Trader loses shirt, shoots stockbrokers

By DAN SEWELL Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Brokers fatigued by a frantic week of trading during the stock market crash said they paid little attention to the familiar, friendly face of Arthur Kane, a longtime market player.

Kane, who reportedly lost millions in last week's plunge, walked into the manager's office Monday, and minutes later pulled a pistol from his briefcase and opened fire, killing the manager and wounding his broker before killing himself, police said.

"He had suffered some very serious losses in the stock market. He was distraught," said Marvin Hollub, father-in-law of the oldest of Kane's three daughters. "But other than that, there was no indication. When people lose money, they are upset.

Kane amassed a portfolio in the millions, The New York Times reported today. The New York Post, quoting an unidentified Merrill Lynch source, said Kane "had as much as $8 million invested" and that he "lost millions last week.

Police said Kane, a 53-year-old bespectacled Social Security Administation hearing examiner, was a near-daily visitor to the two-story Merrill Lynch offices in The Falls, a fashionable shopping center in southwest Dade County

"He was a nice man. He would come in nearly every day," said Marie Ros, a former junior broker at the office. "He knew the market. He liked to trade. You know, people get hooked on it."

Kane was a such a regular that he could come into the office when he pleased and sometimes staved after hours talking to the employees, she said.

Melvyn Cohen, a Merrill Lynch executive, said Kane was a regular customer, but that calling him a heavy trader would be "speculation right now.

Osvaldo Machado, a broker. said the brokers had been under pressure since the stock market made its dramatic, 508-point de-

'We were just trying to do our jobs," said Machado, 36. "It was just a normal day. Then I heard noise — gunshots.

A Merrill Lynch spokesman said the slain brokerage manager was Jose F. Argilagos, 51. The wounded stockbroker was Lloyd Kolokoff, 39, of Miami-

Both were local vice presidents. Kolokoff was flown by helicopter to Baptist Hospital, where he underwent surgery for a back wound, said hospital spokeswoman Adrianne Silver.

Homicide investigator Russell Fischer said the shooting took place with a .357-caliber Magnum handgun

Police said shots rang out about five minutes after Kane arrived. Witnesses said Argilagos' secretary Patricia Ward yelled: "He's got a gun. duck

Aaron Perry, a Profile Investments broker, said friends at Merrill Lynch told him Kane had received a margin call because of last week's crash

Dow climbs 62 points in heavy trading today

By JOYCE M. ROSENBERG AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Stock prices jumped higher in heavy trading on Wall Street today as the Dow Jones industrial average rose about 62 points, following earlier gains in Tokyo and Hong Kong.

The quick rise in prices in New York today contrasted sharply to Monday's pessimism, when the Dow suffered its second-largest point loss in history. Shortly after trading began, the Dow was up 83 points but slipped back an hour later to 62 points, which put it at about 1,856. Three stocks were rising in price for every one that

Wall Street got some good news today from Washington, where the government reported that orders to factories for "big ticket" durable goods rose 1.1 percent in September, the first increase since June.

And Democratic and Republican congressional leaders said they are optimistic that negotiations with the White House can cut the federal budget deficit, but they're concerned that the financial markets may expect too

Responding to a stronger showing in the financial markets today, bond prices opened sharply lower in domestic trading.

The U.S. government's bellwether 30-year issue was off about $18.75 per $1,000 in face value Its yield, which moves in the opposite direction of its price, had jumped to 9.07 percent.

The dollar failed to react to the overseas markets and continued to trade in a narrow range. The U.S. currency remained firm but slightly lower against the Japanese yen and West German mark in early New York deal-

The dollar was trading at 142.15 yen and 1.7730 West German marks shortly after trading recovering more than a third of Monday's drop of 111.1. By early afternoon, the closely watched index was down 5.6 points at 1678.5.

The Australian market con? tinued its downward plunge, dropping 7 percent by the close

On the Tokyo Stock Exchange, the 225-share Nikkei stock average, which lost 4.7 percent of its value on Monday, closed nearly 3 percent higher today.

Share prices on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange tumbled this morning but then recovered as the government and banks announced new measures to help prop up the market.

On the London Stock Exchange, the Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index was up 46.6 points at 1,730.7 at opening today. The rise recovered more than a third of Monday's drop of 111.1.

But the Australian market continued its downward plunge, dropping 7 percent by the close

On Monday, Wall Street stumbled, with the Dow Jones industrial average dropping another 156.83 points to 1,793.93. The decline, which represented 8.04 percent of the average's value, was the second-largest point drop ever, after the previous Monday's devastating 508-point, or

22.6 percent, selloff The value of U.S. stocks fell $203 billion to $2.23 trillion Monday, according to the Wilshire Associates 5,000 Equity Index of stocks traded on the New York and American stock exchanges and over the counter

The Dow drop helped to wipe out much of the average's nearly 290-point recovery of last Tuesday and Wednesday, and left Wall Street's best-known indicator only about 55 points above last Monday's close

"There's a spreading feeling of pessimism, which really didn't exist last week," said John D. Connolly, chairman of the investment committee at Dean Witter

Budget writers hunt revenue other than income tax

WASHINGTON (AP) - Any deficitreduction tax increase that Congress approves this year is likely to resemble bills already written by House and Senate committees, a Democratic-flavored stew that would take about $12 billion out of the economy without giving anybody heartburn.

One thing is certain: There will be no increase in individual income-tax rates, which are scheduled to drop again next year under the 1986 tax overhaul.

Because of President Reagan's unwavering opposition, the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee avoided even considering raising rates when they developed their competing revenueraising bills earlier this month.

Most other ways of raising taxes are at least open for discussion. But because both committees are controlled by Democrats, the final package probably will place most of any new tax burden on corporations and upper-income individuals

That is a trait common to the pending bills, the Ways and Means version, which would raise about $12 billion from next January through September, and the Finance Committee plan, which would bring in about $11.5 billion

Several provisions are in both bills, which will be the starting point as congressional and Reagan administration leaders try to negotiate a package of

For example, both would eliminate a major estate-tax break for the wealthy in last year's tax overhaul, allowing the treasury to take in about $1.3 billion more a year, and both would repeal a special accounting method favored by defense contractors, at a saving of $800

Some other provisions in one or both bills

Telephones: Both would extend for three years the expiring 3 percent tax on local and long-distance telephone

Estimated taxes: Both would tighten rules requiring corporations to pay more of their taxes in advance.

Investigators still frustrated in shooting and fire deaths

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

The Pampa Fire Marshal's Office is continuing to investigate the cause of a house fire that claimed the life of a 7-month-old boy three weeks ago.

Meanwhile, Pampa police can only sit and wait for lab test results they hope will lead them to the killer of a 37-year-old Pampa man found shot to death eight weeks ago. No arrests have been made in connection with either death, although the Fire Marshal's Office has said it is investigating the fatal blaze as an arson, and officials already have ruled the shooting death a homicide. Almost two weeks ago, the Fire Marshal's Office received a lab report indicating the presence of a flammable substance on the floor of a rent house at 607 Gordon Ave. A few hours after the blaze in the home, 7-month-old Justin Calfy died at Coronado Hospital from injuries sustained in the fire. Fire Marshal Tom Adams said today that since the lab report was received Oct. 15, investigators have been busy taking statements from witnesses and others that may be involved with the house fire. Adams returned to work on the case this week after a hospital stay "Maybe something will break pretty soon," he

American filmmakers killed in Afghanistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) -Two Americans shooting a documentary in Afghanistan were killed when government soldiers ambushed them and their guerrilla guides, sources said

U.S. diplomats in Pakistan identified them as Lee Shapiro, director of New Jersey-based Shapiro Media Productions, and James Landalos, a sound and camera man.

Diplomatic and guerrilla sources said a third American was believed to have been with them, but his fate was not known. A spokesman for the Hezb-i-Islami Moslem guerrillas said the group got word of the Americans' death in a rare radio report from insurgents near Kabul.

Qaribar Rehman Saeed said Hezb-i-Islami fighters had led the film team for five months through Afghanistan's northern provinces.

He said the ambush occurred near Paghman, a town west of Kabul which was the scene this summer of constant clashes between insurgents and the combined Soviet-Afghan forces.

Saeed said the radio report placed the attack around Oct. 11. The Americans' Hezb-i-Islami guide, Abdul Malik, was reportedly wounded but he has not reached the Pakistan border.

Unsafe buildings violate code

By BOB HART Pampa City Manager

The unsafe building abatement code is designed to protect the public safety and to promote the general welfare of the city.

The code requires buildings to have structural strength and stability. The code is designed to promote safety to life and property against fire and other hazards. This can be accomplished through alterations, repair, removal or demolition. Property can be declared unsafe for a number of reasons: The building has been damaged by fire, flood, wind or other cause to the extent that the structural integrity is in doubt. Because of decay or deterioration, the building is likely to collapse. Finally, if the building is unsanitary or a danger to human life, it can be declared unsafe. Those who have unsafe buildings and want them demolished can get the city's help by calling David McKinney, building official, at 665-8481. Or they can come by the Inspection Office at City Hall.

The Parks and Recreation Department will host the third-annual Halloween Parade and Party at 5:30 p.m. Saturday.

