Young killer nets 20

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

A Pampa teen-ager accused of a 1985 fatal Halloween stabbing at the Coronado Inn must return to prison after pleading guilty Thursday to a charge of murder.

"I was the one who did everything, and no one helped me," Jesus DeLeon, 18, said in a voluntary statement. DeLeon confessed to the stabbing death of Pete Ontiveros, 20, of Pampa.

Ontiveros died after a Halloween party for Long John Silver's Seafood Shoppe employees turned into a drunken brawl Oct. 27, 1985.

DeLeon was sentenced to 20 years in prison by 223rd District Judge Don Cain. Thursday's hearing followed a plea bargain agreement reached by DeLeon's attorney, David Holt of Pampa, and Assistant District Attorney Harold Comer.

Judge Cain did not rule that DeLeon had used a "deadly weapon" in the attack on Ontiveros, meaning DeLeon could collect an earlier parole date.

The judge had no comment this morning on the deadly-weapon ruling.

The youthful killer was only 16 at the time of the killing, and the same age nine months later when Cain sentenced him to 30 years in prison after a jury found him guilty of murder in June 1986. He had been certified to stand trial as an adult by County Judge Carl Kennedy and 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany, both acting on behalf of juvenile court.

The verdict and sentence were overturned in April by the 7th Court of Appeals in Amarillo. The appeals court ruled that former prosecutor David Hamilton had forgotten a key phrase on a summons notifying DeLeon of the juvenile hearing in which he was ordered to stand trial as an adult.

Justices said the summons didn't include the purpose of the hearing.

The appeals court sent the case back to juvenile court, and, in July, Judge Kennedy again ordered DeLeon, then 17, to stand trial as an adult a second time.

In handing out the new sentence Thursday, Judge Cain gave DeLeon credit for two years he

Rules tighten vehicle controls

By JIMMY PATTERSON

Beginning Jan. 1, farmers and other commercial operators across the state will be subject to a new series of detailed rules and regulations regarding their vehicles and other properties.

The new standards were made effective by House Bill 908 and Senate Bill 595, products of the last Legislature.

A packed house at the Coronado Inn Starlight Room heard Railroad Commission spokesmen Jerry Martin and Greg Wilkerson detail the new guidelines Thursday night.

"What it amounts to basically," said Wallace Bruce, owner of Prarie Oil Co. in Pampa, "is that a farm tractor is not a commercial vehicle, but if you hook a trailer onto it and haul hay to a field, you're affected."

SB 595 is divided into three main areas that will affect farmers. The bill:

- ✓ provides for a rate flexibility package for common carriers in the state.
- ✓ allows for the assessment of a fine of up to $10,000 for each violation.
- ✓ regulates common carriers or motor carriers that transport property for hire.

HB 908 deals with the licensing and weight portions of the legislation.

The Senate bill states that vehicles must be safely maintained and orders that drivers' physical condition be "adequate to enable the driver to operate the vehicle safely."

According to Amarillo Department of Public Safety Sgt. Harrold Emory, if a driver has been on the road in excess of 15 hours, he is considered unsafe and in violation of one of the many new regulations.

The legislation, which affects vehicles weighing 10,000 pounds or more, also calls for assurance that the motor carrier is able to meet liability insurance requirements totaling $500,000.

Emory read a list of what troopers will check during random safety stops of the heavy vehicles.

"Radial tires must have radial tubes in them," Emory said. "There can be no cracks or cuts in the cords; you can't mix radial and bias tires on the same axle; damaged wheels, bent wheels, missing lug nuts, specifics on brake adjustments; we'll check for oil and grease on wheel bearings."

Said Bruce: "There ain't a truck anywhere running up and down the road that don't have grease or oil leaks."

Emory added that troopers will check to see that loads are properly secured.

"For instance, if a farmer has a back hoe on the back of his truck, it must be tied down," Emory

Witch Lori Crippen and Miss Piggy, Becky Reed, both PHS sophomores, dress for "Spook the Demons Day," part of homecoming and Halloween events leading to tonight's football game against the Dumas Demons. The game starts at 7:30 p.m. at Harvester Stadium.

Variety of events offered to please Halloween ghouls

Pampa ghosts and goblins will be able to scare up a frightfully good time this weekend, given the monstrous variety of events offered.

□ The city of Pampa Parks and Recreation Department will host the third-annual Halloween Parade and Party at 5:30 p.m. Saturday.

All preschool and elementary school-age children are invited to wear their Halloween costumes and attend the events. Participants will gather for the parade on the south lawn of Lovett Memorial Library, 111 N. Houston.

A police escort will lead the children down Foster Street to the Central Fire Station for a party.

Cartoons will be shown at the fire station, and trick-or-treat bags with candy will be handed out. The Fire Department robot will make a special appearance.

Sponsors for this year's party are Alco, K mart, Wal-Mart, Domino's pizza and Coldwell Banker Action Realty.

In case of inclement weather, the parade will be canceled and all those attending will meet at the fire station for the party.

The parade and party are free. □ Pampa's 7-Eleven store, in cooperation with Leaf and Willie Wonka candy companies, is promoting Halloween safety by offering "Trick or Treat Safely" bags. The bags will be available free through Saturday or, while supplies last.

Safety tips by McGruff, the Crime Prevention Dog, are printed on the bags. Parents are encouraged to go over the rules with their children before the children go out to trick or treat on Halloween.

□ Pampa Mall merchants will sponsor Halloween activities in the mall from 6 to 9 p.m. Saturday, including trick-or-treating and a haunted house, according to Todd Duff, mall manager.

In addition, merchants will hand out wrapped candy to trick-or-treaters during the evening. See EVENTS, Page 2

Dead of night spawns terror

By CATHY SPAULDING
Ghost Writer

What are Top O' Texans afraid of? Is it things that go 'bump' in the night, or things that come right out and go AAAUUUGGGHH?

What puts the EEEE in Halloween? Those resemble the questions posed to seven souls at Pampa's Lovett Memorial Library and the Pampa Mall Thursday evening by The Pampa News' exclusive Halloween pollster, the Ghoul-up Poll.

Our Ghoul-up pollsters discovered that eastern Panhandle residents are afraid of the unknown. That is to say they really don't know what they're afraid of.

Or they proudly boast that they aren't afraid of anything.

So they say. But let the lights go out on some noisy, thundering night, and some folks admit to feeling a slight tingle up the spine.

Jennifer Gann, a 7-year-old who lives south of Pampa with her parents Monte and Paula Almanza, is a case in point.

"I'm not afraid of the dark," Jennifer boasts with all the confidence she can muster.

She's badgered by older friends. "Oh, come on, Jennifer, aren't you afraid of anything?"

"Well, yes," Jennifer admits. "But I don't know what."

Failing to get a definite answer, the pollster leaves. Jennifer yells out. "Ok, the dark. I'm afraid of the dark."

Calvin Butler III — his friends call him Trey — says he isn't afraid of "nothing."

But press this 4-year-old Wheeler lad a little further, and his brave facade begins to crumble.

The pollster asks, "Are you afraid of the dark?"

"Huh-uh," Trey replies.

His mother casts a skeptical eye, and Trey admits that there are some things in the dark that are scary.

"Like ghosts. I'm scared of ghosts," he admits.

The Patrick twins aren't necessarily afraid of the dark. It's creatures — real and imagined — that give them the heebie-jeebies. The two 6-year-old sisters are the daughters of the Rev. I.L. and has already served behind bars. As part of the plea bargain, DeLeon gives up his right to an appeal.

The 20-year sentence is nearly identical to one a jury gave killer George Rodriguez, 17, two weeks ago in a fatal stabbing earlier this year.

"They considered, I'm sure, the jury ruling in the Rodriguez case," Judge Cain said of the plea bargain reached by Holt and Comer.

The fatal stabbing occurred after numerous fights broke out during the Halloween party, hosted by former Long John Silver's Manager Curt Luedtke at the Pampa hotel. Two other men also sustained stab wounds, both allegedly from DeLeon.

Ontiveros sustained numerous stab wounds to his back, neck and head and died en route to Coronado Hospital.

Luedtke testified during DeLeon's trial that he had served two kegs and seven cases of beer and wine coolers to roughly 70 employees and their guests at the party. Many party-goers were teen-agers and under legal drinking age.

The manager had testified that he saw DeLeon stab Ontiveros half a dozen times.

In his voluntary statement, DeLeon admitted stabbing Ontiveros five times. He said he was angry at Ontiveros for starting a fight at the party.

DeLeon also said in the statement that he tried to talk to Ontiveros after the stabbing victim fell outside the hotel. The defendant said he didn't want to repeat what Ontiveros said to him.

DeLeon has been in the Gray County Jail since returning from prison after the new trial was ordered.

said. "He can't go down the road, hoping that weight will hold it down. Loads of cotton must also be sealed."

According to RRC spokesman Wilkerson, municipal and county vehicles will be exempt because "they are used for government purposes."

Concerning the affected vehicles and the regulations defining commercial vehicles, Wilkerson added: "If you're hauling your own tubing in your own vehicle to your own well sight, you're still considered a commercial vehicle."

Gray County DPS License and Weight Division Trooper Don Copeland said certified carriers will not be affected as much by the new laws as farmers.

"If this continues like it's set up," Copeland said, "(the farmers) will be regulated just like a large trucking company would be."

The DPS will also be affected to an extent because of the legislation. Statewide, 50 new troopers have been hired to handle the increased workload. Two troopers based in Gray County will enforce the new highway regulations.

"We've been making warnings since April," Copeland said, "and we've been averaging 30 to 45 minutes per stop just to check the equipment."

Carriers will have until Feb. 1 to register their affected vehicles. There will be a $1 registration fee and a one-time $25 dollar insurance filing fee.

Dow climbs past 2000 mark

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street's broad advance continued in heavy trading today with the Dow Jones industrial average climbing about 63 points following strong gains on overseas exchanges.

The strong rise in the Dow average put the market's best-known barometer at about 2,001. Prices rose for 10 out of every 11 issues on the New York Stock Exchange, and were also broadly higher on the American Stock Exchange and on the over-the-counter market.

Analysts said the market was up today because it was oversold following its $500 billion collapse a week ago Monday.

Wall Street's ability to shake off developments such as the dollar's decline on Thursday, "indicates an oversold market won't go down on bad news anymore," said Robert Colby, an analyst with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

The dollar moved higher overseas today but fell in New York trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 91.51 points Thursday, its third-largest one-day point gain, to close at 1,938.33 after being up more than 110 points in late trading. The advance represented 5 percent of its value and followed a 0.33-point gain Wednesday.

The broader market, which had trailed the blue-chip issues represented in the Dow average, also improved, with four stocks leading for every one that lost value on the New York Stock Exchange.

In today's trading, prices soared on the Tokyo Stock Exchange. The Nikkei Stock Average, a key indicator, climbed 731.15 points, or 3.3 percent, in its third biggest single-day gain on record. The only bigger advances were a 906.42-point rise on July 24 and the record 2,037.32-point surge of Oct. 21.

On the Hong Kong Stock Exchange, prices moved higher in early trading.

Police question teen in murder

MIDLOTHIAN (AP) — A teenager charged with capital murder in the shooting death of an undercover policeman was appointed a lawyer at a preliminary hearing today, while police in Arizona say they want to question the youth further about an attack on another teen-ager there.

Authorities investigating the June beating of a Williams, Ariz., youth said they want to question again Richard Goeglein Jr., 17, who has told police he was only a witness to the baseball-bat beating incident, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

In Midlothian, Goeglein and a 16-year-old have been charged with the shooting death of George Raffield, a 21-year-old undercover narcotics officer, whose body was found Saturday. Goeglein has told police he was only a witness to the Raffield shooting, according to the teen-ager's attorney, Brad Lollar.

Raffield had been posing as a student at Midlothian High School, where both suspects attend school, to investigate drug trafficking. The name of the 16-year-old suspect has not been released because he is a juvenile.

Goeglein, whose family moved from Williams to Midlothian less than a month after the Arizona beating, was not charged in that incident.

Terror

Barbara Patrick of Pampa.

Fargee Patrick admits she's afraid of the dark a little bit.

But the one thing that really scares her are cats. "Cause they scratch," Fargee says.

Sister Farcette Patrick has a more imaginative fear.

"Dragons," Farcette says. "They're big."

Shane Mitchell, 8, admits he's afraid of the dark.

"I just can't say why," says Shane, son of Darrel and Debbie Mitchell of Pampa.

Such a childish phobia, to be afraid of the dark. Surely by the time someone grows up, they put aside such fears.

Or do they?

"I'm afraid of my Dad," admits Anna Bressler, 15, daughter of Adolph and Karen Bressler of Pampa. The Pampa High School freshman later changes her mind on what scares her the most.

"Demons and the principal," Anna concludes. Her friend, Tracy Reeves, 14, daughter of Dale and Anita Reeves of Pampa, is afraid of horror movies.

"They're just gross," Tracy says.

'Tall City' is standing a little taller today

MIDLAND (AP) — The Tall City is standing a little taller today after more than 35,000 people jammed streets in a jubilant celebration honoring Jessica McClure's rescuers.

The 19-month-old sat on her mother's shoulders Thursday in her hospital room and watched about 800 paraders take to streets lined with spectators, many of them dressed in toddler-honoring pink.

