Missile hits U.S. flag tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A missile believed to have been fired by Iran struck and set ablaze a U.S.-flagged tanker in the Persian Gulf today. At least 18 people, including the ship's American captain, were wounded in the attack.

It was the second missile strike on an American-owned or American-flagged vessel in Kuwaiti waters in two days.

The American radio man of the ship hit today was also among the wounded, a U.S. military spokesman in Manama said. The injured crewmen's identities were not released.

Secretary of State George Shultz, in Israel to discuss Middle East peace, called the attack a "serious matter."

Kuwait's Cabinet met in emergency session to discuss it.

In Washington, Sen. Sam Nunn, the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee said today, following a White House briefing, that he understood the missile was a Silkworm, which Iran is known to have.

As the administration weighed its response to the attack, there were indications President Reagan was cancelling his scheduled weekend trip to his Camp David, Md., retreat.

Nunn, D-Ga., told reporters, "It's my understanding it was a Silkworm missile. For its part, the White House was saying very little about the attack, even 12 hours afterward.

Reagan had his daily morning meeting with national security adviser Frank Carlucci — who briefed Nunn and the committee's senior Republican, John Warner of Virginia, separately — and had a previously arranged afternoon session on tap with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

One White House official, declining to be named, indicated that Reagan would not be making his routine weekend foray to the Catoctin Mountains, but would say no more about the president's plans.

The tanker, the 81,283-ton Sea Isle City, is part of the Kuwaiti fleet reflagged by the United States in July.

Eleven of the injured were hospitalized in Kuwait, four in critical condition.

The United States has 11 warships the Middle East Force in the gulf and two battle groups in the adjacent Gulf of Oman and Arabian Sea.

In Tehran, Iranian President Ali Khamenei today told a group of worshippers who were gathering for noon prayers at Tehran University that an American-flagged ship was "hit by a missile."

The official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, quoted the Iranian leader as saying: "Where the missile came from? The Almighty knows better."

Sister testifies brother acted in self-defense

By PAUL PINKHAM

A murder suspect's sister testified Thursday that her brother was about to be stabbed and clubbed, and acted in self-defense when he knifed one of her neighbors to death in March.

Maria Rodriguez said she saw Jaime Barrientes, 22, reach for a knife seconds before her brother, George, 17, stabbed Barrientes and Noe Pedraza Barajas in front of her apartment at 412 N. Somerville St.

Barrientes died while en route to Coronado Hospital nearly an hour later. Barajas, 21, survived after undergoing emergency heart surgery in Amarillo.

George Rodriguez is on trial for murder in Barrientes' death before 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany, who said he hopes to conclude the trial today.

The state's last expected witness, Amarillo pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann, who performed the autopsy on Barrientes, testified today.

Erdmann testified that the victim was stabbed in the abdomen and that the wound was fatal because two major veins were severed.

The state rested its case today after Erdmann's testimony.

Defendant Rodriguez then began his defense.

On Wednesday, Lavina Price, another resident of the one-story apartment complex on North Somerville, said Rodriguez was peering into her window March 2. She said she later saw Rodriguez stab Barrientes and Barajas, whom she had asked to scare off the reported intruder.

Slaying victim Barrientes

Neither man threatened Rodriguez, Price testified.

Maria Rodriguez testified Thursday that her brother had simply gone outside her apartment to drink beer and sniff paint to get "a buzz." He had come over to check on her because she had been ill, she said.

Rodriguez said she saw Price "flip him off" with an obscene gesture.

Rodriguez leaves courtroom Thursday, moments before slapping at a photographer.

"I said, 'Don't bother him. He's not doing nothing.'" Rodriguez told jurors.

A few minutes later, the sister testified, she saw Barrientes and Barajas searching for something. Barrientes had a knife and Barajas was holding a 3-foot metal pipe, she said.

Rodriguez said she tried to keep her brother inside the apartment, but he went out and confronted the men. She said she heard Barrientes accuse her brother of "messing with" his wife.

Rodriguez replied that he didn't know Barrientes' wife, the sister testified, and after a brief discussion, he began walking away. The sister said she then saw Barrientes reach for his knife.

"After Jaime went for his knife, that's when George ... pulled out the knife," he had concealed, she said.

After Barrientes was stabbed, Barajas took two swings at Rodriguez with the pipe, but Rodriguez ducked both times and stabbed Barajas in the leg and near the chest, Miss Rodriguez testified.

Rescuers close to child in well

MIDLAND (AP) — Rescuers tunneling through rock so hard that it dulled diamond-tipped drills broke a 2-inch hole today in a well shaft where an 18-month-old girl crying for her mother was trapped 22 feet below ground.

Rescue workers still had to bore a 20-inch diameter hole through 10 inches of solid rock to reach in and pull tiny Jessica McClure from the narrow shaft, Police Cpl. Jim White said.

Later, Police Sgt. Jeff Haile estimated at 9 a.m., 4½ hours after the shaft was breached, that workers were still several hours away from rescuing the girl.

"It's going to be at least three and probably seven (hours)," Haile said.

Drilling into the shaft was a great morale boost to the workers who have been trying to reach Jessica for nearly two days, he said. "I think it set them (rescue workers) on fire."

"Every man that goes down in there now knows that we're just a short time away," White said. "Three or four hours is nothing compared to the time we've spent here."

After reaching the well shaft with the drilling bit, White said, workers left the bit in the hole so that it can act to prevent the child from falling into a deeper area of

County still jawing on expansion plan

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

Gray County commissioners may have "got the ball rolling" toward expanding county facilities, but so far the ball has not picked up momentum.

After meeting secretly for more than three hours Thursday to discuss the "acquisition of property" for a potential courthouse annex, Gray County commissioners adjourned their regular meeting at 2 p.m. without reaching any decision.

Responding to overflowing offices and a substandard jail in the 58-year-old courthouse, the commissioners voted in June to consider renovating the courthouse or building new facilities.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said Thursday that there have been no discussions about building a new courthouse altogether.

"Right now, we're looking at several different locations," Kennedy said, adding that while he could not specify where the possible sites are, he knows they will be in the Pampa area.

Kennedy said that with the current depressed market, now is the right time to consider acquiring property.

Still, the county is taking its time with its expansion ideas. Thursday's session was the third time commissioners met privately to discuss the expansion.

But the slow pace is just the speed Precinct 2 Commissioner Jim Greene wants it.

"We're getting the cart before the horse if we do anything now," Greene said after the meeting. "But we can't wait forever."

Greene expressed concern about the Gray County Jail, which has 12 variances from the Texas Jail Standards Commission.

"But if we hurry and put one up now, it could still fail the standards," Greene said.

Precinct 3 Commissioner O.L. Presley said he doesn't expect any action for at least another year.

"There are too many possibilities now. Times are changing," Presley said, adding that he has not come up with his own suggestions yet.

Ted Simmons, Precinct 4 commissioner, said the county is looking at four or five properties for

Twenty guilty of drinking after hours

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Despite a Pampa woman's claim that she drinks whiskey, not beer, she and 19 other patrons of a southside nightspot were found guilty Thursday of drinking beer after legal hours during a raid on the establishment last month.

Municipal Judge Pat Lee accepted no contest pleas from 18 of the defendants, charged with misdemeanor drinking after hours at B&J Restaurant, 400 Maple St. Some also had faced charges of being minors in possession of alcoholic beverages.

Lee fined each defendant $60.50.

Two other defendants had their day in court Thursday, but Lee found them both guilty.

The 20 after-hours drinkers were arrested about 2:30 a.m. Sept. 20, during a raid on B&J by police and Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission representatives. An undercover TABC agent had the restaurant under surveillance for several days before the bust, Pampa Police Chief Robert Eberz said.

TABC district supervisor Jody McCarthy of Amarillo said the bust was prompted by complaints the agency had received about liquor being sold without a license.

Thirteen men and seven women were arrested in the bust for drinking after hours, and the restaurant's owners, Ernest Lee Mathis Jr., 44, and Mary Mathis, 46, both of 112 W. Albert St., were charged with possession of alcoholic beverages with intent to resell.

Cases against the Mathis couple have not come up yet in Gray County Court, County Attorney Bob McPherson said Thursday.

Thursday, one man and one woman pleaded innocent before Municipal Judge Lee, but to no avail.

Rebecca Ellen Johnston, 31, 212 E. Thut St., testified that she doesn't drink beer and wasn't drinking that night. She called one witness to the stand in her defense.

Keith Lee Lambright, 18, 1616 N. Zimmers St., one of the 18 defendants who pleaded no contest prior to Thursday's trial docket, said he had never seen Johnston drink beer.

"You drink whiskey," he replied when she asked him if she drank beer.

Lee found Johnston guilty and fined the woman $30.50. Johnston said she plans to appeal.

Also pleading innocent to the after-hours charge was Clyde C. Sirles, 24, 1029 Huff Road. Sirles said cups of beer were already at his table when he sat down upon arriving.

Sirles was fined $60.50.

County Attorney McPherson said charges against the Mathis couple should be on the next county court docket. If found guilty, the couple faces fines of $100 to $1,000 and up to a year in jail.

Minor accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported no traffic accidents for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

Fire investigators to release lab report in fatal fire today

Investigators with the Pampa Fire Department and Police Department were tight-lipped this morning about whether arson was responsible for an Oct. 6 house fire that killed a 7-month-old baby.

Pampa Fire Department arson investigator Gary Stevens said today that he received a report this morning from the Armstrong Laboratory Inc., which examined pieces of evidence from the fire at a rent house at 607 E. Gordon.

Seven-month-old Justin Tyler Cally died in the fire.
Stevens refused to release any information from the report until he makes a public announcement at 2 p.m. today at the fire marshal's office.

Stevens said earlier that no determination of arson can be made because he had not yet received a complete report from the Arlington firm.

Stevens added that he has "no suspects that we can point to."
Stevens and Pampa Police Chief Robert Eberz spent this morning in a meeting to determine how to handle media inquiry into the fire.

Eberz said the meeting dealt with how to coordinate information between the Fire Department and Police Department.

The baby died from injuries he suffered in a minor fire at the house his mother was renting at 607 Gordon. The infant's mother and brother were reportedly out making a telephone call at a neighbor's house when the fire occurred.

After studying burn patterns that indicated some sort of flammable liquid may have been dumped on the home's kitchen floor, Pampa Fire Marshal Tom Adams ruled the fire suspicious. Floor samples and wood scrapings were sent to the Arlington laboratory for testing.

Sister

echoed a statement her brother gave police a day after the stabbings. The statement was offered into evidence Thursday by Rodriguez's court-appointed attorney, David Holt of Pampa.

Holt contends Rodriguez acted in self-defense.
Assistant District Attorney Harold Comer accused the woman of lying to protect her brother and asked her what reason Price would have to lie or "flip him off."

Rodriguez replied: "Maybe she was prejudiced. I don't know."
The woman admitted she had not told her story to police or prosecutors after the incident on the advice of "some attorneys in Amarillo."

Holt called several other witnesses to the stand Thursday, in an attempt to persuade jurors that Rodriguez was merely trying to defend himself.

Pampa police Officer Katie Morse testified that she found two knives inside the house on Frost Street, where Barrientes and Barajas had run after being stabbed. Morse said witnesses told her the men had wanted the knives hidden before police arrived.

Kenny Fisher and Teresa Anderson, both of whom were in the area the night of the stabbings, also testified that Barrientes and Barajas wanted the knives hidden.

Also testifying Thursday was Barrientes' widow, Sonia, 18, of Brownsville. She said she was about seven months pregnant with Barrientes' baby when her husband was killed.

The couple had lived in Pampa for seven or eight months, moving from Brownsville, she said.
Barajas, who Mrs. Barrientes said had driven her husband home from work the night of the stabbings, probably won't testify about the fatal incident. He has moved to Mexico and was unable to be subpoenaed for the trial.

If convicted, Rodriguez faces five to 99 years or life in prison and a maximum $10,000 fine. The jury could grant him probation on any sentence of 10 years or less.

Country Fair set for Saturday

Months of preparation will come to fruition Saturday night when the third annual Country Fair gets under way at 5:30 p.m. at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Sponsored by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, the fair will offer an evening of good food, super bargains and toe-tapping entertainment, said Warren Chisum, general chairman for the event.

For the price of the admission ticket, fair-goers will have dinner with a wide range of variety in foods and appetizers, have a chance to bid for bargains in the silent and live auctions, and dance to the music of the Wells Fargo Band.

The Country Fair is the chamber's only fundraising event, with the money raised in the past two fairs helping to get the chamber out of debt and to fund the many community activities and projects that benefit the citizens of Pampa, Chisum noted.

Virginia Wilkerson, Food Committee chairman, said people will be able to choose from among pizza, barbecue sausage or brisket, tacos, chicken strips, red beans, slaw, appetizers and cobbler, plus free drinks.

Furnishing the food are Dyer's Bar-B-Que, Danny's Market, Mr. Gatti's, Scotty's Wine and Cheese Shoppe, Dos Caballeros and the Pampa Country Club. Booths will be set up in the Heritage Room.

