Reagan calls market bedlam a correction

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, trying to assure the nation not to fear a recession, is softening his opposition to higher taxes as a tool for shrinking big budget deficits that have frightened Wall Street.

Early next week the president is expected to meet Republican and Democratic leaders of Congress to set ground rules for debating pending cuts and tax increases. But he said he would not accept any tax hike that would hurt the economy.

In his first White House news conference since March, Reagan warned there may be more trouble in the market. But he said the dive in stock prices was merely "a long overdue correction" and "there are no indicators out there of a recession or hard times ahead."

He said he was awaiting word from talks in Moscow on the timing for a superpower summit expected next month with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Reagan also said he could not put a deadline on how long the American military buildup will last in the Persian Gulf.

"But I don't see it as leading to a war or anything else, and I don't think there's anything to panic about," Reagan said.

Time to set clocks back

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once again, the nation nears the semi-annual shift between daylight and standard time.

Clocks should be turned back an hour to standard time at 2 a.m. Sunday.

Daylight-saving time started this year on the first Sunday in April, instead of at the end of that month.

It is concluding at the normal time though, at 2 a.m. the last Sunday in October.

Most people will set their clocks back before retiring Saturday night to prevent them from being an hour early Sunday for church or other gatherings.

Stock prices skid in hectic early trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices skidded early this morning in hectic trading, and the battered Dow Jones industrial average dropped another 28 points in the first 45 minutes.

By 10:15 a.m., the Dow average was down about 28 points to 1,922.43. Broader market indexes also fell and trading was described as very heavy in today's abbreviated session.

The decline followed a severe market decline in Tokyo and another bad day in London that capped the worst week in world stock markets since the Great Depression.

The fresh stock drop today came despite President Reagan's insistence Thursday night that the market panic incited by the unprecedented 508-point tumble in the Dow average Monday was a correction and the economy remained healthy.

Stock traders said there was fear that Reagan and the Congress would fail to act decisively to correct the gigantic federal budget deficit, trade deficit and long-term U.S. debt that many believe are key causes of the market's anxiety.

"I think there obviously is some disappointment with Reagan," said Joseph Barthel, senior vice president and director of technical strategy at the Philadelphia brokerage Butcher & Singer Inc. "I think you're getting some selling because of fear that the president is fiddling while Rome burns."

Wall Street sellers also seemed to be ignoring two pieces of good news today from Washington: Consumer prices rose just 0.2 percent last month as the gross national product surged ahead at a 3.8 percent clip.

The flight from stocks sent more money pouring into U.S. Treasury securities, driving up the price and depressing the yield. The return on the Treasury's key 30-year issue dropped below 9 percent early today, compared with 10.4 percent at the start of the tumultuous week.

Earlier today in Tokyo, home of the world's largest stock exchange, the key 225-share Nikkei stock average plunged 1,203.23 points — its second-largest one-day decline — to close at 23,201.22 points.

Prices also fell sharply in London

Stock Exchange trading, reflecting fears about Reagan's comments on the economy and Wall Street's reaction. The Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index had tumbled 74.7 points by midday at 1,758.5 after a 110.6 point drop Thursday.

The Dow Jones average fell 140 points in early trading Thursday, seasawed through the afternoon and closed 77.42 points lower at 1,950.43 after two days of strong gains.

Five stocks fell for every one that rose Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange, and volume exceeded 392 million shares in the fourth-busiest trading day ever.

The plunge erased nearly $108 billion from the value of all U.S. stocks and came despite a drop in major banks' prime lending rate, often a rallying point for Wall Street.

Frantic selling reached most other markets, eroding the dollar's value and pushing up the price of U.S. Treasury bonds and gold in a shift by investors from stocks to relatively safer securities.

In other developments Thursday: ■ The New York and American stock exchanges announced they would close two hours early for the next three trading days to allow Wall Street to process a backlog of paperwork from this week's staggering volume.

Also, the NYSE announced further restraints on computer program trading.

Lefors to dedicate new Baptist church

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

LEFORS — It's been just six months since an Easter Sunday afternoon fire destroyed the Lefors First Baptist Church.

But already congregation members are moving into a new church building that has arisen over the ashes of the former building at 315 E. 4th.

This is the third time the congregation has faced rebuilding or remodeling the church in its history, once from damages in a 1960 fire and the other from destruction in a 1975 tornado.

But Rev. Lewis Ellis, pastor, expressed hopes that any future building will be only for expansion for a growing membership and not from any necessity created by similar disasters.

The new church will be dedicated in special services at 2 p.m. Sunday, part of the opening of a week of revival meetings. The old building caught fire on the afternoon of April 19, just after a spring revival series had ended.

Rev. Ellis, who took over the pastorate of Lefors First Baptist just a few weeks before the fire, will deliver the dedication sermon. Rev. Joe Wortham, pastor of Highland Baptist Church in Pampa, will moderate the dedication service.

Also participating will be Larry Heard, director of missions for the Top o' Texas Area, who will read scriptures during the service, and A.G. "Pete" Roberts of Lefors, who will give the call to worship and read scriptures. Roberts has served as interim pastor for the church many times between past pastors.

Leading the music will be Michael Downs, new math teacher in the Lefors Independent School District who also serves as the church's music director.

"Everybody's excited about the dedication service," Rev. Ellis said, adding that he was expecting a large number of visitors from former residents coming home for the service, a number of area pastors and other interested Lefors area residents.

There will be no Sunday evening service. After Sunday School classes, the revival services will begin at 11 a.m. with Rev. Howard J. Jones, interim pastor at Hamlin, as evangelist.

When the morning service concludes, there will be a lunch at the church before the dedication service gets under way.

Rev. Ellis works in new study at Lefors First Baptist Church.

The revival will continue with noon services and 7:30 p.m. evening services Monday through Friday.

In a way, the revival will celebrate the revival of the church.

The Easter fire apparently started from a malfunctioning and overheated heating and air conditioning unit in the early afternoon after members had gone home from the Easter morning worship service.

By the time the Lefors Volunteer Fire Department was called about 2:25 p.m. that day, the fire had erupted through the roof. Despite the efforts of the Lefors and Pampa firefighters and numerous volunteers from Lefors residents, the blaze gutted the main structure, with the roof collapsing and only the walls left standing.

The fire destroyed the sanctuary, upper classrooms, fellowship hall and kitchen. It also destroyed Ellis' church library materials, leaving him only a pocket Bible.

SPS asks rate drop, fuel credit

Pampa area electric utility customers may see lower bills by the end of the year, according to an announcement today by Southwestern Public Service Co. (SPS).

The utility company announced today it is preparing to file for an annual rate decrease of approximately $13 million, or 2.8 percent, for its residential, commercial, industrial and other retail customers in Texas.

SPS officials say the decrease request is primarily due to savings resulting from federal tax reform.

In addition to the overall monthly rate decrease, SPS is requesting to credit to its Texas retail customers $11 million in fuel-cost savings and interest.

The lower rates and the one-time credit could be effective by December, said Sam Hunter, SPS vice president of rates and economic research.

Ken Vaughn, with the SPS public information office in Amarillo, said the one-time fuel rebate would result in a credit of $12 to $13 on a $45 monthly bill for a user of 600 kilowatt hours.

Vaughn said the one-time credit will probably be reflected in the December billings, if the request is granted.

The overall 2.8 percent rate decrease will apply to all monthly bills on a regular basis after the request is granted.

Currently, SPS is conferring with the cities it serves in Texas and with the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC) on the amount and timing of the rate reduction.

In Texas, cities have original jurisdiction over base rates within their city limits. The PUC establishes base rates in rural areas and regulates the fuel-cost portion of electric rates.

Effective with SPS' current fiscal year, which began Sept. 1, its federal income tax rate was dropped from 44 percent to 34 percent. Although some corporate tax credits and deductions were eliminated by federal tax reform, the net effect is a smaller tax burden, Hunter said.

Taxes are included in the cost. See SPS, Page 2

Hospital board slams doctor's Medicare penalty

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — Dr. Teddy Darocha, the Canadian physician sanctioned last week by Medicare officials, is appealing his sanction through an administrative law judge, Darocha's attorney, Mack Sansing, confirmed today.

Last week, the Department of Health and Human Services Office of Inspector General issued a sanction against Darocha, barring him from participating in the Medicare program for two years.

The sanction, which goes into effect Monday, was levied on recommendation from the Texas Medical Foundation, which charged that the doctor had five "gross and flagrant violations" in his administration of antibiotics.

At an emergency meeting Thursday, the Hemphill County Hospital Board of Directors unanimously protested the sanction "until Darocha has been given an opportunity to be heard before an impartial tribunal."

The hospital resolution declares that Darocha's exclusion from treating Medicare patients would "create a significant and needless hardship on Darocha's elderly patients."

Canadian's two other practicing physicians, Dr. Malouf Abraham and Dr. William Isaacs, declared that they could not take on Darocha's Medicare patients. A third physician, general practitioner Dr. Valerie Verbi, is on leave because she had a baby Wednesday.

Canadian attorney Sansing said this morning that he and Darocha, 64, will appeal the sanction through a federal administrative law judge, which will be appointed from a five-state district.

If that doesn't work, Sansing said, he may seek a restraining order to keep the federal agency from implementing its sanction.

Sansing hopes to make progress on the appeal through the administrative law judge before Monday.

"But who knows," Sansing said. "We are dealing with a bureaucracy."

The Texas Medical Foundation's Peer Review Organization recommended the federal sanction against Darocha on allegations of a "lack of knowledge of antibiotic use."

Judy Holtz, a public affairs specialist with the Inspector General's office in Washington, D.C., said she could not offer more specific charges from the PRO findings. She reported that although Darocha had showed a willingness to correct the situation, the PRO felt he was unable to comply.

None of Darocha's five cases resulted in death.

Attorney Sansing said today that what the PRO said were "gross and flagrant violations" actually amounted to a difference in procedure.

"They felt there were certain procedures that needed to be done," Sansing said, adding that the agency's procedure for administering antibiotics is not wrong.

"But neither was Dr. Darocha's," Sansing said.

"The doctor is now following their procedure," Sansing added. "Those charts are See PENALTY, Page 2

Church

First Baptist Church, just two days before Christmas, Ellis said. "I'd always heard how devastating something like that can be — but you never really know until you go through it yourself."

But as in past events at the church, the disaster was soon put behind as the pastor, and congregation quickly vowed to rebuild.

Ellis, who had taken over as pastor in March and moved to Lefors from Pampa just a couple of weeks before the fire, said the church received a check for $400,000 from the insurance company only about 10 days after the fire. That money has been used to build the new church and purchase furnishings, tables and other materials, leaving the building debt-free.

The razing of the old fire-gutted structure began on May 10 — "My father died that morning; that's why I can remember the date so well," Ellis said.

Under the direction of contractor Sawatsky Construction Co. of Pampa and Weatherford, Okla., the new construction began just a few days later.

"We did pretty good to get this far this quick," Ellis said.

The new red brick building has a white steeple. Inside, blue carpeting covers the sanctuary and hallway floors. Brown wood trim, pulpit and pews accent the sanctuary, with a large wooden cross above the baptismal font behind the choir loft.

The structure includes classrooms, a fellowship hall with adjoining kitchen, a nursery — and a new pastor's study, with the shelves already filling with the new books he has acquired to rebuild his library.

Ellis expressed appreciation to the residents of Lefors, even those who are not members of his congregation. "The whole town has been really interested," he said, noting the numbers who had assisted in fighting the fire, those who have been dropping by to watch the construction.

"Lefors — anytime anyone needs help, they respond pretty well," he stated.

And other area residents also have shown their interest and concern, Ellis said. For the week after the fire, a number of pastors from Pampa, Miami and other towns dropped by to see how they could help, he said.

"Everybody's been great," he said.

He also expressed appreciation to the church's Building Committee, formed from the deacons, Finance Committee and trustees. "They went right to work, and have continued to work hard since then" to get the new building, he said.

Since the fire, the congregation has been having its services in the Lefors United Methodist Church, which offered to share its facilities.

"The Methodist people sure have been great; they've been a lifesaver for us as far as meetings are concerned," he said.

The Baptists have used the Methodist church for its Sunday and Wednesday worship services, with young children's classes and nursery held in the basement while 7th grade through adult classes have been held in homes of members.

"You can have the classes pretty well in homes," Ellis said. "But it's kind of hard to find a home big enough to have a worship service in."

With some finishing touches still left — parking lots to be paved, grass sod to be laid, some materials still on back order — the congregation didn't wait until the dedication Sunday to move in. They held their first services in the building last Sunday.

"Everybody will be meeting under one roof again," he said.

Though not going so far as to give the fire the credit, Ellis said church attendance among the approximately 250 members has been growing. Before the fire, attendance had averaged 68 a week. Since then, it has averaged over 100, with 137 attending Sunday School on the first day in the new building.

ing, which allows investors to sell huge quantities of stock in moments. It has been blamed for aggravating the market's volatility and creating the staggering trade volume.

Major U.S. banks, led by giant Citibank, rolled back their prime lending rates a quarter percentage point to 9 percent less than two weeks after increasing them.

Investors bailing out of volatile stocks and into more stable government bonds sent the price of the Treasury's benchmark 30-year bond rocketing about 3 points, a hefty $30 for every $1,000 in face value, while its yield slid to 9.09 percent from 9.45 percent.

Financial institutions such as Merrill Lynch & Co., Prudential-Bache Securities and Shearson Lehman Brothers created new ads. The Dow industrials' unprecedented 508-point plunge on Monday wiped out 22.6 percent of the index's value, a bigger one-day decline than during the Crash of 1929.

of providing electric service.

"The fuel-cost savings resulted from several factors," Hunter said.

"First, we obtained lower prices for coal and natural gas. Second, because of the relatively mild summer, we did not have to operate older, less efficient power plants as much as in the past. Third, we have continued to improve the efficiency of our plants," Hunter explained.

