Standoff continues at alien detention center

OAKDALE, La. (AP) — Hundreds of law enforcement officers settled in for "a long haul" today at a smoldering federal detention center where Cuban prisoners fearing deportation held more than 20 hostages after a riot.

Authorities worked to keep lines of communication open using telephones and walkie-talkies for negotiations between federal officials and a group of inmates who claimed to speak for most of the 1,000 Cuban prisoners at the Federal Detention Center.

"There's no indication that there will be a break soon. We're preparing for a long haul," center housing supervisor Jim Stevens said at a pre-dawn briefing.

About 300 federal, state and local law enforcement officers armed with riot guns, automatic weapons and carbines were on the scene, along with 350 detention center staff members, Stevens said.

Inside the center, where only four of 14 buildings were undamaged, inmates appeared to be patrolling the grounds and throwing furniture into campfires they had lighted.

The rioting Saturday night was sparked by a State Department announcement Friday that Cuba had agreed to accept the return of 2,500 refugees from the 1980 Mariel boatlift, most of them criminals and mentally ill, officials said.

In addition to the hostage-taking, 13 center employees and 10 inmates suffered minor injuries.

Fire destroyed half of the 14 buildings at the year-old, $17 million center, including the two-story administration building, a dormitory, a cafeteria and a processing center.

Luenette Johnson, a spokeswoman for the center, said Sunday that the inmates were saying "they don't want to go back to Cuba and they'd like not to be prosecuted for what they're doing."

As a condition for the hostages' release, the Cubans demanded to talk with someone from Washington about their status, officials said.

A letter from U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese was hand-delivered Sunday, they said.

"I do not know the contents. ... I assume it was reassuring," said Stevens, who said the Cubans got the letter from Meese Sunday afternoon.

"The inmates did not respond," Stevens said.

Asked if State Department or immigration officials were talking with the Cubans, White House spokesman Dan Howard said Sunday, "I am unaware of any discussion along this line."

In Laredo, Texas, 17 Cuban inmates broke out of a medium-security detention center early Sunday by climbing through a steel roof grating. Authorities captured all but three of them within hours.

Guards at Oakdale, a minimum-security facility, do not carry firearms, officials said.

After the rioting began about 7 p.m. Saturday, officials offered through a loudspeaker to give inmates safe conduct to other nearby jails.

Some accepted the offer Sunday. Stevens said 42 inmates were evacuated, including the injured inmates, who were taken to a hospital.

The Rev. Roy Bourgeois, who had spent six months in the facility after being arrested during an anti-government protest, said he had talked to victims at the hospital, and they told him "none of the anger was taken out on inmates, it was taken out on buildings."

Helicopters constantly shuttled reinforcements and news reporters in and out of the southwestern Louisiana town of about 8,000.

Warden J.R. Johnson said officers would not enter the complex as long as the inmates assured them that hostages would not be hurt.

"It's pretty quiet there," Stevens said at a Sunday night briefing. "Food and bedding have been offered to the inmates. They haven't asked for any food." Some dormitory buildings still had electricity, he said.

Johnson said the inmates had food because they raided the commissary and cafeteria before burning them. He said he did not know how long their supplies would last.

Oakdale policeman Herman

Perkins said the inmates took radios, nightsticks and tear gas away from the federal guards.

"They shot off their tear gas at us early. They didn't have any other weapons except what they could pick up or tear loose," he said.

Hoechst Celanese rally plans grow

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

Community cries of "We ♥ Celanese" are growing louder as the date of a city rally to support the fallen chemical plant draws nearer.

The rally — "Hoechst Celanese: The Heart of Pampa" — is scheduled for 2 p.m. Dec. 3 at Harvester Football Stadium.

Rally promoters hope to raise $10,000 to $15,000 in button and balloon sales. Proceeds from the rally will go to provide financial support to employees and contractors who lost their jobs after the Hoechst Celanese Chemical plant explosion on Nov. 14.

Hardest hit were the 177 employees of Arthur Brothers maintenance and construction contractors who were laid off Wednesday.

A meeting will be held at 4 p.m. today at First National bank to hear reports from the rally's ten organizing committees: finance, stadium, publicity-media, program, traffic, transportation, business, telephone, school and Panhandle area.

Publicity-Media Committee member Lynda Queen reported this morning that response to the rally has been "wonderful."

"People are volunteering their services," Queen said. "The Pampa High School band and choir will be involved in the rally."

Pampa schools were scheduled to dismiss early to allow students to attend the rally. But Queen said the school hopes to go one-step further and bus students from Pampa's six elementary schools to the rally.

"If weather permits, we may have Pampa Middle School students walk to the rally in a parade," Queen said, adding that if bad weather strikes, the rally will be held in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Queen reported that rally organizers are planning to "blitz" Pampa with fliers and posters inviting citizens to the rally.

And the invitation is also being extended to area communities.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy is coordinating efforts to bring area community leaders to the rally. He said he's sending letters to city mayors, school officials, county judges and fire chiefs today. He added that he has not heard any word from area communities confirming their support for the rally.

Queen reported that the Pampa Teachers' Federal Credit Union will make buttons for Pampa teachers and are planning to draw up a traffic map to the rally.

She added that State Rep. Foster Whaley (D-Pampa) is trying to line up state officials to attend the rally. She has not heard any response from State Sen. Bill Sarpalius (D-Canyon) or State Rep. Dick Waterfield (R-Canadian), whose district includes White Deer, another community adversely affected by the Celanese explosion.

Queen indicated that promoters have considered inviting Vice President George Bush to the rally. But they may reconsider, since Bush is running for president.

Rally Finance Committee chairman Bill Duncan said balloons and buttons will be sold to raise money for laid-off workers.

He added that, so far, expenses involved in organizing the rally have been minimal.

Man stabs worshipers at Fort Worth church

FORT WORTH (AP) — A homeless man who stabbed five worshipers during Mass at a cathedral remained in critical condition today from knife wounds apparently suffered when ushers tackled him, officials said.

"Oh God, oh God, oh God!" the 28-year-old man cried as he was wrestled to the floor of St. Patrick Cathedral on Sunday morning, witnesses said.

Officials speculated that the man fell on the pocket knife used in the stabbings, which left two men in serious condition today.

"He had gone berserk inside the church and stabbed several people before being subdued," said police Sgt. Ken Francis.

Attempted murder charges were being prepared against the suspect, police Capt. Jerry Blaisdell said. Police said they would not release the man's name until the charges were filed.

The man was well known to officials at local shelters for the homeless, police officers said.

He was charged with assault last month, and was a robbery victim on Nov. 4, police said, refusing to elaborate.

The man was in critical condition at John Peter Smith Hospital with three stab wounds, one penetrating his heart. Doctors said one of the wounds was in the left ventricle of his heart.

"We didn't know that he was hurt or anything," said Raul "Rudy" Galvan, who leaped from his pew to help ushers control the man. "We didn't know the knife was in him. We thought he might have had it in his hand, concealing it and that he wanted to try to get up and stab more people."

John H. Sheedy, an 80-year-old former prizefighter who was stabbed in the rib cage, and David A. Yaniko, 54, who was wounded in the abdomen, were in serious condition at Fort Worth Osteopathic Medical Center, officials said.

Felix Lozano, 45, was treated at Harris Hospital for an abdomen wound, while Galvan and an unidentified man were treated elsewhere for less serious cuts, officials said.

The Rev. Gonzalo Morales, who was conducting services at the cathedral, said the stabbings were committed by a disheveled man who arrived for the 8 a.m. Mass.

It was the first of three morning Masses at the downtown church, which operates several programs for the homeless.

Morales said he walked over to the man and spoke to him after the second Mass because one parishioner, a police officer, had said the man seemed potentially dangerous.

"I asked him, 'Can I do anything?' and he said, 'No, I just want to stay and pray,'" Morales recalled. "Of course, there was nothing I could do with him then, but I made the ushers very aware of it."

Shortly after the 11 a.m. Mass began, Morales said, the man stood and hurried up the middle aisle, carrying his bag and something concealed in paper.

Morales said he motioned to an office worker to call police as the man began playing a "cat-and-mouse game," darting between ushers trying to block the aisles.

Galvan said that when he and an usher approached the man, the man angrily refused to leave or sit down.

Galvan and ushers began struggling with the man, as Morales got up and urged parishioners to stay calm and remain seated. "I signaled the organist to play some music," the priest said, and began reading from the Bible.

Afterward, Morales said, "much like the Holy Father, Pope John Paul, went to pray for his assailant, we prayed for him too."

Public hearing Tuesday on public golf course

The City Commission will conduct its second public hearing on a proposal for a public golf course during its regular meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday in the City Commission Room at City Hall.

Following the hearing, the commission will consider requesting a joint meeting with Gray County commissioners to discuss the public golf course.

In other business, commissioners will consider action relative to a Texas Highway Department proposal for a rehabilitation project for Hobart Street.

The state department has proposed a renovation of Hobart but, because of state and federal safety requirements, has indicated the project cannot be undertaken unless the City Commission takes action to eliminate angle parking on the thoroughfare.

In other matters, the commission will consider:

- a final plat of a second revised plat for Lot 1, Block 12, North Crest Addition, Section 2, located west of Hobart between North Crest Road and Crane Road;
- first reading of an ordinance relative to adoption of provisions under the Texas Municipal Retirement System; and
- approval of two accounts payable.

Celanese

"Our biggest problem is getting the balloons blown up," Duncan said.

While the rally is being organized, Hoechst Celanese officials and workers are still undertaking damage assessments at the plant 6 miles west of Pampa.

Jane McBunch, human resources manager, said teams are continuing their studies and assessments at the plant this week to make definite determinations of the extent of the damages and the cause of the two explosions that destroyed two of the plant's units.

She said it will be awhile before anything is definitely established for final reports on the plant's damages.

Pampa plant manager Ron Guard has stated it probably will take four to six weeks before enough information has been gathered and analyzed so the company can make any decision on the plant's future operations.

This morning, Arthur Brothers facilities superintendent Patrick Ley was trying to make arrangements to get the contractor's employees' equipment and personal materials out of the plant, a company spokesman said.

Maxus sues Kidder Peabody, Boesky for $300 million

DALLAS (AP) - Maxus Energy Corp. today filed suit seeking at least $300 million from convicted financier Ivan Boesky and Kidder, Peabody & Co. Inc. and one of its former executives, accusing them of leaking confidential information about Maxus' 1983 acquisition of another energy company.

Maxus said that earlier this year Martin A. Siegel, formerly a merger and acquisition specialist with Kidder, Peabody, signed a consent decree with the Securities and Exchange Commission after the SEC alleged Siegel had disclosed to Boesky confidential information about Maxus' intention to acquire Natomas Co. of San Francisco.

