Iraq says it attacked Iranian maritime targets

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraqi warplanes pounded a ship near the Iranian coast this morning in the third day of an offensive that has rocketed the Persian Gulf war out of a mid-summer lull, Iraq said.

Iraqi military communiqués read over state-run Baghdad radio said Iraqi warplanes struck "large maritime targets" off the Iranian coast at 11:30 p.m. (4:30 p.m. EDT) Sunday and 7:45 a.m. (00:35 a.m. EDT) today. The raiding planes hit their targets and returned unharmed, according to the radio, monitored in Bahrain.

Iraq uses the term "large maritime target" to refer to tankers near Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal in the northern Persian Gulf.

Iran has threatened to retaliate for any raids that curtail its oil exports and said no targets would be immune, including the convoys of reflagged Kuwaiti tankers escorted by U.S. Navy warships. A convoy of two tankers and at least six U.S. warships passed the halfway point of its 550-mile voyage to Kuwait today.

On Saturday, Iraq broke an informal month-long cease-fire the warring countries had observed on attacking each others' commerce in the Persian Gulf.

Baghdad said it resumed the attacks to force its war foe of seven years to embrace a U.N. Security Council ceasefire resolution and to prevent Iran from using increased oil revenues for its war effort.

On Sunday, Iraqi fighter-bombers flew into the northern gulf and attacked the Kharg terminal, which accounts for 90 percent of Iran's country's oil exports.

The latest U.S.-escorted convoy, the fourth northbound and sixth overall since the operation began July 20, includes the 81,283-ton Surf City and the 79,999-ton Chesapeake City.

The U.S. Navy said the convoy entered the Persian Gulf early Sunday and included the missile cruiser USS Reeves and missile frigate USS Hawes. It said RH-53D helicopters from the USS Guadalcanal searched for mines.

Kuwait asked the United States to give 11 of its 21 tankers U.S. flags and military escorts to protect them from Iranian attack. Iran accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq and began attacking its tankers a year ago.

None of the ships reportedly hit by Iraq has been identified by Baghdad. Gulf-based shipping sources said one Iranian supertanker, the Alvand, was hit in a raid in the southern gulf, but Iraq did not confirm that.

Other shipping executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said their salvage tugboats heard radio exchanges Sunday among U.S. warships about the sighting of a vessel which had a fire in its engine room.

Baghdad radio reported a total of four attacks on maritime targets Sunday.

Trustees to signal school tax increase

Pampa school trustees plan to signal their intent to raise taxes by more than 14 cents when they meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday in Carver Educational Center, 321 W. Albert.

The meeting had originally been scheduled as a public hearing on an 86-cent tax rate, up 14.2 cents from last year's rate of 71.8 cents.

But, because the increase amounts to more than 3 percent, trustees must first signal their intent to raise taxes, then hold a public hearing, before taking final action.

Superintendent Harry Griffith said the public hearing is tentatively scheduled for Sept. 10.

The new tax rate will fund a $12.06 million budget, up $500,000 from last year. Griffith said that, even with a 14.2-cent rise, the district will still have to dip into its cash reserves for about $389,000.

The 86-cent rate is the highest trustees can raise taxes before being subject to a rollback election by taxpayers.

If the projected tax rate is accepted, the owner of a $50,000 home, who paid $359 in taxes last year, would pay $430 this year, provided the home's value remained the same.

Commissioners to work on county budget woes

Gray County commissioners hope to find some answers to the county's budget woes Tuesday — even if it takes all day.

Commissioners are scheduled to meet at 9:30 a.m. to discuss the 1988 budget and seven other items. County Judge Carl Kennedy said the meeting could spill into the afternoon hours, as commissioners wrestle with the loss of more than $100 million in appraised valuation.

In a special meeting Wednesday, commissioners slashed several budget proposals that had been submitted by county office holders, and warned a number of private agencies that county support of their efforts may end this year.

The agencies have been supported by federal revenue sharing money in the past.

But even with the cuts, commissioners still face the prospect of either raising the current 21.6-cent tax rate or dipping into the $4.7 million reserve fund left over from the sale of Highland General Hospital. The fund has been earmarked for much-needed jail and courthouse improvements and to help with construction of a public golf course near Pampa, approved by voters in November.

In other action Tuesday, commissioners plan to:

- designate a location at the courthouse to hold sales of real property under contract liens;
- approve a project agreement for two sites on the McClellan Creek Watershed Project;
- consider returning surplus property to landowners on the RM 1474 project;
- discuss with County Treasurer Scott Hahn the United Way payroll deduction, and recognize the completion of 20 hours of continuing education by Hahn; and
- pay salaries and bills, and consider time deposits and transfers recommended by the county auditor.

Arms negotiator expects missile pact soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief U.S. arms negotiator says a U.S.-Soviet agreement on the elimination of intermediate-range nuclear missiles can be completed fairly soon, but a leading Republican warns that Senate ratification is not assured.

The two superpowers should be able to overcome the remaining obstacles to an agreement on the missiles, such as details of the verification process and reach a pact on ground-launched missiles, U.S. negotiator Max Kampelman said Sunday.

The verification issue is not minor, but, "If they will carry through with their rhetoric, then I should think that we'd be able to in short order, to come up with a verification agreement that's in our interest," Kampelman said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."

But Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas on Sunday said the verification issue could be a problem during Senate ratification.

Dole, appearing on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," gave the administration what he called a "friendly warning."

"There already are rumbles in the Senate ... that there isn't this trust of the Soviets and trust of the Soviet leadership, and we are going to insist on verification of all kinds, so we can make absolutely certain that the Soviets are complying with any treaty," he said. "And it could be a stumbling block in the ratification process."

Dole said the Senate may want to add some "reservations or declarations to the ratification resolution to make certain that the treaty would be null and void if certain things happened."

A member of the Soviet Communist Party's Central Committee, meanwhile, said he also was optimistic about a superpower accord, although some details remain before an Intermediate-Range Nuclear Force agreement can be reached.

"There are some details, some verification details, some demands of ours," Vitaliy Churkin said on the ABC program.

President Reagan, in his weekly radio address Saturday, said the United States and Soviet Union are "close to an agreement" on the elimination of the missiles.

Report indicates Pampa schools are 'average'

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

An "average" school in an "average" part of the state — that's Pampa, according to statistics released this month by the Texas Research League.

The research league, a non-profit educational corporation which studies operations of Texas government, reported that Pampa schools come in below state average when it comes to teacher salary and per-student expenditure. Pampa ranks above state average in scores on the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills.

The league's annual report, Bench Marks for 1987-88 School District Budgets in Texas, lists 42 different statistics about budgets, taxation, payroll and student test scores for the 1,061 school districts in Texas. With the exception of a section on the 50 largest school districts, the report makes no distinction in the size of the school districts — thus comparing Pampa ISD, at 4,351 students, with Hutchinson County's Spring Creek ISD, which has 18.

According to the report, Pampa teachers were paid $23,458 for the 1986-87 school year. The state average is $24,487 while the average for Panhandle schools in Region 16 is $23,665. Pampa ranks fourth out of five 4-A schools in the region.

Dumas teachers rank highest of the group, with $24,936, followed by Borger with $24,063 and Canyon at $23,717. Hereford came in fifth with a teacher salary of $22,382.

Pampa came in third of the five in the amount of spending per student and in the size of the district. According to the report, Pampa spent $2,815 of its total budget per student. Of the other districts:

- Dumas, at 3,580 students, spent $3,039 per student.
- Canyon, at 5,364, spent $2,610 per student.
- Hereford, with 4,872, spent $2,971 per student.

■ Borger, 3,193 fall enrollment, spent $2,795 per student.

Canyon, however, had the highest taxes with a tax rate of $1.23 per $100 valuation. The state average is 79.3 cents. The league figured that with a homestead exemption, which most houses have, Canyon taxpayers would pay $707 per year on an $80,000 house. Hereford, with a 69 cent tax rate, was listed with a $508 tax on an $80,000 house.

Pampa, which had a 71 cent tax rate, had a lower tax than Hereford, according to the report, which listed the Pampa ISD tax on an $80,000 house at $472. The report said Borger homeowners pay $446 in taxes while Dumas homeowners pay $328.

And what do the school districts have to show for their tax rates and teacher salaries?

Of the five 4A schools, 1986 Canyon juniors — this year's seniors — had the highest overall TEAMS scores, posting 74 percentile in math, 51 in reading and 65 in writing.

Pampa students scored 65 in math, 51 in reading and 55 in writing. The state average is 64 in math, 46 in reading and 56 in writing.

The Texas Research League puts out a noble and comprehensive piece of work, according to Pampa school superintendent Dr. Harry Griffith. But, Griffith said, while the figures by themselves may be accurate, they can also be misleading.

Griffith questioned the TRL listing about the school's per-student spending. Griffith said the report based its findings on the school's fall 1986 enrollment, which is higher than the school's average daily attendance of 3,982. Griffith estimated per-student expenditure at $3,106.

The superintendent also disagreed with the TRL comparison of Pampa with much smaller districts in the area.

Motel clerk sought, abduction feared

AUSTIN (AP)— Authorities searched today for a motel clerk who disappeared from the Tru-Valu Inn.

Co-workers says they fear Richard Oncken, 26, who also worked part-time as a disc jockey at a radio station in Lockhart, where he lives, and KAPT Radio in Austin, was kidnapped during a robbery.

Co-workers describe Oncken, who disappeared shortly after 5 p.m. Saturday, as a hard-working and punctual man who held down three jobs to help make ends meet.

Oncken was last seen when he registered a couple at the motel on Interstate 35 at about 5:45 p.m. Saturday.

A clerk at another motel tried to contact Oncken for 25 minutes, and when he could not reach him, called police.

Officers thoroughly searched the hotel and surrounding area without finding any trace of Oncken, police spokeswoman Kellye Norris said.

A chair in the lobby had been overturned and co-workers said an office door had been kicked in. About $450 in bills was missing from the cash register, although other money was left undisturbed in an office drawer. Oncken's pickup and keys were found at the motel.

"At the time the couple checked in, he appeared fine," Norris said. "At this point, we're not exactly sure what is going on."

Carl Breaux, who manages Cross Country Inn in Austin, which is owned by the same company that owns the Tru-Valu Inn, says he fears Oncken was the victim of foul play.

"He's very punctual and easy to get along with," Breaux said. "He's an excellent guy. We're all very worried. You just don't think anything like this can happen in broad daylight."

Oncken had worked at the motel since February, Breaux said.

Besides working at KAPT Radio in Austin, he was a disc jockey at KHJK in Lockhart. He worked the 6 to 10 a.m. shift at KAPT on Sundays, said Jon Ivan, another disc jockey at the station.

Successful test-firing moves shuttle program back on track

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP)— The space shuttle program reached a milestone in its return to flight readiness with the successful first full-scale test of a redesigned booster rocket that made the ground rumble 45 miles away.

The 126-foot-long rocket with 1 million pounds of solid propellant spewed orange flame 500 feet and sent a cloud of smoke high into the sky Sunday.