Hunter noted that SPS was recently cited as the seventh best among the 100 largest investor-owned electric utilities in the United States in terms of generating efficiency.

Wholesale customers of SPS — rural electric cooperatives and municipal utilities — in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma are expected to receive a rate decrease of $13.2 million, or 6.9 percent, and a one-time credit of $5 million, Hunter said.

SPS is discussing the proposed wholesale rates with its wholesale customers prior to filing a rate request with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) in Washington, D.C.

SPS provides wholesale power to 16 rural electric cooperatives in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma, and to municipal electric utilities in Lubbock, Floydada, Tulia and Brownfield.

The electric utility company primarily provides electric service to a population of about 1 million in a 52,000-square-mile area of eastern and southeastern New Mexico, the South Plains and Panhandle of Texas, the Oklahoma Panhandle and the southwest corner of Kansas.

Penalty

now as clean as a whistle."

When the medical foundation was threatening the sanction earlier this year, Canadian physicians and Congressman Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, charged that the group was unfairly singling out rural doctors.

Sansing speculated that doctors at smaller hospitals are subject to closer scrutiny because they tend to have a higher percentage of Medicare patients in their community.

"Their exposure is greater," Sansing said, adding that while a city doctor may take on 1 percent of a community's Medicare load, "Dr. Darocha has a large percentage of the load."

Dr. Abraham said today that he cannot take on new Medicare patients.

"I have 22 Medicare patients at the Abraham Memorial Nursing Home, and Dr. Darocha has 12," Abraham said, adding that with Darocha out of the Medicare system and with Verbi on leave, "that just leaves Dr. Isaacs and myself to treat the Medicare patients."

Isaacs, Verbi's husband, could not be reached for comment.

Sansing added that city hospitals have specialists who reorganize files to meet the "cookbook criteria" imposed by the Medicare agencies.

In their resolution, the five Canadian hospital board members issued the following findings:

■ that the board feels Darocha was not afforded a fair hearing and that doctors in the community and outlying area are "without any known exceptions, totally opposed to the conclusions reached by PRO officials concerning Darocha's quality of care."

■ that the sanctions would create a significant hardship on elderly county residents. Care would be reduced or unavailable for "people traditionally dependent on medical care in the city of Canadian."

■ that only one Canadian doctor, Darocha, is willing and able to accept new Medicare patients.

■ that the reduction in patient admissions to the hospital "would cause further financial strain" on the hospital district.

■ that the sanction will have a negative impact on coverage of the emergency room and will require Abraham and Isaacs to increase their emergency room coverage by 50 percent or force the hospital to acquire "costly emergency room coverage" from physicians in other towns.

"somebody who is qualified in the same way as he is."

Reagan's appearance came 3 1/2 hours after the stock market, battered by a 508-point plunge Monday, seasawed back and forth and closed down 77 points in heavy trading.

Two Texas banks declared insolvent

By The Associated Press

The number of failed Texas banks has risen to 44 — nearly a third of the national total — after the collapse of banks in Bryan and Bovina, federal officials say.

The closure of the Western National Bank in Bryan and the First State Bank of Bovina brought the national tally Thursday to 151 bank failures.

The Bryan bank was declared insolvent and the First State Bank in Caldwell assumed the failed bank's accounts, Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. spokesman Bill Olcheski said.

The bank was closed by Robert J. Herrmann, senior deputy comptroller of the currency, after an examination showed losses exceeded capital funds, said Dale Underwood, a spokesman for the comptroller's office.

"The bank became a matter of supervisory concern to the comptroller's office in 1986," Underwood said. "The volume of troubled loans rapidly increased in the second half of 1986 and early 1987."

Factors contributing to the decline in the bank's condition included a poor local economy, poor lending practices of prior management, ineffective supervision by the board of directors and increasing liquidity demands, he said.

In the Panhandle town of Bovina, meanwhile, state Banking Commissioner Kenneth W. Littlefield declared First State Bank insolvent. The FDIC agreed to let the First Bank in Muleshoe take over the failed bank's only office and open it today as one of its branches.

The Bovina bank had total assets of $16.4 million, and the Muleshoe bank will assume $14.4 million in 1,900 accounts and pay purchase premium to the FDIC of $168,000. It also will by some failed loans and assets for $12.4 million.

The FDIC will advance $1.9 million to the assuming bank to aid the transaction and will retain $4 million in assets. The failure was the 44th agriculture bank nationally, Olcheski said.

Littlefield said the bank in the small farming and ranching community southwest of Amarillo had experienced sudden deterioration in its loan portfolio due primarily to loans extended to the bank's major stockholder and related borrowers involving West Texas cattle operations.

The FDIC's board of directors also approved the transfer of insured deposits and fully secured or preferred deposits of the failed Bryan bank to First State Bank, Olcheski said.

The failed bank's sole office was to open today as a branch of First State Bank, he said.

The FDIC decided to arrange an insured deposit transfer because no bids were received for a purchase and assumption transaction, Olcheski said.

At the time the bank closed, its deposits totaled about $15.4 million in 6,000 deposit accounts, including 17 accounts that exceeded the FDIC insurance limit of $100,000, Olcheski said.

Administration of the transferred insured deposits will be funded by an equivalent cash payment from the FDIC. The acquiring bank is paying the FDIC a premium of $5,000 for the right to receive the transferred deposits and will purchase other assets for $1.4 million.

Sarpalius holds conference agenda.

Senator: Education, juvenile justice improvements needed

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas needs to improve its public education and juvenile justice systems to battle dropout rates and keep youngsters from turning to a life of crime, says the state chairman of a conference examining youth issues.

In some states, "you can actually see the results of their work by the prison population declining, and the reason is because they put more emphasis on developing stronger juvenile programs," Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo, told a news conference Thursday.

Sarpalius also announced the agenda of the 1987 Southern Legislators Conference on Children and Youth. The conference is scheduled for Nov. 15 to 18 in San Antonio.

Texas must work to keep students from dropping out and perhaps turning to crime, Sarpalius said, citing a reported state high school dropout rate of 33 percent.

Sweeping education reforms enacted in 1984 are not addressing the whole problem, he added. "I told (lawmakers in 1984) this was a great bill for preparing kids for college, but I said we failed on addressing the borderline student," he said.

"It's a whole lot cheaper to the taxpayers to invest your money in that kid in the second and third grade, and make sure they stay in school ... than it is to build more prisons," he said.

Rep. Anne Cooper, a San Marcos Republican who is on the Texas advisory committee for the conference, said the state particularly needs to address the 50 percent Hispanic dropout rate.

"We are predicting that in the year 2010 or 2015, the majority of Texans will be from the minority," she said. "Somebody's going to have to take care of this state in the 21st century, and it's our responsibility to provide the opportunities for them so they have the capability of doing it."

Sarpalius also said juvenile delinquents should be made more accountable for the crimes they commit.

"In Texas, a kid who commits rape or murder or beats up a senior citizen ... their average stay in (a Texas Youth Commission facility) is seven months," Sarpalius said.

Juveniles commit about one-third of all serious crimes, Sarpalius said.

"Kids are not stupid. They know that if they commit murder or rape or something like that, the punishment is very lax as compared to an adult," he said.

The sealing of juveniles' criminal records also makes them less accountable, he said.

The legislators' conference "gives Texas the opportunity, the members of the Legislature, to finally address many of these problems that we face in our state of dealing with juveniles," Sarpalius said.

Learning lessons from Jessica

My wife and I sat glued by the television last Friday.

The two of us, like millions of others, anxiously awaited word of when Jessica McClure would be rescued from her underground prison in Midland.

For 58½ hours, Jessica kept the world on the edge of its seat, and when that magical moment arrived and she was lifted from her living hell, people around the world heaved a giant sigh of relief because little Jessica was safe.

Oh, what that baby did to this world.

Think about it — when's the last time the world cried and smiled in unison, as if one?

Hearts were lifted because Jessica showed she possesses the guts and courage many people 20 times her age only dream of.

Shortly before 8 p.m. last Friday, football crowds throughout the Panhandle, Texas and other points across America stood and cheered as public address announcers spread the good cheer to the waiting.

"The little girl in the well is safe," read the game announcer in Miami.

Tears of joy were experienced as once again it was proven that some things in this world are more important than a football game.

Parents with children Jessica's age were especially anxious about the situation and her rescue. Our little Jennifer turned 21-months-old Wednesday. Being just three months older than Jessica, we kept one eye on the television and one eye on Jennifer to make sure she was OK.

I don't know why, but for some reason Karen and I kept a more watchful eye on our little girl during Jessica's ordeal.

I suppose Jessica's being trapped in a well sort of brought out the extra caution in us.

For those of you who are not parents, you may now have some idea of how special little people are in this world.

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

To hear a small child begin expanding her vocabulary is one of the greatest joys of life. To watch that child develop. To grow.

Thanks to the actions of many tireless and unselfish volunteers, Jessica, too, will have that chance to grow.

For the first time in her life, our little girl said "thank you" this week.

I don't remember why she said it. But there was some irony that she learned to say "thank you" so soon after Jessica was lifted from the well. It was as if Jennifer knew she should be thankful.

I don't mean to preach. I don't mean to soul search. I just mean to remind everyone that it's the little things — the little people — that make the trouble in this world seem so miniscule at times.

Like everyone else, I hoped and prayed that everything would turn out the way it did for Jessica.

And the whole time it was happening, I knew that this time there would be a happy ending. That good would triumph again.

Jessica's 2½ days underground taught us all a lot of lessons.

It taught me to be a better parent. It taught me that the world really is a good place. It taught me that it's OK to feel good about things.

In other words, I don't cry often ... but sometimes I do.

Stock market slide adds to woes of Texas banks

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas banking industry, already saddled with losses from a faltering real estate market, is suffering further setbacks in the wake of this week's gyrating stock market.

Analysts said Monday's stock crash has investors scurrying to find quality stocks and safe harbors for their cash. That means investors are less likely to buy issues of troubled Texas banks.

"If you look at the stock of Texas banks, they are telling you things are not all right in Texas," said Michael Plodwick, a bank analyst at E.F. Hutton Group Inc. of New York.

One signal came Thursday, when Standard & Poor's Corp. downgraded the debt ratings of First Republic Bank Corp as the Dallas bank-holding company's stock slipped following its third-quarter report that real estate woes had contributed to $3.1 million in non-performing loans.

Market uncertainties also prompted analysts to question whether an investment group led by Chicago banker A. Robert Abboud can sell about $525 million in securities to restructure First City Bancorporation Inc. of Houston.

"What we are calling for is a flight to quality by institutional investors, and, nothing against Mr. Abboud, but we have a hard time convincing people of First City's quality," Plodwick said.

First City reported a third-quarter loss of $108.4 million this week, but Abboud expressed confidence that the restructuring will be completed, saying Monday's stock crash was a correction of a market that was artificially high.

Tom C. Davis — a senior vice president in the Dallas office of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp., Abboud's investment banker — predicted investors will accept First City's common and preferred stock because terms of the restructuring provide for a workout bank to handle the bank's bad loans.

S&P downgraded First Republic's issues, saying, "The downgrades reflect the company's significant vulnerability to Texas real estate markets."

Andrew M. Aran, an S&P vice president, said the agency also took the action because First Republic added only $19 million to its loan-loss reserve when its non-performing loans jumped $706 million.

First Republic's stock closed Thursday at 9%, down 1½, as 192,400 shares changed hands in composite trading. The stock is down from 23½ on June 8, the first trading day after the June 6 acquisition of InterFirst Corp. by RepublicBank Corp., both of Dallas, to form First Republic.

Gerald W. Fronterhouse, chairman and chief executive officer, acknowledged the lower debt ratings reflect the additional weakness in Texas real estate.

Bank analysts said they were surprised by the size of the increase in troubled assets.

Church bandit is sentenced

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A jury with a Methodist minister as foreman has set 70 years in prison as punishment for a man accused of robbing the poor box at a Roman Catholic church of about $1,900.

The jurors set the punishment Thursday for Guadalupe Garay, 32, who had been charged with aggravated robbery in connection with the robbery at St. Margaret Mary's Catholic Church.

With the Rev. Larry Clinton Howard of the Northern Hills United Methodist Church as foreman, the jury took only 15 minutes Thursday to find Garay guilty and about an hour to set his punishment.

Assistant District Attorney Mark Luitjen had sought a life sentence, but he said 70 years amounts to a life sentence, which is anything over 60 years.

Garay was accused of tying up the church secretary and taking $1,900 from the church's poor box.

Opinion

Low-flying proposal would cost travelers

The House recently passed a piece of patchwork legislation mislabeled as "consumer protection" for airline passengers, and the Senate is expected to consider similar legislation soon. Since the legislation is predicated on a fundamental misdiagnosis of the problems afflicting air travel, it cannot be expected to do much good. Its most signal accomplishment would be to increase the cost of air travel. If the Senate passes similar legislation, President Reagan should veto it.

The House package would require airlines to compensate passengers for lost or delayed baggage and for flights cancelled for reasons other than safety. Airlines would also have to submit detailed monthly reports (which would eventually be made available to the public) on their performance in various areas. Guess who will end up paying the increased costs involved?

In a major move toward airline reregulation, the bill would also require the Department of Transportation to set flight limits at large airports, write new restrictions for hub airports, and "protect" the jobs of workers affected by mergers. This last provision would do a great deal to short-circuit the dynamic processes of change — dubbed "creative destruction" by economist Joseph Schumpeter — that work toward increased efficiency and improved consumer service in a truly competitive marketplace.

It is particularly ironic that this bill was passed during the same week that the FAA announced that airline delays declined significantly from last summer to this summer. Or maybe it's less ironic than typical. The politicians' approach to a real or imagined problem is often to dither, stew, and lecture while private citizens solve it, then (after the fact) to pass legislation to make it worse.