The acquisition of Natomas by Maxus, then-Diamond Shamrock Corp., resulted in write-offs totaling $900 million so far, Maxus said, because the California company was bought at artificially high prices. The Dallas-based company said had it known about the leaking of its plans to buy Natomas, it would have called off the acquisition.

Both Boesky and Siegel are awaiting sentencing.

Shultz and Shevardnadze meeting to clear up missile treaty details

GENEVA (AP) - Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze met today to clear up details in a "virtually complete" treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Their aim is to have the treaty ready for President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to sign in Washington on Dec. 9.

Shultz and Shevardnadze held their first meeting this morning at the Soviet diplomatic mission. Shevardnadze waited outside for Shultz, who shook hands with his counterpart.

Seated in an anteroom in front of reporters, they chatted briefly about past U.S.-Soviet summits, then entered their meeting accompanied by high-level arms control aides.

Shultz said on his way here Sunday that only "some operational details" remained to be worked out.

"The treaty is virtually complete," he said. "All of the main things have been agreed to."

Shevardnadze, who arrived earlier, said preparations for next month's summit were in "their most critical stage."

Both predicted the treaty to eliminate nearly 1,000 Soviet and U.S. missiles with ranges between 300 and 3,000 miles would be finished in time.

Their first session was set for the Soviet mission. Shultz and Shevardnadze set aside two days for the talks.

They will cover several non-nuclear issues, including the Iran-Iraq war, Soviet troops in Afghanistan and a political fight in Congress on whether Gorbachev should be invited to address the House and Senate.

On the Persian Gulf war, Shultz said that "it is time to move forward" with an international arms embargo against Iran.

City officials serve on boards

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

A key component of our organization is anticipating and adapting to change. I am seeing more change today than ever before in local government.

In order for us to continue to improve our efficiency levels, it is important that we have individuals involved in their respective professional organizations. Consequently, we have a number of city employees and officials who are involved at both the regional and state levels.

As an example, Purchasing Agent Susan Crane is secretary of the Texas Municipal Purchasing Managers Association. Parks and Recreation Director Reed Kirkpatrick serves on the board of directors of the Texas Recreation and Parks Society, and Recreation Supervisor Jackie Harper is secretary of the Great Plains Recreation and Parks Society.

Wastewater Supervisor Smokey Harvey is president of the Canadian River Utilities Association. Animal Control Supervisor Sandy Burns is the regional advisor and representative to the Texas Animal Control Association. Main Street Project Manager and M.K. Brown Auditorium Manager Danny Parkerson is on the board of directors for the District 6 International Auditorium Managers Association.

City offices will be closed Thursday and Friday for Thanksgiving holidays.

If you should experience a need for water or sewer assistance, please call the after-hours number at 665-3881.

The Sanitation Department will not be making residential runs Thursday or Friday but will Library Director Dan Snider serves as chairman of the Administrative Round Table for the Texas Library Association. Emergency Management Coordinator Steve Vaughn serves as president of the Texas Panhandle Emergency Management Association.

I am serving as president of the Panhandle City Management Association. Mayor David McDaniel is on the board of directors for the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, serves as second vice president of the Texas Municipal League II and is serving on the Small Cities Council for the National League of Cities. Commissioner Richard Peet is on the State Review Committee for the Community Development Block Grant Program.

This involvement helps the city organization keep abreast of current issues, as well as encouraging the professional growth and abilities of our personnel. Both of these serve to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the services we can deliver.

City offices will be closed Thursday and Friday for Thanksgiving holidays.

If you should experience a need for water or sewer assistance, please call the after-hours number at 665-3881.

The Sanitation Department will not be making residential runs Thursday or Friday but will make two commercial runs on Friday. The sanitary landfill will be closed Thursday only and open on Friday from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Police and fire services will operate as normal.

The city has received the bound copies of the 1987-1988 Annual Operating Budget.

The budget will shortly be placed at Lovett Memorial Library, where two copies will be available for check-out and two will remain in the library as reference material. Additionally, two budgets will be placed at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce office for reference.

Therefore, if you are interested in reviewing the city budget, it is available at the library and chamber offices as well as at City Hall.

The budget is a policy and management document expressed in financial terms adopted by the City Commission. The budget itself provides a wealth of information on the operation of the city as well as expressing the goals and direction the City Commission wishes to take.

This year's budget contains added features, including a guide to understanding the budget and a policy statement for financial policies and budgetary policies. If you have any questions concerning the budget, please contact me here at City Hall.

Report: Discarded cigarette probably sparked blaze

LONDON (AP) - A discarded cigarette falling through a gap in a wooden escalator's slatted steps probably sparked a subway station inferno that killed 30 people, a newspaper said today.

Police said they have pinpointed the cause of Wednesday's fire at King's Cross subway station, but said they would release preliminary details of the investigation today only if a coroner grants permission. An inquest into the deaths opens Tuesday.

The Daily Telegraph quoted unidentified police sources as saying that the cause of the fire probably was a cigarette that fell onto a grease-coated mechanism littered with debris, including fluff and human hair.

The escalator fire leaped upward, engulfing the ticket hall and sending clouds of dense, choking smoke into a labyrinth of platforms and tunnels at King's Cross, the busiest of the London Underground's 273 stations. About 80 people were injured, and seven remained hospitalized.

Arson has been ruled out, officials said. Another newspaper reported the pre-World War II escalator had repeated mechanical problems and twice gave off smoke earlier this month.

The Times of London said the escalator, installed 48 years ago, "had been repaired on countless occasions (and) ... was patched up again" after two minor fires on Nov. 7 and Nov. 11.

Tornado-ravaged city focuses on rebuilding

PALESTINE (AP) — The tornadoes that hit this area last week could delay recovery from the tough economic times that had plagued this East Texas city, officials say.

Last Sunday and Monday, a swarm of twisters ripped through Texas, killing 10 people injuring 160 and causing millions of dollars in damage.

In this city, about 125 miles southeast of Dallas, the storms ravaged the town's industrial district and an important business strip, destroying or heavily damaging more than 80 businesses and 120 homes.

"Many of these businesses are old businesses, and they are accustomed to pulling themselves up by their own bootstraps," said Richard Stolle, manager of the Texas Employment Commission office in Palestine. "This is something else they are going to have to overcome."

The economic toll of unemployment will linger for months to come.

"It's a major setback," said Rosie Halvorson, unemployment insurance supervisor for the Texas Employment Commission office here. The office estimates that 500 local workers, mostly low-wage earners, lost their jobs because of the storm. About 200 of those positions may never be refilled.

The storm hit Palestine as its economy was seeing gradual recovery from oil-field declines and effects of the sluggish Texas economy, which had prompted layoffs at some manufacturing plants and businesses.

The area's unemployment rate, which peaked at about 13 percent in the summer of 1986, had dropped to between 9 and 10 percent last month. City sales tax receipts were picking up, and construction of a fourth Texas Department of Corrections prison unit in Anderson County — a project worth $70 million — was bringing in more money.

Victims of past tornadoes in Paris and Sweetwater advise their Palestine counterparts that rebuilding only comes with patience.

"I'm not saying I'm better off financially, but my business has increased 10 to 15 percent since the tornado," said James Rycroft, president of Vending Variety Inc., a Sweetwater vending-machine company.

"I went from a 3,500-square-foot building to a 14,600-square-foot building," he said. "We owe more money than we ever did, but we're way ahead. "The tornado cost me $145,000, but I've got probably $300,000 more of assets due to spending the $145,000."

Palestine officials are confident their city also will rebound.

Although nearly every business along a three-mile strip was damaged or destroyed, city officials and business owners expect 5 percent to 10 percent of them to rebuild.

The storm will most certainly bring a boom to the area's construction industry and to businesses that supply the building trade. Contractors have converged on the town in force, flooding local employment offices in search of work.

The real estate and rental-housing market should also see brisk business, as residents whose homes were damaged or destroyed look for new places to live.

Many merchants, with their windows boarded and roofs patched, were back in business within days of the storm.

At McCoy's Building Supply, manager Brian Nordquist said contractors and do-it-yourself homeowners have been filing in, choosing color samples and buying mostly electrical wiring, roof shingles and two-by-fours.

In two weeks, he projects sales will be about 40 percent higher than last year. Still, the damage will affect employment.

Artifacts Inc., a wholesale gift and floral supplier and candle manufacturer, likely sustained the most damage of any business, with total losses expected to approach $1 million, city officials said.

Time for decisions by Hunts

DALLAS (AP) — The famed but publicity-shy Hunt brothers of Dallas have had better times than now.

Besides a colossal lawsuit pending in Dallas, a Peruvian minerals company is suing them in New York, the government is complaining about them in Washington and the Internal Revenue Service wants a lot more of their money.

As with nearly everything concerning Nelson Bunker Hunt, Lamar Hunt and William Herbert Hunt these days, the numbers are very large. And they all go back to the end of the Hunts' silver play seven years ago. The brothers already have mortgaged much of their share of the family legacy to cover $1.1 billion in losses from the market crash on Silver Thursday in March 1980.

But now a rash of new proceedings threatens to take another chunk of that wealth. Meanwhile, proceedings in Dallas to determine the fate of the foundation of their wealth — Placid Oil Co. and the William Herbert Hunt Trust Estate — have taken recent dramatic turns.

"Whether these people can overlook their hostilities, roll up their sleeves and make some very tough business decisions is anybody's guess," one family source, who asked not to be identified, told the Dallas Morning News. "But they're down to some extremely tough decisions."

The three Hunt brothers sued their bank lenders in July 1986, claiming fraud in connection with $1.5 billion in loans. Soon after, the Hunts put the most valuable loan collateral, Placid and William Herbert's trust, into Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection to guard against foreclosure.

What was anathema to the brothers as early as last July has recently become a potential solution to settle the bankruptcy and loan debts: selling Placid. The question is at what price.

The Hunts' lead bankruptcy attorney, Henry W. Simon Jr., told U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Harold Abramson during a Nov. 5 hearing that his clients would cooperate with the banks to sell Placid. He added his reservations, however, saying the recent stock market decline precluded any chance of getting a decent price.

Such frank discussions about so severe a solution show a dramatic change of sentiment in the case. Attorneys from both sides say the harsh feelings are beginning to subside. But resolving the case, they say, has gotten no easier.

Cash is a premium in any bankruptcy settlement, but most of the Hunt assets are not liquid. The banks soon will see how reasonable the initial $1.2 billion asking price is for Placid. On Dec. 3, Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc., the New York investment brokers hired by the banks, will submit to the court a value for the oil company.