That pink motif was everywhere: pink ribbons and bows were tied to trees and light poles; the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce served pieces of a 96-square-foot pink angel-food cake; and hundreds of people carried pink balloons or wore pink ribbons in their hair or around their arms.

"We put this (fete) together in nine days," Chamber of Commerce Chairman Charles Spence said. "A lot of us have had a lot of pride in our people and just a sigh of relief that everything has turned out as well as it has."

Two weeks ago, Jessica was pulled out of an abandoned well, 58 hours after she fell in. About 400 people volunteered time and equipment to help drill a rescue shaft, control crowds and dispense refreshments.

Jessica's parents, Chip and Cissy McClure, had asked the city and chamber to organize the parade to honor the rescuers, and after the parade ended at Centennial Plaza downtown, Chip McClure expressed his thanks to the 2,000 people gathered there.

"Nobody can imagine the intensity of the people who worked out there," said McClure, 18. "For those who were there and those who weren't, we want to thank you from the bottom of our hearts. I want you to remember one thing: Jessica loves all of you."

Emotions ran deep among the spectators, who cheered loudly when a huge, green drilling machine rumbled by — the machine that dug the first few feet of the rescue shaft. The crowd thundered even louder when they saw the flatbed trailer on which the volunteer drillers stood.

"This is a celebration of life," said Robert O'Donnell, the fire department paramedic who freed Jessica from the shaft. "None of us could have done it alone. It took every one of us."

The festivities were to continue this morning, when television talk show hostess Oprah Winfrey broadcasts live from Jessica's room at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Also in Thursday's parade was a flatbed trailer piled high with stuffed toys and a sign that read, "We're tickled pink."

The toys, sent to Jessica from all over the country, were handed out to rescuers to give to their children. Jessica's parents have said they had to give away the toys because she received more than she could ever play with.

Even telephone operators got into the act, riding in the back of a pickup truck that carried a sign saying, "Directory assistance operators kept the world in touch with Jessica."

Court offices and some downtown businesses in this West Texas town nicknamed the "Tall City" closed an hour early so their employees could view the parade that started at 4 p.m.

"Everybody's here," said Midland resident Ubelia Tucker, who staked out a prime viewing spot two hours before the start of the parade. "As we were getting in our car to leave, our neighbors were leaving and we knew where they were going."

Thursday morning, Jessica appeared at a news conference clad in an orange Halloween jumper. The little girl smiled and gurgled for the cameras and her mother, who told her, "Trick or treat."

Doctors said the child is scheduled today for what they hope will be the final "cleaning" surgery to scrape dead tissue from the foot, which was wedged alongside her head while she was trapped in the well.

Orthopedist Charles Younger said it is certain Jessica will lose part of her heel, her small toe and a portion of her big toe.

"She has no feeling at all in the foot from about the ankle down," he said, adding that only time will tell whether the foot will grow normally after the vise-like crush that held it for nearly three days. "She'll have a foot, but how good a foot, we just don't know."

Earlier this week, Gov. Bill Clements declared Thursday "Jessica McClure Day" statewide, saying those who saved the child showed Texans' sense of caring, compassion and concern.

Meanwhile, Southwestern Bell officials said thousands of callers had phoned in for tickets to today's Oprah Winfrey Show. Show officials had set up a television hookup between the studio downtown and Jessica's hospital room.

The show will feature Jessica's parents and "Cosby" television star Keshia Knight Pulliam, who was among the first of thousands of well-wishers worldwide to send gifts to the toddler.

Doug Carmichael, Dr. Moss Hampton and Mayor David McDaniel bought rights to fly their school flag over City Hall. The rights were purchased for $125 at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Country Fair Oct. 17 and it was the first time the TCU flag was flown over the city. Holding the flag, left to right, are: McDaniel, Jan McDaniel, Bill Potts, Sara Carmichael, Carmichael and Dr. Hampton.

Group: Lawmaker's claims wrong about pari-mutuel issue

AUSTIN (AP) — A group opposing the pari-mutuel betting proposition on Tuesday's election ballot says a legislator is wrong in claiming it has received money from surrounding states that don't want Texas to start horse and dog racing.

"We receive no money from out-of-state interests. We oppose pari-mutuel gambling whether it's in Hong Kong, Louisiana or Texas," said spokesman Gary McNeil of the group Texans Who Care.

McNeil was responding to Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, who made the charge at a news conference Thursday.

"We know what pari-mutuel will do to our surrounding states. They're not going to like it — that's tough. They've been drawing off our population base all these years. It's our turn," Harris said.

Harris said surrounding states that already allow pari-mutuel wagering are obviously spending money in Texas to defeat the proposition, although he didn't have any specific instances.

"We've just seen it over the years. ... I can't swear to you under oath... we feel comfortable that the money's coming from across the border," he said.

McNeil called the accusation "a slanderous charge."

"The only out-of-state interests that we know are involved in this campaign are the Kentucky breeders who are interested in promoting pari-mutuel gambling in Texas so they can sell their horses," McNeil said.

"Our money has come from citizens, it's come from churches, it's come from Sunday school groups," he said. "We've been very up front. There's no hidden money."

At the legislators' news conference, Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-LaMarque, challenged assertions by Texans Who Care that horse racing is a dying business. Criss said the total amount wagered at tracks had risen 49 percent over the past decade.

Attendance at horse tracks last year totaled 70.5 million, making it the nation's No. 2 spectator sport, Criss said.

"That doesn't sound like an unhealthy industry to me," he said.

"No greyhound track in the United States is having economic trouble," Criss said.

Also Thursday: The West and South Texas Chambers of Commerce endorsed the pari-mutuel proposition.

The chambers also backed Referendum 1 on Tuesday's ballot, which would keep the State Board of Education an appointed body rather than having it revert to an elected panel in 1989.

The chambers endorsed the combined package of proposed constitutional amendments known by their sponsors as "Build Texas," which involve several bond issues and other proposals related to economic development.

The Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation urged voters to support Amendment 8 on the ballot, which would allow the state to sell $500 million in bonds for prison, mental health and youth facilities.

"If Texans say yes ... Texas state hospitals and state schools will get the money they need to provide the quality of care for our clients — quality of care that's been mandated by a federal district judge," said Roger Bateman, MHMR board chairman.

Jury issues death penalty for store killing

PLAINVIEW (AP) — A man convicted of robbing $96 from a convenience store and then killing the store clerk has been sentenced to death.

"It won't bring my father back, but maybe someone will learn from this," Danny Manrique said of David Wayne Stoker's sentence for the Nov. 9, 1986, death of his father, David. Stoker remained expressionless as State District Judge Marvin Marshall imposed the sentence Wednesday.

The jury returned its findings after spending seven hours considering whether the 28-year-old Stoker should die for shooting the 50-year-old father of six in the back during the robbery.

The older Manrique was filling in for another employee the night he was killed. His son Danny, 28, was a member of the ambulance crew that responded to the early morning call at the Allsup's store.

An open letter to Andrey Ustinov

Earlier this month, Russian ballet dancer Andrey Ustinov announced he would seek permission to defect to the United States for political asylum. Ustinov made his intentions clear after a performance with the Moscow Ballet at Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

The following is an open letter to Mr. Ustinov:

Dear Andy:

I heard on the news the other day that you don't want to go back to Russia. Is that true?

Well, I can tell you right now you're making the right decision.

There's a lot of reasons to be happy that you'll soon be an American. I wish I could go into them all, but I don't have that much space. I'll list a few of them, though.

First of all, in America we don't have to wait in line for cream of potato soup and stale liverwurst sandwiches.

Over here, we can even buy multi-colored underwear.

And those blue pants everyone wears are called "blue jeans." It'd cost you a pretty penny to get those in the ol' U.S.S.R., I bet.

One thing I gotta tell you that you have to remember: We don't have any women over here named "Bubba." Don't forget that, and you won't get slugged at the market.

We have something called professional football. Except when the players are on strike for their personal gain.

We have a thing called "Wall Street." But, don't waste your rubles there. That thing crashed and boomed last week and all of sudden all these billionaires became merely millionaires.

We have this guy named Howard Cosell. Watch out for that guy. He'll try to influence your opinion on everything. Come to think of it, I guess you're used to that, though.

And virtually everybody in this country has what they call a television set.

What you do is you turn the TV on, and people will act silly for you 24 hours a day. In most places, it won't cost you anything.

Sorry to say, you won't find much ballet on television. American audiences haven't become that sophisticated yet. But we do have Yakov Smirnoff. You may not have been able to see him tell jokes in Russia, but you can flip on the tube anytime you want and watch him doing beer commercials now. I bet Yakov didn't do vodka commercials in Russia.

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

Oh yeah, and another thing — our politicians are allowed to say nasty things about each other when they all decide they want to be president.

I bet nobody insults Gorbachev and gets away with it, huh?

Anyway, these guys who are running for president all call each other names and accuse each other of everything until one by one, they all lose. Then, they're all buddies again.

Weird, huh?

It's too bad you didn't defect last year when we celebrated the birthday of the Statue of Liberty. That was one heck of a to-do. Everybody from everywhere went to New York City and had a grand old time celebrating her 100th birthday.

You probably know what a statue is, but you may have never heard of the meaning of liberty.

Liberty means you're free to do whatever you want. You'll have all sorts of liberties over here: Political liberty, religious liberty and personal liberty, just to name a few.

You can make your own decisions now. You can carry a Bible around and not have to worry about hiding it and you can even decide for yourself what church you want to go to.

If you want to go out and get your hair curled, the government won't say a word about it. If you want to dance in the streets at night, you can do it. I wouldn't advise it, but you can still do it.

That's pretty much what America is all about — doing whatever you feel like doing without worrying that someone is watching your every move. I bet you didn't feel that way in Russia, did you?

Texas soldiers put Central Texas on map

FORT HOOD (AP) — Lone Star State soldiers gave Killean and Central Texas a good name during recent NATO training exercises across Europe with thousands of other soldiers, officials say.

"The troops performed magnificently," Fort Hood commander Lt. Gen. Crosbie E. Saint said. "They looked professional, and they demonstrated their professional competence."

Reforger '87 included nearly 78,000 international troops and featured a contingent of 20,000 Fort Hood soldiers and nearly 11,000 National Guardsmen and Army Reservists, Saint said.

The complicated maneuvers were the largest deployment of U.S. forces to Europe since World War II.

"I still have about 2,000 soldiers over there, so it's not over until it's over," he said Wednesday. "The last plane comes in Nov. 4."

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Peace prize goes to gullible leaders

The Nobel Peace Prize committee certainly has a perverse idea of what constitutes "peace." True, it has given the prize to such worthy recipients as Mother Teresa, Andrei Sakharov, and Lech Walesa. But two years ago it gave the prize to Dr. Yevgeny Chazov, a co-director of International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War. Chazov is known as the "Kremlin doctor" for his close ties to the Soviet Union's ruling elite. And he publicly supported the unpeaceful repression of Sakharov, his fellow Nobel peace laureate.

The 1973 prize went to Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho for bringing "peace" to Vietnam. Two years later Tho's "peaceful" North Vietnamese army conquered South Vietnam, killing and imprisoning millions of people. Tho's Hanoi regime also supported the takeover of Cambodia by the Khmer Rouge, who went on to murder one-third of the country's people, some 3 million souls. If the Nobel committee bequeaths much more of this kind of "peace" to the world, there won't be anybody left alive to receive the prize.

But they've done it again. This time, the prize was given to President Oscar Arias of Costa Rica for his "peace" plan for Central America. In fact, this "peace" plan is but a 1987 Latino version of Neville Chamberlain's 1938 appeasement of Adolf Hitler at Munich.

The Arias "peace" plan does nothing to solve the main threat to peace in Central America: The Soviet-armed, Cuban-trained, 100,000-man Sandinista army. That force, poised to conquer, is larger than the combined armies of all the other Central American countries.

Moreover, the Arias "peace" plan does nothing to ensure that true democratic elections are held in Nicaragua. All the other Central American countries have at least some modicum of democracy and liberty. Nicaragua is the lone totalitarian holdout.

The Norwegian Nobel Committee obviously includes some of the world's most deluded men. They dreamily ignore the sober reality that sometimes peace can be achieved only at force of arms. Norway itself is such an example. The peace the country enjoys was achieved when American and British fighting men liberated the country from Hitler's Reich.

Would the Norwegian Nobel Committee have preferred the "peace" Norway had under Vidkun Quisling, the country's Nazi puppet ruler, or the truer peace the country enjoys today, paid for by allied soldiers whose graves you can still visit in Europe, or at Arlington Cemetery?

The same reality holds true for Central America today. Real peace will come there only when the Sandinistas, like all totalitarians, are driven from power.

That's why the authentic peace forces in Central America are the Nicaraguan freedom fighters — the Contras. If the Norwegian Nobel Committee truly wants to honor someone working for peace in Central America, it should give the prize to Contra leader Adolfo Calero.

Student paper requires control

WASHINGTON — Suppose, to be supposing, that a typical public high school publishes a typical high school newspaper. The paper is written and edited by students in a senior journalism course. It carries news, editorials and letters to the editor. One day the editor prepares an editorial to this effect:

"The school board's policy forbidding smoking on school grounds is crazy. Smoking cigarettes is fun, and smoking in moderation causes no harm to anyone. Principal John Smith is a Puritan fustbudget whose greatest pleasure in life is denying pleasure to others. He ought to be canned, and we ought to have a new principal who believes in individual liberty."