The premise behind this bill is that, since the airline industry was partially deregulated in 1978, the airlines have misused their freedom and have been unable to solve certain problems endemic to an unregulated marketplace, so Congress will just have to step in and straighten them out. This premise is laughably out of whack with reality.

Although certain aspects of the airline industry were deregulated in 1978, key portions of the air travel industry were left in government hands, and these areas have caused most of the subsequent problems. The federal government still runs the troubled air-traffic control system. Local governments still own most major airports. Because they are government operations, both ATC systems and airports have been slow and rigid in responding to the dramatic changes in the privately-owned sector creating circumstances where delays are virtually inevitable.

Instead of pinning the blame where it belongs — on government-run systems — the House bill seeks to slap the airlines around a little.

The sensible approach would be to finish the job of deregulating and privatizing air travel.

Wake up to issue of statehood

WASHINGTON — September was a busy month around here. Controversies were swirling over Nicaragua, the Persian Gulf and Judge Robert Bork. It is understandable that virtually no attention was paid to an extraordinary bill that came shooting out of a House committee on Sept. 17. The bill would grant statehood to the city of Washington, D.C.

The nation had better wake up to this issue. The bill, H.R. 51, is now ripe for consideration on the floor of the House. We may be certain that the same coalition that ganged up against Judge Bork will gang up again. The American Civil Liberties Union, the National Organization for Women, the blacks, the homosexuals, the whole shebang, will be whooping it up for the "state of New Columbia." Unlike a constitutional amendment, which requires the approval of 38 states, the pending bill requires only simple majorities in each house of Congress. The possibility that this unique city could become the 51st state is real and it is imminent.

The proposal is preposterous. It is also unworkable, unconstitutional and impractical. From the viewpoint of conservatives in both parties, the bill holds a prospect of political disaster. This curious new state predictably would send two liberal Democrats to the Senate for generations to come — and two more liberal Democrats in a closely divided Senate of 102 members would carry heavy weight.

The bill rests upon a single premise — that true democracy is denied the 626,000 residents of the District of Columbia because they cannot vote for members of Congress. "Simple justice," says the committee report, demands that this grievance be corrected. The argument is superficially appealing. After all, residents of

James J. Kilpatrick

D.C. fight in the same wars, pay the same taxes and live under the same federal laws that apply throughout the nation, but they have no direct voice in making these laws.

As a practical matter, of course, residents of the District have a very loud voice in these matters: Sheer proximity gives them unusual power. This city is a one-industry town, and that industry is the federal government. The people who live within the District live here by choice; voluntarily they have made a trade-off. They have swapped their right to vote for members of Congress in exchange for the advantage and amenities of living in Washington.

The statehood bill runs head-on into grave constitutional problems. The 67 square miles that now constitute the District of Columbia were ceded by Maryland to the national government for one specific purpose — to provide a "seat of government" for the United States. Over this seat of government, Congress holds the power of "exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever." No stroke of legislative legerdemain can nullify the constitutional power. If Congress no longer wants or needs most of the 67 square miles, the specific purpose of the original cession becomes controlling, and Maryland's contingent title would have to be honored. You cannot form a new state within the jurisdiction of another state. The Constitution forbids it.

Another constitutional issue transcends questions of title to land. The 23rd Amendment gives the "district constituting the seat of government of the United States" three electoral votes for president. The pending bill would carve out a "federal enclave" extending from the White House and Mall to Capitol Hill. This would become the "seat of government." Within this enclave a handful of voters would remain. Unless the 23rd Amendment were repealed, these few voters would function in presidential elections as a whole state. They would cast the three electoral votes.

Proponents of statehood brush the 23rd Amendment aside: It would simply be "superseceded," they say, in the same way that the provisions relating to slavery in the Constitution of 1787 were superseded by the 13th Amendment of 1865. It also is remarked that a proposed constitution for "New Columbia" contains a Section 1110 that permits a resident of the enclave, "at his or her option," to be deemed a resident of New Columbia for purposes of voting. The argument will not wash. Those three electoral votes cannot be summarily wished away. Statehood hinges upon repeal of the 23rd Amendment, and it is inconceivable that 38 states would thus accommodate proponents of the bill.

Perhaps the most preposterous aspect of the proposal is the notion that the nation's capital belongs not to the nation as such but to the residents of Washington as such. Hokum! The city of Washington belongs to all the people. We built it. We ought to keep it.

Groups blackmail for donations

Al Capone said, "Pay up or we'll bomb your business!" Today's racketeers say, "You buy our insurance, our beer, our linen — or we'll burn you out."

Any difference is minuscule. But there is a more widespread blackmail going on unprosecuted, largely unchallenged.

"Organizations" with righteous-sounding names insistently seek "donations" from corporations in the name of social justice or race rights or community betterment — under a real or implied threat to boycott the corporation's products.

This now commonplace practice has corporations making contributions to organizations and individuals whose views and purposes may be diametrically opposed to their own.

Professor Marvin Olansky, University of Texas at Austin, has written a book called Patterns of Corporate Philanthropy.

He says U.S. corporations, in the name of philanthropy, are contributing to their own destruction; that most of the money they donate to "public affairs groups" is used against them.

Much is made of the manner in which "special interest groups" bring pressure on government — on members of Congress and state legislatures.

Rarely does any corporation dare to confess outside the board room that it is being blackmailed by "special interest groups."

We are not here talking about corporate contributions to such responsible and respected organizations as United Way or Red Cross or the Salvation Army.

The social conscience of most corporations is enough motivation for gifts to bona fide charities — even though these are growing so increasingly numerous that many businesses are electing to funnel all corporate giving through a "foundation" established for the purpose of culling the most worthy from the less worthy.

But Professor Olansky says that "seven of every 10 dollars corporations give to public affairs groups eventually are used against them."

He includes what he called litigious environmentalists, radical feminists, liberal racial establishmentarians, professional philanthropists.

He cites the example of Honeywell Inc. Honeywell, a defense contractor, was the target of protesters until the company agreed to pay for a series of seminars questioning arms spending.

Call the payoff blackmail, or not; Al Capone couldn't have done it better!

Forbes Magazine computes that our nation's largest corporations contribute $1 billion a year in cash. Professor Olansky computes that the top 25 companies gave $10 million to so-called "public affairs groups."

And that seven of the 10 million went to "left of center organizations promoting a generally anti-business agenda."

Olansky's book deserves more attention than it will get.

Black voters change face of major cities

By Robert Walters

PHILADELPHIA (NEA) — Two of the nation's largest cities, Philadelphia and Chicago, now are experiencing fundamental political realignments that threaten to divide many of their low- and middle-income voters on the basis of race.

In both cities, old-line white politicians who formerly were Democratic Party leaders have switched their allegiance to the Republican Party and apparently have convinced tens of thousands of white voters to follow them.

In both cities, those profound changes are directly attributable to white discomfort with a Democratic Party whose voter base and political leadership in recent years have been increasingly dominated by blacks.

In Chicago, Alderman Edward R. Vrdolyak, a white who formerly was chairman of the Democratic Party in Cook County, last month switched to the Republican Party after repeatedly failing to defeat or humiliate Mayor Harold Washington, a black Democrat.

Vrdolyak is expected to be followed into the Republican Party in the coming months by 15,000 to 20,000 white voters who had been Democrats.

Cook County Sheriff James O'Grady, who previously switched from Democrat to Republican won his post by defeating an incumbent Democrat — the first GOP victory in a countywide political race since the mid-1970s. Last year, two Republicans won unprecedented victories in contests for Illinois state senate seats from Chicago districts.

In overwhelmingly white North-east Philadelphia, the entire delegation to the Pennsylvania state legislature — one senator and six representatives — has been transformed from Democratic to Republican in the last decade.

Moreover, that new-found interest in the GOP is spreading from white, middle-class Kensington and other Northeast communities to Fishtown and other low-income white neighborhoods in the city's "river wards" on the west bank of the Delaware.

That trend has accelerated dramatically because of the candidacy in this year's mayoral race of Frank L. Rizzo, who was a Democrat when he served two terms as mayor in the 1970s. Now he has turned Republican and he is believed to have induced 50,000 to 60,000 voters to also change parties.

As in Chicago, the white Rizzo switched parties after failing to unseat an incumbent black Democrat, Mayor W. Wilson Goode. The two men now are facing each other again in a bitterly contested mayoral campaign.

Most political observers here believe Goode will win next month's election. But unresolved after the ballots are counted will be the growing problem of politically induced racial polarization in the "City of Brotherly Love."

Blacks do not constitute a majority of Philadelphia's residents (it is 57 percent white and 40 percent black, with the remaining 3 percent composed of Hispanics, Asians and others). But blacks comprise — for the first time in the city's history — a majority of the registered Democrats. Philadelphia's mayor, the president of its city council and a host of other senior municipal officials all are black — a development viewed as salutary by black voters who believe their time has come to govern after long being denied political power.

Upper-income whites in "silk stocking" areas — those living in the high-rise apartment houses rimming Lake Michigan in Chicago and in neighborhoods such as Chestnut Hill and Society Hill here in Philadelphia — have emerged as the swing voters who often decide elections in both cities.

For other whites, however, declining influence within the Democratic Party makes the Republican Party increasingly appealing — a disturbing political trend that can only exacerbate racial tensions.

Lawmakers unhappy over airport weapons screening

WASHINGTON (AP) — Airlines are under fire in Congress following release of airport security test results showing that one out of every five mock weapons concealed by government inspectors slipped through detection systems.

Rep. Howard C. Nielson, R-Utah, says the government should consider publicizing individual airlines' track records if they don't improve their airport security efforts.

Nielson made the suggestion Thursday after a federal official told Congress that 20 percent of the mock weapons slipped through airport security systems during 10 months of tests at airports across the country.

Referring to legislation passed by the House recently that would force airlines to publicize the quality of their service, such as how frequently they lose passengers' luggage, Nielson said, "I'd be more concerned about safety than I would about my baggage."

Tests were conducted from September 1986 through last June. Federal Aviation Administration inspectors tried sneaking concealed mock weapons through passenger screening systems at 136 U.S. airports, the House government activities and transportation subcommittee was told.

Of 6,024 attempts, 1,251, or 20 percent, were not detected. Airlines are responsible for setting up the airport detection checkpoints, which are staffed either by airline employees or contractors hired to do the job.

In a smaller sample of tests conducted during the last four months of 1986, airport screening devices failed to detect 496 out of 2,419 test weapons, also a 20 percent failure rate, at 28 major American airports.

"Because passenger screening is the most important component of an airport security program, I find these results particularly disturbing," said Rep. Cardiss Collins, D-Ill., chairwoman of the subcommittee.

Raymond A. Salazar, director of the FAA's Office of Civil Aviation Security, told the panel that "we are not satisfied with that success rate," but said his agency is trying to spur airlines into improving their detection systems.

In the latest tests, the rate of detection at 34 major airports ranged from 99 percent to 48 percent, said Kenneth M. Mead, an associate director of the General Accounting Office, the congressional investigative agency. GAO has been auditing the FAA's efforts to improve passenger screening.

The airports tested were not identified. But six of them had detection rates of 90 percent or better, including one with a 99 percent rate.

Eleven more were successful 80 to 89 percent of the time, 10 had success rates of 70 to 79 percent, four were successful in 60 to 69 percent of the tests, two were in the 50 to 59 percent range and one detected the mock weapons just 48 percent of the time.

In last year's tests, the Anchorage,

Alaska, airport had a 99 percent success rate, the highest, and the Phoenix, Ariz., airport had the lowest rate at 34 percent.

Since Oct. 1, the FAA has required airlines to detect every weapon carried through screening systems. Those that fail are subject to fines of up to $1,000.

FAA spokeswoman Joann Sloane refused to reveal any information about cases in which airlines have failed to detect weapons since the new standards were imposed, citing possible legal actions.

The agency also is trying to find ways to improve equipment and the efficiency with which screening personnel perform their jobs, Salazar said.

Social Security boost to be 4.2 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's 38 million Social Security beneficiaries will receive a 4.2 percent benefit increase in January, the highest in 5½ years, the government said today.

In a week of financial nightmares for many, the Social Security Administration said the increase promises an extra $21 a month in the check of the average retired worker, who now gets $492 a month from the huge pension and disability insurance program.

It said the maximum monthly benefit for a worker retiring in 1987 at age 65 will rise $33, from $789 to $822.

The exact size of the increase became official today when the Labor Department announced a Consumer Price Index of 339.1 for September. The increase of 4.2 percent is the same as the inflation rate for urban wage earners and clerical workers from the third quarter of 1986 through the third quarter of 1987.

For the elderly and disabled, the increase will be partially offset by an extra $6.90 a month in Medicare premiums, which are rising to $24.80 starting in January. They are deducted directly from the benefits.

And workers and employers face higher payroll taxes in 1988. A previously scheduled increase will boost the tax on Jan. 1 from 7.15 to 7.51 percent.

Social Security spokesman John Trollinger said beneficiaries will actually receive their checks on Thursday Dec. 31 instead of the customary Jan. 3, because that day is a Sunday.

Nearly 4 million recipients of Supplemental Security Income, a welfare program for the aged, blind or disabled, will also get a 4.2 percent increase.

The agency gave the following examples of how the 4.2 percent increase will affect average monthly benefits:

- All retired workers, up $21, from $492 to $513.
- Aged couple, both getting benefits, up $35, from $841 to $876.
- Widowed mother and two children, up $43, from $1,034 to $1,077.
- Disabled worker, spouse and children, up $37, from $882 to $919.
- All disabled workers, up $21, from $487 to $508.

The maximum federal SSI payment will rise by $14, from $340 to $354, for an individual, and by $22, from $510 to $532, for a poor couple.

Trollinger said the cost-of-living increase will boost Social Security payments by $8.6 billion in 1988. The Treasury will have to spend $420 million more to cover the SSI increase.