Legislators' trip to see German rail questioned by Common Cause

AUSTIN (AP) — A consortium of West German companies interested in operating a high-speed railroad in Texas were hosts for 17 state legislators and other officials on an eight-day European trip that one official termed a "working holiday."

"It was really an educational trip," said Austin lobbyist Pike Powers, who helped organize the Nov. 6-14 tour.

But John Hildreth, executive director of Common Cause of Texas, questioned whether it was necessary for so many lawmakers to spend eight days in Europe largely at the expense of West German business interests trying to win their support for the project.

"Was an on-site inspection the only way in which legislators could learn of the benefits of this kind of rail system?" asked Hildreth. "When Congress is appropriating money to send men and women to the moon, they don't have to go along themselves."

"I considered it quite frankly as a working holiday, if you will," said Chris Shields, who went on the trip in his position as counsel to Texas Secretary of State Jack Rains.

The trip was the second in a year sponsored by the German High-Speed Consortium, a group of West German companies that has proposed connecting Houston and the Dallas-Fort Worth area by high-speed rail.

Last November, a half-dozen legislators were guests of the consortium. More than 50 people attended this month's tour, among them bond lawyers, underwriters and members of the Texas Turnpike Authority. The authority has been directed by the Legislature to study the feasibility of such a rail system.

Charles Matthews, a member of the Turnpike Authority from Dallas, said he went on the trip because the agency has been directed to do the study. But he questioned whether such a rail line will ever be built in Texas.

"How do you get the investment bankers of the country to buy revenue bonds on a project like this?" he asked. "What guarantee do they have that they are going to get their money back? I can't figure it out. I don't believe it's a doable deal."

Legislators paid a portion of their round-trip transportation, $600 each, although several said they intend to take the money from their officeholder accounts. Powers said spouses paid the full cost of their transportation, between $800 and $900.

Other costs — hotels, some transportation within Europe and several meals, including a closing-night banquet with steak and German wine — were paid by the hosts, Powers said.

"We had briefings. We had train rides. We demonstrated to them the interrelationships of all the various transportation modes and systems," Powers said.

State Rep. Fred Blair, D-Dallas, said there was no substitute for actually seeing such rail systems already in operation in Europe.

"I think that you can make a far greater assessment by seeing the project, by examining the project rather than just reading results," Blair said.

County, school could lose money in utilities deal

GROESBECK (AP) — County and school district officials say millions of dollars could be lost from their tax base under a deal being considered by the city of Austin and South Texas Nuclear Project officials.

The year-end tax contributions of Houston Lighting & Power Co.'s lignite power plant in Limestone County now comprise more than half the budgets of the county and the Groesbeck school districts.

But a new deal being worked by HL&P with the city of Austin would take some of that tax revenue away.

Austin wants to be relieved of its share of the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City, another HL&P subsidiary, and may instead assume a like share of the Limestone County project.

If the deal prevails, Limestone County's taxing entities no longer would be able to tax the share Austin would receive — about 27 percent of the $1.3 billion plant. That would mean a $1 million drop in revenues for the county and about $1.5 million less for the schools.

The two entities are ready to fight to keep the revenues.

"We're not willing to accept that," said County Attorney Don Cantrell. "I'm sure there will be a lawsuit if that happens. The school has sold bonds with the promise of income off that tax base, and to suddenly jerk that 27 percent of the tax base out would be a terrible blow to the school and county."

HL&P and the city of Austin so far have only an agreed-to hammer out a swap of ownership of 400-megawatt generating capacity in the South Texas Project for the same amount in the Limestone County Project.

Under terms of the tentative agreement, the entire deal would be called off if either San Antonio or Central Power & Light Co. of Corpus Christi, also co-owners of the South Texas Project, express an interest in getting out of the nuclear plant, HL&P spokesman Graham Painter said.

A winner in the deal would be Matagorda County, where the South Texas Project is located, which has gotten no tax contributions from Austin's share of the nuclear plant.

"It definitely will mean more taxable value for us," said Matagorda County Tax Assessor-Collector W.B. (Bill) Wiginton, adding that he won't know exactly how much until the first of the year.

Hospitals face fines, suits for 'patient dumping'

DALLAS (AP) — Five Texas hospitals face possible lawsuits and fines for violating laws aimed at ending the denial of medical treatment to patients who are unable to pay, a newspaper reported.

The inspector general of the Health and Human Services Administration is considering fines of up to $50,000 for three hospitals that violated "patient dumping" rules enacted a year ago. The state is considering fines of up to $1,000-per day per violation against three of the five hospitals.

The hospitals facing federal fines are Humana Clear Lake in Houston, DeTar Hospital of Victoria, and Charter Community Hospital of Cleveland, sources involved in the investigation told the Dallas Morning News.

Both state and federal laws prohibit hospitals from transferring or refusing treatment to emergency patients because they cannot pay. Emergency patients may be transferred when more specialized medical treatment is necessary. Before any transfer may occur, hospitals are required to stabilize the patient and get approval from the receiving hospital.

English first proposal to be on GOP primary ballot

COPPERAS COVE (AP) — Voters in the 1988 GOP primary will be allowed to say whether they think English should be the official state and national language, but the state Republican chairman says that doesn't mean the party opposes people being bilingual.

"I support everybody learning a foreign language," state Republican Chairman George Strake said Saturday, after the state Republican Executive Committee, by a voice vote, approved putting the issue on the March 8 GOP ballot.

But it is important to the nation and the state for all Americans to be able to speak English, Strake said.

"We hope that we will encourage greater participation in the economic mainstream of America through this resolution," he said.

Two statewide polls this year have shown more than 70 percent of Texans support establishing English as the official state language.

The vote on the non-binding referendum on the primary ballot, which says that English should be established as the official language of Texas and the United States, will send a signal to state lawmakers to deal with the issue, Strake said.

In the 1987 Legislature, a bill to make English the official language of Texas died in a House committee.

Andy Briscoe, a one-time gubernatorial candidate who Friday announced he was changing from the Democratic Party to the Republican Party, said after a brief speech to the executive committee that he agrees with Strake.

"I don't believe in English only. I believe in English as the state language. In order to do business in today's business world, people need a common communicating factor," Briscoe said.

But Henry Santamaria of El Paso, state Republican treasurer, said the referendum is unnecessary and could lead some people to believe Republicans want to exclude Hispanics from the political process.

Reagan naps away while leftists win

There's one good thing about Ronald Reagan's nomination of Judge Anthony Kennedy to the Supreme Court. Thinking the judge a family member, Sen. Teddy Kennedy will vote to confirm.

Seriously — and it's hard to be serious about the fiasco Reagan has made of filling this court seat — even though Judge Kennedy is a moderate, his nomination marks a complete victory of the radical left. During an ostensibly conservative administration, not every Supreme Court nominee can be a William Douglas or a William Brennan. Future radical appointments can await the next Democratic presidency. The left must be satisfied if a moderate is appointed.

That's why it went all out to destroy both Judge Robert Bork, a conservative, and Judge Douglas Ginsburg, a libertarian. Either man would have begun restoring to the American people their ancient, constitutional rights of life, liberty, and property.

In contrast, while Judge Kennedy will not sharply advance an assault on the Constitution and the rule of law, he also will not stand as a bulwark against future assaults, nor will he begin the necessary rebuilding of the constitutional ramparts. For this reason, Kennedy's nomination should breeze through the Senate.

The left rightly sees that he won't undermine its central interest, which is the radical transformation of American society along a socialist model. As Reagan noted, Judge Kennedy "seems to be popular with many senators of varying political persuasions." In other words, Kennedy doesn't offend the left.

During the mini press conference held after Reagan announced Kennedy's nomination, the president was asked about Sen. Orrin Hatch's contention that the Reagan administration is filled with "gutless wonders." Reagan replied that he hadn't seen any. But if Reagan wants to identify the two biggest gutless wonders in the White House, he should first peer into a mirror, then look at Chief of Staff Howard Baker. Reagan spent the first month of the Bork nomination battle napping at his California ranch. During that time, Baker was slapping backs with his old Senate colleagues, accepting their assurances that Bork would be handled fairly.

As Norman Podhoretz noted, referring to the broader events behind the Bork brawl, there is a "war going on in this country." On one side of the war is a loose, often contentious alliance of conservatives, libertarians, and neoconservatives; they support America's ancient notion of justice under law. On the other side is a homogenous cabal of liberals, leftists, and radicals working for a New Order.

These are the battle lines. The liberal-radical-left coalition effectively smashed Bork and Ginsburg. It knows what it wants and has rallied to the clarion call. In contrast, the conservative-libertarian-neoconservative alliance is retreating in disarray because its leader, Ronald Reagan, has abdicated.

Taxes spent on sex workshops

WASHINGTON — On May 1, 1986, the National Centers for Disease Control made a grant of $239,962 in public funds to the Gay Men's Health Crisis Inc. of New York. This past May the grant was renewed for another $434,717, making a total of almost $675,000 for the two years.

American taxpayers often wonder what in the world the government does with their money. The two grants are instructive. They tell us something about how our nation has run up a debt of $2 trillion. These particular dollars were poured out in an effort to promote safe sodomy among male homosexuals.

The story came to light last month when Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina offered an amendment to a pending appropriation bill. The senator's purpose was to put a halt to outlays for this purpose. After a spirited debate, in which Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut "yelled" (his verb) his opposition to any such restriction, the amendment passed by a vote of 94-2. The other opposing vote came from Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York.

The Gay Men's Health Crisis Inc. proposed to spend the $675,000 in part upon a manual for conducting "Eroticizing Safer Sex Workshops." These workshops, according to the grant application, are intended to help participants "discover and share information on how to be sexually active in low-risk ways." Another purpose is to help participants "improve levels of sexual functioning." This is "education?"

Under the approved program, workshops are to be divided into several sessions. The first session is "therapeutic." It is intended to console those homosexuals who are "mourning the loss of old sexual partners and the loss of being able to act on the sexual impulse."

James J. Kilpatrick

A second session is to be devoted to "affirming that a wide variety of sexual options is open to them."

In a third session, participants are to discuss how to "eroticize" safer options. In a fourth, they are to learn "how to negotiate safer sex agreements." All sessions are to be led by a moderator who is "unconditionally sex-positive." The moderator's task, in part, is to "dispel the myth that normal heterosexuality is superior to homosexuality."

In the jargon beloved of Ph.D.s who specialize in federal grantsmanship, the applicants contend that "with demonstrated replicability, these programs should be generalizable across diverse groups."

