Senate limits search for nuke dump

By ANDREW MANGAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Despite last-minute appeals from Texas' two senators, the Senate passed a measure limiting the Energy Department's search for a high-level nuclear waste site to one of three sites already chosen.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen and Phil Gramm opposed the bill Thursday because they said Texas still has a one-in-three chance of being picked as the host state, a decision DOE is required to make under the bill by Jan. 1, 1989.

The Energy Department has chosen Deaf Smith County near Vega, Yucca Mountain, Nev., and the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in Washington state as the final three candidate sites under terms of the 1982 Nuclear Waste Policy Act.

While the amendment does not specify which of three sites will be chosen, Yucca Mountain is widely regarded as the frontrunner for a variety of reasons, including its location in the middle of a nuclear weapons testing range.

Despite the tilt toward Nevada, both Texas senators chose to vote against the bill because they said Texas could still be the site picked by DOE.

In an overwhelming 63-30 vote, the Senate attached the amendment, sponsored by Sens. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and James McClure, R-Idaho, to a $16 billion energy and water appropriations bill slated for a vote next week.

"The bottom line is that by Jan. 1, 1989, the secretary of energy is not going to be in a position to make a final determination as to the single site that is to be categorized," said Gramm, a Republican.

Bentsen, a Democrat, argued that the date should be pushed to 1991 to avoid having the decision made by a lame-duck energy secretary.

"The Senate committee on environment and public works has suggested a single-site selection deadline of Jan. 1, 1991, and I find that much more reasonable and realistic," Bentsen said.

The amendment also postpones further consideration of a site in the eastern United States until the year 2010, which both Texas senators have objected to consistently in the past.

One portion favored by Gramm was a federal incentive payment of $100 million annually to the host state.

"Obviously, if you want somebody to take a garbage heap that society has to have, you've got to compensate them to do it. I believe that the compensation ideas is the correct way to go about this," he said.

But Gramm said the measure needed a provision guaranteeing the state chosen by DOE will accept the repository. Under the current measure, any governor could veto such a designation, he said.

"I think it makes no sense for us to go out and spend $3 billion digging three different holes with no guarantee that any of the three states where the shafts are sunk will allow us to build the repository in their states," Gramm said.

In a separate move that narrows the chances Texas will be chosen as the primary site, Gramm attached an amendment barring the DOE from buying any land at the Texas Panhandle site until late 1988. The agency can still lease lands.

As a safety valve, Gramm also included a provision giving the landowners or their heirs first right to repurchase any land bought by the government.

Jurors give deputy killer death penalty

From Staff and Wire Reports

DENTON — After deliberating nearly six hours Thursday and more than three hours today, a 10-woman, two-man jury handed a death sentence to the killer of Ochiltree County Chief Deputy Melvin K. Drum.

Jurors returned the death sentence at 11:30 a.m. today for murderer Alvin Wayne Crane, 29, of Logan, Okla.

Crane was convicted of capital murder Wednesday for shooting Deputy Drum in the face with a 16-gauge shotgun. Drum had just responded to an argument between Crane and his wife on March 28 in Perryton.

After the death penalty was read, each individual juror had to answer whether Crane had acted deliberately and knowingly in shooting the deputy and whether Crane would pose a continuing threat to society.

Each juror answered yes to both questions, said presiding District Judge J.E. Blackburn of Perryton.

Crane's court-appointed defense attorney, Steve Cross of Borger, said this morning that the jury had to answer "yes" to both questions in order to sentence Crane to death by lethal injection.

"If there is a 'no' answer on either question, then it's an automatic life sentence," Cross said. "These are pretty serious questions. So you have to take time to do serious deliberations."

Ochiltree County District Attorney Bruce Roberson and Denton County District Attorney Jerry Cobb argued for the death penalty while Cross and his co-counsel, Gene Storrs of Amarillo, pleaded for life.

Crane was arrested north of Darrrouzett following a high speed chase along the Texas-Oklahoma line several hours after the shooting.

Judge Blackburn had moved the trial from Perryton to Denton because of publicity about the case.

Lefors told to keep eye on school bank deposits

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

LEFORS — Lefors school board members Thursday night accepted the 1986-1987 audit prepared by Cornell and Co. of Amarillo.

Cornell representative Dale Swan said the audit indicated the district was doing well in most areas, but he said there were a few areas that needed more work to be brought into compliance with new state requirements.

Swan said the "only major" non-compliance area is that of having the Lefors Independent School District's bank deposits always adequately secured by the banks. He explained that banks are required to provide secured collateral covering the deposits.

The main responsibility lies with the banks, Swan said, adding that the collateral requirement is something many banks don't particularly like. He suggested the district should check regularly with the banks to ensure that they are adequately securing the bank's deposits.

Swan said the state "has become rather picky" of late about the requirement being met in light of a number of bank failures in the state in the past couple of years.

He said the state, after reviewing the audit, most likely will send a letter to the district informing it of the non-compliance. But it's not really a difficult matter likely to create any problems with the state, Swan said.

Swan also cited a couple of other areas of minor non-compliance. The two areas concern budgeted figures against actual expenditures, both involving over-expenditures.

One is a $163 excess for special education funding over budgeted figures, exceeding the permitted 10 percent variance. "But that's really a small thing," Swan said.

The other involves a $40,000 over-expenditure in See DEPOSITS, Page 2

Lefors principal says school 'losing' some older students

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

LEFORS — Lefors school trustees heard a report on grades and considered a request for providing more computers in the elementary school at their regular board meeting Tuesday night.

Principal Bill Crockett, handing out copies of the school's honor rolls to the trustees, said many students began the year well in the first six weeks. He said he expects grades to get even better as the year progresses.

Crockett said 69 percent of elementary students made either the A or B honor roll, with 32 percent of junior high students and 16 percent of high school students making the two rolls.

"We're losing them, looks like, starting in junior high," he said. But the students are learning to study and learning that they have to study and have to turn in their homework, he said, adding that he expects to see less failing grades as the school year continues.

"Too many are 'coasting' for the first four weeks, then pushing hard in the fifth week and hoping for the sixth to pull them through," Crockett said. He said students need to learn to be more consistent in their studies throughout all the school weeks.

Crockett said the district will emphasize more study and work for the students, noting that Texas A&M University has raised its entrance requirements in required subject areas and in test scores. He said other colleges and universities likely will upgrade their standards for admission, too.

"These are the reasons school are becoming more demanding" on the students, he said, adding that students who plan to go on to higher education and to be successful "are going to have to realize this and work harder."

Mexican bus plunges into pond; 37 commuters die

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A city bus full of early morning commuters skidded off a road in heavy fog on the south edge of the capital this morning and plunged into a deep pond, killing 37 people, authorities said. Four more passengers were reported injured.

Rogelio Rojas, a spokesman for the Red Cross in Mexico City, said 36 bodies had been recovered from the water and another person died of injuries after being taken to a local hospital.

Federal District police spokeswoman Carmen Gutierrez Zamora said the accident occurred about 6:30 a.m. She said the bus, belonging to the Mexico City Route 100 system got off the road and tumbled into Lake Xico in the Tlahuac district.

"From what survivors said, the road was completely fogged in, and visibility was very poor, and apparently the driver lost control of the vehicle," Gutierrez Zamora said.

"The rescue squad is now in there, and they have sent divers in, and they are breaking windows and trying to get as many people out," she added.

Gutierrez Zamora and Red

Cross spokesman Enrique Carrillo said five passengers were rescued alive and rushed by ambulance to hospitals. One later died, according to authorities.

Divers on the scene said the bus was under more than 10 feet of water.