During breaks in dining, fair-goers can take time to check out the hundreds of bargain items to choose from in the silent and live auctions.
Don Babcock, chairman of the Donations Committee, said the committee has obtained excellent items from Pampa merchants, professionals and individuals, with a wide selection available to suit many needs.

The silent auction items will be on display, with bidders placing their bids on tabulation sheets. Each bid must be higher than the preceding bid. At the close of the silent auction, the person having written down the highest bid can purchase the desired item or items.

The silent auction will open at the same time as the food booths — 5:30 p.m.

The live auction, featuring two auctioneers this year, will begin in the auditorium at 8 p.m., with those in the audience bidding against each other for the various quality items available.
Babcock said ticket-holders this year will get a chance to bid on two automobiles as part of the live auction excitement. Heritage Ford and Culbertson-Stowers Chevrolet have each donated an automobile for the event.

Items to be auctioned range from a porcelain doll to a fire extinguisher, from shots for pets to golf lessons, from hand-tooled knives to a home entertainment center.

Adding to the Country Fair atmosphere, the country theme will be carried out in the decorations transforming the auditorium setting with country elements. Among the ornamental enhancements this year will be wall coverings of hand-crafted quilts. Decorating Committee Chairman Jerry Lane said judges will choose the three best quilts in a contest.

Following the close of the silent and live auctions, the dance will begin at 9 p.m. in the Heritage Room, concluding a full evening of food, entertainment and bargains for the Country Fair.

County

what he anticipates will be a new annex.

"We have no intention of disposing of the current courthouse," Simmons said, adding that one possibility would be to move law enforcement and jail services to its own building. Wheeler County has such a setup.

The county currently has an annex east of Pampa on U.S. 60, where the extension service and soil conservation offices are. But Simmons said it would not be feasible to expand there.

"The annex is not as accessible as I'd like it to be. We're looking for property closer to the courthouse," Simmons said.

The commissioner anticipates at least another two or three months of executive meetings before any decision is reached. But even then, said Simmons, there may be a long wait before any facility is built.

"We're just negotiating with property owners," Simmons said adding that he is not at liberty to disclose where any of the properties are.

In other business, commissioners agreed to give the Alanreed-McLean Area Museum of McLean the $4,000 it had been expecting from the county.

Commissioners had budgeted $4,000 for the museum if the county received any new federal revenue sharing funds. But when the program was cut by Congress, the allocation was cut by the federal government and the $4,000 was cut by the county.

Simmons, a McLean resident, said museum officials seemed disturbed when they didn't get their $4,000.

He told commissioners that the museum is not operated by the county the way Pampa's White Deer Lands Museum is.

"Most of it is done by volunteer work," Simmons said.

Simmons and Presley offered $2,000 out of their surplus road and bridge funds to help the county keep its budget promise to the museum. Commissioners accepted the offers and transferred the funds. The county budgeted $2,000 of its general fund to the museum in 1988.

The commissioners warn that future allocations may dwindle over the next couple of years. Next year, the museum may get only $2,000. The following year, the museum may get nothing.

There were no representatives of the museum at the meeting.

Commissioners tabled action on approval of a written investment policy for the county. Commissioners want to check the policy with its depositories.

According to Gray County Treasurer Scott Hahn, a new state law, House Bill 1488, requires that the county must have a written policy guiding investments. The policy must address liquidity, diversification, safety of principal, yield, maturity and quality and capability of investment management.

without serious dehydration or other ill effects.
Steve Allcorn, a rescue worker, said just before midnight that a microphone dangling near Jessica's head picked up the drilling, suggesting rescuers were getting close.

The girl's 18-year-old father, Chip McClure said, "With the Lord and your prayers, we know that little girl is going to make it."

Tommy Johnson, the girl's uncle, called her "a fighter."
The 20-pound child fell into the narrow well Wednesday morning as she played behind a home that her mother and aunt use as a day care center.

The 8-inch opening had been covered with a rock or flower pot, said Sgt. Jeff Haile. The well widens underground and then narrows to 6 inches where Jessica landed.

Well

the well.

"The problem is that we have about 10 inches of solid rock to go through," White said.

Haile estimated the breakthrough hole was about 10 to 15 inches below the child and said rescuers had inserted two industrial type balloons below her to keep her from slipping. He said workers planned to try to insert mirrors into the well shaft later so they could see her.

Sitting in a 20-inch wide tunnel, workers used hand-held 30-pound jack hammers to drill upward at a 45-degree angle in their attempt to reach the trapped toddler early today.
Authorities said the girl was awake at times while they worked frantically to reach her.
"She's been sleeping on and off. The doctor says let her sleep,"

White said. "When she wakes up, she's crying for her mother."

"If she's crying, she's breathing. It's as easy as that," said Dr. Chip Klunick, an emergency physician at the scene, had said late Thursday.

Reba McClure, the girl's 17-year-old mother, periodically yelled down to her daughter, drawing cries of "Mommy." In between brief naps, the child also hummed and sang verses from "Winnie the Pooh," police said.

"We can't let ourselves get depressed and frustrated and start getting in a hurry," said White. "The worst thing we can do down there is get in a hurry and somehow jeopardize her. We are going to go at the same slow tedious pace."

Fire Chief James Roberts said doctors assured him that a toddler in Jessica's condition could survive easily up to four days

TV season offers chance of rebirth

With just about a month gone in the new television season, there are some promising signs of a rebirth for this vast wasteland.

As always, though, there are some distressing signals being sent through our tubes.

Probably the best thing to happen to television so far this year is the just-announced cancellation of Max Headroom.

How this dippy guy ever became the phenomenon he was is a mystery still unresolved.

One of the worst events to come to television in awhile is the attempt to revitalize the variety show format with Dolly.

If Dolly Parton looked like Loretta Lynn, she'd never have made it as big as she has.

Take away her squeaky little laugh and other blessings she has received and she'd be just another run-of-the-mill country singer.

Still holding down the top spot in the ratings is, of course, The Cosby Show.

Cosby's premier was very funny. Hopefully, it can regain the form it possessed in its first year through this season.

Cosby's spinoff, Different World, starring Lisa Bonet (Denise on Cosby), shows a lot of promise and hopes of being more than just another teenybopper comedy.

A big disappointment in The Slap Maxwell Story, an ABC entry starring the oft-times controversial but usually reliable Dabney Coleman.

The show is largely without taste, as is Coleman's wont, and will hopefully be axed before the end of the year.

Maxwell had a promising premise: Divorced sports writer tries to make it in the cruel newspaper world. Coleman and the show don't make the cut.

Conversely, the lead-in to Maxwell is Hooperman starring John Ritter.

I did not care for Three's Company—ever—but Ritter may redeem himself with this outing.

So far this year, the best television miniseries has been the National League Playoff Series.

Pitting St. Louis and San Francisco, the series starred the Giants' Jeffrey Leonard and the Cards' Ozzie Smith, who put on a war of words that would rival the banterings of J.R. and Sue Ellen Ewing.

"Did, too!" Leonard would say to Smith.

"Did not!" Smith would reply.

The two didn't get along from the series' outset and the feud reached a climax when Smith charged Leonard with trying to "get" him throughout the playoffs.

But back to the real world of prime time entertainment...

Dennis Weaver and William Conrad, both washed up, had insisted on trying it again on series television.

As a result, we get stuck with Buck James and Jake and the Fatman, both shows that fall below the margin of adequate entertainment.

And again we are forced Moonlighting. When will America grow up and grow tired of the ridiculous rantings of David and Maddie?

With Bruce Willis' real-life arrest and Cybill Sheppard's assorted offstage flings, can these two be considered proper role models anymore?

And then there was the show's vastly overrated and distasteful season finale last year which was "highlighted" by the couple jumping in the sack together after they called each other names unprintable in this newspaper.

With all this said and done, here then is a list of favorites and flunkies:

The Ten Favorites (in no particular order): Cheers, Newhart, Family Ties, Designing Women, West 57th, L.A. Law, Our House, Hooperman, Different World and Duet (Fox Network).

The Ten Flunkies (in order of bad to worst): Moonlighting, ALF, Perfect Strangers, Slap Maxwell, The Oldest Rookie, Night Court, Who's the Boss?, Ohara, Hotel and Dynasty.

Woman gets probation in 'love triangle' case

LIVINGSTON (AP) — A woman convicted of lying to corroborate her father's alibi at his murder trial in 1986 was sentenced to six years probation and fined $2,400.

"I have to do what I think is right," State District Judge John Martin said after pronouncing the sentence Thursday for Vanessa Fontenot.

Martin said he based his decision solely on the perjury case, not on the 1986 trial of Ms. Fontenot's father, who was acquitted.

But, he said he couldn't forget the three years probation and deferred adjudication Ms. Fontenot received in 1984 for forging and cashing an employer's check.

Ms. Fontenot, 26, was convicted of changing her story at her father's murder trial to corroborate his alibis.

Fontenot, former principal of Hull-Daisetta Junior High School, was acquitted of murdering football coach Billy Mac Fleming. Prosecutors contended Fontenot killed Fleming over the affections of a school secretary.

A probation revocation hearing on the forgery conviction has been set for Nov. 2 in Austin and Ms. Fontenot faces a 10-year prison sentence as a result of that action.

Martin's fairness in the case had been called into question by testimony of his court reporter during last week's Galveston evidentiary hearing of death row inmate Clarence Brandley.

Martin's court reporter, Mary Johnson, who was not present Thursday, told jurors last week that Martin had told her his handling of Ms. Fontenot's case would depend on how he was treated in the Brandley case.

Martin had presided in one of Brandley's earlier trials, and Brandley's attorney, Mike DeGeurin, is the brother of Dick DeGuerrin, who defended Ms. Fontenot's father, Hurley Fontenot.

Rescue scene yard is packed with spectators

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

MIDLAND (AP) — Schoolchildren prayed and anxious spectators with kids of their own looked on as rescuers struggled to get to the little girl in the well.

"I don't know these people, but it's really been emotional for me," said Carol Davis, a mother of six who watched the tedious rescue efforts.

Throughout the day Thursday, spectators came and went, standing in adjacent backyards and on the street in this working-class neighborhood.

In the yard where the rescue effort continued into the night, a small mimosa tree was almost covered with the rock that had been hewn from the earth to create a shaft rescuers hoped would become Jessica McClure's tunnel to safety.

In the next yard, the Salvation Army and Red Cross served refreshments to reporters and rescue workers. The next-door yard became an instant press area, complete with a forest of ladders used to peer over the fence.

After school was out Thursday, Lynne Markgraf brought students from the Alamo YMCA in Midland. The 13 children held hands in a circle as Markgraf said a brief prayer. Some of the children wept.

"It's hard to stop crying," said 8-year-old Amy Dyer, a friend of a cousin of the trapped girl. "An 18-month-old baby, that's quite small."

Markgraf said the children wanted to come to the scene.

"I definitely feel once this thing is played out they will feel they were part of a victory," she said. "The children are very optimistic."

But as night fell and the lights came on for a second night of digging, optimism was stained by the reality of the rescue effort that began Wednesday morning.

"If you would have asked me yesterday morning, we wouldn't be here today," Midland Fire Chief James Roberts said.

Mentally retarded get $203 million in funds

DALLAS (AP) — A 13-year legal battle over conditions in Texas schools for the mentally retarded was apparently settled when parties agreed to a plan that should pump an additional $203 million into the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, officials said.

Under the plan, signed Thursday, the state has agreed to hire hundreds of new employees, monitor conditions in the schools for another decade and follow new accreditation standards and investigative procedures to battle abuse and neglect.

Staff-to-client ratio at state schools will be increased by 15 percent over the next three years, including doctors, nurses and physical therapists, the department said.

The signing came 24 hours before U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders was to penalize the state for its failure to comply with a 1983 settlement agreement.

In August, Sanders had held the state in contempt of court for violating both the settlement and clients' constitutional rights.

Sanders approved the agreement in open court, saying it was "the right thing to do."

MHMR Board Chairman Roger Bateman said the contempt citation provided a "stimulus" to settle the suit, but denied that Sanders had forced the state to reach an agreement with the plaintiffs.

But plaintiffs' attorney David Ferleger said the state was muscled into the agreement by Sanders' deadline, and by his proposal that the judge hold individual contempt hearings for other schools.

He said the plan was unprecedented because Texas is the first of 30 states involved in similar litigation to guarantee improved conditions at all state schools.

Only three state schools—in Fort Worth, Denton and Austin—were named in the original suit.

"This decree goes further than any other in the country in ensuring that, at the least, people will not be warehoused at the risk of life and limb," Ferleger said.

The Legislative Budget Board on Tuesday reviewed the initial 1971 case, Lelsz vs. Kavanagh lawsuit settlement, which has been agreed to by attorneys on both sides.

"I think it's a good settlement," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, board chairman. "I think it's probably the best result that could have been achieved."

MHMR had estimated earlier that it would cost an extra $17.7 million in fiscal year 1989, $31.7 million in fiscal 1990 and $31.2 million in fiscal 1991 to comply with the settlement agreement, said Tom Suehs, deputy commissioner for management and support.