Principal Smith sees a galley proof of the editorial and orders it killed. Has the principal violated the editor's First Amendment right to freedom of the press?

Justice Antonin Scalia posed a question along these lines in the Supreme Court a few days ago. (Scalia wondered about an editorial or a letter to the editor saying "smoking pot is fun," but possession of marijuana is a criminal offense and that fact might be material.) The high court was hearing oral argument in a case from St. Louis that for the first time goes directly to the rights of student editors as opposed to the power of a school's administration.

The case arose at Hazelwood East High School in May 1983, when the editors of Spectrum proposed to run two controversial articles. One dealt with teen-age pregnancies. It was based upon interviews with three girls who agreed to discuss their sexual life as long as their names were not used. The other dealt with the impact of divorce on children.

Principal Robert Reynolds felt the article on pregnancies might be interpreted as sympathetic to sexual intercourse. Because there were only eight or 10 pregnant girls in the school, he felt they could nevertheless be identified. He felt the article on divorce was one-sided, in that it gave the viewpoint only of students and not of the divorced parents. He killed both articles. A few months later the student editors sued for a declaratory judgment charging violation of their constitutional rights. The school administration won in U.S. District Court but lost on appeal to the 8th Circuit. The Supreme Court accepted the case for review. A decision may be handed down before the end of the year.

What about all this? The student plaintiffs rely on a case decided in 1969, but that case — known as the Tinker case — really is no precedent at all. Tinker involved five students who were briefly suspended from their schools in Des Moines, Iowa. In defiance of regulations, they donned black armbands as symbols of their opposition to the war in Vietnam. The Supreme Court, speaking through Justice Abe Fortas, held 7-2 that the suspensions violated the students' First Amendment rights.

There is a night and day difference, or so it seems to me, between the Tinker case and the Hazelwood case. Fifteen-year-old John Tinker acted wholly on his own. As Fortas said, his was a "passive expression of opinion," unrelated to the school as such. "It can hardly be argued," said Fortas, "that either students or teachers shed their constitutional rights to freedom of speech or expression at the schoolhouse gate."

By contrast, the Hazelwood High School paper was an officially sanctioned part of the journalism curriculum. Publication of the paper was a class assignment, supervised by a classroom teacher. The students' published articles figured in their grades for the course.

The 8th Circuit laid down four conditions that could justify a principal's censorship. If an article in a student paper materially disrupts school work, gives rise to substantial disorder, invades the rights of others or might lead to suit against the school, the article may be killed. Otherwise, students are free to publish in a school paper whatever they want to publish, free from any fear of suppression or punishment. These are reasonable guidelines.

Even so, I dissent. I would go a long, tolerant, philosophical way in giving student reporters and editors a free rein — but I would insist that in the crunch, a high school principal should have all the power of a private newspaper publisher. A student newspaper doesn't belong to the students, who are here today and gone tomorrow. It belongs to the school as a continuing institution. If a principal wants to enforce an official school policy against smoking on school grounds, his authority ought not to be undermined by rebellious and insulting ridicule from a 16-year-old who thinks he is Horace Greeley.

Companies wrestle with ethics

There is a new awareness in the corporate board room that industry without morality has lost its rudder.

American leaders in politics, industry and finance have been cutting corners, bending rules, cheating.

Recently the chairman of Chase Manhattan addressed a graduating class at Tulane with what he labeled up front as a "sermon."

Willard Butcher was appalled — and he thought those students should be — at insider trading scandals which have converted some Phi Beta Kappa graduates of the finest schools into convicted felons.

And even in the pristine halls of academia there are embarrassing revelations of rule-breaking in amateur athletics.

One college president recently remarked, wryly, "We're trying to build a university that our football team can be proud of."

Scandals are not new to our nations. Ethical abuses have been with us since the Grant administration and the Teapot Dome scandals — through the Black Sox scandal of 1919 in sports

Paul Harvey

— to the Salad Oil and Equity Funding scams in business.

But Butcher says the recent difference is that ethical abusers came to be treated like celebrities.

Recently The New York Times said the best way to ensure the success of your next dinner party is to invite Ivan Boesky, Dennis Levine or the Mayflower Madam.

The attitude seems to be, "If you're indicted — you're invited." Where Americans formerly outpaced the world in producing quality goods and reliable service, recently the short-term objectives came to be make money, get rich and get out.

But more significant than all the hanky-panky that's been going on is the response of such men as Willard Butcher. His company now has a corporate code of conduct — spelling out the value standards that his employees are expected to live up to.

Motivation seminars that used to stress convince the customer, sell the sizzle, close the deal — are now espousing ethical behavior and ethical principles, "behave or be damned."

Corporate leadership is looking beyond quarterly profits to long-term societal concerns: Reg Jones at G.E., Dan Burke of ABC (on which my radio show airs), Bill Pollard at Servicemaster (one of my show's sponsors), Irving Shapiro at DuPont, David Rockefeller and Jim Burke and John Shad. And Harvard's Business School has now made the study of ethics an integral part of the curriculum.

From recent painful headlines has come a new commitment to "ethical excellence." We've discovered that if only in our own enlightened self-interest, being better and doing better is better.

Conservative leaders will learn direction

By William A. Rusher

Kevin Phillips, the author of that 1969 masterpiece "The Emerging Republican Majority," decided he could sell more of his subsequent books if he baited them with titles that liberals would find more agreeable. So in the 1970s he entitled one of his tomes "Post-Conservative America," and the liberals all rushed to buy it like the Gadarene swine, though they soon discovered that the America Phillips envisioned wasn't to their liking at all.

I suspect my good friend Bob Tyrrell, editor of The American Spectator, of similar duplicity in calling the principal article in his magazine's September issue "The Coming Conservative Crack-Up." Not that Tyrrell and most of the heavy thinkers he invites to comment on that subject aren't genuinely worried about conservatism's present and future; they are. But what they are all arguing about is how best to up-end the liberals.

Tyrrell himself thinks conservatives lack initiative: They "simply do not take much interest in the world around them" and "have not even thought of maintaining enduring institutions comparable to those of the liberals." Tom Bethell concentrates on what he regards as conservatism's too-meddlesome notions of foreign policy: The United States should "withdraw its hardware and its destructive dollars from around the globe," and "all covert operations should cease forthwith."

Richard Brookhiser fears conservatives may have "lost sight of the goal — which should be, not to maintain a permanent set of parallel institutions, but to march through the institutions which exist." Victor Gold worries that "conservatives may win political battles but liberals are still winning the cultural war, in the end dictating the true national agenda." Lew Lehrman thinks conservatives should "begin by elevating to primacy... the inalienable right-to-life."

Joe Sobran blames, not conservatism's lack of cultural clout, but the inadequacy of its chief leader: "Conservatives don't have to penetrate the culture. At the level that counts, they own it. The nation is latently conservative... Though momentarily dispirited, the conservative movement is solid and it's here to stay. All it needs is a little leadership. The president has muffed the job. Let someone else be Reagan." Ernest van den Haag ends the symposium on a moderately optimistic note: "It is too early to give up hope, and not too late to work for the institutionalization of conservative ideas."

My, my, aren't we discouraged easily. Just think — Ronald Reagan has been president for 6½ years, yet there are still liberals around in positions of influence! Worse yet, we conservatives haven't really created "enduring institutions" of our own, let alone taken over the pre-existing ones. Why, the liberals are even still "dictating the true national agenda."

I have a hunch that last assertion would be news to most liberals, but let it pass. What the quoted conservatives — good men, one and all — totally fail to realize is how hard it is, and how long it takes, to cleanse the Augean stables. Hercules managed it all alone, but let's face it, we're not Hercules.

The job of setting America on the right path is, however, in the hands of a movement that understands the assignment and has set out to perform it. It has already made contact with the nation's strong heart and produced a leader who has performed prodigies. But of course almost everything, especially when it comes to institutions, remains to be done.

A whole generation of frightened and furious liberals is clinging to its positions of authority in every nook and cranny of the national culture. These people are too numerous and too entrenched to be ousted one by one. They will die in their foxholes — and be replaced by younger and very different people.

But that is the work of two or three decades. Cheer up, conservatives. The best is yet to be.

Anti-Bork forces weigh campaign against new nominee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Groups that helped defeat Robert H. Bork say they're uneasy with new Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg, and they're weighing another confirmation fight to deny President Reagan his choice.

As he did July 1 when he nominated Bork, Reagan on Thursday selected a candidate over others who likely would have faced an easier confirmation battle.

Reagan's selection resolved a dramatic, internal struggle between Ginsburg's supporters and those who fought for U.S. Circuit Judge Anthony M. Kennedy of Sacramento, Calif. When the smoke cleared, Attorney General Edwin Meese III had won. Chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. lost.

The bearded Ginsburg, described by friends as low-key, witty and maybe even shy, is a judicial conservative who sits with Bork on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

At 41, Ginsburg would be one of the youngest justices to sit on the high court. He would be the first Jewish member of the court in 18 years.

He is a former Harvard Law School professor and Justice Department anti-trust chief, but has served as a judge for only a year.

The Democratic senators and liberal organizations that opposed Bork said they're embarking on an exhaustive review of Ginsburg's record.

Art Kropp of the liberal People for the American Way said "there is enough there to make us feel uncomfortable."

"I have no doubt if we feel strongly enough that the nomination should be opposed, we will be able to oppose it. If the issues are the same, absolutely, we would win," Kropp said.

While many senators expressed private concerns, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., publicly listed the reasons for a potential firestorm against Ginsburg.

Kennedy said he's suspicious because Meese, an ideological conservative, apparently persuaded Reagan to choose Ginsburg. He also cited Ginsburg's relative lack of judicial experience, and asked, rhetorically, if Ginsburg is "an ideological clone of Judge Bork — a Judge Bork without a paper trail."

Senate Judiciary Chairman Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., whose panel will conduct confirmation hearings for Ginsburg, had warned the White House that Ginsburg would be controversial.

It became clear Thursday that Reagan's announcement of his choice followed intense, last-minute conservative lobbying for Ginsburg.

The pro-Ginsburg campaign by Meese's Justice Department and conservative Republican senators reportedly plucked the nomination from the grasp of Kennedy, who encountered little opposition from either party when Baker reviewed a list of candidates earlier this week with senators. Baker reportedly favored Kennedy.

Wednesday night, Kennedy and a second federal appellate judge, William W. Wilkins Jr. of Greenville, S.C., had been summoned to the Justice Department for interviews with Baker, Meese and other administration officials.

Reagan was briefed Thursday morning and made his decision at the end of a 20-minute meeting that included Baker and Meese, according to administration officials.

A Senate Republican source, speaking on condition he not be named, said "Kennedy was the choice up until conservatives started raising hell this morning. For these conservatives, Kennedy was just too liberal."

One Democratic Senate source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a number of Democrats "are very concerned" about Ginsburg.

"The most telling sign of trouble is the report we're hearing about the way the selection was made," the source said.

A civil rights source, also speaking on condition he not be named, said no decision had been made on whether to fight the nomination. But he added, "If you want my instinctive reaction, there's going to be a major fight and it's going to be a winnable fight."

House OKs deficit cuts by only one vote margin

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright admits that the one-vote House margin in favor of a Democratic tax increase plan doesn't help his bargaining position with the White House in deficit-reduction talks.

But Wright, D-Texas, also says failure to approve the bill would have sent the wrong signal to financial markets, where analysts are looking for signs that Congress is serious about stemming the government's red ink.

A day-long debate Thursday over the tax plan generated bitterness contrasting sharply with the bipartisanship that President Reagan and congressional leaders have tried to display this week in their deficit-reduction negotiations.

Only one Republican — Rep. Jim Jeffords of Vermont — sided with Democrats when, on a 206-205 vote, they approved the plan produced by the Democratic leadership. Forty-one Democrats voted no, including some liberals usually allied with the leaders.

"Nobody's got a real strong hand," Wright said.

The Democratic bill would:

- Increase revenues by $12 billion during the 12 months that began Oct. 1, chiefly by boosting taxes on corporations and upper-income individuals. Neither income-tax rates nor excise taxes would be increased, although the 3 percent telephone tax would be extended three years beyond its scheduled Dec. 31 expiration.

- Cut selected spending programs by $2.5 billion, with Medicare reimbursements to doctors and hospitals bearing the biggest share.

- Grant a 3 percent pay raise to members of Congress and federal employees in 1988. Lawmakers' pay would rise to about $92,200.

- Direct the House Appropriations Committee to vote about $8.5 billion in additional spending cuts in defense and social programs.

That would add up to the minimum $23 billion deficit reduction that the Gramm-Rudman law requires Congress and the president to agree on for the 12 months that began Oct. 1.

Shevardnadze, left, talks to reporters at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington early today as Deputy Secretary of State

John Whitehead, right, and Soviet Ambassador to the United States Yuri Dubinin, center, look on.

Reagan awaits delivery of message from Gorbachev

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze re-opened talks today with Secretary of State George P. Shultz and said word on a superpower summit meeting might be issued later in the day.

"Just wait a few hours," Shevardnadze said as he shook hands and posed for pictures with Shultz in the Treaty Room of the State Department.

Shultz reminded the foreign minister, who arrived here overnight, that Shevardnadze was bringing a message from General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev for President Reagan.

After it's delivered, Shultz said, "then we'll know."

He seemed in a buoyant mood and said he hoped to keep a golfing date in Augusta, Ga., on Saturday.