The Social Security Administration also announced today that the maximum amount of wages subject to the payroll tax will climb from the current $43,800 to an even $45,000 in 1988. That is slightly lower than earlier predictions.

But it means the maximum tax on employees will jump by $247.80 next year to $3,379.50. Employers pay the same amount each worker pays.

The self-employed will see their tax climb from 12.3 to 13.02 percent. A self-employed person making $45,000 or more in 1988 will pay $5,859, up from $5,387.40 this year on earnings of $43,800 or more.

Beneficiaries got a 7.4 percent increase in July 1982, followed by 3.5 percent increases in both January 1984 and January 1985; 3.1 percent in January 1986 and 1.3 percent in January 1987.

Last January's increase was the smallest since Congress sought to provide an automatic buffer against inflation for Social Security beneficiaries in the mid-1970s.

Here are some other changes for 1988 that the agency announced:

- Retirees ages 65-69 will be able to earn $8,400 without losing benefits, up from $8,160 currently.
- Beneficiaries under 65 will be able to earn $6,120 without penalty, up from $6,000.
- Workers will need to earn $470 for a quarter of coverage, up from $460.
- The payroll tax on a worker with average earnings in 1987 of $18,135 will rise from $1,296.71 to $1,362; it will be higher if that worker earns more in 1988.

Benefits are rounded down to the next dollar, which means most people wind up with an increase slightly smaller than the exact inflation rate.

Also, most SSI beneficiaries also get regular Social Security, and their entitlement to welfare benefits usually goes down when their Social Security check goes up.

In addition to the higher monthly premiums for Part B of Medicare, which covers some doctor bills, the elderly and disabled will have to pay $540 for their first day in the hospital in 1988, up from $520. Medicare pays the next 59 days in full. The Medicare increases were announced last month.

Survey: Medicare's future looks dim to many

CHICAGO (AP) — The future of Medicare looks dim to almost half of American voters, who believe the system will fail to meet the health-care needs of senior citizens within 15 to 20 years, according to survey published today.

The topic of Medicare evoked more pessimistic predictions than did the possibility of a worldwide oil crisis, Social Security insolvency, economic ruin because of the federal deficit or nuclear war, a pollster said Thursday.

The only rival for gloom in voters' opinion was AIDS, which 48 percent of those surveyed believed would kill a large share of the U.S. population, said William R. Hamilton of Hamilton, Frederick & Schneiders in Washington, D.C.

Results of the survey, commissioned by AMPAC, the American Medical Association's political action committee, were published in today's issue of the AMA's weekly newspaper, American Medical News.

Forty-eight percent of respondents said they believe it is "very likely" Medicare won't be able to meet the needs of the elderly in 15 to 20 years, the survey found.

"The AMA has shared these beliefs for some time," said AMA Executive Vice President James H. Sammons, "and in 1986, proposed an alternative program to Medicare which would finance health care for the elderly and be fiscally sound."

Fourteen percent of those surveyed regarded failure "not likely" for Medicare, a $100 billion annual program serving 31 million elderly and disabled Americans.

Teamsters union seeks to return to fold

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Teamsters union, facing an unprecedented takeover attempt by government prosecutors, wants to rejoin the AFL-CIO 30 years after being expelled for refusing to answer charges of corruption.

Teamsters President Jackie Presser sent a formal request Thursday to AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland asking to bring the nation's largest union, with 1.6 million members, back into the House of Labor.

Kirkland said the request will be considered formally by the federation's 35-member executive council Saturday. But several council members Thursday night described that action as a mere formality and said there is no opposition to the Teamsters rejoining.

John Sweeney, a member of the AFL-CIO council and president of its fastest growing affiliate, the 762,000-member Service Employees International Union, described the merger as "an historic event in the American labor movement."

Sweeney said he had heard of no opposition to re-admitting the Teamsters.

"I assume the council will approve it and everything will fall into place," he said. "There's some waiting period, but it's just a matter of weeks."

Duke Zeller, a Teamsters spokesman, said its 21-member executive board voted unanimously Tuesday in Orlando to seek re-affiliation with the AFL-CIO, which is holding its convention here.

Zeller did not offer specific reasons for the Teamsters' move. But he called the AFL-CIO's statement in August condemning the Justice Department's contemplation of a takeover suit against the Teamsters a factor.

Sources in the Justice Department, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said earlier this year that it was preparing a racketeering suit against the Teamsters alleging a pattern of corrupt practices dating back to the early 1950s and seeking to have the union placed under control of a government-appointed trustee.

Despite past rivalries and often bitter fights with the Teamsters, the AFL-CIO in August pledged to help in any way possible to thwart any such takeover.

In 1985 the White House Commission on Organized Crime identified the Teamsters as one of four unions either controlled or heavily influenced by organized crime figures: The three others identified were all AFL-CIO affiliates.

Last year, a federal grand jury in Presser's hometown, Cleveland, indicted him on charges of embezzlement in connection with an alleged payroll-padding scheme at a Teamsters local there that he heads.

Presser has denied the charges, along with allegations that mob figures control the union. He is awaiting trial.

The Teamsters union was one of four unions expelled from the AFL-CIO in 1957 for refusing to appear before an AFL-CIO committee investigating allegations of corruption in the labor movement.

That committee was set up in the wake of Senate hearings that focused on racketeering in the Teamsters, then under David Beck. Beck was later convicted of illegally receiving a Cadillac paid for by the union.

None of several labor leaders reached here Thursday night voiced opposition to re-affiliation.

Asked about the corruption allegations against Presser and other Teamsters over the years, several AFL-CIO officials said they supported government zeal in weeding it out but opposed wholesale takeovers of unions as a way of doing it.

Meanwhile, the AFL-CIO reported Thursday that its 89 affiliated unions' membership had declined by 407,000, or 3.1 percent, since 1985 to 12.7 million in June, the lowest it has been since 1963.

The 1985-87 drop compares with a loss of 649,000 members, or 4.7 percent, during the previous two-year period.

Forests closed by drought in Northwest

BUTTE FALLS, Ore. (AP) — Disconsolate hunters and loggers left the parched forests as officials closed nearly 19 million acres of public wildland to ease the acute fire danger posed by the Northwest's worst drought on record.

"I've been doing this in southern Oregon for 14 years and I've never seen it this bad," said forestry officer Buff Lawrence, taking the bad news Thursday to Cascade Range hunters on the next-to-last day of elk season.

Oregon, which has had virtually no rain since late July, on Tuesday barred hunters, anglers, hikers and campers from 10.3 million acres of state, private and U.S. Bureau of Land Management forests in western Oregon.

On Wednesday the state of Washington barred loggers as well as hunters and others from 8.5 million acres of state and private land west of the Cascade Mountains, or about one-fifth of the state.

At this time of the year, western Washington and Oregon between the Cascades and the Pacific Ocean should be several weeks into the rainy season.

Instead, forests are as dry or drier than August, when the danger of fire is at its peak, and officials are afraid loggers and sportsmen will start more fires.

The shutdown came as a big disappointment to two hunters who'd been stalking the Cascade Range without a radio and hadn't heard about it.

"I wish you'd waited one more day," deer hunter Ray Case of Medford told Lawrence. "Somebody saw a five-point down the A Road and we were going to go get it tonight."

Nearby national forests haven't shut down, but it was small consolation; the brush is so dry a hunter can't move without scaring off game.

Washington's logging halt west of the Cascades put thousands of loggers out of work, including truck driver Homer McNurlin of Chehalis. He said he and others in the industry can hold out only a week or two on their savings.

Small logging companies and mills also will be hard hit, McNurlin said.

Oregon has allowed limited work to continue, depending on local conditions, but loggers have to take a break during the middle of the day, when the danger of fire is highest, and the amount of timber cut hasn't been enough to keep mills supplied.

"If their inventories are low today, and their contracts are for high elevations, and we get snow, it could be damaging to them for most of the winter," said Dave Stere, Forestry Department resources planner in Salem.

The decision to close Oregon's state-protected forests for the first time in 20 years wasn't made lightly. Many remember how Gov. Robert D. Holmes was voted out of office after he cut deer season short during a 1967 drought.

Oregon has lost more than 130,000 acres of timber in more than 550 fires since Aug. 30, when the southern part of the state was raked by dry lightning. The biggest fire has blackened 95,000 acres and continued to burn out of control in the Siskiyou National Forest outside Grants Pass.

As of Oct. 11, Washington state had lost more than 7,500 acres in more than 1,300 fires for all of 1987.

Miniature donkeys fascinate woman

By JANINE EHLINGER
The Odessa American

MONAHANS (AP) — They cluster around her, furry and friendly, swatting their ropey tails and waving long ears.

Dee Watson clucks at and cajoles each of the miniature donkeys as they jockey for position at her elbow. She's giving out cookies, and the little brayers know it. They huddle like huge dogs.

Mrs. Watson laughs and pets them all.

With a nine-head herd, Mrs. Watson said her donkey addiction began three years ago when her husband, Texas oilman B.R. Watson, surprised her on her birthday with a pair — Prissy and Missy — of baby miniature donkeys.

"I got them when they were 3 months old," says Mrs. Watson as she proudly thumbs through a photo album filled with animal pictures — most of them of donkeys in various sizes and colors.

Mrs. Watson first saw mini-donkeys when she and her husband were on a trip in Durango, Colo. "I saw these donkeys and just had a fit over them."

Her husband remembered how much she loved the little donkeys but had to wait more than a year before he could come up with the gift for his wife. Like horses, donkeys carry their unborn offspring nearly a year before foaling.

Mrs. Watson says it's not unusual for her husband to present unique gifts. "He gave me two red Brahma cows for Christmas one year, Flopsy and Mopsy."

And the Watsons also own two registered Paso Fino horses, Macho and Nacho.

Now, Mrs. Watson has nine donkeys and one of them is expected to foal soon.

When two miniature donkeys were born this year, the jenny (female) weighed 12 pounds and the jack (male) weighed even less, at 10 pounds. "They're little, little," Mrs. Watson says with a laugh. "Grown, they probably weigh 150 to 200 pounds ... They're just all legs and all ears (when first born)."

Mrs. Watson says there are just 6,900 miniature donkeys in the U.S. They are called Mediterranean, Sicilian or Sardinian miniatures, depending on their bloodline. To be classified as miniature, the donkeys can be no taller than 36 inches from the ground to the withers, or top of the shoulder. All of Mrs. Watson's donkeys are registered with the American Donkey & Mule Association in Denton, and Rocky II, Mrs. Watson's spotted jack, is also registered with the American Council of Spotted Asses in Billings, Mont.

"You have to have a spotted ass to belong," Mrs. Watson says. The spotted animals "are a lot more expensive than the brown ones." Prices range from $450 to $2,000 apiece.

Grandfalls farrier Larry Hunt makes regular visits to trim the tiny donkey hooves topped by furry fetlocks. Dr. Charles Sanders of Monahans is the mini-donkeys' doctor, and probably the only veterinarian in Ward County who has such unusual patients.

"They're more like a pet than livestock to treat," Sanders says. "They're super-gentle ... But you've got to treat them (medically) just like a bigger donkey or a horse."

Says Mrs. Watson: "They'll tug on your clothes, wanting attention, and they'll eat anything ... candy, Fritos, potatoes ... Anything you're eating. The other day I was eating some french fries, and they wanted some."

However, the brayers' regular diet is alfalfa hay and oats.

So far, Mrs. Watson says she hasn't discovered anything she doesn't like about the miniature donkeys. "They're such company and all have such personalities ... When they're first learning to bray, it sounds like they have the hiccups." It sounds like "Hic-haw, hic-haw."

A major source of pride with Mrs. Watson is that all of her donkeys bear the "Jesus cross" on their backs; a striped marking down the back and across the shoulders that resembles a painted-on cross. "It's a sign of good breeding," she says.

Whistleblowers say nuclear project riddled with defects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two former supervisors at the embattled South Texas Nuclear Project claim a major subcontractor ignored their charges of grand theft and falsification of data involving the plant's heating and ventilation systems.

"There was theft of materials, racketeering — basically criminal activity on the South Texas Project — plus safety concerns," said Ruben Richard Garcia, a former supervisor for Houston-based Ebasco Inc., the project's largest subcontractor.

Garcia and another ex-foreman, John Hodge, are among 56 whistleblowers who have reported faults in construction of the $5.5 billion Houston Lighting & Power plant near Bay City, Texas.

Most have chosen to remain anonymous, but Hodge and Garcia are among a group of 17 workers who filed formal complaints with the U.S. Labor Department in response to what they perceive as inaction and abuse by project officials.

Unit 1 of the nuclear project is in startup testing and expected to be in full commercial operation next February. Unit 2, about 80 percent complete, is scheduled to go on line in June 1989.

Hodge and Garcia said they became nervous when they discovered major safety problems in heating and ventilation portions of the project that management listed as being complete.

The pair said they took their complaints to the "Safeteam" watchdog group, HL&P security and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, but were ignored and in some cases rebuked, according to Billie P. Garde, an attorney. Garde represents the Government Accountability Project, a public interest group representing the whistleblowers.

Safeteam is a franchised watchdog group contracted by HL&P to field complaints and safety concerns from workers in a way that would preserve their identities. Hodge and Garcia said they lost faith in such organizations because their allegations were ignored.

"The amount of people who are scared to go to the NRC is incredible because they don't want to lose their jobs," said Hodge.

Since their concerns were not being addressed, a group of five or six workers devised a sophisticated tracking system to account for every piece of material relating to heating and ventilation brought into the project, he said.

"We had to do something to cover ourselves because we saw that some of the work simply had not been done," Hodge said. "We're talking about the air systems, anywhere from a little-bitty grill in a bathroom to the gigantic systems that cool the reactors."

"We could track everything from the manufacturer to the fitter ... and we found that a lot of claimed weight simply was not there. There were literally thousands of pounds of ducts that were claimed to have been installed that had either never been delivered on site or not installed."