McLean council sells Old Red for $701

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MCLEAN — City officials bade farewell to their 45-year-old fire fighting veteran this week, selling "Old Red" for $701.

Council members sold "Old Red," the town's 1942 Chevy fire truck, to J.D. Throckmorton of McLean for $701 at their regular meeting. Throckmorton was one of three bidders for the old truck, which the city had used for 40 years.

The truck, "Old No. 3," was bought by the McLean Volunteer Fire Department in 1946 after doing four years of wartime duty at a camp for German prisoners of war northeast of McLean.

Throckmorton said Thursday evening that he had not yet been contacted about the council's decision.

"I might sell it to a volunteer fire group, or I might keep it, I don't know," said Throckmorton, a 75-year-old retired grocer from Dozier.

Throckmorton, an antiques collector, has lived in McLean for 19 years and admits he's had his eye on the truck for some time.

According to McLean volunteer Fire Chief Clifford McDonald, the truck still runs very well and — because it was used mainly for in-town calls — totaled only 5,626 miles on its odometer.

McLean City Council members agreed in July to retire the old fire truck in favor of a $58,000 1985 Ford pumper truck. There are eight trucks in the McLean VFD fleet.

In other business, the city received $1,000 from the McLean school district for the school's share of the McLean Lovett Memorial Library. McLean City Secretary Stella Lee said the payment will go for the library's participation in the Harrington Library Consortium.

In January, McLean school officials decided to consider using the Lovett Memorial Library as the school library because of its larger facilities and access to other Panhandle libraries.

Lee said the city transferred $1,000 from its general fund to its library fund.

Council members also held a hearing to get public input on the city's proposal to seek a $195,000 Texas Department of Community Affairs grant to improve nine blocks of city streets.

Appraisal district drops law firm

Members of the Gray County Appraisal District board have dropped the law firm of Perdue, Brandon & Fielder of Amarillo and chosen what they hope will be a firm more aggressive in collecting delinquent taxes.

Board members agreed at their regular meeting Wednesday to contract with the Austin law firm of Calame, Linebarger & Graham to pursue delinquent tax collections.

Interim Chief Appraiser Judy

Morris said the board action followed complaints by the city of Pampa and Pampa schools that Perdue, Brandon & Fielder was not aggressive enough in collecting the delinquent taxes.

The city and school district are the only two county entities for which the appraisal district collects taxes.

In other business, GCAD board members accepted the resignation of mineral appraiser Clyde Coffee. Morris said the board will

Group pressures Amarillo paper over series

AMARILLO (AP) - Several Panhandle business leaders gathered to begin a campaign for changes at the Amarillo Globe-News and called for an advertising and reader boycott.

The Panhandle Citizens for a Better Amarillo Newspaper claims the publication practices "irresponsible journalism," and injects "negative connotations into its stories, leaving the impression that something's rotten in the Panhandle."

Amarillo oilman T. Boone Pickens is a major force behind the group, which has called for an advertising boycott and is asking readers to cancel subscriptions.

Formation of the group stemmed from an eight-part series of articles printed by the Globe-News Oct. 25-Nov. 1, which discussed race relations in Hereford.

Newspaper General Manager Jerry Huff, who was not present at the meeting, said later that "my first reaction is in the form of a question. Who is behind this movement?"

Police 'arrest' 25

Pampa police "arrested" 25 more desperadoes Thursday in a roundup that continued today for the March of Dimes Jail and Bail fund-raiser.

Among those detained and taken to "jail" at Culberson-Stowers Toyota Thursday were Pampa City Manager Bob Hart and Police Chief Robert Eberz. Those arrested must raise their bonds by calling friends for pledges to the charity.

The arrests were made on complaints filed by people willing to pledge $15 for the delight of watching the bad guys get cuffed.

The March of Dimes raised $255 in arresting fees and $3,077 in pledges Thursday for a total of $3,332.

capital outlay for building maintenance and improvements. But that also should be no problem, since some of the increased expenses arose out of remodeling to improve the energy conservation of the high school building and other similar matters that had to be taken care of during the school year after the budget was adopted, Swan explained.

The state also will probably mention those items in its letter, but the district should be able to justify them without trouble, he said.

The over-expenditures could have been adjusted in budget amendments at the end of the school year without much trouble, Swan said.

Superintendent Earl Ross said he was aware of the differences but noted that the district has not yet received the required forms from the state to file an amended budget.

Students

ters for use at the elementary level, saying computer instruction is limited by the few computers available. He suggested that there should be enough computers to permit two students at each terminal, enhancing a teacher's ability to teach and a student's ability to learn.

"It's important, I believe, that we get the students involved in the computer program at the elementary level," Downes said, since computers are "becoming more and more important" in society and much of higher education programs are turning to computer instruction.

Crockett said the Laser 128 computer can be purchased at $466 each for the computer and monitor, with an additional $24 for the monitor stand. Crockett said the Laser computers are "98 percent compatible" with the Apple computer software programs; Downes said the Apple system is considered as being the top educational computer. He noted the Apple computers cost from $1,000 to $1,200 each.

Trustees expressed general agreement with the need to acquire more computers but took no action, saying they will discuss it further at the next meeting after checking to see if enough funds are available for the purchase.

Coach Michael Kumor discussed formulating a guideline for awarding sports letters in the basketball program, saying he's not aware of a specific policy in force. He suggested students could receive a letter if they played in 16 quarters, either a full quarter or part of one, during the season. He said allowances would be made for players who become injured or ill and accordingly are not able to complete the season.

Principal Crockett said he feels there also needs to be a more specific policy on students who are awarded jackets. Trustee Karen Lake said she

Though generally pleased with the district's accounting, Swan listed several suggestions he feels will improve the preparation of the audit in later years and informed the board of areas to be prepared for in meeting new audit requirements set by the state.

Swan suggested that the district begin using pre-numbered receipt books in all areas to give more control over accounting for revenue and expenses, make sure that all books and ledgers are balanced out monthly, and make annual adjustments in the fixed assets inventory (buildings, land, vehicles, other permanent fixtures and equipment).

Under new state rules, school districts will be required to start budgeting by state-mandated areas of curriculum and programs, Swan said. This is designed for the district to account for expenditures of state-provided funds in those areas, he said.

thinks students also should be able to receive letters for participation in other University Interscholastic League events outside of sports.

The board took no action on Kumor's request but instructed Crockett and the coaches to get together to formulate a specific policy on awarding jackets and letters, including non-athletic UIL participation.

In other matters, Superintendent Earl Ross said a health department official made a surprise visit to the schools. He said the school received a generally good report, though there were some suggestions concerning a water fountain in the elementary building and others in the girls dressing room. One fountain connected to a water hose outlet also needs a valve to prevent backup in the water system, the official indicated. The inspector also said a table saw needs a safety guard, Ross said, adding those recommendations will be taken care of.

Ross said a Texas Education Agency representative also appeared to make a food services audit. The official was generally pleased with the operations, Ross said, though some minor questions were made concerning accounting for students receiving free and reduced prices for meals.

- In other business, the trustees:
- named Ben White to the Long Range Planning Committee, substituting for one member who withdrew from the assignment;
  - cast all the district's 390 votes for Sam Haynes of McLean for the Gray County Appraisal District board of directors;
  - awarded a bid to Malcolm Hinkle Inc. of Pampa for $852 for the purchase of a new heater in the girls dressing room;
  - approved early dismissal at 2:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 25, for the Thanksgiving holidays;
  - voted to prohibit workouts for sports before 8 a.m. on school days; and
  - approved bills for payment.

Group urges more women, minority judges

AUSTIN (AP) — Saying there is a "gross under-representation" of minority and women judges on state appeals courts, the Texas Civil Liberties Union says Gov. Bill Clements has a chance to begin changing that when he names a new Supreme Court chief justice.