The test prompted cheers from about 9,500 spectators at Morton Thiokol's Wasatch Operations test site 25 miles west of here.

The test, which had been postponed three times since Thursday, was conducted by rocket manufacturer Morton Thiokol to show National Aeronautics and Space Administration engineers that it had corrected flaws blamed for the Challenger explosion.

"This is a major step on the way to return of the shuttle to flight," said Adm. Richard Truly, two-time shuttle veteran and NASA associate administrator for space flight. "Based on the data, it sure looks good to me."

Before shuttle flights resume, the redesigned booster is scheduled to be tested three more times, with the next fire-up in late November. Three additional tests will follow the launch of Discovery scheduled for June 2, 1988.

While Sunday's experiment was declared a "normal, successful test," engineers must disassemble the rocket and analyze computer data during the next month to obtain a full understanding of the motor's performance.

"I think it's going to look just as good from the inside as it did from the outside," said John Thomas, NASA manager of solid rocket design at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

Truly said the test-firing breathed hope into the nation's space program, which has been grounded since the Jan. 28, 1986, explosion of the Challenger that killed its seven crew members.

A presidential commission said a faulty seal in Challenger's booster rocket allowed hot exhaust gasses to leak, igniting the shuttle's external liquid fuel tank.

The $400 million redesign reinforced the joint between the rocket nozzle and the body of the booster with 100 additional bolts, substituted bonded insulation for putty and added a pressure relief slot and a third rubber-like O-ring seal.

Engineer says shaft may not be leakproof
 SEATTLE (AP)— The Hanford nuclear reservation would probably fail a key nuclear waste dump test to determine that a 3,300-foot shaft be leak-proof, says a federal mining engineer.

"In terms of the repository, I don't think the technology exists to seal the shaft," said Ernie Corp of the Spokane office of the U.S. Bureau of Mines.

He commented in a telephone interview after the bureau's report was released Friday. Despite Corp's observations, however, the report avoids the key issue of whether the shaft could be sealed to isolating highly radioactive wastes for 1,000 years.

"I was told... we do not address the question of a nuclear repository. We only address the feasibility of sinking the shaft," said Corp.

His remarks put a new twist on the bureau's report to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission that it is "technically feasible" to sink the shaft to the 3,300-foot depth required for the proposed dump. The report was written by David Forshey, a top bureau official, on Aug. 19.

Forshey did not return phone calls Friday. Corp drafted the letter and led the research.

Hanford, in southeastern Washington state, is one of three prospective sites for permanent storage of the nation's nuclear wastes from commercial nuclear power plants. The others are in Texas and Nevada.

Hanford would be disqualified as a site for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste dump if it were shown radioactive waste would seep to the surface from the 3,300-foot level within 1,000 years.

Corp said drilling the shaft would break rock formations and probably let water carry radioactive contaminants to the surface.

Police need assistance of citizens

By BOB HART
 Pampa City Manager

No police department can function effectively without the concerned assistance of responsible citizens. Consequently, police department personnel are depending on you to let them know whenever you observe suspicious persons or actions.

Some people fail to call the police simply because they are not aware of what seemingly innocent activities might be suspicious. Other citizens may notice suspicious activity and be hesitant to call for fear of seeming to be a "nosy neighbor." Still others take it for granted that someone else has notified the proper authorities.

Call the Police Department IMMEDIATELY about all suspicious activity. The emergency phone number is 669-1177.

Don't worry about being embarrassed if your suspicions prove unfounded. Think instead about what could happen if you don't act.

The Pampa Police Department has many programs available without charge to the members of the community. Operation ID engravers are available for check-out so that you may engrave your driver's license or Social Security number on your personal property.

Presently there are more than 150 neighborhoods enrolled in Neighborhood Watch. This has proved to be a very effective way to combat neighborhood crime.

Burglary, auto theft, rape, child molestation and arson are the most prevalent neighborhood crimes.

Household burglary is one of the easiest crimes to commit but one of the hardest to solve. Over one-half of police time is spent investigating burglaries. Pampa is no exception. Household burglaries have been up for the past few months.

For more information on how to start a Neighborhood Watch in your neighborhood, please contact Ken Hopson, Crime Prevention officer, at 665-8481, extension 244. He also can answer any questions regarding other programs available from the Police Department and the Crime Prevention Office.

Sometime between Saturday, Aug. 8, at 5:30 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 9, at 9:25 a.m., the Personal Touch clothing store, 125 E. Kingsmill, was burglarized.

Entry was gained to the building by the shattering of the front plate-glass window. Approximately $3,600 worth of dresses was removed from the store.

Damage to the building and other merchandise is estimated at $3,000. Total loss is in excess of $6,600.

Crime Stoppers of Pampa will pay $500 for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person or persons responsible for this burglary.

If you have information about this burglary or any other crime, you can report it and remain anonymous by calling 669-2222.

Rewards are available for other crimes not in this announcement. The board of directors of Crime Stoppers urges citizen involvement in reporting crimes in our community.

Texas tourism was down slightly this year

By The Associated Press

The oil-busted Texas economy didn't keep vacationers away from major state attractions this year, but overall visitation statewide was down an estimated 4 percent from 1986, industry officials say.

Last week, heading toward the close of the summer tourist season, attractions such as Six Flags Over Texas and Wet 'N Wild in Arlington and Astro World in Houston reported sizable increases in attendance.

But many families took shorter vacations than in years past, frequented only big attractions and stayed within easy driving distance of home to hold down costs with the uncertain economy, officials said.

"Most of the attractions I've talked to are having a good summer, but people are staying closer to home, taking shorter trips and staying with friends and relatives," says Murrell Foster, director of visitor development for the Dallas

Convention & Visitors Bureau. "People are still being very, very cautious with the spending."

Statewide, a letdown from the 1986 Sesquicentennial celebration, shark attacks along the Gulf Coast and "negative publicity" of the state's dismal economy were blamed for a slight decline in overall visitation.

"When the Dallas Cowboys don't win, you can't get a crowd. When Texas is perceived as being a bust, then people won't want to come down here," said Larry Todd, director of the Texas Tourist Development Agency in Austin. "People want a winner."

Also, while some major theme parks benefited from visitors traveling short distances, other smaller attractions across the state were hurt by the combination of early rains and reduced travel from some oil-depressed regions, Todd told The Dallas Morning News.

The tourism agency, based on surveys of private attractions and public parcs and museums, estimated total visitation through July this year of 29.6 million tourists, compared with 30.8 million for the first seven months of 1986.

The number of out-of-state travelers passing through Texas' 12 visitor information centers declined 9.1 percent to just more than 2 million through July, from more than 2.2 million in 1986, the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation reported.

Tourist expenditures in 1986 produced revenue of about $17 billion, up from about $16 billion in 1985, Todd said. No cash totals for 1987 are available, but Todd suspects figures may be down.

A tourist agency survey of selected private attractions showed Six Flags and Astro World with 6 percent increases over last year through July. Six Flags attendance totaled 1.77 million, up from 1.66 million, and Astro World had attracted almost 1.1 million visitors, up from 1.04 million.

Visitors to the state's museums slipped to 4.29 million, down 7 percent from 4.61 million, while state parks registered 13.17 million visitors, down 5 percent from 13.83 million. Attendance at national parks and seashores was 3.17 million, up 3 percent from 3.06 million; and at national forests, 1.05 million, up 14 percent from 920,337.

"Last year was a record year for most private attractions because of the Sesquicentennial, especially during the first four months of the year," said tourist agency spokesman O.C. Garza said. "It's a pretty normal year, other than the fact the economy has been in a downturn."

The hotel economy generally across the state ranged from soft in the West Texas Permian Basin region to excellent in the Brownsville-South Padre Island area, said Don Hansen, executive vice president of the Texas Hotel & Motel Association. In fact, South Padre Island perhaps has been the brightest spot for Texas tourism in 1987.

The South Padre Island Tourist

Bureau this year introduced an aggressive advertising campaign targeting major Texas urban centers and positioning South Padre against the "Texas Riviera" theme used successfully by competitors at the northern end of the island, and Corpus Christi.

Up the coast in Galveston, tourists generally followed the statewide trend, staying fewer nights and spending less, said Jack Bushong, executive director of the Galveston Convention and Visitors Bureau. Hotel room-nights were down about 1 percent from last year, and shoppers at the Strand's row of 62 shops and boutiques did more looking than buying, he said.

Astroworld regained tourist business from Southern Louisiana that it lost last year.

And at Palo Duro Canyon's Pioneer Amphitheater near Amarillo, 63 summer performances of "Texas, A Musical Drama," attracted 99,157 people — the show's second-largest turnout in 22 years, behind last year's 105,432.

Task force raids night pit bulldog fight

DALLAS (AP) — More than 50 people were arrested but scores of others fled when authorities raided a high-stakes pit bulldog fight in a wooded area in southeast Dallas County, officials say.

"To veteran lawmen, this is the first organized dog fight they had come across, going back 30 years," Dallas County Sheriff's spokesman Jim Ewell said Sunday.

"From time to time, we have heard rumors of dog fights, and we have been vigilant to check out those reports, but we never before had this kind of hard evidence of organized dog fights," he added.

The Greater Dallas Area Organized Crime Task Force raid followed a tip from an informant that a pit bulldog fight was being staged Saturday night, Ewell said.

"Many escaped through the thick underbrush that marked the area, and no doubt hid until the activity was over and our officers left, but a total of 56 persons was apprehended," Ewell said.

A 37-year-old man, who lived in a house near the fight site, was booked Sunday into Lew Sterrett Justice Center for investigation of a felony complaint of operating a facility used for dog fighting, Ewell said. A city magistrate set bond at $2,500.

Another man, a former convict, was arrested for possession of a pistol, a felony. The other 54 were released after being cited to appear later in Justice of the Peace court in Mesquite, an east Dallas suburb, Ewell said.

No dogs were captured or confiscated, said the task force commander, Lt. Jim Valentine of the Dallas County sheriff's department.

The task force was dispatched after being informed that a prize of $2,500 would be given the owner of the winning dog in the first fight of the night, Ewell said, "and as they go up to the last surviving dogs, the grand finale would be a $10,000 fight."

As in a cockfight, spectators also bet among themselves on various dogs, Ewell said.

The pit bulldog fight was being staged in a wooded area about 75 yards off Beltline Road, which loops around Dallas, on the outskirts of subdivisions that are sparsely settled, Ewell said.

"There was a frame house sitting 25 yards off Beltline Road," between the suburbs of Mesquite and Seagoville, Ewell said, "and the promoter used an extension cord for an electrical source, stretching the cord 50 yards to a fighting area."

Tarpaulins were stretched over low-hanging tree limbs to conceal the light from the road, and benches and chairs were arranged to form a square around the fighting area, Ewell said.

"The officers, with the assistance of a Dallas police helicopter, moved onto the location, sending a wild bunch of people scattering through the underbrush, hampered by the fact that someone in the house pulled the plug on the extension cord, throwing the area in darkness," Ewell said.

