Sandinista boss defects to U.S. Military officer reportedly leaked Nicaragua's secrets

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top Nicaraguan military officer believed to have access to highly sensitive information has defected to the United States, an administration official said today.

The official refused further comment, but published reports said the officer was familiar with the Sandinista government's tactics, strategy and intelligence operations.

Maj. Roger Miranda Bengoechea, 34, abruptly left Nicaragua on Oct. 25. The New York Times reported today, quoting diplomats, politicians and a Nicaraguan government communique.

The Washington Times quoted a well-placed source as saying Miranda was spying for the United States for a long time before he defected, and is now being debriefed. The newspaper did not say where Miranda was.

The U.S. State Department declined to comment and the American Embassy in Managua said it had no information on Miranda's whereabouts. The reported defection came at a critical time diplomatically, with a Central American peace accord scheduled to take effect Thursday.

"Even if he has not been working for the CIA all these years, he is still a gold mine for them," a foreign military officer who studied the Nicaraguan army told the New York Times.

The New York Times newspaper quoted Miranda's associates anonymously as saying he supervised the staff of Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, brother of Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega.

Miranda also directed the military's public relations effort, took the official notes at meetings of the military general staff and was at private meetings when Humberto Ortega discussed tactics, strategy and intelligence, the New York Times said.

Miranda was one of about 105 members of the Sandinista Assembly, the ruling party's top consultative body, the newspaper said.

Miranda joined the leftist Sandinistas in the 1970s and fought as a guerrilla in the revolution that overthrew dictator Anastasio Somoza in 1979. He may be the highest-ranking Sandinista to depart since Eden Pastora Gomez, who was deputy defense minister and chief of the militia, joined the opposition in 1981.

Voters deciding pari-mutuel wagering, 26 other issues

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Polls opened at 7 a.m. today as Texas voters began deciding the fate of more than two dozen proposals related to a range of topics from race track gambling to nuclear physics.

Heading the list is a statewide referendum on whether to legalize pari-mutuel wagering on horse and dog races. Race track gambling has been outlawed in the state for 50 years.

Also being decided is a proposal to issue $500 million in state bonds to help lure the "super collider," a $4.4 billion federal atom-smasher research project.

Voters will say whether the State Board of Education should remain a body appointed by the governor, or revert to an elected panel as it was before the sweeping House Bill 72 school reforms of 1984.

A total of 25 proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution and two statewide referendums will be on the lengthy ballot. Several hot local issues also are on ballots in some spots.

With no candidates for statewide office on the ballot, Secretary of State Jack Rains has predicted that about 14 percent of the state's 7.3 million registered voters will go to the polls.

"We've continued to monitor the counties, and we're sticking with our 14 percent voter turnout projection," Rains said Monday.

"Any last-minute media blitz (by various campaigns) should help increase turnout, and we're seeing some of that. I hope the turnout exceeds 14 percent. But realistically, I don't think we'll see much more than that."

Maxine Morris, an elections official in Ector County in West Texas, said voter turnout this morning was good.

"If this continues it looks like it will be a lot more than we expected," she said.

Turnout was steady in Nueces County in South Texas, with no signs of a dropoff in voters after 9 a.m., when most people go to work, said county clerk Marion Uehlinger.

In Tarrant County in North Texas, turnout was moderate to heavy, said elections administrator Robert Parten. "We're having a real good turnout on constitutional amendment elections," he said.

Parten predicted some delays in voting due to the lengthy ballot. "We have been trying to tell people through the media that there will be a long ballot and that they need to do whatever they can before they come to the polling place," he said, adding that voters could spend 15-20 minutes in the booth if they haven't yet decided how to vote on the issues.

In Houston, Mayor Kathy Whitmire is seeking re-election against six challengers, and absentee voting there has been running heavier than two years ago.

In Austin, voters are being asked — again — whether to move the municipal airport from its location near downtown to a site east of the city. Absentee voting was heavier there, too, election officials said.

Probably the most attention has been focused on the pari-mutuel wagering issue.

Texas last allowed pari-mutuel gambling from 1933 to 1937. It also was legal from 1905 to 1909.

The question was placed before voters by state legislators who have debated the question without resolution for years.

Backers pushed the referendum as a job-creating, economy-boosting plan that would raise $100 million in taxes for state government within five years.

Opponents charged that horse and dog racing backers had overstated the benefits of the sport and understated its drawbacks. Gary McNeil, spokesman for the anti-gambling Texans Who Care campaign, said gambling would have a small economic benefit, create low-paying seasonal jobs and attract organized crime.

If the statewide referendum passes, a legalizing election still would be needed before wagering could begin in a county. Fifty-seven counties are holding such elections in conjunction with the statewide issue.

Stocks, dollar fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices gave back some of their recent gains today following losses overseas as confidence in the dollar's stability appeared to weaken.

The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 blue-chip stocks fell about 25 points to about 1,989 about 10 minutes after the opening of trading.

The dollar slid in European and early U.S. trading late Monday and again today following remarks Monday by Karl Otto Poehl, president of West Germany's central bank, expressing concern about inflation and indicating no plans to stimulate his country's economy to absorb more imports.

A selloff in London of stocks and the dollar today raised fears about the durability of a rebound on Wall Street, where the Dow Jones average rose back above the 2,000 mark Monday in the calmest trading since the Oct. 19 crash.

In London today, the dollar was quoted at 136.45 yen, down from a 40-year low of 136.98 yen in New York on Monday and sharply off Monday's close in Tokyo of 137.58. It declined further in New York early today to 136.20 yen and was dropping against most other key currencies.

The Dow average closed Monday at 2,014.09, a gain of 1 percent. Trading volume on the New York Stock Exchange fell below 200 million shares for the first time since the Oct. 19 collapse.

Five stocks advanced for every three that declined, and the value of all U.S. stocks rose $37 billion, according to the Wilshire Associates tally.

Monday's advance was the fifth consecutive gain for the Dow average since it lost 156.83 points the previous Monday. Two Mondays ago, the Dow crashed a record 508 points in a frenzy that wiped out $500 billion from the value of U.S. stocks.

Two days after the crash, the Dow closed at 2,028, its last close above 2,000.

Since Black Monday, the Dow has managed to recoup 54 percent of the ground lost in the collapse.

Wall Street's latest advance spilled over into the Hong Kong Stock Exchange today, where share prices closed mixed in light trading. The Hang Seng index slipped 22.49 points, or 1 percent, to 2,180.74, while utility stocks posted a modest rise and trading companies broke even.

A national holiday kept markets closed today in Tokyo, where a key stock index gained nearly 1 percent on Monday.

Wall Street's gain Monday came as the Labor Department announced that productivity of American workers rose 2.6 percent. See STOCKS, Page 2

Reagan to shuffle Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger intends to resign, after presiding over a huge Pentagon buildup for seven years, and will be replaced by President Reagan's national security adviser, Frank C. Carlucci, sources say.

The sources, speaking Monday night on condition of anonymity, said the change of the guard would be announced soon, possibly Thursday, and that Carlucci's deputy, Lt. Gen. Colin Powell, will take over as Reagan's national security adviser. Powell will be the first black to hold that position.

Neither Weinberger nor Carlucci would comment on the job shift, and the White House also declined to put it on the record. But White House officials did not dispute the report.

Meanwhile, the president will nominate former Interior Undersecretary Ann Dore McLaughlin to succeed William E. Brock as secretary of labor, according to administration officials.

The officials, declining to be quoted by name or position, said Monday that the White House would announce Reagan's nomination of Mrs. McLaughlin for the post today.

"It's going to be her," one administration source said of Mrs. McLaughlin's pending nomination. Officials in business and labor organizations also said they had been told by administration officials that Reagan would nominate Mrs. McLaughlin.

The White House would neither confirm nor deny Reagan's intention to nominate Mrs. McLaughlin to fill the post for the last 15 months of his administration. But the White House advised reporters to expect an announcement on the Cabinet vacancy this afternoon.

Nude suspect shows police jacket, more

RICHARDSON (AP) — Police say a man's attempt to conceal his identity actually led to his arrest in this Dallas suburb because he went a little too far in an effort to change his appearance.

Officers say Ricky White, 21, of Richardson, was arrested as he walked nude along North Central Expressway only minutes after a woman notified officers that a man had tried to break into her apartment.

The 32-year-old woman said she was awakened by a noise about early Monday and saw a man in a two-tone football jacket running away.

Two Richardson police officers stopped the man walking along the expressway less than a mile from the woman's apartment.

Police spokesman James Wheatley said the man became hostile when the officers asked him where his clothes were. He was arrested for aggravated assault of a police officer and ordered held at the Richardson City Jail in lieu of $3,000 bond.

The man then led officers to his clothes, which matched the description of those worn by the would-be burglar, in an alley near the woman's apartment, Wheatley said.

dollar lower and would not allow it to plunge out of control. Monday's NYSE trading volume was a modest 176.04 million shares. The session ended at 2:30 p.m. EST, half an hour later than last week but still 1 1/2 hours earlier than normal. The New York Stock Exchange has curtailed sessions because of the heavy volume of trading.

The dollar's value fell Monday after release of a speech by Karl Otto Poehl, president of West Germany's central bank, expressing continuing concern about inflation and indicating no plans to stimulate his country's economy to absorb more imports.

The dollar was bid at about 137.00 yen by midafternoon in New York, its lowest level since the late 1940s, down from 138.35 yen late Friday. The dollar sagged to 1.71 West German marks in New York from 1.73 late Friday. Its postwar record low against the mark is 1.70.

Some 3,000 Wall Street clerical employees were on the job Monday, working without contracts after their old pacts expired over the weekend.

A mediator imposed a news blackout on negotiations. Trading was not affected, said Martha Cid, an NYSE spokeswoman.

High court hears abortion case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion would become a less-available alternative for many of the more than 1 million American teen-agers who become pregnant each year if the Supreme Court reinstates an Illinois law now under study.

The justices were to hear arguments today over the constitutionality of the Illinois law, similar to those in about half the states.

A decision in the case, the only abortion controversy currently before the court, is expected by July.

The Illinois law, enacted by the state General Assembly in 1983 over Gov. James R. Thompson's veto, required that unmarried girls under 18 and still financially dependent on their parents notify their parents 24 hours before they abort their pregnancies.

The notification requirement could be waived altogether if the girl proves to a state judge that she is mature enough and well-informed enough to make the decision on her own and that notifying her parents would not be in her best interest.

Failure to comply with the requirements was made a crime.

After doctors who perform abortions challenged the law, a federal trial judge struck it down. But the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals did not go that far.

The appeals court ruled that the 24-hour waiting period was an impermissible infringement on the right to have an abortion. But it left to the state Supreme Court the issue of whether the 1983 law sufficiently protected confidentiality and anonymity.

The state court has not yet ruled on that issue. The nation's highest court first must decide whether the state's appeal from the 7th Circuit court's ruling is premature in light of the state court's inaction.

Handful of lawyers and firms finance Supreme Court races

DALLAS (AP) — Eight lawyers and law firms in Texas have contributed almost one-fifth of the $7.9 million in campaign contributions reported by Texas Supreme Court judges, a newspaper reported.

In a copyright story, the Dallas Times Herald said Monday that members of the eight firms appeared 28 times before the court in disputes settled since 1985 by written opinions.

The newspaper said lawyers who have contributed heavily to the campaign funds responded that they are driven by a sense of civic duty and support for the state's legal system, which requires judges to win partisan elections.

Contributors condemn attorneys who fail to participate in financing judicial campaigns for not paying their "fair share," the newspaper reported.

"I am not worried about the money at all, and whatever you found for me, I wish we had given more," said Wayne Fisher of Fisher, Gallagher, Perrin & Lewis, which gave $137,469. "Those of us in the profession who have done well and who believe in the system and who have benefited from the system, I think owe it back ... to contribute substantially."

Among those lawyers and firms that have made direct contributions of more than $100,000 to the justices' campaigns since 1980 are Houston attorney Joe D. Jamaill Jr. and his son Joe Jamaill III, who gave $238,000.

Others include Corpus Christi attorneys Bill Edwards, David Perry, Russell McMains and Anthony Constant, who gave $252,887 through a political action committee led by Edwards and Perry.

The Houston law firm of Vinson & Elkins gave $230,551 through its Texas Good Government Fund political action committee, and the Houston firm of Helm, Fletcher, Hogan, Bowen & Saunders gave $151,225.

"When the campaign contributions come to the level that this evidences, then I think we have to stop and re-evaluate," said former Chief Justice John Hill, who has said he will step down in January to crusade for a new system of selecting appellate judges.