Clements' press secretary, Reggie Bashur, said Thursday that Clements may make the appointment next week, and he said the governor's decision will be based on ability.

"Governor Clements bases his judicial appointments on merit. The process is totally color-blind and is based solely on the best people available who want to serve the state of Texas," Bashur said.

"There probably will be an announcement (about a new chief justice) early next week," he said. "The governor is having meetings this week, and I think he's going to be making a final decision in a few days."

TCLU legal director Jim Harrington said that in replacing Chief Justice John Hill, who resigned effective Jan. 1, Clements could make a dramatic statement about the makeup of Texas courts.

Harrington wrote Clements a letter detailing the lack of minority representation on the state's appellate courts.

"We urge your support in the effort to broaden the representation of Texas society on its courts, and to eliminate the vestiges of unconscionable discrimination," Harrington's letter said.

Texas judges at all levels are elected, although a governor can appoint replacements to fill vacancies which occur during his term.

Clements has more than three years left in the governor's office. Harrington said that means the governor likely will be naming a substantial number of judges to the various courts.

The TCLU is not advocating preferential treatment for minorities, Harrington said.

"Rather, we ask that you take cognizance of their historical under-representation, and indeed discrimination against them, and help rectify this inequity so that the courts reflect a cross-section of the community, much like juries," he wrote to Clements.

In the letter, Harrington cited a recently completed study of Texas appellate court judges by the TCLU that showed what the group called "gross under-representation" of women, blacks and Hispanics on the state's upper-level courts.

That study found that:

- Of the nine Supreme Court justices, there is one Hispanic.
- Of the nine Court of Criminal Appeals judges, none are minorities or women.
- Of the 80 justices on the 14 state appeals courts, six were Hispanic, five were women and one was black.

Girl mauled by lion goes home

HOUSTON (AP) — An 8-year-old girl who was mauled by a lion has returned home after a month-long hospital stay, but doctors say more surgery will be necessary.

Roxanne Marie Hernandez was greeted at home Thursday by family, friends and mariachi music.

She suffered a cracked skull, leaving part of her brain exposed after she was attacked by the 300-pound lion Oct. 10 at a Houston flea market. The animal, which a veterinarian said was undernourished, was destroyed after the incident.

Roxanne has undergone surgery on brain tissue and also to close as much scalp as possible. Other surgical procedures involved covering the skull with skin, and she faces further plastic surgery, Hermann Hospital spokeswoman Beth Sartori said.

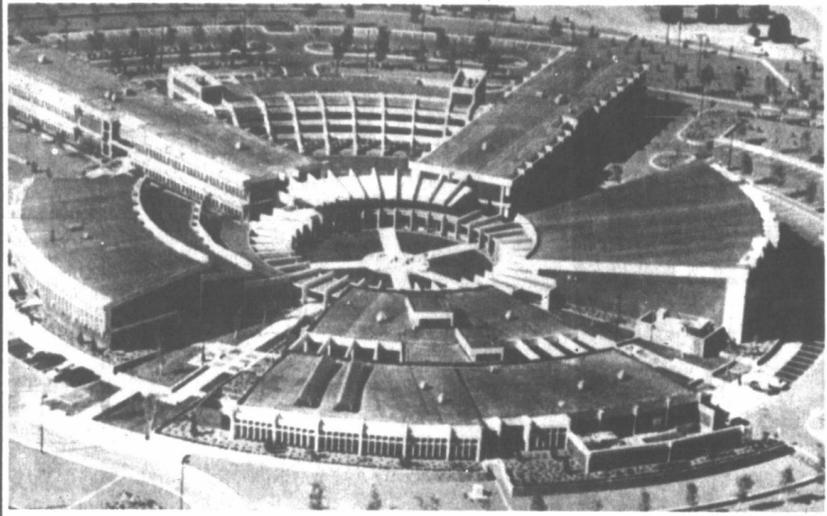

"She'll be evaluated more progressively for learning disabilities to be confident that that doesn't occur, or so we can identify it early," said Dr. Michael Miner.

Further complicating matters, the child contracted chicken pox three days ago, Ms. Sartori said.

"She remembers walking into the flea market and having eye-to-eye contact with the lion," said the girl's mother, Sonia Hernandez. "After that she remembers being on the floor after the accident."

The lion's owner, Gary Durkovitz, 35, of Houston, remained jailed Thursday after being arrested and charged Wednesday with causing bodily injury to a child. During a Thursday court appearance, his bond was raised from $25,000 to $50,000.

Funeral home workers discover homicide

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Bexar County Sheriff Harlon Copeland says alert funeral home workers foiled what might have been a perfect homicide.

Copeland said the workers noticed bruises on a 63-year-old woman's body and tipped investigators, who later determined the death was a homicide and arrested a 46-year-old man for murder.

The body of Augusta May Oberlander was found slumped on a couch in her home Nov. 7. Officials believed she had died of a heart attack, but her death was ruled a homicide Thursday by the Bexar County Medical Examiner's Office after bruises were found on the woman's head.

"I'd say Alamo Funeral Home was on its toes," Copeland said. "I'm afraid that body could have been buried and we'd never have known it was a homicide," the sheriff told the San Antonio Express-News.

Roger John Allison, 46, was ordered held in the Bexar County Jail in lieu of $50,000 bond.

Medical examiner's office spokesman Dewey Cashwell said,

"This (head injuries) could have easily gone unnoticed," said the victim's grandson, Richard Erney, 24.

Earny said family members had only recently learned from friends of Oberlander that she had complained in the past of being hit or beaten.

Copeland said that deputies sent to the woman's house did not see any signs of foul play and paramedics said it appeared the woman had suffered a heart attack.

An autopsy determined that the head injuries caused the woman's death.

Talking machines not worth cash

Let's get one thing straight: I do not like machines.

Machines in America may be the save-all for some people, but for me they're just a pain in the backside.

The machines I'm talking about are the ones that deal with money.

For starters, there's the dollar-bill changer at the Pampa Post Office.

That thing won't take a dollar bill unless it is fresh off the printing press. I'm warning you, if you want to make change for your dollar at the post office, take about 50 of 'em with you, because the machine's fickleness has become almost legend in Pampa.

Which leads me to another question: Some bill changers at car washes accept both $1 bills and $5 bills. How does the machine know the difference?

I've never put a five in one, because I'm afraid I'll get one of the machines that's on the fritz. A looney-tunes bill changer that isn't smart enough to know the difference between the two denominations.

And then we have those dastardly automatic teller machines.

The only time those things don't work is when you really need some spare cash.

And how do those machines know what your name is?

You stick your card in, and immediately it says, "Hello Jimmy Patterson!"

And why, if this machine is so smart, does it call my wife by my name when she's the one getting money?

For a good laugh, we like to fool the machine like this.

My wife will put the card in, the machine will say, "Hello Jimmy Patterson!" and we'll have a grand old time.

So much for entertainment on a slow night in Pampa.

And another thing... if I have inadvertently overextended my checking account and have no money in it, I'd rather have a real live person tell me rather than a machine.

If I have run out of money, the machine will tell me, "Requested funds not available."

The machine is talking bank-ese. Teller-talk. Loan officer lingo.

What this country needs is a machine that resembles a real person. What machines need to tell you when you have no money is what the people in the bank really think when you're overdrawn.

"You're outta money, fool! You're in the red. Hot. No moolah. Bouncey-bouncey. So, just take your card and go away now, and you'll be getting a call from us tomorrow so we can straighten out what you've screwed up!"

And speaking of phone calls... how 'bout those talking telephones, huh?