Authorities found a concession stand of beer and barbecue.

AIDS hospital closing

HOUSTON (AP) — As the nation's first AIDS hospital prepares to close, top administrators are trying to assure treatment and research that began at the less than year-old facility will not end with it.

"We have done everything we can think of," said Dr. Peter Mansell, medical director of the Institute for Immunological Disorders. "I don't know where to go next."

Among Mansell's priorities are saving a $5.8 million contract from National Institutes of Health designating the institute as one of 19 facilities around the country for testing experimental treatments.

If the contract isn't continued, Houston AIDS patients could be left hundreds of miles from the nearest site where they could undergo experimental treatments for the deadly disease.

Patients who have signed up to take part in experimental drug tests in Houston may have to move to other cities if the contract is lost, according to Dr. Gary Brewton of the institute.

"People on the protocols might have the option to transfer to Tulane (in New Orleans) or Miami or San Diego," he said. "That is the distance they would have to go to get into an ATEU protocol."

Amarillo celebrates its 100th birthday

AMARILLO (AP) — The Panhandle's largest city celebrated its centennial with choruses of "Happy Birthday," a pealing railroad-car bell, a cowboy-clad symphony and a show that lit up Texas in laser lights.

Thousands of city residents at Railroad Days, the centennial celebration held at the civic center Sunday, hoisted fists full of free cake and ice cream to wish their city well.

Others gathered around an old locomotive's bell that Sante Fe Railway donated to the city. Bob Perry, assistant general manager in Amarillo for Santa Fe, said it was estimated the bell had traveled over 1 million rail miles.

In a ceremony at the civic center auditorium, Mayor Glen Parkey rang the bell honoring the railroads and the part they played in the city's development, saying the bell "will find a prominent place."

Even President Reagan got in on the act, sending a telegram to the centennial committee that said, "We are fortunate to live in a nation of strong and proud communities... With hearty congratulations and best wishes for continued milestones."

Amarillo's birthday bash ended with a laser show Sunday night. The crowd hooted and cheered when familiar images, like the map of Texas, were created by lasers on the giant screen in the auditorium. The show also featured swirling pin-point lights shooting through some ready-made fog.

Earlier, the Amarillo Symphony played pop tunes — many with a Texas theme. The conductor wore a straw cowboy hat and a bandana, many of the symphony players had on bandanas, and the cellos and bass fiddles were decorated with bandanas.

A groundbreaking for the Centennial Plaza, to be located between Amarillo Civic Center and Amarillo City Hall, also marked the day set aside to honor the city's founding.

Report

Among the other findings in the report:

- Panhandle and Canadian teachers had the highest average salary in Region 16 with Panhandle ISD teachers receiving $27,374 per year and Canadian teachers getting $27,153.
- The lowest paid Pampa area teachers taught at Grandview-Hopkins ISD at $20,502, Kelton at $20,752 and Groom at $21,847.
- Other school districts included: White Deer, $25,019; Alanreed, $21,975; Lefors, $21,181; McLean, $21,974; Miami, $24,746; Mobeetie, $22,156; Shamrock, $22,878; Wheeler, $24,594; Allison, $22,731, and Briscoe, $22,775.
- Despite their teachers' low pay, Groom students topped those at area schools on the 1986 TEAMS test national percentile ranking. Last year's Groom juniors aced math at 84 percentile, reading at 76 and writing at 73.
- Groom Superintendent Rex Peoples credited the high test scores to a dedicated faculty, a supportive school board and community, and "good kids." He credited the quality of the students to the strong German-Catholic heritage in the area and to the low transient population.
- Miami followed Groom in math

(82) and reading (69) but topped the Tigers in writing (78). Other big scorers were Kelton with 81 in math, 68 in reading and 67 in writing, and Canadian with 79 in Math, 61 in reading and 71 in writing.

Other district's TEAMS scores were: White Deer — 59, math; 54, reading, and 63, writing; Lefors — 57, math; 54, reading, and 63, writing; McLean, 57 math; 36, reading, and 32, writing; Shamrock — 72, math; 50, reading, and 61, writing; and Wheeler — 73, math; 54, reading, and 66, writing.

■ Homeowners in Briscoe and Miami paid the lowest taxes. The levy on an $80,000 house with a homestead exemption in Briscoe was figured at $168.

Wheeler County Chief Appraiser Marilyn Copeland said $80,000 is a pretty expensive dwelling by Wheeler County standards. The average home in her area costs about $40,000, she said.

The owner of an $80,000 house in Miami, with a homestead exemption, paid $172.

Residents in Mobeetie and Groom paid the highest taxes with the tax on an $80,000 house after homestead exemptions set at $887 in Mobeetie and $709 in Groom.

The tax, after homestead exemption on an $80,000 house, in other districts included: White Deer, $316; Alanreed, $506; Lefors, $609; McLean, $682; Grandview-Hopkins, $190; Canadian, $312; Shamrock, $543; Wheeler, $348; Allison, $240, and Kelton, $537.

■ Because of their size, the smaller schools spent more per student than larger schools. But even then, there were variations.

Of the three elementary school districts, Grandview Hopkins with 28 students had the highest per-student operating expense with $12,583 per student. Alanreed, with 37 students, spent $6,840 per student while Lela, with 40, spent $6,697.

The tiny districts in Wheeler County also had a wide variance ranging from Allison, which spent $9,762 per student for 77 students, to Mobeetie, which spent $6,730 per student for 85 students. Kelton spent $9,338 per student for 73 students and Briscoe spent $7,796 for 96 students.

For districts between 150-300: Lefors, $5,600 for 185 students; Miami, $5,019 for 253 students; McLean, $5,014 for 251 students, and Groom, $4,371 for 233 students.

For districts between 450 and 550: Wheeler, $3,683 for 486 students; Shamrock, $4,868 for 493 students, and White Deer, $4,751 for 528 students.

Canadian, with 853 students, spent $5,175 per student.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Tax cuts leading to better growth

Tax reform continues to work its magic, this time reducing the federal budget deficit from $220 billion in 1986 to $158 billion in 1987, according to Reagan administration projections. That's a $62 billion reduction, about $20 billion better than earlier estimates.

Why the extra amount? Most of that $20 billion results mainly from $16 billion in unexpected tax revenues. The 1986 tax reform bill, which cut taxes for 1987, is doing its magic, just as supply-side economists predicted.

The tax cuts are causing two things to happen. First, because people can keep more of their money, they're investing more. That means more money is going into companies that actually make something, instead of into speculative investments like coin collections or art works. (That's also the real reason, not voodoo theories about business cycles, behind the stock market boom.) More money invested means more people are employed, who in turn pay more taxes.

Second, even though the tax code is still riddled with loopholes, those loopholes aren't "worth" as much as they used to be. The top corporate tax rate has been reduced to 34 percent from 50 percent, meaning that a company can do what it wants with two-thirds of its profits. Before, it could do that with only one-half, making tax loopholes much more lucrative.

That means knowledgeable businessmen, not distant, ignorant Washington politicians, invest money where it's most needed. The low tax rate provides real profits for hard work. That, in turn, means businesses are becoming leaner and more efficient; which in turn means they can hire more people; and more people employed means more taxes paid.

In an ideal world the government would turn that $16 billion in extra tax receipts back to taxpayers; it would then reduce the budget deficit by cutting back on pork-barrel programs. But we're dealing, alas, not with rational human beings, but with politicians in the Potomac swamp.

But there's an advantage there, too. Spendthrift Democrats are attacking the Reagan administration's $158 billion figure. Congressional budget analysts — who, though ostensibly independent, are Democratic factotums — say the 1987 deficit will more likely be between $180 and $200 billion.

Dunces! Here Reagan has handed them a chance to advance their own political program — which is to spend more, not save anything — and they played into his hands. They should have said: "Well, since Reagan just saved us $16 billion, let's spend it on pork barrel." But their animosity toward Reagan made them go for his political jugular.

The Reagan administration's task now is to use this good news to prevent any new tax increase. Reagan, having already appeased Jim Wright by selling out the Nicaraguan democratic resistance, may surrender to the House speaker's favorite policy: tax increases. "Just an itty-bitty tax increase to reduce the deficit," Wright will tell Reagan — before the revenue gates surge open.

But if Reagan is smart he will reply: "I've already got your new taxes: $16 billion worth. And when tax reform's last phase kicks in next year, there will be even more revenues. So what deficit problem are talking about?"

With luck, the Gipper's three-week vacation will restore some cartilage to his backbone.

Just compensation gets victory

WASHINGTON — Property owners think it's a great opinion. Conservationists and antiquarians think it's terrible. Justice John Paul Stevens finds it "dangerous." Chief Justice William Rehnquist finds it just. Depending upon one's point of view, the Supreme Court's opinion in the case of the Luthergleng campground is all the above.

My own thought, for whatever it may be worth, is that there probably is less here than at first met the eye. If the decision results in the destruction of historic buildings, or in the serious loss of wetlands, we will live to regret it. But if the decision compels local zoning boards to act with greater respect for private property, we will have reason to applaud. In four or five years we will have a better picture of the consequences.

From any point of view it was surely an important decision. These were the facts: In July 1977, a forest fire destroyed nearly 3,900 acres above Mill Creek in Los Angeles County, Calif. The fire denuded hillsides and led to a serious flood in February 1978 that destroyed the Luthergleng campground of the First English Evangelical Church of Glendale.

In January 1979 the county adopted an ordinance that "temporarily prohibited" any person from constructing, reconstructing or building any structure within an "interim" flood protection area in Mill Creek Canyon. In 1981, by general law, the county made the ordinance permanent. The effect has been to deny the church any use whatever of its property for the past eight years.

The Fifth Amendment of the Constitution says that private property shall not be "taken" for public use without just compensation. Was this a "taking"? By a vote of 6-3, the Supreme Court held that the church's property had indeed been taken, as surely as if it had been condemned outright under the county's power of eminent domain. The court ruled that the church therefore is entitled to compensation to be determined on remand to the California court of original jurisdiction.

Four times in the past 10 years the high court has approached the question of "taking," and four times the court has backed away. This time a majority felt the constitutional issue was squarely presented, but Rehnquist's opinion for the majority did not answer the question squarely. The opinion answered the question obliquely, leaving a great deal to the circumstances of future cases and to the judgment of future courts. You will find no bright lines in this opinion.

As a matter of constitutional law, how "temporary" is "temporary"? What is an "interim"? Plainly, said the chief justice, compensation need not be paid "in the case of normal delays to obtaining building permits, changes in zoning ordinances, variances, and the like."

What, then, are the ground rules? Rehnquist quoted approvingly from a 1922 opinion by Justice Holmes: "The general rule is, that while property may be regulated to a certain extent, if regulation goes too far it will be recognized as a taking." What is "a certain extent"? How far is "too far"? What effect will the Luthergleng opinion have on the zoning of historic districts? Does the government go "too far" in preserving wetlands? It will be up to the judges to say.

