opponents.

"He could wear people down. We enjoyed getting him through the secondary so he could wear down the secondary," Langer said.

Dawson, who passed for 28,711 yards and 239 touchdowns, grew up in nearby Alliance and once played a high school game in Fawcett Stadium, where the annual AFC-NFC Hall of Fame game featured the Kansas City Chiefs and San Francisco 49ers Saturday afternoon.

"For me, this is where it all began," Dawson said. "It's come full cycle."

The biggest cheers during the induction ceremony came from a large section of Pittsburgh rooters who made the two-hour drive to Canton to honor Greene. Greene responded by leading the enthusiastic crowd in a chant of "dee-fense" to wrap up his speech.

Optimist baseball program had exciting season

The bats and balls are all put away now. Stored for another winter in a dark room at Optimist Park.

The grounds will be host to only the brisk winter wind that blows through the Panhandle.

The lights at the Optimist Park diamonds will shine no more and the press boxes will have an eerie silence about them for the next eight months or so.

The Pampa Optimist Baseball Club had a successful season.

The Senior Babe Ruth League was one game away from winning the regional tournament.

The junior girls' softball team finished second in the district tournament at Dumas.

And, of course, the Bambino National League All-Stars were just two games away from a trip to Oakland for the National Bambino Championship Series after finishing third in last week's Plainview tournament.

A good year? You bet. From T-Ball to 18-year-olds, boy or girl, they know how to play ball in Pampa.

Pampa teams can no longer be considered the Babe Ruth version of the Seattle Pilots.

Coaches on every level agreed that it was a successful year.

It was fun for others, too.

Concession stand workers could sell circles around Major League concessionaires. I did miss eating ballpark franks at the local facility, though. (Something to shoot for next year — hint, hint.)

I heard all season about how bad playing field conditions were.

Sure, they're not the best — but not one player suffered a debilitating injury because of shoddy field conditions.

One game I remember well,

In My Corner

By Jimmy Patterson

when a trench had to be constructed from just behind third base of the American League field so water could drain off the playing surface.

The stands were adequate, with one exception — there's not enough leg room in the first base stands on the American League field, but, I guess that's just a sports writer's pickiness.

The press boxes served their purpose. Not fancy, but room enough to write and still have a good view.

The action speaks for itself. There were some exciting moments for everyone involved.

Most of the coaches I talked with had no big complaints.

One coach said he didn't hear anyone complain about anything. Another said there were no problems. Still another added there were no parent problems during the regular season.

"But what about post-season play?" I asked.

"During the city tournament, things heated up a bit," he said.

That they did. But, at least it was just confined to hollerin' by some parents who could best be described as just a bit too involved in the action.

Some people complained that we didn't give more print to leagues that weren't covered as much as the Bambino and Babe Ruth divisions.

A simple answer: Almost 400 games in all the leagues in three months, but only two sports writers.

The season can best be summed up by a poem that was featured in the Southwest Regional Tournament in Plainview last week. The poem, "Just A Little Boy," appeared in the tourney's program:

He stands at the plate with his heart pounding fast;
The bases are loaded; the die has been cast.

Mom and dad cannot help him; he stands all alone.

A hit, at this moment, would send the teams home.

The ball nears the plate; he swings and he misses;
There's a groan from the crowd, with some boos and some hisses.

A thoughtless voice cries, "Strike out the bum."
Tears fill his eyes; the game's no longer fun.

Remember, he's just a little boy who stands all alone.

So open your heart and give him a break.

For it's at moments like this a man you can make.

Keep this in mind when you hear someone forget,
He's just a little boy and not a man yet.

49ers down Chiefs in Hall of Fame tilt

AP Sports Writer

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — John Taylor returned a punt 64 yards for a touchdown and ran another one back 41 yards to set up Joe Cribbs' 2-yard score Saturday as the San Francisco 49ers defeated the Kansas City Chiefs 20-7 in the annual AFC-NFC Hall of Fame exhibition football game.

The loss spoiled the debut of Kansas City Coach Frank Gansz, who was elevated from special teams coach to replace fired head coach John Mackovic in January.

Taylor, a third-round draft choice out of Delaware State in 1986, missed all of last season with a back injury.

But he made his presence known quickly in Saturday's NFL exhibition season opener. He returned a Lewis Colbert punt 49 yards to the Kansas City 41-yard line early in the second quarter to start the 49ers' first touchdown drive, and he sprinted 64 yards down the right sideline just before halftime to put San Francisco up 20-0.

Veteran Joe Montana started at quarterback for the 49ers and played most of the first half, although Steve Young, the newcomer from Tampa Bay and the United States Football League, relieved him for several downs.

Montana completed nine of 14 passes for 120 yards, including a 39-yarder to Jerry Rice that set up Ray Wersching's 25-yard field goal in the first quarter. He also completed three long passes on a second-quarter drive, capped by Jeff Brockhaus' 42-yard field goal.

Montana did not play in the second half.

The Kansas City offense, which ranked last in the NFL a year ago, showed little improvement Saturday, penetrating no farther than the 49ers' 38-yard line until a 41-yard pass interference penalty set up Andre Garron's 1-yard TD run in the fourth quarter.

The game at Fawcett Stadium followed the inductions of seven players into the adjacent Pro Football Hall of Fame. Enshrined were Miami fullback Larry Csonka and center Jim Langer, Kansas City quarterback Len Dawson, Pittsburgh defensive lineman Joe Greene and running back John Henry Johnson, New York Jets receiver Don Maynard and Oakland Raiders offensive guard Gene Upshaw.

The only encouraging sign for the Chiefs' offense came from second-round draft pick Christian Okoye. The Nigerian-born 253-pounder, who has played organized football for only three years, ran the ball eight times for 74 yards.

Bill Kenney and Todd Blackledge shared time at quarterback for the Chiefs.

High-scoring American heroes coming to Pampa

TEAMWORK IS EVERYTHING.

The virtually unknown linemen do the blocking to open holes for a runner or protect a passer. Teamwork.

The infield turns the double play, the pitcher fires strikes so the hero can hit the game-winning home run. Teamwork.

The big guy rebounds, the little guy steals the ball, the bulky forward renders staggering screens so the highly paid, high-scoring shooter can score another two points. Teamwork.

And as media types are wont to do, the people who perform all the hard work, the teamworking sweat-soaked, are overlooked and underpraised so the scorer can get all the glory. Teamwork. So as not to differ from that historic journalistic pattern, let me list some high-scoring heroes you've never heard of before.

- Team 1 — SSgt. Fred A. Braemer
- Team 8 — Lt. Nolan D. Herndon
- Team 9 — Sgt. Wayne M. Bissell
- Team 10 — Lt. Horace E. Crouch
- Team 11 — SSgt. William L. Birch

- Team 12 — TSgt. Waldo Bither
 - Team 13 — Sgt. Robert C. Bourgeois
 - Team 14 — Lt. James H. Macia
 - Team 15 — Lt. Howard A. Sessler
 - Team 16 — Cpt. Jacob D. DeShazer
- And the following team players, now deceased:
- Team 2 — Lt. Richard E. Miller
 - Team 3 — Sgt. Aden E. Jones
 - Team 4 — Sgt. Robert J. Stephens
 - Team 5 — Lt. Denver V. Truelove
 - Team 6 — Sgt. William J. Dieter
 - Team 7 — Lt. Robert S. Clever

Just like today's athletes, all were volunteers to their teams. They didn't have to play on those squads if they didn't want to. But once making the commitment, they gave it total effort. Many of their teammates will be in Pampa this weekend. Those teammates know how they did the blocking, opened the holes, set the screens, led the way so the above-named 16 heroes could score their points in their chosen work — dropping bombs. They were my fraternity brothers in Air Force MOS 1035.

You see, the Sweet Sixteen were the bombardiers on the 16 crews which comprised Gen. Jimmie Doolittle's "Tokyo Raiders". Sure, you know of Jimmie Doolittle, but naming any one of his team players would be difficult. But like any great coach...Rockne, Lombardi, Wooden, Rupp, Stengel or McCarthy...has said: "My success is directly attributable to the players." And you can bet the now-retired, 90-year-old General often says the same.

Fully-believing that those who forget history tend to repeat it, a quick refresher course may be in order. The nation's mood was downbeat right after Pearl Harbor. Some folks with a wide smile, toothy grin and sugar-coated tongue, looking amazingly similar to House Speaker Jim Wright, calmly sat visiting the American leaders in Washington, knowing all the time a knife had already been unsheathed to stab Uncle Sam in the back that Dec. 7, 1941.

Doolittle conjured up the idea of using 16 B-25 low-level bombers, designed for land-based operations, and somehow get them airborne off the aircraft carrier Hornet, and bomb Japan solely for the purpose of letting the nation know America had both the will and the ability to respond.

Doolittle secured 79 volunteers for "a dangerous mission." They did not know where they were going, or what their mission was, until the Hornet had sailed out of San Francisco Bay. And when they did find out, a crescendo of cheers enveloped the giant carrier. Like fielding an athletic team, there were the many faceless support troops, the team managers, equipment managers, team doctors, assistant coaches so to speak. They helped prepare America's Team for that most important Super Bowl, World Series or Championship Game. Had it failed, nothing further would likely have been heard about the effort.

But it didn't fail. And the April 18, 1942 historic event was just the antidote America needed. It was the return of a kickoff after the other team had kicked a field goal. It was a grand slam home run with two out in the bottom of the ninth and your team down by three runs. It was the three-point basket from mid-court at the buzzer. It was the BIG LIFT our nation needed psychologically.

But it wasn't done without great cost. Not just a sprained wrist, a twisted knee, 21 days on the disabled list. After attaining their goal, 15 of the planes crashed in or near the China Sea. One reached Valadivostok, where it still remains in the hands of the Soviet Union. Seven of the Raiders were killed, three by execution, and many others were injured, some seriously.

Many of those true American heroes will be in Pampa for the Pampa Army Air Field reunion this weekend. They will be specially honored with a Saturday morning (10:30) parade. They are part of the less than 50 of the original 80 members of Doolittle's Raiders. Let's hope the people across the Texas Panhandle and Golden Spread will be here to join in the salute and say a gigantic THANK YOU!!!

And might their presence remind some of us, instill in others, the ever-necessary truism of General Doolittle, who said just recently:

"I think that freedom is probably the most precious gift that man can have. I believe it is worth striving for, sacrificing for, and, if necessary worth dying for."

About 90 percent of our United States Congressmen ought to have that message tattooed on their foreheads!

Thanks, Raiders, thanks so very much.

Pokes have 'gas' pains

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys are working harder than a prison road gang, trying to dissolve the shame of a 7-9 season.

Call it "Camp Courageous" because only the strong of heart will survive this one.

In their 27th season in the NFL, the Cowboys are grinding out three hours in the morning and three hours in the afternoon, capped by dreaded "grass drills" and "gassers."

In a grass drill, players hit the ground from a standing start at command of coach Tom Landry, then jump to their feet with knees pumping high. In his last year in training camp several years ago, Harvey Martin collapsed during this particular form of torture.

Gassers are sprints the length of a football field. The players walk back 100 yards then sprint 100 yards again.