Sen. Helms is rarely speechless. Few of his colleagues have ever seen him tongue-tied. But on Oct. 14, when he pressed his amendment to adoption, the gentleman from North Carolina suffered a handicap. He could not put into the Congressional Record the more startling recommendations for improving "sexual intimacy" that were contained in the material at hand. The proposed alternatives to everyday sodomy would strike many of us as bizarre. "You probably haven't thought of half the things you can do with other men practicing safer sex." That has the ring of a truthful statement.

The Senate was in agreement on one point: The disease known as Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) is indeed a dreadful affliction. An estimated 43,000 persons are thought to be actively infected; another 1.4 million persons are carrying the virus. Between January 1982 and September 1987, roughly 25,000 persons died of the disease. Some of these were children — innocents who were in no way responsible for their fatal illness.

By way of perspective: In 1986, some 768,000 persons died of heart diseases, 466,000 of cancer, 48,560 of automobile accidents, and 8,200 of AIDS.

Helms did not raise the question, but an inquiry is in order: Why have Congress and the media become so obsessed with the "plague" or "epidemic" known as AIDS? Half the victims are said to be promiscuous homosexuals; another 35 percent or 40 percent are drug addicts who become infected through contaminated needles. The rest are bisexuals or heterosexuals (or innocents who die through transfusions of contaminated blood). One can weep for the children, but it is hard to work up much sympathy for the sodomists and addicts who have brought this on themselves.

In any event, to return to the main theme, how can such frivolous grants be justified? Even Weicker acknowledged that "there is no better educated community than the homosexual community." If these people haven't heard about "safe sex" by this time, no happy little workshops will teach them.

Singles ads lead to big trouble

My friend Rigsby, the lover, has had trouble getting dates lately, so he subscribed to one of those singles magazines you can find in all major cities.

They include a classified section in which both men and women — and whatever else is out there these days — advertise themselves for romantic interludes.

"At first," said Rigsby, "I thought this was the greatest thing since room service. You just thumb through the magazine, pick out what you like, and — voila! — the girl of your dreams." "You sound as if it didn't work out that way," I said to Rigsby.

"The first ad I answered sounded just like the woman I wanted: 'Blond bombshell with keen interest in the arts.'"

"And when you met her?" "She was blond OK, but she was also 4 feet 11 inches, weighed 280 pounds, with a tattoo on her left cheek that said, 'Born to Raise Hell.'"

"By 'cheek,' I asked Rigsby, "do you mean...?"

"Let me put it this way," he answered. "The first thing she did when I went to pick her up was moon me."

"What did you do then?"

"I ran."

"No, I mean did you answer any more ads in the magazine?"

Lewis Grizzard

"I was determined," said Rigsby. "The next one sounded terrific: 'Tall, sensuous redhead, looking for a man who would like to walk on the wild side.'"

"And what happened with her?"

"She was into S&M."

"She beat you with a whip?"

"Worse. She tied me up and made me watch rock videos. When she went to her bedroom to look for her spurs, I untied myself and got away."

"Surely, you decided not to answer any more ads after that," I said to Rigsby.

"I found one ad that seemed totally harmless," he said.

"What did it say?"

"Sweet, sensitive school teacher wants meaningful, loving relationship with a man who will not only love me, but my pets as well."

"And?"

"Ever try to get romantic in the same room with two boa constrictors named Arnold and Hazel?"

"But you kept trying?"

"I did. The next girl I called said she was 'The Girl-Next-Door-Type.'"

"Was she?"

"That was the problem," said Rigsby. "She turned out to be my neighbor, Hilda Weatherwax, who weighs 300 pounds and has a mustache. Some guy looked at her the wrong way in the laundry room one night, and she stuffed him into the Speed Queen. He was in there for four cycles before the fire department came and got him out."

"Surely you stopped answering ads after that," I said.

"I answered one more. It said, 'For a good time, call Gladys,' and we hit it off perfectly."

"So singles magazines do work," I said.

"What magazine?" Rigsby said. "I found Gladys's number in the phone booth at the bus station."

"Love in the '80s isn't all that different. In a pinch, you still go back to the basics."

Joint ventures erase products' nationality

By Robert Walters

AURORA, Colo. (NEA) — Conoco, a major domestic oil company, has an improbable new partner in its petroleum exploration program in Colorado — the Nippon Mining Co. Ltd.

Conoco's joint venture with a Tokyo-based company to search for oil in the Rockies is hardly unique. Both Chevron and Texaco have established similar partnerships with another Japanese firm, the Nippon Oil Co. Ltd.

The $135 million Conoco-Nippon Mining operation also includes gas and oil exploration operations in Alabama, Louisiana, Montana and Texas. At the same time, Nippon Oil is contributing $100 million to each of its new partnerships.

Its agreements with Chevron and Texaco call for exploration in Colorado, California, Kansas, Oklahoma, Mississippi, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Texas, Utah and Wyoming.

Japanese exploration for oil in this country may surprise many people, but the arrangement illustrates the fallacy of many of the simplistic assumptions being made in the popular debate about trade policy.

In a world where multinational corporations and international joint ventures routinely transcend individual countries' boundaries, the distinction between "foreign" and "American" products is increasingly blurred.

The automobile industry provides a striking example of that. Japanese automakers have established or expect to open manufacturing facilities in Kentucky and Tennessee, Ohio and Illinois.

In California, a joint venture between General Motors and Toyota produces both the Chevrolet Nova and the Toyota FX. Before American Motors was purchased by Chrysler, it was controlled by Renault, a state-owned French company.

Japan's Isuzu, 40 percent owned by GM, manufactures a car marketed in this country as the Chevrolet Spectrum. Japan's Suzuki, 5 percent owned by GM, produces the Chevrolet Sprint.

GM's Pontiac LeMans was designed by West Germany's Opel and is manufactured by South Korea Daewoo. GM's Cadillac Allante is produced in Italy, then shipped by air to this country. Ford's Festiva is made in South Korea, while its Mercury Tracer comes from Mexico.

Chrysler's Dodge Colt and Raider are made by Japan's Mitsubishi. Some of its Plymouth Reliants and Dodge Aries are produced in Mexico.

"Behind America's staggering trade deficit, a fundamental change is taking place in how trade is conducted," says Lewis Young, retired executive editor of Business Week magazine.

"New international alliances that link corporations such as GM and Toyota, GTE and Siemens, AT&T and Olivetti are changing patterns of trade and investment and relocating the sources of supplies and the sites of manufacturing plants," Young notes.

"General Electric boasts of more than 100 such partnerships," Business Week reports. "IBM, GM, AT&T and Xerox each have a dozen or more."

Since 1980, AT&T has taken on partners in the Netherlands, Italy, Spain, South Korea, Taiwan and Japan. Last year, Kodak, Merck, Motorola, Emerson, Corning Glass and Data General all purchased Japanese companies.

Carlo De Benedetti, Olivetti's chief executive officer, insists that "you can find success today only through alliances that place you simultaneously in every global market."

The number of corporate combinations and permutations may be infinite. This country's Ford and West Germany's Volkswagen have consolidated their 15 Brazilian and Argentine manufacturing facilities to form the world's 11th largest auto firm in South America. Japanese companies are establishing plants in northern Mexico, with the output destined for the United States.

What are the implications of those developments? Many of the consequences remain unforeseen, but the global economy surely will produce both welcome benefits and severe dislocations as it continues to grow.

Bargainers say budget pact is only first step

WASHINGTON (AP) — Blinking at the TV lights, and perhaps from fatigue after four weeks of dickering, House Minority Leader Robert Michel described "those boring sessions" that may have sharply altered federal spending in the next two years.

"We've just had a beginning here," Michel, R-Ill., told reporters minutes after President Reagan announced his deal with Congress to cut $76 billion from the deficit over two years. "Now the more difficult chore falls on the leadership to sell the programs to our members."

It is that task that Reagan, along with leaders from both parties in the Senate and House, will face when Congress returns from its Thanksgiving break Nov. 30.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, predicted Sunday the deficit-reduction plan will win congressional approval, but only if Reagan persuades members of his own party to back the pact.

"It will have to have votes on both sides of the aisle," Wright said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" program.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" that he is not pleased with the package but believes it will win Senate approval. He was less certain about the House.

Michel, appearing on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley," said persuading Republicans to support the accord will be difficult because to date they have balked at working on the tax-increase bills in Congress.

If lawmakers refuse to enact the package that White House and congressional negotiators wrangled over for 20 days, financial, political and even psychological dues will have to be paid.

The package, like many compromises, offends many people. It slices $30.2 billion in fiscal 1988 and $46 billion in fiscal 1989. Conservatives are appalled by its $23 billion in taxes, including $9 billion in fiscal 1988, which began Oct. 1. Liberals don't think the $285.4 billion for defense spending is low enough. Some lawmakers are critical of its billions of dollars in federal asset sales and procedural changes, while others say the cuts are too weak.

On Dec. 16, the temporary measure currently financing the government expires, and Reagan and congressional leaders hope the deficit-reduction pact will be enacted to take its place by then. That means Congress will have less than three weeks to determine the government's spending priorities for the year, a battle lawmakers have fought since January.

One ally the leadership will rely on is the alternative. The $23 billion in automatic spending cuts required by the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law were initiated Friday by Reagan.

Unless the negotiated agreement is approved, Gramm-Rudman's deeper spending slashes will remain intact. And although the impact of most of those cuts won't be felt for weeks, dairy farmers and hospitals treating Medicare patients will start receiving less federal aid immediately.

"We're going to get phone calls from doctors and dairy farmers" over the Thanksgiving break, said Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D.

But that might not be enough to spur Congress to approve the agreement. Michel conceded, "I have significant numbers of members on my side who would like to see $23 billion in cuts, period."

Other legislators believe, however, that there would be a political price to pay if the Gramm-Rudman reductions were allowed to remain in place.

There is also a determination by the president and congressional leaders to prove to the financial world that they can govern.

After all, the talks were sparked by the Oct. 19 Wall Street crash that focused investors' attention on the federal government's string of $200 billion deficits.

Pilot has heart attack while landing

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The co-pilot of an American Airlines jumbo jet carrying 94 people brought the craft safely to a stop after the pilot suffered a fatal heart attack while landing at Newark International Airport, officials say.

Co-pilot Tom Meeker was interviewed by airline officials Sunday after the Saturday night landing of the DC-10, said American spokesman Lee Elsesser.

"I think you'd have to say that he did the job that was his to be done," Elsesser said. "The first officer (co-pilot) did his job and did it extremely well."

It was not clear whether Meeker actually landed the plane or took the controls when it was on the ground.