All pre-school- and elementary-age children are urged to wear their Halloween costumes and come join the fun. We will gather for the parade on the south lawn of the Lovett Memorial Library. A police escort will lead the children down Fos-

Sponsors this year are K mart, Wal-Mart, Domino's pizza and Coldwell Action Realty. We appreciate their concern in helping us provide a safe place for our children and look forward to sharing approximately one hour of enjoyment with them. In case of inclement weather, will will dispense with the parade and meet at the fire station for the party. The Lovett Memorial Library also will conduct a Halloween party for Storytime children at 10 a.m. Tuesday. The children may come in costume. The Storytime mothers are providing the treats. Halloween stories will be told and a Halloween movie shown. We expect 18 to 20 children at the party.

Gov. Bill Clements, his image tarnished by a record tax increase and an athletics pay-for-play scandal, received a 72 percent disapproval rating in a poll published today that showed he also fell from favor among many Re-

Of those Texans who have an opinion on Clements' performance, only 28 percent think he is doing a good or excellent job, the telephone survey conducted for the Dallas Morning News and the Houston Chronicle shows.

Sixty-one percent of Republicans who responded also gave Clements a poor or only fair rating.

Poll results were published in copyright stories in both newspapers.

The poll showed that Democratic Attorney General Jim Mattox, an expected candidate for governor in 1990, is well-known among voters. But the poll also showed his negative image to be higher than his fellow Democrats in the State Treasurer Ann Richards, another possible Democratic candidate for governor, is not as well-known as Mattox, but is more popular among those who know her, the poll suggests. Both of Texas' U.S. senators, Republican Phil Gramm and Democrat Lloyd

Bentsen, are well-known and well-liked, the poll shows. The telephone survey is based on interviews with 1,017 registered voters and has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points. It was conducted by political scientists Richard Murray and Kent L. Tedin of the University of Houston's Center for Public Policy on behalf of the two newspapers. Those surveyed were asked to rate the job performance of 11 national and state elected officials. Respondents were given a choice of rating their performance as excellent, good, only fair

Clements fared worst among politicians rated. Of the 95 percent who rated his performance, 4 percent said the Republican has done an excellent job since taking office in January and 24 percent said he was doing a good job.

"Gov. Clements was elected to solve problems, not to win popularity contests," his press secretary Reggie Bashur said. "When the problems are solved, the governor will be held in high esteem by the people of Texas."

Murray said responses suggest the public is angry at Clements because they feel he broke his pledge not to raise taxes and because of his involvement in the Southern Methodist University football scandal.

About 73 percent of those who had an opinion about Ms. Richards's performance indicated approval while Mattox scored a 56 percent approval rating in the poll, which was conducted from Oct. 11 to Oct. 20.

Reformers want alternatives to issuance of prison bonds

AUSTIN (AP) — The state should make a firm commitment to parole and probation instead of selling bonds to build more prisons, says a criminal justice reform group.

From the experience of other states ... it has become abundantly clear that you cannot build out of the overcrowding problem," said Executive Director Charles Sullivan of Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants at a Monday news con-

The group opposes a proposal on the Nov. 3 ballot to sell up to $500 million in general obligation bonds for prisons, youth corrections and mental healthmental retardation projects.

Supporters have said more prisons are needed to address a federal court order against crowding, but Sullivan said building new prisons is an ineffective way to reduce such crowding.

The state instead should use probation and parole, including such alternatives as community restitution, he said.

Lawmakers also should consider setting sentencing guidelines based on prison capacity, Sulli-

"We want the right ones in there (prison) and the right ones out.

If Amendment No. 8 authorizing general obligation bonds fails, the state can sell revenue bonds, which were authorized by the 1987 Legislature and did not require voter approval.

However, Texas must pay a higher interest rate on revenue bonds because they are not backed by the credit of the state.

But Sullivan said the defeat of Amendment No. 8 would send a message to state leaders that bonds should not be used for prisons at all.

" 'Pay as you go' has made Texas the national leader in financial responsibility, and should not be abandoned in hard economic times or because of high-powered pressure by private-prison lobbyists," he said.

It is estimated that the state would pay $940 million in bond obligations by the year 2008 for projects worth $500 million, said Sullivan.

Bond proceeds could be used to pay for newly authorized private prisons, as well as state-run

Sullivan said his group is not against the sale of bonds for youth corrections or mental healthmental retardation projects.

"What in effect they've done is covered this rotten apple with a lot of nice things like that," he said. "You can take a cow chip and you can perfume it and paint it and everything, but it's still a cow chip, and that's what this is.

more students are attending college in Texas this year than in 1986, a new survey shows.

The Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board released a survey Monday showing that enrollment at the state's 141 public and private institutions increased by almost 4 percent, or 29,726 students, to a total of 792,133.

Twenty-seven public universities reported combined increases of 11,026 students, while 10 others reported a combined loss of 1,594. Total enrollment at the 37 public institutions was 368,775, a 2.6 percent increase over 1986.

The coordinating board report said Prairie View A&M University had the largest percentage gain with 17.8 percent. Texas A&M reported the largest numerical increase, with 2,460 new stu-

Officials said the increase at Prairie View reversed a nearly decade-long trend.

Enrollment also was up at 40 of the 49 public junior college districts, with a net increase of 6.5 percent, or 19,811 students. Those institutions reported a combined enrollment of 321,896.

Among the state's public community colleges, Collin County Community College reported the largest percentage gain, at 29.7 percent, while the Alamo Community College District saw the largest numerical increase, with 3,322 more students.

Enrollment was up 1 percent, or 785 students, at the state's private, senior institutions, the coordinating board reported.

Twenty-two of those campuses reported combined increases of 2,208, while 16 schools reported combined decreases of 1,423.

A&M to store frozen tissue

COLLEGE STATION (AP) - Vials of frozen tissues and other genetic material from thousands of mammals will be stored at Texas A&M University, where they can be studied more closely, officials

"With such material, scientists can study many of the same questions we had before about the species, but looking at them from a molecular and genetic perspective," said Paisley Cato, co-leader

The Texas Cooperative Wildlife Collection, housed at Texas A&M, won a $39,000 grant from the National Science Foundation to set up a prototype for the storage of the frozen tissue, blood and cultures of mammals' cells, said Ms. Cato, a Texas A&M museum specialist.

Specimens from more than 50,000 mammals, ranging from rare bats to South American marsupials, are stored at A&M, along with an estimated 8,000 frozen tissue cultures from about 67,000 amphibians and reptiles

"We have the largest collection of vertebrates in Texas, the 10th largest university collection in the United States and about the third largest university collection west of the Mississippi River," Ms.

About one-third of the collection comes from Texas, another third from Mexico and about 20 percent of the animals come from Central and South America, she said. Fish and birds are also

"Frozen tissue and other materials that are preserved can help answer questions pertaining to the biological diversity of the natural world, the processes that result in new species or in extinction or the relationships between species," she said.

The grant won't be used for collecting specimens, but for cataloging and storing material already available in laboratories on campus where samples are in frozen storage at 80 to 120 degrees below zero Celsius

Slain officer's identity known, students say

MIDLOTHIAN (AP) — A district attorney said she plans to have one of two teen-agers suspected in the slaying of a police officer certified to stand trial as an adult, and will prosecute both teens on charges of capital murder.

'This is a very serious offense and I plan to prosecute it to the fullest extent of the law,' Ellis County District Attorney Mary Lou Shipley said Monday

The two Midlothian High School students, one age 16 and the other 17, were being held in the shooting death of police officer George William Raffield Jr., who was posing as a high school student while investigating drug use and sales.

Raffield, who authorities believe was killed after his identity was discovered, was found dead Saturday in a field eight miles south of Midlothian. He had been shot twice in the head with a .38-caliber revolver.

A juvenile hearing held Monday was closed to the media because of the minor involved. Ms. Shipley said authorities decided at the hearing to continue holding the 16-year-old at the Johnson County Juvenile Detention Center

A 23-year-old Midlothian woman was released from/Ellis County jail on bond. Shewas charged with hindering apprehension and prosecution, a Class A misdemeanor, Vaughn said.

Midlothian students said they had suspected Raffield, 21, was planted at the school as an undercover narcotics officer. Raffield had enrolled as William Moore, a high school

David Swindell, 18, a former student who said he was acquainted with Raffield, said it was obvious the officer was trying hard to be accepted as a peer.

But Texas Ranger George Turner said, "If anyone had known his cover was blown, he'd have been reassigned." Vaughn also said his department was not aware students had iden-

Turner, who was heading the investigation into the slaying, said his agency was looking into several unanswered questions, including whether an abandoned house known as a "satanist house" where some teen-agers allegedly gathered had any connection to Raffield's slaying.

Brown paper separates male, female prisoners Malley said more women AUSTIN (AP) — The female

inmate population at the Travis County Jail has tripled this year, forcing authorities to place some of the prisoners in the men's section of the jail, authorities say

Travis County Corrections chief Clyde Malley said Monday jail officers have taped brown paper over the women's cells so male inmates cannot see inside

But Malley said the brown paper, which officers put up about three months ago, poses security problems.

"The brown paper is a hazard to observation and supervision because we do not know what is going on behind the brown paper," Malley told The Daily Texan.

Texas jail standards say female prisoners must be "out of sight and sound" of male prisoners

Sheldon Ekland-Olson, a University of Texas associate professor of sociology and a criminology expert, said the jail uses the paper to prevent men from harassing the women and "to keep the noise levels down, more than anyand men are in jail because the slow economy is prompting them to commit more crimes. Nationwide, the female prison population is increasing rapidly, he said

But Sheriff's Department Lt. Pio Martinez said the female population may have risen because patrol officers are cracking down harder on females. We used to be more lenient with women," he said. "In the last couple of years, officers' attitudes have changed."