Hill favors "merit selection," by which judges are appointed, but must be approved or rejected by the voters after their first terms in office.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, a member of a legislative committee studying judicial reform, said the dense concentration of contributions demonstrates a need for a fundamental change to a process such as merit selection.

"The appearance of undue influence is so significant it compromises the very heart and soul of the judiciary," he said. "All of these firms are people of the highest integrity, but I know them. If I had a case against them and if I was a litigant and my adversary was represented by one of these firms, I would have a feeling something improper was going on."

Cabinet

State George P. Shultz over arms control policies, Weinberger, 70, is stepping aside for personal reasons, largely related to his wife's deteriorating health, rather than any policy dispute, the sources said.

Jane Weinberger, according to acquaintances quoted in today's Washington Post, has undergone radiation treatments for cancer and has been troubled by arthritis.

The expected resignation comes little more than a month before Reagan joins Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev at a summit meeting in Washington to sign the first superpower arms control agreement of the Reagan administration.

Carlucci, 57, grandson of an Italian immigrant stonecutter, is a veteran of three decades of government service, including senior domestic and international positions.

He was second in command at the Office of Economic Opportunity and deputy to Weinberger at the Office of Management and Budget in the Nixon administration. He also was second in command at the CIA under President Carter and second, again to Weinberger, at the Pentagon from 1981 to 1982.

He became Reagan's fifth national security adviser when the Iran-Contra affair forced Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter to resign.

Powell, 50, one of the highest-ranking blacks in the Army, once commanded the 101st Airborne Division. He agreed to become Carlucci's deputy only reluctantly, fearful that a desk job in Washington would stymie his military career.

Weinberger has fought frequent internal battles with Shultz and other White House advisers on topics ranging from arms control and Pentagon spending to the proper use of U.S. military forces. Sometimes he appeared more reluctant than Shultz to commit American forces to trouble spots.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., welcomed the forthcoming changes at the Pentagon. "I just never had very much confidence in Cap Weinberger, and I have a great deal of confidence in Frank Carlucci," he said.

William E. Jackson Jr., senior fellow at the Fulbright Institute of International Relations at the University of Arkansas, said Weinberger's resignation "will, intangibly, improve the atmosphere" at the U.S.-Soviet summit conference opening in Washington on Dec. 7.

"The Russians will read this as a positive sign," Jackson said.

Weinberger is a strong advocate of the "Star Wars" missile defense program and backs continued military assistance to resistance groups in Nicaragua and Afghanistan.

Weinberger served as President Nixon's secretary of health, education and welfare and as head of the budget office, where he earned the nickname "Cap the Knife" for his efficiency at cutting domestic programs.

But at the Pentagon he presided over a $2 trillion military buildup in the face of budget deficits, tax cuts and politically distasteful domestic cuts.

Brock, 56, announced his resignation nearly three weeks ago to become the chairman of Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole's campaign for the Republican presidential nomination in 1988, effective Nov. 1.

He had held the labor post for 2 1/2 years after serving the first five years of Reagan's administration as U.S. trade representative.

If confirmed by the Senate, Mrs. McLaughlin would be the third labor secretary during Reagan's presidency. The first, Raymond Donovan, resigned four years into the job amid charges that a construction company he formerly headed had received kickbacks from minority contractors. A New York jury found Donovan innocent of those charges.

Mrs. McLaughlin, 45, resigned last March as the No. 2 official in the Interior Department following several clashes with Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel.

Rex Hardesty, a spokesman for the AFL-CIO, said the labor federation had been informed that Mrs. McLaughlin would be Reagan's nominee to succeed Brock.

"We know of nothing to recommend her nor nothing to oppose her on," Hardesty said Monday night. "So the AFL-CIO looks forward to working with the new secretary of labor."

Officers crowd cop killer's trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A defense lawyer says the presence of more than 250 armed, uniformed police officers in and around a courtroom will be grounds for a new trial for his client.

Lawyer Alan Brown made the statement Monday after a jury set 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine as punishment for Gustavo Pimentel for his voluntary manslaughter conviction in the Christmas Eve 1983 slaying of a San Antonio officer.

Pimentel, 46, had been accused of shooting to death officer Gilbert Ramirez during a family disturbance.

The outcome of the trial left both sides unhappy. Prosecutors had wanted a murder conviction and defense lawyers had sought probation for Pimentel, who testified he did not know he was shooting at the officer.

Two inmates briefly escape

HOUSTON (AP) — Two inmates who escaped while being transported from a Galveston hospital back to prison were recaptured about 2 1/2 hours later in an apartment, officials say.

Both prisoners were recaptured without incident at about 5:35 p.m. Monday in Pasadena, a few miles east of Houston, Texas Department of Corrections spokesman David Nunnelee said.

The two men were found under a bed in an apartment, authorities said.

The escapees and two other inmates were being transported in a van from TDC's hospital in Galveston back to prison about 3 p.m., when they apparently grabbed guard's gun and escaped, Nunnelee said.

Texas Supreme Court rules for Pennzoil

AUSTIN (AP) — Texaco Inc. blasted the Texas Supreme Court's decision to uphold a judgment ordering the energy giant to pay Pennzoil Co. $11.1 billion and says it will appeal to the nation's highest court.

The Texas Supreme Court, without writing an opinion, said Monday there was no reversible error in the case by Texas' 1st Court of Appeals in Houston, which earlier this year upheld the 1985 jury decision.

Texaco was ordered to pay the money for interfering four years ago in Pennzoil's planned merger with Getty Oil Co. Reaction from Texaco on the ruling was quick and critical.

"This refusal to hear our appeal defies both logic and law," said James W. Kinnear, Texaco's president and chief executive officer. "We will promptly ask the U.S. Supreme Court to review this case."

"The Texas Supreme Court's failure to review this case also raises serious questions about the Texas legal system's ability to meet the constitutional requirement of giving full faith and credit in judicial proceedings to the laws of other states, a basic underpinning of our nation's legal and economic systems," Kinnear said.

"We look forward to the day when the U.S. Supreme Court will rectify the distortions of justice that have figured so prominently in this case."

But Joseph Jamail, Pennzoil's lead attorney in the case against Texaco, said the court did review the case even though it did not hear oral arguments on it.

"That's some more misinformation put out by Texaco and that is a lie," he said in response to Kinnear's statement that the court did not review the case.

"That's their motif," Jamail said of Kinnear's criticisms. "They literally stole Getty away from Pennzoil and now, to cover up their blunder, they want to abuse our entire judicial system. They ought to be ashamed."

To appeal the November 1985 verdict — the largest civil judgment in U.S. history — Texas law required that Texaco had to post an appeal bond roughly equal to the amount of the judgment. Instead, Texaco filed in April for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code to void that state requirement.

Texaco could ask the Texas Supreme Court to reconsider its decision, but Kinnear said Monday the company will appeal directly to the U.S. Supreme Court. Anita Larsen, a Texaco spokeswoman in White Plains, N.Y., said she is not sure when such an appeal will be filed.

Texas Supreme Court decisions usually are made on Mondays, but almost without exception not released until Wednesdays.

Chief Justice John Hill said the Texaco-Pennzoil decision was announced Monday because, "We were concerned that rumors sometimes float about cases' possible outcome, and we felt it would be fair to everybody to go ahead" and release the decision.

Not surprisingly, the court's ruling pleased Pennzoil officials. "This decision, we think, is amply supported by the record in the case and by the applicable laws," Pennzoil spokesman Bob Harper said.

Harper also said Pennzoil remains willing to negotiate an out-of-court settlement.

"We think it is unfortunate that Texaco's management has persisted in its all-or-nothing strategy in this case and has not made a serious effort to satisfy this judgment by settlement at a level which Texaco could easily accommodate and which Pennzoil could justify to its shareholders.

"The last offer we made to Texaco was $4.1 billion prior to (Monday's) ruling," he said.

Ms. Larsen said Monday that White Plains-based Texaco always has said it was willing to negotiate on a reasonable economic basis but would not discuss a specific amount.

The battle over control of Getty began in December 1983 when Houston-based Pennzoil offered $100 a share for about 20 percent of Getty stock. On Jan. 6, 1984, Texaco reached an agreement to acquire Getty for $125 a share, later raised to $128.

Pennzoil sued, claiming interference. The company sought $7.53 billion in actual damages and $7.3 billion in punitive damages.

Failed bank's furnishings called 'lavish' by auctioneer

AUSTIN (AP) — The failed United Bank of Austin was filled with nice things, say the auctioneer and liquidator who are trying to sell a rodeo arena full of the furniture, equipment and machines from the bank.

"This was the most lavishly furnished bank that my office has handled this year," said Robert Lehman, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation liquidator handling the Thursday-Saturday auction.

But as he looked down on the goods for which United Bank paid $4.1 million, Lehman said, "I don't believe the furnishings were the reason for the bank's failing."

United Bank, housed in a high rise near the Capitol, failed for the same reason many Texas banks have — bad loans and bad decisions, according to Lehman.

About 4,500 items from United Bank await the auctioneer's call in the Texas Exposition and Heritage Center. Rugs are spread on the bleachers. It all sits below signs that say "This Bud's For You" and "Welcome Rodeo Fans."

It obviously is not the fate that Ruben Johnson, chief executive officer for the bank that failed in June, had in mind when he bought the items.

"It doesn't feel good," Johnson said Monday when told how the merchandise was being displayed. "We did everything we could to keep the bank from failing."

Texarkana auctioneer Mark Thomas, who will supervise the sale, said he has done several bank auctions, but has not seen anything like this one. "The quality is unsurpassed. It's not unusual to go into the executive offices... and see a leather-top desk and furnishings. But it is unusual when you see 40 truckloads of this stuff come in and all of it the same quality," he said.

But Johnson said there was nothing "opulent" about how United Bank was furnished.

"It's good furniture. But there's been an awful lot of hype about it. We used furniture-store furniture," he said.

"There are only seven antiques in the whole lot," Johnson added.

The $4.1 million in goods to be auctioned is a small percentage of the $149.2 million in assets the FDIC took over as receiver for the failed bank, Lehman said. Proceeds will go to the FDIC and unsecured creditors.

In addition to the office furniture, purchasers can bid on kitchen equipment, exercise gear and banking equipment, including two automatic teller machines.

New 'Fat Magnet' Diet Pill Guarantees Fast Weight Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

No Dieting—Eat Normally
Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You will start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

There has never been anything like it before. It is a totally new major medical breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patent pending).

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in fat particles. Then, all that trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body because it cannot be digested.

Within 2 days you will notice a change in the color of your stool as the fat particles are being eliminated.

"Pills Do All the Work"

According to the doctors, the fat-magnet pills do all the work while you quickly lose fat with no starvation diet menus to follow, no calorie counting, no exercising, and no hunger pangs. It is 100% safe. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

The fat-magnet pills have just been offered to the American public and are already sweeping the country with record sales and reports of dramatic weight loss. It's the "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Residents wash away leak residue

TEXAS CITY (AP) — The cleanup continues among residents who returned to homes they were forced to evacuate this weekend because of a hydrofluoric acid leak.

Residents washed porches and yards Monday to remove the residue left behind by the chemical leak on Friday that released a toxic cloud and forced the evacuation of about 3,000 people.

Of the hundreds who were injured, 44 remained hospitalized today at two Texas City hospitals for treatment of respiratory problems stemming from the industrial accident at the Marathon Petroleum Co. plant.

People living near the plant were allowed to go home Sunday night. They returned to neighborhoods that were turned an autumnal brown by the toxic acid.

Many residents hosed down their porches and yards to get rid of fluoride residue from the leak, and they were warned to wash their cars, throw out exposed food, and clean their eating utensils.

"My leaves are all brown. This place looks deserted," said Maria Gutierrez, 33.

Despite assurances from city and Marathon officials, Ms. Gutierrez, a convenience store clerk, said she feared for the safety of herself and her 2-year-old son.

"The smell is too strong," she said.

The toxic acid spilled after a crane accidentally dropped its load, rupturing pipes leading into a hydrofluoric acid storage tank. When the acid came into contact with air, it vaporized, sending a toxic cloud skyward, said Marathon spokesman Bill Ryder.

At AMI-Danforth Hospital, 38 patients remained hospitalized with respiratory problems, nursing supervisor Joanne Butler said. Hospital spokeswoman Beverly Boase said that since Friday evening, 600 people had been treated and 133 admitted.

A total of 171 people were treated at Mainland Center Hospital, spokeswoman Pat Kirk said Monday. Six remained hospitalized, nursing supervisor Jody Hocking said.