Another insult to my intelligence.

When I deposit my quarter, the last thing I want to hear is some computerized voice thanking me for making the call. What is it thanking me for?

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

And when you call information, remember the good old days when a real person used to read you the number you requested?

No more. Not in the land of computer opportunity.

For quite a while now, a real operator has come on the line, asked if she could help you, and then turn you over to some fake who gives you the number.

The thing I don't like about this is what if you want to request a second phone number? You have to hang up and dial again — and get charged again. Ahh! So that's what they were thinking?

Ma Bell's no dummy.

The other machine I have a problem with is the talking soda machine.

You put your money in and the thing actually tells you, "Please make your selection."

For years and years, people have been putting their money in non-talking soda machines and making their selections with no guidance.

All of sudden, the soft drink industry has decided the American public is so dumb they have to be told when to make their selection.

I could hear their board meeting now.

"Do you think the people really know when they should make their selection?" asks the smart executive.

"What was the question?" asks the dumb executive.

"Thank you, you've just given me my answer," the smart one says.

So, America makes its selection, and the machine says, "Thank you, come again."

Funny thing is, the female-sounding voices in these soda machines and these pay telephones all sound the same.

Come to think of it, they sound just like the recorded ladies on the time and temperature recording and the 411-information line.

Frightening thought for male chauvinists: Maybe the world is being taken over by computerized women that were all Made in Japan.

Next thing that'll probably happen is my wife will begin tape recording all her conversations with me and I'll never see her again.

"Hello Jimmy Patterson!" she'll say. "I need you to clean the kitchen, vacuum the carpet and feed the dog. And after that you can watch a little TV and go to bed. I love you. Thank you for calling."

FBI agent arrested

EL PASO (AP) — A Federal Bureau of Investigation agent has been arrested on a charge of injury to a child in connection with an alleged beating of his stepdaughter a year ago, according to El Paso County Jail records.

Agent Arturo Fierro, 43, who had been assigned to the FBI's San Diego office since completing training in midsummer, was released from the El Paso County Jail on a personal recognizance bond shortly after he was arrested Tuesday, jail records show.

Before joining the FBI, Fierro had been a Texas Department of Public Safety officer for about nine years.

Fierro's stepdaughter was 6 years old when the alleged beating occurred, authorities said.

Fierro was arrested just before the start of a child-custody hearing Tuesday before District Court Judge Lupe Rivera-Eggemeyer.

Law on instructing jurors about parole unconstitutional

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled that a 1985 state law directing trial judges in criminal cases to instruct jurors on the possible impact of "good time" and parole on a defendant's sentence is unconstitutional.

Executive Director Tom Krampitz of the Texas District and County Attorneys Association said Thursday's 6-3 ruling gives "our people very little guidance as to what to do" in future cases.

Krampitz also questioned whether the appeals court had really declared the law unconstitutional because of the way in which the vote was split.

Two court spokesmen who asked that their names not be used said the ruling's effect is to declare the law unconstitutional, although various judges lined up differently on reasons behind the ruling.

He was sentenced to life in prison.

Judge Sam Houston Clinton, writing for the majority, said the law dictates that the jury be informed at a trial's punishment phase about prison good time and also how it can be taken away.

The law, and jury instruction, adds that a prison term may be reduced by parole and reveals to the jury the formula used in determining when the defendant would be eligible for parole.

The law specifically instructs the jury that it may consider "the existence of the parole law and good conduct time."

Clinton said that law violates the separation of powers doctrine in that it is an attempt by the Legislature to direct the judiciary to interfere with the state parole board, which he said is a member of the executive branch of government.

Basically, the judges held that the law violates the constitutional separation of powers and due process doctrines.

One said a judge would be "ill-advised" to continue to instruct jurors according to the law held unconstitutional. "Six of the nine judges are saying, 'Don't give that charge,'" he added.

The court, however, upheld the conviction of the defendant who raised the legal issue, saying error at the punishment phase did not prevent him from getting a fair and impartial trial.

The issue was raised on appeal by Vernon Lee Rose, who was convicted of robbing the owner of a Dallas textile company in October 1984 at the owner's plant. The owner, according to court records, was robbed of $160 at gunpoint and was left tied up on the floor.

Rose was arrested eight days later in a chase after he tried to escape from police in a squad car. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Clinton said that law violates the separation of powers doctrine in that it is an attempt by the Legislature to direct the judiciary to interfere with the state parole board, which he said is a member of the executive branch of government.

He also said the law, along with the instruction it mandates, violates due process in that it is calculated to deny the accused the right to a fair and impartial trial on the issue of punishment.

"The risk that punishment will be based on extraneous considerations is intolerable in a society that constitutionally demands concepts of fundamental fairness be honored in its criminal justice system," Clinton wrote.

"The consequence is that while a majority finds error in giving the instruction, it also holds the error does not call for a reversal."

In a dissenting opinion, Judge Michael McCormick said the majority ruling would result in other guilty felons "walking the streets of Texas ..."

He said the majority opinion "has produced a false flower of fairness camouflaged in the pseudonym of justice."

Gorbachev will not learn at Disneyland

Ronald Reagan's greatest virtue, his optimism, is also his greatest fault. He thinks all will be right in the world if only we make government better and tell people the truth. Those are praiseworthy objectives, but the problem is that many people prefer bad government and lies.

This explains Reagan's oft-stated hope of giving Soviet dictator Mikhail Gorbachev a guided tour during the Dec. 7 summit in the United States. "It would be good for Mr. Gorbachev to see this country for himself," Reagan said recently.

The president has offered to show Gorbachev around the Reagan ranch in California to see how humbly Americans live. That makes as much sense as Gorbachev showing off his opulent dacha south of Moscow so Reagan can see how humbly socialists live.

And Reagan has said that if Gorbachev took a helicopter tour of an American city he would see how comfortably the American middle class lives under capitalism.

Contrary to what Reagan thinks, such tours mean nothing. The only benefit Gorbachev will get from visiting America will be to case the joint for the socialist pillage he expects to carry out.

That's because Gorbachev firmly believes in communist ideology. When he sees capitalist prosperity, he thinks of these words of Vladimir Lenin, the first Soviet dictator: "Imperialism is capitalism in that stage of development in which the domination of monopolies and finance capital has established itself." In other words, American prosperity, Gorbachev believes, rests on capitalist theft of the so-called Third World; while Soviet economic problems stem from sacrifices made to advance the worldwide march of communism, leading to a global utopia.

If Reagan describes America's free democracy, Gorbachev will remember what Lenin said: "Only in communist society, when the resistance of the capitalists has been completely broken up, when the capitalists have disappeared, when there are not classes ... Only then will really complete democracy without any exception, be possible and be realized." That is, in capitalist countries democracy is a sham, while communist states promote the only true democracy — the freedom to choose communism.

Does Gorbachev doubt communism's efficacy? Does he ever wonder if Lenin's prescriptions for establishing a utopia are wrong? Perhaps, but it doesn't matter. Lenin established a self-perpetuating tyranny that rests on pure power, nothing else. And pure power must depend on socialism to control people, to extract from the country's slaves (and all 300 million Soviets are slaves of one level or another) the booty needed to keep the ruling clique in power.

Gorbachev was chosen by the Soviet elite precisely because he proved himself an effective, ruthless communist dictator.

Miracles do happen, of course. Grace can penetrate the densest skull. But a tour of Disneyland with Reagan as guide won't make it happen.

Toss this baby with the bath

WASHINGTON — Until a few days ago, it had seemed pointless to comment on the pending "Parental and Medical Leave Act of 1987" — pointless, because it seemed unbelievable that so bad a bill would ever draw serious attention. But on Oct. 29 a subcommittee of the Senate Labor Committee held a hearing on the bill, and now we hear that under the rubric of "pro-family" the measure will be reported to the floor.