Martinez said he treats male and female offenders equally because women's rights have

"I do not feel any different about arresting women than arresting a man," he said.

Some of the women will relocate at the end of January, when a 48-bed facility opens at the Travis County Correctional Facility in Del Valle, Malley

"That would be the first sign of relief unless the arrest rate suddenly dropped, but it has been going up and up," Malley

Businessman pleads guilty to mail fraud BEAUMONT (AP) - A Southeast Texas businessman has pleaded guilty to mail fraud and conspiracy charges, admitting involvement in an elaborate fraud scheme designed to collect insurance money on quarterhorses During a brief hearing Monday before U.S. District Judge Howell Cobb, Michael E. McKinney, 30, of Nederland, pleaded guilty to one mail fraud count and two conspiracy to commit mail fraud counts. He had been indicted by a federal grand jury on on 66 counts of a 74-count indictment returned earlier this year. Cobb said he accepted McKinney's plea agreement but did not set a sentencing date. McKinney faces a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison and a $501,000 fine on the three charges

The 30-year-old McKinney still faces charges although lawyers in the case declined to elaborate what charges are pending citing Cobb's order Monday sealing the plea agreement between McKinney and federal prosecutors.

McKinney and co-defendant Port Arthur businessman Eric Marroquin face multiple charges in connection with the alleged scheme.

A federal grand jury June 8 returned charges against nine men, including McKinney.

Pull U.S. farmers from public trough

Last year, when the taxpayers were forced to pay $26 billion to the nation's farmers, many congressional observers were certain changes would be made. The size of the giveaway, which went mostly to the prosperous, not the poor, was so obscene that a host of reformers appeared ready to leap to the challenge.

This year, however, has come and mostly gone and talk of reform has barely reached the level of a whisper. Agricultural economist J.B. Penn forecasts no change this year, and probably none the next. Indeed, the only action thus far has been congressional approval of a $2.5-billion bailout of the farm credit system. You guessed it. Even more spending.

The farm crisis has mostly passed. So, too, perhaps, the chance for reform. Two years ago when many farmers had their backs to the wall, several farm lobbyists seemed willing to yield on efforts to reform the subsidy program. Congress failed to test that willingness then, and now that farm earnings are expected to reach record levels this year, it may be too late.

Bear in mind that more than half of some farmers' earnings are subsidies from the taxpayers. It is the third largest giveaway program, after Social Security and Medicare. That should be all the more reason to reach for reform; instead it is being treated as all the more reason to resist.

By forcing farmers into dependence on subsidies, the government has removed the incentives — and the rewards — of the free market. A partial remedy is offered in legislation by Sens. David Boren and Rudy Boschwitz, which would phase out many subsidies over a period of time.

In the meantime, the Oklahoma Democrat and Minnesota Republican want to "decouple" government subsidies from food production by paying farmers directly no matter how much, or how little, they grow. Many farmers would simply park their tractors. Others would not. And when the payments end, marketplace supply and demand should be ba-

The Reagan administration has adopted a similar stance, pushing to phase out all farm subsidies both in the United States and abroad — by the year 2000. That proposal will be on the table at the international trade negotiations in Geneva next year at the same time Congress begins working on a new five-year farm bill. Passage of the Boren-Boschwitz plan would set a fine example.

Berry's World TAMMY, MAYBE THIS IS JUST A DREAM. OR MAYBE -JUST MAYBE WE'VE COME HOME AGAIN

Medicare costs need control

enemies it makes. When the Reagan administration recently floated an idea for containing Medicare costs, it was heartening to learn that the proposal had immediately won the enmity of the American Medical Association, the chief trade association for the nation's physicians. Not all cost-containment policies that offend the AMA are good, but any policy that doesn't invites skepticism.

The scheme opposed here is an admirable attempt to inject competition into the Medicare program by encouraging recipients to patronize low-cost doctors and avoid expensive ones. The Health Care Financing Administration, which runs Medicare, has noticed that some physicians are more inclined than others to order tests, perform expensive procedures and admit patients to hospitals. It thinks it can reap economies by favoring doctors who, as administrator Dr. William Roper told The New York Times, "have a proven track record of providing appropriate medical care without unnecessary utilization of services.'

The system would work as follows. The government would draw up a light of "preferred providers," who would agree not to charge Medicare patients more than specified fees for particular services. Patients who use these doctors would get discounts from Medicare. Those who don't would be free to go elsewhere, but they would get no discount and could be charged more by their doctors. Both doctors and patients thus would have a new incentive to avoid unnecessary expenses

Distinguishing physicians who engage in unjustified overtreatment from the others isn't always easy, but the effort ought to be made. It is no secret in the medical community that types and costs of care for various ailments vary widely among doctors. If extra treatment and expense yielded healthier patients, it would be easy to rationalize. But experts suggest that more care isn't necessarily better care.

The need to control the growing cost of Medicare is, however, beyond doubt. It cost $74 billion last year, up fivefold from 1975, and its trust fund is expected to run out of money by the end of the century. Medicare is one reason that health care absorbs nearly 11 percent of the gross national product, a figure that continues to rise each year.

The proposal is only a trial balloon at this point. But the AMA wasted no time objecting. 'It is totally inappropriate for the government to use economic incentives to force patients into a mode of health care they would not otherwise have chosen for themselves," said James Todd, its deputy executive vice president. "We will be very unhappy if we perceive the government using its market muscle to coerce physicians or patients.

This attitude is a little hard to take coming from an organization that for decades was happy for the government to use its legal muscle to numbers. But why is it inappropriate for the government to use economic incentives to re- can't be the government's chief priority.

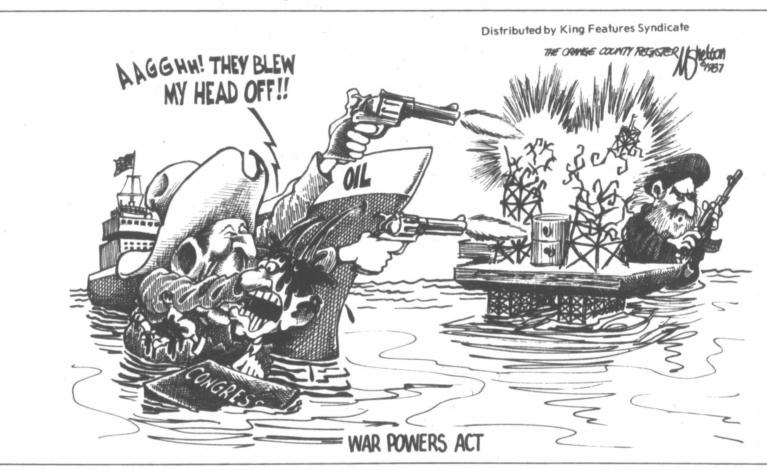

duce its costs? Why should doctors who are in business for a profit be exempt from the normal rules of the capitalist system?

Don't forget that patients are still at liberty to make their own decisions about the type of care they want. The only catch is that they would have to shoulder more of the cost when their decisions are unduly expensive - just like people covered by preferred provider organizations in the private sector. The message to Medicare recipients is simple and reasonable: You may get whatever care you want, but you may not require society to pay the full cost

The whole idea here is to take advantage of the government's position as the biggest single purchaser of medical care to bargain for lower fees — just as many large corporations do. Taxpayers can no longer justify policies that in the past decade have allowed doctors' fees to rise 27 percent faster than the inflation rate.

There is every reason to expect the effort will work, if the administration can persuade Congress to go along. The AMA says that about 30 percent of the average doctor's income comes from Medicare, which works out to $33,900 a year. Not many doctors can afford to walk away from such a big chunk of their business. The AMA acknowledges that few doctors stopped treating Medicare patients when the government put a two-year freeze on fees.

Like any large government effort, this one carries dangers of abuse and mismanagement. But the growing expense of Medicare leaves little choice but to give it a try. The point is not to penalize doctors, but merely to subject them to the same competitive forces that constrain everyone else in a market economy. In providkeep doctors' incomes high by restricting their ing medical care to the elderly, doctors are essential, but ensuring the prosperity of doctors

Nature keeps plane at the gate

I'm always goofing up when I fly. Sometimes, I forget to bring my seat back to its original locked and upright position for takeoff and land-

Probably the worst thing I do when I fly, however, is in the unlikely event there is a loss of cabin pressure, I don't breathe normally when I place the oxygen mask over my head and face. I breathe like Secretariat down the stretch.

The other day, I goofed up something new. I boarded my flight a few minutes before it was scheduled to take off.

When it came time to push back from the gate, however, the plane just sat there. The last time an airplane pushed back from the gate on time was when Wilbur and Orville lugged their flying contraption out of their workshed in Kitty Hawk

I'm not sure why my flight didn't push back on time. Perhaps the pilot wasn't in the mood or one of the flight attendants had broken a nail. We can send a man to the moon, but we can't figure out how to get the 3:13 flight to Kansas City in the air before 5:30. After sitting in my unmoving seat for nearly an hour, I had to go to the bathroom. Bad timing has been my entire life story.

She even showed me a computer printout of the dictum.

Certainly the flight attendant was just doing her job, but I had to wonder is it really all that important that a flight is held up a few more seconds because a paying customer has to go to the bathroom in light of the horrendous on-time performance of the airlines and the fact that airplanes are coming closer and closer to running into each other at 30,000 feet.