Marathon has agreed to pay for hospital costs for people who sought treatment by 12:01 a.m. Monday. Those treated after that time can file claims with the company, he said.

Progress of the cleanup operation was slow because of the delicate nature of the task and because of numerous safety precautions, Ryder said. He said pipes draining the chemical needed to remain chilled, posing a tricky problem.

The Texas City mayor, however, said he thought Marathon should have worked faster to clear the ruptured tank, which was emptied at 9:40 p.m. Sunday.

"I think they should have brought in a bigger pump from the beginning to pump that darned stuff out of there quicker," Mayor Emmett Lowry said. "We're glad it's over, and we're ready to go on now."

Pumping began at 1:15 p.m. Saturday but was complicated by the daytime temperatures.

Soldier turned over to military authorities

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal magistrate ordered a Fort Hood soldier over to military officials after charges of possession of destructive devices were dropped.

Pvt. Steven Milentz, 21, was arrested late Friday night after he walked up, apparently intoxicated, and began questioning officers investigating the shooting of three soldiers near Belton. Bell County sheriff's officers said they were about to arrest him for drunkenness when a deputy saw suspicious items in the soldier's vehicle.

ment of Milentz's vehicle, according to a complaint filed in U.S. District Court in Austin.

Milentz appeared Monday at a hearing before U.S. Magistrate Joseph Capelle, who granted a request of Fort Hood authorities that Milentz be turned over to their custody for prosecution.

Bell County sheriff's officers said Monday that Milentz is not a suspect in the shootings, which occurred Friday night at Stillhouse Hollow Reservoir about four miles southwest of Belton. One man was killed and two other were wounded.

Taxes subsidize art despite public apathy

In an unjustly neglected novel, Time Will Run Back by Henry Hazlitt, the main character, contemplating returning to private life after a decade of intensive involvement in government and politics, finally concludes: "My new definition of a good society is simple: It is one in which it is possible for a man who loves Mozart to devote himself to Mozart. In other words, it is one in which an artist can feel free to devote himself exclusively to his art."

How are artists to be supported, especially if their exertions are not as remunerative as those of, say, Michael Jackson? Should they rely strictly on straight sales plus whatever can be raised voluntarily from patrons? Or should government step in and provide money exacted from taxpayers to subsidize their contributions to culture? What risks and benefits come from government's involvement in the arts?

It is more difficult than is generally acknowledged to justify using money seized by force to support the arts. Rock stars, popular singers, big-time actors, and trendy painters may earn huge sums; although for every successful artist or performer there are thousands of people with talent who didn't "make it," one seldom hears a plea to subsidize struggling "popular" artists. The plea is generally for the ill-defined category of "fine" or "serious" art — a category chronically "underfunded" precisely as a result of voluntary choices made by people who earned their own money by the sweat of their brows in the first place.

One may deplore on esthetic (or any other) grounds the fact that Run DMC is likely to sell more tickets than the Vienna Philharmonic. But is one then justified in seizing money from Run DMC fans (and those with no interest in any arts, popular, or otherwise) to subsidize the "right" arts? Should we be bothered that government subsidies of the arts so often take the money of the janitor and factory workers to subsidize the entertainments and pleasures of the wealthy — thus accomplishing the neat trick of redistribution of wealth upward?

From the other side, how helpful is it to have activists urging budding artists to get more involved in politics, to learn to play "hardball" in the frantic scramble to get more of what the state is willing to dole out?

The government arts establishments in this country may never exert such blatant and brutal political control over the arts as the Nazis did and the communists still do. But only the terminally naive would deny that bureaucratic largess does influence the arts.

Those who urge more intertwining between politics and the arts are no friends of the truly independent artist.

Our society is able and willing to support the arts through voluntary means. There is no pressing need for government funding — and much potential danger in seeking to increase the entanglement between the arts and politics.

Public loses Reagan's contact

One of the bedrock convictions of every member of the Washington press corps is that no president ever holds enough news conferences. Get a group of farmers together and inevitably they will complain about prices; get a group of Washington reporters together, and you won't have to wait long to hear them grouse about how seldom the president condescends to answer their questions.

This is not the sort of complaint that evokes outrage in the average citizen, who is apt to suspect that presidents have more important things to do than joust with Sam Donaldson and Chris Wallace. And the rare occasions when Ronald Reagan does so serve mainly to allow reporters to be pushy and insolent. This strongly reinforces the popular suspicion that the press conference is a useless and obsolete ritual.

Last month's meeting between Reagan and reporters, his first in Washington since March, followed the familiar pattern. The game was to try to 1) embarrass the president and 2) trick him into saying something he didn't want to say.

So nearly a third of the questions (though it seemed like more) dealt with Reagan's long-standing opposition to tax increases, which was assumed to be the sole cause of the recent stock market collapse. Most of these questions were asked in a tone of polite but triumphant contempt. With the embarrassment of the president thus achieved, the reporters kept returning to the same subject in the hope that Reagan would admit that he would accept a tax increase in his negotiations with Congress — an admission he doggedly refused to make.

What did anyone learn from this? Not much. The supposed aim of press conference is to promote an informed public. The only thing the TV audience was better informed about when this news conference ended was the reporters' dislike of Reagan. Even viewers who aren't fond of the president were bound to feel a twinge of sympathy for someone forced to suffer this insufferable crowd.

Donaldson and company, however, have some reason to feel peevish — more peevish than usual, I mean. They are like dogs bred to run who are never let out of the kennel. No president in modern times has ever felt so little obligation to answer questions about his policies and actions. Since he took office, he has held only 42 press conferences, an average of one every two months.

After seven years, Reagan's extraordinary insulation from journalists has come to seem normal. It's hard to believe that Franklin Roosevelt held 998 news conferences in 12 years (seven a month, on average) or that Dwight Eisenhower held 193 in eight years (two a month). Jimmy Carter, despite sour relations with White House reporters, stoically submitted to questioning more than once a month. Even the ultra-paranoid Richard Nixon, in his first term, had press conferences more than twice as often as Reagan has.

Is Reagan's allergy to this forum such a bad thing? Not necessarily. As the most recent visit to the zoo showed, news conferences don't always yield much of value. Much of what goes on in these televised gatherings is mere posturing by temperamental reporters, not a sincere effort to extract useful information.

The problem is that Reagan rarely has anything but passing contact with the people who are supposed to look after the public's need for information. His handlers simply won't allow him in a setting where he might have to deal with questions he'd rather not answer. A formal press conference doesn't look good unless you compare it to the usual forum, in which reporters vainly scream questions at the chief executive over the din of helicopter engines.

But a president is obliged to explain and justify his policies to the people who elected him. It is this obligation that Reagan has shirked. Though the people may not like the press, they do depend on it.

The prime-time TV extravaganza is an institution that has lost much of its purpose. But that's no reason a president can't sit down with a couple of dozen reporters every week or two, without cameras, and demonstrate some acquaintance with the issues of the day. A less formal approach would deprive the more overbearing pests of the spotlight without depriving the public of information. Frequent meetings also would force the president to stay in constant touch with what his administration is doing.

Americans watching news conferences may conclude that Reagan is right to shun the press. But by shutting off contact with journalists, he has decreed that the people deserve to know only what he decides to tell them, a notion worthy of Third World autocracies. A president who thinks himself above answering reporters' questions is showing contempt for the democracy over which he presides.

Getting smart by drinking beer

I've been a beer drinker for many years. I especially like beer when I am hot and very thirsty.

It goes down so smoothly under those conditions. It quenches the thirst and then finds a nice warm spot in the belly.

The more beer I drink, the more intelligent, funny and good-looking I become.

I used to think I could drive an automobile better when I had had several beers. I don't think that anymore, thank God.

I don't have any particular beer that is my favorite. If it's cold and runs downhill, I'll drink it. I also will go to great lengths to find beer when there isn't any that is readily available.

Once attended a cocktail party hosted by The New Yorker magazine. The New Yorker is a very sophisticated magazine that carries articles I never quite understand.

There was no beer at The New Yorker's cocktail party. They had white wine and bottled water, which is what very sophisticated people drink these days.

I left the cocktail party, walked across the street to a convenience store, bought a six-pack and brought it back with me.

Lewis Grizzard

The bartender was nice enough to put the beer on ice. After I'd had three or four of my beers I began talking to the very sophisticated people around me, and said aloud, "I have no idea what y'all are writing about in The New Yorker, but I love your cartoons."

Everybody thought I was intelligent, funny and good-looking. I took a cab back to my hotel after I had finished my six-pack.

I bring all this up to establish the premise that I dearly love beer, and it has been an integral part of my life for some time.

Given that, it may be a surprise to you, like it was to me, that when I tried the new nonalcoholic beer recently, I really liked it.

I don't want this to be a commercial, so I'm going to mention the name of the new product just once, Kalibur.

A man who works for the company that makes the non-alcoholic beer said, "We hope designated drivers will drink it."

"Drinking is mostly a social thing anyway, and this is a great substitute when you're at a bar or a party, and you know you have to drive home."

A friend of mine who is a bigger beer drinker than I am also tried the new product. He tried it six or seven times.

"This is great," he said. "I've had all this beer and I can still talk and walk, and I won't kill anybody driving home."

"Another thing," said the man from the company, "is if you'll mix in one of ours between regular beers, you can drink a lot of beer and not become so intoxicated."

I'm not going to lie to you. I'm still going to drink my beer. But the non-alcoholic route is out there now, and there are times I think I'll take it.

I don't have to be intelligent, funny and good-looking all the time.

Secrecy pledge leaves signers confused

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Two dozen "freedom fighters" are valiantly resisting a government's efforts to strip its citizens of their lawful rights, illegally suppress information and operate under a cloak of secrecy.

Those insurgents are not fighting for freedom in Poland, Afghanistan or some other nation threatened by the Soviet repression. In this instance, the struggle is occurring in Washington, D.C.

There are, however, disturbing similarities between the events here and heavy-handed measures used by totalitarian governments to intimidate citizens who insist upon accountability from their public officials.

At issue is the "Classified Information Non-disclosure Agreement," a one-page form the federal government wants signed by its 3 1/2 million to 4 million employees and contractors with clearances allowing them to see classified information.

Also known as Standard Form 189, the secrecy pledge is one of numerous measures instituted during President Reagan's tenure by an administration paranoid about "leaks" — even if they do not endanger national security but instead are merely politically embarrassing.

The most controversial element of SF 189 is a provision that requires those who sign to promise not to disclose classified or "classifiable" information.

Nobody objects to protecting classified data, but the reference to "classifiable" material has generated a storm of protest because nobody knows what it is.

Is it information that could be, should be, might be or ought to be classified? Is it data subject to retroactive classification if it proves to be politically embarrassing? Is that part of the secrecy pledge designed to entrap whistleblowers by making every sheet of paper inside the federal bureaucracy subject to security classification?

Skeptics suggest that any or all of those alternatives are plausible. One critic, Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, has called on federal employees to engage in the bureaucratic equivalent of civil disobedience and refuse to sign SF 189.

A conservative politician who usually supports Reagan, Grassley says SF 189 constitutes "a broad grab for power" by an administration determined to place a blanket of silence over all information generated by the government.

Although it was drafted and initially circulated in 1983, the secrecy pledge did not become contentious until early this year when the country's best known and most respected whistleblower, A. Ernest Fitzgerald, refused to sign it.

A civilian employee of the Air Force, Fitzgerald could lose his job as a financial analyst, be subjected to an FBI probe and possibly face criminal prosecution if he signed the form and then gave unclassified but "classifiable" data to a member of Congress.

The overzealous Air Force went far beyond Reagan's guidelines that specify only individuals holding security clearances must sign the secrecy pledge. Instead, it submitted SF 189 to thousands of civilian and military employees — and even reservists — who had no access to classified information.

In addition, the Air Force improperly threatened its employees, warning them that "reluctance to sign... will be considered a lack of personal commitment to protect classified information."

More than 1.75 million government employees in 68 federal departments and agencies have signed the form — but 24 have refused on the grounds that the secrecy pledge is unconstitutional.

Those resisters initially had their security clearances suspended — an abhorrent practice temporarily halted pending the resolution of a court challenge to the secrecy pledge initiated by a government employees' union.

Ginsburg cable TV case draws strong reactions

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Senate supporter of Supreme Court nominee Douglas H. Ginsburg says controversy over Ginsburg's stock holdings is "a tempest in a teapot," but a skeptical senator believes the issue already clouds the nomination.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, and conservative groups rallied behind Ginsburg on Monday, saying the nominee's critics were blowing the issue out of proportion by suggesting that he had a conflict of interest because of the cable television stock.

But Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., said Ginsburg will be asked to explain to senators why he supervised a government effort to win First Amendment protection for cable television operators while he held stock in a cable company. The Associated Press reported the stock holding and the court case over the weekend.

Hatch and Leahy, both of whom are members of the Senate Judiciary Committee that will consider the Ginsburg nomination, agreed that the panel should investigate the matter.

Peter Smith, spokesman for Judiciary Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said the committee will pursue the stock question.

Financial disclosure statements indicate that at the time of the cable court case, Ginsburg had a stake of nearly $140,000 in Rogers Communications Inc. The Supreme Court embraced the administration's friend-of-the-court brief, which Ginsburg had helped prepare as a Justice Department official, in a 1986 decision likely to reduce government regulation of cable operators.

An administration official close to Ginsburg, speaking on condition he not be named, said Monday that Ginsburg did not consult with the department's ethics officer because he did not believe there was any chance of a conflict.

Ginsburg, confronted by reporters on the cable stock, declined to comment Monday during a courtesy call on Hatch.

Hatch called the matter "a tempest in a teapot. Most people realize there probably isn't a case to make. The company wasn't involved in the case."

Hatch said after meeting with the nominee for 30 minutes that he and Ginsburg discussed the cable stock. "He believes there wasn't any possible benefit for the ... company."

Leahy said the potential conflict "raises obvious questions of whether he followed the ethics rules. We ought to have him come up and tell us about it."

The issue "has to be pursued," said Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., considered a swing vote on nominations before the Judiciary Committee. He urged senators not to "rush to judgment in concluding he can't serve or dismiss it as another red herring."

President Reagan, asked by reporters whether he felt he had been given enough information about Ginsburg prior to last Thursday's nomination, said he had thoroughly reviewed the major candidates.

"I'm satisfied with the appointment," Reagan told reporters during a tour of FBI headquarters with the new FBI director, William Sessions.

When asked whether he was concerned about reports of Ginsburg's cable investments, Reagan said, "No, not at all."

Japanese chips are now scarce

WASHINGTON (AP)—Japan has stopped flooding world markets with low-cost computer chips, the U.S. government says, but now there's a new problem: a scarcity of Japanese chips.

The Commerce Department said Monday that Japan, which earlier had ceased "dumping" computer chips, or semiconductors, at bargain-basement prices in the United States, also has stopped the practice in foreign markets.

That finding is likely to lead to a further reduction of the $300 million in retaliatory tariffs President Reagan imposed on Japanese electronics products last April, administration officials said.

"Our monthly monitoring now shows clear, firm and continuing evidence that third-country dumping has stopped," Commerce Undersecretary Bruce Smart said.

But U.S. companies who had lodged a major trade complaint because of the battering they received from imports of Japanese-made semiconductors now claim they can't get enough of the items — at any price.

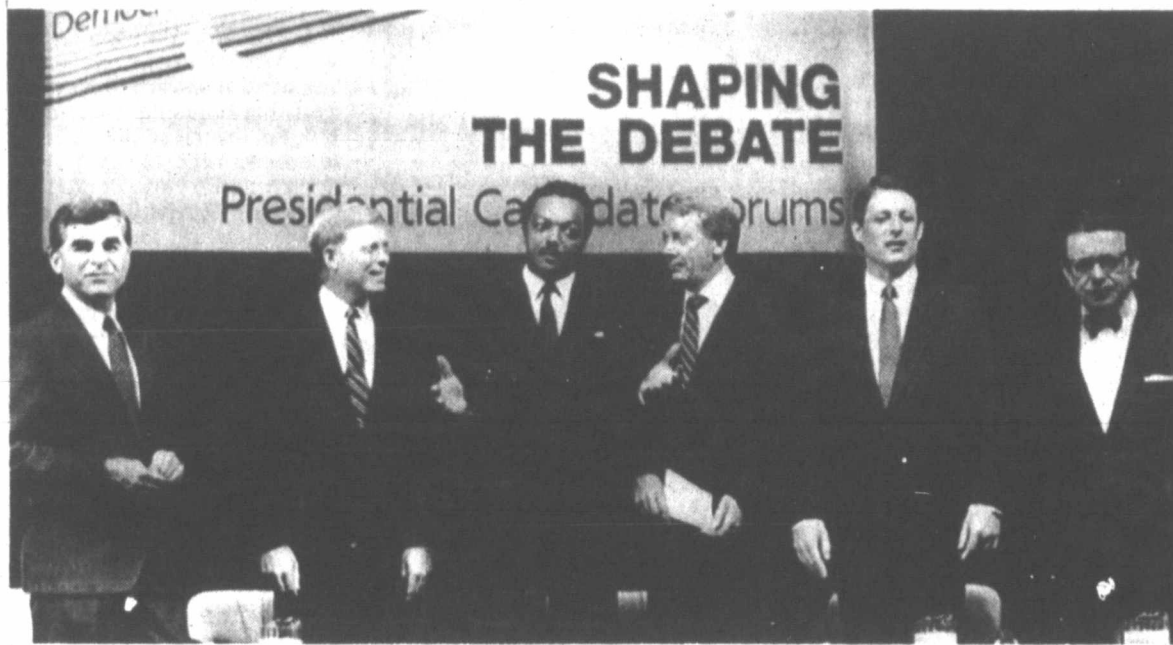

Industry officials claim that Japan, in an effort to get the U.S. sanctions removed, sharply curtailed production of chips by its producers, particularly those destined to U.S. markets, to drive up prices. Japan has denied the allegation.

Industry sources, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said they anticipated action by the government of Japan within the next few days to make sure there is an adequate supply of Japanese chips in the United States.

In April, Reagan imposed $300 million in tariffs on Japanese televisions, power tools and small computers. He lifted $51 million of the sanctions in June at the seven-nation economic summit in Venice, citing some Japanese progress toward compliance.

Semiconductors are the tiny electric circuits that are the building blocks of computers and modern electronic devices. U.S. manufacturers claimed Japan had dumped chips, or deliberately sold them at below-wholesale value, in a calculated effort to dominate world markets.

The U.S. Semiconductor Industry Association welcomed Monday's Commerce Department finding.

Democrats agree on most social issues, but spar on tax compliance

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Democratic presidential candidates generally agreed on how to help the poor, but they jabbed one another for putting too much faith in tax compliance and too little on tough budget decisions.

For 90 minutes Monday night at Tulane University, the Democrats generally reaffirmed their belief in a strong government role to help people escape poverty.

"Yes, I believe in using the tools of government to move on our problems," said Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois. "Those who say we can't do it are just wrong."

The strongest dissent from that view came from former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, who challenged his rivals to say, "How are we going to persuade the American people that we can pay for these programs?"

Even their disagreements were kept within bounds as Simon and Babbitt joined Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Jesse Jackson to debate social policy.

When Dukakis said a 5 percent increase in tax compliance would bring the federal government an additional $35 billion in revenue, Gephardt snapped back that it was "hokum."

That was the sharpest exchange of the night.

The candidates found far more to agree about, including the need for a higher federal minimum wage, better health insurance coverage and the ravages visited upon the poor by President Reagan's economic policies.

They endorsed increasing the federal minimum wage to at least $4.25 an hour. Jackson, while agreeing with his five rivals for the nomination that a boost from the current $3.35 federal minimum wage was needed, added that it would not help the poorest people who have no jobs.

Simon said he feared there have been so many Democratic debates that people were losing interest.

The debate was broadcast live to some parts of the country on public broadcasting stations.

When television commentator Hodding Carter asked the candidates where they would cut the budget, Gephardt, Simon and Dukakis said they thought the domestic side already had taken an unfair share of the cuts during Reagan's time in office.

"I disagree that there are no areas of domestic spending where we can't make significant cuts," said Gore, who used earlier debates on foreign and defense policy to stake out a more conservative position than his rivals.

But none of the candidates had much time to spell out specific cuts, and Carter cut off Gore after the senator cited $50 billion spent for unnecessary medical tests.

Gore said that in the earlier debates "what I've tried to do is articulate what I think is best for the country."

Lawyer: NYC making example of homeless woman

NEW YORK (AP)—The city is trying to make an example of the first homeless person to be institutionalized in Mayor Edward I. Koch's program to forcibly get some of the mentally ill off the streets, according to a lawyer.

Robert Levy of the New York Civil Liberties Union, who represents Billy Boggs, said Monday that hospital records show his client "is not seriously psychotic. ... The issue is whether people are going to be picked up and hospitalized if they're not dangerous or mentally ill."

At a confinement hearing in a special courtroom at Bellevue Hospital, Miss Boggs was described by an expert witness called by the city as a "very bright lady" who "has a remarkable ability to appear to be very rational."

But the psychiatrist also described Miss Boggs as a paranoid schizophrenic whose condition would deteriorate rapidly if she were released.

Miss Boggs sat calmly at the hearing, occasionally whispering or writing a note to her lawyers.

Gorbachev vows to try for space weapon ban

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev says he will go to the summit with President Reagan next month to seek a breakthrough in space weapons policy that eluded the two leaders in their last meeting.

"We will work unremittingly at these meetings for a palpable breakthrough, for concrete results in reducing strategic offensive armaments and barring weapons from outer space — the key to removing the nuclear threat," the Communist Party chief told the nation Monday.

His speech opened a week of festivities marking the 70th anniversary of the Russian revolution that brought the Communists to power.

The ceremonies continued today with speeches by foreign leaders and representatives of various segments of Soviet society. The traditional Nov. 7 military review and parade through Red Square will cap the celebration on Saturday.

Gorbachev called the agreement banning medium- and shorter-range nuclear missiles, to be signed at the summit beginning Dec. 7 in the United States, "very important in itself."

But he said that issue basically was resolved a year ago at the Reykjavik summit, which collapsed over Reagan's insistence on proceeding with development of the space-based defense system known as "Star Wars."

"The world expects the third and fourth Soviet-U.S. summits to produce more than merely an official acknowledgement of the decision agreed upon a year ago, and more than merely continuation of the discussion," the 56-year-old Soviet leader said.

The Soviets earlier said the promise to sign the missile ban agreement in Washington was tied to the Reagan administration's willingness to at least discuss the future of Star Wars.

In his address, Gorbachev also said the recent selling frenzy on the New York Stock Exchange and world markets is a symptom of economic woes growing out of heavy military spending by the capitalist West. He questioned whether capitalist economies can flourish without military spending to prop them up.

Regarding his own domestic policy aimed at overhauling the Soviet economy and society, Gorbachev accused his critics of being too timid or too impatient to follow his plan for modernization, known in Russian as "perestroika," or restructuring.

Gorbachev also called for a "truthful analysis" of the role of the late leader Josef V. Stalin and his legacy in Soviet history. He announced creation of a special commission to resume the rehabilitation of Stalin's victims, a task which was begun in the 1950s but suspended after the ouster of Nikita S. Khrushchev.

He praised Stalin's collectivization of agriculture and industrialization, saying they were central to the revolution, but accused Stalin of "enormous and unforgivable" crimes relating to the execution, imprisonment or banishment of millions of Soviets the dictator branded as "enemies of the people."

Bomb found at convention center wall

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Police today removed a large time bomb that failed to go off outside a building where leaders of Southeast Asian nations are to meet next month, officials said.

Pfc. Domingo Alminana said a janitor found a canvas bag with dynamite and a timer about 10 a.m. outside the Philippine International Convention Center along Manila Bay.

Building manager Prudencio Agbayani said police told him the timing device was defective. Asked what time the bomb was set to go off, he replied: "I did not ask. I was just happy that it did not explode."

Lt. Col. Jose C. Bandong of the military's Capital Regional Command said the bag contained 86 sticks of dynamite of a type used for construction or mining. Earlier, police said there were 53 sticks of dynamite.

Demolition experts removed the bomb to a military garrison on the outskirts of the city about four hours later.

Agbayani said about 1,500 people were in the building at the time the bomb was found but not all were evacuated.

Agbayani said the building received four bomb threats since May, but no warning was given for the bomb today. Employees initially said they were tipped off by an anonymous caller.

There was no indication who planted the bomb.

The building, normally used for exhibitions and international conferences, houses the temporary offices of the Department of Foreign Affairs and will serve as the site for next month's summit of the six-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

President Corazon Aquino's government has assured ASEAN members that the summit can proceed in safety despite political turmoil from communist rebels and right-wing extremists.

Hundreds of people gathered at Manila's Western Police District headquarters to protest the arrest Sunday of about 39 alleged rebels rounded up in a raid on the campus of the Polytechnic University of the Philippines.