After the greeting, Shultz and Shevardnadze, along with senior advisers, moved into a small office where they sat in armchairs on opposite sides of a fireplace and resumed a dialogue broken off last Friday in Moscow when Gorbachev told Shultz he was not prepared to set a date for a summit.

Reagan, after a week of mixed signals from Moscow, said Thursday the discussion with Shevardnadze would shed light on the likelihood of a nuclear-missile treaty and a superpower summit.

Some of the mixed signals may have stemmed from a political crisis in Moscow, touched off by a speech critical of Gorbachev made by Moscow party chief Boris N. Yeltsin, The New York Times reported today.

That challenge affected summit planning because Gorbachev could not leave the country if his position was insecure, and he could not appear to be soft with the Americans, according to unnamed Soviet officials quoted by The Times.

Reports from Moscow on Thursday said the summit agenda already had been completed and that a meeting "is fixed for the end of this year." A Soviet official said Moscow would propose a summit in the first week of December.

U.S. officials said a summit could be arranged for late November or early December. Asked prospects for a summit in a neutral country, an official said, "We think it should be in the United States."

Reagan denied that anything had been arranged. Asked on Thursday if the timing had been set, the president replied, "Nope. I'm going to wait until tomorrow and find out."

Shevardnadze arrived in Washington early today, just hours before the opening of talks with Shultz and White House national security adviser Frank Carlucci at the State Department.

His visit capped a week of confusion, triggered by the surprise announcement in Moscow last Friday that Gorbachev was not ready to fix a summit date because there was no guarantee the Reagan administration was willing to restrict its Star Wars missile defense program.

Gorbachev's decision was seen in Washington as an attempt to force concessions from Reagan, who has been weakened by the Iran-Contra scandal, the defeat of his Supreme Court nominee and the market collapse on Wall Street.

Signaling possible flexibility on Star Wars, Reagan said he was willing to talk with the Soviets about the program but would never allow it to become a bargaining chip or cripple it.

Prosecution evidence shows Deaver plans for lobbying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prosecution in former presidential aide Michael K. Deaver's perjury trial is introducing evidence contending he lied under oath when he denied lobbying his friends in the Reagan administration.

Pamela G. Bailey, who left her White House job to join Deaver's lobbying firm in 1985, identified several memos she prepared to brief her boss for conversations with Transportation Secretary Elizabeth H. Dole and Drew Lewis, the U.S. envoy to Canada on acid rain.

Deaver's former secretary, meanwhile, supported the defense contention that his memory was impaired by alcoholism. Janet Harvey testified Thursday that the news about Deaver's drinking problem "somehow gave an explanation for Mr. Deaver and the way he was, the moodiness or depression, not remembering things."

The defense is trying to convince the federal court jury that Deaver's memory was so impaired by alcoholism that he was not lying when he denied or said he couldn't recall contacting former Reagan administration colleagues for his clients.

But the prosecution used the testimony of Mrs. Bailey to introduce numerous documents indicating Deaver and his firm keyed their lobbying strategies on contacts with the administration.

Mrs. Bailey described the firm's efforts to help Trans World Airlines, which was fighting an ultimately successful takeover bid by Carl Icahn.

Iraq says Iranian missile hits residential area in Baghdad

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — The military said an Iranian missile slammed into a residential area of the city early today, killing an unspecified number of civilians. Iran said the missile was aimed at Iraq's air force command.

An Iraqi military spokesman said "a number of citizens were martyred and another number wounded" when the missile hit Baghdad.

The spokesman, who was not identified, also said the missile demolished a number of civilian residences and damaged others. The statement was carried by state-run Baghdad radio, monitored in Cyprus.

"Iraq will not let these crimes pass without a severe punishment at the appropriate time," said the spokesman. He did not elaborate.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, also monitored in Cyprus, reported the surface-to-surface missile was fired at 1:07 a.m. at a building housing the air force command in central Baghdad.

The report did not say where the missile was fired from, but the nearest Iranian border is 78 miles east of Baghdad.

The one-paragraph IRNA report gave no other details.

The missile attack is the fifth by Iran against Baghdad since Oct. 4, heightening fears that a new round has begun in the so-called "war of the cities" between Iran and Iraq.

The attack came after Iran vowed retaliation for the death of 18 civilians in Iraqi air raids Wednesday on the southwestern Fars province.

The missile strike also came hours before Iran and Iraq were scheduled to give U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar their response to a U.N. peace plan aimed at ending the 7-year-old Persian Gulf war.

But U.N. officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said if the nations' envoys do respond later today, their comments will not be revealed. The secretary-general is in Spain, and he is not expected to make an official statement about the response to the peace plan until next week, they said.

U.N. Security Council Resolution 598 calls for a cease-fire, withdrawal from occupied territory and an inquiry into who started the war. Iran says Iraq began the war by invading Iran in September 1980. Iraq says the conflict started weeks earlier when Iranian artillery shelled border towns.

Also today, a U.S. warship and reflagged Kuwaiti tanker steamed south through the Persian Gulf. The 14th U.S. convoy left Kuwait late Wednesday for the 550-mile trip down the gulf and out through the Strait of Hormuz.

The Gas Princess tanker was being escorted by the guided-missile frigate USS Ford "and the convoy is now progressing uneventfully," Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman said Thursday.

Two U.S. minesweepers entered the gulf Thursday.

American arrested at mass in Vatican

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Vatican security officers grabbed an American man today as he ran toward Pope John Paul II screaming during a Mass in St. Peter's Basilica, a Vatican spokesman reported.

The man, identified as Thomas Siemer, 57, of Columbus, Ohio, charged down the center aisle of the massive basilica at the end of a Mass closing the monthlong synod of bishops and was stopped about 20 yards from the pope, said spokesman Giovanni D'Ercole.

The spokesman said the man was not armed and appeared to be mentally disturbed.

Cease-fire talks refused in Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A Central American peace plan was jeopardized when Nicaragua vowed it will never negotiate with the Contra rebels, and Salvadoran rebels said they would boycott talks with the government.

The announcements came Thursday, one week before the scheduled implementation of the peace plan, which calls, among other things, for cease-fires in the civil wars in Nicaragua and El Salvador. The peace plan was signed Aug. 5 by the presidents of those two nations and Guatemala, Honduras and Costa Rica. Despite the apparent setback, Costa Rican President Oscar Arias, who received this year's Nobel Peace Prize for proposing the plan, said in San Jose that he remained optimistic the accord can succeed.

Pickens group extends Neumont offer

AMARILLO (AP) — A T. Boone Pickens-led investor group has extended its $4.3 billion tender offer for Neumont Mining Corp. for two weeks while appealing a bid to foil its takeover attempt.

Ivanhoe Partners said Thursday it was extending its tender offer through Nov. 12, pending a ruling by Delaware Justice Andrew G. Moore II on its appeal contesting the $1.5 billion Neumont stock purchase by Consolidated Gold Field PLC of London.

Pickens has contended that, through the use of the market sweep, Neumont froze Ivanhoe's $95-per-share offer to buy 90 percent of the company, while two months earlier the gold company had accepted a bid of $45 by Gold Fields to bring that company's total ownership to 49.7 percent.

The Pickens offer for majority interest was reduced from $105 to $72 per share after Neumont announced a $33 cash dividend to all shareholders, including Ivanhoe.

A hearing is scheduled for Wednesday, six days after the original offer was to expire.

Ivanhoe also is seeking a temporary restraining order in a San Francisco appeals court to quash Gold Fields' purchase of Neumont stock that gave it more than 49 percent ownership in Neumont.

So far, about 6.2 million shares had been tendered to Ivanhoe, the Pickens group said.

Pickens, who has been pursuing Neumont through Ivanhoe Partners since September, has said he bought close to 7 million shares of Neumont stock at an average share price of $64.25.

With the $218 million drop in Ivanhoe's investment, Pickens, who owns 45 percent interest in Ivanhoe, has thus far lost about $98 million on the stock purchase, analysts said.

Faith helps preacher's children capture adult would-be burglar

DALLAS (AP) — A Pentecostal preacher says his 10-year-old daughter's religious convictions gave her the strength to help capture a prowler in their home with a scream of rebuke.

When Keidra Bowles and her 15-year-old brother Shaun returned from school and found a man carrying a computer from their father's study, the two refused to allow him to get away.

"Somebody broke into our house two other times and attempted it once," said Shaun, who was bitten and beaten with a tire iron during a struggle with the man. "This was the fourth time. I wasn't going to let this one get away."

Shaun chased the suspect out of the house, and as the man raised the tire toward her brother, his sister went into action.

Keidra screamed, "I rebuke thee in the name of Jesus!"

Dumbfounded, the man "kind of began tripping over his shoes and I jumped him from behind," knocking him to the ground, Shaun said Wednesday.

The children's father — Irving Bowles, an information analyst for IBM Corp. and a Pentecostal preacher — drove into the driveway minutes later and tied the man's arms with the chain.

When police arrived at the scene Tuesday afternoon, they found Joseph Greg Brockman lying face down in the family's back yard, his hands secured by a chain from a child's swing set. The elder Bowles was sitting on the man's back.

Joseph Greg Brockman, 31 was charged with burglary of a residence and was held in the Dallas County jail in lieu of $10,000 bond, officials said.

Bowles, who said his daughter believes it is Satan who prompts people to do evil things, said he was proud of his children's actions and was "thanking God" no one was hurt seriously.

But next time, he says he wants his children to do "the smart thing — get out of the house."

Gramm: Dam no threat to snakes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Uncle Sam shouldn't have to build a multimillion-dollar home for West Texas water snakes, the state's junior U.S. senator says.

Biologists for the Colorado River Municipal Water District have found the Concho River water snake is not threatened by construction of Stacy Dam on the Colorado River, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm said Thursday.

Earlier this year, Fish and Wildlife Service officials ordered the district to study the snake's environment and to construct an alternative habitat for it at an estimated cost of $3.5 million, said Gramm, R-Texas.

"Recent reports from biologists working for the local water district have concluded that the snakes thrive in areas both in and around the Stacy Reservoir water basin and that they will continue to thrive regardless of the new reservoir," Gramm said.

"The evidence is now overwhelming and it clearly demonstrates that the Concho River water snake is alive and well in the Permian Basin. For this reason, local ratepayers should not be required to foot the bill for creating new habitats for the snake," he said.

Gramm outlined his concerns in a letter to Fish and Wildlife Service Director Frank Dunkle, questioning whether the current plan is fair to local residents and urging Dunkle to reconsider the stringent permit requirements.

O. H. Ivie, general manager for the water district, said more than 500 snakes have been found in the vicinity of the reservoir and living in nearby lakes and reservoirs.

"We have made a study and we have been delighted with our initial findings," he said, adding that the district will continue its work on the snakes' habitat, study of its food sources and hibernation conditions.

"But if the senator feels like there's been enough snakes found to go back to Fish and Wildlife, more power to him. We're with him," Ivie said.

The Stacy Reservoir is expected to cost $70 million to build and would provide water to six major West Texas cities — Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Abilene, Snyder and San Angelo.

Rehabilitation patients identify with doctor

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP)—The new medical director at the Rehabilitation Institute of West Florida doesn't get much guff from his patients.

"They can't turn back on me and say, 'You don't know how I'm feeling,'" Dr. Shane VerVoort said. "I really feel pain for the patients and what they are going through."

The 32-year-old physician knows the patients' perspective because his arms and legs have been at least partially paralyzed since he was 18, the result of an automobile accident near his hometown of Lawrenceville, Ga.

But his experience as a patient doesn't make him a softy. VerVoort said he also knows that patients sometimes need to be pushed to move forward in their rehabilitation from head and spinal cord injuries, amputations and other disabilities.

There's less argument when the push comes from someone who himself is in a wheelchair.

"They can tell by looking at him he knows where they came from," said Dr. Bayard Miller, senior neurosurgeon at the West Florida Medical Center Clinic and chairman of the selection committee that hired VerVoort in June.

"If I come up and say, 'I know what you are going through,' they don't believe a thing I say," Miller said.

VerVoort is believed to be the first person suffering from quadriplegia to enter and complete medical school.

He has what is known as incomplete quadriplegia and has regained substantial movement in his hands and arms. He can walk with braces, but it is very slow going, so he uses a motorized wheelchair to scoot up and down the institute's corridors.

"It kind of struck me weird at first," said patient James Scott of Bay Minette, Ala. "It took a little getting used to."

Scott, undergoing rehabilitation for quadriplegia after breaking his neck in a diving accident, said VerVoort is an inspiration to the patients because he hasn't let his disability stop him from accomplishing his goals.

VerVoort said he had always dreamed of being a doctor.

Old farm-implement seats more colorful than comfortable

BEAVERVILLE, Ill. (AP)—Paul Fortin's colorful collection of antique farm-implement seats is a lot more fun to look at than to sit on.

"They were hard riding and hot, too, so we'd fill a sack of straw to make sitting a little easier," said Fortin, 72, a retired farmer. "Nowadays, combines are air-conditioned and heated, they have stereo, and the seats are cushioned — no comparison."

Cast in iron, the 425 seats from old plows and planters have intricate stencil-like openings in the metal that create custom designs, as well as the names of the manufacturers.

They're bolted to boards on vertical racks that fill a garage and a storage building on Fortin's farm in Iroquois County.

The seats originally came from nearby places like Quincy and Peru, and from foreign foundries in France and Canada.