Offensive guard Crawford Ker spent a day in his room recovering after a recent round of gassers. Guard Nate Newton's legs turned to rubber.

Then at the end of the day, the team has a meeting from 7 to 10 p.m.

Freeman File

Mercifully, bedtime finally rolls around.

As former player and assistant coach Cornel Green used to say about camp: "You had to sleep fast."

Landry, humiliated by a 1-7 finish last year, is asking no quarter and giving none. Recovering from off-season knee surgery, Landry is probably hurting more than the players.

He's been suffering from painful back spasms which come and go like the tide on the nearby Pacific Ocean.

He winces but he doesn't retreat when it happens.

"I first hurt my back in 1960 pulling on a pair of cowboy boots," Landry said. "Periodically, the pain comes back and hits me. I keep in pretty good condition but that doesn't seem to matter."

This is a no-nonsense camp as the recently traded cornerback Ron Fellows and released wide receiver Tony Hill discovered.

"They've even got the equipment men ground down," defensive tackle Don Smerek said. "Nobody's the same around here." Offensive line Coach Jim Erkenbeck, his gravel-like, Broderick Crawford "Highway Patrol" voice barking out orders, has set the tone.

The daily one-on-one meat grinder drills between the offensive and defensive linemen have been the training camp delight for violence aficionados.

Newton's neanderthal jousts with defensive tackle Randy White are becoming a camp legend. Crowds join around in a circle and watch the action as though two pit bulldogs were getting after it.

"It's the best way to find out what you have," Erkenbeck says.

Erkenbeck is pretty tough himself. He has a 20-inch scar running vertically up his stomach from an ulcer operation six weeks ago.

"Feel good," he growls as he bounces around, exhorting his players to apply the proper techniques.

Ker, a 290-pounder, says he's never seen anything like the hard times camp of '87.

Instead of being on the field four hours a day Landry has increased it to six.

Tagged out

The Mets' Howard Johnson is tagged out at the plate by Chicago Cubs' catcher Jody Davis while trying to score from third on a base hit Friday night. New York won 7-1 and are now 3½ games back of the St. Louis Cardinals in the National League East.

Cowboys' Sherrard refuses to blame fatigue for freak accident

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Mike Sherrard said Saturday he was tired when he broke his right leg four days ago, but he refused to blame fatigue for the freak accident.

"My legs were tired but I don't know how that affects the bone," he said. "There wasn't much muscle there (where the leg broke)."

The wheelchair-bound Sherrard, at his first news conference since the accident Wednesday during a passing drill against the San Diego Chargers, said he thought he had broken his leg two days earlier during practice.

"Everson Walls kind of hit my heel the same way it happened against San Diego and my legs crossed over," Sherrard said. "My legs were numb. I couldn't move for about 20 seconds. It was an odd thing to happen ever. Then it happens to me twice in three days."

Sherrard suffered a compound fracture when San Diego cornerback Carl Brazley brushed his left heel. Sherrard's left leg crossed over the right leg, causing a compound fracture. Sherrard will be out for the season.

"I saw the (television) footage and I wish I hadn't," Sherrard said. "It was up close and personal and not too pretty." Sherrard, a first-round draft pick from UCLA in 1986, has had a history of bad bone breaks.

He broke a finger his freshman year, a hand his sophomore year, an arm his junior year, and a clavicle in his senior season.

"My bones mend quick," he said. "I've broken enough of them to know that."

Sherrard said he would begin rehabilitation as soon as possible.

"I'm looking forward to catching a lot of balls and scoring a lot of touchdowns next year," he said. "I'll try to go to some of the games once the season starts. I'll also try to go to practice. I don't want to be out of sight, out of mind."

Sherrard said his injury forces the Cowboys to rethink their deep passing game.

"I know Coach (Paul) Hackett had put a lot of things in there for me and now he'll have to do something else," Sherrard said.

Sherrard said he was still feeling some pain.

"I was in shock when it first happened and although the bone went through the skin I didn't feel it that much," Sherrard told reporters gathered at the Los Robles Regional Medical Center. "But there is some pain now."

Howe looks sharp in relief stint

BALTIMORE (AP) — The return to the major leagues was not as bad as Steve Howe had envisioned.

Before the game against the Baltimore Orioles Friday night, the newest member of the Texas Rangers pitching staff said he felt "like opening day, 1980," his rookie season with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

But after allowing one hit in two innings of relief, his first major league appearance in almost two years, a much more relaxed Howe said it wasn't nearly that bad, after all.

"It's no different than pitching at Oklahoma City," said Howe, referring to the last stop of his long road back from five suspensions for cocaine use.

Since his last suspension, while playing for San Jose of the Class A California League last season, Howe has been tested some 200 times. He claims to have been drug free since July 15, 1986.

"That's what I call my sobriety date," he said. "That's when I felt real good about myself, when I personally believed my life was turned around."

Still, it wasn't until the Rangers signed him last month that his baseball odyssey through Japan and Mexico finally had some meaning.

"The Rangers took time to look me in the eye," Howe said. "They went over the information they had gathered on me. They wanted to make sure. The two parties have been open and honest with each other."

Texas officials met with Commissioner Peter Ueberroth on Wednesday, seeking his blessing on their intentions to add Howe to the roster.

There was never any public response from the commissioner's office, for or against the move, so the Rangers proceeded cautiously — half expecting an announcement right up until gametime.

In 244 previous relief appearances with the Los Angeles Dodgers and Minnesota Twins, Howe had 59 saves and a 2.56 earned run average.

He could provide the spark down the stretch for an overworked Texas bullpen which leads the American League with 234 relief appearances in 107 games.

The 29-year-old lefty made a good first impression.

"For a guy who hasn't pitched in the big leagues in two years," said Texas pitching coach Tom House, "I thought he went about it real well."

Bet You Didn't Know

Whenever you think about men overcoming handicaps, did you know that men with only one arm have played big league baseball, and bigtime football, too! ... Outfielder Pete Gray, who had only one arm, played 77 games in major league baseball in 1945 ... And, guard Ellis Jones, who had only one arm, starred on the highly ranked University of Tulsa Football teams of the early 1940s, and played in 3 bowl games, the Sugar Bowls of 1943-44 and the Orange Bowl of 1945!

Here's an oddity ... The 1927 Yankees are often called the greatest team in baseball history - yet they do NOT hold the record for winning the most games in a season ... The '27 Yanks won 110 games, but 2 other teams have won more in a year ... The Cubs of 1906 won 116, and the Indians of 1954 won 111.

Did you know that a big league baseball player once struck out while sitting on the bench! ... It happened in 1952 to Sammy White ... He had 2 strikes on him and was replaced by a pinch-hitter ... The pinch-hitter took a third strike, but under baseball scoring rules, the strikeout was charged to White since he had 2 of the 3 strikes - so, White struck out while sitting in the dugout!

I bet you didn't know... That this is the time to save on a used car at Bill Allison Auto Sales. We have a good selection of late model low mileage cars and vans. Come in today and see for yourself.

Galveston's tall ship plans fall voyage

By JOHN IRA PETTY
Houston Post

GALVESTON (AP) — Galveston's tall ship Elissa will again voyage offshore this fall to visit other cities, if all goes according to plan. Beaumont and another Gulf port are likely destinations.

Before that voyage, however, the 1877 iron barque will hold its sixth series of day sails off Galveston Oct. 16-25. There will be increased opportunities for the public to go aboard Elissa.

The proposed offshore voyage, probably a three-week venture, would take place in November.

Candidates for the second port to be visited include Biloxi, Miss., Pensacola or Tampa, Fla., or Mobile, Ala.

It would be the third consecutive year the Elissa has visited other ports. In 1985, the ship went to Corpus Christi.

Last year, it was a major attraction in the tall ships' parade in New York Harbor marking the 100th anniversary of the Statue of Liberty.

David Brink, executive director of S.A.I.L. Inc., says he hopes such voyages can be made annually.

"Our feeling is that every year ... we should pick a trip and go do something," he said.

Basically, by sailing the Elissa, "You're keeping the boat alive," Brink said.

He had been the Galveston Historical Foundation's Project Elissa director since 1980. He left last year to help found S.A.I.L., a non-profit corporation. It was an amicable parting.

The foundation agreed to consider allowing the new organization to charter the Elissa for offshore sailing.

Brink said S.A.I.L. was set up specifically for that purpose, and that each venture will involve joint planning. GHF continues to operate the ship as a museum and it will continue to conduct the day sails.

The trip to Beaumont and beyond would be the first under that arrangement. It is still subject to completion of financial support, but Brink is optimistic it will happen.

Elissa needs to be sailed on more extensive voyages than the day outings, for a variety of reasons, he says.

Sailing the ship offshore generates publicity — that from the New York trip is still providing benefits, among them at least partial responsibility for a 20-percent increase in visitors to Elissa at Galveston's Pier 21. Publicity also sparks donor interest that has been vital in acquisition and restoration of the ship, he said.

Volunteers, too, are attracted, not only by publicity, but by the opportunity to sail the ship on which many have worked so long and hard.

"That's their reward," Brink said.

There is a small professional staff to maintain the ship, but a large group of volunteers, many of them from the Houston area. Having perhaps 35 volunteers aboard had an additional benefit discovered on the New York voyage.

"Normally the volunteers do about 15,000 hours of labor on the ship in a year," Brink explained.

"In 70 days at sea, ... we did 10,000 hours, or two-thirds of what we normally would do in a year.

Galveston's prize sailing ship, Elissa.

'Old Pushbroom' dies last week

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — O.P. Schnabel, known affectionately as "Old Pushbroom" for his long-time efforts to fight litter, was eulogized as a man with vision who always believed in the future.

More than 1,000 friends and family gathered late last week to remember the man who did much to beautify San Antonio. Schnabel died Tuesday at age 90.

"He was a model for all of us," said Rev. Malford Hierholzer, pastor of Travis Park United Methodist Church. "I wish all the young people of the world should catch the spirit of the man."

A pushbroom, bearing the words "O.P.'s Personal Pushbroom," was framed in an arrangement of chrysanthemums, forming a centerpiece for the flowers. Schnabel was the first president of the Beautify Texas Council.

The pushbroom became a symbol and trademark of Schnabel's, serving as a reminder of his constant campaign for a clean city.

Schnabel, who became the first manager of Jefferson Standard Life in San Antonio in 1919, was a San Antonio institution, known for his unique business card, which included an attached penny and the words, "Good Luck and God Bless."

Air field reunion air show to take flight Saturday

Cole Brothers fly upside down and under a pole in one of their exciting air show acts.

Spectators view B-25 bomber at Perry Lefors Field.

Text by Larry Hollis

Duane Cole: a major force in aerobatics

Founding an aerobatics show and keeping it flying across the nation for years is not a task achieved overnight.

Duane Cole, founder of the Cole Brothers Aerobatics Team that will appear at Pampa Lefors Field next Saturday afternoon, has been flying for more than 50 years as an instructor and aerobatic pilot.

Duane took his first flying lesson on Christmas Day, 1935 in Phoenix, Ariz. Due to the high cost of flying and the scarcity of money in those days, he did not receive his commercial license and instructor's ratings until 1939.