The protesters included wives and children of those arrested. They denied they were rebels and said they had been living as refugees on the campus after fleeing Leyte island to escape abuse by anti-communist vigilantes.

Car explodes in Kuwait

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A booby-trapped car exploded in a residential suburb of Kuwait this morning, causing some damage but no injuries, police sources and news reports said.

Iran meanwhile denied that a U.S. Navy frigate fired on Iranian vessels in the Persian Gulf on Sunday. Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said the attack was on an Indian launch and killed an Indian crewman.

A convoy of two U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti tankers was heading north through the Persian Gulf escorted by two U.S. missile frigates and two smaller vessels that appeared to be minesweepers, shipping sources reported.

The official Kuwait News Agency quoted an official source as saying that the car explosion was in the fashionable Shamiya neighborhood, about 1 1/2 miles from downtown Kuwait. The Interior Ministry is in the suburb but it was not immediately known how close the blast was.

Police sources said the explosion, the second to hit the capital in 10 days, destroyed two cars and shattered windows.

The news agency said one car parked next to the rigged vehicle was damaged. It gave no other details.

An explosion Oct. 24 ripped through a building housing a sales office of Pan American World Airways, causing damage but no casualties. Kuwaiti media blamed that attack on Iranian-inspired saboteurs.

The country lies close to the Iran-Iraq warfront and has been target of several acts of sabotage since December 1983, most blamed on Shiites who are of the same Moslem sect that is predominant in Iran.

Iran considers Kuwait an ally of Iraq in the 7-year-old war.

Tension has been spilling over into the oil-rich Persian Gulf region, spurring a stronger U.S. Navy presence. President Reagan agreed in July to reflag 11 Kuwaiti tankers with the Stars and Stripes to provide them with U.S. protection.

The Pentagon said the USS Carr fired .50-caliber machine guns at three small vessels believed to be Iranian that came too close to the frigate and the tanker it was escorting Sunday.

The Pentagon said Monday that none was known to have been hit.

A spokesman for Tehran's War Information Headquarters today denied there was any U.S.-Iranian encounter in the gulf waters Sunday.

IRNA quoted an "informed military source" as saying the U.S. Navy instead attacked an Indian transportation launch, killing one of its crewmen.

Reagan: Soviets shifting attitude on Cambodia

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — President Reagan, in a letter released today, told Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda that the Soviets agree there must be a diplomatic solution to the fighting in Cambodia.

But Reagan said getting the Soviets to pressure Vietnam into a solution "will not be easy."

Also today, the Bangkok office of Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk turned down the Cambodian government's latest peace overture and said Sihanouk cannot accept any post in the "illegal" Vietnam-backed government.

It was the first official response to the Phnom Penh government's Oct. 8 offer of "a high position in a leading state organ" if Sihanouk returns to Cambodia.

Soviet-backed Vietnam maintains 140,000 troops in Cambodia to support the government it installed after invading the country in late 1978. Sihanouk leads a three-party guerrilla coalition battling the Vietnamese.

In the Oct. 27 letter released by the premier's office, Reagan said Cambodia "will continue to be very much on my mind as I meet with high-level Soviet leaders."

Thai Government Spokesman Mechai Viravaidya said he did not know whether Cambodia will be on Reagan's agenda for the Dec. 7 summit with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Sihanouk's statement was intended to set the record straight after rumors over a proposed meeting between the resistance leader and Prime Minister Hun Sen of Cambodia, said Sihanouk spokesman Roland Eng.

Vietnam maintains it occupied Cambodia in 1978 in self-defense after numerous cross-border attacks.

The invasion ousted Pol Pot and the Communist government of the Khmer Rouge. Officials of the Association of Southeast Asian nations say the Khmer Rouge killed about 2 million people during their reign from 1975 to 1979.

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.

Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight

New 'Fat Magnet' Diet Pill Guarantees Fast Weight Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

No Dieting—Eat Normally

Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You will start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire."

There has never been anything like it before. It is a totally new major medical breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patent pending).

Flushes Fat Out of Body

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in fat particles. Then, all that trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body because it cannot be digested.

Within 2 days you will notice a change in the color of your stool as the fat particles are being eliminated.

"Pills Do All the Work"

According to the doctors, the fat-magnet pills do all the work while you quickly lose fat with no starvation diet menus to follow, no calorie counting, no exercising, and no hunger pangs. It is 100% safe. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

The fat-magnet pills have just been offered to the American public and are already sweeping the country with record sales and reports of dramatic weight loss. It's the "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public

If you need to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fat-magnet pills (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W992, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) For fastest service for credit card orders ONLY call anytime 24 hours, toll free 1(800)527-9700, ext. W992.

Goode, left, and Rizzo conduct last-minute campaigning.

Philadelphia tops list in mayoral races

PHILADELPHIA (AP)— Mayor W. Wilson Goode, telling voters "we've come too far to go back," is seeking a second term as the city's first black mayor, but challenger Frank Rizzo says, "this city needs leadership."

Both candidates have indulged in name-calling repeatedly during the bitter campaign, but the voters have remained mostly apathetic.

"The attitude is total boredom," said Dennis Clark, a Philadelphia political historian. "People think it's a total farce, a choice between two zeros."

The Philadelphia Daily News said the question was "Who are you voting for— Tweedle-dum or Tweedle-dumber?"

Democrat Goode is one of two big-city mayors trying to fend off a challenge from a former occupant of his office this week in off-year elections that also will see new governors chosen in Mississippi and Kentucky.

In Miami, Mayor Xavier Suarez faces a challenge from the man he ousted two years ago, Maurice Ferre. San Francisco and Baltimore are choosing new mayors, while in three other big cities, the incumbents are heavily favored: Houston's Kathy Whitmire, Boston's Ray Flynn and Indianapolis' William Hudnut.

Democrats are expected to keep control of both governor's mansions at stake this year. In Mississippi, Democratic state Auditor Ray Mabus is opposed by businessman Jack Reed for the job being relinquished by Gov. William Allain. In Kentucky, where Gov. Martha Layne Collins is barred by law from seeking a second term, millionaire Wallace Wilkinson is challenged by GOP state Rep. Jack Reed.

Propositions abound on ballots, among them proposals for a lottery in Texas, pari-mutuel betting in Texas, a deposit on bottles in Washington, D.C., and a shutdown of Maine's only nuclear plant.

In Philadelphia, the 49-year-old Goode, who carries an 11-point lead in recent polls, says he wants "to finish the job I started."

Race is a major factor in a city where 40 percent of the population is made up of minorities. City Council President Joseph Coleman, who is black, said Goode's reelection is essential to blacks if they want to retain political gains.

Rizzo, running as a Republican, said the racial factor is more pride than issue, and he wants voters to look at Goode's record in deciding how to vote.

"I supported Goode four years ago and look at what's happened," said the 66-year-old Rizzo, a former police chief who was mayor for eight years as a Democrat between 1972-80. "This city needs leadership and I can provide that."

'I do' spells end for 'Isetta' cars

AUSTIN (AP) — What Nick Sucke wouldn't do for money, he is doing for love.

After years of turning down offers for his fleet of tiny, front-door BMWs, Sucke is selling them so he can get married.

At age 35, Sucke has decided he would rather say "I do" than "Isetta," the nameplate on his four BMWs from the late 1950s and early 1960s.

"The only reason I'm selling them is to get married to the girl of my dreams," said Sucke, a cancer insurance salesman and former rock guitarist.

Sucke and Judy Roberts plan to wed in November, if the cars sell.

Although the Isettas are BMWs, they are a far cry from the pricey, trendy BMWs now on the road. But like a shiny new BMW, an Isetta is an eye-grabber, largely because it is so small and because you climb in through a front door that is literally on the front.

Sucke has three Isetta 300s and an Isetta 600, a slightly larger model — complete with one rear door — that is called a "limousine" in the owner's manual. The "limousine" weighs 1,230 pounds. The smaller version weighs about 900 pounds.

In fact, Sucke and a friend demonstrated moving one of the 300s by grabbing the front bumper and lifting the car. Passers-by also think it's fun to lift an Isetta. That's why two of Sucke's cars are chained to a fence in the abandoned used car lot where they are displayed. He found one flipped on its side recently.

"I had to do that once on the way back from Cedar Creek, Texas. I had an electrical intermittent problem. Two cars pulled over. They thought I had run off the road and flipped. They said, 'What's wrong?' I said, 'I think it's an intermittent,'" he said.

That's what Sucke loves best about Isettas — "the attention." "I stopped at a Texaco once to get gas. This old, white-haired gentleman came over and just poured himself on me. He said, 'I bought one of these for my son but I only let him drive it on the sidewalk."

Sucke has a long list of potential Isetta buyers who have called, many of them female.

"They love them. They think they're so cute," he said.

On the whole, Sucke summarized the potential buyers as his kind of people: "If not eccentric, teetering on the edge."

Keeping an Isetta running can be challenging, and getting parts is a hit-and-miss deal.

"We sure don't have any," said a parts man at Austin's BMW dealer. "Parts really aren't available for them anymore."

Sucke depends on a parts pipeline that includes an Isetta club. All four of his cars are in what he calls "various stages of restoration." The blue 600 has fresh paint, a new interior and a $4,000 pricetag. The other three give clear meaning to "various stages of restoration."

Sucke's girlfriend likes the cars, but favors selling.

Poll shows pari-mutuel supporters holding lead

HOUSTON (AP) — Supporters of legalized pari-mutuel betting hold a 60-40 lead over opponents, according to a recent poll taken in Harris County that pollsters feel reflects statewide thinking.

A low voter turnout, considered likely due to lackluster interest in today's election, could dramatically alter final results, says Rick Wilson, spokesman for the Rice Institute for Policy Analysis.

The institute supervised the poll for The Houston Post and Houston television station KTRK.

In today's election, voters are being asked whether Texas should legalize pari-mutuel wagering for the first time since 1937. Voter turnout has been projected at about 14 percent statewide, with a maximum of about 25 percent in the Houston area.

The poll shows supporters of legalized betting believe it will bring increased revenue and more jobs. Opponents cite religious and moral beliefs, as well as concerns about crime, Wilson said.

Sue Cox, campaign manager for the anti-betting group Texans Who Care, said the poll results did not surprise her. She said anti-gambling forces have not been able to muster the same get-out-the-vote momentum as betting supporters.

Jeff Steen, finance director of the pro-betting Texas Horse Racing Association, agreed his group has been making a massive effort to get voters to the polls, but said he wasn't overconfident.

"We're nervous about our lead," he said.

The group has been airing television advertisements in Houston and Dallas, which continued through Monday night.

New furnishings emphasize comfort, romance

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The home as a place of comfort and romance was the major theme at the national furniture market in North Carolina this October.

Style leaders among the more than 1,600 exhibitors emphasized a softening of hard edges on wood furniture, used highly figured wood veneers and burls in place of the shiny lacquer surfaces of recent years and employed more painted finishes reminiscent of country furniture. Stylistically, the new furniture is likely to combine several design themes rather than to reflect a single authentic period.

Continuing trends of the past several years, light woods such as ash and oak dominated at the market. Thomasville introduced an ivory version of a popular furniture group and Drexel's new 80-piece "Formations" collection of prima vera wood comes in a very light and a medium light finish.

The trends observed in wood furniture toward rounding and blurring of distinct design themes also apply to upholstery. Rectangular sofas with hard edges and tailored thin arms and cushions have been replaced with deeper, softer, more rounded seating. Sofa ends flare gently outward, sectionals end in rounded or curved modules, arms are rounded and open, even cushions and throw pillows (found on most sofas) are rounded at the edges.

With furniture that is diffuse in style and thus capable of playing a chameleon role, the right accessories become essential to define the design statement in a room. The growing importance of accessories, which includes lamps, wall decor and small pieces of occasional furniture, is reflected in the growth in accessories exhibitors at the market.

New showrooms, which bring total exhibit space up to more than 5.5 million square feet in 150 separate buildings, are occupied mainly by accessories makers.

They have mined virtually every historical period (including early 20th-century art deco and art moderne) to produce a mind-boggling assortment.

The explosion of new products has made it impossible for any individual retailer to represent the great variety of styles. Consumers will have to shop in a number of stores and read a number of decorating magazines in order to gain a good idea of what is available for their home.

Although specialization means some trends shown at the furniture market can come and go without ever being represented in a specific store, one which should be showing up all over the country is iron furniture with a green verdigris finish that imitates aged cast bronze.