Missouri collector John Friedly, author of books about antique-implement seats, estimates there are more than 2,000 different models. A common seat might bring $25 and a rare one could cost $2,500 or more, he said.

"Each company wanted to outdo the other and go for more style," said Friedly. "Collecting them gives you something from a bygone era, some memories."

The Fortin collection includes a rare Case Plow Works seat, painted red with white lettering: "Pat. Feb. 26, 1876."

There's a red Keystone with the gray letters backwards so they could be read by someone behind the implement, and a blue Robot Limited Potato Planter seat made for two riders.

The green Bamford seat from England has yellow lettering and includes a cast image of a lion, and another seat lifts up to reveal a small tool storage box.

Corn planters had two seats: a large driver's seat for the farmer and a small round seat for his wife or child, who dropped the seed into the soil.

Fortin has the small ones as well as a row of the main seats from Vandiver of Quincy, each carrying its date of manufacture — 1870, 1871, 1872. A place on the display rack has been prepared for the 1873 model, but "I don't have one yet."

One of his personal favorites is the St. Paul Plow seat.

"I wanted that one real bad, and a fellow said he'd let me have it on one condition: I'd never paint it," said Fortin.

It now stands out from the rest in natural iron.

Fortin and his wife, Opal, have traveled all over the country to get seats from dealers and other collectors at shows and swap meets.

"Usually, they are rusty, muddy and maybe cracked when we bring them home," said Fortin. "We clean them up and paint them."

He does the base color, and his wife uses a tiny brush to trim the openings and the letters with another color. One of the most beautiful is a blue-and-gray Sunrise seat with white letters and a sunburst pattern in orange and yellow.

The Fortin collection also includes cast-iron accessories from the antique implements — tool boxes, tools and planter lids.

Suspect nabbed in bank holdup

HARLINGEN (AP)—Police arrested a man suspected in the holdup of a local bank shortly after the heist, officials say.

The man entered Valley National Bank Wednesday, pulled a pistol and then stole several thousand dollars, police said.

The man wearing a bandana, sunglasses and a cap told employees not to call police, said Ross Hardin, the bank's executive vice president.

Ricardo Solis, 30, of San Benito, was arrested and charged with aggravated robbery.

Market crash nothing compared to future, author claims

By WENDY E. LANE
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP)—Dr. Ravi Batra, who authored a best-selling book called "The Great Depression of 1990," says last week's stock market convulsions are nothing compared to what lies ahead.

The crash of the U.S. stock market and the worldwide turmoil have brought Batra's alarming forecasts into sharper focus and resulted in a flurry of speeches and interviews, including an appearance on ABC-TV's "Donahue."

The best-seller by Batra, an economics professor at Southern Methodist University, paints a picture of widespread unemployment, deflation, stock market crashes and bank failures beginning worldwide in 1990 and lasting six to eight years.

"I got so many calls Monday (after the Dow Jones Index of industrial stocks fell 508 points), and

I told them this is just a mild foretaste of things to come," he said. "The wild swings we saw on Black Monday are like storm warnings of the coming hurricane."

While most mainstream economists attest to the overall health of the U.S. economy, Batra says too few people have too much of the wealth, a condition that can only lead to disaster.

What he calls "the worst economic crisis in history" will be far more devastating than that of the 1930s, beginning late in 1989 with a freefall of the dollar and rapid rise of the yen.

"That will send panic waves in Japan, leading to a stock market crash there," he said. "From there it will be just a matter of weeks before the crash spreads to all over the world."

Batra predicts there will be two more "mini-crashes," similar to Monday's stock market collapse, before the big one of 1990. And in the coming months, he said, "you will see the governments of America, Germany and Japan getting together to chalk out some kind of coordinated policy to lower interest rates. That will calm market fears."

Then the market will again shoot upward, forming what Batra calls a speculative bubble.

Reactions to Batra's fearful forecasts vary. Following two of the many speeches he has given since the book's publication earlier this year, teamsters in Pennsylvania gave a standing ovation, while businessmen in Texas coughed nervously or dismissed his ideas entirely. Among those at one of his Dallas gatherings were the Hunt brothers.

But "The Great Depression of 1990" has been on the New York Times bestseller list since early July, reaching as high as No. 3, and has garnered its author coverage in almost every major publication and appearances on television and radio.

The book's success has spurred Batra, 44, to begin a second book which elaborates on his first effort with what he says is additional advice on how individuals can protect themselves and policy changes that can avert the crisis.

After a flood of letters from readers expressing concern about the current state of the economy, Batra this month launched "a grass roots movement to cure our economy" called Stop Another Depression (SAD). Brochures printed by Batra urge citizens to write legislators and form groups to "get the word out that another depression is coming."

The economist, who devotes a chapter to policy changes that he claims can thwart a depression, also will appear before a Senate subcommittee next month to discuss his ideas.

To prove his theories, Batra draws parallels between events in the 1920s leading up to the depression and current economic conditions.

Sole survivor of boxcar tragedy turns in brother of 'El Chapulin'

EL PASO (AP)—The sole survivor of 18 illegal aliens who died after being locked in a railroad boxcar led authorities to the brother of notorious alien-smuggler "El Chapulin."

Arturo Hernandez Garcia was arrested July 8 in Fort Worth based on information given by the survivor of the Sierra Blanca boxcar tragedy, U.S. Border Patrol spokesman Michael Wheat said Wednesday.

The 32-year-old man has been sentenced to 18 months in federal prison for smuggling three Peruvian Nationals from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, to Fort Worth in a railroad boxcar, Wheat said.

Miguel Tostado Rodriguez was the lone survivor among 19 illegal aliens trying to sneak across the border in a locked, airtight boxcar. Authorities believe the still-missing "El-Chapulin" is responsible for the Sierra Blanca railroad boxcar tragedy that took the lives of 18 illegals.

A U.S. Marshal picked up Garcia from an El Paso detention center and will determine in which federal penitentiary Garcia will serve his sentence.

Pampa hosts Dumas in annual homecoming game

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

PHS head coach Dennis Cavalier isn't sure if it's homecoming or halloween which has affected Harvester football practice this week. Even if it's neither, one or both, Cavalier is still concerned about the lackluster practice sessions.

"Practice has definitely not been good this week," Cavalier said. "There's been no drive or intensity."

Cavalier is just hoping the Harvesters snap their lethargy by tonight's 7:30 p.m. kickoff against Dumas in Harvester Stadium. He feels the Demons are on a par with Borger and better than Levelland despite their 2-5 record.

"Dumas has some excellent athletes in many of their positions," Cavalier said. "Overall, they're not very big, but I'm very impressed with their athletic ability."

One of their better athletes is speedy running back Cliff Williams, who has ran for 742 yards so far this season. The 180-pound junior rushed for 109 yards and a 52-yard touchdown in a 33-12 loss to district co-leader Lubbock Estacado and had 92 yards and two touchdowns in a 27-12 win over Class 5A Caprock.

"Williams is an outstanding back. They move him around to different places, so we're going to have to pay close attention to him," Cavalier said.

Maybe the most versatile of the Demons is Victor Tarin, a two-way starter.

"Tarin plays both fullback and tight end and is also a great defensive player. As a team, Dumas does great on defense. We could have a tough time moving the chains against them," Cavalier said.

Pampa came close to its first win of the season last week in a 28-17 loss to Levelland.

"I thought after last week's performance, we might be more determined, but it hasn't been that way at all," Cavalier said. "I've never been around here on homecoming weekend before and I don't know how the players respond. I know we have a lot of players involved in a lot of things this week."

Pampa was leading 17-14 early in the fourth quarter when Levelland scored twice to nail down the win.

Dumas also came close to downing Levelland before losing a 20-17 decision in a Sept. 18 game.

has a sprained big toe," Cavalier said.

Pampa Threshers thump Valley View

In what Coach Rod Porter called a "complete team effort," the Pampa freshmen Threshers rolled to a 28-8 win over Valley View Thursday night.

Pampa lifted its record to 4-3 with two games remaining on the schedule.

Reserves played most of the second half as the Threshers built a 20-0 halftime lead. Pampa used nine different ballcarriers during the game.

"I could probably name 25 guys who played well. It was complete team effort," Porter said.

Leading Pampa's rushing attack was Quincy Williams with three touchdowns, including a 60-yard punt return.

Williams also had scoring runs of 1 and 14 yards. Quarterback Guy Savage scored the Threshers other TD on a three-yard sneak play. Offensive lineman Bryan Ellis provided the key block on Savage's run.

"Savage also played linebacker and it was probably his best game of the season," Porter said.

Savage also passed for conversion points to Brad Hoover and Steve Sanders.

The Threshers will try for revenge against Borger and Canyon in the final two games of the season. Borger and Canyon posted victories in the first round of district play, but the Threshers have both opponents at home this time.

"I feel like we're capable of beating them this time around," Porter said.

Pampa hosts Borger at 4:30 p.m. Nov. 5 before closing out the season Nov. 12 against Canyon, starting at 5 p.m.

In an eighth-grade game, Pampa also defeated Valley View 19-8 Thursday night.

Aaron Frye's 20-yard pass to Brandon Wells and Phillip Sexton's 4-yard run gave Pampa its first two touchdowns. Jason Levi capped off the scoring with a 70-yard run. Wells kicked an extra point for the Patriots, who are now 2-3 overall and 1-1 in district play.

Pampa seventh-graders defeated Valley View 22-14 in a game played earlier in the week.

"This was probably the seventh-graders best game of the season" said Pampa Coach Dick Dunham. "Both our seventh and eighth graders played with a lot of determination and intensity."

Pampa's first score came when Jason Brantley blocked a punt and Dennis Graham recovered the ball in the end zone.

Brantley scored on a 55-yard run for Pampa's second TD and Rocky Ferguson closed out the scoring with a 4-yard run.

Graham and Jason Johnson scored conversion points for Pampa.

The Pampa seventh-graders are also 2-3 and 1-1. They host Borger at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday at Harvester Stadium.

Phillip Sexton (32) scored a Patriot TD.

Pampa-Dumas football series has some memorable moments

HOMEcoming, 1987. If not tonight, Lucille, when? Same time next year? It's time to bring this industrial strength losing streak to a halt. Twenty in a row is sufficient to stand the test for several lifetimes. Even streakers like DiMaggio, Gehrig, Rose, Molitor, Joe Birtz would have to admit that. So let's finish the slump off tonight and make it a happy Homecoming.

With Canyon and Estacado left on the schedule, it's either now or another 0-10 and 23 straight, and counting.

Only the outside possibility of halting that streak makes the game interesting. The two least offensive teams in District 1-4A are, fortunately, as equally inept on defense, which means someone should score. While building a 2-5 record, Dumas' non-demonic offense has tallied 117 points, out-lacklustered only by Pampa's 60. The Harvester defense has been punctured for 247 points, the same total Swede Lee's 2-8 squad issued 20 seasons ago. The 372 point record allowed by the 1967 team appears safe until you realize the offensive ability of those final two opponents, and wonder what malice lies in their hearts. Dumas hasn't been effective at the goal line, either, allowing 194 points, third worst in the District.

The series, although involving only 21 meetings, contains a couple of significant moments. One, the 1967 69-6 beating administered by Dumas in 1967 is the worst in PHS history. Then there is one of those quarrelsome asterisks surrounding Pampa's 28-7 win at Dumas in 1979. That was the night PHS Coach Danny Palmer was having so much fun he elected to suit up four players who had played in a JV game the night prior against Borger, getting at least one of them into the Dumas affair, getting caught violating UIL "one game every five days" rule, resulting in a forfeit of the win. On the field, the series is tied 10-10-1; with the asterisk, it is a 9-11-1 set.

Dumas Coach Barry Coffman is about as even in the series as he can get. He has broken even in four meetings, winning and losing one game at each field. He was expecting better things this year, thanks to some size and a twinge of experience. The Ding Dong Daddies started out right on schedule, downing Caprock and Perryton before being nipped by Levelland. But then came the killer part of the schedule...Canyon, Estacado, Hereford and Borger, stretching the losing streak to five straight.

The "Great Victories" wall in the PHS Athletic Building still stands un-graffitied. A game effort last week at Levelland had to scare Lobo Coach Gene Mayfield, and maybe the Harvesters, too, who led for the second time this season, and as late as the second half.

Get the brush and paint bucket ready.

CHAFF: Contrary to what your printed schedule might say, the Jayvee Shockers play at Dumas at 10 a.m. Saturday in other action Saturday, the DISTRICT CHAMPION volleyballers close the regular season by hosting Estacado at 2 p.m. at McNeely Fieldhouse; girl's golf ends the fall season at Borger; tennis competes in the regional tournament at Lubbock; cross country is in the regional meet at Lubbock.

The three schools in the Bermuda Triangle of Texas Schoolboy football now have a combined 0-22, scoring 153 points while allowing 918. PHS has improved its total offense TD ratio, needing 202 yards per touchdown (178 over the last three games), while opponents need only 74 yards total offense to score six points (68 over last three games). The last three 0-7 starts resulted in 0-10 seasons—1960, 1967, 1986.

Dalhart ended a 10-game losing streak last weekend with a win over Boys Ranch. The Ranchers got some relief from the UIL Legislative Council last week, as suggested in this column last May. Also endorsed was a summer camp proposal presented by PHS basketball coach Robert Hale.

It's losing streak now at 39 straight, ninth longest in Texas schoolboy history, McLean HS mercifully draws an open date this weekend.