Shortly after reporting the allegations, the workers began to be harassed, Hodge said. Pieces of equipment were missing and they found defecation in their welding boxes, he said, and some of the men were laid off.

Garcia, who claims 20 years of experience in the nuclear industry, said he was demoted to journeyman's work in an attempt by management to force him out.

"I'm pro-nuclear. I think it's a good way to generate the power we need in the future — if done correctly," Garcia said. "It's the incompetency of the upper management that's the problem."

Ebasco spokesman Glenn Walker counters that since the job is winding down, the number of supervisors is also reduced and someone who was a supervisor, like Garcia, could legitimately find himself working as a craftsman.

Soviet official allegedly involved in supercomputer theft

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Federal agents say they've smashed a plot involving the Soviet Union's top space official to sell Moscow stolen U.S. supercomputer technology that would have enabled the Soviets to destroy incoming missiles.

A Frenchman, a California software designer and a third man were arrested Thursday after agents recovered plans for a supercomputer developed by Saxpy Computer Corp. of Sunnyvale and capable of 1 billion computations a second, officials said.

The plans were to have been sold for $4 million, officials said.

"The Soviets wanted to use it in a 'Star Wars' role," said an expert for the Defense Intelligence Agency in Washington who spoke on condition of anonymity. "It was very significant for them."

The plot involved meetings between Soviet space agency chief Roald Sagbeyez and a fourth man, Charles McVey, a former fugitive being held in a Canadian jail, said Quint Villanueva, Pacific regional commissioner of the U.S. Customs Service.

Sagbeyez is Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's chief adviser on the U.S. Star Wars program, Villanueva said.

"The technology would have given the Soviet Union the capability to develop a supercomputer, which, in the event of war, could anticipate American missile strikes, allowing the Soviets to neutralize them," Villanueva said.

McVey, 57, who has not been charged in the case, was arrested in Canada earlier this year on a 1983 indictment charging him with export violations. He is being held in Vancouver.

Authorities arrested Ivan-Pierre Batinic, a 29-year-old Frenchman and former Saxpy engineer; his 30-year-old brother, Stevan, and Kevin E. Anderson, a 36-year-old software designer. He did not work for Saxpy, officials said.

The three were arrested in Fremont, a city about 10 miles north of San Jose where Ivan-Pierre Batinic and Anderson live.

More arrests are expected, said Rolin B. Klink, chief Customs agent in San Francisco.

A phone call to the Soviet consulate in San Francisco for comment reached an answering machine, and the call was not returned.

U.S. Magistrate Patricia Trumbull on Thursday ordered Anderson held without bail on a charge of conspiracy to violate export laws. If convicted, he could be sentenced to up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

The Batinics were each held on one count of conspiracy and one count of interstate transport of stolen property. Bail was set at $100,000 each. Trumbull set a preliminary hearing for them Nov. 5.

McVey had previously been on Customs' list of the 10 most-wanted smugglers under the service's Operation Exodus, which was aimed at protecting national security by intercepting illegal exports of high-technology.

Saxpy spokesman Sandy Towle said

Batinic illegally copied the computer's operating system, which the company sells for $896,000 to $1.9 million.

Batinic also stole tapes, diskettes and operating manuals, which were found Oct. 5 in a storage locker Anderson rented in Fremont, authorities said.

Although it is illegal to export the technology, it is not classified, said FBI spokesman Charles Lattig. The computer has many non-military applications for industry. Saxpy cooperated fully with the investigation, officials said.

McVey has been selling controlled computers and related equipment to the Soviets since the early 1970s, according to an affidavit filed in federal court.

Treasury secretary asks for market calm

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Treasury Secretary Gustavo Petricoli urged investors in the nation's gyrating stock market to remain calm and cautioned that those selling in panic will suffer losses from their investments.

"Those who wait are going to continue gaining in the stock exchange," Petricoli said in an interview with several local reporters. A transcript of his remarks was released late Wednesday by the Treasury Department.

Petricoli's statements followed a wave of selling in the Mexican stock exchange, which has over the past year been one of the world's fastest rising.

The market's Index of Prices and Quotations lost 88,450.24 points, nearly 28 percent, on Monday and Tuesday in a fall analysts blamed on profit-taking by some investors and nervousness by others.

The index, made up of the prices of the stocks of 52 companies, rebounded on Wednesday, closing up 19,623.56 points to 250,220.79. It climbed 10,145.78 points on Thursday, ending the day at 260,366.57.

Petricoli said he had been in close contact with the nation's exchange houses and nationalized banks to give them support and "assure the proper strength and liquidity of the institutions."

He said the wave of selling that had shaken the New York stock exchange on Monday had also affected Mexico's market.

"There's not the least doubt that there's a contagion of the psychological type, emotional, that has caused some investors in Mexico to react to what happens in the New York stock market," he said.

"If it had not been for the psychological effect that caused the fall of the stock markets of New York and other world cities, the Mexican one would have begun to rebound moderately this week," he said.

"Why? Because the exchanges reflect the opinion that people have about the economy and that of Mexico is basically sound," he said.

He described the Mexican exchange as "solid, based fundamentally on the perspectives of our economy."

The economy, which contracted sharply last year, rebounded in the third quarter and should improve even more in the current quarter, he said.

The majority of the firms whose stocks are traded on the Mexican exchange, he said, have had good earnings reports.

"Therefore," he said, "a base exists in order to expect a recovery in the Mexican Stock Exchange."

He advised investors to look to the medium- and long-term.

"The investor should not act emotionally, but should have confidence that the firm or the group of them in which he has invested is going to be recovering and this is going to happen because the country also is recovering," he said.

He said the investor who "is going to gain is the one who has the serenity, the calmness, the prudence, the vision of investment in the medium term."

Five Soviet generals killed

MOSCOW (AP) — Five top Soviet army generals were killed in an apparent helicopter crash, it was reported today.

Red Star, the Defense Ministry newspaper, said the five officers and two helicopter crewmen died in an air crash Monday.

The report did not say where the crash occurred, but suggested it might have been in or near Afghanistan, where the Soviet military has been fighting Afghan rebels since its drive into the country nearly eight years ago.

The newspaper also did not disclose the type of aircraft or whether it was shot down.

The craft apparently was a helicopter, since the obituaries of two junior officers, one a helicopter pilot and the other his technician, were published along with those of the generals.

Red Star carried obituaries on Col. Gen. Vladimir P. Shutov, most recently listed as deputy chief of a main directorate of the military general staff, headquartered in Moscow; and Lt. Gen. Kiril N. Trofimov, deputy chief of communications of the Soviet armed forces.

Obituaries also were provided on Lt. Gen. Yuri I. Yabinin, identified as serving in "responsible positions on the general staff;" Maj. Gen. Eren V. Porfiriev, chief of staff of the southern group of the armies; and Maj. Gen. Vladimir S. Bardashevski, who "recently occupied a responsible position on the general staff of the Soviet armed forces."

Porfiriev's position with the southern group suggests the crash occurred in the southeast border region where the Soviet Union and Afghanistan meet, but the Soviet military practically never identifies which of its units are fighting in the neighboring country.

The pilot was identified as Alexei N. Gurenkov and the technician as Alexander I. Goncharov.

Shultz meets with Gorbachev as Paul Nitze, arms control advisor, center, looks on.

Shultz meets with Gorbachev to discuss proposed summit

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev today opened a new round of arms control talks with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, predicting they will be able to arrange a superpower summit in the United States.

"I think this is going to happen," Gorbachev said.

Shultz, referring to hurdles still in the way of a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles, joined the optimistic forecast.

"We have done good work, but we aren't satisfied. We'll get there," he said, as he posed for pictures with Gorbachev in the grand Kremlin palace.

Shultz has imposed a deadline of sorts on himself for his talks in Moscow. He wants to be in Brussels on Saturday to report to West European foreign ministers. He arrived in Moscow Thursday from Helsinki.

The treaty nearing completion would remove all American intermediate-range nuclear missiles from Western Europe. At the same time, the Soviets would scrap rockets in the same 315-to-3,125-mile range that are aimed at the Europeans.

Shultz met with Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze Thursday night and again this morning.

Gorbachev joked about his long summer vacation away from Moscow, saying: "They lost me, but they finally found me."

He said he was away from Aug. 24 until Sept. 24. Some American analysts and news commentators reported Gorbachev was away longer, raising questions about his health and political standing.

Asked if he would like to see the whole country when he visited the United States, Gorbachev said: "I'd like to see the whole country. Whether I am able to is the question."

Shultz intends to review with Gorbachev the results of marathon sessions by American and Soviet experts on stumbling blocks to an arms accord, including a schedule for dismantling all U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range missiles.

Soviet spokesman Gennady Gerasimov, at a briefing Thursday, said a summit date had not come up during Shultz's first day of talks with Shevardnadze.

The two sides agreed last month that Gorbachev would meet with President Reagan sometime this fall. The centerpiece of their third summit presumably would be signing a treaty to ban the missiles.

Monsanto hit with $16.2 million dioxin damage award

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — After 3½ years, one of the longest trials in history ended with a jury ordering Monsanto Co. to pay $16.2 million for failing to warn a Missouri town of the risks of a dioxin-tainted chemical spill.

"Hopefully, this jury has passed a message to the chemical companies: 'Don't contaminate the only world we've got,'" said Rex Carr, attorney for residents of Sturgeon, Mo., after Thursday's verdict.

The panel deliberated eight weeks before awarding the more than $16 million in punitive damages to 65 plaintiffs who claimed they were sickened by the spill, which contained less than a teaspoonful of dioxin.

"We're confident of overturning that award," said David Snively, an attorney for St. Louis-based Monsanto, which contended that the amount of dioxin in the spill was too small to cause injury.

The jury also awarded compensatory damages of $14,500 each to a mother and son who owned land near the spill site, and $1 each for the remaining 63 plaintiffs.

The townspeople sued after a tank car ruptured in 1979, spilling 19,000 gallons of orthochlorophenol, a chemical used in wood preservative, over a half-mile area near Sturgeon.

The residents filed suit in Illinois because the cargo originated at Monsanto's Sauget, Ill., plant.

They sought $100 million in punitive damages and $35.4 million in compensation for headaches, fatigue and other ailments they attributed to the spill, along with possible genetic damage.

The lawsuit said Monsanto failed to warn the people of Boone County, Mo., of possible danger and did not effectively monitor the cleanup.

"We're just glad we won," said Frances Kemmer, one of the landowners granted a larger compensation award.

Russian dancer meets woman who helped his defection

DALLAS (AP) — A Soviet dancer says he knew he'd found someone to help him defect when he looked into Cindy Parrish's eyes.

But luck played a part, too — by chance, Andrei Ustinov had found a woman who had seen a Moscow Ballet performance a week before and knew immediately what was happening when the frantic dancer approached her.

Ustinov smiled broadly Thursday and embraced Miss Parrish in the first meeting he has had with her since she helped him defect last week in the most American of settings — a supermarket.

Miss Parrish, a 25-year-old saleswoman for an air conditioner manufacturer, was at the grocery store trying to get some firewood off an upper shelf. From behind her, someone lent a helping hand.

"I turned around to thank him, and it was him," Miss Parrish said Thursday, pointing to 32-year-old Ustinov, who left behind his country, his family and the Moscow Ballet.

"He was very scared, panicked, and was saying, 'Help me, help me. USSR. Plane leave tonight. KGB be looking for me,'" she told reporters at a news conference.

She said she knew what was happening because she had been to the first of three performances in Dallas last week by the Moscow Ballet, which is on a 21-city U.S. tour. Ustinov was a lead dancer with the troupe.

Ustinov requested political asylum, and on Saturday, two days after his hasty exit from the Dallas hotel where the troupe was staying, government officials granted his request.

At a news conference Wednesday, Ustinov told reporters of a "lovely girl" he knew only as Cindy who helped him when he ran from the hotel to a nearby shopping area. Officials then arranged a Thursday reunion.

"I watch American people ... I watch American girls, and I think, yes," he said, explaining how he had sought out Miss Parrish.

He said he felt after looking into her eyes she could help him.

"I have the gift of mercy," Miss Parrish said. "Bums have always been kind of attracted to me." In fact, she at first thought Ustinov was a "cute" panhandler when he sought her aid at 6 p.m. Oct. 15.

At the Dallas Ballet, where Ustinov plans to perform for three months, the two met Thursday as reporters looked on.

"I speak, Cindy, bravo!" Ustinov said happily as Miss Parrish tugged the Spuds McKenzie "Party Animal" T-shirt he also had worn the night of his escape. Ustinov expanded his American wardrobe later Thursday on a free shopping spree donated by a Highland Park men's clothing store.

"He looks so different than he did that night. He was so scared, saying 'Help me, help me, help me,'" Miss Parrish said.

Ustinov had fled his hotel last week shortly before the dance troupe was to board a bus for a performance at Southern Methodist University.

"He pulled out his Russian I.D. card and itinerary. He was excited and speaking Russian, and he was talking very loud. People in the store were looking at us," Miss Parrish said.

Ustinov pulled her shopping cart as they tried to find a pay telephone, she said. They went to a nearby 7-Eleven, called the FBI and agents in an unmarked car responded, whisking Ustinov away.

Government officials said Ustinov will be making his home at least temporarily in Dallas.

Southland experiences stock problems

DALLAS (AP) — Southland Corp. officials say they intend to complete a $4 billion plan to take the company private despite skepticism among some analysts who think a slide in the company's share price this week may block the move.

Meanwhile, the company's founding Thompson family acknowledged in proxy materials seeking approval of a $4.9 billion leveraged buyout that the Securities and Exchange Commission was reviewing trading activities involving the stock.

Southland shares were at 70% of the close of business last week, but plummeted to 47 by market's end on Tuesday.

After gaining 3 points Wednesday to close at 50, it dropped to 46% Thursday — well below the company's announced offer of $62.32 in cash and fractional preferred share offer for the remaining 17 million Southland shares outstanding.