Sponsored by Connecticut's Sen. Christopher Dodd, the bill may be pro-family, but it is anti-everything else. It is anti-labor, anti-management, anti-collective bargaining and anti-federalism. It violates the 10th Amendment of the Constitution and perhaps the 11th Amendment as well. Because the bill's sweeping embrace does not exempt religious organizations, it may violate the First Amendment also.

Dodd's bill is a manifestation of the Big Brother philosophy gone berserk. It would apply to all employers of at least 15 employees. The bill would compel these employers, on request, to grant an employee 18 weeks of unpaid leave over a two-year period on the birth or adoption of a child. In the event of a serious illness, the bill would mandate 26 weeks of unpaid leave over a 12-month period.

Yes, it is all very compassionate. The picture of Daddy staying home with Mommie for two or three months, nurturing the newborn child, is a picture to moisten the eye. The weeks following childbirth often are weeks of severe readjustment within a family. Who could oppose togetherness?

When such togetherness is mandated by federal law, every thoughtful observer should oppose it. Stephen J. Markman, assistant attorney general for the Office of Legal Policy, has spelled out the objections with clarity and force. His recent testimony before the subcommittee demolishes any case that might be mounted in the bill's support.

For starters, questions of annual leave, whether paid or unpaid, are questions that historically have been resolved by collective bargaining or by an employer's decision. The resolution of fringe benefits depends upon all kinds of things. Some employees might find "parental leave" desirable; others might prefer a benefit package that included dental care or paid vacation time instead. Under this bill, all employers would be compelled to provide parental leave whether their employees wanted it or not.

In his testimony, Markman noted the differing nature of work forces. In one business, most of the employees may be older persons; in another, the workers may be mostly young or middle-age. The sums that an employer may set aside for fringe benefits are limited. Workers themselves are in the best position to know what they want. "If the federal government forces a particular benefit on them, it deprives them of economic opportunities that in many cases they would value more highly."

The bill is unfair not only to workers but also to their employers. In many small industries, the prolonged absence of a key employee would impose a serious hardship. The prospect of losing such a key figure for weeks on end almost certainly would result in subtle discrimination against hiring such risks in the first place. Younger women especially would be seen as potential liabilities. Federal law forbids discrimination on account of sex, but such charges are not easily proved.

Under the 10th Amendment, public policies on health, safety and welfare historically have been regarded as areas in which the states and the private sector must be free to experiment. Dodd's bill would trample upon this tradition. An attempt to federalize the law on parental leave, said Markman, "is symptomatic of the persistent tendency of government officials in Washington — well-meaning officials — to act as if only we can fully understand and remedy the problems confronting 240 million Americans."

"It is this attitude," Markman added, "that in recent decades has been responsible for the mushrooming growth of a national government that not only has undertaken unmanageable responsibilities but also has usurped the decision-making authority of private citizens and of the levels of government closest to those citizens — the states and their localities."

This is sound doctrine. Because the Dodd bill would impose its provisions on state and local government workers, the measure seriously would intrude upon state prerogatives. And because the bill leaves open the prospect of requiring not unpaid leave, but rather paid leave, it raises monumental questions of cost. This ugly legislative baby ought to be decently aborted before it coos and gurgles its way to enactment.

Lady provided mercy to others

What would you do with a million dollars? So frequently, the lottery winner enjoys his bonanza but a little while before he and it are consumed by excesses, marital problems and health problems.

So often the winners lose. But then there is Catherine McAuley of Dublin, Ireland, who multiplied her inheritance. In 1822 Catherine learned that she was sole heir to the estate of her adoptive parents.

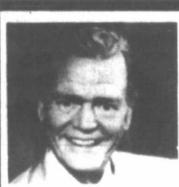

Catherine had learned to enjoy the life of Dublin's social elite. The inheritance, the equivalent of $1 million, would ensure that she could live out her life in comfort and luxury.

But Catherine had seen others of 19th-Century Dublin living lavishly and purposelessly.

Instead this socialite turned social worker; this lady of fashion and culture became a compassionate teacher and healer of the poor.

With her inheritance she bought a huge old home on Baggot Street in fashionable Dublin and converted it into a House of Mercy.

There the poor, the sick found healing, the uneducated found teaching, the unlovely found love. Catherine's life was one of austerity; her time and her resources were all devoted to praying, teaching and helping. Visiting the sick in their homes was a priority.

When an ailing baby was left on her doorstep, and she was able to remedy its influenza, Catherine decided that her ministry must focus primarily on healing.

While friends and relatives chided her for squandering her inheritance on the "thankless poor," she not only persisted but sought to enlist them in her work. And some did volunteer. A few at first, then many.

Soon the Baggot Street House of Mercy was overcrowded. Then in 1831, Catherine and the volunteers who had embraced her commitment created a Catholic religious congregation and began to extend their spiritual and medical services throughout Ireland and beyond.

Catherine McAuley lived but 10 years more, yet that was long enough for her to see her ministry spreading throughout the English-speaking world. Her single House of Mercy is now the worldwide institute of the religious Sisters of Mercy — with more than 100 health-care facilities in the United States. Seventy-five percent of our population lives within 25 miles of a Mercy Hospital.

Additionally, the Mercy sisters operate 18 colleges and 40 high schools in the United States. Eighteen thousand Sisters of Mercy serve in 30 countries.

So what would you or I do with $1 million? Catherine McAuley did good.

Liberal media begin to slant toward right

By Ben Wattenberg
As we keep seeing, from North to Bork, media is power. And so, if the pattern of media changes, the distribution of power can change.

The case has been made that there is a liberal tilt to the major American media establishments. Of the eight big influential that are said to set the national agenda, seven are considered to have a liberal mindset: the New York Times, The Washington Post, ABC, NBC, CBS, Time and Newsweek. Only The Wall Street Journal is regarded as partly conservative.

Now, this does not mean that the seven Lib-Tilts sit around hatching plots. I repeat the term "mindset." That's where the tilt comes from, a mindset, occasionally in the ownership of the enterprise, but more often these days stemming from the working journalists' view of the world — adversarial, anti-establishment, negative, self-righteous, all those unhappy marching adjectives of modern liberalism. It is mindset that determines what's considered news and who gets to explain it.

But change is afoot. The Big Eight may be expanding. USA Today and Cable News Network may have joined the club, and while neither is conservative, they are not liberal.

And consider now U.S. News & World Report. It had been around for a long time: a staid gray lady, fact-oriented, trend-oriented but never trendy, solid, useful, sometimes boring ("U.S. Snooze"). It was a generally conservative magazine — but never regarded as a big player when it came to influencing national opinion.

Then, three years ago, U.S. News was bought by zillionaire Mortimer Zuckerman. Editors and consultants have been hired, quit, hired, unhired. The layout has been souped up. New columnists have appeared. It's become a much more interesting magazine. Rumors fly: Zuckerman is a genius, no, Zuckerman is a pain in the neck; there is chaos, no, there is firm direction; it's lost an audience, no, it's gained an audience. It's about what you'd expect in a high-rumor business full of people with talent and temper. But behind the hustle-bustle, something important is aborning. The magazine is on the threshold of becoming a major soldier in the opinion wars, and, in that combat, U.S. News will not be one of the liberal troops.

Look at the people who write signed opinion pieces at U.S. News. Zuckerman describes himself as a "pragmatic conservative"; he's tough on foreign policy and economics, liberal on some social matters. Editor David Gergen, former communications director for Ronald Reagan, was banged upon by conservatives for being too liberal when in Reaganland, but he too is hard-nosed on most issues.