But Ferleger said $63 million in state and federal money was agreed to be given to the state school funds for this biennium and $140 million for the following one. Of those figures $109.8 million will be paid by the state, Ferleger said.

"Those dollar figures will have to continue in the future," Ferleger said. "And the probable result will be that more patients will be moved out of the schools and into the community in order to avoid costs of institutional improvements. That is just what we want for the patients."

The negotiated agreement of the lawsuit over care of the mentally retarded is the second accord in less than two months, MHMR Board Chairman Roger Bateman said. An agreement was signed in September in the RAJ vs. Miller lawsuit over care of the mentally ill.

Total estimated cost of both settlements to the state is $26.2 million for 1988-89 and $78.4 million in 1990-91, Suehs said.

Officials said money could be shifted within the department budget initially, avoiding the need for lawmakers to meet before the 1989 regular session.

Jackson campaigns in South Texas

MISSION (AP) — Standing on the banks of the Rio Grande, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said the U.S. government should put as much oomph into its anti-drug smuggling campaign here as it does defending allies' borders in Europe and Asia.

"You need to be congratulated for what you have done, but you obviously need more enforcement," Jackson told Silvestre Reyes, the Border Patrol's chief patrol agent for the McAllen Sector of South Texas.

Jackson, 46, wearing a green Border Patrol cap, gazed across the river into Mexico Thursday and referred to drug smuggling as a form of warfare against the United States.

"We don't use a phrase in Korea and Europe. 'Say no to communism.' We put up a serious defense," Jackson told Reyes while riding along the border in a Border Patrol vehicle.

Earlier in the day, Jackson was critical of U.S. immigration policies, which he said were partly to blame for poverty in the region.

"Most Americans have no idea of the impact of our immigration policy with our neighbors next door and what's happening in the (Rio Grande) Valley here in South Texas," he said while visiting an impoverished community near the city of Progreso.

Jackson met with residents of a neighborhood known locally as a colonia, two miles north of the Mexican border. He stopped along a caliche road at the plywood-floor home of 73-year-old Placida Torres in the colonia called "La Frontera."

Residents told Jackson the neighborhood was developed four years ago, but did not obtain drinking water until March and remains without sewage connections.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Soviets keep thumb on totalitarian states

Nicaragua is gone. It's now solidly in the Soviet camp, joining the countries that have gone before — Latvia, Cuba and Vietnam. Oh yes, the Contras will hang on for awhile, at least the more passionate ones, but they will eventually put down their rifles.

They will follow in the retreating footsteps of the 400 Indian rebels who switched sides last month. One of the leaders of this group blamed lack of U.S. support and decided, what the heck, if you can't lick 'em, join 'em. "If the American government and the Congress ... if they understood us, we would have fought the Sandinista government until the bitter end," the ex-rebel told reporters.

The former rebels won't be lonely. They will soon be citizens of a great 20th century empire of totalitarian states, along with the people of Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

What the freedom fighters in Nicaragua so clearly understand, and what the majority of the people in all Latin American countries understand, is that the Sandinistas are ruthless dictators bent on expanding their tyranny. As soon as the pesky Contras are disposed of, they can muzzle La Prensa again (which they will do) and shut off the power to the Catholic radio station again (which they will do).

But, tragically, too many key members of the U.S. Congress don't understand this. House Speaker Jim Wright vows no more American aid will ever be sent to the Contras. Perhaps still reeling from the trauma of the Vietnam War, these moral eunuchs can't find the will to even send a few million dollars to the rebels trying to rescue their stolen revolution from the Soviet puppets.

Perhaps they can spend the money that they save to buy sympathy cards and send them to the newest inhabitants of the Gulag, who will be keeping company with the people of Estonia, Cambodia and North Korea.

Even the White House seems to have lost faith in the fight. President Reagan foolishly embraced a "peace" plan that will suffocate the Contras while the Sandinistas rebuild their army and their battered economy. The 400 Contra Indians who defected are merely the earliest group to see the bloody handwriting on the wall — handwriting read every day by the people of East Germany, Afghanistan and Yugoslavia.

"Just a minute! Is this the TELEPHONE NUMBER or the PRICE?"

Soviet mouthpiece spouts lies

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Vladimir Posner turned up in Pensacola the other day as featured luncheon speaker on the iceberg lettuce circuit. His bottled remarks poured forth as smoothly as the store-bought French dressing that came with the salad, and they had about the same authenticity. A few observations.

Posner, 43, is identified by his lecture agent as the Soviet Union's foremost journalist. Born in Paris, where his father represented Loew's International, he came to the United States as a boy of 6. He spent his teen-age years in East Germany, then settled in Moscow. In 1970 he became commentator for the Soviets' State Committee for TV and Radio. Last year he was promoted to the rank of "political observer" for Radio Moscow. Posner bears an amazing resemblance to actor Richard Burton. He speaks five languages fluently. He is as slick as a wet pane of glass.

Posner came to Pensacola (for a $2,500 fee) to speak to the third annual journalism conference of the University of West Florida. His assignment was to present a Soviet view of the American press. He began by acknowledging "profound differences" in the two nations. Then his intellectual gears shifted to automatic transmission.

There is no such thing as a "free press" in either nation, he remarked. All media are controlled, his and ours. In the United States, editors exercise control over the stories that will be published and the stories that will be killed. In the Soviet Union it is a little different, but in the end it is all the same. Controls are controls.

This was a bit much for his audience of Southern editors and reporters. One skeptical fellow recalled Dr. Johnson's line about the fellow who saw no distinction between vice and virtue. If he really believes that, said Dr. Johnson, "why, sir, when he leaves our houses let us count the spoons."

In the Soviet Union, said Posner, the role of the press is not only to inform but also to educate. Unlike American newspapers, they are not much interested in local crimes of murder or rape. When such crimes are reported, the emphasis is on determining the social forces that led to criminal behavior.

The media in both countries, he said, are alike in this respect: They hew to the government's line. President Reagan is anti-communist. The press is therefore anti-communist also. Indeed, the American media constantly present an image of the Soviet Union that corresponds to Reagan's concept of an "evil empire." In cartoons, in headlines, in the work of political columnists (and here the gentleman gave me a friendly dirty look), the Soviet Union is wrongly and unfairly portrayed.

What about dissenting opinion in the Soviet Union? The visitor was full of assurances. Under the new policy of "glasnost," critical voices in fact are being raised. Great changes are coming about. Look: He was free to characterize the Berlin Wall as "a horror." He had no hesitation in saying that his government blundered in reporting the nuclear reactor disaster at Chernobyl. His government also had acted poorly in the matter of the Korean passenger airliner.

All in all, it was an impressive performance by the "foremost journalist" of the Soviet Union. He made some criticisms that undeniably are valid, for example, that American newspapers, magazines and wire services tend to send reporters to Moscow who speak no Russian and remain for only short periods. In pleading for better people-to-people understanding, in contrast to government-to-government exchanges, he was on sound ground.

Yet Vladimir Posner never gave his audience any hint of the fundamental differences between journalism there and journalism here. To speak of a "Soviet journalist" is to make use of the literary device known as an oxymoron. The words contradict themselves. Posner is not a "journalist" in any sense known to American reporters and editors. Posner is an agent of the Soviet state, as surely as if he were attached to the Soviet Embassy in Washington. He is a propagandist. In fulfilling that role, he lectures to American universities and civic clubs. He charms the Phil Donahue show. He is an ambassador in fact, if not in law, and if much of what he peddles is baloney, it is prime baloney.

Here in the United States we sometimes get slightly obsessed with hearing "the other side." The Soviet Union has no such fixation. As a spokesman for his government, Posner does a first-rate job. In listening to him, however, we may take passing note of his birthday in 1934. It fell on April 1. It figures.

Americans should save more

What's wrong with this picture:
In August the personal income of Americans increased 0.5 of 1 percent.

In August consumer spending increased 1 1/2 percent. Biggest gain in six months.

Our spending was increasing three times faster than our income.

Has the credit card lured us to consume our own seed corn?

Loren Dunton, president of the National Center for Financial Education, says everybody has been cooperating to get us to spend our money — the retail merchants, the advertising people, the Chamber of Commerce, the credit card promoters — they've all done a terrific job of getting us to spend our money.

But Americans have done a dismal job of putting money aside.
Children learn the thrill of spending by the time they are 8, but they're not taught the how and why of saving.

Japanese salt away in savings 19 percent of their disposable income. The French save 14 percent. Americans save barely 4 percent.

Mr. Dunton believes that Social Security has misled us.

Paul Harvey

Americans in the 1940s began to believe that however they lived it up during their earning years they'd always have Social Security to take care of them later.

Social Security was designed as a safety net for the destitute. It was never intended to be a retirement program.

Since 1946 the American standard of living has been purchased with borrowed money.

If our country were a corporation, by now it would be going into bankruptcy.

Creditors include all those to whom we individuals owe money, all to whom our corporations owe money — all municipal, county, state and military pensions plus federal debt, funded and unfunded.

What the bankruptcy court would discover is that collectively we are now in debt in the amount of approximately $20 trillion.

And when creditors line up to salvage what they can, you can bet that Social Security recipients will not be first in line. Medicare and Social Security programs are already being reduced.

Presently foreigners are funding our debt binge.

Yet, individually and collectively, we continue to choose to spend rather than save.

Mr. Dunton's organization is dedicated to re-educating Americans, teaching them to be savers.

Even if it means fewer new cars, campers, VCRs and extravagant travel — he wants Americans to save, buy stocks, participate in employee stock ownership and adequately insure themselves for the longer life they will be living.

Airport taxes grab money from thin air

By William A. Rasher

Ripoffs come in assorted sizes, and as ripoffs go, the one I have just come across is thus far only medium-sized. But it is already a pain in the neck to travel agents, and it has the potential of becoming a serious burden to commercial aviation and a major additional expense to every airline passenger.

In a nutshell: Three cities and one state have made the delightful discovery that they can impose an indirect tax on every passenger who flies out of their territory and require the airlines to collect it for them. As soon as the other 49 states and America's thousands of municipalities and counties with airports find out about this, they will proceed to impose similar taxes themselves, and the cost of airline tickets will zoom accordingly. The paperwork imposed on the airlines — collecting and remitting varying amounts to every city and state — simply doesn't bear thinking about.

"Airport taxes" are, of course, a familiar (and annoying) aspect of air travel to anyone who has flown in other countries. This surcharge, amounting to anything from two to 10 dollars, is imposed at many airports on departure and paid, in cash, by the passenger himself.

In this country, so far, the local taxing authorities have preferred to leave collection of the surcharge to the airlines, which in turn have rightly passed it along to the passengers — listing it separately, rather than including it in the overall price of the ticket, so the passengers will know whom to blame.

As a result, every passenger flying out of Logan Airport in Boston pays $1.00 to the city, allegedly as a fuel tax imposed on the airlines. People flying out of Las Vegas are hit by the city fathers for $7.50 apiece to help defray the expense of the new airport, designed along the lines of the Taj Mahal and costing several times as much. And the state of Florida is the first of the sovereign 50 to tap this handy source of revenue, charging airlines a $1.00 "fuel tax" for every passenger boarding a plane anywhere in the state.

But the prize for the biggest surcharge (so far, anyway) goes to Chicago, which imposes a tax of nine bucks for every passenger departing the Windy City. What's more, there's no nonsense about using this money to pay for airport improvements or anything like that; every nickel of it goes straight into the city's general revenues. American Airlines battled Chicago all the way to the state Supreme Court on this one, but lost.

Why isn't this kind of "surcharge" imposed by all the other states, counties, and municipalities? As far as I can see, only because they haven't thought of it yet. But you can bet they will; and when they do, the result will be the biggest and most chaotic display of determined human greed since the Oklahoma Land Rush. Every city and state will have its own idea of how much ought to be charged, and its own excuse for charging it. There may be some interesting battles based on prestige (should San Francisco charge more than Los Angeles?) and competition for tourists (will Miami charge less than Honolulu?).

All this could be avoided if Congress would only drag itself away from its new fascination with foreign policy long enough to "preempt the field" and rationalize the whole affair. There may be no sound reason why states and municipalities shouldn't be allowed to tax airline fuel or airport services if they want to (though they are barred by law from directly taxing the sale of air transportation), but there is every reason to simplify and regularize the procedures. As matters stand, we are heading straight for a major restraint on interstate commerce.

Nation

Interest rates up, stocks still down

By PETER COY
AP Business Writer

With stock prices skidding after the market's biggest one-day loss ever, one major bank raised its prime lending rate for the second time in a week and analysts speculated that other banks would follow suit.

Meantime, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said fears of inflation are overblown, and interest rates which rise on those fears are out of line and due for a fall.

Chemical Bank, one of the nation's biggest banks, on Thursday raised its prime lending rate a half percentage point to 9.75 percent, its highest level since mid-1985. It was the sixth increase this year.

Banks nationwide raised the prime a half percentage point last week, responding to an increase in their costs of borrowing money.