What it comes down to, it seems to me, is a rule of reason — and it is nothing new, as a thousand Fourth Amendment cases have made clear, for the courts to pass on what is reasonable or unreasonable. In the case at hand, a "temporary interim period" of eight years seems a bit much.

In times past, as property owners across the nation have complained, regulatory bodies often have acted in a high-handed way to deny owners the best economic use of their property. Local land-use agencies have not taken property by condemnation; they have taken it by regulation. They have thus compelled private owners to assume the entire cost of public benefits. In the Luthergleng case, the public benefit was flood control — a legitimate goal, but a goal the whole community should pay for.

The Luthergleng case may be quoted more for an eternal verity than for the opinion's uncertain application. Rehnquist acknowledged that the opinion will "lessen to some extent the freedom and flexibility of land-use planners." But he added: "Such consequences necessarily flow from any decision upholding a constitutional right. Many of the provisions of the Constitution are designed to limit the flexibility and freedom of governmental authorities and the Just Compensation Clause of the Fifth Amendment is one of them." There you have a truth for all ages. We ought to be reminded of it more often.

... he escaped the sleeping guards by loosening his chains, climbing through a window onto a balcony, re-entering the apartment in a different room and leaving through the main doorway, locking it behind him...

Good neighbor works at home

For the next minute, please don't imagine that I am saying something I'm not.

But separate from any and all other news today, it does not hurt us to remember that the Bible uses failures — as well as successes — to teach lessons.

Abraham and Moses, Solomon and David — each failed.

Now — whenever any saint falls from a high place — it is significant to note that most of the most vocal critics criticize from the cellar.

Father Andrew Greeley once offered this sobering observation.

He said, "If you find a perfect church, then by all means join it. But understand that the minute you join it — it becomes less than perfect."

And each of us is a missionary — for better or worse.

President Dan Smith of Emmaus Bible College has delightful ways of getting the attention of his student audiences.

I remember once he opened his remarks like this:

Suppose you went to the mailbox this afternoon and found a letter on White House stationery asking you to become our nation's ambassador to Afghanistan. You would have mixed emotions but you would go even there — anywhere — if our President asked you to.

You are asked by a higher authority than he to be an ambassador right where you are.

You live in Chicago? Be an ambassador to South Chicago. I dare you.

Bloom where you are planted. People and churches and nations get in trouble when their reach exceeds their grasp.

Several administrations ago, our country launched the "good neighbor policy."

Nobody stopped to ask what the phrase meant but it sounded politically palatable, so we adopted it.

What we neglected to recognize then and since is that the very essence of being a good neighbor is, first of all, minding your own business.

In your own home neighborhood it is not the good neighbor who intrudes on a family fuss next door.

It is not the good neighbor who lets his dog foul the flower garden next door.

It is not the good neighbor who tries to discipline the children next door.

The good neighbor tends to his own garden, his own children, his own household.

If he minds his own business well enough, others will be inspired to emulate his example.

That, in fact, is the way the United States led the world for 150 years.

It was when we started throwing our weight around that we begat more resentment than affection.

Think, just for a moment, how the good shepherd of the smallest congregation in our nation accomplishes so much more than a worldwide ministry that overran its headlights.

Airline deregulation is actually working

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Liberal theoreticians, ever on the lookout for weaknesses in the conservative performance, as it is on display in the Reagan administration, think they may have spotted a useful vulnerability: the allegedly bad results of deregulation.

Certainly deregulation is one of the major commandments of the conservative creed. At a Cabinet meeting early in his first term, President Reagan was presented with a symbolic wooden hatchet and a bulky copy of the Federal Register, containing the text of existing government regulations. As the TV cameras ground away, he explained, "The idea is to cut the book in half," adding with a twinkle "and then throw away both halves."

Abolishing all federal regulations may be a conservative fantasy, but there is no doubt whatever about Ronald Reagan's determination to "get the government off the backs of the American people" wherever he can.

Now, six and a half years into his administration, some of the consequences of deregulation are clearly visible, and liberals are betting that a lot of Americans are wondering whether we weren't better off back in the bad old days when Big Government was on our backs.

Take airline deregulation. (Ironically, this began back in the administration of Jimmy Carter, whose Civil Aeronautics Board Director, Alfred Kahn, was a convinced libertarian. But the Reagan administration is in no position, and for that matter in no mood, to repudiate the work Kahn began.) The airline industry has been through a tooth-rattling shakeout in the past 10 years.

Deregulation's first result, of course, was to bring about reductions in air fares. This forced a number of airlines, which had acquiesced in featherbed labor contracts and consequently could no longer compete, to go out of business altogether or merge with healthier lines. There has also been considerable turmoil over specific fares, with travelers wondering why it should be cheaper to fly from New York to San Francisco than to East Warwhoop, Nebraska, only half as far away (the answer being that popular destinations cost less to reach than exotic ones, because the larger loads make possible economies of scale).

Recently the overall increase in air traffic has begun causing longer delays at airports, as well as charges (not necessarily substantiated) of increases in the number of "near misses" in the air. The general impression, it is probably fair to say, is that deregulation has produced something approaching economic and operational chaos in an industry that was humming along smoothly back when government was regulating it.

It is important, therefore, to nail that canard to the barn door. The intended consequence of deregulation was an overall reduction in air fares. If this has forced certain carriers who were passing exorbitant labor costs along to their customers to go out of business, so be it. The beneficiaries are the American people, who are taking to the air in numbers so much larger than before that Continental Trailways has already sold out to Greyhound and Greyhound is reportedly breathing hard.

If airports are getting overcrowded, enlarge them. And while the alleged increase in "near misses" is probably just the closest rival to pit bulls as this year's hysteria (midair collisions are actually down), let's not forget that air traffic is still just as tightly regulated as it ever was. If it isn't working, blame Big Daddy — certainly not deregulation.

Recently I saw one of the big anchors on the TV evening news sprawled out in first class aboard a transcontinental jet, no doubt getting ready to complain about takeoff delays that evening on his program. The solution for him, of course, is simple — just return fares to their old levels (his will be deducted as a business expense anyway) and let the peasants wait.

The peasants may disagree.

Students can now 'profit' from studying

By The Associated Press

School districts, pressed by reformers to curb high dropout rates, are appealing to students' profit motive to get them to stay in school and study hard.

Students in a growing number of cities are winning stereos, bicycles, cash, college scholarships, free fast food or merchant discounts for doing what was once expected for free: attending school regularly and earning good grades.

Ernest L. Boyer, president of the Carnegie Endowment for the Advancement of Teaching and a leader in education reform, worries that the trend is an unfortunate byproduct of the pressures reform has placed on schools.

"The pressure to judge reform from quantitative outcomes is leading schools to adopt almost emergency strategies to help them look good on some report card," he said in an interview.

Starting in October, the Kiwanis Club in Milwaukee, where average high school attendance is a poor 85 percent, will offer students movie passes, free rock concerts and fast food coupons for improving attendance.

Since 1983, the Napa (Calif.) Unified School district has given youngsters with good grades and attendance records privately-financed gift certificates to local businesses.

Local merchants in towns like Richmond, Ind., Opelousas, La., and McGehee, Ark., offer discounts to students with good grades and attendance. In Detroit, elementary and middle-grade students with perfect attendance can win free steak dinners at Ponderosa restaurants.

All Saints School in Indianapolis, a parochial school with about 250 first-through eighth-graders, qualifies students with perfect behavior records to compete for a bicycle at the end of the year, said principal Kathleen Tichenor.

"My theory is unfortunately we are in an immediate feedback society," Tichenor said. "We started allowing these kids to question authority, but we never gave them any guidance about it. When you tell the kids to do something, they think, 'Why should I?'"

"I have found in today's society, kids are not ready to accept anything but a tangible kind of reinforcement," agreed Principal Dennis Martin of Barker Junior High in Michigan City, Ind., where for the past two years students have earned $50 savings bonds and free trips to an amusement park for good attendance, grades and citizenship.

Such incentives seem to have at least short-term success. At Pittsburgh's Peabody High School, average attendance rose from 85 to 90 percent in two years since local businesses helped start a program of awarding students portable televisions, stereos, clock-radios, gift certificates, T-shirts, hats, and a grand prize of $100 cash for good attendance.

But critics call such measures "gimmicky" and say they miss the complexities of the dropout problem.

"The evidence seems to suggest that in the short term they boost attendance records and performance," said Boyer. "But most of these programs touch only a handful of students, and I doubt that they will become universal and hit the heart of the problem."

In contrast to contests and prizes, for example, Holyoke, Mass., has opened the state's only pregnancy clinic for adolescents to help keep young mothers-to-be in school.

In the long-run, the most effective incentives, Boyer and others believe, relate directly to education — scholarships, for example, as opposed to free stereos or hamburgers. They convey to students that adults care and that school work pays off immediately and throughout life.

Man kills five, wounds two before killing self in Boston

BOSTON (AP) — A man whose shooting rampage killed six people, including himself and four relatives, and critically wounded two others was retaliating against family members who had accused him of stealing, a survivor says.

David Huynh, 25, said his 23-year-old cousin Minh Le brought a gun to the Huynh home in the Dorchester section Sunday afternoon to settle a dispute. Huynh said his family had turned Le in for stealing money from Huynh's mother's bank account.

"He came back for revenge," said Huynh, the only member of his family at home who escaped harm.

Tuan Tran, a Vietnamese interpreter called to the scene by police, said the gunman was a Vietnamese refugee who apparently had been accused of stealing the mother's bank book four years ago and wanted to clear his reputation.

The gunman pulled an automatic weapon from a sleeve of his trench coat and blasted away, authorities and witnesses said.

"Bullets were flying around our heads," said Juli Nichols, a paramedic who was among the first to arrive at the scene.

The gunman killed his 52-year-old uncle, 48-year-old aunt, two female cousins, ages 23 and 26, and a 24-year-old woman visiting the family, police spokeswoman Jane Sheehan said.

After a two-hour standoff with heavily armed police, the gunman fatally shot himself, said Deputy Police Superintendent Robert O'Toole. A 9mm gun was found next to his body, O'Toole said.

Police would not release the names of the victims, but Huynh said his parents and 26-year-old sister were killed in their house. He said the gunman shot four people on the street, all members of the family except Huynh's 24-year-old girlfriend, who was slain.

The two people critically wounded were Huynh's 3-year-old niece, Phuong Huynh and a 19-year-old man. A motorist braved the gunfire to grab the wounded child off a neighbor's porch.

The 19-year-old was in critical but stable condition today at City Hospital, and 3-year-old Phuong Huynh was in critical but stable condition at New England Medical Center, hospital officials said.

The worst mass-killing in Boston in about 15 years overwhelmed some residents of the densely populated neighborhood.

Oscar-winning actor Lee Marvin dies

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Lee Marvin, the tough-guy actor who won an Oscar as a drunken gunfighter in "Cat Ballou" and was a party in a historic "palimony" suit, died Saturday, a Tucson Medical Center spokesman said. He was 63.

Tom Reavis, director of community affairs for the hospital, said Marvin died of a heart attack about noon, his wife, Pam, at his side. He had been hospitalized since Aug. 13 with what Reavis described as a run-down condition related to the flu.