His first participation in an air show was in Peoria, Ill., during the summer of 1941. He is now in his 47th year of participation in air shows, becoming nationally and internationally known over the years.

Cole taught aerobatics to college students on the Civilian Pilot Training Program in 1939-1940, to Royal Air Force cadets on the Lend Lease program in 1941-1942 and to United States Army Air Force cadets in 1943. He worked extensively as a test pilot during 1944-1945. Throughout the war years, he continued to fly aerobatic exhibitions at cadet graduation exercises.

With his brothers Marion, Lester and Arnold, Duane organized the Cole Brothers Air Show in 1946 at Kewanee, Ill. The show was considered the most outstanding entertainment of its kind, lasting until August 1963; it was terminated then at the death of his son, Rolly.

Though the show was disbanded, he continued to fly as an exhibition pilot. As one of the originators of the Experimental Aircraft Association, Cole has helped the organization grow from its original 12 members to the present membership of more than 100,000.

Cole also was one of the organizers of the Aerobatic Club of America and is a charter member of the International Aerobatic Club. He has exhibited in all 48 states within the continental limits of the United States, plus one other, as well as in three provinces of Canada; Mexico; behind the Iron Curtain in Budapest, Hungary; Johannesburg, South Africa; and in Central America, where he performed for the Guatemalan Air Force and at another event for the Aero Club of Guatemala.

He is the author of seven books: To a Pilot, a memoir to his son Rolly; Vagabond Club, a first-person story of a J-3 Cub; Roll Around a Point and Conquest of Lines and Symmetry, the most comprehensive books ever written on aerobatics; This Is EAA, a history of the Experimental Aircraft Association; The Flying Coles, an autobiography; and Happy Flying Safely, how to fly with stick rudder and chart.

Cole was the winner of the United States Aerobatics Championship in 1962 at Phoenix and again in 1964 at Reno, Nev. As a member of the United States Aerobatic Team that competed at Budapest in 1962, he contributed greatly to the success of succeeding USA teams competing in World Championship Aerobatics contests.

He has been a major force in the promotion of air racing and served as executive director of the Reno Air Races in 1964, 1966 and 1967.

Through all his aviation career, Cole has advocated aerobatics as a sport and as being necessary to becoming a well-rounded pilot. As a result of this, he has Pampa area residents wanting to find a different way to spend a summer Saturday afternoon can attend the Pampa Army Air Field Reunion Air Show on Aug. 15.

Featuring the nationally known Cole Brothers Aerobatics Team, the air show will get under way at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at the Perry Lefors Field north of Pampa.

Gates for the show will open at 9 a.m., with concession booths offering all kinds of food and souvenirs. Spectators also can view the numerous airplanes that will be on hand for the 15th annual convention of the Pampa Army Air Field Reunion Association.

In addition to the Cole brothers' 1½-hour show, there will be various World War II trainers and bombers, including the famed B-25 bomber, The General, once the personal plane of Gen. "Hap" Arnold during World War II. The plane also was later owned by the late billionaire, Howard Hughes.

The B-17 Texas Raider also will be among the many planes flown in for the show.

Other participants in the air show will be the Texas Sky Rangers, a 15-member parachute team that will make two jumps at the field. The Texas National Guard Color Bearers and mechanized units also will be at the show.

Association organizers say this will be one of the biggest, best and most exciting air shows ever held in the Pampa area.

Single admission for the air show is $5. A car or other vehicle with two or more people can get in for only $10.

Coordinator for the show is association president, W.C. "Dub" Ferguson Jr. of Magnolia, Ark. Ferguson also will be presiding over the reunion activities and banquets.

The air show is one of two events scheduled for general public enjoyment in association with the reunion of former pilots, base personnel, civilian workers and friends of the former B-25 training field located east of Pampa during World War II. The reunion activities are scheduled Thursday through Sunday morning.

A military parade will begin at 10:30 a.m. in downtown Pampa, with approximately 200 veterans expected to lead the parade, many wearing their uniforms. There will be military units, antique cars and other entries in the procession, including an old-fashioned calliope.

Children are invited to drop by the National Bank of Commerce this week to get free American flags that they can wave at the parade as it passes by.

The parade will terminate at Memorial Park at Ward and Hobart. There, a dedication ceremony will be held for the Pampa Army Air Field Museum, to be located in the former Pump Station No. 1 building at the south end of the park.

Association members, local city and county officials, military officials and veterans of the Tokyo Raiders will be participating in the dedication event.

Fund drives for the renovation of the building, the collecting of memorabilia and later expansion for the museum are being planned by the PAAF Museum Foundation Inc., with Blake Laramore and Thelma Bray as co-chairmen.

Special guests for this year's reunion events are the Tokyo Raiders, surviving members of the group who executed the bombing raid on Tokyo on April 18, 1942 under the direction of Medal of Honor recipient, pioneer aviator and militarist Gen. James H. "Jimmy" Doolittle.

Gen. Richard Knobloch will be the featured speaker at the Saturday night banquet. Also speaking during the convention will be Col. Robert Hite, who was a Japanese prisoner of war for more than three years. Both men are veterans of the Tokyo Raiders.

Samaritan Counseling gets full accreditation

Samaritan Counseling Center of Amarillo, which operates a branch office at First Presbyterian Church of Pampa, has been awarded full accreditation for July 1987 — July 1990, according to the Samaritan Institute of Denver, Colo.

"Accreditation is a significant hallmark for the Center and the community," said Dr. James Laurie, program director of the Institute. Great-grandma ministers to Methodists

By MARILYN POWERS
Lifestyles Editor

The Rev. Reta Richards of Pampa says most members of her congregations have no problem accepting her as their pastor, although a few balk at the idea of a woman in the pulpit.

"I've had no trouble being accepted as a woman pastor. They are skeptical at first. Several people have said they were against me coming to a place, but after I'm there awhile, they're the ones who cry the hardest when I leave."

"I know a lot of people weren't in favor of women preaching. I think if people would pay more attention to the person rather than if they're male or female, the ministry would go more smoothly. But I never had problems. They've never said that much to me," the 68-year-old great-grandmother said.

"The hardest thing I've found about ministering anywhere is being both the pastor and the pastor's wife—I'm expected to do everything both of them usually do," she said.

Richards is pastor of both the Harrah United Methodist Church in Pampa and the Lefors United Methodist Church. She juggles the two Sunday services by holding the first at 9:30 a.m. at Lefors, and another at 11 a.m. in Pampa at Harrah.

Rev. Richards took a circuitous route to the ministry. She was a mother at age 16, with the birth of her first son, Wayne. Three years later, she had her younger son, Lee. Both Wayne and Lee live in the Lubbock area and have provided the preacher with 11 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren, ranging in age from 2 months to 12 years.

When her husband died in 1961, Rev. Richards had not finished high school and did not have any job experience. She went to work at a school, and revived a childhood dream of being a teacher.

"I wanted to teach school so bad. I talked to the superintendent, who said I'd make a good teacher," she said.

With that encouragement, she earned her General Educational Development certificate (G.E.D.) and enrolled in South Plains Junior College at Levelland in 1968. After graduating in 1968, she went on to West Texas State University, where she earned a degree in education.

She began an eight-year teaching stint as her 50th birthday approached, teaching in Wyoming and Utah. But she eventually decided to become a minister, and earned her license to preach by correspondence in March 1977 while still teaching. She wrestled with the idea of continuing to teach while serving as a minister.

"The Lord said 'preach,' and I thought he said 'teach.' The Lord made me know I had to give up teaching. That's the way it went, and I've never been sorry," she said.

"I said, 'OK, Lord, I'll do it if you can tell me how to do it all on less than half of what I'm making now.' I said, 'If you can show me how I can live on that, I'll do it.' I guess I challenged the Lord for a sign," she said.

Richards attended a Pastor's Course of Study School for one month each year for five years in place of a four-year seminary. She still attends workshops to help her with her pastoring skills.

Rev. Richards began ministering soon after receiving her license, attending pastor's school during her ministry. When she began her ministry, she was only the seventh woman to preach for the Methodist church in the Northwest Texas Conference, which includes the Panhandle south to Abilene and Midland. There are still fewer than 10 in the conference, she said.

Her first church was at appropriately named New Home, near Lubbock, where she stayed for two years. Her salary was $4,800 a year, plus a furnished parsonage with utilities paid.

Richards left New Home for Sundown, where she was minister of the Sundown-Whiteface Charge. A charge is a pastorate in which one minister serves more than one church.

After three years at Sundown, she spent a year at Jayton. Then she moved to Loraine, where she was minister of the Loraine-Westbrook Charge for four years.

From Loraine, she came to Pampa on June 10 as minister of the Harrah-Lefors Charge.

"Every place I left, I left because I felt I could do a little more somewhere else," she said.

Rev. Richards has already been trying to "do a little more" here. Her goals include building up the size of the congregations at both churches. Harrah's Sunday attendance is between seven and 16, while Lefors has a membership of 30 and an average attendance of 15.

Both churches' congregations are made up of senior citizens. Rev. Richards is the second-to-youngest one at each church. An older congregation means more time visiting the sick.

"I've been going to Amarillo twice a week lately to visit the ill," Rev. Richards said. She also plans to visit inactive members to try to build up attendance at each church.

Her homebound ministry is one of her favorite duties as a pastor.

"I'm not a telephone person. I like to visit face-to-face."

else—that gets on my nerves. Those kind irritate me—a man who says he can't sit for an hour, and I've played dominoes with him and he sat and played for three hours without ever getting up.

"I just cannot imagine people having fellowship with the Lord down through the years and then seemingly turning their backs on the church. I know it's not just me and it's not just here—it's everywhere," she said.

Rev. Richards, who describes herself as an evangelical preacher, begins her day between 5:30 and 6 a.m. She does Bible study first, along with whatever other reading she needs to do, in her home office. She also may type the church bulletins, and usually tries to visit her church members during some morning hours and in the late afternoon. Other ministerial duties, such as weddings and funerals, are also part of her work.

"Sometimes my sermons take a lot longer than at other times. I do them at night after my other work is done," she said.

She visits in Lefors on Thursdays. She is a member of the Senior Citizens organizations in Pampa and Lefors, and also did volunteer work for the Red Cross when the tornado hit Pampa last month.

"Everybody tells me I'm a good pastor as well as a good preacher because of my involvement," Richards said.

"It's been a little bit harder for me here because of the big town. I've never lived in a big town before. It's harder for me to make friends in this big a place. I miss going to the cafe on Sundays and knowing everybody who's there," Rev. Richards said.

Methodist ministers must retire at age 70, two years from now for the Pampa minister.

"I don't have any plans right now to quit the ministry. I can take a small church and go on pastoring after retirement, but must take retired status," she said.

"I feel the Lord has anointed me to preach, and he is behind the things I say. Sometimes I get an idea in the middle of the night and write it down. I know it had to come from the Lord, because I'm not smart enough to have figured it out."

"I really enjoy the ministry. I never thought I'd enjoy preaching as much as I do. I'm a preacher first, and then I'm a lady," she said.

Class reunion tops list of Pampa activities

Class of '67 reunion, weddings, visitors, activities, all made for a busy week. Shall we start with the class reunion?