Dennis Telzrow, investment analyst with Eppler Guerin & Turner, said Southland's stock performance this week reflects market skepticism about the ultimate completion of

Dennis Telzrow, investment analyst with Eppler Guerin & Turner, said Southland's stock performance this week reflects market skepticism about the ultimate completion of the merger.

Despite the loss on Wall Street this week, Southland spokeswoman Cecilia Norwood said Southland is proceeding with its plans to complete the transaction on Nov. 5 at a special stockholders meeting.

Thompson Co., a privately held firm owned by the sons of the company's founder, is acquiring Southland in a leveraged buyout.

In its notice to shareholders of the Nov. 5 meeting, Southland disclosed that the SEC is investigating active trading in Southland shares before the announcement of the buyout offer last July.

The disclosure is buried in the proxy outlining how the Thompsons intend to purchase all remaining Southland shares.

"Southland has been advised that the commission has issued a private order of investigation concerning the trading of Southland stock during various times in 1987 and the issuance of various public statements by Southland," the company said in its only explanation of the action.

A Southland spokesman declined to elaborate, saying: "Since it is a matter under investigation, we can't comment."

Previously, analysts speculated that the company could run into difficulties with authorities because of pronouncements that the company knew of no reason for a precipitous rise last spring in the price of its stock.

Some shareholders complained that John Thompson, chairman of Southland, and Jere Thompson, president of the company, allegedly violated securities laws by failing to disclose overtures by third parties interested in acquiring the company.

Stowaways claim they were beaten

GALVESTON (AP) — Five Colombian stowaways say they set a mattress on fire to get attention because they were beaten, imprisoned and deprived of food after being discovered on a merchant ship.

Plans to send the men home aboard the boat were abandoned after fighting and fires erupted Wednesday, Galveston U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service Chief Royce McGill said.

McGill said three of the men were discovered Friday aboard the Iceland Rex hiding among crates of bananas and were confined by the Korean crew. Two others, who ran from a ship's hold at the dock and jumped overboard Monday, were later apprehended by INS and U.S. Customs officers, McGill said.

The INS then ordered the group held aboard the ship pending the vessel's return to Colombia. But after the fire Wednesday morning, the INS took custody of the men.

"Based upon what we heard was alleged to have happened on the ship, we decided to move them to Houston," McGill said, where the INS has a processing facility.

Galveston paramedic Greg Nelson, who examined the men, said it appeared they had been beaten.

"It looked like they had been pushed around and kind of deprived of food and water, but they weren't disoriented or emaciated or anything like that," he said. "Their wounds were defensive in nature."

Nelson said one of the men appeared to have suffered a broken or dislocated jaw. McGill said the men were to be returned to their home town of Buenaventura Valley, Colombia.

"We wanted out," said Alexander Caisepe, 29, said Wednesday. "Somebody was going to get hurt."

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

God's Purposes

If you were having a picnic at the lake at approximately this spot, you might say, "Well, why did the engineers leave those trees in the water when they made this lake? They create such an eyesore. I can see no purpose in it." Yet, fishermen tell us that the fish love those old tree stumps and roots and that you can almost always find fish swimming in the dark recesses around and between these trees.

So many times we question God's wisdom in allowing some things to be and other things to come to pass. But God is good and his purposes are wise. The very thing that seems useless to us, might make us marvel if we could see with Heaven's eyes.

As Isaiah reminds us, "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts."

But he also wants us to know that his thoughts are many toward us and that everything works toward our good and our salvation. If we had no conflicts, and no questions, we would never have the opportunity to step out on faith.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Therefore encourage one another and build each other up, just as in fact you are doing. (1 Thessalonians 5:11 NIV)

The Omniplex of the Kirkpatrick Center in Oklahoma City houses a vast variety of scientific displays that are designed for hands-on experimentation by children.

The intrigue and diversity of the exhibits reduces sophisticated adults to a state of child-like inhibition. Parents begin their tour of the Omniplex experimenting under the guise of showing their children how. However, children and adults alike quickly get the hand of enjoying the experience on a personal level.

One of the exhibits is titled "The Enchanted Tree." It was built by Burt Libe and looks like a heavy wire sculpture of a bare tree. Actually, it's an unattractive tree until the instructions are followed.

Printed across the front of the display case is, "Clap your hands!" The sound of clapping activates electronic impulses that turn the ugly black tree into rippling varicolored lights. Participants watch with expressions of surprise and wonder with the reflection of the busy lights dancing in their eyes.

People also need the "applause" of encouragement to be all God wants them to be.

Without the motivation to function productively, no one is very pretty. But what a difference a sincere word of approval makes! Appreciation for work well done is the fuel by which great tasks are completed.

My sister-in-law once told me, "I believe everyone needs at least 10 hugs a day. They may be physical hugs or they may be verbal or emotional hugs, but 10 is the minimum daily requirement."

Clap your hands, and watch a friend light up!

Religion Roundup

NEW YORK (AP)—The leader of Reform Judaism says recent sessions with Pope John Paul II will strengthen and broaden Catholic-Jewish relationships.

Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, referred both to the pope's unprecedented dialogue with Jewish leaders in Italy on Sept. 1 and meeting with them in Miami on Sept. 11.

In Miami, Schindler said, the pope's viewing of a UAHC-sponsored exhibit of ancient, illuminated Jewish manuscripts from the Vatican library also would "serve as a catalyst" in Catholic-Jewish dialogue.

"It will prove to be, we believe, an invaluable tool that will help Catholics and Jews explore the past we share and to create, together, a new and better future," Schindler said.

The Deweys

Singing couple to perform at First Assembly

Levoy Dewey and his wife Cleon, SESAC Song of the Year recipients, will be in concert at First Assembly of God, 500 S. Cuyler, at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

Dewey, considered one of gospel music's finest tenor singers, has a unique, rich, melodic sound that lifts the audience up with positive, powerful lyrics, said Rev. Herb Peak, pastor.

Levoy and Cleon have been ministering in song throughout America for more than 20 years and have made appearances in 33 countries around the world. They have recorded with the London Philharmonic Orchestra, and Levoy has recorded a solo album with the internationally known Statesmen Quartet.

One of the Deweys' songs, "Heaven's Sounding Sweeter," as recorded by Jimmy Swaggart, was recently picked by CNN News and Worth Associates of New York as one of the all-time gospel hit songs ever recorded. The song has sold more than 2 million copies and has been recorded by gospel artists the world over.

As songwriters, the Deweys are known for their talents in Nashville. Their song "Because of Yesterday" was recorded by country superstar Connie Smith for CBS Records and became the SESAC Song of the Year.

Others of their songs have been recorded by the Thrasher Brothers, the Florida Boys, the Rex Nelson Singers, Mike Murdoch of the PTL Network, Kenneth Copeland, Gov. Jimmie Davis, Jimmy Swaggart and others.

Born in Pampa and raised in Nebraska, Levoy Dewey is also an expert choral arranger, having graduated from the Amarillo Conservatory of Music. He is proficient musically on the saxophone, valve-trumpet, stringed instruments, clarinet and bassoon. His wife is an expert keyboard player, having recorded five instrumental albums for release.

The couple have appeared on television programs throughout the United States, including The 700 Club with Pat Robertson and regular telethon appearances in California with TBN and Paul and Jan Crouch.

Both Levoy and Cleon have served as Assemblies of God missionary evangelists for many years. This past year, Levoy was appointed as the "Official Ambassador" for the Lillian Thrasher Orphanage in Egypt. They have sponsored many children in feeding programs both in Egypt and India through Mark Buntain of Calcutta, India.

"You will thoroughly enjoy this family event," said Rev. Peak, inviting the public to attend the special concert.

Freewill Baptist to conduct fall revival services

Freewill Baptist Church, 326 N. Rider, will be in revival services from Sunday through Friday, with services daily at 7 p.m.

Evangelist will be Bob Hatcher from Allen, Okla.

"He has been here in revival before and was greatly enjoyed by all," said Rev. L.C. Lynch, pastor. "Bob is a strong Bible preacher and very spiritual."

Singing will be directed by Jack Griffin, who has sung with some of the most popular gospel quartets.

"He is a powerful director, singing in the spirit and love of God," Rev. Lynch said.

Special singing will be provided by different groups. Lynch invited other churches to bring their special singers for the revival services.

Sunday revival activities will include lunch served at the church. Those in attendance are then invited to meet at the Coronado Nursing Home to sing to senior citizens from 2 to 3 p.m. Sunday.

"Come be with us in a wonderful day of fellowship and worship of our Lord," Lynch said, also inviting the public to attend the other revival services during the week.

Freeport priest blends church duties with those of firefighter

By JOHN MITCHELL
The Brazosport Facts

FREEPORT (AP) — Standing before his Sunday congregation at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, the Rev. Fred B. Hannan's white collar encircles his neck, an age-old symbol of holy man. His stocky, fatherly build and thick glasses reinforce that peaceful presence while he preaches a gospel of caring and understanding.

So as an added precaution to ensure that religious atmosphere during the sermon stays serene, Hannan takes off his fire department beeper, and remains on call only to his parishioners.

"When I've got to be a priest, I'm a priest," Hannan said.

And when the fires of faith have been lit, Hannan dons a bunker coat, grabs a hose and helps tame the blazes of destruction as one of Freeport's volunteer firefighters.

"It's not sitting around playing checkers," Hannan, 44, said of the complicated calling he has found among the char and ash. "It's an exciting business."

Firefighting is only one in a long line of ways Hannan, a native of Bath, N.Y., has worked to help those around him. From a stint in India with the Peace Corps to time spent as an assistant clergyman for a black congregation in the poorer section of New Haven to those long hours as emergency room chaplain at Ben Taub Hospital in Houston, Hannan has always been driven by the spark of compassion.

Whether saving lives or saving souls, the samaritan in rubber boots said the two are more related than most people think.

"These people are all ministering," he said, defining the true roles of the fellow volunteer firefighters and emergency care attendants he serves with. "It's an effort to help."

That effort slowly kindled in Hannan as a boy growing up in New England. When he was 14, his mother walked into an Episcopal church, which immediately made the family feel more at home than other denominations, he said.

The events in Hannan's life seemed to point one way and he did little to alter the course. "Over the years, I ended up moving into the priesthood," he said, culminating in studies during the late 1960s at the Berkeley Divinity School in New Haven where, by chance, the dean of students happened to ride the hook and ladders for the town on the side.

What he thought would be a quiet career as a New England priest ignited out of control at the onset when he accepted a job in Houston. "I never served a day in the northeast," he said, with a laugh that reinforced the unpredictabilities of life.

After 15 years in Houston, Hannan came to Freeport, and St. Paul's, in 1983.

Chief Bob Johnson of the Freeport Fire Department said Hannan's first contact with the department occurred in August of that year, when a hurricane named Alicia started a house fire two doors down from the church.

Hannan, who was in Houston at the time and heard about the flames on the evening news, was so grateful the parish had been spared that he wrote a letter of appreciation to the department, asking if he could join, Johnson said.

He's been as much at ease on a pumper truck as a pulpit ever since. Hannan has only a few hours of classes remaining before becoming a full-fledged fireman, and is working his way toward emergency medical technician status for the department.

Local church youth to have pizza sale for mission fund

The youth group of First Assembly of God, 500 S. Cuyler, will be conducting a pizza sale from Sunday, Oct. 25, through Monday, Nov. 9, to raise funds to purchase equipment for home and foreign missionaries.

Their goal for this year is $1,000.

Members of the youth group will be contacting individuals in the community to purchase pizza. The pizza will be made fresh and delivered to the purchasers' homes on Saturday, Nov. 14.

Contributions will be tax deductible, and those contributing will receive a receipt.

The missions monies raised will be contributed to Speed-the-Light, a youth missions program. Speed-the-Light has been providing transportation, printing presses, audio-visual equipment and radio equipment for missionaries around the world since 1944.

The youth of the church voluntarily assume the responsibility for raising funds to purchase the equipment, according to Terry Fred, youth pastor at First Assembly.

For more information, call Terry Fred at 665-5941.

From Sonlight Ministries

Mother and daughter team Janie and Rejana White, ministering in music and testimony with a variety of music, will be at the First Church of the Nazarene, Buckler and West Streets, at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 28. Rejana, the teen-aged daughter of Jim and Janie White, has an outstanding testimony to youth, said Rev. A.W. Myers, pastor. "Come listen to these singers and become motivated to tell others about the gospel of Jesus, which can satisfy the longings of the heart toward God," he said, urging young and old to attend the service.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

No comparison between humans and animals

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to get this off my chest. It's about time humans stopped referring to acts that people perpetrate as people "acting like animals."

I refer generally to those who describe murders, riots, panics and other catastrophes in which people lose control and are said to be "acting like animals."

I refer specifically to comments regarding a recent ship hijacking when it was said that the terrorists acted like "cowardly animals."

These terrorists and guerrilla acts are not animal in nature. They are human in nature. As one who sees the balance, beauty and meaning of the world in which animals must face life-or-death situations every day just to survive and perpetuate the species, I grossly resent and take offense at these statements.

When was the last time we saw a gorilla hijack a plane? When was the last time we saw a pod of whales hijack an ocean liner? When was the last time we saw a group of animals walk down the street and terrorize the neighborhood? People, in fact, are the terrorists and guerrillas when they go into the animals' element to slaughter them for fur coats, hunting trophies, plumage and all the other atrocious reasons society gives for the gross neglect of respect for life and murder of our fellow creatures inhabiting this world.

If the day ever comes when man comes off his ego trip, maybe he will see just how insignificant he is to the total scheme of things on this tremendous planet in which all creatures share. Maybe then, finally, the saying will be turned around to, "They behaved like people."

KATHY L. LINEAWEAVER, CLIFTON PARK, N.Y.

DEAR KATHY: Bravo! Mark Twain said: "Man is the only animal that blushes. Or needs to."