Analysts said that increase was justified, given the broad pressure toward higher interest rates nationwide, and were surprised other major banks did not immediately follow New York-based Chemical's latest move.

"Despite the fact the prime was raised a week ago, the normally accepted spreads between CDs (certificates of deposits) and the prime rate have narrowed dramatically," said Mitchell Held, an economist at the investment firm Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

The prime is a benchmark used to set interest on a variety of corporate and consumer credit, including mortgages, home equity loans and credit cards.

Stocks on Thursday plunged in a sell-off shortly before the close of trading. The closely-watched Dow Jones average of industrial stocks fell 57.61 points to 2,355.09.

On Wednesday, the Dow dropped a record 95.46 points.

Analysts said concern over persistent trade deficits weighed heavily on the markets.

"We recognize some market nervousness. (But) it is clear to me that conditions do not warrant 'Apocalypse Now' scenarios," Baker told a news conference Thursday.

In the bond markets Thursday, the yield on the benchmark 30-year Treasury bond edged up to 10.22 percent late in the day from 10.16 percent late Wednesday. The yield had landed in double digits Wednesday for the first time in two years.

Pushing rates higher Wednesday was the Commerce Department's report of a higher-than-expected trade deficit in August.

Investors fear that continued weak trade could push the dollar lower, raising import prices and sparking inflation. They are demanding higher interest rates to protect them from the effects of inflation.

Administration officials and many private economists are worried that if interest rates are too high, the economy could be pushed into recession.

"All of this uncertainty is absolutely awful for business planning," said Michael Niemira, an economist for PaineWebber Inc. in New York.

Higher interest rates already are beginning to affect the economy, economists said.

The Commerce Department said Thursday retail sales fell 0.4 percent in September after a strong summer, and economists said the weakness was likely to continue as debt-laden consumers cut back spending.

The decline was led by weakness in auto sales, which fell 1.4 percent in September after a 5.7 percent increase in August.

Pleads innocent

Former Miss America Bess Myerson, right, enters U.S. Federal Court in Manhattan, N.Y., Thursday amid a crowd of photographers. Myerson, her millionaire boyfriend and the judge they are accused of influencing in a divorce case all pleaded innocent to federal conspiracy, mail fraud and bribery-related charges.

House, Senate wrapping up new bills to increase taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate tax-writers, steering Congress onto a collision course with President Reagan, are recommending tax increases of about $12 billion, including a Medicare tax hike for some 8 million wage-earners.

The tax increases would underwrite about half of this year's deficit reduction required under the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law.

The Senate Finance Committee hoped to wrap up work today on its tax plan, the main feature of which is the Medicare tax increase aimed at upper-income taxpayers.

On a party-line vote, the House Ways and Means Committee gave final approval Thursday night to its own version, which includes limits on the mortgage-interest deduction for the well-to-do and a tough crackdown on corporate raiders.

But if Reagan sticks to his guns, the tax-writers' efforts will be for naught.

"Simple prudence — a simple sense of responsibility — would make it possible to meet the deficit-reduction targets with no new taxes," Reagan said in a White House statement. But, he added, "if reason should fail, if Congress should actually pass a tax hike, my answer will be simply this: veto."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of Ways and Means, called the president's statement "a sorry state of affairs" and reminded Reagan that some of his own proposals are in the bill.

Rep. John Duncan of Tennessee, senior Republican on the committee, accused Democrats of going on "a spending-and-tax spree."

Republicans boycotted the House tax-writing effort and when the bill was approved on a 23-13 vote, all Republicans voted no. The nine GOP members of the Finance Committee played hands-off as the 11 Democrats wrote their bill, but planned to be on hand for final consideration today.

Congress has required itself to cut $23 billion from the deficit in the budget year that began Oct. 1. Most Republicans want less reliance on taxes and more spending cuts, and there is no assurance that enough Democrats will go for the proposed tax increases. But unless Reagan and Congress can agree on a package, automatic across-the-board spending cuts will take effect Nov. 20.

The House tax bill cuts the deficit by about $12.3 billion, and the package includes about $2 billion in new tax breaks. The Senate version raises $11.5 billion in taxes and adds new tax cuts worth more than $1.5 billion.

Both bills contain dozens of provisions with little impact on most people or businesses. Both committees refused to raise excise taxes on alcohol and tobacco or to tamper with the income-tax rates enacted last year. Most of the burden of either bill falls on corporations and upper-income individuals.

Here are some major provisions:

- The Senate would require workers to pay Medicare taxes of 1.45 percent of all their wages. Present law taxes 1.45 percent of the first $43,800 each year for Medicare. The change would affect about 8 million people earning over $43,800 and over $45,000 in 1988. For example, a worker earning $100,000 next year would pay $797.50 instead of $652.50.

- The House would limit the deduction for home mortgages to the interest on up to $1 million of loans taken out to buy or improve one or two homes; that could include interest on home-equity loans of up to $100,000. Mobile homes and boats could not qualify as second homes for the interest deduction.

Pickens' Newmont takeover thwarted

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — A Delaware judge, noting that courts often reject companies' defensive moves against takeover bids, has upheld a controversial move by Newmont Mining Corp. to thwart a bid by Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens.

Vice Chancellor Jack Jacobs, in a 60-page ruling Thursday, denied a request by Pickens for a preliminary injunction and also vacated previous orders restraining Newmont's British ally, Consolidated Gold Fields PLC.

Pickens and an investor group he heads, Ivanhoe Partners, had claimed Newmont breached its fiduciary responsibility to its stockholders by allowing Consolidated to scoop up 15.8 million Newmont shares in a two-day "street sweep" last month.

"To require Consolidated Gold Fields to divest its 23 percent block of Newmont stock would not only undo an act that was legally proper, and that would have occurred irrespective of any standstill agreement, but it would also effectively grant plaintiffs all the relief they hope to gain after a final hearing," Jacobs said.

No street sweep had previously been challenged under Delaware corporate fiduciary principles, the judge noted in his opinion, adding that recent federal court challenges of the anti-takeover defense have met with little success.

"To enjoin Gold Fields' now completed stock purchases is unnecessary. The street sweep was a legally proper transaction that did not, by itself, involve actionable wrongdoing," the Chancery Court judge wrote.

The $1.5 billion in open-market purchases gave Consolidated a 49.7 percent stake in Newmont, a New York-based company incorporated in Delaware.

The purchase blocked Ivanhoe's bid to gain control of 51 percent of Newmont's outstanding shares.

Pickens' group currently owns a 9.9 percent stake in Newmont. The 6.6 million shares were purchased for about $64.25 a share, or $424 million.

Ivanhoe Partners said the agreement under which Newmont allowed Consolidated to buy up to 49.9 percent of its stock amounted to an illegal scheme that would hurt Newmont shareholders by preventing Ivanhoe's $72-a-share takeover offer from proceeding.

Jacobs ruled that except in one particular, the challenged transactions have not been shown to violate any Delaware law or fiduciary principle.

The judge said his sole caveat related to the ambiguity in the Newmont-Consolidated agreement as to whether Consolidated may designate up to 40 percent of the board prior to the time Newmont's certificate of incorporation is formally amended to authorize cumulative voting.

That concern can be satisfied, the judge said, if the parties are able to reach an agreement to preserve the status quo of the board composition pending litigation or are able to resolve the ambiguity on an interim basis.

"Unless and until the court is advised that the parties are unable to agree upon such interim arrangements, it would not be appropriate to impose preliminary injunctive restraints," Jacobs said.

Jolt ripples through L.A. area

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Residents in the same area hit by a devastating Oct. 1 earthquake were awakened early today by another tremor.

No damages or injuries were reported in the 1:11 a.m. aftershock, which was felt in Whittier, Montebello, Long Beach and downtown Los Angeles.

"We got about a dozen calls from area residents," said Whittier police dispatcher Scott Eldridge. "There was no damage that we are aware of. Tell the people to calm down and go back to bed."

The shaker measured 3.0 on the Richter scale and was centered in the area of the Oct. 1 quake, said Robert Finn of the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, where ground movement is measured.

It was the 29th aftershock registering 3.0 or above since the 6.1 magnitude Oct. 1 quake, centered in suburban Whittier, he said. The largest of the aftershocks, measuring 5.5, hit the area Oct. 4.

The Oct. 1 quake, which was centered in Whittier, and its aftershocks were blamed for seven deaths and $213.6 million in damages.

That quake, felt as far away as Las Vegas, Nev., 250 miles away, was called a dress rehearsal for a "Big One" expected yet to come, officials said then.

Today's tremor is considered a very minor quake in comparison with the 6.1 quake on Oct. 1.

Bankers keep eye on group of debtor nations

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Foreign bankers are keeping a watchful eye on a new group formed by Latin America's three biggest debtors to look for ways to ease the crushing financial burdens on their struggling economies.

In forming the Group of Three, the finance ministers of Mexico, Brazil and Argentina said their joint action wasn't intended as a club to bludgeon their creditors into better deals.

But some bankers and analysts said the group has the potential to become a formidable bargaining power to demand easier terms on their debts.

"It is not going to go anywhere now, but I think it's a start," said Rogelio Ramirez de la O, who has an economic forecasting firm in Mexico City.

"If some time the three countries are in the same bad situation, then it could move to a more active group," he said.

The three have combined foreign debts of about $270 billion and have been repeatedly plagued by money woes since the debt crisis began in 1982.

Brazil, the developing world's No. 1 debtor with loans of $113 billion, has indefinitely suspended interest payments on $68 billion in loans it owes private banks.

Argentina, which has a foreign debt of about $53 billion, recently worked out a new financial deal with its creditors. But the government is finding itself under fresh pressures from a worsening economy and political setbacks.

Some foreign bankers in Brazil expressed concern that other countries might adopt the Brazilian tactics on the debt.

"One of our main concerns with this Group of Three is that Brazil's example of recalcitrance may serve as an example to Mexico and Argentina," said an American banker, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

"The idea of a debtors' cartel never really bothered us very much in the past," he said.

But now, he said, the debtors are more specific in calling for lower interest rates on the debt and reduced bank earnings on the loans.

"If these ideas are adopted by the three countries, then we may have some serious problems on our hands," he said.

A British banker, who also demanded anonymity, said, "There may be some concern that Brazil's example may rub off on Mexico and Argentina, but overall I cannot say we are overly worried about the Group of Three."

"Past attempts at forming debtor groups have always ended up with each member going its own way to seek a solution with the foreign financial community," he added.

Yet, Ramirez de la O said, "It's enough, if they ... adopt a consistent front. Even if they don't stop payments, that consistent front in itself is strong enough."

In announcing their decision last month in New York, the finance ministers said they will meet twice a year "to examine their economic relations and questions of mutual interest, particularly concerning trade and the foreign debt."

Among other things, they said in a statement, they agreed domestic austerity measures "are not sufficient to resolve the problem of the debt ... (It) requires the exercise of co-responsibility of debtors and creditors."

Mexican Treasury Secretary Gustavo Petricoli later said, "I do not believe that it is useful — because it would be false — to dramatize to excess this G-3."

The group, he said, was formed to make formal the consultations finance officials have had since the start of the debt crisis in 1982.

"Now it is simply institutionalized," he said.

Geraldo Moura, spokesman for the Brazilian Finance Ministry, said, "The Brazilian government (feels) that there are common interests among the three and that the group should have formed sooner."

"I think it's just to enhance communications, which is in the debtors' interest," said Christine Bindert, senior vice president at the financial firm of Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York. "I don't see it as something the bankers should worry too much about," she said.

In the international financial world, finance officials have formed a host of groups for periodic consultations with their counterparts.

The most influential is the Group of Seven, made up of the finance ministers of seven key industrialized nations, including the United States.

"No one sees it (the Group of Seven) as a sinister group," said a Mexican financial official in defending the forming of the Group of Three.

But this official and a foreign banker in Mexico said increased pressure — from rising interest rates to domestic demands for better living standards — could spark the debtor countries to action. Both demanded anonymity.

"There may well come a time when they say enough is enough," said the banker.

"Then," he said, "there may be trouble."

Ramirez de la O speculated the three felt compelled to form the group because, after five years of living with the debt problem, the outlook remains uncertain.

"They are coming closer and closer on a sort of consensus that good debtor behavior is not enough, and that the debtors have to take care of themselves," he said.

Of the three, Mexico — the developing world's No. 2 debtor at $105 billion — is in the best shape.

It recently won a $14.4 billion aid package from the international financial community, and the government's economic program has produced some striking results.

International reserves have reached a record of about $15 billion, export sales have soared, and the economy has begun growing again.

Storm blocks power in London; 4 die

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — At least four people were killed when a pre-dawn storm with heavy rains and high winds knocked down trees, buildings and power lines, blacking out most of southern England and London, officials said.

The London Weather Center said winds in London gusted to 94 mph, the strongest ever recorded in the capital.

"The best part of London is down (without electricity) but there are some areas in the north (of London) round the Wembley area which have still got some power," said a spokesman for the London Fire Brigade spokesman.