He owns a ranch near Tucson. Usually playing the tough guy, he had roles in such films as "The Dirty Dozen," "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance," "Donovan's Reef," and "Prime Cut."

In 1979 he made headlines in a landmark "palimony case" when he was sued for half his fortune by Michelle Triola, a woman he lived with for six years but never married. Her claim was rejected, but Marvin was ordered to pay her a nominal sum for rehabilitation.

Last December, he had intestinal surgery after suffering abdominal pains while at his ranch. Officials said then there was an inflammation of the colon, but that no malignancy was found.

Marvin, who jested that he learned to act in the Marine Corps, starred in "The Dirty Dozen" in 1967, as well as a 1985 television movie sequel "The Dirty Dozen: Next Mission."

Marvin, distinguished by his snow-white hair and granite-hewn features, fought with the Marines on Kwajalein, Eniwetok and Saipan. On Saipan, he suffered a wound that kept him in a hospital for 13 months.

"I applied a lot of what I learned in the Marines to my films," he said in a 1985 interview. "I was a Pfc. in the Marine Corps, so when I started playing officers I had a good opinion as to how they should be played — from the bias of an enlisted man's viewpoint."

He was born in New York, the son of an advertising executive and a beauty and fashion editor. He was kicked out of virtually every prep school his parents sent him to.

"I claim the Marine Corps taught me how to act," he said. "I acted every day in the service. If they asked me if I was anxious to get out there and kill the enemy; I answered that I was."

Marvin made his movie debut after the war in "You're in the Navy Now."

"I was just an extra," he said. "But the director, Henry Hathaway took a liking to me and asked me to come to Hollywood. He got me an agent but the agent wouldn't take me because I was an extra. So Hathaway gave me some dialogue and made me an actor."

"Hathaway picked me out of that movie, he picked Charles Bronson and he picked Jack Warden. So, maybe he had an eye."

After that came his 1958 TV series "M Squad."

"I did that for three years," he said. "It burned me out. We did those in two days. But it was the right time for me. I'd been doing features before that, but this was what tied my face and name together for the audience."

Then came such movies as "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance," "Donovan's Reef," "The Professionals," "Emperor of the North," "The Big Red One," "Prime Cut," "Pocket Money," and "Cat Ballou," for which he won an Academy Award as best actor for his double role.

Marvin spent last years in the desert, where he says he does nothing.

"I really do nothing when I'm not working on a film," he said in that 1985 interview. "I don't have horses or dogs. Don't buy nothing that eats. There are a bunch of coyotes around the house. I like them. They're more interesting than a bunch of dogs."

Pastor: Treat family with compassion, not like lepers

ARCADIA, Fla. (AP) — Three young brothers who carry the AIDS virus should not be shunned like modern-day lepers, a pastor told residents of this rural community after the family's home was burned.

"It reminds me of the time of leprosy when they rang bells and told people to stay away," the Rev. Michael Hickey told his 300 parishioners at St. Paul's Catholic Church here Sunday.

"The ultimate tragedy is to make them feel outlawed and unwanted," Hickey said.

"People need to stand by them. They need to look into their own hearts."

Clifford and Louise Ray and their children — Ricky, 10, Robert, 9, Randy, 8, and Candy, 6, — lost everything in the Friday night fire that officials called suspicious.

The family, which caused a furor when they won a legal fight to get their hemophilic sons into public school, says it has given up. The Rays say they will find a new home far away from Arcadia when they come out of seclusion.

Honasan instructs rebel troops. Military cadets show support for rebel leader

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The armed forces' deputy chief of staff rushed to the nation's military academy today to meet with cadets who launched a hunger strike to show sympathy with a bloody coup attempt, news reports said.

North of the capital, efforts continued to find the coup's leader, Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan, and several hundred mutineers also still at large.

President Corazon Aquino claimed Honasan and his comrades were trying to assassinate her and her family in an attack Friday on the presidential palace. The rebels also assaulted broadcast stations and military garrisons in the failed attempt to seize power.

At least 25 people were killed and 275 injured in the fighting, which posed the most serious challenge to the government since Mrs. Aquino came to power in a military-civilian uprising that toppled President Ferdinand Marcos 1½ years ago.

Military officials said more than 1,100 troops were believed involved in the mutiny and more than 800 had been captured or surrendered. The air force announced today that its deputy commander, Brig. Gen. Federico Pasion Jr., was among those detained for questioning.

Several Manila newspapers reported today that the 600-member cadet corps at the Philippine Military Academy in Baguio City, 130 miles north of Manila, had launched a hunger strike Sunday in sympathy with the mutineers.

An aide to academy superintendent Commodore Rogelio Dayan, who refused to give his name, said Maj. Gen. Eduardo Ermita was meeting with cadets but would not say what was being discussed. Ermita is the third ranking officer in the 150,000-member armed forces.

Honasan and other coup leaders graduated from the academy, the Philippines' equivalent of West Point.

Explosion rocks mine; 89 workers missing

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — An explosion rocked a gold mine shaft today as miners were returning to their jobs following a nationwide strike. Eighty-nine workers were missing, the mining company said.

The General Union Mining Corp., or Gencor, said the explosion this morning caused extensive damage to the No. 10 shaft at its St. Helena gold mine in Welkom, 140 miles southwest of Johannesburg.

The company said 434 workers were underground at the time of the blast, and that 345 had been accounted for. The missing workers were descending in a mine shaft elevator at the time of the blast, the company said.

Gencor said it did not know the cause of the explosion.

Gencor's mines have had two accidents resulting in mass fatalities in the past year.

An underground fire at the Kinross gold mine last Sept. 16 killed 177 miners, and 34 died April 9 in a methane gas explosion at the company's Ermelo coal mine.

According to government figures, 800 workers were killed in mine accidents in 1986, up from 706 the previous year.

The St. Helena mine was one of dozens targeted by black mineworkers in South Africa's longest, costliest mine strike, which ended Sunday. An estimated 44,000 miners were fired during the strike, but most were expected to be rehired.

The National Union of Mineworkers settled Sunday for management's pre-strike wage offer, but would not admit defeat, calling the walkout by more than 250,000 black miners "a dress rehearsal for further action."

Union General Secretary Cyril Ramaphosa said, "1988 is the year we start marching forward."

The strike against South Africa's major industry was seen as a challenge to the economic base of apartheid, since blacks were demanding a greater share of the wealth they produce.

Nine miners were killed during the strike, which affected about two-thirds of the nation's major gold and coal mines. The union said more than 500 were injured and 400 arrested.

Tens of millions of dollars in wages and corporate profits were lost and at least 7,000 miners lost their jobs when one company closed two gold mine shafts it said were unprofitable.

The end of the strike came during a three-hour meeting between the Chamber of Mines, which represents the six targeted mining companies, and a 30-member union delegation.

The offer the union accepted contained slight improvements in benefits and was virtually identical to one union members overwhelmingly rejected last Wednesday.

The biggest previous mine strike was in 1946, when about 100,000 miners walked off the job for a few days before troops forced them back to work.

Chamber President Naas Steenkamp said the cost of the strike was high in terms of violence, lost income and mass dismissals. But he said each side may have gained a clearer perception of the other.

"The union has learned that the industry is capable of setting limits, sticking to them and showing a lot of determination in the process," he said. "The employer has learned that the union has muscle, organizational capacity, determination and skill."

Thai plane crashes in sea, some survive

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A Thai Airways jet crashed into the sea today off Thailand. The airline's director said many of the 83 people aboard apparently survived — contradicting reports from other airline officials who said all aboard had been killed.

Air Chief Marshal Narong Dithipeng said survivors were seen in the water after the Boeing 737 went down off the southern island province of Phuket. However, he did not say if any people had been rescued.

Narong said the jet crashed after trying to avoid colliding with another Boeing 737. The other jet, operated by the Hong Kong-based Dragonair, landed safely.

Narong told a news conference that there appeared to be many survivors.

"Many were seen wearing life vests," he said. "The plane was seen afloat. It may have suffered cracks but no serious damage."

Narong said that as of 5 p.m., marine boats had found four bodies at the crash site in the Andaman Sea. Provincial police said eight bodies were retrieved. The conflicting figures could not immediately be resolved.

The airline director said the plane carried 37 foreign passengers, 35 Thai passengers, a crew of nine and two children whose nationalities were not known. The foreigners included two Americans, several Europeans, two Japanese and about 30 Malaysians, he said.

Narong said the Thai jet was trying to avoid hitting the Dragonair jet when it crashed into sea about five miles from Phuket airport. Phuket is about 540 miles southwest of Bangkok.

Drilling industry begins to stir amid uncertain future

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas oilmen say that life in the oil patch has been so grim for so long that a little activity looks impressive. Even in the face of the latest price dip.

Oilfield equipment manufacturers and dealers report a mild quickening of business, with sales inching upward in the 5 percent range. It's been enough to end abbreviated work weeks at some plants and cause some rig owners to start rolling out equipment that's been in mothballs.

"It got so bad last year," said Ray Peterson of Peterson Drilling in Midland, "that any work this year looks good."

He said there were 500 rigs working in West Texas during the boom year of 1982. Last year there were 80 operating rigs in the Permian Basin, but that has grown to 130 this year.

Drilling rigs operating in the Gulf of Mexico have spurred ahead from 66 to 102.

Last week the number of active U.S. drilling rigs climbed above 1,000 for the first time since March 30, 1986.

But only a few days earlier, oil prices tumbled to near $18 a barrel, falling below $19 for the first time since May, before jumping upward again.

The drilling revival has yet to set itself on a sustained pattern of growth.

But there's been a new optimism.

"Business has ever so softly increased," said Bob Boyles, sales manager of J&M Oilfield Supply Inc. of Houston. "It's just slowly creeping up. There's no high volume, but it gives all indications of continuing."

"It's up more than 5 percent," said D. E. Welch, a partner in Partin & Co., a Houston oilfield services company.

At Texas Pipe & Supply Co., Eric Hoffman said his company is "back to the 1985 level."

The whole oil patch is seeing more business, he said, though the increase is not a "boom" or anything like it.

Jay Norton, general engineer of Norton Drilling in Lubbock, said his firm has 10 rigs operating, compared to four a year ago.

"Nobody's standing in line to drill, but we're not having any trouble now finding work," he said. "There's more of an optimism than there was."

Doyle Tyson, a dealer in oilfield pipe, said that already "a few items are in short supply. They're available, but the price has gone up."

For example, new 4½-inch casing has increased from $2 to $2.50 a foot within just a short time.

"I don't expect it to get like it was in the boom," said Tyson, who has been in the oil pipe business for 25 years. "I think it'll be like it was in pre-1974. That's what I call a normal level. I think we'll have 1,500 rigs working by the end of the year."

Ike Kerridge, a vice president and chief economist at Baker Hughes Co. which keeps the weekly U.S. rig count, is not so optimistic. He predicts 1,200 rigs by the end of December, but he cautions, "that's based on the trend since July."