Classmates of the Class of '67, spouses and children came from near and far for a memorable time. The number of members and spouses registered totaled 280. The agenda was as usual — coffee at Pampa High School, picnic in the park for families, including children, picture-taking, dinner and dance at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Committee members who made it all click like clockwork were chairman Lalinda Grant, Audrey Meaker, Larry Franklin, Billy Hawkins, Sandra Harvey, Marilyn Imel, David Martindale, Brenda Guess, Pat Winkleblack, Mary Cantrell, Mary Nell Devoll. Class officers, all present, were Larry Franklin, president; Smison Goodlett, vice president; Marsha Jewell Varner, secretary.

Billy Hawkins served as emcee and gave the awards: longest married, Yvonne Danford Ingram; least changed, Vicki Autry Patterson; most changed, Kay Bohlander Slaughter; traveled farthest, Schuyler and Phyllis Aywood Stuckey of Saudi Arabia; second farthest distance, Debbie Sullins Crow and husband Robert from England; most children, Larry Stephens, ages 17 to 3; bald eagle (?), Bobby Chase won over Steve Oler on the applause meter — or, by a hair, as some said; and grandchild, Lyla Beth Gage Reynolds. Do ask Dona Cornutt about the special gift Karen Sidwell presented to her son Doc, all wrapped up in the original wrapper.

Because of the class reunion, family members of Klahr and Bob Jewell came from north and south for a family reunion as an added bonus. Marsha and Lt. Col. Cam Varner and children came from Tacoma, Wash., and Linda and Greg Jewell and children came from Houston. Andrea and Dennis Wyatt made the reunion complete.

Groom Days brought a big crowd to Groom. Congratulations to Hattie Terbusch, age 102, for being named Groom Day Queen. Hattie rode on a float and waved to all of the spectators. Hattie, bright as a shiny dollar, would be a good candidate for the Johnny Carson Show.

Ida Keller, former Pampan now living at Presbyterian Manor in Wichita Falls, visited friends and family, Sue and Bob Keller. Friends at Pampa Senior Center were especially delighted to see her.

Medina Baggerman, also of Wichita Falls, visited her family, Norma and Frank Slagle, last weekend.

Wedding bells and orange blossoms were in order at Coronado Community Hospital. Last week there were parties for Jennifer Williams and Phil Connors and Jackie Fletcher and Curtis Broadus. Phil, formerly of Coronado Community Hospital, recently accepted a position with Lewis Meers as a CPA.

You will be glad to know that Pampa has a new specialist in ear, nose and throat, Dr. Don C. McLarey. His wife is a nurse therapist at Girls Town. His daughter Teresa, an LVN, will help him in his office. His son Don is serving an internship in Tulsa, Okla. The whole family is medically oriented! A warm, hearty Pampa "Welcome!!!" to the McLarey family.

Pat and Bob Johnson are proud grandparents of their second granddaughter, Hailey Noelle, a girl born to Tracy and Larry McDonald. Jennifer is the big little sister. Pat spent last week with the family in Hobbs, N.M.

Let me tell you about some families that are chock full of nurses. Janet Coats, RN, and her daughter Kathy Withers, LVN, work in the operating room of Coronado Community Hospital while another daughter, Patricia, LVN, is employed by Agape Home Services. Then there's Hazel Claunch, LVN, retired, and her family of nurses! Her daughter, Charlotte Hall, LVN, is taking RN training. Charlotte's daughter, Beckie Long, will take her State Board for LVN in October. Another granddaughter, Kathy Dennis, is an LVN, as is her sister-in-law, Nell Larkin, retired, and another sister-in-law, also Nell's sister (!), Pauline Prather, is a retired nurse aide. Still another, Virginia Welch, is a nurse aide. Nearly all have been employed at some time at CCH. Several daughters of Majunta Hills, RN, and Forrest are RNs just like Mom.

Birthday wishes, belated, to Mary Schaffer, whose 80th birthday was celebrated with a reception at First Baptist Church in Wheeler.

Children of Ora Lee and W.M. "Cook" Garmon hosted a 50th wedding anniversary reception last Sunday at the First United Methodist Church in Groom. Congratulations!

Wenda and Roy Eckert visited their son, Roy Jr., at San Antonio. Roy Jr. enlisted in a branch of the Armed Forces.

Lynda Queen is serving as a judge, by invitation, of an International Contest from the Columbian Scholastic Press Association of Columbia University, New York City. Quite an honor, huh?

Fred, Jo and Jennifer Mays attended the Texas Choral Directors Association Convention in San Antonio. Suzanne Wood, Pampa Middle School, also attended. Fred and some choir students attended Choir Camp at Lubbock for All State music. Fred served as one of several by-invitation-only directors.

Becky and Greg Crawford, T.J. and Deidre, vacationed in Florida.

Ricky and Sharon Brown vacationed in the Dallas area with a trip to Six Flags as the high point.

Steve Heare and his bride, the former Karen Owen, honeymooned on the island of Maui. Wedding congratulations are in order!

Ruth and Gene Durkee just returned from 10 "wonderful" days in Honolulu. Ruth and Gene were joined by Ruth's son, David Harmon, and his wife Rachel, from Lubbock. The foursome got together in Dallas and went from there to the island paradise. A high point of the trip was a visit to the Dole Pineapple Farm, where mentally handicapped workers are employed. Ruth took a special interest in the farm because of her 19 years as director of Pampa Sheltered Workshop. She also got to visit a sheltered workshop that had 300 industrious islanders at work. Other highlights of the island stay were a swim at a private beach, performers at the Polynesian Culture Center, and a "chapel on the sea" church service aboard a boat. Perhaps what made the whole trip really special for Ruth and Gene was that it was a sort of belated honeymoon for them, since they didn't get to travel after their wedding in 1985.

Joe and Margaret Radke were delighted with a short visit from their daughter, Jeanne Duran. Jeanne brought her niece, Melissa Lennert. "Missy" is Joe and Margaret's oldest granddaughter. She is the daughter of Joe and Margaret's son Alan. "Missy" graduated from eighth grade as an honor student in Wickenburg, Ariz. Needless to say, grandmom Margaret flew to Arizona for the graduation. Jeanne is the vice president of her branch of Valley National Bank in Arizona. While here in Pampa, the girls were treated to sightseeing, shopping, and a trip to Palo Duro Canyon for dinner and "TEXAS."

Marge and Tinnie Reynolds of Pampa will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on Aug. 8 by going to see "TEXAS" at Palo Duro Canyon. Helping to celebrate will be their daughter and her family, Jane and Robert Jacobs, Teena and Amanda of Pampa. "TEXAS" is a popular place to be!

Ava and Warren Hart were off to Houston to celebrate their son Skip's 40th birthday. Brother Thomas threw the big bash.

Pat and James Hart had special company for James' birthday — their daughters, Chris Choate and Beth Kerley, plus Katie Kerley, a granddaughter.

Theresa Jennings and Lindsey came from Lubbock to celebrate Bradley Lynn Fletcher's birthday and to visit Bradley's parents, Rhonda and Mark Bradley, a sturdy little bundle of joy and enthusiasm, was 2 years old.

Belated birthday wishes to all! It's worth a drive to South Gillespie to see the beautiful display of morning glories on the fence between Sullins Plumbing and Caldwell Banker Action Realty.

Jerry Stephens of Dallas, his sister Judy Magness and son Jonathan of Auburn, Ala., visited their parents, Ona and Melvin Stephens. Jerry was here for the Class of '67 reunion. Another note about Jerry...Jerry and his wife, both professional pianists, are accompanists for the Dallas Civic Chorus. They served as accompanists for the Chorus in its presentation of Mozart's Requiem, performed for the Texas Choral Directors Association Convention in San Antonio recently. Heard, too, that Jerry is ultra proud of his nephew Jonathan who, at the age of 7, is an accomplished violinist.

What a nice note to quit on! See you next week. Katie.

Selling a home is a big financial step

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Homemakers' News

Donna Brauchi

Selling a house is one of the biggest financial transactions most individuals and families must face. Home equity accounts for 41 percent of Americans' total net worth, according to a recent study of individual wealth by the Census Bureau.

For most Americans, the home is our largest personal investment. In fact, recent government statistics show that 60 percent of American families would have no net worth at all if not for their home.

All houses are placed on the market to be sold at one time or another. There may be no immediate plan to sell, but potential home sellers can be time and money ahead if they will plan repairs, improvements and changes to coincide with those known to make a home more marketable. The same features that make a home marketable also enhance appearance, comfort, convenience and satisfaction for the non-selling homeowner.

Many factors must be in place to sell a home. These include: —A real estate agent or willingness to sell it yourself. —Advertising and promotion. —Assessment of the market. —The house itself — location, size, condition and features. —Emotional appeal — some houses have it, some don't. How is emotional appeal created? Marketing research has shown that buyers respond positively and feel at ease in a home that gives a sense of:

- Privacy and security.
- Spaciousness and relaxation.
- Prestige.
- Cleanliness and brightness.
- Reflection of self.

The home selling process is marketing strategy. Using consumer marketing principles to sell your home requires no special skills or background. You can apply these five steps to the entire house or to a single room.

■ Consider the Competition. Know what the competition is selling and what they are asking for the house. Take time to look at other houses that might be comparable to yours. How can you set your home apart from the rest of the neighborhood? ■ Consider the Buyer. According to a 1986 survey by the National Association of Home Builders, today's home buyers are looking for energy, efficiency, spaciousness and low maintenance. Sellers of existing houses need to start thinking about how they might add some of these features to an existing house. Sellers also should consider which improvements will and will not pay off.

Know who your buyer is, what his or her needs are, and how you can satisfy them. Home buyers have recently been classified in three categories:

—First-time Buyers — Nearly two-thirds of this group want a three-bedroom home, modest prices and a sound investment. —Trade-up Buyers or Move-up Buyers — This is the largest and fastest growing segment of the market. Their principal goal is to find a larger home. Specific features this group considers important include extra closet and pantry space, impressive entry, large kitchen and master bedroom suite.

—Empty-Nesters — Research shows that nearly 80 percent of people 55 or older who plan to move, do so to smaller homes. They are seeking the advantage of lower cost and maintenance, better security, and more convenience. They prefer more casual living space, combined kitchen and eating area, and a smaller yard.

■ Evaluate Your Product — Recognize the strengths and weaknesses of your home. A third party with an impartial eye can suggest improvements that you simply cannot see.

■ Eliminate Territorial Anxiety — In order to attract potential buyers, the seller needs to concentrate on re-dos that de-personalize the house. Highly personalized furnishings, finishing and decorating touches by the owner will make it difficult for a potential buyer to envision the house as "his-her house." Uncluttering, neutralizing, and de-personalizing the inside of a house can help reduce territorial anxiety among would-be buyers. ■ Maximize Appeal of Your Product — Before you hang out that "For Sale" sign, look at the package from the outside. First impressions count. A prospective buyer may set his or her mind against buying even before entering the home if its exterior is unwelcoming.

By carefully packaging your home for sale rather than just putting it on the market, you can maximize the return on your investment. For specific information on creating the superior exterior package, creating the superior interior package, and inexpensive do-it-yourself home improvement, contact your Gray County Extension Office.