"We are inundated with calls because of trees being blown down," the spokesman added. "We are stretched to the full. We have got no spare resources and we are just doing the best we can," the spokesman said.

Street lights and lights in offices kept on overnight in central London suddenly went out at about 4:20 a.m. today (10:20 p.m. CDT Thursday).

Power was restored in parts of London about three hours later. Mike Bream, a spokesman for the state-run Central Electricity Generating Board, said that restoring power in other areas was "going to be a very big uphill battle."

Bream said most of London and most of the southern counties of Kent, Sussex and Surrey had been hit by the power blackout.

Scotland Yard press officer Maggie Adams said she did not know the specific cause of the power failure but said: "Obviously it's the weather."

Police in the county of Sussex, south of London, said in a statement that the Castle Hotel at Hastings on the south English coast was blown down "like a deck of cards" and that some guests were unaccounted for.

Emergency services rescued people trapped in rubble when an apartment block was blown down at Brighton, another south coast resort, police said.

A falling tree killed two firemen at Highcliffe, in southwest England. About 90 elderly people in an old-age home in the same town were rehoused when the roof was blown off the building, authorities said.

A woman died at Windsor, west of London, when she was hit by a falling chimney, and a man was killed when wind caused his car to collide with a truck, officials said.

The Sealink U.K. Ltd. ferry company said its 5,590-ton English Channel ferry Hengist was driven aground near the southeast port of Folkestone.

State-run British Rail said all its southern and eastern region commuter services had been cancelled.

President Sankara killed

OUAGADOUGOU, Burkina Faso (AP) — Ousted President Thomas Sankara was shot and killed after his government was overthrown in a coup led by his second-in-command, a well-informed official source said today.

The Burkina Faso source said Sankara and about a dozen other people were killed during the coup.

He said they were buried in a cemetery outside this West African capital.

Clements dedicates plaque to Texas legation in Paris

PARIS (AP) — A French military band played the Texas state song as Gov. Bill Clements dedicated a plaque marking the home of the independent Texas Republic's former legation on the fashionable Place Vendome.

During the ceremony in a light rainfall Thursday, Clements said the marker is a sign of a relationship dating back to 17th century French colonists.

"We in Texas have had a 300-year relationship with the French," Clements said.

"We have commercial enterprises, we have academic exchanges, we have joined together for freedom in Europe and France helped us in our battle for independence," he added.

France signed a treaty with Texas on Sept. 25, 1839, becoming the first country to recognize the new republic after its fight to break away from Mexico.

"Vive le Texas!" exclaimed Jean Tiberi, who represented Mayor Jacques Chirac at the brief ceremony.

When Frenchmen think of Texas, they remember the Alamo, the NASA space center and Texan help in World War I and World War II. "for the ideals of human rights and liberty we have fought for together," Tiberi said.

Clements, a Republican, arrived Thursday in Paris to begin a five-day visit focusing on trade and investment. He will also visit the cities of Lyon and Dijon in eastern France.

"Part of my mission here is to strengthen and establish commercial ties," he told a few dozen people huddled under umbrellas in front of No. 1 Place Vendome, now a hotel offering rooms for 480 to 600 francs (80 to 100 dollars), or 790 francs (130 dollars) with bath.

The four-story building also houses the Morabito leather goods store and an IBM computer showroom.

Jean Mazel, a French historian who researched the Paris archives to find records of where the legation was housed, said there were three different locations between 1840 and 1845, when Texas was annexed by the United States.

"The first was a very humble place on rue de Richelieu," Mazel said.

Texas Charge d'Affaires Ashbel Smith — who had studied medicine in Paris in the early 1830s — moved the legation in 1842 to the Place Vendome, an elegant square dominated by a 132-foot column supporting a statue of the Emperor Napoleon.

The following year, the legation moved a few blocks away to 20 rue de Castiglione, its last home.

Tiberi said the Place Vendome building was chosen for the plaque because it is the most prestigious of the three locations.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

a little BIG NOW

We all get a thrill out of seeing our children put on our hats or shoes. Obviously they don't fit now, but some day he, or she will grow to fit them. At the same time imagine that they are trying on our lives. Would they fit? ... or do you live the type of life that you would want them to grow to. Live a life of worship of the Lord.

"Thou wilt show me the path of life; in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Lord, you have assigned me my portion and my cup; you have made my lot secure. The boundary lines have fallen for me in pleasant places; surely I have a delightful inheritance. (Psalm 16:5-6 NIV)

My husband and I and our two small daughters (the third daughter wasn't even a twinkle in my eye) moved to Pampa to escape the misery of my husband's traveling job.

We hoped to get to stay five years — that was 18 years ago. By some mysterious form of permeation, Pampa has become our hometown.

We have watched as our town progressively grew until it erupted into a full-blown boomtown. Building and realty businesses flourished and mobile home parks couldn't be established quickly enough for the expanding population.

But now Pampa has fallen on bad times; many lawns have sprouted "For Sale" signs; once-busy businesses have been locked down and deserted; employers are sweating blood over declining revenues; employees are sweating blood over eroding job security; tempers flare easily and scapegoats are being sought.

Although not oblivious to the pains and problems of Pampa, I pay tribute to the gentle town that stands firmly imbedded in this harsh, wind-blistered prairie country.

Like many parents, I tend to judge a town's heart by its interaction with my children. Pampa is incredibly devoted to its children and young people.

My girls have benefited from the instruction and encouragement of many dedicated teachers who nurtured high moral and scholastic standards. The girls enjoyed school/town/church supported programs of music, sports and fellowship. They were helped on their way to innumerable gymnastics and band trips by the generous folks of Pampa who responded to the never-ending fund raisers.

Although space does not allow a complete listing of supportive graciousness, I acknowledge, with deepest gratitude, Pampa has literally helped us raise our children.

Of no small importance to my family is the ease with which we worship in Pampa. Though we often encounter people who differ with us on spiritual matters, we face few obstacles or prejudices regarding our freedom to worship.

This absence of spiritual hindrance is a condition we take for granted until we visit with others who lived in areas where Christians are in drastic minority.

Far from least, the vast majority of townspeople who have influenced greatly the lives and happiness of my family have been loving, decent people. Because our relatives live distantly from us, we have come to depend heavily on our town and church family. Through good and bad times, they have never failed us.

As I write this, I'm sitting on my patio. I can hear the music of the high school marching band as it practices; the drums beat cadence on the September morning. The air is clear, clean and light. The trees and plants are enjoying the gradual easing of the scorching heat of summer. A neighbor's cat just wandered into my backyard to say good morning.

My mood is one of tranquil mellowness. I am home.

My boundary lines have fallen in pleasant places; surely I have a delightful inheritance.

Thank you, Lord. Thank you, Pampa.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The archbishop of Canterbury, Robert A.K. Runcie, says the Church of England eventually may ordain women as priests, but doing so now would be divisive and endanger ecumenical relationships.

TOKYO (AP) — Leaders of many branches of Christianity joined in the dedication Sept. 15 of the first common Roman Catholic-Protestant translation of the Bible into Japanese.

The translation is the result of 18 years work by 44 Protestant and Roman Catholic scholars following principles laid down jointly by the United Bible Societies and Vatican officials.

Pampans aid gospel effort for Mexico

The Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ has been a participant in efforts to bring the gospel to Mexico.

For the last 10 years, Texas congregations have been financially involved in preaching the gospel in Mexico. This program is under the oversight of the Highland elders in Abilene.

More than 50 radio stations, 10 television stations and extensive Bible correspondence courses are used to teach in Mexico. Local campaigns with Christians from the United States are conducted each summer.

From Pampa, Keith and Joyce Feerer, Darryl Hughes and Gene Glaeser were in Guadalajara, Mexico this week to survey this work.

In other activities, the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ is actively involved in World Bible School and has been for a number of years. Presently Lois Eller and her helpers are working with about 650 students over the world.

In another area of service, Lonnie Shaw and Kenny Eppison preached recently in McLean, with Scott Webb leading the singing. Afterwards, the congregation had sandwiches and desserts, followed by singing by the Pampa church's gospel a cappella quartet, the Harvesters 4. Brandon Strawn and Rick Sewell led the teens in a devotional.

Methodist women attend conference

PLAINVIEW - The 14th Annual Meeting of the Northwest Texas Conference of United Methodist Women was held recently in the First United Methodist Church at Plainview.

The theme was "United Methodist Women: A Creative, Supportive Community."

There were 288 registered from the seven districts of the conference, with 31 attending from the Pampa District.

Attending from Pampa Rev. Albert F. Lindley, district superintendent, and Reta Richards.

Others from nearby towns at the meeting were Juanita Vincent, Lefors; Ruth Magee, Bonnie Fabian and Mary Dwyer, McLean; Mae Nash and Vida Brown, Wheeler; Hallie Burrell and Ethel Schaffner, Shamrock; and Pauline Masten, Florence DeArmond and Mary Ruth Jones, Wellington.

Also coming from the Pampa District were Bernice Beck, Darrouzett; Jeanne Gramstorff, Farnsworth; Doris Akers and Mary Ann Shearer, Follett; and Emma Lou Cox, Zelda Edmondson, Betty Ruth McLain, Lois Johnson, Kitty Harrington, Margaret Campbell, Linda Rogers, Betty Rankin, Eddie Poole, Betty Nile, Mildred Hickox, Florence Blair, Frances Jones and Dormilee Crockett, all from Borger.

Evangelicals praise Pope

WHEATON, Ill. (AP) — Evangelicals, generally aloof from ecumenical associations with Roman Catholicism, have praised Pope John Paul II for his opposition to abortion, euthanasia and homosexuality.

The National Association of Evangelicals, in an unusual statement, also applauded his efforts to promote political and religious freedom, and commended "the new spirit of freedom in the Roman Catholic Church."

But the organization, including 71 mostly smaller, conservative denominations, said the pope, "like his predecessors, stands for all the teachings that have historically divided a biblically rooted evangelical Christianity from Roman Catholicism."

Among differences cited were the 16th-century Protestant Reformation mottoes, "Scripture alone, faith alone, grace alone."

Nevertheless, the NAE said it shared a "common Judeo-Christian value system" with Roman Catholicism and called for "continued cooperation in forging a moral leadership that will advance the cause of righteousness in our nation and around the world."

Miami minister nominated as rural minister of year

MIAMI - Kevin Hollowell, minister of First Christian Church in Miami, was recognized recently with a certificate from Texas A&M University in recognition for his being nominated for "Texas Rural Minister of the Year."

Hollowell received his certificate while attending the 42nd Annual Town and Country Church Conference Oct. 5-6 at Texas A&M in College Station.

Each year the Town and Country Church Conference attempts to provide information about how clergy and lay leaders might be most effective when dealing with current community concerns.

This year the emphasis was on how to help communities that have been experiencing recent economic difficulty. The conference is designed to help build skills for clergy and church leaders desiring to assist rural areas in their efforts toward revitalization.

Hollowell was one of 36 ministers from all over Texas representing a variety of denominations: United Methodist, Baptist, Southern Baptist, Lutheran, Presbyterian, Catholic and Disciples of Christ.

All of these ministers were from towns of less than 10,000 people and were nominated by persons from their own church or the county extension agent. Cecil Gill initiated Hollowell's nomination.

Unwed births stump churches

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A vast increase in out-of-wedlock births in the United States over the past 25 years has led society to not only find ways to help the offspring and mothers but to refer to them, as well.

Terms like "bastard," common in earlier literature, have become virtual anachronisms to refer to out-of-wedlock births. Even the word "illegitimate" has fallen into disuse in both government and many church settings.

"A lot of the reason" is to avoid stigmatizing mother or child, says the Rev. Arthur Van Eck, a specialist on family concerns of the National Council of Churches and new head of its division of education and ministry.

"It's also because there are now so many such children," he adds.

There is "abounding concern about teen-age pregnancy" among both black and white church leaders, Van Eck said, with programs and agencies working to stem the increase which is "greater among whites than blacks."

"It puts churches in a bind," he said. "On the one hand, they don't approve of what's going on, of that kind of behavior," yet most major churches also are keenly concerned "for the young women and their children, that they get a fair shake in life with as little stigma as possible."

Such offspring now are generally referred to in church communities simply as "child of a single parent or single-parent family," he said. "Those kinds are increasing very rapidly."

The modified terminology has come in a time when births to unmarried women have soared, increasing 400 percent in the last 25 years to 828,175 in 1985, the latest count — 22 percent of the total 3,760,561 U.S. births.

Stephane Ventura, a statistician with the National Center of Health Statistics, says the proportion of unwed births keeps rising annually. "The increase hasn't ever stopped, slowed or reversed," she says.

The figures depict an immense shift in America's social landscape. In 1940, 3.5 percent of births were to unwed women, and even in 1960, the proportion of such births was only 5.3 percent.

But afterward, in the '60s decade of the "sexual revolution" and spreading casual intercourse, the unmarried births by 1970 had doubled to 10.7 percent — 398,700 of them out of the 3,731,386 total.

By 1980, unwed births had climbed to 18.4 percent, 665,747 out of the 3,612,258 total, and the proportion of them now was up to nearly a fourth — one of every four babies born in America.