Kerridge said the recent fall in oil prices to below $19 from the most recent peak of $22.39 per barrel July 17 is not expected to disrupt longer-range drilling plans, for which $18 and above appears to be a threshold price.

"We might be concerned if the price fell below $18 (per barrel)," Kerridge said.

The current drilling industry count of 1,012 domestic drilling rigs is the result of decisions made in April, said Kerridge. He said a number of oil companies increased their drilling budgets in April, and are now gearing up to sink wells.

"The rig count was affected two months after those decisions were made," he said.

Ken Miller, of the independent oil industry consulting firm Purvin & Gertz, agreed that a price decline to below $19 could derail domestic drilling plans, but added:

"I think you are looking at a short-term situation that isn't going to last until next year. I think this (falling prices) is a temporary thing."

Still, the amount of drilling under way remains far behind the activity of early last year. In January, 1986, there were 1,810 American rigs operating. The number fell to a low of 663 on July 14, 1986.

The rig total has bounced up and down like a yo-yo since.

"Any time you get a relative improvement, you feel better," said Steve Larkin, executive vice president of the Petroleum Equipment Suppliers Association. "We're taking a very, very cautious view of any news we've seen. When you look at the rig count in a historical context, you can understand our restraint."

Offshore drilling has increased sharply since last year, primarily because federal leases will expire this year and next, and because the surplus of natural gas that developed earlier this decade is about to be exhausted.

Bob Palmer of Rowan Companies Inc., a major offshore drilling firm, said energy companies also are finding the money to do more drilling. Japanese investors have poured $500 million into offshore drilling prospects, and a group of eastern university trust funds has put up $175 million for Gulf coast drilling.

Major oil companies, said Palmer, also are benefitting from the increase in oil prices and have more money to put into drilling.

Palmer said Rowan had only five of its 14 Gulf coast rigs working in February. Now, all but two of rigs are busy.

But the awakening industry is far different from the one that was running wild at the top of the boom. Hundreds of companies, banks and individuals went broke and left the oil patch during the five-year depression. Some experts estimate that the number of companies still in the oil business has been reduced by half.

As a result, many believe, the industry could not now drill at the 2,000-rig rate it once enjoyed.

"I'm not sure the industry could handle it (boom) now," said Bill Welch, president of NL Petroleum Services and a vice president of the Petroleum Equipment Suppliers Association. "We're short of rigs, of manpower and most companies don't have the exploration departments left to run a lot of rigs."

Jay Norton said his firm is having difficulty finding roughnecks to operate rigs in West Texas.

"They left the business when the bust hit and found other work," he said, "and don't want to come back now."

The bust took a heavy toll on manufacturers that produce oilfield equipment. Drilling equipment and service companies have declined from 320 in 1981 to 169 now, and workers in the industry have dropped from 618,900 in 1982 to about 250,000, according to trade associations.

"I don't know if people have the real faith yet or not," said Bill Welch. "After the bloodbath we've been through, I'm not gonna believe it (start of a boom) yet. There has to be some assurance that it (price of oil) is not gonna sink down to $15 again."

Boyles of J&M said his company, which has made some minor hirings and is acquiring some new machinery, attributes the slight increase in business to the scarcity of competition.

"A lot of our competitors are no longer even around," he said. "It doesn't take much of an increase in activity for us to pick-up some business."

Adds D. E. Welch of Partin & Co.: "If you've got the only store on the street, people have to come to you."

Few believe the boom of the '70s and early '80s will ever return, and some don't hope it won't.

"I don't want it to boom like it did before," said Tyson. "That would mean that we've had real trouble in the Middle East and I don't want that."

Sign is wearing out its welcome

CARROLLTON (AP) — A rainbow-colored sign that proclaims "Jesus is Lord" is wearing out its welcome in this north Dallas suburban city.

For six years, the sign has been decorated a huge grain elevator near Interstate 35. Some consider it a landmark, but others hate the sign that advertises the Word of Faith Outreach Center in Farmers Branch, and think it ought to be changed to something that promotes the community.

The elevator—owned by Lee and Dorothy Groves, owners of Groves Electrical Services—also bears a Word of Faith telephone number and urges passers-by to "Visit Word of Faith This Sunday."

Consultant Dennis Wilson asked 80 local merchants for their opinions about good and bad aspects of Old Downtown Carrollton and said the sign was high on both lists.

Mayor Pro Tem John Heath said city officials hope to lease the tower and replace the sign with a painted message telling motorists they have entered Carrollton.

"We wanted to see if we could use any of the hotel-motel tax money to put up a sign or logo that would be supportive of our city," Heath said.

Town observes 50 years since black gold put it on the map

By JOSIE GIBSON
The Odessa American

GOLDSMITH (AP) — Black and rich, it flows through the core of Goldsmith's being. And more than 50 years after oil first gushed forth, drawing hordes of fortune-seekers, spawning hotels, a hospital, movie theaters and a rooming house with a bath, it's still the city's lifeblood. But many people moved on from the sleepy town about 20 miles northwest of Odessa. The streets, some still dusty and unpaved, are quiet. Boomtime Goldsmith is a memory, preserved in the yellowing pages of The Goldsmith Tribune. Among the town's 409 residents, cattle rancher Buster Cole can remember when the town was nothing more than pasture, before the boom when Texas 158 was just a dirt track cutting across the site. The rancher, small and elfin at 64, slaps a leg of his faded blue jeans and chortles at the thought of a trip to Midland back then. "Boy, it was really something... 52 gates between here and Midland!" He recalled the discovery of oil and his granddaddy's reaction to the sight of a black gold gusher: "God-awmighty... they're ruining all my grass." That too, elicited a hearty laugh. According to one newspaper report in late 1954, the oil boom that began about 1936 injected thousands of people into Goldsmith's population and led one resident to petition Washington D.C. for a post office. By 1937 the town had its post office — and a grocery, restaurant and a rooming house, with the only bath there. The community ballooned to about 6,000 people. Oil companies built camps nearby. At one stage residents sought a charter for Goldsmith under the name of Ector City, but that was denied because Texas already had a town by that name. By 1954, however, Goldsmith was an incorporated city. Roy Leftwich moved to Goldsmith in 1946 to take over as principal of the elementary school. It was, the 80-year-old recalled, one of the best things he ever did. He stayed 22 years. The principal watched pupil numbers climb from 125 at the time of his arrival to a 1950s high of 339, mainly children of oil field workers. He knew all his teachers personally. Goldsmith was like that. Leftwich remembered advising a school district official: "Don't send people to Goldsmith that don't want to be known, because it's too close a community." But it was that closeness he enjoyed. "It was people who knew each other and trusted each other," he said. "I wouldn't call it an attractive place, but I tell you, it was a good place for kids. Not much traffic." Although residents often visited Odessa for shows and activities, Goldsmith was far enough away from unfavorable influences. Things have changed since Leftwich retired in 1968 and moved back to Odessa. "It has changed, just like the rest of society has changed."

Fossilized remains of ancient turtles studied

TUBA CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Researchers say turtles found in fossil form in northern Arizona are the oldest of their kind yet found in North America.

The foot-long creatures foraged the streams that surged across now-arid northern Arizona during the Age of Reptiles 185 million years ago.

The researchers say the small amphibians, whose fossilized remains were sifted from a brick-red cliff southwest of Tuba City, resembled and perhaps were ancestral to most modern North American turtles.

But despite such superficial similarities, the scientists' studies suggest that considerable turtle evolution took place over the eons. Their finding, they say, "documents a very early stage in the evolution of modern turtles."

One great difference: In common with primal reptiles and some present-day fish, the Tuba City turtles had teeth on their palates. All living turtles are toothless.

Paleontologists sifted the fossils from the siltstone of the early Jurassic period Kayenta Formation, rocks deposited at a time reptiles dominated the Earth, and named the new species kayentachelys, or Kayenta turtle.

In locations not far away, the same formation has yielded dinosaur bones, and a whole zoo of extinct reptiles and small mammals has been excavated from this same site.

Most of the turtle remnants were harvested in the early 1980s by Farish Jenkins of Harvard and J. Howard Hutchison of the University of California at Berkeley.

"A cabinet full" of the shells and bones had been sent to the museum for analysis, Peter Meylan, a turtle specialist there, said in a telephone interview.

The best preserved shell, he said, could be mistaken for "a painted turtle" by the uninformed.

Entertainers were once cast in figurines

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Television shows us many events and people in pictorial form. Some of the more famous entertainers are even made into dolls or plastic figurines.

In the 19th century the Staffordshire potters in England also made figurines that pictured the literary and political events of the day. A series was made in the 1850s, soon after the publication of the anti-slavery novel "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in 1851.

Harriet Beecher Stowe of Connecticut wrote the book, and it became an international success. It was the basis of a play that was seen in many countries.

The play was first produced at Drury Lane in England in December, 1852. The Staffordshire potters used the actors from the play as models for the figurines.

At least 19 different figures were made. Most of them picture Eva and Uncle Tom.

In a time when photographs were unknown and prints were expensive, pottery figures were often the best representation of an event or person.

Q. I collect business cards. Is there some way to date them from the name and address?

A. Yes. The telephone company and the post office have added many numbers in recent years. A phone number with less than seven digits dates from 1896 to 1945.

Postal zones were sometimes part of a business address after 1943. It would read "Detroit 26, Michigan." From 1963 the five-digit zip was included on some cards, but not on all.

Q. How old is the knife rest? When did it go out of style?

A. The knife rest probably started in Germany and France in the 18th century. It was made to keep the dirty knife blade off the clean table or table cloth.

Early examples were made of wire, wood or pottery. The earliest example we have seen was made of earthenware about 1720.

The knife rest has never gone completely out of style. It is still used in the United States to hold carving knives.

Individual knife rests were sold through the 1920s and can be found today. They are still often used in other countries.

Silver, glass and porcelain rests can be found at many antique shows. Collectors can learn more from the new book, "Knife Rests," by Virginia Lea (Glassy Mountain Press, Route 1, Box 417-C, Pickens, S.C. 29671, $13.45 paperback including postage).

Q. Recently I inherited the contents of a relative's house. It was auctioned and there was over $20,000 worth of girls' toys that were 80 years old. Some teddy bears sold for over $800 and dolls for over $500.

Why were they so valuable? What could a collector do with them except return them to an attic?

A. You were either very lucky or very smart to have auctioned your inheritance. We usually hear from the heir who gave away the valuable collection before learning of the worth.

Collectors are very special people. An old doll, a rare piece of porcelain, or a million-dollar chair are all examples of something that fits into a collection to be studied and enjoyed.

Sometimes a collection is part of the decorating in a home. Sometimes it brings back joyous memories of one's childhood.

Collecting is more than hoarding. A true collector considers the search, the research, the trips to auctions and shows, and the talks with other collectors as part of the recreation of life.

Some people play golf, read, go to the horse races or go out dancing. Collectors may do all of these things, but they also go to collecting events and enjoy the thrill of the chase, the joy of ownership and the company of other collectors.