Consumers no longer loyal to brands

NEW YORK (AP) — A decline in brand loyalty among customers is the "root cause" among producers for such problems as slow revenue growth, lower profit margins and reduced market shares, according to the head of a major advertising agency.

The demise of brand loyalty gathered speed when retailers engaged in price-cutting to move merchandise after the 1982 recession. It worked so well that producers jumped in with coupons and other sales promotions. Consumers were taught to buy only when the price was right. In supermarkets, for example, more than 60 percent of sales are discounted off the list price.

Over the short term, the pricing tactics build revenue, but the long term effects to brand loyalty can be devastating.

All-around buckles will be awarded in each age group on points earned in all events entered, with the exception of the adult-youth ribbon roping for ages 9-11 and 12-14 and the adult-youth team roping, where points will not count. For ages 9-11, the entry fee is $8 per event. The 12- to 14-year-old age group will be charged $10 per event. The 15-18 age group will have a $20 entry fee per event, with $10 jackpotted. Events for Pee Wee contestants will be held Saturday afternoon following the Team Roping Events (2 p.m.) Contestants ages 6 and under can compete in a stick horse barrel race, goat ribbon race, boot scramble race and sack race. Events for ages 7 and 8 will include goat ribbon race, barrel race, flag race and pole bending. Entry fees will be $2 per event for ages 6 and under, and $3 per event for ages 7 and 8. An All-Around trophy will be presented in each age group, and ribbons will be awarded through sixth place. GIFTS FOR BRIDESMAIDS
Amidst all your other wedding planning, you'll need to consider the gifts you want to give members of the wedding. Here are some ideas to show how special your bridesmaids are to you:
For a personal memento, you could give your maids picture frames - later filled with pictures taken at the wedding of the bride with each bridesmaid, or of the entire wedding party.
If you'll be honeymooning someplace out of the ordinary, why not bring back thoughtful souvenirs for your bridesmaids' gifts? Wedgewood from England, tartans from Scotland, perfume from Paris, silver-and-turquoise jewelry from the American Southwest, all could have special meaning and help show your bridesmaids that you thought of them even after your wedding.
If your bridesmaids are friends, or get along well, why not have your gift be tickets or invitations to something special you can all do together - or an "I O U" for lunch with each individually?

Cola is national favorite among soft drink flavors
WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Soft Drink Association says cola continues to be the nation's most popular soft drink flavor with a more than 5 to 1 lead over lemon-lime. Regular soft drinks are more popular than diet, the NSDA said, while caffeine-free soft drinks, both diet and regular, comprise about 30 percent of the market.

Brown, white rice are same

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — What's the difference between brown and white rice besides the color?

According to Better Homes and Gardens, brown rice is just unpolished. Its outer hull and a small portion of its bran are removed, while all of the bran is removed from white rice. You can taste the difference between the two, with brown rice being chewier and taking longer to cook.

Take precautions on international trips

CLEVELAND (AP) — Some eight million Americans travel each year to developing countries where their health is at risk, and 75 percent to 85 percent of them fail to take the proper precautions, an expert on international medicine said.

"As a result, 10 to 15 percent of them come home with problems significant enough to need treatment," said Dr. Adel Mahmoud, director of the division of international medicine at Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine.

According to Mahmoud, some of the most important considerations include:

—Immunization: Getting up-to-date protection against polio, diphtheria and tetanus.

—Destination: What are the current health problems of the specific country you are visiting? If, for example, there has been a widespread outbreak of rabies, it may be advisable to get a rabies vaccination beforehand.

—Water: Whether you are using it to drink or brush your teeth, there are three safe alternatives to water: carbonated water in a tightly sealed bottle (soft drinks are okay), boiled water and water that has been treated with a cleaning tablet of the type used by campers, though in heavier concentrations.

Man driving car is blunderbuss on wheels

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a habit that upsets me a whole lot. He drives full speed through a flock of birds. First he says, "I can't stop because I might cause an accident." Then, "They always manage to get out of my way." I wonder about that.

Last week, we were driving down a one-lane paved country road that was straight as a pin, and there wasn't a car in sight. About 200 to 300 feet ahead was a small flock of birds right in the middle of the road. He was going 55 mph and never once did he let up on the gas. As we came closer, the birds tried to get out of his way, but he plowed right into them. It was a gruesome sight. I felt sick inside. I've been through this many times. I've asked him to please slow down and give the birds a chance, but he pays no attention.

Since we were not in any way rushing to get anywhere, I can't for the life of me figure out why he would deliberately slam into fleeing birds. What gives? Am I an oddball for caring about the birds? I am truly one very disappointed woman. I've been driving for as many years as he, and I've always tried my best not to kill anything.

SICK INSIDE
IN LOCKPORT, ILL.

DEAR SICK: You are not an oddball. Your husband is clearly a cruel and heartless man to deliberately kill birds. Some people use guns. Your husband uses an automobile.

DEAR ABBY: In a few weeks, my live-in gentleman friend and I will be taking our long-awaited European trip.

My problem: How can we go about making others (on the tour) think we are married and get away with it? We've purchased the tour and airline tickets under "Mr. and Mrs. ()" but our passports say otherwise.

Dear Abby

Can this create some legal problems? If so, please tell us what to do (other than get married).

PACKING TO GO

DEAR PACKING: You may introduce yourselves as "Mr. and Mrs. ()" to others on the tour, and your relationship will not be questioned. You could also introduce yourselves as "Mary Smith" and "John Brown" — a couple of very good friends, and few would give it a second thought. Good friends who do not sleep together may take a twin-bedded room to save expenses.

As for the "legal" aspects, consult a lawyer. In some states couples establish a common-law status by passing themselves off as married.

DEAR ABBY: My fiancé and I are planning our wedding. We want to invite some friends from work. These are the co-workers we socialize with outside of work. We're not inviting those we have only a working relationship with. Would it be in poor taste to enclose a brief note with the invitations asking them to please keep quiet about our wedding? We don't want to offend those who aren't invited, but we can't afford to have everybody we work with.

Also, would it be tacky to ask our parents to pay for their friends — the ones we don't know, or haven't seen in years? We are paying for our own wedding and want to keep the cost down.

DEAR STRESSED: It would be in poor taste to include a note with the invitations asking your co-workers to keep quiet about the wedding. (It would be easier to smuggle down past a rooster.)

And don't ask your parents to pay for their friends. If they should offer, though, you could cave in.

DEAR READERS: One of the great journalists of our time, George Seldes, age 96, who interviewed, argued and broke bread with Isadora Duncan, Albert Einstein, Freud, Trotsky, Lenin, Mussolini, Col. McCormick, Eleanor Roosevelt, Errol Flynn, Hemingway and hundreds of other notables, has written a fascinating book titled "Witness to a Century" (Ballantine). It's the perfect gift for a friend whose intelligence you respect. Treat that friend to this delicious literary smorgasbord, and buy one for yourself so you two can discuss it. But don't lend your copy to anyone. You'll never get it back.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Heat can curtail exercise

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP)—Just can't seem to jog that one extra mile? Will another aerobic workout put you down for the count? Sounds like you might be a victim of the dog days of summer.

Scorching temperatures and high humidity create uncomfortable conditions for conducting even daily routines, let alone strenuous physical activity. During heat waves, many serious exercisers feel like they just are not performing up to par.

Well, rest easy. There are some tried and true tricks to beating the heat while staying in shape, according to a Penn State University physiologist. And the longer it stays hot, the more you will find yourself adjusting to the heat.

Dr. W. Larry Kenney, assistant professor of applied physiology in Penn State's Noll Laboratory for Human Performance Research, said it is essential to pace an exercise regimen to allow for "acclimatization" to heat and high humidity.

"On really hot and humid days, or after days away from exercising, it pays to consciously slow down your exercise routine," Kenney said. "If you jog, either run fewer miles than normal or take longer to run the same number of miles.

"You just cannot do the same amount of running in the summer as you do in the winter without acclimatizing," he said.

"A good plan to follow is if you run an average of one hour each day in comfortable weather conditions, then only run about 20 minutes on an 80-degree, humid summer day. The next day, run 30 minutes. Gradually increase the time so that within a week or so, you will get back up to an hour of jogging."

Acclimatization, according to Kenney, is the gradual, "natural" adjustment of the body to heat. Acclimation, on the other hand, describes the process of "artificially induced" heat tolerance. Both terms describe how the body adapts to exercising in the heat, or how we regulate our internal thermostats.

After acclimatization, the body generally maintains a lower temperature. The heart rate lowers and the body sweats more during exertion, which keeps the body cooler.

Heat cramps also are reduced after acclimatization. They often occur when the body loses too much fluid, which prevents muscles from contracting normally.

"Humidity generally plays a larger role than heat does in making the environment uncomfortable," Kenney said. "On humid days, the body feels hotter because sweat doesn't have an opportunity to evaporate from the skin. Sweating helps to keep the body cooler, especially on dry, hot days when perspiration evaporates more easily.

"Even if you are accustomed to exercising in high heat or humidity, but occasionally skip your routine for three or four days, or if you go away to a cooler climate for a few days, only perform up to 80 to 90 percent of your ability the next time that you exercise. This gives your body time to readjust."

Kenney said it takes most people approximately four to seven days to acclimatize to hotter, more humid climates if they continue their normal physical activity each day. If normal routines are limited, complete acclimatization should be reached in about 12 to 14 days.

"Drinking alcohol slows down the acclimatization process," Kenney said, "and so does sickness. Extensive bed rest prolongs the acclimatization time because muscles become deconditioned."

During summer exercising, when humidity is low, Kenney recommends pouring water over the head and face to cool the body and skin. He also suggests drinking plenty of liquids before, during and after exercise.

Weathers gets better chance

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They call him Action Jackson, and you'll find him in the mean streets of L.A. these days, solving multiple murders in his own unorthodox style.

The movie is Lorimar Motion Pictures' Action Jackson, and supercop Jericho Jackson is played by Carl Weathers, best known as Apollo Creed of the Rocky movies. After 10 years of getting beaten up by muscular stars such as Sylvester Stallone and Arnold Schwarzenegger, Weathers figures to be on the winning side from now on.

If Action Jackson connects with the audience, Weathers dreams of more such adventures.

"Some of us are fortunate to come at a time — and my time has come, I hope — when movies that are fun, action-oriented and have a potential for sequels happen to be popular," he said. "And this film does have a potential to stroll down memory lane with Action Jackson again."

Weathers is appearing with Schwarzenegger in 20th Century-Fox's Predator. He plays a CIA agent who enlists his former combat buddy for a rescue mission that turns into warfare with an unworried enemy.

"I always seem to be bumping heads with big bodies," said Weathers, who off-screen has a rapport with Stallone and Schwarzenegger.

"What works for me probably works for them. We're all pretty physical animals. We come from physical backgrounds. As well as the respect for what it takes to create that physicality, you get along with people who are created in the same mold and have the same discipline or drive."

Born in New Orleans, Weathers attended high school there and in Long Beach, Calif. Instead of accepting football scholarships, he chose to enroll at Long Beach City College as a theater arts major.

Weathers graduated in theater arts from San Diego State University, and his football prowess won him a contract with the Oakland Raiders. After two seasons, he moved to the British Columbia Lions.