Harvesters are looking toward Vernon as a possible season opener next year.

Rumors have the UIL increasing current enrollment figures by 50 for new district realignment, which could throw both Canyon and high schools into 3A, since submitted figures were 715 and 751. Pampa submitted 1,156 average ADA for redistricting, official designation to be announced in mid-January, with presumably a 30-day period for filing protests. Next district meeting is Nov. 19, in Canyon, and you can bet that will be a major topic of discussion.

Former Harvester sports star Bill Tidwell and wife Geneva are beaming as their grandson, Greg, a junior football baseball athlete at Midland Lee HS was one of the heroes in the rescue of Baby Jessica. A regular summertime visitor in Pampa, Greg was down in the hole helping with the rescue as he worked at the scene around the clock for his neighbors.

With no special events apparently scheduled for PHS alumni, isn't the reason they call it Homecoming because when the high school students leave for the game the parents inquire, "When are you coming home?"

Tigers' Anderson named AL Manager of the Year

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Sparky Anderson, whose gospel of character and chemistry guided the Detroit Tigers to the best regular-season record in baseball, has been voted American League Manager of the Year.

The award, Anderson's second in four years, was announced Thursday by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"This is the most special one to me," Anderson, whose mother was undergoing surgery on the West Coast, said in a statement released by the team. "I don't have to do one other thing in my career. I've had it all."

Anderson, who also was named Manager of the Year in 1984 when the Tigers won the World Series, received 11 first-place votes and a total of 90 points in balloting by a panel of two BBWAA members from each AL city.

Tom Trebelhorn of the Milwaukee Brewers was second with 78 points and seven first-place votes, followed by Tom Kelly of the World Series champion Twins with 74 points and 10 first-place votes.

Balloting was done on the basis of regular-season performance only. Each panel member was asked to vote for three managers with five points awarded for a first-place vote, three for second and one for third.

Tony LaRussa of the Oakland Athletics finished a distant fourth with eight points, followed by Doc Edwards of Cleveland and Lou Piniella of New York with one point apiece.

John McNamara of Boston won the award last year.

The Tigers, who were 9-20 in spring training, were picked to finish no better than third, but Anderson, because he had good pitching, felt this was a better team than the 1984 club that won 104 games.

He was almost right. The 1987 Tigers won 98 games, including five of their last six to nip the Toronto Blue Jays by two games in one of the most stirring stretch drives in recent years.

"Maybe we weren't that good," said pitcher Dan Petry, whom Anderson relegated to the bullpen. "But he was making those bold statements. He felt we had the chemistry. He believed in us."

The chemistry was no accident. The Tigers have been carefully put together by General Manager Bill Lajoie with Anderson's tastes in mind.

Pampa spikers to meet Lamesa

District 1-4A volleyball champion Pampa will meet Lamesa at 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 7 in bi-district play at Lubbock Coronado gym.

Dumas, the 1-4A runnerup, will meet Pecos in the second match.

The Lady Harvesters hosts Lubbock Estacado at 2 p.m. Saturday to close out the regular season. The Lady Harvesters have a perfect district record at 13-0 going into the season finale.

They may have gotten excited about Jim Kelly in Buffalo a year early.

After rallying from a 21-0 deficit to a 34-31 win in Miami last week, the Bills suddenly find themselves atop the AFC East standings, albeit with a 3-3 record that puts them in a tie with the Patriots, Jets and Colts.

This week they get another division leader, the 5-1 Redskins, and, befitting their previous status, find themselves as 4-point underdogs.

But watch Kelly against the Redskins' secondary, one of their more vulnerable areas. And watch the Bills' confidence level, which may be at an all-time high.

"After seeing that game, there's definitely no doubt that however many points we're down, we're definitely coming back," Kelly says.

And who has more incentive? The only team that can threaten the Redskins, the Giants, are four games behind them.

Tommy "Hit Man" Hearns makes ring history.

Hearns KO's Roldan for fourth crown

By TIM DAHLBERG
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Thomas Hearns has become the first fighter ever to win championships in four different weight classes, but he may never get a chance to fulfill another of his dreams.

"I'm a very proud young man right now," Hearns said Thursday night after knocking out Juan Domingo Roldan of Argentina to win the World Boxing Council middleweight title vacated by Sugar Ray Leonard after his April victory over Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

Hearns weathered some vicious punches as Leonard and Hagler looked on at the outdoor arena at the Las Vegas Hilton. Hearns knocked Roldan down four times while nearly hitting the canvas himself in a wild brawl that delighted a crowd of more than 10,000.

"I hope this brings not only Ray Leonard but also Marvin Hagler out of retirement," Hearns said.

But Hagler and Leonard weren't impressed by the challenge.

"The only reason I would come out of retirement is for Ray," said Hagler, who was a color commentator for the closed-circuit television broadcast.

"I don't have any interest in Tommy," Leonard said. "I'm happy for him, but that's all."

Leonard said Hearns' preoccupation with the rematches nearly cost him the fight.

"I figure he was trying to be impressive with Marvin and my being there," said Leonard, who knocked Hearns out in their welterweight title fight in September 1981. "Thomas was hurt bad, but Roldan didn't have the kind of ring generalship he needed to put him away."

Roldan, who never slowed his powerful attack even after being knocked down twice by Hearns in the first round and again in the second, won the third and was on the verge of getting back into the fight as the fourth began.

Only seconds into the round, a Roldan left hook buckled Hearns' legs and almost dropped him. He managed to hold on, however, and quickly regained his senses.

Less than a minute later, Hearns came back with a hard right to the side of Roldan's face that backed him up. Hearns pressed the attack, finally landing another huge right that sent Roldan down face first. He was counted out at 2:01.

"I was conscious that I was down, but I was really hurt," Roldan said through an interpreter. "It didn't make any sense to get up."

"This man is an animal," a weary Hearns said of the dangerous Roldan. "He was very strong. I landed some good shots and he shook them off."

Hearns, 159½ pounds, first won a portion of the welterweight title with an August 1980 knockout of Pipino Cuevas. He later won a 154-pound crown and added a third title in March when he took the WBC light heavyweight crown from Dennis Andries.

"My dream has been accomplished," the 29-year-old Hearns said. "One thing for sure, I have something Ray Leonard doesn't have and I have something Marvin Hagler doesn't have. I have something no other man in the history of boxing has ever had."

Roldan, meanwhile, said he is calling it quits after a career that saw him win 63 fights, 41 by knockout, while suffering four losses and two draws.

Roldan, also 159½, had his last loss on March 1984, a 10th-round knockout at the hands of Hagler in their middleweight title fight.

In another title fight on the card, Charles Williams of Philadelphia shocked Bobby Czyz to take his International Boxing Federation light heavyweight crown with a ninth-round knockout.

Syracuse having visions of major bowl invitation

By The Associated Press

With visions of an undefeated season and major bowls dancing in their heads, ninth-ranked Syracuse faces a trick or treat against Pittsburgh on Saturday.

Pitt Coach Mike Gottfried witnessed Syracuse's most impressive football victory in years — a 48-21 win over Penn State two weeks ago.

"I watched about eight plays, then I went to the mall," Gottfried said. "I didn't want to see any more. ... I'd seen enough."

Gottfried also has seen more than enough of Syracuse quarterback Don McPherson on film to last him the rest of the season. The thought of McPherson sprinting away from a couple of pursuing Pitt linebackers to launch a 60-yard pass is enough to frighten any coach, especially one whose team must play the Orangemen on Halloween.

In other Top 20 games Saturday it's No. 1 Oklahoma vs. Kansas; No. 2 Nebraska vs. Missouri; No. 3 Miami, Fla. vs. East Carolina; No. 6 Auburn vs. No. 10 Florida; No. 7 Clemson vs. Wake Forest; No. 8 UCLA vs. Arizona State; No. 9 Notre Dame vs. Navy; No. 13 Tennessee vs. Boston College; No. 14 Clemson vs. Wake Forest; No. 15 Ohio State vs. No. 20 Michigan State; No. 16 Alabama vs. Mississippi State; No. 17 Oklahoma State vs. Kansas State; No. 18 Penn State vs. West Virginia; No.

19 South Carolina vs. North Carolina State.

No. 12 Georgia is idle. McPherson has completed 85 of 145 passes for 1,509 yards and a school-record 14 touchdowns. He was 15 of 20 for 336 yards and three touchdowns against Penn State.

The Panthers, 5-2, are considered the toughest remaining opponent for the Orangemen, who close out the season against Navy, Boston College and West Virginia.

The bulk of the Panthers' offense has been 260-pound tailback Craig "Ironhead" Heyward, the nation's third-ranked rusher with 920 yards.

No. 1 Oklahoma at Kansas

The 85th consecutive year of the longest uninterrupted rivalry in major-college football. Although Kansas won the first eight games, the series stands 55-23-6 in favor of Oklahoma.

No. 2 Nebraska at Missouri. Mizzou handed Tom Osborne his first head coaching setback, 13-12 in 1973, and usually plays the Cornhuskers tough. Nebraska is averaging 364.6 yards rushing, but Missouri is tough on the run allowing 121.3 yards a game.

No. 3 Miami, Fla. at East Carolina

After this week, the Hurricanes play Miami, Ohio, Virginia Tech and Toledo before finishing with Notre Dame and South Carolina.

Coach Jimmy Johnson says any bowl selection will be decided after the game with the Irish.

No. 4 Florida State vs. Tulane. FSU's only other game on Halloween was a 42-0 loss to Georgia in 1959. No such scares are expected from Tulane.

No. 5 LSU at Mississippi. The 1959 Halloween game featured the most famous play in LSU history as Billy Cannon returned a punt 89 yards for the only touchdown in a 7-3 victory.

No. 6 Auburn at No. 10 Florida. The Tigers, 6-0-1, will have their hands full with Florida, 5-2. Florida is the only Southeastern Conference team to have a winning record (4-2) over the Tigers in coach Pat Dye's previous six years at Auburn. No. 7 UCLA at Arizona State. The Bruins are 3-0 in Sun Devil Stadium and are out to avenge last year's 16-9 loss. ASU must win to have a shot at returning to the Rose Bowl.

Rams say Dickerson still unable to play

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP)—The Los Angeles Rams say All-Pro running back Eric Dickerson is "physically and mentally unable to play" Sunday against the San Francisco 49ers.

Dickerson, unhappy with a contract that pays him more than $680,000 per year through 1989, was not available for comment on the club's action Thursday, but fellow running back Charles White said it's probably for the best.

"I don't know if this is good for Eric, but it's probably good for the team not to have these negative forces around," White said.

Coach John Robinson said Dickerson, 27, will be reinstated "when he is 100 percent physically and mentally ready to play and we are assured that he is ready to resume his role on our team."

But Robinson's prepared statement did not deal with Dickerson's desire to be traded. He has expressed interest in going to Washington, Denver or Chicago. "Presently, we are not contemplating any other action," Robinson said.

Dickerson, a five-year veteran, has said he may not play as well since he's preoccupied with his salary. According to Robinson, Dickerson turned down an offer from the Rams that would have made him "the highest-paid running back in the NFL."

The dispute has dampened team spirit.

"I'm sure he is frustrated, hoping something will happen. I'm sure everybody wishes Eric was here, especially for a team like San Francisco," wide receiver Henry Ellard said.

"I'm sad for Eric," tight end David Hill said. "I'd hate to see him lose his zest for football. This might be the final straw, as far as his wanting to stay with the Rams."

Hearing-impaired can enjoy holiday album

By MEG REYNOLDS
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Deep, sustained tones and simple melodies are the keys to recording music the hard-of-hearing can enjoy, says a woman who has produced what may be the nation's first album of Christmas carols for the deaf.

"They don't just hear the beat — they hear the melody and the accompaniment... every last beautiful note," said Mary Callahan, 27, who lost her hearing suddenly 18 months ago for reasons doctors haven't determined.

The recording, "Christmas For All To Hear," was released recently by Easy Hearing Music, a small recording company Mrs. Callahan runs out of her home in Evanston, a north Chicago suburb. It features a bass violin and piano playing Yuletide melodies ranging from "Silent Night" to "What Child Is This?"

The carols are familiar ones to help hearing-impaired people discern the melody, Mrs. Callahan said.

"If your mind knows the music, you can help fill in the rest," she said.

But she said all hearing-impaired people except the profoundly deaf should be able to hear the carols clearly because they are arranged several octaves lower than usual, in a range still audible to most people with hearing problems.

She said she had tested sample recordings this year on hard-of-hearing groups in the Chicago area.

"As far as I know, (the recording) is the first of its kind, although I can't think why," said Carol Lingley, administrative director of Self Help for the Hearing Impaired, a national group with 25,000 members, based in Bethesda, Md.

The album, also available on cassette tape, will be advertised by mail in the group's bimonthly newsletter, which is sent to members of 225 chapters in 43 states, Lingley said.

"It's very unusual," said Diane Hottendorf, director of the Gallaudet University Dance Company in Washington, D.C. Gallaudet is a federally funded school for the hearing impaired.

Hottendorf said she used mostly popular rock music to accompany her hearing-impaired dancers, who rely on the vibrating bass notes for the beat.

Conventional classical and folk music recordings "basically don't work, because it's mostly too high-pitched," she said.

The recording of Christmas carols works because it plays music at a pitch most people with hearing loss can still detect, said Chicago audiologist Therese Velde, who was a consultant for the recording project.