Tattoo wearer's future isn't a pretty picture

DEAR ABBY: Please print this immediately for the 17-year-old girl who wanted a tattoo, but her father refused to sign the consent form:

Dear Girl: Like you, I do not drink, smoke or do drugs, but I wasn't 17, I was a 29-year-old mother of two when I decided to be tattooed. I had a good excuse: When I was 14, I tried to "punish" my boyfriend for hurting me, so I cut his initials into my forearm and poured ink into the cut. His initials didn't really take, but I was left with a stupid-looking scar. In order to cover up this mess, I went to a tattoo artist. He suggested a "tiny" dragon. He said, "Let me draw you something, and if you don't like it, we won't do it." And so, on the spur of the moment, his beautiful artwork — all six inches of it — was imbedded into my forearm. It was my birthday present to myself, at the cost of only $45. And don't let anybody tell you it's painless. It was like getting a "shot" non-stop for 90 minutes.

Five months later, I met the man who was to be my second husband. He was rather old-fashioned and never liked my dragon, but he accepted it as a part of me.

In time, my dragon became an embarrassment. Your father's opinion of tattooed people is widely held by the majority of the population, and even though most people don't realize their prejudice toward us, you will find yourself answering a multitude of rude, obnoxious questions: (1) How old were you when you did it? (Assumes that you were very young, immature and stupid.) (2) Were you drunk? Stoned? (Meaning only someone who was not in his or her right mind would perform such an idiotic mutilation to their own body.) (3) Did it hurt? (Duh!) (4) How long did it take? Cost? (Too long; more than you'll ever know.) (5) Are you sorry you got it? (Yes, mainly because of the moronic questions like these and others I've had to answer for years.)

Dear Abby

And lastly, in business (and at 17, you'll never know what you'll be doing later in life), my tattoo caused such a distraction, I've made a conscious effort to keep it covered. Tattooed people are judged before they have a chance to open their rather gruesome thing to do to one's self. But then so was the tattoo.

I'm 35 now, and I will always have something on my arm for people to stare at. But the questions have improved already. "What happened to your arm?" Answer: "I burned it."

So, kiss your dad and thank him for loving you enough not to sign that consent paper, or you might be like me in time: An adult who did a foolish thing when she was young, and is now ...

SORRY, SORRY, SORRY
P.S. Abby, I know this is too long for your column, but please, get my message across, no matter how much you have to cut.

DEAR SORRY: I'm printing your letter as is — no editing. It's long, but well worth the space.

DEAR ABBY: My parents say that when my date picks me up, he should come to the door and get me.

The guy I go with doesn't. I watch for him in the window, and as soon as his car pulls up in front of our house, I run out and get in.

I guess I will have to tell him, but I don't know what to say. Please help me.

STARTING TO DATE

DEAR STARTING: Say, "The next time you pick me up, would you please come to the door and get me?" Explain that it's the courteous and customary thing to do. (P.S. You don't say how old he is, but if he's old enough to drive, it's time he learned one of the elementary rules of dating.)

Experts offer collecting tips

NEW YORK (AP) — "The U.S. Customs Service defines a genuine antique as any object that is at least 100 years old. But to many, it is also any item that is the first of its kind," say collectible experts Ralph and Terry Kovel.

The Kovels, in Family Circle magazine, offer some tips for collectors.

—Buy because you like it, not because it is a "good investment."

—The best time to buy an antique is when you see it. You rarely get a second chance.

—The less you know about antiques, the more you must trust your dealer, so don't be afraid to ask questions.

—Look carefully at anything that seems too great a bargain — it might be damaged or a reproduction.

—Collect, don't hoard. Be sure you have room for the objects you covet.

In the year ahead, it's important that you don't bite off more than you can chew. The returns will be more than ample if you merely accomplish your stated goals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll need a feather-light touch in dealing with testy domestic situations today. If you come down too hard, it will only create additional problems. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try not to take life too seriously today. Instead of focusing on the seamy side, look for the bright spots. They're there if you'll poke around a bit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's to your benefit to be a bit hard-nosed where finances are concerned today. Don't ask for more than you deserve, but don't expect less.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't buckle under if confronted by challenges today. Instead, stiffen your back and dig in. Tenacity is all that is required for your success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be careful today that you don't talk about a sensitive matter to the wrong person. If you do, something you want kept secret will be passed on to others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your old projects should not suffer neglect today because of your enthusiasm for new ones. For best results, give equal attention to each.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There is more going for you today than you realize. Be persevering if you are striving to achieve a major objective.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Although the road might be a trifle rocky for you today, you'll have the tenacity to aim for your objectives. You'll win the admiration of associates along the way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Speak up today if you hope to recoup what another owes you. The individual with whom you are dealing isn't apt to make the first move.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A companion's pace might be as speedy as yours today. However, let this person move as he or she sees fit.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Substantial rewards are possible today, but they won't be handed to you on a silver platter. If you hope to make gains, be prepared to expend the required effort.

Twins' Kirby Puckett explodes against Brewers.

Twins regain lead in AL West race

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Kirby Puckett followed an outstanding performance with an encore that was even better. Puckett, 4-for-5 with two homers on Saturday night, went 6-for-6 with four RBI and two more homers Sunday as the Minnesota Twins moved back into first place in the American League West with a 10-6 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

In addition to tying Rennie Stenfett's major-league record for hits in consecutive games, Puckett also robbed Robin Yount of a grand slam in the sixth inning when he leaped above the center field fence to make a catch.

Elsewhere in the AL, it was Toronto 13, Oakland 3; New York 4, Seattle 1; Boston 7, Cleveland 3; California 6, Baltimore 2; Kansas City 11, Chicago 7; and Detroit 7, Texas 0.

Tigers 7, Rangers 0

All of Detroit's runs were unearned as Texas catcher Geno Petralli tied an 85-year-old major-league record with six passed balls on pitches from knuckleballer Charlie Hough.

Lou Whitaker scored four of the runs and Doyle Alexander, 3-0, pitched a three-hitter as the Tigers stayed one game ahead of Toronto in the AL East.

Hough, 14-10, allowed only three hits in seven innings, but Petralli, who tied the AL record of five passed balls in Hough's last start, established a new league mark on Sunday. The major-league record of six passed balls was set Oct. 4, 1902 by Harry Vickers of the Cincinnati Reds.

Blue Jays 13, Athletics 3

George Bell hit two of Toronto's five homers, including one of three by the Blue Jays in an eight-run seventh inning that broke a 3-3 tie against Oakland, which fell out of first in the West.

Jim Clancy, 12-10, allowed eight hits in the first four innings, but settled down and gave up only one hit in the next four.

Royals 11, White Sox 7

Kansas City got a three-run homer from Jamie Quirk and a grand slam from Kevin Seitzer to win a slugfest at Chicago.

Richard Dotson, 10-11, had a 2-1 lead and was working on a one-hitter when the Royals rallied for five runs in the sixth. Danny Tartabull and Frank White singled in runs before Quirk hit his fourth homer.

Kansas City starter Bud Black, 6-6, allowed nine hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Yankees 4, Mariners 1

Bill Gullickson, who hadn't won since July 21, pitched seven shutout innings in his American League debut as New York beat Seattle.

Gullickson, acquired Wednesday from Cincinnati for Dennis Rasmussen, took a three-hitter and a 4-0 lead into the eighth. He gave up Harold Reynolds' one-out double and Mickey Brantley's RBI single before Dave Righetti got the final five outs for his 25th save.

Red Sox 7, Indians 3

Boston defeated Cleveland as Dwight Evans knocked in four runs and hit two homers, establishing a career high.

Vols edge Iowa in Kickoff Classic

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — If the rest of the college football season is anything like the opener, it won't lack for excitement.

"There's no question the fans and the television people got their money's worth," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said Sunday after the fifth annual Kickoff Classic — and his team lost.

Seventeenth-ranked Tennessee edged the No. 16 Hawkeyes 23-22 on three field goals by Phil Reich in the final 12 minutes, including a 20-yarder with three seconds left.

Tennessee scored both its touchdowns in the second period on a 1-yard run by William Howard and a stunning 96-yard gallop by linebacker Darrin Miller after he intercepted a pitchout from Chuck Hartlieb, one of the three quarterbacks Fry promised Iowa would use.

Besides Harmon's touchdowns, Iowa's other points came on field goals of 42, 27 and 42 yards and an extra point by Rob Houghtlin. But the Hawkeyes failed on a two-point conversion pass by Dan McGwire following Harmon's second touchdown and that proved costly.

Tennessee seemed about to break it open when Miller's swiped Hartlieb's pitchout and rambled 96 yards with 5:46 left in the second period for a 14-3 lead. The play came on fourth down and capped a magnificent goal-line stand in which the Vols' suspect defense turned Iowa back three times from the 1-yard line.

Iowa started 6-foot-8 sophomore McGwire at quarterback and he completed seven of 14 passes for 86 yards. Hartlieb, a senior, replaced McGwire midway through the second period and was 10-of-17 for 129 yards. Junior Tom Poholsky completed five of 13 for 65 yards after taking over late in the third quarter with Iowa trailing 14-13.

Boosters meet tonight

The Pampa Harvester Booster Club will elect new officers at its meeting tonight, starting at 7 p.m. in the high school football fieldhouse.

General business items will also be discussed at the meeting. The public is invited to attend.

Lady Harvesters host Tascosa Rebs tonight

AMARILLO — Pampa's Lady Harvesters gave powerful Tascosa quite a scare before losing out in the quarterfinals of the Amarillo Invitational Volleyball Tournament Saturday.

Pampa won the opening game 15-10 before losing the next two, 15-10, 15-9.

"We kinda stunned Tascosa in the first game because that was the first game they've lost all season," said Pampa coach Mike Lopez. "The girls are beginning to understand what playing as a team really means."

Unbeaten Tascosa advanced to defeat Lamesa 15-8, 15-9 in the finals. Lamesa is the defending Class 4A state champion.

Strong spiking by Tanya Lidy and Yolanda Brown plus solid setting by Lisa Lindsey and Glennis Brown gave Pampa a near-upset for Tascosa. Lidy, Schivonne Parker and Tracy Williams aided Pampa's defense with several blocked shots.

Pampa has a chance for revenge tonight when the two teams meet at 6:30 p.m. in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Pampa, 6-5 on the season, opened the Amarillo Tournament with a 15-4, 15-5 win over Canyon. Caprock defeated Pampa 15-7, 17-15 to drop the Lady Harvesters into the loser's bracket.

Pampa bounced back with a 15-4, 15-7 victory over El Paso Jefferson for the right to meet Tascosa.

Strong serving by Glennis Brown, Lindsey and Keitha Clark and good back row play by Deanya Waters coming off the bench sparked Pampa throughout the tournament.

Yolanda Brown was selected to the all-tournament team. Tascosa's Tiffany Hobbs was named the most valuable player.

Butler selected as Pampa High soccer coach

Billy Butler, Pampa High head baseball coach and assistant Harvester football coach, will add another sport to his repertoire this spring.

Butler was selected to coach Pampa High's new soccer program, the Athletic Director's Office announced Friday.