Where could all this lead to? Do we have to start raising our hands to go to the bathroom while the plane is on the ground? 'OK, 14B," the flight attendant might say, you can be excused but make it snappy. Some things can't be accomplished snappily, especially if there is pressure that one might hold up an entire L-1011. Of course something like this does give the airlines another excuse for being late. 'Sorry, folks,' the pilot could say. "We could have been on time if 14B had remembered to go

Groups focus efforts against Contra aid

By Robert Walters

LONG BEACH, N.Y. (NEA) - Despite the blustery autumn weather, scores of people pause at a shopping center here to protest this country's military involvement in Central

"Vote no on contra aid" or "vote against contra aid," implore many of the brief but pointed letters they write to Rep. Raymond J. McGrath, R-N.Y., whose House district includes Long Beach and other communities on Long Island.

Other notes destined for McGrath are even more forceful: "If you vote for contra aid, I will not vote for you." Soliciting those letters is an unlikely trio - a college student, a high school principal and an elderly widow operating under the banner of Neighbor to Neighbor. That organization promotes letter-writing campaigns aimed at a dozen members of the House and Senate from throughout the country. Although shoppers at the Long Beach Plaza are asked to write a letter to McGrath rather than merely sign a petition, the response rate is strikingly high. Within a few hours, dozens of passersby have penned notes that Neighbor to Neighbor later will mail to McGrath

The representative has been targeted as a likely swing vote on the issue because he is a centrist, non-ideological Republican. Last spring, he voted against providing financial assistance to the Nicaraguan contras after consistently supporting contra aid in earlier votes.

The objects of Neighbor to Neighbor's current grass-roots lobbying efforts are two representatives apiece in Oklahoma, Michigan and New York and one each in Maine, Nevada and Hawaii, as well as senators from Kansas, Illinois and Maine.

With a paid staff of 70 (30 at its San Francisco headquarters and 40 field organizers) Neighbor to Neighbor has become a major participant in the debate over contra aid. "We're now able to conduct sophisticated campaigns in many congressional districts at the same time," says spokeswoman Kit Miller. "That's a far cry from holding meetings in church basements and handing out leaflets on street corners.

Raising money through direct mail, a telephone bank and a major donor program, the organization has collected about three-fourths of the $1 million budgeted for its efforts before the expected congressional votes on contra aid in November.

Neighbor to Neighbor is hardly alone in its campaign to convince Congress to reject President Reagan's proposal to provide another $270 million to the resistance forces seeking to overthrow Nicaragua's government

Other groups seeking to sway public opinion against contra aid include Countdown '87, Citizen Action, Witness for Peace, Nicaragua Network and Coalition for a New Foreign Policy

On the other side of the issue are a handful of pro-contra groups, but their efforts lack the grass-roots support enjoyed by Reagan's critics

Indeed, the president's efforts appear doomed to failure, in great measure because his strategy is funda-mentally flawed. The Marxist orientation of Nicaragua's government is indisputable, but Reagan's response is unconscionable

He insists upon promoting a military solution without even exploring economic, diplomatic or other responses. Moreover, the contras have neither a serious commitment to democracy nor support from the people they are supposed to be rescuing. They are a mercenary force recruited and trained by the CIA, then propped up by ceaseless financial infusions from this country.

"It's about time we spoke up about the situation," says Katherine Pechenik, who joined other Long Beach residents in availing themselves of the opportunity to urge their repre-sentative to reject the unworkable scheme.

ll Iranian imports, sensitive exports banned

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan is tightening the economic screws on Iran, ordering a ban on all U.S. imports a week after American naval forces retaliated for a missile attack against a U.S.-flagged tanker.

"The measures I am initiating are a direct result of the Iranian government's own actions, including its unprovoked attacks on U.S. forces and U.S. merchant vessels," Reagan said.

The president on Monday directed the State and Treasury departments to institute an outright ban on imports and a partial ban on exports, applying essentially to products with possible military

The measures were announced a week after Reagan ordered U.S. Navy destroyers to bombard an oil platform used by Iran for military purposes, in reprisal for a Silkworm missile attack on a U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti oil vessel.

The economic sanctions, Reagan said, "don't reflect any quarrel with the Iranian people." Instead, he cited the Iranian government's "refusal to implement U.N. Security Council Resolution 598, its continued aggression against non-belligerent nations of the Persian Gulf and its sponsorship of terrorism there and elsewhere in the

The ban on imports will take effect as soon as possible, he said, adding that the additional export controls "will go into effect in a week to 10 days.

Oil imports from Iran last year totaled around $500 million, but had reached about $900 million through the first seven months of this year

According to the Energy Department's "Monthly Energy Review," Iranian oil in 1986 accounted for 0.31 percent of U.S. oil imports. For the first seven months of 1987, the percentage

But, according to a White House fact sheet, oil earnings to Iran from crude oil imported by the United States is estimated to total over $1 billion from Jan. 1 though July 30 of this year.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said he hoped other countries would follow the U.S. lead and embargo Iranian oil, causing a drop in the price of Iranian oil and in revenue for the purchase

"Maybe it will be catching," Shultz said on the PBS program, "McNeil-Lehrer NewsHour.

Shultz acknowledged that it would be difficult to enforce an embargo, since the origin of oil on world markets is hard to trace.

Non-petroleum imports include pistachio nuts, carpets and caviar. In 1986 non-petroleum imports were valued at around $100 million, White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk said. "We expect that number would have declined by 25 percent in 1987, even with no trade controls in place," he said.

Total U.S. exports to Iran amounted to roughly $34 million. Popadiuk said "that number is declining in 1987. Those U.S. exports covered by the new controls amount to less than $10 million.'

Among the U.S. products that were put on the list of banned export items are: mobile communications equipment; boats, including inflatable rafts; off-highway tractors; large diesel engines; non-strategic aircraft parts and components: and portable electric generators.

Reagan still calling stock market plunge 'corrective change'

dent Reagan is persisting in char- main said. acterizing the stock market plunge as a correction despite another steep tumble in the Dow

Jones industrial average. Reagan, in an interview with foreign television correspondents, said the 157-point plunge in the Dow on Monday — 8.4 percent of its value — simply may have been a case in which "the market overpriced itself and is now making a corrective change.

On the previous Monday, when the Dow plunged 22.6 percent of its value in the worst one-day drop since 1914, Reagan said it must have been "some kind of correction" and speculated that the panic had been triggered by people who saw "a chance to grab

"Profit-taking" and "correction" are terms used by investors to described a downward swing in a generally rising market. The Dow has lost about a third of its value since its peak in late August and investors have lost about $1

In other developments Monday

House Banking Committee Chairman Rep. Ferdnand J. St Germain, D-R.I., said he intended to look into why the government-owned Continental Illinois Corp. was permitted to become a major lender to stock options traders in Chicago.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., the agency that insures deposits in commercial banks, rescued Continental in 1984 in the largest-ever government bank bailout and still holds about 60 percent of its stock. The bank announced on Monday that it may report a moderate loss in the fourth quarter because of a special provision of about $90 million for large losses suffered in the market plunge by a subsidiary, First Options of Chicago Inc.

"We intend to find out what the rationale is for allowing the holding company to leap off into this

Meanhile, he said his committee will meet in private on Thursday to hear from New York Stock Exchange Chairman John Phelan.

■ The Securities and Exchange Commission issued a statement in support of the exchange's decision to close two hours early for the rest of the week. In response to extraordinarily heavy volume, the exchange curtailed trading hours Friday and Monday and had previously announced an early closing for today.

Reagan also said remarks by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, which some analysts say contributed to the market's fall, were misunderstood.

Baker had expressed unhappiness at West Germany's increase in interest rates and had said that unless it loosened credit conditions, the U.S. might have to allow further devaluation of the dollar. Some analysts suggested that Baker's comment fanned market fears that interest rates would go higher.

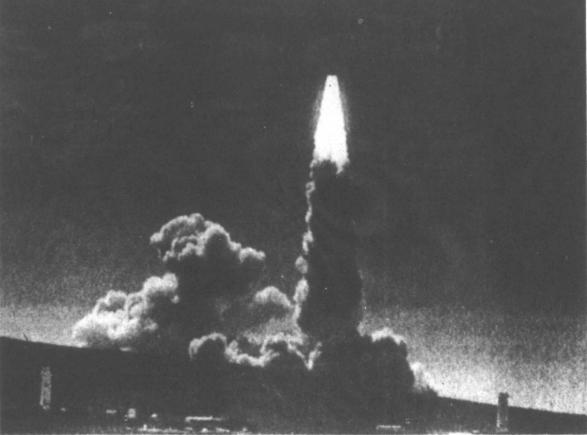

Reagan said he and Baker both support the Louvre agreement, reached last February in Paris, in which the seven major industrial countries agreed to keep the level of the dollar stable.

Reagan was interviewed after he met with Democratic and Republican leaders of Congress to set the framework for deficitreduction talks. Both sides agreed to a news blackout and a truce on criticism of each other, said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater

Despite the truce, Reagan again blamed Congress for huge deficits.

"I set out to try and eliminate the deficit when I first came here, but unfortunately the Congress has the last word about spending money and they have been more willing to spend than I would have been." he said.

Reagan took office promising a balanced budget but has never submitted one to Congress.

Titan 34D launched Monday, said to carry spy satellite

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) -The first successful launch of a Titan 34D, reportedly carrying a spy satellite, after two failures in two years is of "tremendous significance" to America's return to space, says the secretary of the Air Force.

The nation's most powerful unmanned rocket. bearing what the Air Force would describe only as a classified payload, lifted off at 1:32 p.m Monday.

If the payload were a spy satellite, the launch would make a major contribution to the U.S. capa bility for monitoring Soviet compliance with arms treaties, civilian experts said.