...

DEAR ABBY: I am 35 and in love with a man who is 17 years older than I am. (I'll call him Dale.) We have been living together for four years and have a beautiful son who is 7 years old. Dale and I are considering marriage. The problem is that his children (all adults) can't seem to accept me. They are constantly inviting him over for dinner parties (with their mom there), but I am not invited.

Dale feels that he has to accept every invitation because they are his children. I feel that he is wrong. Abby, I would not accept any invitation if Dale wasn't invited.

I am upset about this and need your advice. I can't go on living like this. Is Dale right to accept invitations from his children without including me? Sign me ...

OUTSIDER IN LOUISIANA

DEAR OUTSIDER: You have chosen an appropriate signature insofar as Dale and his family are concerned. The fact that Dale is permitting his children to snub you should tell you something. They are No. 1 in his life, and probably always will be.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to thank you for an article that you ran recently that has given me more relief and comfort than I can describe.

I am 83, male and reasonably healthy, but in recent years I've been terribly troubled with a dry mouth — especially at night. I complained to my doctor. He just shrugged his shoulders. Then I read your column in the San Francisco Chronicle, and my prayers were answered! In response to a letter asking why a person would use a mouth spray in public, you quoted a dentist who said that as a result of disease, medication, radiation therapy or simply aging, a number of people suffer from "xerostomia" (dry mouth).

I immediately phoned my dentist, and he had never heard of a "saliva substitute," so I told him to call his supplier and order it. He did, and the next day I picked it up and used it. Abby, I will be eternally grateful to you and that dentist. No more dry mouth! God bless you.

GRATEFUL IN PARADISE, CALIF.

DEAR GRATEFUL: I'll print your letter for the benefit of others who suffer from dry mouth and are not aware of saliva substitutes.

Crochet a tabletop tree, ornaments for Christmas

By BETH COTTEN

I think I've discovered why crochet projects are such popular holiday items — because needlework is great stress therapy!

It's also a wonderfully creative way to work off the excess energy created by thinking up new decorations, gifts and entertainments for the most exciting, meaningful and enjoyable time of the year.

One of our most popular all-time projects is the beautiful crocheted tree and ornaments designed and created by talented crafter Charlotte Higgins of Monroe, La.

The 15-inch-tall tree, with seven different styles of tiny ornaments, makes a perfect table centerpiece. You can reproduce Charlotte's tree from our step-by-step plans, which include crochet, blocking and assembly instructions for this project, plus 10 snowflakes and three ornaments for a large tree.

Also included in our special Christmas packet are plans for card holders, a wreath, ornaments, porch and lawn displays, a calico tree, stockings, nativity scene and indoor Santa display. Specify No. 4240, $19.95. Our catalog, with discount coupons, is $2.95.

To order, specify the number and enclose a check or money order to: Makin' Things for Christmas, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008.

Charlotte's crocheted tree is made on a 4 x 12-inch foam cone base. She crocheted a cover for the cone and then made the branches separately. The eight crocheted "branches" are actually skirts of increasingly smaller sizes, which fit around the covered cone.

If you use white thread for the outer rounds of each branch skirt, it resembles snow on the tree. Glue sequins to the branches once they are installed on the covered cone.

The tiny ornaments are a real delight, and they are not difficult to make. They include candy canes, bells, balls, stockings, snowmen, candles and a tree-top angel. Here are instructions for the crocheted bell ornament:

Round 1: Use any color cotton thread except white, which will be used later for the contrasting rim. Chain 2, work 10 single crochet in second chain from hook. Do not join.

Rounds 2-3: Single crochet even on 10 single crochet (20 sc). At end of last round, tie off and attach white thread.

Round 4: Work two single crochet in each single crochet around. This is bell rim. Join with slip stitch to beginning single crochet. Tie off, clip thread.

Saturate with white glue, working it in with your fingers. Shape the bell over the end of an unsharpened pencil and allow to dry. Attach to tree with fine wire or thread.

Crocheted Christmas tree with tiny ornaments is a beautiful holiday centerpiece.

Calendar aids family researchers

Many Texans have Louisiana lineage connections and will be delighted with the Louisiana Keepsake Calendar. The calendar was created by the talented LILLIE PETIT GALLAGHER to promote her native state and to help genealogists.

"Louisiana," said Gallagher, "is among the most culturally diverse states in the country. Our folklore, all learned informally within families and communities and handed down over time, encompasses music, dance, crafts, food, architecture, landscapes, rituals, festivals, oral history, oral language, games, toys, beliefs, medicine, traditions, stories, proverbs, riddles and jokes." She has succeeded in including all these things in the calendar.

Other features include a list of the state archival facilities, where records are stored and available for public use. Another list contains mailing addresses for groups or businesses that sell Louisiana products.

Gena on Genealogy
Gena Walls

The calendar is spiral-bound for easy use and has plenty of space for recording genealogical dates and other information.

The full-color illustrations of activities reminiscent of Louisiana's culture and history are an excellent teaching aid for children.

The price is $11.50, including postage and handling, and can be ordered from: Petit Press, P.O. Box 4053, Baton Rouge, La. 70821. If you are doing research in North Carolina, you are encouraged to start your research with a visit to the Genealogical Services Branch of the North Carolina State Library in Raleigh.

Information about the collection and services can be obtained by sending a legal-size self-addressed stamped envelope and request their brochure, "Genealogical Research in the North Carolina State Archives."

Most North Carolina state and county records are available at the archives. It has the largest single collection of primary record material either in the original form or on microfilm. It has a large collection of colonial period items relating to all the original colonies and migration material.

The staff is very helpful and usually very prompt with mail requests. Remember to keep your request as brief as possible but include all the known facts.

Danny Cox notches mound win.

Cards take 3-2 lead in Series

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Time is no longer running out on the St. Louis Cardinals because they are running on the Minnesota Twins. And with the help of a lucky bounce, the Cardinals bounced back. Now the teams return to Minnesota with St. Louis needing just one more victory to win the World Series.

Trailing 2-0 after the first two games in Minnesota, the Cardinals grabbed a 4-2 victory Thursday night to complete a three-game home sweep from the worst road team ever to win a pennant.

St. Louis won Game 5 behind the pitching of Danny Cox and with the help of five stolen bases, the most in a World Series game in 80 years. Vince Coleman's single ignited a three-run sixth inning against Bert Blyleven, and Curt Ford drove in two runs with a single.

"We do have the momentum going our way right now," Ford said.

The Twins outscored St. Louis 18-5 with 21 hits, including four homers, in the first two games at the dome, where they had baseball's best home record of 56-25. But Minnesota's 29-52 road record was evident at Busch Stadium.

In three games of playing without the designated hitter in the National League park, the Cardinals scored just four runs on 18 hits and one homer.

"Thankfully we're going home," Blyleven said. "We need the fans behind us, and I know they'll be there."

Coleman also had a walk, stole two bases and scored both times. Ozzie Smith also had two stolen bases, one of them leading to a run on the back end of a double strike squeeze bunt after Twins Manager Tom Kelly called for a pitchout, and Oquendo was caught off third base for an inning-ending double play.

Coleman led off the sixth with a grounder that took two big hops before hitting the seam in front first base. Twins first baseman Kent Hrbek lunged for the ball but couldn't come up with it cleanly. His relay to Blyleven, covering first, was late.

Smith followed with a bunt toward third base. Blyleven tried to barehand the ball but dropped it, and Smith was on with a single as Coleman went to second. Tommy Herr failed on two bunt attempts before flying out, and the runners had to hold their ground.

"My stomach is in knots out there," Cox said. "It's a situation that I've been very fortunate to be able to participate in. I just happen to fall on the days when we happen to have the big games."

The Cardinals will send left-hander John Tudor against rookie Les Straker in a rematch of Game 3 when the Series resumes Saturday. Tudor allowed just one run on four hits through seven innings to beat Straker 3-1 Tuesday night.

The Cardinals had blown big scoring opportunities in the third and fifth innings, the victim both times being Jose Oquendo, before finally coming through in the sixth.

In the third inning, the Cardinals had runners at second and third with one out when Oquendo was thrown out at home trying to score on a grounder to shortstop Greg Gagne. In the fifth, St. Louis had runners at first and third with one out. Cox missed a third-strike squeeze bunt after Twins Manager Tom Kelly called for a pitchout, and Oquendo was caught off third base for an inning-ending double play.

Coleman led off the sixth with a grounder that took two big hops before hitting the seam in front first base. Twins first baseman Kent Hrbek lunged for the ball but couldn't come up with it cleanly. His relay to Blyleven, covering first, was late.

Smith followed with a bunt toward third base. Blyleven tried to barehand the ball but dropped it, and Smith was on with a single as Coleman went to second. Tommy Herr failed on two bunt attempts before flying out, and the runners had to hold their ground.

With the count 1-0 on Dan Driessen, Coleman said he stole a signal from Twins catcher Tim Lardner. He knew a curveball was coming, and he took off for third. He made it easily, and Smith cruised into second to complete the double steal.

Driessen was walked intentionally to load the bases, and Blyleven looked like he might be out of it when he got Willie McGee looking at a called third strike.

Ford then lined a single up the middle, scoring Coleman and Smith as Driessen went to third. Ford continued to second on the play when center fielder Kirby Puckett's throw went through to third base, too late to get Driessen. The third run of the inning scored when shortstop Greg Gagne dropped Oquendo's bouncer.

That inning marked the end for Blyleven, who gave up three runs, two earned, on seven hits.

Winless Giants favored

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

To know what the strike did to form in the NFL, the answer is a simple question: When was the last time an 0-5 team was a 10-point favorite?

That's what the New York Giants are against the St. Louis Cardinals this Sunday as the NFL gets back to a semblance of normality. When you think about it, that is normality — why shouldn't the Giants at home be favored by 10 over the Cards?

That's typical of the unknown factors in the first real games in four weeks.

Will, for example, teams that had a lot of regulars cross the picket line play better the first week because they're in better shape? Or will they play worse because they're split while their opponents are unified?

There's also the demoralization factor.

Will the Giants throw in the towel because their awful strike team cost them all but the slimmest chance to repeat this year? What is the mental state of the Vikings, 2-0 before the strike, 0-3 during it, including home losses to Tampa Bay and Green Bays

What about Kansas City, another 0-3 strike team?

Or is Washington which looked only fair before the strike, as good as the 4-1 record its replacements gave it?

In other words, picking winners after the strike may be just as hard as during it.

Pampa teams lose to Dumas

Pampa was handed a 14-6 loss by Dumas in a ninth grade football game played Thursday night.

The Threshers' lone score was a one-yard quarterback sneak by Guy Savage in the third quarter.

The Pampa ninth graders, 3-3, were hampered by penalties the entire game.

Pampa Coach Rod Porter said Cade Phillips played an outstanding game both offensively and defensively.

Other standouts were Coby Harris, Wayne Cavanaugh, Jeff Richter and Savage.

Pampa's next game is Oct. 29 at Valley View.

Pampa's seventh and eighth grade teams were also defeated by Dumas this week.

Pampa eighth grade fell to Dumas 20-6 Thursday night. Pampa's only score came on the opening play of the game when Paul Brown broke loose for a 65-yard run.

Pampa seventh graders were blanked by Dumas 38-0 in a game played earlier this week.

Injured

West Germany's Boris Becker holds his head while being treated for a thigh injury during Friday's match in the SEIKO Super Tennis Tournament in Tokyo. Becker's injury forced him to withdraw from the match.

Pozderac retires

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Citing disillusionment with professional football during the strike, the NFL's tallest player has retired.

Phil Pozderac, 6-9 and 282 pounds, said Thursday he was retiring to pursue business opportunities. "I just decided it was time to go into private business," he said.

Pozderac fell into disfavor with Cowboys fans last season because of the frequent announcement from game officials: "Holding, Offense, No. 75."

"Poz was probably the best-known offensive lineman in the country for all the wrong reasons," Cowboys offensive line coach Jim Erkenbeck said. "I admired him for not giving up when everybody and his brother were taking shots at him."

Head coach Tom Landry said Kevin Gogan, a rookie from the University of Washington, will take Pozderac's spot in the starting lineup.

Pozderac, 27, was in his sixth season in the league. The Cowboys drafted him in the fifth round of the 1982 draft after Pozderac was named the most valuable player of the 1981 Notre Dame season. He was a high school basketball and football star at Garfield Heights, Ohio.

Pozderac started 10 games in 1986 and was awarded the game ball after the Cowboys' 31-28 upset over the New York Giants in the nationally televised Monday night season opener.

But he was plagued by holding calls the second half of the season and was the goat in the second meeting of the Cowboys and Giants.

In a game that was won by the Giants, 17-14, Pozderac was called for holding twice in the waning moments.

Harvesters underdog

The Pampa Harvesters go into tonight's District 1-4A game against the Levelland Lobos as a 17-point underdog, according to the Harris Rating System.

Levelland is ranked No. 96 and Pampa No. 134 in the Class 4A statewide Harris poll.

Tonight's game kicks off at 7:30 p.m. at Levelland.

In other 1-4A games, Harris has the Hereford-Canyon clash ranked as one of the Class 4A headliners. The Eagles, ranked 12th in the state, are a 7-point favorite over 43rd-ranked Hereford.

Lubbock Estacado, which jumped to ninth in the rankings with its 10-7 win over Canyon last week, has an open date.

In other picks, Borger is favored over Dumas by 13 and Frenship over Lubbock Dunbar by 10. Borger is ranked 35th by Harris, followed by Frenship (54), Lubbock Dunbar (95) and Dumas (98).

West Orange-Stark replaces Jasper as the top-ranked team in Class 4A this week.

Boosters schedule meeting

Next Monday's meeting of the Harvester Boosters will be held at the Pampa Middle School boy's gymnasium.

Harvester booster president Jack Gindorf said the purpose for the change of location is to try to establish interest in forming a middle school booster program.