An estimated 20 million people in the United States suffer from some form of impaired hearing, Lingley said. However, the majority — including those with hearing loss characterized as severe — have some hearing left in the lower frequencies, Velde said.

"Hearing-impaired people can hear uncomplicated things pretty clearly up to 1,000 hertz," or nearly two octaves above middle C on a piano, Velde said.

The bass violin plays warm, soothing tones at pitches no higher than 440 hertz.

The Christmas album grew out of a friend's recital Mrs. Callahan attended last December, eight months after she lost her hearing following a period of dizzy spells.

Doctors have been unable to pinpoint the cause of Mrs. Callahan's hearing loss, but speculate that a condition known as Meniere's disease may be responsible.

"I had tried to listen to 'The Little Drummer Boy' on an album that I had, and all I could hear was the bass and the drums," Mrs. Callahan said.

Then she was invited by a musician friend, a bass violinist, to attend his recital of Christmas music.

"I heard every note," she said. Mrs. Callahan plans more recordings, and said her next project was likely to be an album of popular songs, followed by one of well-known classical works.

"I'd give anything to hear Dvorak's 'New World Symphony' again," she said.

PVC tube bird feeder is an easy and inexpensive project for family do-it-yourselfing.

Children can help assemble bird feeder from PVC pipe

By BOB SAWYER

Our family has signed up for a foreign language course: bird-calling. If you've ever studied Japanese or Russian, you'll know what we're up against.

The way we see it, Bird is more practical than any other foreign tongue. How many of you have a yard full of Japanese?

To help attract feathered conversationalists, we are also working together to assemble some bird feeders and houses. All of this togetherness was like pulling teeth at first, but we have found that the kids really respond to creative do-it-yourselfing.

Our first project was a very simple tube feeder made of PVC pipe mounted on a wooden base. It can be put together in an hour or two, providing the instant gratification so important to kids.

Our step-by-step plans include materials lists, full-size patterns and illustrated cutting and assembly instructions. They are included in our special bird-houses and feeders pack, containing complete plans for 14 terrific projects, from very simple to very challenging.

To order, specify the bird-houses pack, No. 4010, and send $19.95. Mail to: Makin' Things with Kids, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008.

A tube feeder can be made from scraps of material you have on hand. We used a 20-inch length of 1x6 wood, a 10-inch length of 4-inch PVC pipe, a 3-inch length of 1/2-inch pipe, a 1/2-inch end cap and a 6-inch square of 1/2-inch-thick clear thermoplastic.

The wooden base is a simple right angle. The upright is 7 inches long and the floor is 12 inches long. Set the upright on the base, flush with one end, and secure with glue and screws.

The length of 4-inch PVC pipe is the feed container. It sits on the base at an angle, flush against the upright and angling down so that its lower front end rests on the floor.

Cut both ends of the pipe at an angle of about 15 degrees, so that the length along the top edge is about 7 inches. Test it for fit on the base before proceeding.

The smaller pipe is inserted into a hole in the top of the larger pipe to serve as an intake opening for the feed. Measure the outside diameter of the 1/2-inch pipe. Drill a hole that size in the top of the feeder pipe, centered about 2 inches from the back end (the end that will butt against the base upright).

Glue the smaller pipe into the hole, extending mostly above it. Place the end cap on top but do not glue it — you will have to remove it to fill the feeder.

Cut a piece of plastic to cover the front of the feed tube, leaving an opening at the bottom for the feed to flow through.

Paint the PVC if you like, or leave it as is. Glue it to the wooden base, with the back end flush against the upright. Secure with screws inserted through the upright into the tube.

Correspondence course on genealogy offered

A revised and updated edition of "American Genealogy," the correspondence course offered by the National Genealogical Society, is now available.

This course is recommended for amateur and professional genealogists. It covers how to find the vital records needed to prove descent and how to evaluate and document your findings. Other records covered are: family, census, probate, church, cemetery, probate and wills, land and tax, and military, emphasizing the need for a systematic search of these records.

If you are a member of the National Genealogical Society, indicate this membership on your application in order to receive a discount on the tuition. Addition-

Genealogical Books in Print, 6818 Lois Drive, Springfield, Va. 22150, has published the fourth edition of the directory "Genealogical and Local History Books in Print." The cost for the two-volume set is $30, including postage and handling.

This is a good reference book to use in the libraries, and most facilities with a genealogical selection have a copy. Some of the categories are: general reference, research sources by locality, family genealogy section, and names and addresses of vendors.

I use the family genealogy section for my own research as well as an aid in answering various questions from readers. Many people are surprised at the family histories already published, and often the families connect four and five generations back on the lineage chart. This section is indexed by surnames found in each publication and not simply by the title of the book.

If you send a book to me for review, please include postage for its return. If you do not want the book returned and will indicate a donation, I will send a letter from the library or genealogical society that I forward the book to in your name. This is an allowable charity deduction. Remember, books make excellent gifts for family members, and Christmas is not far away!

Thieves unlikely to return personal items

DEAR ABBY: Some woman wrote to say she got "ripped off" when a thief stole her purse. It contained her wallet, driver's license, credit cards, irreplaceable pictures of her children when they were babies, prescription glasses, address book, bank book, etc. And you suggested that maybe the thief will be decent enough to keep the cash and return the other items that are of use only to the owner. Get real, Abby.

The last decent thief was the one that hanged on the cross beside Christ. He repented. The other thief didn't.

This woman is crying about losing baby pictures, the only ones she had of her children. (Good! They grew up faster than she did.)

Smart people don't carry anything of value around with them anymore. Lunch money should be the limit.

When will people get wise?
CITY WISE,
CARRIES NOTHING

DEAR CITY WISE: The letter from "Ripped Off" prompted many letters from readers who had this valuable message to thieves: "Keep the cash, but drop the purse and wallet into any postal box. It will be delivered to the owner who will be more than happy to pay the postage due."

***

DEAR ABBY: I always read your column and I will continue to, but I notice more and more of a tendency to "help" your readers too much and entertain them too little. Example: Today's column contained three worthwhile items — don't let strangers know your travel plans, the Red Cross lawn mower safety classes, and Alice Faye's free exercise plan for the elderly. All very good information and likely to benefit a lot of people.

Abby, I won't belabor the point. But if you become just another column of "safety advice," you might bore readers to the point where they won't read it — and then who benefits?

CAROLE R., ITASCA, ILL.

DEAR CAROLE: Thanks for writing. I can always learn, and appreciate the nudge. Readers? Drop me a line and let me know what you like and what you don't like about my column.

***

DEAR ABBY: Last week I hosted a party at my home to which some 75 co-workers had been personally invited. The party was to honor a much-loved employee who is leaving the area to take a new job. I invited people on all levels of the company — from executives to the mailroom staff. They all knew Marilyn and liked her.

Do you know how many responded to the R.S.V.P.? Fifteen out of 75 said they would be there. I estimated that 25 or 30 people would show. Eight showed up! I even had jumbo shrimp left over. I've given parties and invited total strangers and had a better response. I would have saved a lot by just writing Marilyn a check for $500. I hope some of the 60 who didn't bother to say yes or no will recognize themselves.

My question: Is an R.S.V.P. meaningless anymore?
PUZZLED IN DELAWARE

DEAR PUZZLED: People with manners acknowledge every invitation. Believe it or not, many people do not know that "R.S.V.P." means "Please respond with your acceptance or refusal."

Perhaps it should be spelled out more clearly: "Please call and let me know whether you are coming or not." Then a few days before the party, the hostess should contact those who have not responded and ask if they plan to attend. This should not be necessary, but unfortunately, it is.

A Mighty Hunter

The story of the dog as a faithful hunter and companion for man is a fabulous one. Doubtless some of our very own ancestors were kept from starvation by the skill and service of the dog, finding game where no man could hunt it out, keeping at the chase when man would have given up. Small wonder that many authors have talked of God as a Mighty Hunter for man, but in a quite different way; the game in this case is man himself. God never gives up in His search for us no matter how we try to hide from Him. Wherever we go, there He will follow though it be the end of the earth. He follows because He loves and He will have nothing less than love in return. No one is shut out from His love; He stands at the door of every heart asking for entrance—only the individual can keep the door shut.

Is something wrong with your life—
an inner, restless dissatisfaction?
The answer to every human problem comes only from God our resourer. He alone can forgive and renew.
Through the church God has laminated the provisions and proceeding love. Without a church relation no one is securely related to God. Everyone should be in the one!

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: The Lord reigns, let the earth be glad; let the distant shores rejoice. (Psalm 97:1 NIV)

What a traumatic couple of weeks!
The country held its breath for days while drills ground agonizingly slowly through solid rock in a desperate effort to rescue a baby trapped in a dry well.

I ached for the young mother who could only wait helplessly when her baby cried out for her. Even now, a race is on to try to save the little girl's damaged foot — but her physical injuries may prove to be less severe than her long-term psychological wounds.

On the other side of the world, American military personnel were doing a perilous tap dance around all-out war in the Persian Gulf. I've tried to envision another world war, but my imagination isn't equal to the potential devastation.

In New York City, Wall Street led stampeding world Stock exchanges off a high cliff. My meager brain can't compute in terms of billions of dollars in losses. I don't understand why the ups and downs of the U.S. stock market affects the entire world economy. And since I don't own any stock, I sure don't understand why the falling stock market is a threat to my livelihood and lifestyle — but threatened I am, as is everyone.

Although much of the world situation is beyond my understanding, much less my control, I rest in one sure knowledge — God has things under control!

The same God who holds a hurt baby in his care also has absolute sovereignty over world peace and prosperity. The Lord reigns!

Calvary to host safe Halloween

Calvary Baptist Church, 900 E. 23rd, will host its annual Halloween family night at 6:30 p.m. Saturday.

The party, which provides places where families can have a "safe, Christian environment," will feature a dart throw, a ring toss, cake walk, fish pond, duck pond, a ping-pong throw, a mystery booth and a concession stand.

Hungary seeks tie with its churches

NEW YORK (AP)—Communist Hungary's church affairs officer, Imre Miklos, says his government is seeking new ways to strengthen relations with churches "on the basis of mutual respect, patience and understanding."

"The experience of the past 40 years has made it clear that a socialist society such as ours cannot be built separately for believers and non-believers," he told a news conference.

Miklos, visiting the United States as a guest of the Appeal of Conscience Foundation, an ecumenical group that works to promote religious freedom, said Hungary's leader, Janos Kadar, has rejected "militant confrontation" with religion.

He wants "peaceful coexistence and creative cooperation," Miklos said.

'Lucky' gives laughter

By KELLY VARNER EBEL
Guest Religion Writer

A merry heart doeth good like a medicine: but a broken spirit drieth the bones. Proverbs 17:22.

This became one Pampa woman's philosophy on life, and after a lifetime of cheering people up — Bertha Winborne became a clown.

"Usually people want to be nurses or doctors when they grow up; I wanted to make people happy and put a little spirit into their lives. So, I became 'Lucky,' the clown," explains Winborne.

Winborne visits hospitals, nursing homes, schools and churches. She has even been known to attend an occasional Halloween party.

Her first appearance was for Lamar School during a school picnic. The bus took the children to Central Park where Winborne was waiting for them.

"They were thrilled!" says Winborne. "At first they wanted to pull my nose because they didn't know whether it was real or fake. Then I slid down the slide with them and we played and I just became one of them."

She has received as much enthusiasm from the older generation as well.

"I entered a hospital room and was about to shake the hand of an old man who had a bad case of the doldrums. When he saw me, his eyes lit up and he said, 'no, I don't want you to shake my hand, I want you to kiss me on my bald head!'"

Winborne says this is what makes it worthwhile. But it isn't always easy. There are times when she is sad even when suited up.

"It can be difficult because nobody wants to see a person bedridden and struggling. You have to pretend, you have to have a double image," she explains.

Depending on the Lord to pick her up is how she gets through these difficult times.

"If it wasn't for the Lord, I don't think I could go through with life," says Winborne.

The Lord plays a big part in her life and has blessed it richly. Many people are gifted with talents such as teaching or singing, and Winborne feels that being "Lucky" is her special talent from God.

Being a clown had always been her childhood fantasy, but only recently has that dream come to life. She began her clown act in 1984 at age 40.

Winborne was never considered the class clown in school. She was funny, but not in a bad way. She just has a comical personality.

"People were always telling me that I should be a clown because of my personality. I'm always joking around."

She decided to channel her comical nature in a positive way. She took her humor and compassion, put them together and became a clown. She's had a lot of help getting started.

C.L., her husband, has been her biggest supporter. Her mother-in-law, Wanda Winborne, made her costume, and the Knights of Columbus and The Pampa Mall donated candy and balloons for her last outing.

She dresses up as Lucky when she feels the need, and she seldom arrives by appointment. She just shows up carrying a bag and a giant fly swatter and wearing a big, red nose. This is exactly how she arrived at the Community Christian Church at 801 Campbell to surprise a group of delighted children.

She spent the next 30 minutes rummaging through her bag for fun and goodies which she passed out to the children. A couple of the children were especially tickled by her appearance.

Chris and Pam Teakell of Pampa agreed that Lucky was funny and made them laugh. "She makes me feel good inside," giggled Pam, and "she makes me have a better day," added Chris.

Next, Lucky made her way to the Pampa Nursing Home, where she greeted some senior residents who responded to her outfit and merriment in various ways.