Richard Perle, former assistant secretary of defense, writes a monthly column. He is a hawk. Michael Kramer, recently politics editor for New York magazine, writes weekly. He has a liberal sensibility — and yet recent pieces were pro-Bork and pro-contras. One might describe his politics as "neoconservative with a human face."

Former Librarian of Congress Daniel J. Boorstin is now resident contributing editor. Boorstin, an eminent historian, will write occasional pieces as well as spark ideas. He has an eclectic and original mind but is also regarded as having a neoconservative view of the world.

All this does not mean that U.S. News will become a Johnny-One-Note journal of right-of-center opinion. It will remain a newsmagazine based on solid journalistic practice.

But its mindset and position in the media constellation have changed. On balance, it may be somewhat more liberal than it used to be. But because its conservatism is more modern and more relevant, because Zuckerman is prepared to spend big money for a long time, the magazine is likely to get a seat at the big table whose players shape the national culture. That will be a step toward balancing the media equation at a time when media, more than ever, means influence.

Preliminary schedule set but still hurdles to clear

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union have set the schedule for next month's summit, but still cannot agree on how to monitor the missile-ban treaty President Reagan and Mikhail S. Gorbachev are supposed to sign.

The White House announced Thursday that the Soviet leader would arrive here Dec. 7, meet with Reagan over the next three days and leave on Dec. 10. All the sessions will be held at the White House.

On the negotiating front, however, the situation is less clear. The latest problem concerns two Soviet missiles that look enough alike to trouble U.S. negotiators in Geneva.

In fact, U.S. officials said Thursday, the SS-25 intercontinental missile in its initial stages of construction looks exactly like the SS-20 missile to be scrapped under the arms control treaty.

As a result, U.S. negotiators demanded the right to have inspectors at SS-25 installations to make sure the rockets were not secretly replacing the 441 mobile SS-20s to be dismantled over three years.

The U.S. concern is that because the two missiles are so similar, at least in the first stage of development, the Soviets could circumvent the treaty by modifying SS-25s to make them a substitute for the banned SS-20s.

The United States, meanwhile, will be committed to dismantling 364 missiles in West Germany, Britain, Italy and Belgium.

The dispute is separate from a decision to allow Soviet inspectors at those sites and at U.S. missile plants in America while U.S. monitors would be at Soviet installations.

The Soviets have responded to the U.S. concerns by saying that intercontinental ballistic missiles such as the SS-25 are not part of the prospective treaty. Gennady Gerasimov, the spokesman for the Soviet foreign ministry, called the U.S. demand an unacceptable last-minute proposal.

He was quoted Thursday in Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, as acknowledging new difficulties in the way of a treaty and blaming a "last-minute, final-curtain proposal from the United States."

At the State Department, spokesman Charles E. Redman blamed the Soviets for the apparent snag.

He said the issue arose only after the Soviets belatedly provided the U.S. side with missile information the Americans had sought for some time.

With Gorbachev's Dec. 7 arrival in mind, chief U.S. negotiator Max M. Kampelman is going to Geneva to meet Sunday night and Monday with Yuli M. Vorontsov, the deputy Soviet foreign minister who plays a prominent role in Kremlin arms control decisions.

Redman hinted at a possible solution. Asked if the SS-25s could be watched from spy satellites, which would preclude stationing Americans at the sites,

Redman said "that's something for the negotiators to work out."

The spokesman said he had talked to the U.S. negotiators and found "they're still confident we'll be able to get through these issues. Obviously, it's a complicated process."

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater outlined Gorbachev's schedule and disputed reports from Moscow in The New York Times and The Washington Post that Gorbachev wanted to stay longer.

"The Soviet team indicated some amusement at the stories of an extended stay and did not give any indication that would be the case," the presidential spokesman said.

Crosby says he's grateful for drugs, weapons convictions

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock singer David Crosby says he's grateful for his drug and weapons convictions, which cost him five months in prison before they were thrown out by an appeals court.

"Even though they put me in the penitentiary on a case they shouldn't have, I feel gratitude because it may have saved my life," Crosby said after a Texas appeals court ruled Thursday he was caught in an illegal search.

"I hope other people will learn from my experience and avoid drugs. I've been clean for nearly two years now and I have the state of Texas to thank for it," he said.

Crosby, who became famous with The Byrds and later with Crosby, Stills and Nash, was arrested in 1982 in his dressing room at a night club in Dallas. He was convicted on cocaine and handgun possession charges.

"Because I'm no longer a convicted felon that means that I get my vote, which is very, very valuable to me. I care a great deal about it," he said. "It also gives me my right to travel and means I'm off parole and that's nice."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled, 5-4, that a Dallas policeman had no right to search Crosby's night club dressing room on April 12, 1982. The policeman found Crosby crouched on the floor with a propane torch in one hand and glass pipe in the other. On his lap was a bag of cocaine, according to court records.

Police also found a pistol after they took Crosby to city hall. He was sentenced to five years in prison for the cocaine conviction and a three-year sentence, to be served at the same time as the cocaine sentence, for unlawfully carrying a weapon in a tavern.

The dressing room search was illegal because the officer testified he went into the dressing room after "I got curious as to whether there was a law being violated or not in there," the appeals court said.

Crosby, who had acknowledged that he had a drug-use problem, was released from prison Aug. 8, 1986.

The appeals court will be asked to reconsider its decision, Dallas County Assistant District Attorney Donald Davis says. If the court refuses, Davis said a decision would be made on whether to retry Crosby.

The fact that Crosby has served time in prison would not influence the retrial decision, he said.

A retrial seems improbable because the Court of Criminal Appeals ruling means prosecutors could not use as evidence anything that was taken in the improper search, defense lawyer Jay Ethington said.

A majority opinion by Judge M.P. Duncan's said a ruling that the search was legal "would be providing peace officers of this state with the power and authority to conduct general, exploratory searches."

"This we will not, nor can we constitutionally, do," Duncan said.

Judges agreeing with Duncan were Sam Houston Clinton, Marvin Teague, Chuck Miller and Charles Campbell concurred.

Presiding Judge John Onion and Judges W.C. Davis, Bill White and Michael McCormick dissented.

Retail sales drop in October

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales edged down 0.1 percent in October as a sharp dip in auto sales pulled down gains elsewhere, the government said today.

Excluding autos, retail sales were up 0.7 percent, the strongest jump since February.

The Commerce Department said retail establishments sold $127.4 billion worth of goods in October, down $137 million from the September sales level.

The decline was less than predicted by many analysts, who took rising consumer debt levels as a sign that spending enthusiasm would wane. The Oct. 19 stock market crash, according to the figures, apparently had lit.4 percent — and increases from June through August.

For the first 10 months of the year, sales were up 4.2 percent over the same period last year.

Nearly all of the weakness in October came from a 3.1 percent decline in auto sales, which was anticipated as dealers struggled without the end-of-the-model-year incentives that had boosted summer business. Auto sales had slipped 3.8 percent in September.

Mandel and wife Jeanne leave attorney's office.

Mail fraud, racketeering charges against Marvin Mandel vacated

BALTIMORE (AP) — Former Gov. Marvin Mandel said he won't return to politics after a federal judge threw out the 1977 mail-fraud and racketeering conviction that sent him to prison for 19 months and forced him from office.

"My political future is behind me," the 67-year-old Mandel said after the ruling Thursday. Nodding toward his wife, Jeanne, he added, "You see my future right here. She wouldn't let me run for office."

Mandel went to prison after being convicted of influencing legislation to help five political associates get extra racing days for the Marlboro Race Track, which they secretly owned.