Companies showing this look (at price ranges from middle to high) include Baker, Casa Bique, Dresher, Hekman, Jeffco and Lane, among others.

Oak trim and country styling are part of the current trend in home fashions, which include plenty of light colored woods and country looks. One country look is diminutive patterns, such as the tiny medallions strewn on a field of forest green upholstery on this fireside chair.

Lane's 16-piece cast aluminum "Atlantis Collection" (which will sell for between $300 and $2,000) recalls furniture made by the artist Diego Giacometti. Included are chairs, tables, an etagere and a daybed. A small table in the collection is copied from a Giacometti original.

According to Lee Booth, merchandise manager for occasional furniture: "Over a period of years we have been seeing the hand-forged old-world look growing in popularity."

Booth, like others at the market, noted that new furniture ideas for the mass market frequently come directly from observation of what is hot in auction sales and antiques magazines. Wealthy purchasers of antiques set trends which in a few years are reflected in new furniture produced for the middle class.

The time period between high and mid-market appearance is constantly being reduced. For example, elaborate upholstery treatments with braid, deep fringes, button tufting and very formal damask fabrics appeared in decorating magazines and decorator showhouses last fall. This fall, they were reproduced in a number of showrooms catering to middle and upper-middle income households, such as Drexel Heritage and Century.

Besides formal upholstery, another trend was painted pieces. Baker furniture introduced several elaborately painted chests in its new 60-piece Italian collection.

If all the pieces look as if they had just come out of an expensive antiques shop or have been in the family for generations, it is no accident. All are exact or close copies of costly antiques.

The ubiquity of painted furniture and rough-hewn country styles points up the fact that country has been upgraded from a fad to an enduring product classification, which is likely to persist.

Judging from the new designs, country has gone on an excursion trip to Europe and back. Manufacturers have exploited Italian, French, English and Spanish (especially as translated in the American Southwest) elements to produce furniture that is not clearly from one place or another, but suggests a pleasantly muddled trip through a number of countries.

Though much of the new furniture looks traditional, it usually conceals more storage and function than strict authenticity would permit. For example, the top of Lane's "Shaker Country" bedside step stool flips up to reveal a storage bin that could accommodate slippers or reading materials. A three-drawer chest in the same group has an open-up top that conceals space for hanging file folders.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Woman worried about loving a younger man

DEAR ABBY: I am a 43-year-old woman, divorced, no children, have an excellent job and am secure in my position. Fourteen months ago, a bright young man, age 31, came to work here in another department. The last thing I had in mind was a serious romantic relationship with this kid, but you guessed it. It happened. I fell in love with him. He didn't pursue me; I invited him out first. We discovered we had so much in common we couldn't wait to see each other again.

We're still "in the closet" about our relationship, but we can't keep it under wraps much longer. He had a steady girlfriend when he came here, but she's no longer in the picture. I stopped seeing an established 50-year-old stockbroker when I realized I was in love with this guy.

I'm embarrassed — almost ashamed — and terribly concerned about what people will think about "us." He's more in charge and mature about this than I am. He's the best thing that ever happened to me, and I've known plenty of men.

Am I crazy? Can this work? We're thinking of marriage. Meanwhile we are sneaking around like a couple of thieves. Help me!

SWEET 16 AGAIN

DEAR 16: Quit sneaking around and don't worry about what "people" will think. Can it work? Yes, if you both want it. Please read the new book "Loving a Younger Man" by Victoria Houston (Contemporary Books). It's written by a woman who once walked in your shoes. She resolutely reaffirms my advice: "Forget the numbers, and follow your heart." You'll be glad you did. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I just read your column in the Pacific Stars and Stripes, and can't believe that you said a colonel has a "chicken" on his shoulder. Abby, how ignorant of you! A colonel has an EAGLE on his shoulder, not a chicken. You have your birds mixed up. Please correct that insulting error.

IN THE MILITARY

DEAR IN: My husband was also "in the military" (World War II), and back at Camp Robinson in Little Rock, Ark., we called his full colonel a "chicken colonel" — as opposed to his lieutenant colonel, who had a silver maple leaf on his shoulder. So, please remove the chip from yours.

DEAR ABBY: There is a lady in town who has been a widow for over 30 years. She belongs to several clubs and societies that I belong to. When a prize is given out for newest married member or the woman who has been married the longest, this lady comes forward to claim the prize for the longest marriage. Naturally, the winner should still have a live husband. (A woman whose husband is dead is a widow, isn't she?)

She insists that she has been married more than 50 years and deserves the prize. She is a very determined woman and nobody wants to argue with her. What should we do?

EXASPERATED IN ST. PAUL

DEAR EXASPERATED: Let it slide. Have a token prize for her and another for the runner-up whose husband is still living. The poor woman is living in the past.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

New copper IUD to be marketed soon

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — The first copper IUD available in this country in two years goes on the market soon, now that a drug company has agreed to distribute it with detailed warnings, officials say.

The Population Council, a non-profit research and policy organization, announced Wednesday that it had licensed GynoMed Pharmaceutical of Somerville, N.J., to begin marketing the improved intrauterine device domestically during the first half of 1988.

Lawsuits and bad publicity had forced all copper IUDs off the market nearly two years ago.

The soon-to-be available device, the Copper T 380A, was developed at the Population Council and was approved by the Food and Drug Administration in 1984. It has been used in other countries, including Canada, since 1982, but has never been sold in the United States.

The Copper T 380A "is the most effective IUD available anywhere," said George Zeidenstein, president of the Population Council. Studies show that over a year's time an average of one woman out of 100 using it will get pregnant.

"For many women, it is likely to be the contraceptive of choice," Zeidenstein said.

The agreement between the Population Council and GynoMed follows a year-long search for a company that would market the device with appropriate safety precautions, Zeidenstein said.

Roderick Mackenzie, chairman of GynoMed, said the device will be sold with detailed labeling and with the stipulation that doctors confirm in writing that they have received and understood the information.

An estimated 5 million of the devices have been distributed abroad, said the council's Forrest Greenslade.

The Copper T 380A is recommended for women older than 25 who have been pregnant, said Mackenzie.

It is not recommended for women who have multiple sexual relationships or who have had pelvic inflammatory disease, an infection that can lead to sterility.

Women who use IUDs, including the Copper T 380A, have 1½ to two times the risk of other women of getting the disease, said Dr. Wayne Bardin of the Population Council. The recommendations for use are intended to keep that risk as low as possible.

"We welcome the copper IUD as an important addition to the contraceptive field," Dr. Louise Tyrer of Planned Parenthood said at the news conference. "Planned Parenthood continually receives calls from women all over the U.S. asking where they can get a copper IUD. We refer them to Canada."

The product's availability should help alleviate the problem of unwanted pregnancy, which is due primarily to lack of birth control options and misunderstanding, said Jacqueline Forrest, director of research at the Alan Guttmacher Institute, a New York City organization devoted to research on reproductive health.

She said an estimated 2.2 million American women were using IUDs in 1982, the latest year for which figures are available from the government's National Center for Health Statistics.

'Intelligent' floors aid use of robot vehicles

TOKYO (AP) — An "intelligent" floor for managers who want to use robot vehicles for interoffice transportation is being developed in Japan, reports MIS Week.

The floor consists of square plastic tiles back-coated with ferrite guideways that work with robot vehicles fitted with magnetic sensors and microcomputers.

According to the management information systems journal, the foot-square tiles have either I-shaped or L-shaped ferrite coating and can be arranged in the same manner as carpet tiles to create the guideway pattern hidden underneath.

The robot vehicle can be programmed to move from one point to another in the office via the microcomputers which process data obtained from magnetic sensors and keep track of the ferrite guideways underneath.

Experimental robot vehicles have operated at a speed of 1.5 miles per hour, and since they are equipped with touch sensors, stop on contact with a person or object.

Philadelphia tops list in mayoral races

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Mayor W. Wilson Goode, telling voters "we've come too far to go back," is seeking a second term as the city's first black mayor, but challenger Frank Rizzo says, "this city needs leadership."

Both candidates have indulged in name-calling repeatedly during the bitter campaign, but the voters have remained mostly apathetic.

"The attitude is total boredom," said Dennis Clark, a Philadelphia political historian. "People think it's a total farce, a choice between two zeros."

The Philadelphia Daily News said the question was "Who are you voting for—Tweedledum or Tweedle-dumber?"

Democrat Goode is one of two big-city mayors trying to fend off a challenge from a former occupant of his office this week in off-year elections that also will see new governors chosen in Mississippi and Kentucky.

In Miami, Mayor Xavier Suarez faces a challenge from the man he ousted two years ago, Maurice Ferre. San Francisco and Baltimore are choosing new mayors, while in three other big cities, the incumbents are heavily favored: Houston's Kathy Whitmire, Boston's Ray Flynn and Indianapolis' William Hudnut.

Democrats are expected to keep control of both governor's mansions at stake this year. In Mississippi, Democratic state Auditor Ray Mabus is opposed by businessman Jack Reed for the job being relinquished by Gov. William Allain. In Kentucky, where Gov. Martha Layne Collins is barred by law from seeking a second term, millionaire Wallace Wilkinson is challenged by GOP state Rep. Jack Reed.

Propositions abound on ballots, among them proposals for a lottery in Texas, pari-mutuel betting in Texas, a deposit on bottles in Washington, D.C., and a shutdown of Maine's only nuclear plant.

In Philadelphia, the 49-year-old Goode, who carries an 11-point lead in recent polls, says he wants "to finish the job I started."

Race is a major factor in a city where 40 percent of the population is made up of minorities. City Council President Joseph Coleman, who is black, said Goode's reelection is essential to blacks if they want to retain political gains.

Rizzo, running as a Republican, said the racial factor is more pride than issue, and he wants voters to look at Goode's record in deciding how to vote.

"I supported Goode four years ago and look at what's happened," said the 66-year-old Rizzo, a former police chief who was mayor for eight years as a Democrat between 1972-80. "This city needs leadership and I can provide that."

Poll shows pari-mutuel supporters holding lead

HOUSTON (AP)—Supporters of legalized pari-mutuel betting held a 60-40 lead over opponents, according to a recent poll taken in Harris County that pollsters feel reflects statewide thinking.

A low voter turnout, considered likely due to lackluster interest in today's election, could dramatically alter final results, says Rick Wilson, spokesman for the Rice Institute for Policy Analysis.

The institute supervised the poll for The Houston Post and Houston television station KTRK.

In today's election, voters are being asked whether Texas should legalize pari-mutuel wagering for the first time since 1937. Voter turnout has been projected at about 14 percent statewide, with a maximum of about 25 percent in the Houston area.

The poll shows supporters of legalized betting believe it will bring increased revenue and more jobs. Opponents cite religious and moral beliefs, as well as concerns about crime, Wilson said.

Sue Cox, campaign manager for the anti-betting group Texans Who Care, said the poll results did not surprise her. She said anti-gambling forces have not been able to muster the same get-out-the-vote momentum as betting supporters.

Jeff Steen, finance director of the pro-betting Texas Horse Racing Association, agreed his group has been making a massive effort to get voters to the polls, but said he wasn't overconfident.

"We're nervous about our lead," he said.

The group has been airing television advertisements in Houston and Dallas, which continued through Monday night.

'I do' spells end for 'Isetta' cars

AUSTIN (AP)—What Nick Sucke wouldn't do for money, he is doing for love.

After years of turning down offers for his fleet of tiny, front-door BMWs, Sucke is selling them so he can get married.

At age 35, Sucke has decided he would rather say "I do" than "Isetta," the nameplate on his four BMWs from the late 1950s and early 1960s.

"The only reason I'm selling them is to get married to the girl of my dreams," said Sucke, a cancer insurance salesman and former rock guitarist.

Sucke and Judy Roberts plan to wed in November, if the cars sell.

Although the Isettas are BMWs, they are a far cry from the pricey, trendy BMWs now on the road. But like a shiny new BMW, an Isetta is an eye-grabber, largely because it is so small and because you climb in through a front door that is literally on the front.

Sucke has three Isetta 300s and an Isetta 600, a slightly larger model—complete with one rear door—that is called a "limousine" in the owner's manual. The "limousine" weighs 1,230 pounds. The smaller version weighs about 900 pounds.

In fact, Sucke and a friend demonstrated moving one of the 300s by grabbing the front bumper and lifting the car. Passers-by also think it's fun to lift an Isetta. That's why two of Sucke's cars are chained to a fence in the abandoned used car lot where they are displayed. He found one flipped on its side recently.