A successful launch would mean "we're out of the woods in terms of the threat of being blinded in space," John Pike, a space policy expert for the Federation of American Scientists in Washington, said before liftoff.

Air Force Secretary Edward C. Aldridge said the launch was of "tremendous significance to the nation's space program" because it "allows us to resume launching critical national security payloads on a regular basis.

The launch was the first of a Titan 34D since April 18, 1986, when one of the rockets blew up on liftoff from this base 170 miles northwest of Los Angeles. Another Titan 34D and its cargo were destroyed after launch from Vandenberg on Aug. 28, 1985

The Titan 34D consists of a 161-foot-tall liquidfueled "core" vehicle and two 96-foot solid-fuel booster rockets

The Air Force blamed the first Titan disaster on a massive leak of oxidizer, a chemical that enables fuel to burn, and pump failure. The second failure occurred when one of the solid-fuel boosters ruptured, setting off a giant blast just above the laun-

The failures were among a series of setbacks, including the Jan. 28, 1986, Challenger disaster that killed the shuttle's seven-member crew.

Pike, who had advance word of the launch, said the Titan 34D would most likely carry a top-secret KH-11 photoreconnaissance satellite, but might carry an advance model of the "Jumpseat" eavesdropping satellite

The United States has had only one photoreconnaissance satellite, also a KH-11, in orbit to monitor Soviet military activities since another KH-11 was deactivated in August 1985. But that satellite is nearing the end of its three-year lifespan, Pike

"Ever since August 1985, we've been in a position that could have been very critical if the remaining satellite up there failed," he added. "We would no longer have our eyes in space. We wouldn't be deaf (because eavesdropping satellites are in orbit), but we would be blind. The 1986 Titan disaster probably destroyed a KH-11 meant to replace the one deactivated in 1985, Pike and others have said. The cargo of the Titan lost in 1985 was a KH-9 "Big Bird" photoreconnaissance satellite, they said.

If the latest Titan 34D carried a KH-11, it was the last one, an engineering test model that was refurbished for flight, Pike said

The Air Force also has a more advanced KH-12 photoreconnaissance satellite. But Pike said that model is so heavy it can be launched only on space

Jury is ready to hear case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of jurors who were questioned about whether they thought President Reagan was doing enough for the poor will decide the perjury case against former presidential aide Michael K. Deaver.

against Deaver

Nine women and seven men were selected Monday to serve as jurors and alternates on the sixth day of jury selection.

In the days preceding final selection of the panel, prospective juors were asked about their views toward President Reagan and whether any negative feelings would affect their ability to judge Deaver impartially.

Opening statements were scheduled to be made today after the jury was formally installed and U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson ruled on several pending pre-trial motions.

Deaver, a close friend of the president and his former deputy White House chief of staff, is charged with lying to a grand jury and a House subcommittee about his lobbying business.

Independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr. is trying to prove that Deaver lied under oath to protect the lucrative lobbying business that he formed after leaving the White House in May,

Seymour contends that Deaver lied about contacts with former Reagan administration officials to conceal possible violations of federal ethics law.

Truthful answers to questions about his lobbying efforts could have endangered Deaver's plans to sell his public relations business for $18 million to a London firm, Seymour has contended in court papers.

Deaver's defense lawyers have argued that their client's memory was so clouded by alcoholism that he was not lying when he testified he couldn't recall a series of contacts on behalf of lobbying clients Jackson, meanwhile, refused to grant a Justice Department request that he reprimand Seymour for trying to persuade the Canadian government to let its ambassador here testify as a prosecution witness

Seymour's Oct. 2 letter to an. attorney representing the Canadian Embassy provoked a diplomatic protest from Canada.

In the letter, Seymour said Ambassador Allan Gotlieb's refusal to testify would force him to highlight at the trial the "unlawful acts engaged in by Deaver' when he was working as a lobbyist for Canada.

Soviets, U.S. have 15,000 nukes at sea

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States and Soviet Union are engaged in an "arms race at sea" that has given the navies of the two superpowers almost 15,000 nuclear warheads and bombs, a private analyst said today.

While the navies of England, France and China now have about 700 nuclear warheads and bombs combined, "in just the past decade the two superpowers have added over 2,500 nuclear warheads to their naval arsenals. deploying new ballistic missiles. cruise missiles, torpedoes and bombs," according to William Arkin.

Reagan insists Soviet stance not setback

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan says he is not ruling out the possibility of a superpower summit and does not regard Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's refusal to set a date as a serious diplomatic setback.

While playing down the impact of Gorbachev's move, Reagan hinted Monday at some flexibility on his Star Wars missile defense plan, or Strategic Defense Initiative, which the Soviets say should be curtailed.

"There may be some maneuvering on deployment and so forth but not to the extent of making that a bargaining chip in which we would give up SDI in return for something they might give up on their side. We can't do that," Reagan said.

As the weaponry increases, he adds, more ships operate at a 'wartime tempo'' during peacetime and more allied countries are drawn into supporting "the naval nuclearized competition between the superpowers.

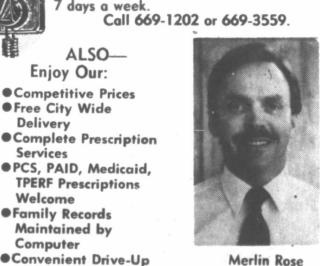

As a result, "today there are no constraints on naval nuclear weapons or operations; no restrictions on the carriage of nuclear weapons or the operations of nuclear propulsion reactors; no prohibited zones for surveillance, steaming or exercises; no outlawed maneuvers or harassment techniques; no geographic restraints; and no proscribed strategies or doctrines.

Canadian groups protest U.S. missile test

TORONTO (AP) - Opposition parties, environmental groups and peace activists are protesting a planned U.S. cruise missile test today over subarctic regions of northern Canada.

Both parliamentary opposition parties, the Liberals and socialist New Democrats, argued in Ottawa Monday that the testing should stop since the United States and Soviet Union reached a tentative agreement last month on eliminating medium- and shorter-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

But the Conservative government of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said the tests are consistent with Canada's commitment to the NATO alliance and would go ahead.

Canada agreed in 1983 to permit cruise tests in its vast subarctic regions, which have terrain similar to the northern Soviet Union. At the time, NATO was beginning to deploy groundlaunched cruise missiles and mediumrange Pershing 2 ballistic missiles in Europe to counter a buildup of Soviet

Under the agreement, the U.S. Air Force can conduct six air-launched flights of the cruise missile a year over Canadian territory, as well as one "captive-carry" test, in which the cruise remains attached to a B-52 bomber.

Today's test, the last scheduled in 1987, is a captive-carry from the Beaufort Sea in the Arctic south about 1,550 miles to the Primrose Lake weapons-testing range in northeastern Alberta, near Cold Lake Canadian Forces base.

Past tests have angered Inuit and Indian natives in Canada's Northwest Territories, who say the noise and accident potential could damage their wilderness environment. They say the tests could make them targets of Soviet

Because of native complaints, the route has been changed from any populated areas, according to Maj. Jan Martinsen, a Cold Lake spokesman.

The three-hour, low-altitude test flight will be monitored by five new radar installations in the Arctic, part of the $912 million North Warning System.

There have been eight previous tests in Canada, but the operation was suspended for 12 months in 1986 after a series of embarrassing failures. One missile accidentally dropped onto pack ice in the Beaufort Sea and another went off course near Primrose Lake.

"Under what conditions would the Canadian government agree to stop the cruise testing?" asked Bill Blaikie, foreign affairs spokesman for the New Democratic Party, on Monday. The party wants Canada to withdraw from NATO and Canada's aerospace defense agreement with the United States.

Blaikie claimed the Conservatives pledged to halt the tests once the United States and Soviet Union made progress on eliminating intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

He accused the government of "forever moving the goal posts back.

Speaking for the government, Trade Minister Pat Carney said Moscow was only negotiating arms reductions in earnest because the NATO partners continued to live up to their defense commitments.

Secretary of State George Shultz said over the weekend that although Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is not ready for a summit in Washington, the medium-range missile pact may be signed soon.

The Canadian anti-nuclear group Operation Dismantle accused the government of "active participation in the arms race," while the Toronto Disarmament Network said it was outrageous to continue testing just when a treaty is about to be ratified.

Steve Shallhorn, of the environmentalist group Greenpeace Canada, said the test may involve a more advanced cruise missile

Official: No discrimination against Chinese intellectuals

BEIJING (AP) - Top science officials today denied the government is making life difficult for intellectuals and criticized the United States for limiting the sale of high technology to China.

There is no such thing as discrimination against scientists in China," said Song Jiam, the Science and Technology Commission minister, at a news conference held in conjunction with the 13th National Communist Party Congress.

Nearly 2,000 delegates attending the party congress, the first in five years, met today behind closed doors. They were discussing a work report presented Sunday by Zhao Ziyang, the Chinese premier and acting party chief

The keynote speech committed China to senior leader Deng Xiaoping's economic and political reforms until the middle of the next century

Since China embarked on its policy of pragmatic reform in 1978, the government has "advocated the respect of talented people and knowledge so as to bring about the atmosphere and environment which is favorable for the scientists ... to play their role," Song said.

Vice Minister Zhu Lilan said the U.S. decision last week to limit its consideration of high tech

Police on alert as South Koreans vote on constitutional referendum

 $SEOUL, South \, Korea\, (AP) - Thousands \, of \, police$ were on high alert at polling places today as South Koreans voted on a new constitution that would usher in sweeping democratic reforms.