U.S. District Judge Frederic N. Smalkin, citing a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling, threw out all convictions in the case Thursday and ordered the government to repay all fines paid.

U.S. Attorney Breckinridge Willcox said the government will appeal because of concern the ruling could destroy the government's ability to prosecute local corruption cases.

The indictment alleged that Mandel's political associates gave the colorful and controversial former governor $380,000 in money, clothes, jewelry and financial help in his divorce settlement with his first wife, Barbara.

In June, the Supreme Court ruled that the 115-year-old mail fraud statute protects only rights in money and property and cannot be used to prosecute public officials for defrauding citizens of their "intangible rights" to honest government.

Federal prosecutors had used the intangible-rights theory in their case against Mandel and co-defendants Irvin Kovens, W. Dale Hess, Harry W. Rodgers III, William A. Rodgers and Ernest N. Cory.

The prosecutor in the case, former U.S. Attorney Barnett D. Skolnik, said, "Nothing will ever change what Mr. Mandel did. He sold his office. All the courts are doing now, 10 years later, is deciding whether it should technically still be considered a federal crime when a state governor sells his office."

Mandel was formally stripped of his office under state law in 1977 but was reinstated two days before his term expired in January 1979 when a three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals threw out the conviction.

Gorbachev brands former protege overreacher

MOSCOW (AP)—Mikhail Gorbachev said his former protege, Boris Yeltsin, was fired because he put "personal ambitions above the interests of the party" and blamed others for his own shortcomings, Tass said today.

The Soviet leader's charges against the ousted Moscow Communist Party chief, carried by the official news agency, represented an extraordinarily detailed account of an intraparty squabble. Tass also followed Gorbachev's charges with a scathing attack on Yeltsin by other, unidentified party leaders.

The 56-year-old Yeltsin was removed Wednesday from his post by a plenary meeting of Moscow's party committee.

The ouster came after Yeltsin, in a closed Oct. 21 meeting of the party Central Committee, criticized the party's style of leadership and said Gorbachev's reforms were being adopted too slowly. He threatened to resign.

According to Tass, Gorbachev said at the Wednesday meeting that Yeltsin's speech to the Central Committee plenum, "was on the whole politically immature, extremely confusing and contradictory."

Gorbachev added that Yeltsin "went as far as to say that (the Soviet leader's policy of) restructuring was giving virtually nothing to people."

Yeltsin, who still holds a non-voting seat on the ruling Politburo, was the highest ranking protege of the Soviet leader to lose his post since Gorbachev became Communist Party general secretary in March 1985.

Although there had been some doubt whether Gorbachev sought Yeltsin's removal or was pressured into going along with it, the Tass account put the Communist Party chief's stamp on the firing. Yeltsin had been a fervent proponent of the restructuring of the Soviet economy and society.

The Tass dispatches provided the fullest account yet of the Oct. 21 meeting. Yeltsin's remarks to the Central Committee reportedly drew a rebuke from Yegor K. Ligachev, the No. 2 Kremlin leader and reportedly a conservative.

Tass disclosed that Yeltsin had informed Gorbachev of his intention to resign after the general secretary returned from vacation this fall.

The two men "agreed it was not an appropriate time to discuss this issue" on the eve of the Soviet Union's celebration of the 70th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, Tass said.

"Nevertheless, Yeltsin, in breach of party ethics, raised this issue directly at the plenary meeting in circumvention of the Politburo," it said.

The Tass account also suggested that Gorbachev wanted to dispell concern that Yeltsin's firing would chill "glasnost," his policy of encouraging greater openness of expression.

Gorbachev was quoted to have stressed that a Central Committee member making critical remarks at a plenum "should not in itself be viewed as something extraordinary." But Yeltsin, the report said, "tried to sidetrack the work of the plenum," which was called to consider Gorbachev's speech opening the anniversary celebration.

Tass said, "Reflecting on what had happened with Boris Yeltsin, Mikhail Gorbachev said that Boris Yeltsin had placed personal ambitions above the interests of the party."

It said Yeltsin's party organization tried to achieve change by pressure, and when that didn't work, Yeltsin "tried to place responsibility for his own major shortcomings in work on others."

The news agency said that, in violation of orders, he launched a round of personnel reshuffling.

Yeltsin has said he replaced about 40 percent of the people in the Moscow party organization to get rid of opponents of Gorbachev's programs.

Judge frees men charged with killing 6 Americans

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP)—The government has ordered the release of three men charged in the 1985 slayings of six Americans, including four U.S. Marines. U.S. officials said the suspects should be prosecuted.

Military Judge Jorge Alberto Serrano on Thursday ruled the suspects must be freed under an amnesty program called for by the Central American peace plan.

Since Nov. 6, the government has authorized the release of 473 political prisoners under the amnesty program.

It was not immediately clear when the three suspects ordered freed Thursday would be released from prison. Under Salvadoran law, it is not uncommon for suspects to be held for long periods of time without being brought to trial.

The U.S. Embassy said in a statement, "As a matter of policy, we believe that those responsible on both the right and left for terrorist acts or crimes against U.S. citizens should not be allowed to escape justice."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said the United States believes the suspects should be prosecuted, but understands the desire of President Jose Napoleon Duarte to offer the broadest possible amnesty.

The United States supports the Salvadoran government in its 8-year-old war against leftist guerrillas that has killed more than 65,000 people.

Thursday's ruling was denounced by John R. Handwork of Beavercreek, Ohio, whose son, Sgt. Thomas T. Handwork, 24, was one of the four Marines killed.

Candidate: Border problems remain, despite growth from maquiladoras

REYNOSA, Mexico (AP)—The economic growth that U.S. firms have brought to border areas in recent years hasn't necessarily been a boon to Mexicans, the man expected to be Mexico's next president says.

"We know that there has been an important economic dynamic here," Carlos Salinas de Gortari said Thursday in a campaign swing through this border city 10 miles south of McAllen.

"But this economic growth has not translated into well being in the daily lives of all the border's inhabitants," he said. "The growth of the maquiladoras has brought a notable increase in the population."

Lack of housing and inadequate transportation are the most glaring problems with the "maquiladora" industry, where primarily U.S. companies employ Mexican labor in plants just south of the border, Salinas de Gortari said.

Local residents, including hundreds of rank-and-file labor union members, greeted the 39-year-old Harvard-educated candidate Thursday for a rally orchestrated by the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party at Reynosa's Plaza Miguel Hidalgo.

The party is known in Mexico as the PRI for its Spanish acronym.

Hostages freed after some prison inmates surrender

CHATEAUROUX, France (AP)—All 12 hostages being held at the maximum-security St. Maur Prison in central France were freed today when about half the rioting inmates at the facility surrendered, officials said.

Officials said 175 of the rebellious prisoners had given up, but that more than 200 other inmates continued the mutiny, which began 5:30 p.m. Thursday.

The hostages, who included Warden Jean-Charles Toulouze, were not harmed during the ordeal, said the prison chaplain, who negotiated with the prisoners.

It was not immediately known if any prisoners had been injured.

About 20 percent of the 440 prisoners in the modern prison are serving life sentences, including convicted terrorist Georges Ibrahim Abdallah, alleged leader of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Factions.

Abdallah, however, was not among the rioters and remained in the isolation section still under control of prison authorities, officials said.

About 500 policemen surrounded the double-walled prison, under the direct command of Security Minister Robert Pandraud.

The chaplain, the Rev. Bernard Stehr, negotiated through the night.

FUN... AND WORK

To receive pleasure we must put out some effort. The building of a sled, or pulling it afterward is work, but all of these things add up to a wonderful time. The same holds true with the Lord, those who serve him receive the greatest pleasure.