"I had to do that once on the way back from Cedar Creek, Texas. I had an electrical intermittent problem. Two cars pulled over. They thought I had run off the road and flipped. They said, 'What's wrong?' I said, 'I think it's an intermittent,'" he said.

That's what Sucke loves best about Isettas—"the attention."

"I stopped at a Texaco once to get gas. This old, white-haired gentleman came over and just poured himself on me. He said, 'I bought one of these for my son but I only let him drive it on the sidewalk."

Sucke has a long list of potential Isetta buyers who have called, many of them female.

"They love them. They think they're so cute," he said.

On the whole, Sucke summarized the potential buyers as his kind of people: "If not eccentric, teetering on the edge."

Keeping an Isetta running can be challenging, and getting parts is a hit-and-miss deal.

"We sure don't have any," said a parts man at Austin's BMW dealer. "Parts really aren't available for them anymore."

Sucke depends on a parts pipeline that includes an Isetta club. All four of his cars are in what he calls "various stages of restoration."

The blue 600 has fresh paint, a new interior and a $4,000 pricetag. The other three give clear meaning to "various stages of restoration."

Sucke's girlfriend likes the cars, but favors selling.

New furnishings emphasize comfort, romance

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures
The home as a place of comfort and romance was the major theme at the national furniture market in North Carolina this October.

Style leaders among the more than 1,600 exhibitors emphasized a softening of hard edges on wood furniture, used highly figured wood veneers and burls in place of the shiny lacquer surfaces of recent years and employed more painted finishes reminiscent of country furniture. Stylistically, the new furniture is likely to combine several design themes rather than to reflect a single authentic period.

Continuing trends of the past several years, light woods such as ash and oak dominated at the market. Thomasville introduced an ivory version of a popular furniture group and Drexel's new 80-piece "Formations" collection of prima vera wood comes in a very light and a medium light finish.

The trends observed in wood furniture toward rounding and blurring of distinct design themes also apply to upholstery. Rectangular sofas with hard edges and tailored thin arms and cushions have been replaced with deeper, softer, more rounded seating. Sofa ends flare gently outward, sectionals end in rounded or curved modules, arms are rounded and open, even cushions and throw pillows (found on most sofas) are rounded at the edges.

With furniture that is diffuse in style and thus capable of playing a chameleon role, the right accessories become essential to define the design statement in a room. The growing importance of accessories, which includes lamps, wall decor and small pieces of occasional furniture, is reflected in the growth in accessories exhibitors at the market.

New showrooms, which bring total exhibit space up to more than 5.5 million square feet in 150 separate buildings, are occupied mainly by accessories makers.

They have mined virtually every historical period (including early 20th-century art deco and art moderne) to produce a mind-boggling assortment.

The explosion of new products has made it impossible for any individual retailer to represent the great variety of styles. Consumers will have to shop in a number of stores and read a number of decorating magazines in order to gain a good idea of what is available for their home.

Although specialization means some trends shown at the furniture market can come and go without ever being represented in a specific store, one which should be showing up all over the country is iron furniture with a green verdigris finish that imitates aged cast bronze.

Companies showing this look (at price ranges from middle to high) include Baker, Casa Bique, Dresher, Hekman, Jeffco and Lane, among others.

Oak trim and country styling are part of the current trend in home fashions, which include plenty of light colored woods and country looks. One country look is diminutive patterns, such as the tiny medallions strewn on a field of forest green upholstery on this fireside chair.

Lane's 16-piece cast aluminum "Atlantis Collection" (which will sell for between $300 and $2,000) recalls furniture made by the artist Diego Giacometti. Included are chairs, tables, an etagere and a daybed. A small table in the collection is copied from a Giacometti original.

According to Lee Booth, merchandise manager for occasional furniture: "Over a period of years we have been seeing the hand-forged old-world look growing in popularity."

Booth, like others at the market, noted that new furniture ideas for the mass market frequently come directly from observation of what is hot in auction sales and antiques magazines. Wealthy purchasers of antiques set trends which in a few years are reflected in new furniture produced for the middle class.

The time period between high and mid-market appearance is constantly being reduced. For example, elaborate upholstery treatments with braid, deep fringes, button tufting and very formal damask fabrics appeared in decorating magazines and decorator showhouses last fall. This fall, they were reproduced in a number of showrooms catering to middle and upper-middle income households, such as Drexel Heritage and Century.

Besides formal upholstery, another trend was painted pieces. Baker furniture introduced several elaborately painted chests in its new 60-piece Italian collection.

If all the pieces look as if they had just come out of an expensive antiques shop or have been in the family for generations, it is no accident. All are exact or close copies of costly antiques.

The ubiquity of painted furniture and rough-hewn country styles points up the fact that country has been upgraded from a fad to an enduring product classification, which is likely to persist.

Judging from the new designs, country has gone on an excursion trip to Europe and back. Manufacturers have exploited Italian, French, English and Spanish (especially as translated in the American Southwest) elements to produce furniture that is not clearly from one place or another, but suggests a pleasantly muddled trip through a number of countries.

Though much of the new furniture looks traditional, it usually conceals more storage and function than strict authenticity would permit. For example, the top of Lane's "Shaker Country" bedside steel stool flips up to reveal a storage bin that could accommodate slippers or reading materials. A three-drawer chest in the same group has an open-up top that conceals space for hanging file folders.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Woman worried about loving a younger man

DEAR ABBY: I am a 43-year-old woman, divorced, no children, have an excellent job and am secure in my position. Fourteen months ago, a bright young man, age 31, came to work here in another department. The last thing I had in mind was a serious romantic relationship with this kid, but you guessed it. It happened. I fell in love with him. He didn't pursue me; I invited him out first. We discovered we had so much in common we couldn't wait to see each other again.

We're still "in the closet" about our relationship, but we can't keep it under wraps much longer. He had a steady girlfriend when he came here, but she's no longer in the picture. I stopped seeing an established 50-year-old stockbroker when I realized I was in love with this guy.

I'm embarrassed — almost ashamed — and terribly concerned about what people will think about "us." He's more in charge and mature about this than I am. He's the best thing that ever happened to me, and I've known plenty of men.

Am I crazy? Can this work? We're thinking of marriage. Meanwhile we are sneaking around like a couple of thieves. Help me!
SWEET 16 AGAIN

DEAR 16: Quit sneaking around and don't worry about what "people" will think. Can it work? Yes, if you both want it to. Please read the new book "Loving a Younger Man" by Victoria Houston (Contemporary Books). It's written by a woman who once walked in your shoes. She resolutely reaffirms my advice: "Forget the numbers, and follow your heart." You'll be glad you did. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I just read your column in the Pacific Stars and Stripes, and can't believe that you said a colonel has a "chicken" on his shoulder. Abby, how ignorant of you! A colonel has an EAGLE on his shoulder, not a chicken. You have your birds mixed up. Please correct that insulting error.

IN THE MILITARY

DEAR IN: My husband was also "in the military" (World War II), and back at Camp Robinson in Little Rock, Ark., we called his full colonel a "chicken colonel" — as opposed to his lieutenant colonel, who had a silver maple leaf on his shoulder. So, please remove the chip from yours.

DEAR ABBY: There is a lady in town who has been a widow for over 30 years. She belongs to several clubs and societies that I belong to. When a prize is given out for newest married member or the woman who has been married the longest, this lady comes forward to claim the prize for the longest marriage. Naturally, the winner should still have a live husband. (A woman whose husband is dead is a widow, isn't she?)

She insists that she has been married more than 50 years and deserves the prize. She is a very determined woman and nobody wants to argue with her. What should we do?
EXASPERATED IN ST. PAUL

DEAR EXASPERATED: Let it slide. Have a token prize for her and another for the runner-up whose husband is still living. The poor woman is living in the past.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61064.)

New copper IUD to be marketed soon

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — The first copper IUD available in this country in two years goes on the market soon, now that a drug company has agreed to distribute it with detailed warnings, officials say.

The Population Council, a non-profit research and policy organization, announced Wednesday that it had licensed GynoMed Pharmaceutical of Somerville, N.J., to begin marketing the improved intrauterine device domestically during the first half of 1988.

Lawsuits and bad publicity had forced all copper IUDs off the market nearly two years ago.

The soon-to-be available device, the Copper T 380A, was developed at the Population Council and was approved by the Food and Drug Administration in 1984. It has been used in other countries, including Canada, since 1982, but has never been sold in the United States.

The Copper T 380A "is the most effective IUD available anywhere," said George Zeidenstein, president of the Population Council. Studies show that over a year's time an average of one woman out of 100 using it will get pregnant.

"For many women, it is likely to be the contraceptive of choice," Zeidenstein said.

The agreement between the Population Council and GynoMed follows a year-long search for a company that would market the device with appropriate safety precautions, Zeidenstein said.

Roderick Mackenzie, chairman of GynoMed, said the device will be sold with detailed labeling and with the stipulation that doctors confirm in writing that they have received and understood the information.

An estimated 5 million of the devices have been distributed abroad, said the council's Forrest Greenslade.

The Copper T 380A is recommended for women older than 25 who have been pregnant, said Mackenzie.

It is not recommended for women who have multiple sexual relationships or who have had pelvic inflammatory disease, an infection that can lead to sterility.

Women who use IUDs, including the Copper T 380A, have 1 1/2 to two times the risk of other women of getting the disease, said Dr. Wayne Bardin of the Population Council. The recommendations for use are intended to keep that risk as low as possible.

"We welcome the copper IUD as an important addition to the contraceptive field," Dr. Louise Tyrer of Planned Parenthood said at the news conference. "Planned Parenthood continually receives calls from women all over the U.S. asking where they can get a copper IUD. We refer them to Canada."

The product's availability should help alleviate the problem of unwanted pregnancy, which is due primarily to lack of birth control options and misunderstanding, said Jacqueline Forrest, director of research at the Alan Guttmacher Institute, a New York City organization devoted to research on reproductive health.

She said an estimated 2.2 million American women were using IUDs in 1982, the latest year for which figures are available from the government's National Center for Health Statistics.

'Intelligent' floors aid use of robot vehicles

TOKYO (AP) — An "intelligent" floor for managers who want to use robot vehicles for interoffice transportation is being developed in Japan, reports MIS Week.

The floor consists of square plastic tiles back-coated with ferrite guideways that work with robot vehicles fitted with magnetic sensors and microcomputers.

According to the management information systems journal, the foot-square tiles have either I-shaped or L-shaped ferrite coating and can be arranged in the same manner as carpet tiles to create the guideway pattern hidden underneath.

The robot vehicle can be programmed to move from one point to another in the office via the microcomputers which process data obtained from magnetic sensors and keep track of the ferrite guideways underneath.

Experimental robot vehicles have operated at a speed of 1.5 miles per hour, and since they are equipped with touch sensors, stop on contact with a person or object.

Dallas defense dooms Giants

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

IRVING, Tex. (AP)—“Doomsday, Doomsday!” the Dallas Cowboys shouted going into their locker room and Doomsday it was, a throwback to the old Doomsday Defense that just about insured that the NFL will have a new champion for the ninth straight season.

Led by 36-year-old Ed Jones, one of the last remnants of the group that dominated the league a decade ago, the Cowboys' defense set up all but seven points Monday night as Dallas rallied from a 10-point, fourth-quarter deficit and beat the Super Bowl champion New York Giants 33-24 Monday night.

The 19-point fourth quarter also included four field goals by Roger Ruzek, tying an NFL record for field goals in a quarter.

Ruzek's four field goals in the quarter tied a record set by Garo Yepremian of Detroit in 1966 and Curt Knight of Washington in 1970.

The defense, which exploited backups William Roberts and Damien Johnson on the right side of New York's offensive line, also brought the crowd of 55,730, which started booing some members of the strike-torn Cowboys, firmly onto the side of the home team.

While Dallas was ending a two-game losing streak and improving to 4-3, the Giants were dropping to 1-6 in their strike-scarred season, meaning that even if they win all eight remaining games, they may not earn a wild-card playoff berth. They also lost quarterback Phil Simms, the Super Bowl MVP, with what was preliminarily diagnosed as a strained knee, late in the fourth quarter.

On a night when the Dallas offense rushed for just 26 yards, fewest in its history, Jones sacked Simms four times and deflected two passes, one of which dropped into the hands of defensive lineman Jim Jeffcoat, who returned it 26 yards for the tying score. It was almost an exact replica off the key play in the game two years ago that helped give Dallas the NFC East title over the Giants, except that one covered 65 yards.

“It's always a challenge when your opponent has a great defense and you have to do your share,” Jones said.

Herschel Walker goes airborne for a TD.