The government said radical students might try to disrupt voting by attacking polling stations. Some dissidents urged a boycott of the referendum and called for the immediate overthrow of the government. But no violence was reported this

The Central Election Management Committee reported a relatively light turnout during the first hours of voting, but the referendum was expected to pass by an overwhelming vote.

'Our long awaited aspirations are about to come true with this referendum," said businessman Chung Sung-nam as he cast his vote in Seoul. "I hope this will open the way for democracy.'

The constitution, which would be the ninth since the nation was formed in 1948, would institute direct presidential elections, reduce executive power and enhance parliamentary and judicial au-

The government bowed to opposition demands for broad democratic reforms after huge protests against its authoritarian rule during the summer. The new constitution legalizes the reforms.

The main change in the new constitution is the introduction of direct presidential elections. Many

Koreans contended the old electoral college sys tem favored the government and encouraged vote

Korean political observers said this morning's turnout might be light because voters assumed the constitution would be easily approved

For the constitution to pass, at least 50 percent of the country's 25.6 million eligible voters have to take part in the referendum and at least half must vote for the constitution.

National Police Headquarters placed 120,000 police officers on top alert across the country to guard against attempts to disrupt voting. Police were posted at all of the country's 13,634 polling stations and around college campuses.

Kim Young-sam, an opposition leader who voted near his Seoul home, had no doubt the new document would become law. 'The new constitution will be adopted with the people's overwhelming support because it provides for direct presidential elections so ardently desired by the people," he said.

A date for the first direct presidential election in 16 years was to be set after the constitution was approved. Elections are expected to be held in mid-December.

President Chun Doo-hwan and his wife Lee Soonja were among the first to vote, going to a polling station near the Blue House presidential mansion

Prosecutor: No trial planned for deported Nazi

LUDWIGSBURG, West Germany (AP) - The chief prosecutor of Nazi war crimes in West Germany today ruled out a trial for Reinhold Kulle, who was deported from the United States after lying about his Nazi past.

Kulle was accused of hiding his Nazi activities when he entered the United States 30 years ago. The 66-year-old former custodian, who was living in the Chicago area, was deported Monday to West Germany after a U.S. Supreme Court justice refused his emergency appeal

Alfred Streim, the chief Nazi crimes prosecutor, said officials had conducted a preliminary investigation on Kulle

'However, there were no indications of a crime that still can be prosecuted," Streim told The Associated Press in a telephone interview

Under West German law, suspected Nazi criminals can only be prosecuted for murder, because the statute of limitations has elapsed for other crimes.

It was not immediately known where Kulle was heading after his arrival in West Germany. He was born in Silesia in what is now Poland.

A secretary who answered the telephone at the Justice Ministry in Bonn said spokesman Henning Gehl was in a meeting.

Kulle, a West German citizen, was taken into custody Friday at his home in Brookfield, Ill. and held over the weekend at the U.S. Metropolitan Correctional Center, said Kulle's lawyer, Charles Nixon.

Kulle was accused of lying on his 1957 immigration application by failing to note he had served in a Waffen SS unit as a guard at a Nazi slave labor camp during World War II.

"We regret very much" the decision, she said.

His widow sued General Dynamics, and a federal court in Tampa, Fla., last April found the company guilty of negligence and awarded her $3.1 million. Mrs. Harduvel contended during the trial that the crash was caused by electrical malfunc-tions in the plane. 'The finding in this court case and the evidence introduced at the trial raise the most serious questions about the F-16 program," said Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the subcommittee.

General Dynamics is appealing the court ruling and thus declined to appear at the hearing or discuss the case, said Proxmire.

Al Spivak, a spokesman for General Dynamics, confirmed that the company declined to testify because the case was still in litigation.

As for the crash, Spivak said, "Obviously, we disagree. Mrs. Harduvel's case is based on speculation, not fact. General Dynamics continues to believe that the cause of the accident was pilot disorientation and not aircraft systems failure."

Air Force Lt. Gen. George Monahan Jr. also defended the plane as he appeared before the subfics of the Harduvel crash.

"The F-16, with all its combat capability, remains the safest single engine fighter in American history," he said. "The F-16 has met all performance requirements and has been more reliable and safer than anticipated.'

The single-engine plane first entered the Air Force in 1978 and the service has now purchased 1,200 and plans to buy more. In addition, the jet has and 28 pilots killed, according to figures provided the subcommittee by the Air Force. Each accident was exhaustively investigated, Monahan said. "We have never judged that an accident was caused by electrical wire chafing," said Monahan, although he said there have been "incidents." - Any electrical problems that would occur on the plane could be extremely serious because the F-16 wire chafing, Mrs. Harduvel told the panel. The company even decided to make a videotape warning repair specialists about the problem eight months before Harduvel's plane crashed in South Korea, she said.

Her husband was "the best of the best, a fighter pilot's fighter pilot," she said. He was well qualified and thus, she said, she didn't believe the Air Force when its investigation concluded that pilot error was the reason for the crash.

"The truth is that that F-16 was defective; it was defectively designed and manufactured and, what is even worse, General Dynamics knew it was defective and it failed to warn the Air Force or my husband that it could kill him," she said.

Will the real author please stand?

DEAR READERS: Is plagiarism really the best form of flattery? In any case, it's nothing new. Montaigne, the 16thcentury French essayist, had this to say about "borrowing" literary quotables: "I have gathered a bouquet of other men's flowers, and only the ribbon that binds them is my own.

A reader signed "Going Crazy in Reno" sent the poem that began "Do not stand at my grave and weep," and asked me to help her find the author. I printed her letter, and more 'authors" surfaced than I can mention here. For example:

DEAR ABBY: A very good friend of mine sent me your column from The Patriot Ledger in Quincy, Mass. May I modestly state that I am the author of the poem in question. I am 77 years old and have been a poet and journalist for the last 35 years. I wrote that poem in 1978 and titled it "Afterwards." John Wayne requested in his will that my poem be read at his graveside. I do hope that this will clear up the mystery of the origin of that poem.

NEAL S. TOOMEY, LOWELL, MASS.

DEAR ABBY: The poem sent to you by "Going Crazy in Reno" was written by me in 1971 while on an extended holiday in America. I gave it to the president of the Reno Chamber of Commerce while visiting Nevada. That poem was tentatively named "A Clown's Eulogy." Needless to say, I am amazed that my work was used in the manner you have stated, and also very pleased that I have left something behind me besides bones.

WILLIAM ARTUS. VANCOUVER ISLAND, BRITISH COLUMBIA

DEAR ABBY: In regards to the poem sent in by "Going Crazy in I Am There," and I am the author. I composed the poem at Mr. Wayne's request in 1977. Yours in life. ROBERTA BRAUN

DEAR ABBY: The poem "Do not stand at my grave" was written by Father Joseph Mohr of Obernsdorf, Austria, in 1819 when his brother, Elbert Mohr, was laid to rest. This beautiful poem was also read at another Mohr family member's funeral in Nuremburg, Germany, in 1899, and has become a popular eulogy since then. I am a greatgrandnephew of the author, who also wrote "Stille Nacht" (Silent Night).

Nearly half of Americans own VCR's, camcorders

By BARBARA MAYER AP Newsfeatures

According to the Electronic Industries Association, video cassette recorders will be found in almost half of all U.S. homes by the end of 1987.

By the end of the year, the trade association also claims, as many as 2 million camcorders (which permit owners to create their own video programs) will have been sold. Since the products were introduced only four years ago, the growth in sales indicates an unusually rapid acceptance of a new product category, according to industry authorities.

What seems even more surprising is that the new video products are registering impressive sales despite the fact that using them is more involved than just turning a knob or pressing a button.

Two booklets, "How to Buy, Use and Care for VCR's, Cameras and Tape" and "The Maxell Video Tape Handbook'' discuss some of the issues involved in selecting video equipment and software for home use.

Guidance is likely to be helpful to many consumers since the technical language used to compare features can make it difficult for the uninitiated to choose which model to buy. But, regardless of terms, making the right choice still comes down to thinking about how you will use the equipment and then buying only what you need, according to several authorities.

While many people like to own the latest models, in this field equipment improvements sometimes occur before the industry has progressed to the point of being able to make use of them, according to Jerry Ganelli, consumer marketing manager for Maxell Corp. of America, a manufacturer of blank videotape.

For example, he said, a new development in hardware known as Super VHS, introduced to retailers at a recent trade show, makes a high-resolution picture possible, but broadcasting has generally not yet developed to the point where pictures of that caliber are being sent over the airwaves.

Another special feature available with VCRs - high fidelity stereo sound — is useful to those with external stereo speakers or a stereo television set, but not to those who have only a conventional television set equipped with only a single speaker.

Buying a VCR with four or six heads, instead of two, adds from about $100 to $200 to the cost. Since the VCR needs only two heads to operate, the others are for special effects or to record in extended-play modes, which slow the speed of the tape to provide four to six hours of pre-recording time off a cassette that normally delivers two hours of recording

Since two-head VCRs will also play at slower speeds and most VCR owners will tape programs for later viewing and watch rented movies (known as time shifting), according to Ganelli, they probably do not need the extra four heads. "Many people use the special effects heads once and then never again," he said.

He pointed out that surveys indicate soap operas are the most frequently taped programs.

Those who receive cable signals should be sure to purchase one of the VCRs that receives cable channels.