Meeker told airport police that airplane Capt. Don L. Ely slumped over the controls while the plane was about 50 feet above the runway and that Meeker landed and taxied the plane to the terminal, said Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Kathleen Bergen.

However, Meeker told American that Ely landed the plane and that Meeker took over as the craft sped down the runway, said Elsesser.

"You have to understand this is an ongoing investigation and we're still dealing with preliminary information," the spokesman said.

None of the 10 other crew members or 83 passengers aboard Flight 612 from Chicago was injured, Elsesser said.

A crew member made an announcement "concerning the slightly rough ride into the terminal and putting on the brakes," he said. However, he said he did not believe passengers were told Ely suffered a heart attack.

Ely, 51, of Melissa, Texas, died about an hour later at Elizabeth General Medical Center after attempts to revive him in the cockpit after the landing and in the emergency room failed, said hospital spokesman Douglas Harris.

Records of Meeker's conversations with the control tower did not clear up the discrepancy over when he took control of the plane.

Ms. Bergen said the co-pilot only asked the tower for emergency equipment and an ambulance.

Ely had been a pilot with Fort Worth-based American since 1959. He had no history of medical problems and passed an airline physical in May, Elsesser said.

Meeker, also from the Dallas-Fort Worth area, has flown for the airline since 1978.

The DC-10 is a wide-bodied, three-engine jet that can carry up to 380 passengers.

Ms. Bergen said co-pilots have the proper controls for landing the plane in front of them.

You never know what will happen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bureaucrats and image-makers like summits to follow closely the scripts they have carefully prepared.

Reykjavik may have put a permanent crimp in that traditional approach. Once President Reagan and General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev got together last October in Iceland, there was no stopping them.

Until the summit collapsed under the weight of the U.S. "Star Wars" missile defense program, the two leaders were happily playing arms control with an abandon reminiscent of the old radio show "Can You Top This?"

Some of their tentative understandings to reverse the nuclear arms race survived to guide U.S. and Soviet negotiators. Others were put on a back burner.

It's hard to tell what Moscow has in mind this time. But Reagan's advisers have scaled down summit expectations to a more traditional scale.

Even so, two weeks before Gorbachev's scheduled arrival in Washington, events in both capitals already are altering the atmosphere for the summit.

The White House obviously hopes last Wednesday's Iran-Contra report, which took Reagan down a couple of pegs, will be a one-day wonder. The Gorbachev, meanwhile, has his own problems. His image as a free-wheeling Kremlin leader is being reassessed in light of the Yelstin affair.

Boris N. Yelstin was an ardent proponent of change in the Soviet Union. But he was excoriated by Gorbachev and removed as head of the Moscow Communist Party organization after suggesting the system was not working.

While Yelstin is likely to retain his membership in the party's Central Committee, the affair raised questions about how free Gorbachev may be to redirect the Soviet economy — and to cut deals with Reagan.

U.S. summit planners are keeping a watchful eye on Capitol Hill as well as on Moscow.

Conservative Republicans in Congress, who normally do not make much trouble for their philosophical soul-mate in the White House, are angry about a proposal for Gorbachev to address a joint session of Congress.

The House Republican leader, Robert Michel of Illinois, said it would be "a terrible mistake" to allow Gorbachev to appear before Congress.

The Senate Republican leader, Bob Dole of Kansas, said Gorbachev's appearance before Congress could stir an "ugly scene." The idea virtually died when Michel joined 79 other congressmen in asking Reagan to find a less formal setting for lawmakers to meet with Gorbachev.

For script-writers, there is an even bigger problem. They have penciled in the afternoon of Dec. 9 for Reagan and Gorbachev to sign a treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

It would be Reagan's first nuclear arms accord with the Soviets. His image-makers want to make the most of the event.

But the treaty is not ready. Secretary of State George P. Shultz begins two days of talks in Geneva today with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze to try to resolve final sticking points.

An AP News Analysis

congressional Iran-Contra committees blamed him for failing to live up to his constitutional mandate to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed."

The report also said Reagan bore "the ultimate responsibility" for wrong done by his aides in the secret sale of U.S. weapons to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Reagan may be tempted to blot out the Iran-Contra scandal with some summit acrobatics.

Facing a foster care crisis

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The foster care system in Illinois is in trouble, a state official says, because just as the need for temporary shelter for abused and neglected children is growing, foster families are leaving the program.

And unless 1,000 new foster homes are recruited in the next six months, the state's foster care system could be near collapse, says Gordon Johnson, director of the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

"Some 400 to 500 foster parents a year adopt their foster children," Johnson said. "Others retire. Some simply burn out from the stress of dealing with the foster children's problems."

The result has been a 12.9 percent decline in the number of available foster homes since 1984, he says.

"We simply will not have places to protect some children who have been abused and neglected," Johnson said. "We will have to leave them in the homes where they are at risk of further abuse and neglect."

Foster care placements are up 41 percent in Cook County, which includes Chicago, and 25 percent statewide because the incidents of reported child abuse and neglect rose a record 29.5 percent last year, he said.

Among those who have left the program are Leo and Marjorie Wittig, who retired as foster parents last year after caring for more than 90 children over two decades.

The Wittigs said they are not surprised by the shortage of available homes.

"People go in with certain expectations and find out it's not as easy as they thought," Mrs. Wittig said. "It's not like taking a neighbor's child for a while."

"I think the biggest reason (for the shortage of homes) is so many women are having to work to make ends meet rather than staying home," said the 69-year-old homemaker.

Most of very old are women, but men said better off

WASHINGTON (AP) — The oldest Americans are more than twice as likely to be women, but socially and economically it still seems to be a man's world, a private study says.

Among people aged 85 and over, men have higher incomes, are more likely to be married and living in their own homes and seem to be healthier than women, according to a report prepared by Dr. Charles F. Longino of the University of Miami.

Longino's research, based on Census Bureau data and supported by the American Association of Retired Persons, reflects the aging of America in recent years.

It is the first detailed look at the age 85-plus population, with past studies having concentrated on those aged 65 and over or 75 and over.

But the very old are a rapidly growing segment of America, Longino stressed in an interview last week. The 1980 census counted 2,197,120 people 65 and over, nearly 70 percent of them females.

Thus, in most studies of the elderly, "men have been invisible," he said, since they were obscured by the statistics on women who so vastly outnumber them.

His new analysis of that group was detailed in a paper presented Sunday to the annual scientific meeting of the Gerontological Society of America.

Very old men are better off both economically and socially, said Longino, "if by better off one means that they have higher personal income from nearly all sources and that they are far more likely to be married and living independently."

Despite the difference in income, very old women had slightly more education than men in the same age group: 8.8 years compared with 8.2 years of schooling.

Nearly half of the men aged 85 and over were still married, compared with one-tenth of women.

"The remarriage rate of men after widowhood far exceeds that of women," Longino said. "The remarriage rate of men after widowhood far exceeds that of women. Women are more apt to become widowed partly because husbands tend to be older than wives."

The group defies a popular image of people who depend for housing on someone else. "It is surprising for some to find that nearly half the women 85 years of age and older live in their own homes as do over two-thirds of the men. Women are more likely to live alone than men (33 versus 22 percent) because fewer women are married," he reported.

Foreign languages becoming popular in U.S. high schools

NEW YORK (AP) — To a fast-growing number of U.S. high school and college students, French is now considered "essential," German is "notwendig," Spanish is "imprescindible," Russian is "nuzhen" and Japanese is "hissu."

In plain English, it means foreign language study is surging in popularity, especially Japanese and Chinese.

But even with impressive gains, U.S. students still trail youngsters in most Western and industrialized countries in terms of foreign language ability. Educators caution, furthermore, that future progress is doubtful without better teachers — and more of them.

Almost one-third, 30.9 percent, of the nation's 12.5 million public high school students are studying modern foreign languages, the largest proportion in 70 years, and up sharply from the 21.3 percent enrolled in 1982, according to a soon-to-be-published survey by the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages made available to The Associated Press.

Spanish and French remain by far the most popular languages to study. Some 2.3 million high school students and 411,000 college students are learning Spanish.

Fireworks likely at first public hearing on private prison

SAN MARCOS (AP) — Sentiment is mixed going into tonight's first public hearing on the privatization of prisons. The state proposes to build a 500-inmate state prison on the edge of town. Some residents hail the proposal by Becon-Wackenhut Inc. as a potential financial boon and others resist it as an unwelcome intrusion that was railroaded through without adequate public notice.

Opposition has also surfaced in other communities proposed as sites by the State Board of Corrections. Privately built and operated pre-release centers designed to alleviate crowding in the state's prison system also have been proposed in Seagoville in Dallas County, Springtown in Parker County and near Humble in Harris County. Opponents' complaints ranged from zoning problems to safety fears to the possibility of declining real estate values.

The Texas Department of Corrections has given the four sites preliminary approval, pending the outcome of public hearings in coming weeks. San Marcos in Hays County is the only community to have scheduled a public hearing.

Only a showing of widespread and vehement opposition would deter the plans, prison officials said last week, and that's what some opponents think they may be able to show in San Marcos.

"We've been misled from the very beginning," said Hays County Commissioner Rafael Gonzales, whose precinct includes the proposed site.

Gonzales said he and residents of the predominantly Hispanic neighborhoods near the site weren't included in the local campaign for the prison. He said the residents plan to show up in droves at the meeting on Monday.

Gonzales said he found out about the San Marcos proposal a month ago, when a public meeting was convened. He learned recently that some of his political colleagues knew about the project six months ago.

But Dan Graham, president of the San Marcos Economic Development Council, says there is overwhelming support for the project.

"It will have a tremendous economic impact," Graham said. "The most conservative estimate is around $13 million a year. It will create about 150 jobs and add $200,000 a year in local taxes."

He said San Marcos was chosen as a possible prison site because of its location between Austin and San Antonio.

"They (Becon-Wackenhut) wanted to have a facility between these two areas so that people in the facility could be visited by their families. They feel that is very important in their rehabilitation," Graham said.

The state Board of Corrections gave tentative approval at its Nov. 9 meeting to bids from Becon-Wackenhut and Tennessee-based Corrections Corporation of America to build the four minimum- or medium-security prisons in the state. Becon-Wackenhut proposed the Hays County site and another in Springtown, while Corrections Corporation wants to build prisons in Seagoville and near Humble.

But, the prison board, at the urging of state Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, delayed a final decision on the projects until December to allow communities more time to consider the pros and cons. Prison officials asked the two contractors to obtain any necessary local approval for their sites by early December.