Christian comedian to perform here

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

The sounds of heavenly laughter will fill M.K. Brown Auditorium on Tuesday when Christian comic Mike Warnke takes the stage at 7:30 p.m.

A self-proclaimed "jester in the king's court," Warnke spreads the gospel through laughter, mocking his former life as a drugged-out hippy and satanist, and poking fun at phony Christian idiosyncrasies.

"After a concert we don't pig out on pizza," he "fellowship at Sharkey's." We don't gossip, we "share with you." And if what we have to tell is really juicy, we "share with you so you can pray," he jokes.

Warnke, 40, is best known for his humor in relating his life story and conveying his Bible-based appeal for salvation.

Some Christian testimonies make Jesus sound like a burglar, he says in one of his standard gags. "I was an alcoholic and Jesus took away my booze."

"When Jesus came into my life, he didn't take a single solitary thing away from me. When he came into my life, he came in with so much good stuff that I didn't want that other trash any more."

It was not always so. Twenty-one years ago, Warnke was a satanist high priest, lordling over 1,500 devil-worshippers and witches in southern California. He used to chop off his followers' little fingers to eat in satanic rituals.

"Finger-lickin' good," he quips now.

Warnke is able to joke about his past. A near-fatal drug overdose induced by fellow cultists in 1966 lifted him heavenward. He said his life felt as if he were being flushed down a toilet.

Warnke's past experiences are detailed in his best-seller The Satan Seller, published in 1972. The book launched his evangelistic career, and he later founded the non-denominational Warnke Ministries, based in Danville, Ky.

Since then, nine of his concerts have become live albums and he has performed around the globe. He also served as advisor to ABC-TV's news magazine 20-20 during a segment involving the occult and satanism.

Warnke travels roughly 40 weeks of the year, spreading his Christian brand of humor.

He was Record World Magazine's contemporary and inspirational non-musical artist of the year from 1976 through 1979. A second book, Hitchhiking on Hope Street, was published in 1979.

Mike Warnke's visit to Pampa is being sponsored by Calvary Baptist Church. A $2 donation will be accepted at the door Tuesday and a love offering will be received for Warnke's "war on satanic crimes." For more information, call 665-0701.

Warnke ... laughing to heaven.

'Lost Boys' seems lost in mixed genres

By BRAD POPE
Guest Entertainment Critic

What if the kids down the street with the skateboard ramps, motorcycles and bleached haircuts were vampires?

This seems to be the question posed by Joel Schumacher (St. Elmo's Fire) in his newest film, The Lost Boys. The answer is a loud, resounding ... huh? For the movie plays like an unclear test where no conclusions are drawn. In fact, this sounds much like a Rod Serling scenario.

Take One. A Lucy (Dianne Wiest), divorced mother of two (Jason Patric, Corey Haim) all-American boys. Their move to Santa Carla has been less than they expected. For they meet a disrespectful lot of vampires who pull them into a world of horror and fantasy, comedy and romance, gore and carnivals. They've just crossed over into ... the Innerspace Zone.

Yes, the Innerspace Zone, another summer movie that tried too hard to mix too many genres. It was hard to peg that movie, just as it is hard to peg The Boys.

Here we have Edward Herrman, a video store owner who immediately hits it off with Lucy; Lucy's father, an old character simply put on this earth for comedy relief; references upon references to '60s TV. Throw these together with a proven cast and director and an irritatingly swooping camera reminiscent of The Late Night Sky Cam, and Bam! we've got a movie! But that's not entirely true.

However, the movie is laced with good aspects, such as one of the most chilling scenes in recent memory where Michael, the eldest son who becomes transformed witnesses how the vampires actually feed. There is also a charming bit where Sam befriends two self-proclaimed vampire killers called The Frog Brothers (one of whom is played by Corey Feldman of Stand by Me fame).

The photography, besides the Sky Cam, is up to par, and the editing is the best I've seen this year. Joel Schumacher directs the Hell (excuse the pun) out of this piece until there is no life left in it (that's good, and worse), and the pulsating rock soundtrack is better than most.

The lowdown is that The Lost Boys is a technical movie in a summer of technical movies. So far, we've seen vampires, another man-eating shark, the devil and some witches, and Bigfoot. The humans are, in ratio, about one-fourth to three-fourths machine. At least we've had Roxanne.

Rating ★★½

So, folks, take notice! Heed the way to those pesky kids who pedal and board in the middle of your street. They might be vampires. Mu-hu-ha-ha-ha-ha!

Brad's top five movies of the summer:

1. La Bamba ★★★★★
2. The Untouchables ★★★½
3. Dragnet ★★
4. Snow White ★★ (It was 4 stars when I was younger, before I saw E.T.)
5. Tie: Working Girls and Roxanne ★★

Musical, comedies set ACT I season

A famous musical tribute to the Peanuts gang, Neil Simon's manic look at the works of Chekhov and a tale of two flappers on a European jaunt will highlight the fifth season of Pampa's Area Community Theater, Inc.

ACT I President Kayla Pursley announced three popular plays for the 1988 ACT I season:

★ Neil Simon's The Good Doctor: Nov. 6-7.

★ Jean Kerr's Our Hearts Were Young and Gay: Feb. 19-20.

★ The musical You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown: April 29-30.

All productions will be at a new home, the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building at Ballard and Francis streets.

The Good Doctor will be handled by veteran ACT I director Paula Simpson. The classic comedy is Neil Simon's off-the-wall look at the works of the Russian playwright Anton Chekhov. Here, the turn-of-the-century celebrity is visited in his office, where he discusses some of his characters.

Auditions for The Good Doctor will be Aug. 31. Simpson says more details are to come.

Deborah Lawrence, a familiar performer on the ACT I stage goes behind the scenes to direct Our Hearts Were Young and Gay, the story of two girls going to Europe in the Roaring 20s.

Actually, Lawrence calls herself a "director apprentice," stressing that she will be under the guidance of "director advisor" Rochelle Lacy, director of last year's dinner hit Romantic Comedy.

Lawrence said the play is based on the works of Camelia Otis-Skinner and Emily Kimbrough and follows two girls on their ocean voyage to Paris.

"There they have adventures with a stowaway, mistake a band director for a ship's captain and are convinced they killed a man," Lawrence said, adding that the girls get into more escapades while in Paris.

King's latest a thriller

MISERY. By Stephen King. Viking. 310 Pages. $18.95.

Misery is Stephen King's introspective horror-fantasy about every artist's nightmare: being creative on demand.

Paul Sheldon is a writer who has built his career on a series of historical romances based on a character named Misery, a beautiful heroine who gets involved with baroque intrigues and steamy romances. Sheldon tires of this pulp serial and ends his latest book with the demise of Misery.

Then his car crashes in a remote section of the Rockies. His rescuer, Annie Wilks, is a huge, psychopathic ex-nurse who also happens to be a great fan of the Misery novels. Upon discovering the ending of Sheldon's latest book, Annie decides to hold him captive and to force him to resurrect the heroine. This is not difficult because the accident has left Sheldon both in a coma and crippled. He becomes her pet writer.

This is a dark novel about mental illness and mutilation. King still possesses and skillfully uses the tools of fine writing. His characters are minor masterpieces animated by their complexities. This blend makes for potent horror.

Misery is reminiscent of King's "Richard Bachman" style of writing. Its pace is generally slow but punctuated with bursts of action. The basis of the terror seems to flow from King's own fear of losing the creative ability necessary for a writer.

This book may not be the pinnacle of King's achievements but it should not be discounted as a failure by any means. It still stands as a fine piece of horror literature. It is shocking and gruesome. But it is also entertaining.

Craft takes travelers back to days of horse and buggy

By JAYNE CANNON
Greenville Herald Banner

FARMERSVILLE (AP) — Kelly Bare's life encompasses both ends of the transportation spectrum.

By day, the transplanted Chicagoan makes his living investigating aviation accidents. But in the evenings and on weekends, Bare makes carriages — the horse-drawn kind — by hand in his half-painted barn.

"I haven't even had time to paint the barn," said Bare, who moved to a parcel of land south of Farmersville in 1985. "Right now, I can't go out and pursue business. I've got all I can handle."

According to Bare, his customers are generally "people who are finding out they can do something else with a horse besides ride it or take it to a rodeo." Hitching a horse to a road cart or surrey is a leisurely way to ride, he said.

"You're trotting along, but hey, it's not like riding in a car," Bare said. "You have to be patient."

Bare had restored antique furniture and cars for years before he worked on his first carriage. It was, he said, a combination of the things he loves — restoration, handwork, artistry and the outdoors.

"I guess it kind of comes natural for me. I like the artistry involved. I love the detail work. I'm an artist," he said, rubbing the side of a slick-finished carriage, "and this is just a different medium."

Bare's decision to go into carriage-making was a case of the horse coming before the cart. After his move to the Texas country with his wife and two sons, Bare bought a Morgan horse, a gentle, 12-year-old high-stepping trotter named Wanda. Wanda, he decided, would be a perfect buggy horse and he set out to find a vehicle.

After looking at what was available, Bare decided he could do just as well on his own — and Flying B Carriage Works was born.

Like cars, carriage prices vary according to the options added, Bare said. For his most basic model — a two-wheel road cart with a single bench seat — the price is around $1,200. Most of his customers opt for a fancy touch or two. Bare said, making the average price for the basic model about $1,600.

A four-wheel buckboard buggy sells for about $2,500.

So far, Bare has made only one surrey — a vehicle he calls "the Cadillac of carriages."

A surrey carries four people and is quite elaborate, Bare said. The average price is around $7,000.

Business has been so steady since he opened Flying B Carriage Works that Bare has only turned out custom-made carriages.

"I'd like to make a few and just have them here to sell," he said. "But I haven't had time."

The carriage is painted deep maroon with cream pinstriping and a black vinyl seat.

"The great thing about this carriage is that you go out, you get it dirty, muddy, whatever, and you come back and hose it down," Bare said. "It'll look good as new in a few minutes."

Bare uses no nails in his work — only screws and bolts join the wood pieces. The cart wheels are wood and rubber and are made for Bare by an Amish family in Pennsylvania.

"There's a lot more to this than just slapping some wood together," Bare said. "It had to look good, but it has to endure."

Working as he does on weekends and at night, Bare can finish a cart in about six weeks. If he worked full-time, he could do a cart in two weeks, he said.

"I'd love to do it full-time," Bare said. "And that's really what I'm working toward."

Carriage-making, as well as carriage-driving, is steeped in tradition, Bare said. To turn out a better product, Bare has studied carriages and talked with builders all over the country.

Many horse clubs sponsor driving rallies just for the carriage drivers, Bare said. One, in the Texas Morgan Horse Club, is sponsoring a rally in Leonard in September that will feature obstacle course and marathon driving. Dressage — a portion of the competition that involves period costumes and authentic vehicles — will be included.