The unwed births, coupled with the current 1.5 million abortions annually, mostly for the unmarried, raises the proportion of unwed pregnancies to about half the total — more than 14 times the fraction before World War II.

Barrett Baptist plans New Life series

Sunday morning Barrett Baptist Church, 903 E. Beryl, located three blocks east of the Optimist baseball fields, will begin a series of meetings focusing upon the New Life offered through Jesus Christ.

Brother Steven Smith, pastor, said these "Days of Newness" will emphasize renewal for those who already know Christ and newness of life for those who do not.

Leading the special series are Bro. Wayne Swopes of Petersburg and Gary Covin of Pampa. Swopes is the pastor of the First Baptist Church at Petersburg. He will share the truths of God's Word through preaching.

An insurance agent in Pampa and a member of First Baptist Church here, Covin will lead the worship of the Lord through song. His wife Theresa will provide the piano accompaniment for the services.

Sunday services will be held at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Noonday services will be held Monday through Friday with a potluck dinner to be served beginning daily at 11:45 a.m. Pastor Smith said everyone is invited to attend this lunch Bible study time.

Swopes

Covin

Monday through Friday evenings the services will begin at 7:30 p.m. Two special nights of fellowship are scheduled. Tuesday evening youth in grades 6-12 will enjoy pizza at 6:30 p.m., with a fellowship following the service. Thursday evening, children will be treated to hot dogs and games at 6 p.m.

Smith said the members of Barrett Baptist Church would like to extend "a warm welcome and invitation to all."

"Come and celebrate the new life Christ Jesus gives!" Smith said.

Emphasizing the theme, Smith quoted, "Behold, I will do a new thing, now it shall spring forth; shall you not know it? I will even make a road in the wilderness and rivers in the desert" (Isaiah 43:19).

'Spiritual Renewal' week set

"Spiritual Renewal" is the theme for Revival Week, scheduled Sunday through Friday at Calvary Baptist Church, 900 E. 23rd Ave.

The revival will be led by Brother Dave Adkins of First Baptist Church at Missouri City, Texas. The music will be directed by music evangelists James and Connie Walker of Gruver.

The revival will begin early with a breakfast and 24-hour prayer vigil on Saturday.

Sunday services will be at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., with services Monday through Friday at 12 noon and 7 p.m.

Adkins is a former pastor of Calvary Baptist. He was saved and baptized at the age of 6, with a call to preaching coming at age 16. He later married his high school sweetheart and moved to Brownwood to attend Howard Payne University in preparation for the ministry. Three of their children were born during the years in college.

During years set aside for seminary work, his wife passed away of cancer during his first two years at Second Baptist Church. He later remarried; his wife Gail is a pastor's daughter.

Adkins call is as pastor-teacher. His spiritual gift is exhortation; his ministry focus is prayer (private and corporate), missions and outreach, evangelism and fellowship.

James Walker is a 1977 graduate of Sunray High School and is currently involved in ranching. His wife Connie is a 1979 graduate of Gruver High School and is employed as a cosmetologist in Gruver.

They surrendered to music evangelism in December 1986. They are members of the First Baptist Church at Gruver, representing their church in ministry.

The public is invited to attend the special revival services. A nursery will be provided for all services.

Religion Roundup

ATLANTA (AP) — Marj Carpenter, for 28 years a reporter on Texas newspapers before going to work in news departments of the Presbyterian Church (USA), has been named manager of its news services.

The 3.1 million-member denomination is a merger of long-separated Southern and Northern branches. She pledged coverage of its affairs in "factual, timely, accurate manner, exercising freedom with integrity and trust."

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Jewish Congress has cautioned against the presumption that U.S. Jews are a "single-issue" community whose only concern is the survival and security of Israel.

Saying this notion must be "counteracted and dispelled," the Congress said such a limited view of Jewish concerns "is a misperception shared even by some good friends of Israel and the Jewish people."

First Assembly enlarging its Ministry Center outreach

Members of First Assembly of God, 500 S. Cuyler, are excited by the activities of its staff and congregation in efforts to enlarge their service as a Ministry Center.

"God is moving in Pampa," claims Rev. Herb Peak, senior pastor of the church. "That is exciting news. He is building His kingdom, restoring relationships and changing lives. He is reaching out through many committed men and women who combine their love for God with compassion for those in need and lost."

Leading the ministry team at First Assembly, Rev. Peak says his church staff is working hard as a team to extend the reach of the Ministry Center.

Peak, who has been in Pampa since December 1986, says he believes "it is important to touch the lives of those around us and to share the truth of the living God who transforms lives."

Joining him as a family committed to God are his wife Evelyn and three sons. Mrs. Peak is also a licensed minister, and she and Pastor Peak are both gifted in music ministry.

Peak says visitors are welcome to stop by at any time and say hello.

Another member of the team is Rev. Terry Fred, minister of youth. He and his wife Rita and their three children have been in Pampa for two months, moving here from Denver City, Texas.

While in Denver City, the couple ministered through the Youth Alive program, seeing the youth group grow and many lives of young people being changed. They now wish to reach out to the youth of Pampa, with Mrs. Fred soon to be licensed as a minister, offering strong support to her husband.

Rev. Fred says their desire is "not only to reach out, but to meet young people where they live as they deal with growing up." He adds that they want to bring every young person into a loving, personal relationship with Jesus Christ.

The next member of the Ministry Center team is Pastor David Tidenberg, who joined the First Assembly staff after spending 8½ years living and working in Pampa.

In September 1986, Tidenberg

and his wife Maria went to attend a 6-month school with Youth With a Mission, based in Honolulu, Hawaii. During the school, they traveled into Singapore and Malaysia, working in missions.

Back in Pampa, Tidenberg was added to the staff in June as pastor of evangelism and outreach. "Such a position springs from a burning passion for God that the entire staff shares to see Pampa come to know the love of God," Rev. Peak said.

"Pastor Tidenberg, as well as the others, believes that God has brought this group together for the vision that he has birthed within them. His desire is to reach out to you because you matter," Peak added.

Rev. Delbert Priest adds to the ministry team "years of committed service and wisdom from many years of walking with the Lord," Peak said.

Rev. Priest is the minister of visitation and serves the body through visiting the hospital, rest homes and private homes of all those in need.

"He has a heart for people, and just one visit from this man and you have been blessed," Peak said. "He always brings with him a smile for the day, a word from the Lord and a prayer for your needs. He is a true man of God."

Another team member is Rev. Willis Dewey, who also brings years of service and wisdom, Peak said.

"But along with it, he brings a commitment to be an intercessor," Peak said. "He is a man of prayer. To spend time with Brother Dewey is a privilege and a blessing. He is a man of his word, a man who loves people and teaches others how to live like Jesus by his example. He is also quite a good story teller."

Although Dewey is not a full-time staff member, First Assembly is blessed by his service and willing heart, Peak added.

Completing the ministry team are June Robbins and Mary Dewey, who share in the work of the office staff and see to it that the church business functions properly.

"Both women are sensitive to the Lord and long to see God's kingdom established in the hearts of Pampa," Peak said. "They are women of faith and commitment. They are important to the ongoing ministries of the church."

Rounding out First Assembly's ministry team is, of course, the people, Peak noted. "You will find people who desire to know God and who extend his love to all," he said. "They are people who care."

The congregation has monthly "CARE" groups sharing in a time of learning and caring for one another's needs. Peak adds that the church is a Bible-believing church, committed to Christian education.

Peak says the church wants to be a Ministry Center for young and old, those in need and all who are searching for truth. "A Ministry Center is a place for all to come to Jesus," he says, inviting Pampa residents to visit the church and meet these fine people.

Sunday School begins at 9:30 a.m. Sundays, followed by morning worship at 10:30 a.m. and Evening Inspiration services at 6:30 p.m.

Hopper

'Happy' Hopper to perform songs at New Life Center

R.C. "Happy" Hopper of Happy Psalmist Ministries at Liberal, Kan., will be appearing with his guitar and songs at 6 p.m. Sunday at New Life Worship Center, 318 N. Cuyler.

Hopper, born near Reeds Spring, Mo., is the only son of C.V. Hopper of Reeds Spring. He has a sister, Mrs. Eldon (Judy) Reed, who lives in Pampa.

But Hopper is no newcomer to the area. His family moved to Berger in 1947 and later to Stinnett, where he was a 1963 graduate of Stinnett High School.

He married his high school sweetheart, Cecilia Dell Shipley, who was born in Pampa and raised in Skellytown. Since their marriage in June 1965, they have lived in Oklahoma City, the Texas Panhandle and Liberal.

Hopper has been a musician since preschool days, when he played stringed instruments in the Berger Pentecostal Holiness Church. He preached his first sermon at age 13. In 1966, he was ordained and pastored the Stinnett Pentecostal Holiness Church during 1967. In 1968, he became an Assemblies of God minister, pastoring churches in White Deer and Panhandle. While at Panhandle, he was the high school social studies teacher as secondary employment.

In 1971 he moved to Liberal to pastor the First Assembly of God there. In November 1973, he became the founding pastor of an interdenominational, independent, charismatic church, Faith Tabernacle, in Liberal. Beginning with less than 100 people, he saw the church grow to more than 300 in the congregation.

After pastoring Faith Tabernacle for almost 12 years, Hopper preached his farewell sermon on Oct. 27, 1985, and began a full-time evangelistic effort known as the Happy Psalmist Ministries.

He received the nickname "Happy" as host of a local cable television talk show in Liberal. On the Christian show, he would interview guests who would share their testimonies and in some cases present special music. Hopper would always appear with his 12-string guitar and sing a number of songs on the show.

From 1962 to 1984, Hopper had written some 42 songs. Since then, the total has grown to more than 275 songs. He has recorded albums featuring original songs, most taken directly from the New International Version of the Bible.

In his ministry, he travels to churches, schools, prisons, civic organizations, state institutions and other places to share his music and gifts from God. He has been in demand at Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowships throughout the Southwest.

The Hoppers have two daughters and three sons.

Organize with memo board

By BETH COTTEN

A power outage made my husband's home computer lose its mind. For two weeks the family listened to anguished rantings as Dad discovered missed appointments, birthdays and meetings.

Call me old-fashioned, but I keep important items and memos at hand, impervious to glitches in the ozone, on my kitchen memo board. When I need my keys or grocery coupons, I know where to look.

And when it's someone's birthday or I have an appointment, my memo board lets me know. I even made a second one for my office.

This is an extremely easy project to make at home. It's about 2 feet square and requires very little in the way of materials.

It can be made from canvas or any fairly heavy fabric. Designs are drawn with a permanent laundry marker.

It can include whatever you like — mine has key holders, an area for messages, a note pad, a pen, pockets for coupons and miscellaneous items, a calendar and a decorative border.

If you would like more details than provided below, order our detailed plans. They include a complete materials list; full-size patterns for all parts, motifs and lettering; and illustrated step-by-step instructions.

Forty other inexpensive projects are contained in our colorful book, "Scrap Fabric Crafts." It's full of useful, decorative projects for every age and every occasion.

To order plans for the memo board, specify Project No. 1220 and send $4.95; for the "Scrap Fabric Crafts" book, specify No. 3012, $9.95. Save a dollar by ordering both items for only $13.90.

Mail to: Makin' Things, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla.

Kitchen memo board keeps track of important items and is easy to make.

74008-1000. For a catalog with discount coupons, include $2.95.

To make the memo board, you'll need a yard of canvas or other heavyweight fabric and a 24 x 25-inch piece of thin plywood. A frame is optional.

Wash, dry and iron the fabric, taking care not to stretch it out of shape. Cut a 28 x 29-inch piece for the backing.

Attach this piece to the plywood with thumbtacks, stretching it tight. The grain of the fabric should run straight along the edges of the plywood.

Pencil in placement lines, indicating where the various pockets and other areas will go. I left a 4½-inch open border all the way around, to accommodate the design motifs.

Draw a 3½ x 5-inch rectangle for the key hooks, and pencil in the words "Keys." Draw a 5 x 7-inch rectangle for the calendar pocket, a 3½ x 7½-inch area for the coupons pocket, and a 4 x 6-inch area for the miscellaneous pocket.

Outline an area and pencil in the word "Messages." Leave an area open for a note pad, and leave space somewhere near the note pad for a pen.

Draw or transfer the design motifs around the border, leaving an inch or more along all edges so that you can er wrap the fabric to the back of the plywood.

Use a permanent laundry marker (or fabric paints) to go over the designs and add details. In addition, draw a thick border around the messages and keys areas, and go over the titles.

To make a pocket for coupons, cut a 4 x 8½-inch piece from the leftover fabric. Clip the corners and press a ½-inch hem to the wrong side along each edge. Topstitch across one long edge.

Draw the word "Coupons" in the center of the pocket, and pin the pockets to the backing fabric within the placement lines. Follow the same procedures to make a pocket for miscellaneous items, starting with a 4½ x 6½-inch piece of fabric.

The calendar I used is a 12-month version on a single cardboard sheet. You'll need to vary the dimensions to fit the one you are using. I made a fabric frame and pinned it in place, behind which the calendar slides.