That doesn't appear likely in Seagoville where a preliminary public hearing Nov. 2 disintegrated into a shouting match, and a follow-up meeting with the Seagoville Planning and Zoning Commission has been delayed at Corrections Corporation's request until January.

The move toward private prisons is part of an attempt by the state to expand capacity and decentralize its penal system.

The prison board has already decided to build six state-operated, maximum- and medium-security prisons.

Campaigns focus on jobs, not righting old wrongs

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The four main candidates for president in next week's election have had memories of the 29-year Duvalier dictatorship, but each is looking more to solving Haiti's current ills than righting old wrongs.

Gerard Gourgue, his wife and four daughters were severely beaten by the Tonton Macoutes, the Duvaliers' private militia, during a human rights conference in 1979.

Today, Gourgue says his top priority is creating jobs in this impoverished Caribbean nation of 6 million, where the unemployed outnumber the employed and annual income is only about $350 a person.

Sylvio Claude won an international reputation in the 1970s for his outspoken criticism of Jean-Claude Duvalier, an opposition that landed him more than once in Tonton Macoutes torture chambers.

Today, Claude focuses on agriculture in this arid, mountainous nation that cannot feed itself. He says: "When you hear talk about Sylvio Claude everywhere, it's because I was beaten and mistreated. They (Tonton Macoutes) contributed to my glory. Why hold a grudge against them?"

Gourgue, 61, and Claude, 53, are among the best known candidates running in the Nov. 29 presidential elections, which will replace the military-dominated junta that took power when Duvalier fled to exile in France 21 months ago.

Two others are businessman Louis Dejoie II, whose father lost the fraudulent 1957 election to Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier and then died in exile; and Marc Bazin, a finance minister fired by "Baby Doc" in 1982 after he billed the dictator's father-in-law for back taxes.

Also at stake in the elections are 27 Senate and 77 lower-house seats in a National Assembly authorized by the constitution that was approved earlier this year. Balloting for mayors and other town officials will be held in December.

There are 23 candidates for president. Twelve others were rejected by the independent Electoral Council for their ties to the old regime.

Only Dejoie, Bazin, Claude and Gourgue have ample budgets, nationwide organizations and the charisma to draw crowds in the urban slums and remote villages where most Haitians live.

Bazin, 55, is head of the Movement for the Installation of Democracy in Haiti. He is the only one who has published a strategy for economic development and democratic reform.

Bazin says Haitians should concentrate on creating democratic institutions like an independent judiciary rather than focus on punishing members of the old regime who embezzled public funds and abused human rights.

"What we must do is make absolutely sure that kind of tyranny never comes back again," he says.

Dejoie, 59, claims to have traveled more than 22,000 miles in this nation the size of Maryland. He began the virtually non-stop campaign last year after coming home from a 26-year exile in the neighboring island of Puerto Rico.

"The state should be responsible for promoting the peasants' education, housing (and) self-sufficiency in food," says Dejoie, who revived his father's National Agricultural Industrial Party.

Of the four, only Bazin has had lengthy experience in government.

Gourgue, a schoolteacher and founder of the Haitian League for Human Rights, was a member of the provisional junta. But he quit after one month and said it was moving too slowly on reforms.

Out of jail

Prisoners line up Sunday to receive letters certifying their freedom as the Sandinista government of Nicaragua freed 985 political prisoners nationwide in a show of compliance with a regional peace plan. Most of the prisoners were suspected of having ties to the U.S.-backed rebels, known as Contras, and were pardoned by the National Assembly.

Texans in Exile long for bluebonnets and scenes where buffalo roamed

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Texans exiled to coastal Alabama yearn for scenic highways bordered with bluebonnets, the sound of tall tales and chili — hot, exotic, with beans, with rice or just plain.

"We've lived in Mobile for 18 years and people still introduce us as 'the couple from Texas,'" said Margie Criswell.

Mrs. Criswell and her husband, Cris, both are Texas natives and found comfort in the formation of the Texans in Exile club in Mobile.

Ed Bunnell, a professor at the University of South Alabama, and a native of Jacksboro, about 60 miles northwest of Fort Worth ("where cattle drives and buffalo hunts originated"), came up with the club idea along with some Texas friends.

"I think we have 150 or 160 names on our mailing list," Bunnell said Sunday. Texans, he says, just never get Texas out of their system. He said the club may take a trip to a ranch near Llano, Texas, next year for a barbecue in the Indian Head community.

"We'll be home. You have to go back now and then," he said.

Bunnell's wife, Jeri, hails from Brownwood. "We've been here since 1975," the professor said. The club meets in April for San Jacinto Day, a celebration of Texas' independence, and in October.

During this fall's meeting, they featured the chili cookoff and liars contests.

Bunnell said the categories were Best Exotic Chili, Best Plain Chili, Hottest Chili, Best Mild Chili, Best Chili With an Addition — beans or rice.

"Beans won," he said.

Bunnell said his own "armadillo chili" won the exotic category, although the contents were never verified. "Last year, the rattlesnake chili won," he recalled.

Gene Crossley, a dean at the university, won the liar's contest with a tall tale about being devoured by a large Texas mosquito. They handed out T-shirts to the winners, laughed a lot and swapped stories about being Texans.

Mrs. Criswell said the Texans in Exile have competition for membership from the Texas A&M alumni club in Mobile.

Besides Texas football, Mrs. Criswell said she misses the blooming bluebonnets along the highways of her home state.

Texas fiddler dies in Montana

WHITEFISH, Mont. (AP) — Fiddler Donald F. Boots, whose musical career included playing stints with Buck Owens and other country-western greats, has died of natural causes. He was 65.

Boots, who died Thursday at a Whitefish hospital, played fiddle locally and also has played during his career with Owens, Roy Acuff, Bob Wills, Ray Price, Little Jimmy Dickens and others.

He had his own television show in Virginia for four years and a radio show in Wichita Falls, Texas, for many years.

Refugee still missing following escape of 17

LAREDO (AP) — Officials said Cuban refugees escaped from a minimum security facility by climbing through a steel grating in the roof.

Sixteen of the 17 who escaped early Sunday morning had been recaptured by afternoon, officials said.

Capt. George Magnon said Sunday that officers noticed the men missing from the Webb County facility about 1:50 a.m.

"They removed the steel from one of the cell blocks and got out," Magnon said.

The refugees, who had been in the facility for about two months after being transferred from a Florida federal detention center, were being held for immigration violations, Magnon said. The recaptured escapees were transferred to Webb County Jail, a maximum security facility.

Magnon said the escapees hadn't heard about the situation in Oakdale, La., where Cuban refugees held more than 20 people hostage Sunday after going on a rampage in which 17 others were injured and four buildings were torched.

However, he said he believes the Laredo attempt was sparked by Friday's announcement by the State Department that Cuba had agreed to take back about 2,500 refugees, most of them criminals or mentally ill. Of that number, 1,000 are at the Oakdale facility and about 1,400 are at the federal penitentiary in Atlanta. The remainder are scattered in more than 60 jails across the country.

"We had no problems with them (Cuban prisoners) until Thursday or Friday. When these stories started hitting the media, that's when they started getting kind of antsy," Magnon said.

Ironically, the escape attempts may hurt the refugee's chances of being released, Magnon said.

Officials had talked to the refugees Friday, telling them they probably weren't affected by the announcement.

"Apparently, they didn't believe us or they took exception to it. For whatever reason, these people just don't want to go back to Cuba," he said.

Bottle makers embossed glass with designs, slogans

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Advertising slogans, which are written to promote products of their own times, can often lose their meanings quickly. American bottle makers of the early 1800s made many containers for food and liquor, often with special designs and slogans embossed in the glass.

"Corn for the world" flasks like this one were made in Baltimore, Md., in the 1840s to hold liquor.

Today, most of us would not understand the slogans "For Pike's Peak," "Success to the Railroad" or "A little more grape Captain Bragg," with which some liquor bottles were labeled. Some of us might not even recognize the names Jenny Lind or Louis Kossuth. But one bottle name, E.G. Booz, should be recognizable: It has become synonymous with liquor.

You might guess that a flask labeled "Corn for the world" was a tribute to corn liquor or a plea for better food. Actually, it was a political flask, made in the late 1840s. In 1815, England passed laws curtailing the importing of corn; when the law was repealed in 1846, farmers in Baltimore, Md., celebrated their regained ability to export corn to England by drinking the contents of these special locally made flasks.

Q. My old oak chair is very strange. The entire back tilts into a very uncomfortable position. We can't imagine how it was used. The back of the chair is marked "The Guthridge Chair."

A. You own a dual purpose piece. It was sometimes a chair and sometimes a display rack. It was patented in 1901 by a Chicago company. We can't imagine why anyone would want a display rack-chair, but perhaps some stores found them useful.

Q. How old could my doll be? It looks a little like the Shirley Temple dolls, but it has dark hair. The head and body are of a strange hard material. It is not rubber or plastic.

A. Your doll is probably what is known as a composition doll. It is made of a special material that was popular from the early 1900s until World War II.

If the flesh tones of the doll have been chipped off, you can see a brown pressed fiber interior. Composition was sturdy, but cracked when stored in hot attics.

Q. When was the umbrella invented? I have a collection dating back to the 1860s.

A. There are several theories about the umbrella or parasol. It was known in ancient Egypt, China and India, and was first used as protection from the sun rather than from the rain.

The parasol was used to protect royalty and had a religious meaning. Statues of Dionysius (Bacchus) and later Athena were seen at festivals under parasols.

Women at the festivals began holding parasols to honor the gods. That tradition made the umbrella an accessory for women.

It was not until years later that men began to appear holding umbrellas. After A.D. 700, popes would often appear with parasols held overhead. Today we think of the parasol as a protection from the sun and the umbrella as protection from the rain.

If you want to learn more about your collection, read the new book "Umbrellas & Parasols" by Jeremy Farrell (Drama Book Publishers, N.Y. $15.95).

Q. My sugar bowl is shaped like a red tomato with green leaves. It is marked "Royal Bayreuth." How old is it?

A. The Royal Bayreuth factory was founded in Tettau, Bavaria, in 1794 and is still working.

The dishes shaped like fruit, vegetables or animals were made in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The age can be determined by the mark. The word "Bavaria" was usually part of the mark until 1919, after which the words "Germany" or "U.S. Zone" were used.

Abby unites couple by mail

DEAR ABBY: I must have started 50 letters to you over the last 20 years to thank you for one particular column. I was 18 when I read something in The Houston Post that changed my life. (I had it framed.) This is it:

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

"Dear Abby: I am a GI stationed in Thailand. During the Christmas rush, I worked in the mail room, and while there, I noticed that even though the mail volume was heavy, there were about 500 or 600 guys who would have been tickled to death to get even a bill! That is how hungry these guys are for something in their mailbox. All the world's finest foods and the USO shows can't do for a GI's morale what one letter from 'home' can do."