A FAITHFUL SAYING

"Faithful is the saying: For if we died with him, we shall also live with him: if we endure, we shall also reign with him: if we shall deny him, he also will deny us: if we are faithless, he abideth faithful: for he cannot deny himself" (2 Timothy 2:11-13.) Only if we died with Him (became dead to sin and alive unto God through obedience to the gospel, Romans 8:12), do we have the assurance that we shall live with Him. If we deny Him, He will deny us (Matthew 10:32-33.) If we are faithless, it will not change the faithfulness of Christ. Since Christ remains faithful, regardless, His Word remains faithful (Hebrews 13:8; Matthew 24:35; John 12:48.)

Many deny the truthfulness of the scriptures by insisting that salvation is altogether the result of one's faith without that one doing anything by faith. They leave out the conditions of God laid out by the apostle Paul in 2 Timothy 2:11-13. To die with Christ is to be sorry for sin, repent and be baptized where-by the old man of sin is buried (Acts

2:38; Romans 6:1-11.) To "endure" is to live faithful, godly and righteously in this present world (Titus 2:11-14.) Without dying to sin, there is no hope of living eternally with Christ. Without enduring faithfully with Christ, there is no hope of reigning with Him (1 Corinthians 15:58.) If we deny Him, He will deny us (Matthew 7:21-23.) These scriptures most assuredly teach that man does have something to do with his own salvation.

The little word "if" keeps coming up all through our lives. How often do we say, "If such and such hadn't happened", or "if things work out for me, then I will serve the Lord", etc. This little word simple indicates conditions and circumstances. For example, if we do not eat food, we will starve, if we do not drink water, we will die of thirst, etc. So it is with God's Word. If we do not do what it teaches, it promises that we will be lost.

Certainly, this faithful saying, recorded by Paul, should be seriously considered by all interested in the saving of their soul.

PANHANDLE PEST REPORT
Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension Entomologist, provided the following summary of crop insect conditions for the Texas Panhandle.

CORN: Spider mite activity has increased this past week. Some fields are requiring treatment; however, many more have only isolated, small colonies. We will likely continue to see an increase in spider mite infestations, for the hot, dry weather is predicted to stay with us for a while and spraying for borers will trigger a rapid increase in many mite infestations.

As of late 30 July, the use of Azodrin for spider mite control in corn is still forbidden. Labeled miticides like Cygon and Metastox-R have not consistently provided effective control of spider mites; however, in the Texas Panhandle, they have performed better in the northern corn growing area than in the southern corn growing area.

Pheromone traps in Dallam and Moore Counties are catching southwestern corn borer moths again. The number of moths caught increased dramatically on 21 July, and with a heavy flight predicted, many fields are likely at the economic threshold. An insecticide application is suggested when 20 to 25 percent of the plants are infested with eggs or newly hatched larvae.

SORGHUM: Greenbug infestations have increased, but are still very spotted throughout the Panhandle. Many of the fields I have been to in the past week are at the boot to heading stage. In sorghum this size, the death of one functional leaf as a result of greenbug feeding can justify an insecticide application for greenbug control.

No parasitic wasp activity has been detected at this time.

Some very isolated colonies of spider mites have been observed on lower leaves of a few sorghum plants.

Sorghum that is headed can be infested with headworms. Begin routine checks for this pest when heads appear.

COTTON: Cotton looked surprisingly clean this week in the southeast Panhandle area. A few fleahoppers could be found, but the cotton appeared to have a very acceptable fruit load.

Although we have reports of increased bollworm and cotton aphid activity in the Rolling Plains, none were detected in the Collingsworth County area. Continued to check cotton on a regular basis for these pests.

BIG COWS NOT ALWAYS EFFICIENT
Big cows may not be the most efficient producers in a beef cattle herd.

Although big cows generally produce the heaviest calves, their maintenance costs may outweigh the benefits of the extra pounds of beef.

A recent demonstration in South Central Texas showed that cow maintenance costs need to be considered along with the age of cows in coming up with an efficient herd.

Some 200 Santa Gertrudis cows aged two to 12 years were used in the study. Both cow weights and calf weaning weights were recorded and compared between cows of different age and weight groups.

The heaviest cows (1201 to 1700 pounds) weaned the heaviest calves at an average of 552 pounds. Medium-weight cows (1000 to 1200 pounds) weaned calves that averaged 539 pounds while the smallest cows (less than 1000 pounds) weaned calves averaging 506 pounds.

These figures show that the medium-weight cows produced calves 33 pounds heavier than calves from the smallest cows but only 13 pounds lighter than calves from the heaviest cows. This indicates that the medium-weight cows out-performed the smallest cows and did almost as well as the heavy cows.

Further, the heavy cows required about 18 percent more energy and 13 percent more protein on a daily basis than did the medium-weight cows. This extra input yielded only 2 percent more beef in the form of the weaned calf.

Thus a cattleman must decide whether or not he wants to maintain a cow that needs that much extra input for such a meager increase in calf weaning weight.

Records from the study also show that as cow age increased, calf weaning weight decreased. The youngest cows weaned calves at 548 pounds while the oldest ones weaned calves weighing only 517 pounds. This points out the importance of keeping younger cows and culling older ones.

All in all, cattlemen should make good use of records in determining the weaning weights of calves from various classes of cows and should use this information to make management decisions to increase herd efficiency.

Bees' response tested in insecticide program

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Trained honeybees don't jump through hoops. Not even at the University of Arizona.

In an ingenious experiment at the university, honeybees were lined up in a row in minuscule bee stanchions and trained to respond to thyme-scented air.

Every time a bee uncured its proboscis, or tongue, it was rewarded with sugar water. By the fifth training session, 91 percent of the bees had learned their lesson — if they had not been exposed to pyrethroid insecticides.

That was the point of the research by University of Arizona entomologist Dr. Gordon Waller and former graduate student Kevin Taylor. Honeybees react to sublethal doses of the pyrethroids by laying off work and flying home to the hive to rest for a while.

Apparently, the bees are repelled by the chemicals. Before they can get a lethal dose, they stop foraging until the effects of the chemical wear off. However, scientists have never known what makes the honeybees so smart.

Taylor and Waller, who also is a research scientist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Carl Hayden Bee Research Center, started by treating filter paper with various pyrethroid chemicals. Half of the to-be-trained honeybees walked on the filter paper overnight before being odor-trained.

Those bees that had been exposed to pyrethroids flunked their training. Only 30 to 50 percent of the bees stuck out their tongues for a reward, depending on the particular chemical used.

The experiment may seem esoteric, but the survival of honeybees is absolutely essential to agriculture, says Waller. They pollinate the crops. Unfortunately, the same chemicals that protect crops from insect damage often kill the bees as well.

Pyrethroids, synthetic insecticides based on the bug-controlling compound found in daisy-like pyrethrum plants, normally decrease foraging by honeybees but don't necessarily cause high mortality rates.

Community fights hard to save its elms

EDITOR'S NOTE—Joyce Kilmer, the New Jersey poet who had a thing about trees, would feel at home in Westmont, Pa. A tree is a big deal in this town, particularly the elm. Residents of Westmont, and several other towns for that matter, don't mind paying taxes to defend their elms against a killer beetle.

By TARA BRADLEY STECK
Associated Press Writer

WESTMONT, Pa. (AP)—When Robert Gardill was a boy, he made sure he walked down Luzerne Street on his way to school so he could pass under the eight blocks of American elms.

"I always wanted to buy a house on Luzerne Street, mainly because of the trees," says Gardill, 45, who realized that dream 17 years ago. "I think it's the nicest street. I'd like to see a nicer one."

The 195 elms lining the graceful boulevard are the largest continuous stand of elms east of the Mississippi River. They present a nostalgic look at America as it once was, when majestic trees dotted the land.

They remain today only because of the tenacious commitment of the residents of this small town in central Pennsylvania.

Although the elms appear strong and powerful, able to withstand windstorms, lightning and errant lawnmowers, a tiny pin-sized beetle carrying the Dutch elm disease fungus can take down an entire stand within weeks. It is so highly contagious, federal law requires the removal of trees that fall victim to it.

The disease has ravaged more than 35 million elms, roughly half of the country's elms, since it was first introduced to the United States in the 1930s, according to the Elm Research Institute in Harrisville, N.H. Without preventive measures such as spraying and pruning, the institute estimates half the elm trees in the country would die this year.

When a few of Luzerne Street's elms came down with the disease a decade ago and had to be cut down, alarmed townspeople launched an all-out effort to protect the rest of the trees.

"It was like a funeral," says Gardill's wife, Mary Jo, recalling the first tree that had to be cut down several years ago.

With the blessing of its 6,200 residents, Westmont officials conducted weekly aerial surveys by helicopter to inspect the treetops, where the disease can be spotted first, and pruned, fertilized and, in some cases, cut down problem trees.

This year the city will spend about $17,000 for the elms and about $20,000 for the borough's 3,240 other trees on public rights-of-way.

Although Westmont is a thriving community, the expenditures appear extravagant to those in nearby hard-hit towns, particularly in neighboring Johnstown, where recent budget cuts have forced the layoffs of dozens of firefighters and police officers.

But Westmont residents' fondness for their trees goes beyond dollars and cents.

"I don't mind paying my taxes if they go toward the trees," says Bill Glosser, 57, who moved back into his boyhood home on the quiet street in 1965. "They are members of the family."

Fire ants battle raging

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—City health officials were concerned that the battle against fire ants at the mass site of the Sept. 13 visit by Pope John Paul II should have begun in June.

But a state agriculture official has said that it is not too late to rid the west Bexar County site of the ants, including one non-native species with a sting that can be lethal.

Texas Agriculture Department fire ant specialist Mark Trostle said more than 80 percent of the ants could be wiped out in time for the papal visit.

He visited the 144-acre site to advise Catholic Chancery staff about how to apply the insecticide Amdro for the greatest effectiveness.

Trostle said he expected about 50 mounds of imported fire ants per acre and said there may be two native Texas species of fire ant in the area.

Dr. Frank J. James, a San Antonio allergist, said the two native Texas species have stings which trigger sickness but do not kill.

More than 350 pounds of the slow-acting insecticide — worth $1,000 — was donated to the archdiocese by American Cyanamid Co., its New Jersey manufacturer, after Trostle made the request last week.

THE OBESÉ DOG

Feeding the obese dog often presents a challenge. Since your "Fat Fido" depends entirely on you for his food, only you can control his weight. It is easier to control if you follow these suggestions:

- 1) No people food (leads to obesity and dental problems) Esp. Holiday food (More on that later)
- 2) Limit feedings to 1 or 2 per day
- 3) Feed only good quality food, designed for the overweight dog, e.g. Cycle 3 or, better yet, SCIENCE DIET REDUCTION DIET (R/D)
- 4) Some form of exercise daily helps keep heart and muscles in good shape. Have your veterinarian weigh Fido and check for any other problem which might be affected by dieting at this time, and at various times during this period of slimming Fido down. He can advise you as how fat Fido is progressing.

By far the easiest, most effective and most enjoyable program for dog and owner is simply to feed your fat Fido "R/D", available at your veterinarian's office. It provides an inexpensive way to reduce the dog's weight, while satisfying the appetite and nutritional needs of OBESÉ dogs.

Oil patch

There's some cautious optimism stirring

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer

Besides the metronomic pulse of pumping, that noise coming from oilfields around the country is the clink of tools being picked up again by mechanics, the beat of helicopters heading offshore. It's the sound of optimism stirring, even if it's still muted.