For the note pad, I cut a slit in the backing fabric and reinforced it with topstitching, so I could just slip the cardboard at the back of the note pad down into the slit.

For the pen holder, cut a 2½ x 4-inch piece of fabric. Hem the ends. Wrap the fabric around the pen or pencil and pin together to fit. Stitch, and then pin the tube to the backing fabric.

Remove the backing fabric from the plywood and topstitch the pockets, etc. in place. Replace it on the plywood, securing the edges on the back with staples or tacks. Insert cup hooks to hold the key rings.

Wilson to sing in voice recital

Local vocalist Susie Wilson will be presented in a Pampa Fine Arts Association-sponsored voice recital at 3 p.m. Sunday at First Presbyterian Church.

Currently completing work toward a master of music degree at Texas Tech University at Lubbock, Wilson will be performing the same program of selections that she will later present in a recital at Tech in the near future.

The public is invited to attend the recital. There is no charge. Presently a student of Sue Arnold, Wilson received her bachelor of music education from Texas Tech in 1966, with an emphasis in voice, as a student of Gene Kenney.

As an undergraduate, she performed as a soloist with the Tech Choir, Tech Symphony Orchestra, the Lubbock Messiah production and Amahl and the Night Visitors at the First Christian Church. She also has sung leading roles in several operatic productions and has soloed in the Perryton and Pampa Messiah productions.

Wilson taught in public school before opening a voice studio in Pampa in 1973. Many of her students have gained membership in the prestigious Texas All-State Choir. In the ensuing years, she has served as an area soloist, pianist and assistant organist at First Baptist Church.

Accompanying Wilson on the piano this Sunday will be Jennifer Garrett, staff accompanist at Tech. Violinist Sheri Scales, assistant concertmaster of the Amarillo Symphony and principal violinist with the West Texas State University Orchestra, will join Wilson on one number.

Ignorance fuels AIDS misinformation

DEAR ABBY: I am a bisexual male, 38, divorced with two children, of whom I have partial custody. My sister and her family used to invite us to swim in their pool, but no more. Why? They're afraid I might contaminate their pool with the AIDS virus!

Of course, this is ridiculous, but what is more ridiculous is the fact that many people, despite all the available information, still think that ALL gays and bisexuals are "automatically" infected with AIDS. (Abby, I have been tested for AIDS every six months and have always tested negative.)

My niece won't even let me hold — let alone kiss — her 3-year-old daughter. My children, who are 7 and 9 years old, want to know why these relatives didn't come to their birthday parties at my home. (They fear that the food and utensils may have been contaminated, no doubt!) I am heartsick over all of this, and I know I'm not alone. Abby, please keep giving your readers the right information about AIDS.

Thank you very much, and God bless you.

A PITTSBURGH READER

DEAR READER: According to Dr. Mervyn Silverman, president of the American Foundation for AIDS Research: "Even if you were antibody-positive, your sister's behavior is not only inappropriate but insensitive and unnecessary. AIDS cannot be transmitted by sharing eating utensils, hugging, holding, swimming or any other form of casual contact. Study after study has repeatedly demonstrated this fact. This has been confirmed by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta."

DEAR ABBY: We've been married for three months. Among our wedding gifts was a silver pitcher. On the card was this poem:

"Wedding gifts usually go to the bride
"And you expect them to walk side by side,
"But if you split, and she throws you the broom,
"Then the pitcher automatically goes to the groom."

(There's a hand-drawn picture of a groom throwing a horseshoe at his bride. It's signed: "Good luck, chum!")

My husband put the pitcher and the card on the shelf in the kitchen. I turn the card to the wall when I cook. But he turns it back when he comes in from the barn at noon, then he sits there grinning like a Cheshire cat.

Shall I open the window and let a stiff breeze blow the card and pitcher into the stubble field? I like the pitcher, but not the card.

DEAR ABBY: You would be doing us cancer sufferers a great service if you would ask the media to eliminate the cause of death in their obituaries. I don't think it is really necessary to mention what a person died from. We who are afflicted with a death-threatening disease would be helped if we didn't read that "so-and-so" died after a long battle with cancer or heart failure. We are having a difficult enough time coping with the disease without hearing of people dying from it.

We are quite aware that thousands of people die of cancer every year. We also know that thousands of people have survived after a hard battle with cancer — which is what we cancer patients need to hear. We need to hear that there is hope, and eliminating the cause of death from obituaries and other news items would be a big help.

NFL strike ends; union files antitrust suit

Strike contests still scheduled for this Sunday

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL players couldn't win when they walked out and they couldn't win when they walked in. They ended their strike but not this weekend's NFL strike games.

The union couldn't even end the strike the right way, sending the players in on the assumption they could suit up Sunday, then standing helplessly by when the owners told them they'd reported too late and would have to wait another week to play.

"It was like being in a war and losing your bullets," said Rickey Hunley, player rep of the Denver Broncos. "There was nothing left to fight with. The bottom was falling out of the situation."

"It's the end of the Civil War and they're taking Atlanta," said wide receiver Cris Collinsworth of the Cincinnati Bengals. "Let's get the furniture before it burns, too."

In fact, Gene Upshaw, the union's executive director, sounded like a man putting his members out of their misery in announcing the official end of the 24-day walkout on Thursday.

Dallas Cowboy pickets ponder next move after strike ends.

"It was unfair to the players to continue to sacrifice any more," Upshaw said, sending the more than 1,300 players still on strike back to work, and announcing that the union had decided to pursue its aims in an antitrust suit filed in federal court in Minneapolis.

The return left the union with nothing to show for the walkout except losses — close to $100 million in salaries and a season whose results will be skewed by replacement games. Not one of its aims — free agency, pension and severance improvements, guaranteed contracts and on down — was agreed upon.

As one league official put it: "If they wanted to go to court, they could have done it Sept. 1 and saved all this trouble."

Moreover, most of the players ended the strike where they began it — on the street after the union miscalculated and ordered them in a day after the weekly deadline for reporting on the assumption it would be waived.

For a while, there was mass confusion as teams reported en masse only to be told by coaches and team officials that they couldn't play this Sunday and would be paid at the per diem rate of only $750 a week for veterans and $500 for rookies if they decided to stick around and practice.

The owners insisted that veterans reporting Thursday, after more than three weeks off, would be running too great a risk of injury if they played Sunday.

"I think having them here by 1 p.m. Wednesday is a sensible time for the coach to organize and get the players in shape," said general manager George Young of the New York Giants. "Thursday is not a good day, especially late in the afternoon. They can't walk in off the street and expect to play. Of course if they got hurt, they would say it's your fault."

General Manager Jim Finks of the New Orleans Saints said the owners also were wary that without a formal agreement, regulars would go on strike again as soon as replacement players were let go.

Two teams — the Bears and Raiders — agreed to return and practice, and a few scattered players from other teams also took physicals, reclaimed their equipment and worked out.

But all of those who struck for the duration will be forced to watch their replacements play again Sunday, returning on Monday or Tuesday to resume their shattered season.

"It may be the end of anyone in this country influencing the NFL again," Collinsworth said. "We're going to be left to the mercy and the good graces of the owners of the NFL and we'll see how we'll be treated by them."

"The management played hardball and accomplished what they wanted to do. They busted us up," said linebacker Jeff Rohrer of the Dallas Cowboys, one of many players who seemed to come out of the strike with deep resentments toward the owners.

"Some people are very, very bitter, not just here, but across the country," said Harry Carson, captain of the Super Bowl champion Giants. "It's everyone's opinion that they were out all along to bust the union, humble the players somewhat. It's a little like when you have a person down, you grind on them. I think that's what they are trying to do."

Harvesters must stop Dunbar's swift backs to end streak

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Although Lubbock Dunbar has only one win this season, its lightning-quick backfield has the ability to score touchdowns at a rapid rate. Dunbar's offensive line, however, just hasn't been able to spring the Panther backs loose.

Pampa High head coach Dennis Cavalier is hoping the Panthers continue spinning their wheels at least one more game when the two teams meet tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Harvester Stadium.

"Dunbar is loaded with athletes who can run fast and that's going to present some problems for us," said Cavalier. "They have the capability of scoring points a lot faster than Frenship, even though Frenship has a better team."

Frenship topped the Harvesters 43-9 last week.

"Our defense was aggressive against Frenship and we hit them hard, but we made the technical kind of mistakes that cost us points," Cavalier said. Part of the Panthers' problems this season has been sidelining injuries, especially when meeting district powers Canyon and Lubbock Estacado.

Dunbar lost 220-pound two-way tackle Johnny Campbell for the season in the 35-14 loss to Canyon and met Estacado the following week without the services of center Eric Gomez and defensive end Frank Castenada.

Starting middle linebacker James Palmer is also injured and won't play tonight.

"We're pretty banged up right now," said Dunbar Coach Jerry Lee. "We started the season with no depth in the line, either offensively or defensively, and now we're worse off than ever."

Dunbar opened the season with its only victory, 20-12, over Lubbock High, but the Panthers have been a contender in every game since then except for Estacado.

"We were out of it against Estacado, but we had chances to win the other games, even against Canyon and Hereford," Lee said.

Speedy tailbacks Jeff Johnson and Fred Williams are Dunbar's main offensive threats, but part-time starter Richard Ross is also capable of breaking a game wide open. Ross returned a punt 54 yards for a touchdown in Dunbar's 27-17 loss to Borger last week.

"We're going to have to be on our toes and make sure we don't open up any quick scoring opportunities," Cavalier said.

Both Pampa and Dunbar suffer from the same predicament, Lee feels. A case of the weak getting stronger, and the strong, well...getting even stronger.

"We both have better teams than last year, but everyone else is better," Lee said.

Pampa's passing attack is feared by Lee more than anything else.

"I'm impressed with their quarterback (Dustin Miller) and receiver (Michael Bradshaw)," Lee added.

Miller, a 190-pound junior, and Bradshaw, 140-pound junior, have provided a majority of Pampa's offense. Miller has thrown for 340 yards while Bradshaw has snagged nine of his passes for 127 yards. Miller has scored two of Pampa's five touchdowns.

Cavalier has been pleased with the work of Miller and the Harvesters' offensive line of Chris Porter, Cam Moore, Rankin Harvey, Michael Shklar and Albert Hernandez, who have given him better than average pass protection.

"Miller gets the ball to his receivers most of the time and he's been protected very well. He needs better setup mechanics and we've been working on that this week. A quarterback has to be able to avoid the rush and be light on his toes and still get the ball delivered to the right people," Cavalier said.

Miller, who completed seven of 22 passes for 88 yards against Frenship, should have had more yardage, Cavalier said.

"We had situations where we could have been more successful, but several of his passes were dropped at the most inopportune times," Cavalier said.

Tailback Brandon McDonald is Pampa's leading rusher with 149 yards and one touchdown. Brad Sokolosky has scored twice and rushed for 111 yards since starting at fullback the past three games.

Cavalier was hoping to get more bulk into the backfield by having injury-plagued fullback David Fields ready to go, but the 190-pound senior is still having his problems.

Fields, who has been hobbled by a sprained ankle since the Hereford game Sept. 18, has developed another complication...a bruised shoulder.

"Fields has a tender shoulder and he probably won't play tonight," Cavalier said.

The Harvesters continue to show a lot of enthusiasm in practice despite their winless record, Cavalier said.

"My hats are off to the kids. They continue to practice hard," Cavalier said. "They really want to win and they feel like they can get it done before the season is over."

Cavalier reported losing only one varsity player to grades as the first six weeks of the no pass, no play rule went into effect today.

Spirit line scheduled

Preceding the 7:30 p.m. kickoff of tonight's game between Lubbock Dunbar and Pampa, parents and fans are encouraged to take part in the formation of a "Spirit Line."

Harvester Booster Club President Jack Gindorf says the spirit line will help in showing support for the Harvesters in the gridiron contest.

The spirit line will begin forming at 7:15 p.m. tonight. The line will begin at the fieldhouse locker room and continue to Harvester Field's South Entrance.

All team parents and fans are encouraged to join in forming the line.

Tyson 'made for me,' challenger Biggs declares

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Tyrell Biggs will try to become the fifth member of the 1984 U.S. Olympic Boxing Team to win a world professional title when he challenges Mike Tyson tonight for the undisputed heavyweight championship.

"He's made for me," the 26-year-old Biggs said. The smart-money guys disagree. "I'm the best fighter in the world," the 21-year-old Tyson said.

The smart-money guys agree that he certainly is the best heavyweight.

Tyson has been a strong favorite in all of his fighters, and this time Las Vegas oddsmakers have made the swarming, power-punching champion an overwhelming 12-1 favorite, as of Thursday.

Pampa hopes 'charm' works at Harvester Stadium

CAN THE THIRD TIME BE the charm?

The Pampa-Lubbock Dunbar athletic series began with the 1982 school year when Pampa dropped down a notch into Class 4A. The five football meetings since then have all been won by the Panthers, all with John Kendall as Harvester coach against two different Dunbar head coaches. In fact, Pampa has never managed more than one touchdown per game in the brief series, and twice went without a TD.