Earlier this month, Pampa school trustees approved a boys' soccer program, which will kick off in April. A girls' program is tentatively planned to start a year later.

Since soccer is not a UIL sanctioned sport in this area, the program will be under the direction of the physical education program.

Butler is no stranger to soccer. He played soccer in the United States Air Force while stationed in England and was the goalie for Eastfield Community College in Dallas for three years.

Pampa's soccer team will play its home games at Shocker Field, located adjacent to Harvester Field. Pampa's opponents will be the four Amarillo schools.

Taiwan captures Little League championship

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Aron Garcia led a team from Irvine, Calif., to the Little League World Series championship game with a curveball, dropball and 70-mph fastball.

Garcia, a 5-foot-7, 125-pound 12-year-old, amassed a 10-0 record in the tournament, including a no-hitter in Irvine's 11-0 win over Dover, N.H., in the World Series quarterfinals and nine shutouts.

But Hua Lian, Taiwan, rattled Garcia from the opening at-bat in the championship game Saturday as Garcia's composure and Irvine's hopes of the ending the Far East's Little League dynasty faded early.

Hua Lian scored five runs in the first inning en route to a 21-1 rout of the U.S. West champion.

Pang Yu-Long led off with a shot to third base that deflected off Irvine third baseman Lee Tran for an error. Garcia walked the next two batters, threw two wild pitches and gave up another walk and two hits as Hua Lian was on its way to becoming the 17th Far East champion in the last 21 years.

Garcia, who had given up one run in the previous 60 innings, allowed 13 hits and all 21 runs in the first 2 2-3 innings.

Yu-Long hit a grand slam in a nine-run second inning, and Yu-Long, Lin Yi-Hung and Wang Chi-Kwou each added two-run homers in the seven-run third.

The score was the most lopsided in the 40-year history of the Little League World Series.

Hua Lian pitcher Yi-Hung kept Irvine's offense at bay, allowing six hits while striking out nine and walking two.

Irvine scored its only run in the top of the third when Geoff Ebdon stole home after Garcia drew a pickoff attempt at second from catcher Shih Gin-Shou.

Ebdon had reached base on a walk and advanced on a fielder's choice and error.

Pirates sweep Astros

By ALAN ROBINSON
AP Sports Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates have been out of the National League East pennant race since the early weeks of the season, but they're proving a lot bigger factor in the NL West race than the Houston Astros and Cincinnati Reds would like.

The Pirates, continuing to get outstanding pitching from their young staff, beat the Houston Astros 7-0 Sunday to complete their second straight three-game sweep of an NL West contender.

The Pirates, who beat the Reds three in a row last week, turned Doug Drabek's first major-league complete game and shut-out and John Cangelosi's three-run home run into a season-high sixth consecutive victory.

The Astros, losing their fifth in a row, remained 3 1-2 games behind the division-leading San Francisco Giants, prompting unhappy Astros Manager Hal Lanier to hold a post-game closed-door clubhouse meeting.

"We didn't swing the bats here at all. What did we get, four runs in three games? You're not going to win any games doing that," he said. "Everybody just stopped hitting."

Drabek, 7-10, won his fifth in a row by pitching a three-hitter. He didn't allow a hit after Bill Doran's leadoff single in the fourth, striking out seven and walking two, and has given up only four earned runs in his last three starts.

"I didn't get down on myself when I was 2-10," Drabek said. "(Pitching coach) Ray Miller kept on me and told me to relax and settle down, that I was pitching good enough to win."

"Ray did a good job of keeping him pumped up and motivated, he kept telling him he had good stuff and would be a winning pitcher," said Pirates Manager Jim Leyland.

Pittsburgh starters Bob Walk, Mike Bielecki and Drabek allowed only three runs in the series as the Pirates improved to 36-30 against the NL West. They are 23-41 in the NL East.

"Would we be a contender in the West? Not with our record (59-71)," Leyland said. "I don't know why we're better against the West, but you've got to do it against the entire league, and we haven't done that yet."

"I wasn't trying to hit a homer. I knew I'd hit it hard, but I thought it was going off the wall," said the 5-foot-8 Cangelosi.

Raiders shoot down Cowboys

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP)—The Los Angeles Raiders cut the preseason list of NFL winless teams to just the Green Bay Packers and Pittsburgh Steelers.

And they did it Sunday night against their old friends, the Dallas Cowboys, who lost for the seventh time in eight preseason meetings to the Raiders, dropping a 34-10 decision in Texas Stadium.

Dallas hasn't beaten the Raiders in a preseason game since 1972 and hasn't won a game in Texas Stadium since beating St. Louis 37-6 on Oct. 26, 1986.

Vance Mueller's 40-yard scoring run and Stefan Adams' 75-yard touchdown return of a punt finished off the Cowboys before 46,063 fans.

The Raiders-Cowboys game was the only NFL preseason activity Sunday. In exhibition games Saturday, it was the New York Jets 30, New York Giants 23; New England 38, Minnesota 27; Tampa Bay 17, Washington 10; Miami 35, Philadelphia 3; New Orleans 31, Pittsburgh 28; Cincinnati 28, Green Bay 20; Cleveland 23, Atlanta 3; Kansas City 34, Buffalo 14; Indianapolis 17, Houston 6; and Denver 24, Los Angeles Rams 20.

The next-to-last weekend of preseason play concludes tonight with the St. Louis Cardinals at Chicago to meet the Bears.

Jets 30, Giants 23

The New York Jets won the "Giants Stadium Bowl" by rallying from a 13-point first-half deficit to beat the Super Bowl champions, who lost for the first time in 14 games, dating back to Week 7 of last season.

The Jets trailed 16-3 early in the second quarter against their co-tenants before rallying to take a 27-16 lead in the third quarter. A key play in the comeback was Pat Ryan's 40-yard touchdown pass to Mickey Shuler three seconds before halftime.

Ken O'Brien hit Kurt Sohn with a 32-yard scoring pass early in the third period to put the Jets ahead to stay. Johnny Hector added a one-yard scoring plunge later in the period.

Saints 31, Steelers 28

Dave Wilson passed for 233 yards and three touchdowns to lead New Orleans, which overcame a 14-3 second-quarter deficit.

Wilson connected with rookie receiver Lonzell Hill for a 76-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter and a 22-yard scoring toss in the third quarter, which gave the Saints a 24-21 lead.

Dolphins 35, Eagles 3

Don Strock threw three touchdown passes in a 28-point second quarter for the Dolphins.

Strock completed 10 of 19 passes for 203 yards in the first half before giving way to former Eagle Ron Jaworski, who threw a 13-yard TD pass to James Pruitt in his return to Veterans Stadium.

Buccaneers 17, Redskins 10

Steve DeBerg threw a 4-yard touchdown pass to James Wilder with 1:43 left to give Tampa Bay the victory.

The winning touchdown was set up when Tampa nose guard Bob Nelson recovered a fumbled snap at the Redskins' 22-yard line.

Rookie quarterback Vinny Testaverde played the second and third quarters for Tampa Bay, completing 6 of 13 passes for 105 yards and one interception.

Patriots 38, Vikings 27

Steve Grogan completed 17 of 22 passes for 277 yards and three touchdowns, including an 80-yard bomb to Stanley Morgan on the Patriots' first play from scrimmage.

Vikings quarterback Tommy Kramer made his 1987 debut after spending 28 days in treatment for alcohol abuse. He completed 3 of 10 passes for 53 yards and fumbled four times before leaving the game in the third quarter with a pinched nerve in his neck.

Bengals 28, Packers 20

Boomer Esiason threw second-half touchdown passes to Eddie Brown and Cris Collinsworth to lead the Bengals.

Esiason, who did not play in the first half, connected with Collinsworth on a 35-yard touchdown pass with 7:37 to go for the final score. He hit Brown with a 12-yard scoring toss to cap an 80-yard drive on the opening series of the second half.

Broncos 24, Rams 20

Ken Bell's 5-yard touchdown run with 1:16 remaining gave Denver the victory and a measure of revenge for a loss to the Rams in London three weeks earlier.

Bell's TD climaxed a 68-yard drive engineered by backup quarterback Gary Kubiak.

Colts 17, Oilers 6

Willie Tullis' 74-yard punt return and Jack Trudeau's 46-yard scoring pass to Matt Bouza in the third quarter sparked the Colts.

Trudeau, who started 11 games last year as a rookie, entered the game midway through the first quarter after Gary Hogeboom suffered torn ligaments in his left thumb. Hogeboom will be out indefinitely.

Browns 23, Falcons 3

Bernie Kosar completed 15 of 22 passes for 162 yards and Jeff Jaeger kicked three field goals to lead the Browns.

The Browns' defense sacked Atlanta quarterbacks David Archer and Turk Schonert five times and held the Falcons to 134 yards in total offense.

Kansas City 34, Buffalo 14

Chas Fox returned the opening kickoff 96 yards for a touchdown and Todd Blackledge threw two touchdowns passes to lift the Chiefs.

Blackledge hit Darrell Colbert with a 20-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter and found Stephone Paige with a 17-yard strike in the second period.

Okamoto wins World golf title

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

BUFORD, Ga. (AP)—Ayako Okamoto, one of Japan's most popular athletes, figures she sent her native country into a celebration after capturing the $250,000 World Championship of women's golf.

"Banzai," Okamoto replied Sunday when she was asked what reaction her victory might produce in Japan.

Loosely translated, banzai means a big cheer, something to celebrate.

Okamoto, fighting a cold throughout the week, claimed the richest first prize in LPGA history, $81,500, with a final-round 1-under-par 71.

She had a 72-hole total of 282, six under par on the hilly, 6,073-yard PineIsle Resort course along the shores of Lake Lanier and good enough for a one-shot victory over Betsy King.

King, the LPGA's leading money winner in 1987, had a 68 Sunday and earned $43,400 for her second-place finish, good enough to keep her atop the money list with $425,175.

The battle for the money title this year will go down to the wire in the last five official events. Okamoto moved into second place with $411,995 and Jane Geddes, who finished third at 73-284, fell into third place after winning $28,900 to give her $383,830 for the year. Okamoto wrapped up her 12th tour victory and her fourth of the year when she knocked in a 12-foot birdie putt on the par-5 16th hole, going to six under after King had already completed play.

"The 16th hole was everything today," Okamoto said. "I knew I had to get a birdie because I might bogey the 17th or 18th."

Okamoto either led or shared the lead throughout the round, breaking on top with consecutive birdies on the third and fourth holes.

Geddes had started the day with a share of the lead, but fell one shot back when Okamoto birdied No. 3. Then, on the fourth, Geddes' approach sailed over the green. She bogeyed and suddenly was three back when Okamoto birdied again.

Geddes then appeared to be hopelessly out of it when she put two tee shots in the water on the par-5 No. 5 and took a 9.

Geddes fought back after a bogey on No. 6 to play the last 12 holes in four under, but it wasn't enough.

King possibly could have forced a playoff, but she missed a 3-foot birdie putt on the 13th hole.