All interested persons who wish to take part in the middle school program — as well as high school boosters — are asked to attend the Monday meeting at 7 p.m.

Mayfield may have revenge in mind in Pampa-Levelland games

A FOOTBALL GAME NORMALLY is a battle between two schools and series scores reflect how things stand. But when Levelland and Pampa square off tonight it has more of a Pampa vs. Gene Mayfield aura about it. Or shouldn't that be Mayfield vs. Pampa. Sure, the schools are involved and today's student body and most players' parents see it as a school rivalry.

But ever since that spring day in 1958 when Pampa rejected Bulldogs to heights never before or since attained. The winning ability he had developed at Littlefield continued at Borger and catapulted him to the Odessa Permian post and state and national football coaching recognition. While at Borger he laced the Harvesters seven times in seven games. The closest Pampa came to a win was 14 points, the worst defeat was by 53.

After a brief hiatus as a college coach and a brief tenure out of the business, the man who has attained about every honor his fellow coaches in the state can bestow, six seasons ago accepted the challenge and good salary offered by the Levelland ISD to restore its football fortunes.

It has been a slow project compared to his other three high school jobs. And it is very unlikely the success attained at each of the others will be attained at the south plains school. That did provide Pampa with a fleeting opportunity to atone for some of the earlier whippings he administered. In 1982 Pampa and Levelland battled to an 8-8 tie. The next two games went to Pampa by narrow margins, a field goal the winning edge each time. Mayfield made sure that didn't occur the next two seasons by gaining two and three TD victories to even the series between the schools at 2-2-1. But his personal "you shoulda hired me in 1958" vendetta shows a huge 2-9-1 advantage.

"This has been disappointing," he told me when the Lobos came to Pampa to play last season. "This is the year we were building for, but it hasn't been what we hoped."

Mayfield built last year's team on a mediocre offense, but a strong defense, one which allowed only 85 points all year, No. 1 in the district. This year has been a reversal. Through seven games (2-5) his squad has already allowed 165 points (Pampa has given up 219 in six games), while the offense has delivered 116 points (Pampa has 43). In the pre-season, Mayfield said his team would have to stress defense again, so it is obviously another disappointing year.

For the Harvesters, tonight and next Friday at home to Dumas, appear to offer the only opportunities to end a losing streak that stands at 19 over three seasons. The final two games are against the two teams virtually assured of representing the district in post-season, Canyon and Estacado.

CHAFF: The district championship assured, the Harvester Volleyballers host Hereford at 6:30 tomorrow night at McNeely Fieldhouse. Boys golf concludes the fall schedule at Plainview, while the Girls host the district teams at the PCC; cross country rests for the district meet next weekend in Lubbock; swimming opens the season the following weekend; boys and girls' basketball begins Nov. 17, at home. Estacado is open this week, the big game sending Hereford to Canyon tonight. PHS has only had three previous 0-6 starts in history, 1960-1967-1986. It is taking the opponents an average of 75 yards of total offense per touchdown, PHS needs 229, with the second period still the bugaboo, opponents outscoring the Green and Gold 102-13 in the period. The three Gray County schools now stand 0-19, being outscored 122-788. The four remaining opponents have a composite 15-11 record. Districts involving Panhandle schools have one undefeated team, Childress (once tied) but six schools are winless. Plano, moving up a notch to No. 6 in USA Today's Super 25 high school teams, barely edged Richardson Lake Highlands 7-0 last Friday, in what would have been the biggest upset of the year and probably in the career of LH Coach Mike Zuffuto. Longtime Harvester fans can see the physical likeness between qb Dustin Miller and 1951 all-state signal caller Carl Schlemeyer of Odessa, back when the Bronchos and Harvesters were in the same district. The crowd for the Dunbar game was small, but enjoyed the performance of the 'moving' Dunbar band at halftime. The 4A record for consecutive losses is 41, set by Fort Worth Diamond Hill between 1982 and 1985. The current issue of Texas Coach magazine contains a much-deserved tribute to that dinosaur of Texas sportswriters, Putt Powell, reprinted from Top O Texas Football magazine. Congratulations, Putt!!!

Survival Saturday begins in SWC

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

It's Survival Saturday in the Southwest Conference.

While Texas takes the week off to celebrate its miracle victory over the Arkansas Razorbacks, other teams will be trying to hang onto the championship race.

Texas is 2-0 in league play and hosts Texas Tech in two weeks at Austin.

Arkansas, meanwhile, tries to bounce back from its mind-bending 16-14 loss to Texas on the last play of the game with a Saturday contest against the Houston Cougars, who can tell you about some hard luck of their own.

The Cougars not only lost to Wyoming 37-35 last week on a field goal in the final minute, but will play the rest of the season without starting quarterback Melvin Ware, who suffered a broken arm in the game.

The Hogs and Cougars tangled at 2 p.m. CDT in Fayetteville. Houston already has two SWC losses, while preseason favorite Arkansas has but one blemish, the Texas stain.

Arkansas rated a 16-point favorite by the Las Vegas oddsmakers, who noted that quarterback Greg Thomas returned to practice at mid-week after resting his sprained shoulder.

Baylor and Texas Christian, two teams with a league loss each, meet at noon in Waco in the Raycom regional telecast of the week. It's homecoming for the Bears, who always play tough on that particular event.

Baylor gained only 33 yards rushing against Texas A&M (fewest since 1982), and will have to get its ground game going to beat the Frogs. Baylor ranks seventh in the SWC in rushing.

"I think if we can establish a ground game, we could really be tough. Everybody knows we can throw the ball," said Baylor offensive tackle Joel Porter.

Oddsmakers made Baylor a field goal favorite.

TCU Coach Jim Wacker said the SWC race is still wide open. "We have as good a chance as anybody," Wacker said.

"We have five weeks to keep improving. Nobody knows who's going to wind up in the Cotton Bowl."

But in three games against Baylor, ace TCU running back Tony Jeffery has gained only 36 yards a game.

Texas A&M, which also has a league loss, travels to Houston to play the Rice Owls at 2 p.m., and the Aggies have been installed as 25-point picks.

In the only other game involving an SWC club, Texas Tech is a 14-point favorite over Tulsa in a Jones Stadium matchup at Lubbock. The SWC is only 14-12-1 in non-conference play and could lose the victory.

Piniella 'shocked' at GM promotion

By RONALD BLUM
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — George Steinbrenner said last week that hiring Lou Piniella to manage the New York Yankees without any managerial experience was a mistake.

So Steinbrenner fired Piniella as manager and made him general manager, a position in which he has had no experience.

Only with the Yankees. Piniella and Billy Martin, returning to manage the Yankees for the fifth time, met reporters for three hours Thursday to discuss the latest bizarre changes at Yankee Stadium.

But the man with the answers, Steinbrenner, stayed upstairs in his office. Piniella said Steinbrenner informed him of the changes on Monday, after saying the previous week that he "would have a surprise" for Piniella.

Shock was more like it. "As a player, I never thought I would manage. I never dreamed I would be a general manager," Piniella said. "My next step is being owner."

Steinbrenner, who did not speak with Piniella during most of August after the manager failed to be in his hotel room to receive a phone call from the owner, has said that Piniella was "the worst judge of talent" in the organization.

"I don't think he really meant that," Piniella said Thursday. "I think he meant that the field managers are too close to the action and that you get a better perspective from upstairs."

Piniella said he will be in charge of the Yankees' player moves.

"Mr. Steinbrenner said that as far as trades are concerned, Billy and I should discuss it," Piniella said. "I have the authority to make trades. He just asked that I run them by him. "I'm going to get input from Billy. ... He's the one in the clubhouse every day. He's the one on the road with them."

In the past, Yankees general managers have been a buffer between the manager and the owner. Serving as manager for Steinbrenner is never easy. "It's like a five-hundred pound weight," said Martin, who has been an advisor to Steinbrenner since Piniella replaced him two years ago.

Piniella had said during the second half of the season that Martin had been backstabbing him with Steinbrenner. But on Thursday, the Yankees emphasized the "unity" of their new management team.

Martin and Piniella each wore grey, pinstriped suits. They each wore red neckties. They were not made available for individual interviews. All questioning was done to the pair. Piniella's response to several questions was: "It's just like Billy said." "Nobody's gonna drive a wedge between Lou and me," Martin said.

Martin led the Yankees to the American League pennant in 1976 and the World Series title in 1977, but in his last three tours the Yankees finished fourth, third and second. Each time he returned, turmoil followed.

"I'm not gonna change," Martin said. "My job is not to win a popularity contest. It's to win ballgames for the New York Yankees."

Martin said that his four previous dismissals had not taught him anything about being a manager for Steinbrenner.

"I was fired and I accepted it after I was fired, OK," Martin said. "I took it like a man. It's a hard pill to swallow when you get fired. You never get used to it. But I don't know if I learned anything from it, to be honest with you."

Dunbar cage program under investigation

By ROGER B. BROWN
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Bewildered, betrayed, angry, frustrated and confused.

Fort Worth Dunbar students expressed all of the above after revelations about the Wildcats' basketball program being investigated.

The District 6-5A executive committee, made up of principals of the various schools, voted to hand the case on to the University Interscholastic League, which governs extracurricular activities statewide.

The league's executive committee will look into the case in the next 30 days. UIL athletic director Bill Farney said.

Dunbar is rated No. 1 in Texas in a preseason coaches poll and No. 11 nationally by a national sports magazine. Penalties assessed against Dunbar could range from a private reprimand to banning a school from district championship and post-season competition. The committee also could terminate a school's program. According to two sources in the administration, head coach and athletic coordinator Lewis Hayes turned in the basketball program to the executive committee, alleging a violation involving a practice run too early under Texas high school rules.

The sources said Hayes alleged that Dunbar basketball coach Robert Hughes supervised an early morning practice by the Wildcats on Oct. 15. If true, that would be a violation of UIL rules, as the next Monday was the first day that high school basketball teams officially could start practicing.

Hayes has declined comment, as did other athletic staff members.

News of the investigation was rampant throughout the community, senior basketball player Truce Williams said.

"I think it all goes back to when Coach Hayes first came here. I think the reason he did it is because he has been trying to get some of the basketball players to try out for football and they wouldn't do it. So that was one of the ways he could get back at them. But I don't understand how he could do that to his own school," Williams said.

"Everybody at school has been upset about what Coach Hayes did. I don't understand how he would turn against us. He should have been the last somebody to do something like that. It's not just about the basketball program, it is all about a big power play between Hayes and Coach Hughes."

Hayes, 40, is in his first season at Dunbar after serving as an assistant coach at Terrell and had a 1-5 record through the first six games. Hughes, 59, has taken his basketball teams to district championships in 11 of the past 12 seasons, and he has compiled a 799-132 record — 97 victories short of the state record for career victories held by Charles Womack of Hawley.

Hughes has denied violating UIL rules. "I don't have to hold illegal workouts," he said. "The gym is always open and available. They come here because they consider it safe. There are no guns, knives, alcohol or drugs. The people who come in here range from 14 to 40 years old. We've even had girls here."

Senior basketball player Shon Lewis said, "I have been hearing about it for the last couple of days. I don't like it, and I think Coach Hayes should leave well enough alone. What goes on in the gym is Coach Hughes' business. This has a lot of people upset and wondering about a guy who would turn against his own people."

After the district executive meeting, Ronny White, the athletic director for Fort Worth public schools, told Dunbar boosters that nobody is out to get Dunbar.

"If they haven't done anything wrong, there's no problem. But if they've done something wrong, there are going to be serious problems."

Hughes said the decision by district principals to forward the complaint to the state doesn't worry him.

"I'm worried about if we're going to play defense this season, if we're going to pass like our teams in the past," he said.

Perennial powers face day of reckoning in Big Ten

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Perennial powers Michigan and Ohio State face a day of reckoning when they meet the upstart contenders in the Big Ten Saturday.

Indiana, unbeaten in three conference games and ranked 15th nationally, will try to break a 20-year losing streak against Michigan when it plays host to the Wolverines, ranked 20th. Minnesota travels to No. 16 Ohio State, and Illinois is at No. 14 Michigan State in other key games.

Indiana and Michigan State are 3-0 in conference games, while Michigan, Ohio State and Minnesota each are 2-1.

"For us to get back in the race, we've got to beat Indiana on the road," Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler said. "It's going to be a battle."

Elsewhere in the top 20 Saturday, it's Colorado at No. 1 Oklahoma; Kansas State at No. 2 Nebraska; No. 3 Miami, Fla., at Cincinnati; Mississippi State at No. 6 Auburn; North Carolina State at No. 7 Clemson; California at No. 8 UCLA; Colgate at No. 9 Syracuse; Southern California at No. 10 Notre Dame; Kentucky at No. 12 Georgia; No. 13 Tennessee at Georgia Tech; and No. 19 Oklahoma State at Missouri.

Michigan whipped Iowa 37-10 last week and held the Hawkeys to minus-13 yards rushing while allowing 362 yards passing. Michigan quarterback Demetrius Brown, who threw seven interceptions in a loss to Michigan State, came back against Iowa to complete 14 of 19 passes for three touchdowns with no interceptions.

Indiana edged Minnesota 18-17 on Saturday, a week after a 31-10 upset of Ohio State.

"Minnesota is one point away from an undefeated season and two points away from being undefeated and untied," Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce said. "They have great execution on offense and a sound defense."

Michigan State tailback

Lorenzo White became the second runner in Big Ten history, behind Archie Griffin, to pass 4,000 yards when he gained 187 last week against Northwestern. But the Spartans also are taking pride in their solid rushing defense.

Michigan State ranks seventh nationally, first in the Big Ten, in rushing defense, yielding 83.8 yards a game. In their three conference games, the Spartans have permitted an average of only 42.7 yards rushing to Iowa, Michigan and Northwestern.

The team that has led the Big Ten in total defense has won or shared the conference championship in 11 of the last 15 years.