"Abby, if any of your readers, male or female, young or old, have time on their hands and can afford one postage stamp a week, please ask them to write to: GI JOSEPH W. KING"

You printed his address, and I was one of the many thousands who wrote. I was surprised to receive a letter in April from a Douglas Abney, U.S. Air Force, stationed in Thailand. He was 20, born in Louisiana, had a brother living in Houston, and seemed eager to correspond with me. We exchanged pictures. I thought he was handsome, and he must have thought I was OK, too. Soon we were writing to each other every day until he came back to the States in June. He had a three-week leave and spent most of it with me in Houston. My parents fell in love with him — and so did I. We were married within a year.

Now we have four fine children — Shaun, 17; Tara, 15; Jennifer, 13; and Sarah, 11.

With the holiday season approaching, I was sitting here counting my blessings, and it occurred to me that I never did thank you for the part you played in giving me a terrific husband, a beautiful family and a wonderful life. So thank you, Abby.

JANIE REEVE ABNEY,
HOUSTON

DEAR JANIE: Better late than never. Continued happiness to you and that lucky Doug. And say hi to Shaun, Tara, Jennifer and Sarah.

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote: "Why would a man send flowers to his wife on her birthday and anniversary in care of the office where she works?" You replied, "That lucky lady clearly has a very generous and thoughtful husband at home." Abby, you may be giving him credit where it is not due. That "lucky" lady may be sending flowers to herself. I once knew of such a case.

Cowboys, Oilers return to mediocrity

Dallas continues on-again, off-again routine

IRVING — Troy Stradford put his name in the Miami Dolphin record book where not even NFL Hall of Famer Larry Csonka can be found.

Stradford had the third-best rushing game in club history Sunday night as the Dolphins ground out a 20-14 NFL victory over Dallas to roll into a five-way tie for first place in the AFC East.

The rookie from Boston College gained 169 yards on 17 carries and ran 19 yards for a touchdown. He also added 83 yards on six pass receptions.

Mercury Morris gained 197 yards on 15 tries in 1973 and Gary Davis had 172 on 26 attempts in 1977. Csonka's best rushing day was 145 yards.

"The way Troy was playing, it was apparent we wanted him to get the football as much as we could," said Miami Coach Don Shula. "Stradford played a helluva game. The running game came alive when we needed it. We had to have it."

The loss dropped Dallas to 5-5 in the NFC East. Washington leads the division with a 7-2 record and play the Los Angeles Rams tonight. Miami was 15th in the NFL in rushing going into the game, but Stradford said Dallas was doing a good job defending the pass.

"They just kept calling my numbers and it kind of surprised me because I thought Dallas was supposed to be so great against the run," Stradford said. "I kept thinking Dallas would adjust. I was just taking pitchouts and reading the defense. It was real simple."

As any good running back would do, Stradford praised his offensive line, saying, "I was five or ten yards downfield before I was even touched."

Dan Marino hit 22 of 39 passes for 265 yards. His 2-yard scoring pass to James Pruitt with 8:42 to play was the game-winner after a controversial 41-yard completion to Mark Clayton.

Cornerback Ron Francis was falling with the ball when Clayton stole it away from him. Instant replay confirmed the official's decision.

"I had possession of the ball until I hit the ground; then it popped off my chest," Francis said.

"We hit the ground together and I came up with the ball," said Clayton. "It was a catch."

"It was an incredible catch by Clayton," Shula said. "It looked like Francis had the ball all the way. It bounced off his chest, and the next thing I know Clayton's got the football."

Steve Pelluer's 1987 debut as a Dallas starter drew mixed reviews. He threw touchdown passes of 8 and 18 yards to Timmy Newsome but never hit a wide receiver.

Pelluer, who was subbing for the injured Danny White, scrambled 10 times for 84 yards, beating Herschel Walker's rushing total by two yards.

"I was just taking what Miami was giving me," Pelluer said. "The scrambles weren't planned or anything."

Pelluer hit 12 of 18 passes for 134 yards but suffered two interceptions.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said his defense stopped Marino but couldn't handle Stradford.

"We did a pretty good job against Marino," Landry said. "We slowed him down, and that's all you can hope to do."

Dolphin running back Troy Stradford (23) tore apart the Cowboys.

Hints of olden days surface in Astrodome

By DAVE GOLDBERG

HOUSTON — It was supposed to be a showdown for the AFC Central lead between the Cleveland Browns and Houston Oilers. The Browns showed up, the crowd showed up, but the Oilers didn't.

"It was the biggest game of the year and we just flat choked," said Houston tight end Jamie Williams after the Browns routed the Oilers 40-7, sending the standing room only crowd of 51,161, the largest turnout in five years for an Oilers game at the Astrodome, home early.

The win put Cleveland atop the AFC Central at 7-3 and dropped the surprising Oilers, who had won only 16 games in the five seasons before this, into a second-place tie with Pittsburgh at 6-4.

Led by Frank Minniefield, Bernie Kosar and Kevin Mack, Cleveland made it such a thorough rout that Houston was in the game for only four minutes and 40 seconds. Starting in the shotgun formation, the Oilers took the opening kickoff and drove from their own eight to the Cleveland 22.

But Ernest Givins was thrown for a 13-yard loss on a reverse, Mike Rozier was thrown for a four-yard loss on a direct snap from the shotgun and the opportunity was wasted.

From there, the Browns drove 76 yards in nine plays to take a 6-0 lead — the extra point was botched — and the fans could have started leaving.

Kosar threw for 257 yards and two touchdowns. Minniefield had three interceptions and Mack rushed for 114 yards in 26 carries as the Browns went the entire first half without punting. It was 26-0 at halftime and could have been worse had not the snaps on two field goal attempts been botched. In fact, the Browns didn't let up until the third quarter, when it was 33-0 and they had out-gained Houston 349-93.

The defense was just as good as the offense, forcing six turnovers — four interceptions and two fumbles — and sacking Warren Moon three times. They also used five- and six-man attacks to force him into quick throws.

Moon had just five completions in 23 attempts for 193 yards, and even that figure was deceptive, because 83 came on a touchdown pass to Ernest Givins for Houston's only score. Moon now has four touchdown passes and 15 interceptions against Cleveland in his career.

"I certainly didn't anticipate this," said Cleveland Coach Marty Schottenheimer. "Sometimes it happens that way. Everything goes right for you and everything goes wrong for the other team."

In fact, it went so well that Schottenheimer even anticipated that Houston might try a flea-flicker, which is exactly what happened on the first play of the game. Typically for Houston, it failed — Minniefield wasn't fooled and was all over Curtis Duncan, the prospective receiver.

But not all the Browns thought that way.

"I don't want to say too much about them," said cornerback Hanford Dixon. "But I think the score stands for itself."

Kosar had touchdown passes of 27 yards to Webster Slaughter on the final offensive play of the first half and 39 to Gerald McNeil, Mack ran five yards for one score and Earnest Byner, who added 57 yards to Mack's total, scored from one yard and 17.

Houston wide receiver Ernest Givins (81) goes down with a drag by Cleveland's Ray Ellis (24).

Bowl forecasts clear, but cloudy

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Notre Dame. Upset. Clemson. Crushed. UCLA. Gone south. Nebraska. No. 1 for a week. That's it.

Miami and Syracuse. Unimpressive.

Oklahoma. Undefeated but hurting.

The New Year's Day bowl games are taking a beating, and the worst may be yet to come.

Second-ranked Oklahoma set up a potential national championship game with third-ranked Miami in the Orange Bowl by beating top-ranked Nebraska 17-7 Saturday in what some called the game of the decade. Certainly it was in the Big Eight.

Now, Orange Bowl people hold their breath. Miami has won two in a row, but just barely, and the Hurricanes have yet to play No. 7 Notre Dame and No. 12 South Carolina.

Miami built a big lead, then held on defiantly for a 24-14 victory over Toledo on Saturday. Coach Jimmy Johnson says the Hurricanes are banged up, too, but that's no excuse.

"There can be all kinds of excuses and reasons, but we were lackadaisical in our play," Johnson said. "We have not been sharp in our execution."

Maybe the Hurricanes were looking ahead. "We figured, 'Toledo? Who's Toledo?' It'll be a cakewalk," safety Bennie Blades said.

Oklahoma lost its No. 1 ranking

OU Coach Barry Switzer

to Nebraska last week when the Sooners had trouble beating Missouri without injured starters Jamelle Holieway and Lydell Carter, both out for the season.

'Loyal Buckeye' gets unfair axe

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The picture was perfect. Rump suit. Tie askew. Shirt to match. Hat sitting somewhat precariously. Earle Bruce rode off the field Saturday on the shoulders of the Ohio State football team looking, well, a little frumpy, which is, after all, the way Earle Bruce looks.

That does not work in the college town of Columbus, Ohio. Preppy would be fine. Frumpy is not.

Never mind that he had just won another football game — the 81st in his nine years at Ohio State. Never mind that no Big Ten coach had compiled a better record over that stretch. Never mind the five bowl victories, the high graduation rates, the integrity of the program. Bruce was gone, bounced because his image wasn't quite right.

Call it the Robert Redford factor.

His players demonstrated what they thought about that bit of business by wearing "Earle" headbands and giving their coach a win over Michigan in his last game. This, however, carried little clout with the administration which dispatched Bruce last week after he committed the crime of losing three straight games by a total of 10 points and not looking very fashionable doing it.

"It was a personnel decision," explained Dr. Edward Jennings, president of the university, who declined to amplify beyond that. It would be embarrassing to describe it in more direct terms, like perhaps a classic cave-in to alumni and football supporters who didn't like Bruce's style. As long as he won, they tolerated frumpy. Once he lost, they could not.

In his dismissal speech, Dr. Jennings called Bruce "a loyal Buckeye." The loyalty, however, proved to be named after some street signs — one way.

University presidents are like that sometimes. They have been known to view their faculties as necessary evils, employed only because it would be difficult for the president, saddled by all of his administrative duties, to teach all the classes, too.

Earle Bruce was hired to teach the football class at Ohio State after the legendary Woody Hayes popped a Clemson player in the 1978 Gator Bowl, thereby disqualifying himself from that job. Hayes was not exactly out of Gentleman's Quarterly, either. But he was part of the franchise. It took a sucker punch to get rid of him. Frumpiness — and a few losses — was enough excuse to fire Bruce.