Lions win Japanese title

Masaaki Mori, Seibu Lions manager, is tossed in the air by happy team members after the Lions defeated the Yomiuri Giants in the Japanese professional baseball championship series this week. The Lions beat the Giants 4-2 in the sixth and final game.

Harvester cagers set scrimmages

Pampa High girls' basketball team will host a four-team scrimmage at 5 p.m. today in McNeely fieldhouse.

Other teams involved in the scrimmage are Panhandle, Happy and Wheeler.

With only one starter returning (5-11 senior Yolanda Brown), the Lady Harvesters are picked to finish sixth in the District 1-4A standings this season. They open the season Nov. 17 against Amarillo Caprock in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Both the varsity and junior varsity teams will be scrimmaging today. Another scrimmage is planned for Nov. 10 at Amarillo High for both varsity and JV teams.

The Lady Harvesters, coached by Albert Nichols, had a 19-7 record last season, best in school history.

Harvesters scrimmage Saturday

The Harvesters also have two scrimmages scheduled before their season opener Nov. 17 against Palo Duro on the home court.

The Harvesters scrimmage at Amarillo Caprock Saturday with three or four teams involved, said Pampa Coach Robert Hale. The Pampa boys' second scrimmage is Saturday, Nov. 14 at Guymon, Okla.

The Harvesters have three starters back from last season's 9-21 squad. They are Dustin Miller (6-4 junior), Chris Evans (6-0 senior) and David Duke (5-9 senior).

This is Hale's second season as Harvester head coach.

Season tickets on sale

Previous Harvester basketball ticket holders have until the end of the week to buy tickets before they go on sale to the public.

Fans receive a discount ($2.50) if they purchase the $35 package before Nov. 17.

Tickets may be purchased at the high school athletic office, located directly north of the tennis courts.

General admission to the games is two dollars.

Aggies climb back into top twenty

By The Associated Press

The first nine teams in the Associated Press college football poll remain the same this week, while the only change in the Top Twenty is Texas A&M replacing Ohio State.

Oklahoma, which has been No. 1 in every poll this season, received 38 of 60 first-place votes and 1,173 of a possible 1,200 points Monday from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Despite a 71-10 victory over Kansas, the Sooners received two fewer first-place votes and three fewer points than a week ago.

Second-ranked Nebraska, which defeated Missouri 42-7, received 15 first-place ballots and 1,137 points. The Cornhuskers have been No. 2 all season.

Two weeks ago, Oklahoma got 42 first-place votes, and the Sooners received 47 the week before that.

This week's remaining seven first-place votes and 1,108 points went to Miami of Florida, which is No. 3 for the sixth consecutive week after defeating East Carolina 41-3.

As for the rest of the solid nine, No. 4 Florida State walloped Tulane 73-14 and received 987 points. No. 5 LSU beat Mississippi 42-13 and received 943 points and No. 6 Auburn trimmed Florida 29-6 and received 906 points.

Seventh-ranked UCLA received 835 points after downing Arizona State 31-23. No. 8 Syracuse beat Pitt 24-10 and received 798 points and No. 9 Notre Dame crushed Navy 56-13 and received 751 points.

Florida, No. 10 last week, slipped to 17th after losing to Auburn. Georgia and Clemson, 12th and 14th, respectively, a week ago, are tied for 10th this week. Georgia was idle while Clemson beat Wake Forest 31-17.

Oklahoma State is 12th, with Alabama and South Carolina tied for 13th, followed by Michigan State, Penn State, Florida, Indiana, Tennessee and Texas A&M.

Last week's Second Ten consisted of Indiana, Georgia, Tennessee, Clemson, Ohio State, Alabama, Oklahoma State, Penn State, South Carolina and Michigan State.

Ohio State dropped out following a 13-7 loss to Michigan State.

Texas A&M won its fourth straight game, defeating Louisiana Tech 32-3, and made the Top Twenty after a four-week absence. The Southwest Conference wasn't represented in the Top Twenty the last two weeks.

Los Angeles standing tall in NBA preseason

By George Robinson

NEW YORK (NEA) — It's been almost two decades since an NBA champion repeated the following year. But don't tell the Los Angeles Lakers.

Here's what to expect this season in the Midwest and Pacific Divisions.

In the Midwest Division, the predicted order of finish in 1987-88 is: 1. Dallas Mavericks; 2. Utah Jazz; 3. Houston Rockets; 4. Sacramento Kings; 5. Denver Nuggets; 6. San Antonio Spurs.

Maverick coach John MacLeod inherits a team that's loaded. Mark Aguirre has the potential to be a great NBA player — if he can only get along with his coach. The guard situation is splendid: Draftees Steve Alford and Jim Farmer join Rolando Blackman, Brad Davis and Derek Harper. James Donaldson is vastly underrated at center. Roy Tarpley, who underwent treatment for cocaine and alcohol problems, was coming along quickly behind him.

Coach Frank Layden of Utah and newly acquired center Darryl Dawkins will keep things loose in Salt Lake City. Utah solved two big problems by acquiring Dawkins to generate more offense and signing Karl Malone to a new contract. The Jazz front line is formidable: Malone, an apparently rejuvenated Dawkins, Mark Eaton, Thurl Bailey. If the Jazz can figure out how to get rid of Kelly Trupucka, and if Darrell Griffith can recover from last year's slump, Layden and Dawkins will have plenty to joke about.

Akeem Olajuwon led the Rockets last season in scoring, blocks, rebounds, steals and minutes played — and he's getting better. But the team needs more out of Ralph Sampson than 43 games and 15 points per. They also need better backcourt play, too. Without Rodney McGray, who deserves more recognition, Olajuwon would have had to carry the Rockets alone.

The Arco Arena will be rocking again this season. Sacramento will finally get out of the cellar and go to the playoffs. They won't go far, but they'll be there. New head coach Bill Russell and assistant Willis Reed should teach Joe Kleine a few things about the pivot, speeding his improvement. Kenny Smith, Derek Smith and Reggie Theus are the nucleus of a solid backcourt rotation.

The Nuggets' story is simple. If Calvin Natt is recovered from his Achilles tendon injury, they'll finish higher than fifth. Either way, Alex English will be a contender for the scoring crown. If Natt's not healthy, Denver will be grateful for San Antonio.

What about the Spurs? In spite of excellent guards Alex Robertson and Johnny Dawkins, they're just waiting for David Robinson's ship to come in.

In the Pacific Division, the predicted order of finish in 1987-88 is: 1. Los Angeles Lakers; 2. Seattle Supersonics; 3. Portland Trailblazers; 4. Golden State Warriors; 5. Los Angeles Clippers; 6. Phoenix Suns.

If you told me that Magic Johnson could turn water into wine, my only question would be, "Red or white?" Last year Johnson made it abundantly clear that there is nothing he can't do with a basketball. And he's only 28.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, on the other hand, is 40. Still, he averaged 17.5 points per game last year. Add Michael Cooper, James Worthy, Mychal Thompson, A.C. Green, et al., and you may be adding another championship ring.

Longhorns gaining more confidence with each victory

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas, leading the Southwest Conference in football with a 3-0 record, is not good enough to relax against any SWC opponent, Texas Coach David McWilliams says.

"We haven't gone out and blown anybody out. We're not a team that just goes out there and wins just because we're out there. ... We've had to earn the victories," McWilliams said Monday.

Texas whipped a fired-up Texas Tech team 41-27 Saturday, and McWilliams told his weekly news conference that his team, 4-3 overall, is improving and gaining confidence.

But he said he has tried to be realistic with his squad. "The honest evaluation is, when we've eliminated mistakes, we've won. When we haven't eliminated mistakes, we haven't won."

"That's where we are right now. I kind of like that. It kind of puts it on our squad to know that we can't relax."

Texas plays Houston Saturday night at the Astrodome in Houston, and McWilliams said of the Cougars, "They will really spread you out all over the field. Our defensive backs are going to think they've been in a track meet after this week."

Tailback Eric Metcalf, among the nation's leading all-purpose runners, missed the second quarter of the Tech game with a hip pointer, but McWilliams said he should play against Houston. On Monday, McWilliams said, Metcalf "was much better. It (the injury) wasn't as severe as they (trainers) first said."

Punter Alex Waits' pulled hamstring muscle might cause him to miss the Houston game, McWilliams said. Waits, one of college football's top punters, was replaced by Bobby Lilledahl in the Tech game, and the Red Raiders blocked Lilledahl's first punt for a touchdown.

Starting offensive tackle Ed Cunningham, who had arthroscopic knee surgery Oct. 20, is possible for Houston, McWilliams said.

UNLV under investigation

By TIM DAHLBERG
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The NCAA has notified the University of Nevada-Las Vegas that it will investigate the recruitment of former New York City basketball star Lloyd Daniels.

UNLV Athletic Director Brad Rothermel said Monday that he received notification of a probe of the basketball program in a letter dated Oct. 23 from David Berst, the director of enforcement for the NCAA.

"We're not concerned about it. It's our understanding the league will do the actual investigation," said UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian, who in 1977 was suspended for two years by the NCAA, which also put the basketball program on probation.

Tarkanian, who sued to block his 1977 suspension and won seven years later, said the announcement of the probe is designed to hurt UNLV recruiting of high school seniors, who sign letters of intent next week.

"We don't need this now," he said.

UNLV President Robert Maxson said last month that a university-sponsored probe into the alleged recruiting violations turned up conflicting evidence and reached no conclusions.

Maxson said the report was being forwarded to the Pacific Coast Athletic Association for further investigation, which would eventually forward its findings to the NCAA.

Berst's letter, however, came only two days after Maxson's statements, and said the NCAA would be conducting a "preliminary inquiry" of the men's basketball program "at the university's request."

Rothermel said the university did not request a probe, and said he did not know what prompted the NCAA to act so quickly.

"There seems to be a discrepancy as to what went on there," Rothermel said. "Normally, the results are forwarded to the PCAA. Then the PCAA forwards it to the NCAA."

Rothermel speculated that PCAA Commissioner Lew Cryer, who served on the UNLV committee that conducted the initial investigation, decided he did not have the resources to investigate further and called the NCAA to come in.

Cryer did not return phone calls on the subject.

The UNLV probe was launched in March after two articles in Newsday alleged that the school appeared to have violated several NCAA regulations in the recruitment of Daniels.

The Newsday articles, which appeared while the UNLV basketball team was advancing toward an eventual appearance in the Final Four, alleged that Daniels accepted illegal payments from recruiter Mark Warkentein and that Warkentein may have violated regulations by becoming Daniels' legal guardian. It also alleged that Daniels was given a car and free meals at Las Vegas hotels.

Daniels, a 6-foot-8 standout, attended four different high schools and never received a degree. He was recruited by UNLV and ended up at a California junior college before transferring to Las Vegas in January.

He was kicked out of the program and dropped out of school without ever playing for the Runnin' Rebels, however, after being arrested in February for buying cocaine. Last month, Daniels was placed on probation and left for Topeka, Kan., where he has signed to play in the Continental Basketball Association.

Cowboys' Gogan faces tough challenge

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Rookie Kevin Gogan has inherited one of the albatross positions of the Dallas Cowboys, offensive right tackle.

The Cowboys' haven't had a Pro Bowl performer there since Rayfield (The Big Cat) Wright in the early 1970s.

Dallas thought Phil Pozderac, 6-9, 280-pounder from Notre Dame might be the answer of the 1980s but his No. 75 jersey became more famous for other things. Like, "Holding No. 75."

"He was the most famous lineman in the NFL for all the wrong reasons," said offensive line Coach Jim Erkenbeck. "There's no question Phil was a marked man."

Pozderac, a fifth-round draft pick in 1983, suffered two critical holding calls that negated big Dallas gains in a 17-14 loss to the eventual Super Bowl champion New York Giants.

"The referees just started looking for me," he said. "It was a reputation I guess I would have had for my entire playing career."

Two weeks ago Pozderac retired to enter into private business. No other player was given his number. Gogan has number 66.

Gogan, a 1986 eighth-round draft pick from the University of Washington, was thrust into the fray last week in a 37-20 loss to Philadelphia.

"Kevin did very, very well," said Erkenbeck. "He's a big strong Irish kid with a nasty temper. He's got a great attitude. He just needs some help on his techniques. He needs a lot of work, but he's not playing that bad for a rookie."

Gogan said he didn't figure he could crack into the starting lineup this year.

"I was surprised at Phil's decision," Gogan said. "I thought he was looking pretty good. But now that I have my chance I'm going to try to make the most of it. I don't want to look bad on national television across the nation."

He added, "Football is football and I think I'm catching on fast."