Leona Fowler thought it a grand occasion. "It's something to see!" she exclaimed. Another resident, E.E. Clendenen, thought it was a wonderful thing to do. "It makes you feel happy inside!" burst Clendenen.

Slipping down the hall and into a third resident's room, Lucky greeted Daisy King, who returned a boisterous grin and a welcome handshake. "It sort of makes your day," revealed King as Lucky finished the rounds, careful not to leave anyone out.

The staff even got in on the fun as laughter is infectious. "It's hard not to smile if everyone around you is laughing," Wilber Irvine explained. "They always have frowns on their faces and it's great when you see smiles for a change. When they're happy, we're happy."

This proves that laughter causes a chain reaction. Happiness leads to happiness for yourself and others, but you don't have to be a clown to make people happy. A simple smile will suffice.

So, the next time you pass someone on the street, smile at them and I'll bet you two to one they smile back.

After all, "Laughter is the best medicine."

He has ministered at churches in Texas and North Carolina and was a professor of Old Testament at Brite Divinity School at Texas Christian University. He speaks at numerous national and regional assemblies, revivals and study groups.

Stewart earned a PhD from Duke University and is a Gureney Harris Kearns Fellow. He has degrees from the University of Georgia and Texas Christian University.

Bible Baptist to show film

A movie about 19th Century pioneer preacher Robert Sayers Sheffey will be presented at 7 p.m. today at the Bible Baptist Church.

Sheffey, a true story of the preacher's life and ministry is a production of Unusual Films, a ministry of Bob Jones University and is based on Sheffey's biography The Saint in the Wilderness, by Jess Carr.

The film focuses on the life of Robert Sheffey, who rode through Virginia, the Carolinas, Tennessee and Kentucky in the latter 19th Century, when much of the area was still wilderness.

During this time, there was great optimism about better times through education and social reform. Sheffey, who had both advantages, had an emptiness in his life which was filled through religion.

So, he saddled up and took the Good News to the poor, uneducated and outcast. His firm convictions about using "God's methods to do God's work" brought him up against the religious powers of the day.

The film covers 63 years in Sheffey's life and was made after extensive study into costume, speech and mannerisms of the period.

Africans suffering church report says

NEW YORK (AP)—Bac. from a fact-finding trip to Mozambique, a Church World Service team said both drought and terrorism by "banditos" has brought on severe hunger and suffering in that country.

In many ways, the situation is "more difficult and more tragic" than the emergency in Ethiopia in 1984-85, said J. Richard Butler, CWS executive director.

Cancer research uses yew tree bark

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) — When Dominic Daley revs up his light chainsaw each morning, he is helping cut a life-threatening disease down to size.

Daley, 38, collects Pacific yew tree bark for cancer research.

"Essentially, that's why I got into this work," he said. "If I can help with cancer research, I feel I could be making a small contribution."

Since early this past summer, he and a small crew have been gathering Pacific yew bark for $1.47 a pound, selling it to a Portland contractor who sells it to the National Cancer Institute.

Working in the Prospect and Butte Falls regions of the Rogue River National Forest, the crew already has gathered about 4,500 pounds of the bark, Daley said.

The air-dried bark is shipped to the institute's center in Bethesda, Md.

"I explained to everyone who works for me why we are doing it," Daley said. "Everyone has a good attitude about that. And we're making expenses."

The U.S. Forest Service's Region 6 national forests of Oregon and Washington have been asked to provide 60,000 pounds of yew bark for the institute, according to Bob Lease, chief of sale preparation evaluation in the agency's Portland office.

"Grants Pass is right in the center of the greatest concentration of the Pacific yew in the region," Lease said. "You'll find it all around in the Rogue River, Umpqua and the Siskiyou national forests."

Researchers are extracting a complex chemical compound known as taxol from the bark, according to NCI spokesman Dr. Gordon Cragg.

In the past three decades, the institute has tested more than 120,000 plants in search of chemicals that may destroy cancer cells. Taxol is one of 10 compounds that have been found to inhibit cell growth, researchers report, although they stress that further testing is required before the findings are confirmed.

Fourteen percent voter turnout seen

AUSTIN (AP) — Fourteen percent of Texas' 7.34 million registered voters will cast ballots Tuesday in the constitutional amendment election, Secretary of State Jack Rains predicted Wednesday.

"We believe turnout will be far higher than in past off-year elections. But that is still way too low," he said, noting that previous constitutional amendment elections have drawn 10 percent to 12 percent turnouts.

In addition to 25 proposed changes in the constitution, the ballot includes a binding referendum on the legalization of parimutuel betting on horse and dog racing.

Also on the ballot is a decision on whether to maintain the appointed State Board of Education or change it to an elected panel.

"I know a lot of people might think the constitutional amendments sound like a bunch of legalese gobbledygook, but what it's really about is $3 billion in bond debt and the future of our state," Rains said.

"It would make my day if this projection turns out to be on the low side, and we're going to be working hard to make that happen," Rains said.

World Bank reports on activities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hurt by charges it neglects the environment, the World Bank has put out a book-length report on the sites it has protected — from a treasure of ancient jade buried in Honduras to a Ugandan waterfall considered one of the wonders of the world.

The World Bank, owned by 151 governments, is the biggest source of aid to Third World countries. One form of aid consists of attracting free-spending tourists to some of the sites by helping build roads, hotels and other facilities.

Members of Congress and environmental organizations have attacked the bank's management for fostering development projects they say have destroyed precious forests in Brazil and Indonesia, among other countries.

The bank countered with a report of dozens of sites it has protected.

At Murchison Falls in Uganda, the river Nile forces itself through a gorge only 18 feet wide and crashes down 130 feet. Uganda and neighboring Kenya wanted a power project that would have drained 90 percent of the water from the spectacular falls and conveyed it to a hydroelectric station. A thousand workers were to have invaded the surrounding national park to do the job.

Partly because of objections made to the president of the World Bank, the project was put off. The deferral looks like it will be lasting.

"Uganda has a surplus of power at the present time," the report says.

The paper was written by Robert Goodland, senior environmental officer at the bank, and Maryla Webb, a consultant there, under the forbidding title: "The Management of Cultural Property in World-Bank Assisted Projects." But there are some fascinating brief stories in it.

Another hydroelectric project, El Cajon in Honduras, is still going forward — though apparently not all that fast — at an estimated cost of $493 million. Of that, $1.45 million has been put aside for archaeological work. The first surveys showed more than 120 settlements in the area from the time before Columbus reached the New World. All of them will be flooded when a dam is completed.

Meanwhile, the archaeologists have kept working. They say the sites could have been a crossroads of trade among several groups of people in prehistoric times, or there might even have been a whole political and social system as yet undiscovered.

The archaeologists have had plenty of time, especially because of delays in construction. Among the finds: one of the largest collections of jade religious objects ever found in America.

Elected board advocates confident of victory

AUSTIN (AP) — Proponents of an elected State Board of Education predict a ballot-box victory despite the big-money campaign of H. Ross Perot, who favors continuation of the appointed board now in place.

"We feel that the voice of the voters should be heard on the state level as well as on the local (school board) level," said Janis Petronis, a Coppas Cove school board member and president of the Texas Association of School Boards.

TASB was among several education groups that gathered for a Thursday news conference in support of voting "no" Tuesday on the State Board of Education question.

Texans decide Nov. 3 whether to maintain the appointed State Board of Education in place since the HB72 school reforms of 1984 or return to an elected board.

A "yes" vote on Referendum 1 is a vote for keeping the appointed board that is selected by the governor, working from nominees forwarded by legislative leaders.

"We do expect to win. We have a million people. We don't have a million dollars," said Sandy Kibby, legislative action chairman of the Texas PTA.

Perot, the Dallas billionaire who shepherded the HB72 reforms through the Legislature, is mounting a well-financed campaign, complete with television ads, in favor of keeping the appointed board. He has said a return to the elected board would undo much of the good done by the school reforms.

But "we have faith that the voters of Texas are capable of electing responsible representatives to the State Board of Education who will continue to strive for a quality educational system," Ms. Kibby said.

Also represented at the news conference were the Texas State Teachers Association, Texas Association of School Administrators, Texas High School Coaches Association and several other education groups.

Ms. Kibby said the appointed board now in place has done a good job, "but now the time has come to put the responsibility back in the hands of the voters."

"We want a State Board of Education that is accountable to the voters and not just to a small group of individuals who are responsible for their appointments," she said.

Jim Butler of TSTA acknowledged that the state's education system suffered under the old elected board.

"I think the problem was that a lot of people in the education community probably did not pay enough attention to the races. We're not going to let that happen again, and I don't think the citizenry is, given the level of interest and the level of attention that education has received in this state in the last three to five years," Butler said.

Police expect no more than pranks

LEVELLAND (AP) — Police are reassuring townspeople worried about reports of devil worshippers that Halloween will be no more dangerous than any other night.

For weeks, rumors have circulated about a group of devil worshippers who held satanic rituals that included the sacrificing of animals.

Authorities even found an abandoned farmhouse where the satanists purportedly met. But there was nary a drop of blood at the scene — only red paint and empty beer cans, said police investigator Tom McCain.

He said the walls were splattered with hand prints, upside-down crosses, pentagrams and 666, a biblical symbol for the Antichrist. McCain said phrases such as "Satan will forever be your savior" also adorned the walls.

But no dead animals or blood were found at the house, he said.

"The house had been shot up with guns and there were beer cans everywhere, but that's about the extent of it," McCain said.

He said the fire department later burned down the house at the request of the owner, who was concerned about liability problems.

McCain said that if the group is meeting somewhere else now, police have not heard where. He said the group has done nothing illegal that would warrant arrest.

"We are trying to stay abreast in this whole situation. We can't ignore it because if something were to happen, we would be blamed for not taking precautions or looking into it," he said Thursday.

Woody Herman is dead at 74

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Big band leader Woody Herman, who hit the charts in 1939 with "Woodchopper's Ball" and kept in tune with America for much of the next half-century playing bebop, funk, jazz and rock, is dead at 74.

The clarinetist died Thursday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center of cardiac arrest.

He had suffered for weeks from heart failure, emphysema and pneumonia, had been confined to a wheelchair and had fallen on hard times, narrowly averting eviction from his home with help from Hollywood's entertainment community.

Herman's best-known hits included "Apple Honey," "Northwest Passage" and "Caledonia" but he was never content to stick with his old standbys during a career that took him from smart ballrooms to African villages.

Through a series of young bands, usually dubbed "The Thundering Herd" for their fierce energy, Herman kept pace with a dizzying variety of styles.

In the 1960s, he played with Stan Getz and Neal Hefti, shared the bill with The Who and Dionne Warwick and played arrangements of the Doors' "Light My Fire."

"As both Duke Ellington and Igor Stravinsky have said, there are only two kinds of music: good ... and bad," he said in 1986, his 50th year as a band leader. "We're going to try like hell to play good, and it'll swing. I assure you of that."

Financial troubles marred his later years.

Herman lost his Hollywood Hills house, which he bought from Humphrey Bogart in 1946, in a 1985 Internal Revenue Service auction to recoup $1.6 million in back taxes, a situation he blamed on a personal manager with a gambling habit.

Herman had continued to rent from the man who bought it but was nearly evicted in August after falling behind.

Fans and celebrity friends such as Frank Sinatra and Clint Eastwood raised more than $70,000 toward the tax debt and back rent, organizing an all-star benefit in his honor Oct. 23 that drew musicians, singers, comedians and other celebrities.

"I'm glad that he doesn't have to suffer anymore and that he lived long enough to see that people really cared for him," said "Tonight" show orchestra leader Doc Severinsen.

Herman played an average of 27 halls and ballrooms a month into his 70s, saying he loved the music and needed the money. He last performed in March.

"The band stays young," he once said. "It's just the coach that got very old."

Herman's band played as scheduled Thursday night at Southwestern Iowa Community College in Creston, Iowa. "We'll do everything we can to keep the band going in his name," road manager and trumpeter Bill Berne said.

Herman was born Woodrow Charles Herman in Milwaukee, the son of a musician. By age 6, he was touring the vaudeville circuit as the "Boy Wonder of the Clarinet."

At 15, he dropped out of high school to tour with the Tom Gerun band, and grew up fast on the road during the Prohibition years. At 17, he was shot in the leg by a Chicago thug during a scuffle.

He formed the first of a succession of bands in 1936. Ten years later, he appeared at Carnegie Hall, and had his own radio show.

In 1945, Stravinsky wrote "Ebony Concerto" for Herman's band.

Herman's career flagged at times in the 1950s. At one point he did State Department tours in Africa.

Names in the news

DALLAS (AP) — Dancer Andrei Ustinov, who fled the Moscow Ballet in Dallas two weeks ago, makes his debut with the Dallas Ballet next month — as an honorary citizen of the city.

"Your decision to stay in the United States and this city was a supreme act of courage," Mayor Annette Strauss told Ustinov in awarding him honorary citizenship on Wednesday.

"Today, I speak English very bad," the 32-year-old dancer said. "Here (I find) freedom of artist and of my religion, my pleasure. Thank you very much."

Flemming Flindt, artistic director of the Dallas Ballet, said Ustinov will make his debut with the company Nov. 10.

"It was an enormous opportunity for the Dallas Ballet when he chose to begin his ballet career with us," Flindt said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Hope Lange returned to the stage a day after a fainting spell forced her to leave her role in the Gore Vidal play "The Best Man."