If you buy one that receives only the standard channels, it will limit the VCR's flexibility. If the cable service requires a converter box, the hookup between television set and VCR is more complex than if there is no converter box. The better hookup is: cable to VCR to converter box to TV set. This permits you to watch one channel while you are taping another Fears that using a VCR for unattended recording is too difficult to master are groundless, said Ganelli. Recording while not at home is no more complex than setting an alarm clock. The set does not have to be turned on. A timer is set to start recording at the proper time and then to stop at the end of the time period.

Generally speaking, recording tape comes in three grades: standard, high grade and high gradehigh fidelity. The standard grade tape is fine for taping programs, viewing them and erasing the tape to rerecord another program, says Ganelli. High grade tape is for use when you plan to save the recording.

The difference between standard and high grade tape is that the latter has more uniformlypacked iron oxide particles which makes it less susceptible to socalled dropouts, which are microscopic oxide voids that appear as intermittent flashing lines on the screen. The high grade tape is slightly more costly to produce, so it commands a $1 to $2 premium, he said. High fidelity tape is used only for taping high fidelity stereo sound.

Cleaning tips help ease work load

NEW YORK (AP) — Recent studies indicate that the average person between the ages of 25 and 44 spends 6.8 hours each week on housecleaning, a 40 percent drop from the 11.3 hours recorded during the mid-1960s

With less time available for cleaning these days, the key to a cleaner home is to use that time more efficiently, notes an article in Guideposts magazine. It offers cleaning tips to incorporate into your housecleaning routine to simplify the task and Carry a tote tray of cleaning supplies and a plastic trash bag for emptying wastebaskets and ashtrays. Don't backtrack; finish each room completely and carry everything you need from one room to the next.

Start at the back — or top — of the house and work down and forward to the front. Similarly, work from the top of each room down to the floor, vacuuming only after you've completely dusted the room.

 Dust louvered window shutters or blinds by wrapping a white cleaning cloth over a putty knife. Move furniture the shortest distance possible. For example, tip dining room chairs back when vacuuming, instead of moving them. Apply a small amount of lemon oil to the inside of a glass shower door. This will reduce the water and soap scum that builds up.

Use different colored cleaning cloths for the various types of chores so that you don't, for example, wipe floors with the window-cleaning cloth. Use one for scrubbing fixtures, another for windows and mirrors and a third for dusting and polishing furniture.

Kansas State, received 13 firstplace votes and 1,134 points.

Pampa High coach presents proposal

A proposal presented by Pampa High head basketball coach Robert Hale will appear on this year's University Interscholastic League ballot in November.

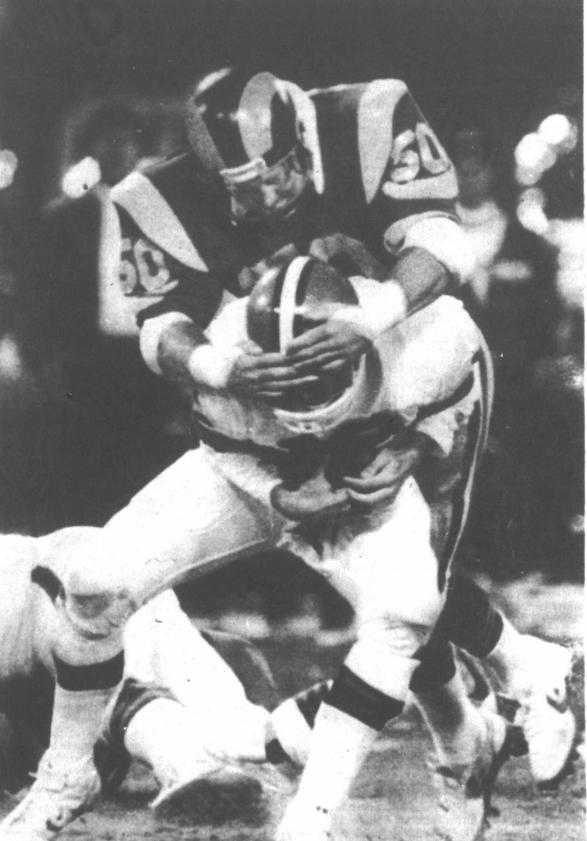

The proposal concerns eliminating a UIL rule which restricts summer camps for seventh. eighth and ninth grade students. Hale presented the proposal at the UIL Legislative Council meeting last week in Austin.

UIL Director Bailey Marshall invited Hale to address the council in a public hearing in which 40 presenters each spoke on different topics. One presenter, Harry Miller, head of the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches, also agreed with Hale's proposal.

According to UIL rules, students may not participate in a basketball camp that his being supervised by their own coach. Hale said the current ruling makes it difficult for students in isolated areas of the state and eliminating it would open the door to more local camps

'Athletes would have an alternative to the university camp and would be given the opportunity to attend a more affordable school," he said.

Hale also said a new ruling will allow coaches and students to have more access to one another in the training process.

Browns bop Rams

By The Associated Press

The key to defending against Los Angeles Rams' quarterback Jim Everett, says Felix Wright, is eye contact.

"He's a young quarterback. He tends to look at his receiver as soon as he gets the ball," Wright said after he intercepted two Everett passes, returning one of them 40 yards for a touchdown, to help the Cleveland Browns beat the Rams 30-17 Monday night.

Everett, a 24-year-old in his second year with the Rams, was fortunate to have been intercepted only three times, twice by Wright and once by Mark Harper, because Cleveland cornerback Hanford Dixon dropped two others

In Monday night's other game. Minnesota's Darrin Nelson got 88 of his 98 rushing yards on two carries, setting up two of D.J. Dozier's three short touchdown bursts, helping the Vikings to a 34-27 victory over the Denver Broncos.

It was all four teams' first action since the end of the 24-day NFL strike.

The Rams, 1-5, desperately missed running back Eric Dickerson, who stood out the entire second half. He ran seven times for 38 yards, including a 27-yard touchdown in the second quarter.

Charles White started in place of Dickerson, who had suggested last week that he might not be able to give 100 percent because he thinks he's worth more than his $680,000 salary

Coach John Robinson, however, said Dickerson was benched because of a Charley horse.

In the first quarter Everett threw a 20-yard pass to Damone Johnson that gave the Rams a first-and-goal at the Cleveland 1-

White carried and lost two yards. Buford McGee, who later suffered a torn Achilles tendon that ended his season, gained two yards on second down

A penalty moved the ball back to the 6, Everett's third-down pass bounced off tight end David Hill's hands at the goal line to Wright, who returned it 68 yards to set up the first of Jeff Jaeger's three field goals.

Early in the fourth quarter the Rams, trailing 30-17, had a fourth-and-one at the Cleveland 15. White plunged into the middle for no gain, effectively sealing the Browns' victory

Kevin Mack scored Cleveland's first touchdown on a 16yard run up the middle early in the second quarter, breaking three tackles along the way to put the Browns up 10-0. Wright then stepped in front of Henry Ellard on the Rams' next possession and went 40 yards with his second interception for a 17-0 advantage.

Jaeger's 48-yard field goal made it 20-0 before Dickerson finally scored for the Rams.

Another Jaeger field goal, from 41 yards out, gave Cleveland a 23-7 lead at halftime.

It's hats off to Twins!

By ED SCHUYLER JR. AP Sports Writer

All together now: "Take me in to the ballgame." Yes, it's hats off to the Minnesota Twins, those titans of teflon, the kings of arena baseball.

Without a roof over their heads, the Twins are bumblers, but they are Paul Bunyons with baseball bats when encamped in the tent-like Metrodome in downtown Minneapolis.

The dome is made of two layers of one-eighthinch-thick teflon-coated fiberglass, and it's supported by from three to six pounds of air pressure per square foot.

When the Astrodome was built in Houston in the 1960s, it was promoted as being the Eighth Wonder of the World. The Metrodome looks like something you might order from the L.L. Bean catalog.

Of course, tailoring of personnel to fit the home park, and vice versa, has long been part of the Grass infields are manicured to fit the home team's defensive capabilities and it's speed or lack of it. Playing-field dimensions often are altered to boost the home club's power output or short the opposition's. After the Twins became the first team in history to win the World Series by scoring all four of their victories at home, Whitey Herzog, manager of the vanquished St. Louis Cardinals, said: "Of course, no team in history had to play here. The Metrodome fits the 1987 Twins like the finest custom-made suit, while making an opponent look

Besides trying to negate or at least match the Twins' power, which the Cardinals without Jack Clark had no chance of doing, visiting teams have problems with the incredible crowd noise and they have difficulty finding fly balls against the white like a circus clown with baggy pants and too-big backdrop of the big top.

Minnesota won 62 of 87 games played in the Metrodome this year. Six of the victories were in six postseason games - two against Detroit in the American League playoffs.

Guess who? Rams' Jim Collins registers a sack.

The Twins had a 31-55 record outdoors where baseball was meant to be played.

Of course, it was not meant to be played outdoors at night in near-freezing temperatures.

Because the season will not get shorter, there is sure to be a growth of domed stadiums. It is easy to envision inter-league baseball in the not-toodistant future and with it wild-card playoff games. The year is coming when the only daytime World Series game will be the one played on Thank-

Two of the Twins' 31 victories in their battle against the elements were at Detroit in the fourth and fifth games of their 4-1 playoff triumph over the Tigers. But it was the victories in the opening two games at the Metrodome that tamed the Tigers, who had to be emotionally drained after overcoming Toronto for the AL East title in the final week of the regular season.

The Twins also had the pressure valve of knowing that if they failed in Detroit, the series would return to the Metrodome

They had the same advantage in the World Series, and they needed it.