But tonight's game is that third "charm" game, the third time the two teams have met at Harvester Field. Two years ago the Green and Gold made it's best effort in breaking the streak, a 14-8 loss. A fourth-period 19-yard scamper by Gary Jernigan provided the late PHS' score. Perhaps that "charm" can assist the Harvesters in ending two streaks, the winless efforts against the Maroon and White, and the losing streak extending over three seasons and now standing at 18 in a row.

It's the fourth season for Jerry Lee as head coach of the Panthers, and he has watched a generally deteriorating program. The first three seasons saw the kids from Dunbar-Struggs HS enter the Pampa game with solid 8-0, 6-2 and 7-0 records. Then it fell to 3-4 and 0-6, and tonight the visitors come to town with a 1-5 mark. The lone win was the season opener over crosstown Lubbock High, the 3-5A Westerners now owning a 0-6 mark. There are two common opponents for comparative scores: Hereford downed Dunbar by 12 points and Pampa by 29 prior to the forfeit; Borger rallied for a 27-17 win last week, while the Bulldogs blasted Pampa here 34-0.

Sports Forum

By Warren Hasse

Another major factor coming into play is the school bell marking the end of the school day this Friday. When it rang, it triggered no pass-no play, and just how devastating that hit-the-books legislation will be on the two teams is unknown at this writing. But history relates that Dunbar, the low socio-economic school with an almost total minority student body, has always been the hardest-hit in Lubbock and in District 1-4A. So if the Harvesters are going to bury the two streaks, tonight may be the best time ever.

Lubbock schools have generally been an enigma for the Pampa football program. The series with Lubbock High began in 1930, and when halted after the 1968 game, Tom S. led 12-23-2. At one time Monterey led the series 0-18, and now it stands at 2-19. Pampa is 1-4 vs. Coronado and is winless in five starts against Estacado. The composite is Pampa 15 wins, Lubbock schools 56 wins, plus two ties.

CHAFF: Pampa has had five previous 0-5 starts: 1960 (0-10), 1967 (0-10), 1977 (2-8), 1984 (1-9) and 1986 (0-10). The 191 points allowed is the second worst after five contests, the 1967 club having permitted 214. The 1977 team allowed 161, one more than the 1984 squad....Of course, if the forfeit game with Hereford is counted as a paper victory, then it alters the scoring figures also, since football Rule 8, Article 2 declares the score of a forfeit game 2-0 if the team benefiting from the forfeit was the on-field losing team....Dunbar has scored 83 points while allowing 161....Frenship has the open date this weekend....The second period, which is generally viewed as a barometer of team conditioning, continues to be the Harvester bugaboo, being outscored 95-13 in the quarter....Congratulations to both PISD bands on Division I ratings earned in marching contest last weekend, the necessary first steps toward UIL sweepstakes. And to former team physician, Dr. Frank Kelley, who at age 78, last weekend scored a hole-in-one on the fifth hole at the PCC....The district-leading Pampa volleyball team is at Dunbar tomorrow; Boys golf is at Borger. Girls golf at Dumas; tennis has a doubleheader, playing at Estacado and Dunbar; cross-country runs at Dumas. It's the final tune-up for tennis and x-c before district meets....Sunday starts the weeklong National High School Activities Week eighth annual celebration, designed to raise public awareness of the values and needs of school activity programs....Piano moved up another notch, to No. 6, in the USA Today national Super 25 high school grid poll. North Mesquite jumped three spots to No. 19....Could the school administrators and teachers responsible for pep squads and booster groups that litter the highways with streamers and signs as a show of support, also be responsible enough to clean up the litter afterward, rather than leaving it to taxpayers and "Adopt a Highway" volunteers. The colored streamers give you away.

Cardinals hit hard by injuries

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The World Series moved indoors for the first time and injuries followed the crippled St. Louis Cardinals into the Metrodome.

Terry Pendleton is not likely to play against the Minnesota Twins because of rib cage problems, Manager Whitey Herzog said Thursday.

"Right now, I'd say it's doubtful he'll play at all. He has torn muscles," Herzog said two days before Game 1.

Rookie Joe Magrane, another one of St. Louis' walking wounded this year, will start the opener against Frank Viola in a matchup of left-handers beneath the orange-tinted dome.

Herzog made a switch for Game 2, saying Danny Cox would pitch and be followed by John Tudor in the third game. Bert Blyleven will start Game 2 for the Twins and Les Straker will work the third game.

The Cardinals, besieged by injuries this season, are still not expecting slugger Jack Clark to play. Clark, out of the starting lineup since Sept. 9 with an ankle injury, took part in an intrasquad game Thursday night at the Metrodome as light rained fell outdoors. He went 0-for-6 with three strikeouts.

"What you see is what you get," Clark said. "I can't play. I can't help right now."

Herzog had another close call when catcher Tony Pena, who led the Cardinals with a .381 average in the playoffs, got hit in the right hand by a foul tip. Pena left the workout, but was not seriously injured.

There's no sense fretting," Herzog said of the injury jinx that has plagued his team ever since Pena broke his thumb in the third game of the season. "There's nothing you can do."

Pendleton hurt himself while sliding Wednesday night in St. Louis' 6-0 victory over San Francisco in the seventh game of the National League playoffs. He remained in the game at third base for one inning and then was forced to leave.

"I don't feel good at all. If it stays this way, I can't make it," Pendleton said.

Clark led the Cardinals with 35 home runs and 106 runs batted in, and Pendleton was second with 12 homers and 96 RBI.

Herzog had to make a decision by late this afternoon on his 24-man World Series roster. He has already indicated he will add a ninth pitcher, probably right-handed reliever Lee Tunnel. Reserve outfielder Lance Johnson could be the one dropped, or it might be either Clark or Pendleton.

There was speculation Herzog might seek permission from the commissioner's office to add David Green, who was not on the original playoff roster, to replace one of the injured players.

Tom Lawless and Tom Pagnozzi, who combined for 73 at-bats this season, were likely to start Game 1 for the Cardinals because of injuries. Lawless will take Pendleton's spot and Pagnozzi, despite only one at-bat in the playoffs, was forced into the designated hitter's slot.

This will be the second year the DH will be used in World Series games at the American League champion's park. The pitcher will bat in games at the National League champion's home.

Minus Clark and Pendleton, the Cardinals are likely to start a lineup for Game 1 that hit a total of 32 home runs this season. The Twins' probable lineup for the opener hit 173.

That lack of power will put even more emphasis on the Cardinals' running game, a fact Viola and catcher Tim Lauer realize.

"I don't think anyone in the American League compares to them in team speed," Viola said. "The American League plays a different type of ball. In the National League, they can be six runs behind and they'll still run on you."

Laudner said Viola is "pretty good" at holding runners on base, part of the reason Manager Tom Kelly picked him to pitch Game 1. Had the Giants won the NL title, Blyleven would have opened.

Mismatches shape up in NFL strike games

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Raiders normally would be favored to beat the San Diego Chargers. But with 17 regulars in their lineup Sunday to none for the Chargers, the game could be one of the biggest mismatches in NFL history.

So could the Cleveland-Cincinnati contest, with nine veteran Browns against two for the Bengals.

What about the Rams, with 23 regulars, versus Atlanta, with one? And Dallas, with 11, playing Washington, with all replacement players, on Monday night?

The final weekend of fill-in football could be an ugly one for competitive balance.

"Some games have been mismatches with the number of players who reported against the ones who didn't cross the line on other teams," said Miami Coach Don Shula, whose team plays the New York Jets.

The Dolphins have one veteran, safety Liffort Hobley, while the Jets have nine available.

"If there's ever been a David and Goliath situation, here it is," Bengals Coach Sam Wyche said. "How could you be more of an underdog than to have these guys come in with all their horses, and us trying to defend our home turf?"

Also defending their home turf this weekend will be Pittsburgh, against Indianapolis; Detroit, vs. Seattle; Houston, playing New England; Green Bay, against Philadelphia; Chicago, taking on New Orleans; Tampa Bay, vs. Minnesota; Buffalo, against the New York Giants; Kansas City, playing Denver; and San Francisco, vs. St. Louis.

Chargers at Raiders
The Raiders will have top-notch defensive linemen Howie Long, Greg Townsend and Bill Pickel, linebackers Jerry Robinson, Joe Cormier and Jamie Kimmel, quarterback Rusty Hilger and placekicker Chris Bahr. The Chargers counter with QB Rick Neuheisel, nose tackle Blaise Winter and kicker Jeff Gaffney.

Browns at Broncos
Both teams are 1-1 during the strike. But the Browns got back quarterback Gary Danielson, tight end Ozzie Newsome, offensive linemen Cody Risien and Ricky Bolden, receiver Brian Brennan, defensive end Sam Clancy, punter Jeff Gossett and kicker Jeff Jaeger, who joined defensive captain Carl Hairston, who returned a week earlier.

Cincinnati has linebacker Reggie Williams and DE Eddie Edwards.

Falcons at Rams
Atlanta linebacker Tim Green is the only regular eligible. The Rams have Jim Collins, Nolan Cromwell, Greg Meisner, Shawn Miller and Alvin Wright on defense, QB Jim Everett, running backs Charles White and Mike Guman, plus punter Dale Hatcher and placekicker Mike Lansford.

The Rams are 1-1 during the strike, while Atlanta has lost both replacement games.

Redskins at Cowboys
A pair of unbeaten replacement squads resume one of the NFL's hottest rivalries. Washington stayed firmly on strike, but the Cowboys have veterans Tony Dorsett, Danny White, Mike Renfro and Robert Lavette on offense, Randy White, Don Smerek, Too Tall Jones and Kevin Brooks on defense.

Dolphins at Jets
Although the Jets have their entire defensive line and quarterback Pat Ryan available, Coach Joe Walton isn't counting on a big edge over Miami.

"I don't know about the experience edge," he said. "A lot of teams had the so-called advantages and didn't do well... It's hard to predict."

Patriots at Oilers
Star linebacker Andre Tippett and newly acquired quarterback Doug Flutie join the Patriots, who already have solid veterans in Raymond Clayborn, Tony Collins, Sean Farrell, Tony Franklin and Ron Wooten.

For Houston, 2-0 with replacements, the strength might be the kicking game, with placekicker Tony Zendejas and punter Lee Johnson. Their best fill-ins have been QB Brent Pease and receiver Leonard Harris.

Three Big Eight teams remain unbeaten

By The Associated Press

Only eight Division I-A teams are still unbeaten and untied. Three of them are in the Big Eight, and two of those — second-ranked Nebraska and No. 12 Oklahoma State — headline Saturday's college football schedule when they collide.

While the Oklahoma State Cowboys have had good teams in the past, sometimes outstanding teams, Nebraska has always been better. The Cornhuskers have emerged victorious every year since 1961, except when the two teams tied in 1973.

This year, both Nebraska and Oklahoma State have 5-0 records — the same as conference rival Oklahoma, the nation's top-ranked team; No. 7 Clemson, No. 13 Syracuse and unranked Minnesota and Wake Forest. At 4-0 is third-ranked Miami of Florida, which is idle this week.

"Oklahoma State has emerged out of the pack as a contender," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said. "They have a very good chance to be a contender

(for the Big Eight title). This game this week will be very critical."

It is the first time since 1945 that the Cowboys have won their first five games, but they have not played the same caliber of competition as Nebraska.

Still, there is hope in Stillwater, Okla., when the Huskers come calling.

"For one thing, we're 5-0," said Mike Gundy, Oklahoma State's sophomore quarterback, who leads the Big Eight Conference in total offense. "Nobody we've played has stopped us from moving the ball offensively. We're running the ball well and throwing the ball well, and it's tough to stop a balanced attack."

"At the start of the year, we knew we had good players but we hadn't proven much to anyone," Gundy said. "People are starting to believe in Oklahoma State now."

Nebraska is ranked sixth nationally in total offense, averaging 453 yards per game.

Sampson decides to stick with Rockets

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Ralph Sampson tested the free-agent market but decided to stick with the Houston Rockets for another six years that reportedly will pay him $12 million.

And now he's ready to go to work.

"The first time I signed a contract, I'd never played a lick in the NBA, but in the next six years I'll know what I'm getting into," Sampson said Thursday after agreeing to terms. "I hope the next six years will be good for me and the Houston Rockets."

Sampson's signing brings both Twin Towers under a Rockets contract for at least the next six years. Akeem Oluajuwon signed a 12-year contract last season that pays him an average of $2.5 million per year.

Sampson's agent, Gene Perry, said the Rockets finally came up with the money to keep Sampson in a Rockets uniform.

"There were a couple of times when I thought Ralph would be moving on," Perry said. "But the Rockets came in and made it worth Ralph's time to stay in Houston. They opened up their pocketbooks."

The Portland Trail Blazers offered Sampson a reported $2 million over six years, but Perry said Houston's offer was structured the way Sampson wanted it.

Sampson had wanted to get his contract settled prior to last season, but Perry said it was worth the wait.