Image was not Bruce's only problem. It was reported by some of Ohio State's more puritanical supporters that the coach occasionally wagered on horse races. He is, of course, the only member of the football fraternity ever to engage in that particular activity.

What's more, Bruce was not glib. Hey, you want glib? Hire Johnny Carson. Bruce never knew that was part of his job description. He thought he needed X's and O's. Instead, he needed one-liners.

So, his detractors were waiting in the high grass for Bruce, waiting for an excuse to dump the frump. All those 9-3 seasons made that a difficult task. But when Bruce made the mistake of having a mediocre season, he was gone.

To his credit, athletic director Rick Bay chose to resign rather than endorse Bruce's dismissal. Bay and Bruce will get other jobs because they are professionals with pretty good resumes.

There is one other piece of unfinished business for the coach at Ohio State, though. He responded to the firing by suing the university for a tidy $7.5 million.

How's that for frumpy?

Bucks end Lakers' streak

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — The undefeated Los Angeles Lakers seemed to be cruising along to their ninth consecutive victory, but the Milwaukee Bucks decided enough was enough.

The Bucks, who never led in regulation play Sunday night, sent the game into overtime on Larry Krystkowiak's free throw that made it 107-107 with two seconds remaining. Krystkowiak, acquired by Milwaukee from San Antonio last Wednesday, missed the first of his two free throws.

Then, with Jerry Reynolds taking control by scoring eight points in the extra period, the Bucks pulled away to a 124-116 victory over the Lakers.

"I have all the respect in the world for the Lakers, but our guys just played a great second half," Milwaukee Coach Del Harris said.

Lakers Coach Pat Riley said his club simply made too many mistakes late in the game.

"We've got no one to blame but ourselves," he said. "We didn't deserve to win."

Harris, in his first year as the Bucks' coach, said he was less than polite when he talked with his team at halftime, when Milwaukee was behind 60-49.

The Lakers led 95-83 with 9:44 remaining, but the Bucks made it 103-102 with 2:20 left, then caught the Lakers as they went scoreless for the last 1:35.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar ran his string of double-figure scorings to 783 games, but just barely.

LA's James Worthy (42) slam dunks ahead of Milwaukee's Jack Sikma.

Frogs to spend another holiday season as bowl game spectators

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

FORT WORTH — Once again, the Texas Christian Horned Frogs have nowhere to go but home for the Christmas holidays, while Texas A&M will go either to the Cotton Bowl or the Bluebonnet Bowl.

The Aggies rallied for a 42-24 victory over TCU on Saturday to set up a Thanksgiving night showdown for the Southwest Conference title with Texas.

TCU finished the season 5-6 overall and 3-4 in SWC play.

Jim Wacker's Horned Frogs had been picked near the top with his experienced team.

"It was another tough loss and a tough season," said fullback Scott Bednarski. "If it was not for bad luck we would've had no luck at all. We played all the tough teams to the wire. We have the athletes and talent but now we must fine tune it. We're definitely looking forward to next year."

TCU was shocked on Friday by the NCAA's decision to declare star running back Tony Jeffery ineligible.

Yet, the Frogs played the Aggies tough and led by a point with seven minutes to play before they allowed Darren Lewis' 80-yard scoring run then collapsed.

Defensive Kent Tramel said there is hope for the Frogs in the future.

"I'm positive that next year the Frogs will win those close games," he said.

Quarterback David Rascoe said the final score was not indicative of the game. "That's how it has been all season."

Wacker said it has been a wacky season.

"The ball bounces funny in this crazy game like the one that came back in Lewis' arms and he runs 80 yards for a score... maybe I should be a basketball coach," Wacker said.

A&M noseguard Sammy O'Brien said TCU should have won more games.

"They really battled us and you have to give them credit," he said. "They were a lot better than last year."

A&M beat TCU 74-10 last year and has now won 15 consecutive games against the Frogs.

TCU lost its last three games, to Texas Tech by a point and to Texas by three points.

Then came the fourth quarter collapse against A&M.

"We turned the program around this year," Wacker said. "We'll be back in there fighting for the title next year."

Saints march to giant victory

By The Associated Press

In the topsy-turvy NFL, the New Orleans Saints look like playoff contenders and the New York Giants look like former Super Bowl champions.

The Saints, one of the surprise teams in the league, kept moving up by almost certainly ending the Giants' postseason hopes with a 24-13 victory Sunday.

"You are talking to a coach who has just lost the game that eliminated us from the playoffs," Giants Coach Bill Parcells said after his team dropped to 3-7. "It doesn't sit well with me."

Bobby Hebert's 22-yard touchdown pass to Eric Martin in the fourth quarter put the host Saints ahead and they won their fourth straight game—the longest winning streak in the team's 21-year history.

New Orleans, which has never finished above .500, is 7-3 and one game behind NFC West-leading San Francisco.

"This may be the most important victory I've ever been around," said Saints Coach Jim Mora, who won two USFL championships.

The injury-depleted Giants endured another lackluster performance. Quarterback Phil Simms and running back Joe Morris did not play because of injuries and all-Pro Lawrence Taylor missed most of the last three quarters after re-aggravating a hamstring pull.

"The fat lady started singing weeks ago, and today she finished her tune," Taylor said.

The Giants, who lost their first five games this season, are three games behind in the chase for a wild-card playoff berth with only six games left.

Seahawks 34, Chargers 3
Dave Krieg threw two touchdown passes and ran for another score as hosts Seattle stopped San Diego's eight-game winning streak. Curt Warner had his second straight 100-yard game.

San Diego still leads the AFC West at 8-2 while Seattle is 7-3.

Broncos 23, Raiders 17
John Elway passed for a touchdown and ran for another, helping Denver send Los Angeles to its seventh straight loss. Elway completed 16 of 29 passes for 298 yards.

Vance Johnson caught five passes for 115 yards, including a 24-yard TD. Rich Karlis kicked three field goals for the visiting Broncos, 6-3-1.

Bo Jackson ran for his first two NFL touchdowns and led all rushers with 98 yards. The Raiders fell to 3-7.

Bears 30, Lions 10
Shaun Gayle returned an interception 20 yards for a touchdown and Chicago's aggressive defense helped the Bears improve to 8-2, tied for the best record in the NFL.

The Bears held Detroit to 30 yards rushing. Jim McMahon threw a 31-yard touchdown pass to Dennis McKinnon as Chicago took a 27-10 lead at halftime.

49ers 24, Buccaneers 10
Joe Montana completed 29 of 45 passes for 304 yards and threw TD strikes of 42, 21 and 3 yards to Jerry Rice as San Francisco won at Tampa Bay.

The 49ers won for the eighth time in nine games. The Buccaneers are 4-6.

Patriots 24, Colts 0
New England scored third-quarter touchdowns when Willie Scott returned a blocked punt three yards and Ronnie Lippett went 45 yards with an interception, as the Patriots and Colts joined the five-way AFC deadlock.

The Colts were shut out for the first time in four seasons. Indianapolis' Eric Dickerson gained 117 yards but lost a fumble.

Bills 17, Jets 14
Jim Kelly's 25-yard touchdown pass to Walter Broughton contributed to Buffalo ending a seven-game losing streak against New York. The Bills and Jets are also tied for the AFC East lead.

Kelly extended his string of consecutive games with a touchdown pass to 15. Jets quarterback Ken O'Brien threw two touchdown passes.

Strong, gusty winds at Giants Stadium made passing and kicking difficult for most of the game. Buffalo led 10-7 at halftime.

Packers 23, Chiefs 3
Randy Wright's two touchdown passes to Frankie Neal in the second half enabled Green Bay to send Kansas City to its franchise-record ninth straight loss.

Wright did not start because of an injured ankle but relieved an ineffective Don Majkowski and rallied the visiting Packers, 4-5-1, who ended a three-game losing streak. The Chiefs are 1-9, worst in the NFL.

Vikings 24, Falcons 13
Leo Lewis went 78 yards on Minnesota's first punt return for a touchdown in 19 years and the Vikings handed Atlanta its fifth straight loss.

Lewis gave host Minnesota a 17-7 lead with 5:48 remaining in the third quarter. The last punt return for a touchdown by the Vikings was Charlie West's 98-yarder in 1968. Minnesota also blocked a punt by Rick Donnelly.

The Vikings are 6-4. The Falcons are 2-8.

Sun Bowl teams set

EL PASO (AP) — No. 13-ranked Oklahoma State will face West Virginia in the Sun Bowl after Ohio State turned down a bid to play in the Christmas Day game.

"I'm so doggone happy I can't believe it," WVU coach Don Nehlen said Sunday after his team accepted the bid. "I'm so happy for these kids. They were just devastated after that game at Syracuse."

WVU lost to Syracuse 32-31 Saturday night, but the Sugar Bowl-bound Orangemen had to score a touchdown and two-point conversion with 10 seconds left to take the victory.

Sun Bowl officials originally offered a bid to Ohio State, 6-4-1, to play Oklahoma State, which accepted a bid Saturday night.

Ohio State Athletic Director Rick Bay, who resigned in the wake of the firing of coach Earle Bruce, said last week the Buckeyes would turn down any bowl bid, but the Sun Bowl officials extended it anyway after Ohio State's 23-20 upset of Michigan.

"We heard the (Ohio State) seniors wanted to go to a bowl game and a lot of people feel they should be able to accept the bowl after a tough season," said John Folmer, the Sun Bowl's selection committee chairman.

When Ohio State officials turned down the invitation, the bid was extended to West Virginia.

Bowl officials met late Saturday night and again Sunday morning before deciding on West Virginia, Sun Bowl President Ted Houghton said Sunday. Oklahoma State accepted the bid Saturday shortly after the Cowboys defeated Iowa State 48-27 in Stillwater.

"We chose West Virginia because they have a great draw on the East Coast," Houghton said. "Their record is 6-5, but they barely lost to Syracuse (Saturday) night. All their losses have been close."

"They're just a strong team," he said.

WVU has appeared in the Sun Bowl twice previously, defeating Texas Tech 7-6 after the 1938 season and defeating Texas-El Paso 21-12 after the 1948 season.

Fired Buckeye coach Earle Bruce criticized his school's decision to turn down the bowl invitation.

"It hurts me for the seniors. The university has washed the seniors down the road," said Bruce, reached at home Sunday evening.

Sun Bowl officials were prepared to invite Southern California, but the Trojans upset No. 5 UCLA 17-13 to win a berth in the Rose Bowl against Michigan State.

Other teams being considered for a bid were Minnesota, Oregon and Washington.

The Cowboys compiled a 9-2 record this season, losing only to No. 1 Nebraska and No. 2 Oklahoma.