"The drilling is picking up. Landmen are going back to work. It's looking pretty good," says Tom Keating, who arranges leases in Montana.

"We're cautiously optimistic," allows John Birdsong, who directs hiring for an Oklahoma oilfield service company.

"Our production will continue to expand, but at a slower rate," predicts Jim Bob Moffett, chief executive of an oil, gas and mineral concern based in New Orleans.

"Right now," chimes in Ed Eboch, an economic analyst in the Alaska Labor Department, "there just seems to be an air of optimism."

Prices of crude oil futures have fluctuated recently but stayed above $20 a barrel, and that has accelerated oilfield activity that had picked up earlier in the year. Depressed petroleum prices began a slow recovery a few months ago, industry officials say.

Now, even some officials in businesses secondarily affected by the ups and downs of oil are voicing modest hope.

Jim Bennett, president of First Citizens Bank of Billings, Mont., and president of the Montana Bankers Association, said, "There's a lot of difference in a few dollars in the price of oil."

Businesses, he said, "could be losing money at $18, breaking even at $20 and making money at $22."

Delinquent loans to oil producers will turn around with an upswing in prices and production, but beyond that, he said, even loans made to motels and shopping centers in better times will gradually be repaid as the oil patch economy expands.

Optimism breeds a sense of security, which prompts people to spend money and changes the direction of the economy, said Eboch.

For the first time since last November, the delinquency rate on home loans made through the Alaska Housing Finance Corp. held steady in June at 15.5 percent, said spokeswoman Margaret Nelson.

And Alaska legislators cited the stabilization of oil when they refused to go along with Gov. Steve Cowper's plans for reinstating an income tax, a motor fuels tax and many state fee increases.

At the University of Oklahoma, where enrollment in petroleum engineering courses has been off sharply, Roy Knapp, head of the geology department, echoed others when he said he just hopes the price rise holds steady.

"I think more than high prices we need predictable prices. I hope it doesn't go too high too fast," Knapp said.

"When you're cautious, you do things wiser," he said, noting that companies have learned from their losses in recent years.

"To jump back in with both feet ... it's a marvelous place to lose their shirt."

In Duncan, Okla., Birdsong's Halliburton Services Co. is taking a cautious approach.

"We are beginning to see a few bright spots in the country, but we're moving very slowly," he said. "We have re-employed some of the ones we have laid off, and some have turned us down. They're not sure if it's going to be a sustained thing."

In Texas, drill pipe manufacturer Lone Star Technologies has upped its production capacity 5 percent from a year ago and quietly hired back 300 workers in recent months, officials said. The company had laid off about two-thirds of its workforce of 4,000 last year.

Temporary workers and contract labor will be used for the time being in the Kern County, Calif., projects of Chevron Oil, said the company's division manager for production, Bob Connon.

The company "is still cautious about oil prices and our caution is reflected in our hiring practices," he said.

Still, production in Kern County, the largest oil-producing county in the nation, is increasing — with about 30,000 wells operating in March compared to 28,800 at the low point last September, when prices tumbled below $10 a barrel, according to Bill Guerard, senior engineer for the California Division of Oil and Gas in Sacramento.

"We're seeing some exploratory drilling and a lot of development wells being drilled," observed Ed Welge of the division's Bakersfield office. "We've seen this upturn since the first of this year."

Far from the fields producing thick Kern River crude, those that give up Louisiana Sweet are also growing more active.

In mid-July, 145 rigs were running in Louisiana, 61 of them offshore; at the same time last year, 103 rigs were in operation, 44 offshore.

The exploration push has set off a scramble for oil-field equipment in the Lafayette, La., area. Drilling companies report shortages — and a quick jump in prices — of drill pipe, casing, tools and diesel power units as well as trained talent to run and maintain rigs.

Electricians, mechanics, welders and helicopter pilots, many of whom left the state last year in search of work, are in hot demand. In Alaska's Prudhoe Bay, oil companies plan to drill 17 new wells this fall, after virtually halting North Slope oil exploration in 1986.

Oil analysts attribute this year's price climb to greater cooperation among members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The recent price hike is linked to heightened tensions in the Persian Gulf and, to a lesser degree, increased gasoline demand from Americans on summer trips, analysts say.

Besides affecting local economies in the oil patch, the rising price of oil raises tax revenues in producer states.

In Louisiana, officials counted on prices strengthening. Ralph Perlman, state budget director, said the 1987-88 budget is based on severance tax, bonus and royalty revenues of $850 million and oil priced at $20 a barrel. Oil traders and petroleum economists have said they expect the price of Louisiana Sweet crude to stay in the $20 range for the rest of the year, barring any upheaval in OPEC.

In New Mexico, every dollar above state budget-makers' $15 per barrel estimate of oil prices means an extra $3 million in revenue to the state.

"The biggest impact will be in terms of some unexpected increases in the state's general fund that comes from oil and gas taxes," said Brian McDonald, director of the University of New Mexico's Bureau of Business and Economic Research.

Beyond that, oil and gas severance taxes provide the bulk of funding for state capital projects through severance tax revenue bonds, he said. "With oil prices coming back to those kind of levels, the state should have additional bonding capacity for projects."

Economic numbers can be contested

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a tendency when interpreting the economy to judge by the numbers, since numbers are thought to be hard and fast and true, and therefore, it is often assumed, realistic, objective and incisive.

If the jobless rate drops one-tenth of 1 percent the economy is thought to be growing stronger. If the annualized rate of inflation rises a fraction of a point in a month the economy is that much nearer to instability.

While such assumptions are widely accepted, they are broadly contested, too. While they are convenient, it is agreed, some of the numbers seem to have lost their ability to provide a measure of activity and a sense of direction.

The jobless rate, for example, lies between 6.5 percent and 7 percent, a high level by historical standards. But employers in many areas of the country can't find workers to fill openings.

The Dow Jones industrial average, most popular of stock market indicators, soars to levels that, based on earnings and other fundamentals, seems to be unjustified and beyond the understanding of some financial analysts.

Judging from various indicators, including one of the lowest savings rates in decades, the consumer is without further energy to push the economy forward, but homes and automobiles continue to sell at strong, though weaker, levels.

There is confusion in the numbers, and if you don't think so just dip a bit more deeply into the instances already cited.

It was once a keystone of U.S. economic policy that when unemployment rose beyond 3.5 percent of the civilian work force the government's fiscal and monetary policies should become more expansive in order to create jobs.

Help-wanted ads demonstrate, however, that even at double that rate some employers cannot find suitable workers, even when they raise wages and benefits substantially. The old criterion seems dated.

Among popular explanations is that openings and seekers are geographically mismatched, that many industrial skills are outmoded in an economy that is more service-oriented and that growing numbers of young men and women lack job skills because of defects in education, training or personality.

Whatever, the old measures of unemployment no longer are as useful today — and in some instances are of little use — in reading the economy.

Nor is the Dow Jones average quite the indicator of the total market that it once was.

The Dow does measure accurately the performance of 30 blue chip stocks. But it suggests little about the performance of smaller and newer business, and little about the newer, technological and service companies.

Last week the industrial average hit its 48th new high of the year, after rising 153 points, or 3.5 percent, for the month of July. But, as analyst John Wright points out, none of the broader market averages kept pace.

AIDS hospital to be closed

HOUSTON (AP)—Losses of $8 million are forcing the nation's first AIDS hospital to close, leaving patients with the deadly disease worried over where they will go for treatment.

Some of the 350 patients at the Institute for Immunological Disorders say they will go to charitable hospitals or AIDS hospices once the institute closes within 12 months.

Officials of American Medical International, who manage the hospital, announced last week they were phasing out programs and services at the facility opened last September because of substantial losses caused mostly from providing indigent care.

Chris Kihnel said he has liked the care he has received as a patient at the institute. "The difference here is the kind of care you get, the compassion. They don't treat you like a leper," he said. "They treat you like you only have maybe only a short time to live."

Dr. Earl Shelp, from the Baylor College of Medicine and on the Clergy Council of AIDS, said he was saddened and angry the hospital is closing. "The sadness stems from the prospective loss of hope and research drugs to people who are fighting (AIDS) and the anger from the deceiving attitude with which people with AIDS are met in this city," he said.

"I really think that the city of Houston should hang its head in shame, that the research enterprise of competency and comprehensiveness that has been undertaken at the institute is jeopardized. We have the largest medical center in the world here in this city and to have AIDS research or research against disease which is probably the most threatening disease known to humanity totally removed from Houston is an embarrassment and a great source of sadness and shame."

Al Guy said now that the AIDS hospital is closing he has no idea where he will go for treatment since he has no insurance.

"Now if I get sick I'll have no where to go. If I have to go to Ben Taub (Hospital) or Jefferson Davis (Hospital), I'm not going to do it," Guy said of the two Harris County hospitals. "I will stay home and die first."

AIDS hospital spokeswoman Ann Wheeler said patients are being advised of the closing and being counseled on where to go.

"The patients are our primary concern. We began meeting with them and with their families to assure them that minimal disruption to their care will occur. Each patient will be assigned to someone to work with him or her to develop an individual plan for transition as necessary," she said.

The decision to close the hospital came after months of discussions between AMI and the University of Texas System, spokeswoman Carol White said.

When the facility in north Houston opened, AMI agreed to operate it and UT agreed to provide the physicians.

Houston hospital transplant center

HOUSTON (AP)—A local hospital was one of seven chosen nationwide and the only one in Texas as a Medicare heart transplant center by the Health Care Financing Administration, hospital officials said.

The Methodist Hospital now will qualify to perform Medicare-funded heart transplants, hospital spokeswoman Brenda Blake said.

"The Methodist Hospital is pleased to be the first hospital in Texas designated as a Medicare heart transplant center," Larry L. Mathis, the hospital's president and chief executive officer, said. "The designation recognizes our success as a multi-organ transplant center and will be extremely important for Medicare-eligible patients who need a lifesaving heart transplant."

Other facilities chosen to qualify for the Medicare-funded heart transplants include: Stanford University Medical Center, Johns Hopkins Medical Institutes, University of Virginia Medical Center, University of Minnesota, Loyola University Medical Center, and the University of Arizona Health Science Center.

Under the new guidelines, Medicare will cover the cost of heart transplants at selected hospitals across the country. To qualify, a hospital needs to demonstrate expertise and experience in heart transplantation and meet specific criteria success rates, officials said.

Newspapers planning audit

DALLAS (AP)—The Dallas Morning News and the Dallas Times Herald said they have reached agreement with the Audit Bureau of Circulations to allow the first official count of newspaper sales in the market since 1985.

The auditing process, routinely conducted by the ABC, was halted Nov. 11, 1986, when the Times Herald filed suit in federal court in Chicago against the Morning News and the ABC, which is based in Schaumburg, Ill.

The Times Herald accused the News of fraudulently inflating its circulation figures, a charge the News has denied, and the ABC of being negligent in releasing the News' circulation reports.

As part of the agreement, the Times Herald agreed to drop its claim for damages against the ABC.

Under the agreement, the ABC said it would attempt to finish by the end of the year audits for the year ended March 31, 1987, and for the six months ended Sept. 30, 1987.