Down 3-2 in games after wandering about like lost campers in the vast confines of Busch Stadium in St. Louis, the Twins went home and did what every true-blue Minnesotan knew they would do.

But the manner in which they won the seventh game must have seemed strange to the loyalists. The Twins scratched and clawed and beat St. Louis with Cardinal-style baseball.

After being Dome-in-ated for three games in the tent, the Cardinals got am-Busched.

The Pampa Lady Harvesters volleyball team has wrapped up the District 1-4A championship with two games remaining in the season. Team members are (front, 1-r) Tracy Williams, Lisa Lindsey, Staci Cash and Traci Cash; (back, l-r) Deanye Waters,

remain in playoff picture

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

It would take a mathematical genius or a person who just likes to strain his or her brain to determine all the possibilities regarding the area high school football playoffs.

The three teams in The Pampa News circulation area still with playoff hopes are White Deer, Canadian and Wheeler.

Friday's games will clear the picture immensely, but here is what is known thus far regarding those three teams and their chances at making the playoffs:

DISTRICT 2-1A

Teams still very much alive: West Texas High School (4-1 in district), White Deer (3-1).

Hanging on: Stratford (3-2) and Panhandle (2-2). Games remaining: West Texas - hosts Gruv-White Deer - at Highland Park, at home against Stratford. Panhandle - hosts Spearman, at Gruver. Stratford - at White Deer. Scenario I: West Texas will win the district. The Commanches have already beaten Spearman, White Deer and Panhandle and have only the Gruver Greyhounds (1-7, 1-3) remaining Scenario II: If White Deer beats Highland Park and Stratford, the Bucks will finish 5-1 and in second place after having lost to West Texas.

Scenario III: If White Deer beats Highland Park (0-7, 0-4) and loses to Stratford, the Bucks finish with a 4-2 record. Stratford will also finish at 4-2 if they beat the Bucks. If the Panhandle Panthers beat both Spearman and Gruver, they, too, will finish 4-2, thus the possibility exists for a three-way tie for the runner-up position. If a two- or three-way tie occurs, a tiebreaker will be enacted according to the district's executive committee.

Scenario IV: An early blizzard hits and knocks out all power to area football stadiums. In addition, teams cannot play in 36-inch snow and the district will have no runner up.

DISTRICT 2-2A Teams still very much alive: Wellington (3-0) and Quanah (3-0).

Hanging on: Canadian (2-1). Games remaining: Wellington - at Canadian, at home against Quanah. Quanah -- hosts Memphis, at Wellington. Canadian - hosts Wellington, at Shamrock (1-7, 0-3)

Scenario I: Since there are three teams still alive who must still play a total of six games between them, and since four of those games involve playing each other, there is no Scenario I at this time.

Scenario II: Wellington and Quanah consolidate and by virtue of a combined 8-0 district record, finish in first place. Canadian would then be runner-up

Scenario II-A: Since nine possible finishes exist for the three teams combined, ask me next week. DISTRICT 1-1A NORTH ZONE

Teams still very much alive: Wheeler (3-0) and Booker (2-0). Hanging on: Follett (1-1).

Games remaining: Wheeler - hosts Booker-Booker - at Wheeler, hosts Follett. Follett hosts Sunray (1-5-1, 0-2), at Booker. Scenario I: If Wheeler defeats Booker, the Mus-

Scenario II: If Booker beats both Wheeler and Follett, the Kiowas win district and Wheeler finishes second Scenario II: If Booker splits, losing to Wheeler but beating Follett they'll be in second by virtue of having defeated Follett. Scenario IV: If Booker loses its last two games,

Follett will be in second if they can win their last two games

Scenario V: The state of Texas drops football and everyone just assumes Wheeler wins the state championship.

Despite the muddiness of the playoff picture at this juncture, one thing is certain: Who will play who when the first week of playoffs roll around.

The winner of District 1-2A will play the runner up in District 2-2A. The runner up in 1-2A will play the winner of 2-2A. The winner of the District 1-1A's North Zone will play the runner up in the district's South Zone. The second-place finisher in the North Zone will play the winner of the South Zone.

And get this - there are still three teams still alive in the 1-1A South Zone - Happy, Vega and Nazareth - but don't even ask me what the possibilities are in that district.

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams says the profit may have been in Jacksonville, Fla., but his heart was in Houston

"This is my home," Adams said. "I've been here 41 years. I could have gone to Jacksonville for a lot more money.

On Monday, Adams ended months of speculation and negotiation, announcing he'd be keeping his NFL team in Houston after considering a move to the Gator Bowl.

Jacksonville, starved for a professional football team, assembled a package that could have brought Adams more than $125 million over 10 years. Adams and his family toured the Florida city several weeks a a red-carpet visit that rivaled treatment given a head of state.

But Adams said he was swayed after a Houston proposal that calls for construction of 72 luxury boxes at the Houston Astrodome to bolster other renovations planned for the stadium, now the NFL's smallest with a capacity of 50,594.

The new 10-year deal to remain in Houston, where the Oilers have played since 1960, hinges on sale of 75 percent — or 54 — of the boxes by Dec. 15, according to a letter of intent signed by Adams.

"I don't see any problem reaching that goal." said Don Jordan, chairman of the Greater Houston Chamber of Commerce 'We expect to get them all sold.'

Officials said they already have commitments from 26 companies and individuals to purchase the boxes, which will be known as Columbia Suites. About 34 of the boxes will become available by next season with the remainder finished in time for the 1989

The boxes will seat 18 or 36 people, with the 18-seat box selling for $30,000 a year and the larger box going for $45,000 annually. The boxes will carry five-year commitments and revenues will go directly to the football team.

The luxury boxes are among some $50 million in improvements to the Astrodome, which also will get an additional 10,000 seats and new artificial playing surfaces for baseball and football.

Oilers and HSA officials met Sunday night to discuss a new Astrodome lease agreement after the Oilers' 37-33 victory over the Atlanta Falcons

According to the proposed lease agreement, the Oilers will pay HSA 9.5 percent of their gross tickets receipts, without a cap on rent. The team currently pays 11.2 percent, officials say

In addition, the Oilers will receive all revenues on 6,500 prime parking spaces and at least $1.05 for every person who passes through the turnstiles as their share of food and beverage concession revenues.

The two sides also have worked out a complicated agreement for the Oilers to receive some in-stadium advertising revenue

Ryan admits running up score on Cowboys

By RALPH BERNSTEIN

AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP)- Feisty Buddy Ryan says to tell Tom Landry he'll do it again if he gets the opportunity, and next time he hopes it's in Dallas.

Ryan, at his weekly news conference Monday, said he isn't concerned about having opened up a can of worms by deliberately running up the score Sunday on Landry and his Dallas Cowboys.

Ryan said Landry started it, and he isn't about to let the Dallas coach forget

Maybe it's all psychological drivel to inflame his players. It reached some of them. Defensive end Clyde Simmons commented, "I always felt you don't just want to win, you want to humiliate them. If you don't put them away and keep them down, it will come back to haunt you." Wide receiver Mike Quick said, "we planned to do that all week. We said if we get the ball and we can score points, we're still going to try and put more on the board because of what they did to our replacement players.'

Running back Keith Byars observed. "I don't look at it as running it up. We just played as hard as we could for 60 minutes. And they didn't ...

On the other hand, tight end John Spagnola said. "Our coaches felt they had a score to settle with Dallas. And if the coach wants to call a play like that, so be it. We don't have veto power. We just follow orders.

The Eagles led Dallas 30-20 Sunday with less than a minute to play

On the first two downs Randall Cunningham took the snap and kneeled down to run out the clock.

On third down with 11 seconds remaining, Ryan ordered Cunningham to pass. He did, and pass interference was called on the play giving the Eagles a first down at the one. Keith Byars then scored as time ran out.

Ryan chortled. He had charged Dallas coach Tom Landry with running up the score against the Eagles three weeks earlier in a 41-22 Cowboys' victory in Dallas. And he had promised to get even.

"The can of worms was opened a couple of weeks ago," Ryan said at his weekly news conference Monday. "We just put a lid on it for another year.

No, he wasn't concerned that the incident might come back to haunt him. 'Anytime you go anywhere you have to fight for your life. We'll do it again down in Dallas next year if we get the oppor-

He was informed that Landry said the person who does something like that has to live with himself.

"I can handle that," Ryan snapped. Ryan was reminded that there was a practical side to scoring big in conference games since the number of points scored is one of the deciding factors in the event of a tie for a playoff spot. "I know," he said. "And if those seven points put us in a playoff, that will be great. That will be winning with class. Otherwise we didn't. Anyway that wasn't the motive.'

The Cowboys were incensed. Linebacker Steve DeOssie described Ryan as a "pathetic, senile old man," and said that the Eagles scored that final TD to "pacify Ryan's overinflated ego." Ryan responded, "well, I can't believe that he called me old."

Cowboys' owner Tex Schramm observed, "we didn't learn anything we didn't know about Buddy Ryan.' "It offends me," said Dallas wide receiver Mike Renfro. "That was one of the most classless things I've ever seen."

Pokes cut dozen replacement players

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Twelve Dallas Cowboys replacement players waived by the team included defensive tackle Mike Dwyer, a big fan favorite who was on the program cover for the home opener during the strike.

Team officials said Dwyer and any other player who participated in all three replacement games will be eligible for a half-share of playoff money.

"I knew this day could be coming and I gave it a good shot," said Dwyer, a 6-3, 280-pounder who was considered too short by some for the position he played.