"Serve the Lord with gladness... enter his courts with praise."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: You, O Lord, keep my lamp burning; my God turns my darkness into light. (Psalm 18:28 NIV)

When I was growing up, my family and my grandparents shared a homemade, musty storm cellar. With the door open and daylight streaming in, the cellar seemed homey to this child's eyes.

It had rough boards anchored to the walls to make narrow shelves for home-canned vegetables and fruit. A rusty, mattressless metal day bed was pushed against one wall. Spider webs draped from the ceiling and shelves, and thick dust obscured the contents in the Mason jars lined up along the wall.

The smell of dust and must combined with the not unpleasant odor of the smoke-house which was built over the cellar. Gathering dust on the top board-shelf was an old, dented kerosene lamp and a mayonnaise jar that contained matches.

The cellar wasn't threatening to me except when we had to make frantic nighttime runs across our yard and up the long hill. Driving rain, stomach-vibrating thunder, and lightning that broke the sky from top to bottom did nothing to ease my nervousness.

By the time we got to the shelter of the cellar, we were soaked and shivering. Since the cellar was not completely water tight, we usually had to wade through ankle-deep water in the darkness.

My sister and I felt our way to the relative dryness of the day bed. Scared and cold, we huddled on the bare springs and waited for Daddy to bring up the rear and pull the door closed.

In the dark, I imagined the enormity of the spiders that lived in the webs; and I cheered us all by asking reassuring questions like "Mama, snakes and mice don't like cellars, do they?"

Then Daddy would blow the dust from the old lamp and light it. The first thing I'd see was his face; as he adjusted the flame, the light changed the sinister darkness into the same homey cellar that was so familiar to me.

I live a sheltered life; since I work in the user-friendly world of my home, I'm not exposed on a regular basis to the havoc people self-direct or devise against each other.

Most of us live in the relative asylum of familiar environment. On the occasions destructive forces storm our homefronts, we feel hopelessly deluged with proof of the meanness of which man is capable. Survival appears frightening, and the thick air of threat veils our sense of security with a psychological darkness fraught with real or imagined perils.

But out of the darkness, our Heavenly Father holds forth the lamp of His presence. To our relief, His light diffuses to reveal our homey world into which He gently, safely re-tucks us.

Religion Roundup

LOS ANGELES (AP)—To keep their congregations "clean," Jehovah's Witnesses are being told to breach oaths of confidentiality when and if they discover that other members of the faith committed serious sins.

An article in the Sept. 1 issue of the society magazine Watchtower spells out guidelines for violating confidentiality requirements in medical, legal and other professions when a serious sin is known to have been committed.

"The objective would not be to spy on another's freedom but to help erring ones and to keep the Christian congregation clean," the article said.

Witnesses were advised to confront the sinner first. But if repentance does not take place, it says, the sinner's elders should be told "because of the superior demands of divine law."

Jehovah's Witnesses, numbering about 745,000 active members in the United States and some 3.3 million around the world, maintain a war of Armageddon will rid the Earth of all its wickedness in this generation.

Cowboy church welcomes one and all

By ROSS McSWAIN
San Angelo Standard-Times

BARNHART (AP)— There are only 38 people on the membership roll, but most of them show up every Sunday for early morning services at the Barnhart Cowboy Church where the gospel has been preached for about 70 years.

"The earliest church publication says it was built in 1917, but I have no proof of that," says Alma Tarvin, church secretary and member since the early 1930s.

The church welcomes all people, regardless of faith, Mrs. Tarvin said. When the church was first constructed, 10 different denominations were worshipping under the same pastor.

"There's usually more of something else than Methodists attending services," said her husband, E.C. Tarvin, a retired railroader.

"Our services are very informal. You just drop what you are doing and just go," she said. Services are held at 9 a.m. each Sunday and are conducted by Dr. Paul Perry, who also serves as pastor of the First United Methodist Church in Big Lake. As soon as he completes the service in Barnhart, Perry takes off for Big Lake where he conducts services at 11 a.m. at the church there. He is the 33rd pastor to serve the Barnhart church.

According to a Texas Historical Commission marker at the front of the church, local residents of many faiths have worshipped at the church since the Union Church was first organized at an outdoor meeting in 1914.

The marker says that cowboys from area ranches constructed the sanctuary, working under the supervision of a man named W.H. Parker and his brother-in-law, Henry Barker. However, Mrs. Tarvin believes the church got its name because a lot of early-day cowhands attended services there.

"The cowboys came off the ranches for services. They may have helped, but I don't believe the cowboys built the building," Mrs. Tarvin said.

When the first settlers came to Barnhart in 1911, she said, folks of all denominations met first under the shade of a big mesquite tree near where the West Texas

Alma Tarvin poses with historical marker at Barnhart.

Utilities Co. sub-station is now located.

According to Mrs. Tarvin, the first preacher was E. Homer Miller, a sort of circuit riding evangelist who came to Barnhart by horseback from Midkiff via Stiles and Big Lake during 1914 through 1916 to preach and hold summer revivals.

Miller, then a young bachelor, met and married a young schoolteacher hired to teach children on a ranch at Midkiff. They lived in the one-room building that was used as the school. Miller moved his wife to Barnhart when a parsonage was built, and one of their children was born here, Mrs. Tarvin said.

In October 1916, J.M. Perry was appointed pastor of the church by Methodist Bishop Edwin D. Mouzer. Perry was given instruction to proceed with the construction of the church. A town promoter, Howard Cox, gave the first $100 contribution toward the building. Cox, along with S.C. Couch and Dr. H. Helbling, the town's first physician, organized the church and Sunday School with the doctor serving as Sunday School superintendent until he moved his family to San Angelo in 1931.

The Tarvins came to Barnhart in 1932 from Anson in Jones County. The Depression was on and jobs were scarce, but Tarvin was willing to do day labor on ranches until he could find a regular job. The railroad had section crews working on the line and Tarvin's intention to stay for three months lasted nearly a lifetime.

"Things were in better shape than in Jones County," Tarvin said, recalling that the giant ranches in the Barnhart-Big Lake area needed good cowhands. "There were no big landowners up in the Anson area," he added.

When the Tarvins got to Barnhart, the town had a lot of residents, a school, a number of stores, a hotel, drug store and was the cattle shipping capital of the Southwest. The couple came by Model T car and traveled the dirt road from San Angelo. The trip took all day, Mrs. Tarvin recalled.

When the Tarvins started attending the Cowboy Church in 1932, there were three other churches for Baptists, the Methodists and the Church of Christ. The Cowboy Church is the only one left, she said.

For many years, the church's official registry was lost, Mrs. Tarvin said. However, it later was found in the attic of the Methodist parsonage at Mertzon. "I have no idea how it got there, but we were glad to get it back," she said.

Contemporary Christian singer to be in concert here Nov. 21

Contemporary Christian music singer Michael James Murphy, son of a Texas Baptist preacher, will be in concert at the First Baptist Church, 203 N. West, at 7 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21.

Murphy has made music a vital part of his life since an early age. He was touring with the Cruise Family at age 18.

Since then, his appearances in concert with other well-known Christian artists such as Amy Grant, Russ Taff, Sandi Patti, The Imperials and Twila Paris, has opened the hearts of many contemporary Christian music lovers.

Murphy has a special talent for writing original melodies with powerful lyrics. He most recently was on tour with Dallas Holm.

There will be no admission charge or tickets required for the concert, but a free-will offering will be taken.

Study finds crisis fallout stirs faith

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP)— A common assumption is that a time of crisis triggers growth in religious faith, but a study finds an even greater advance in faith comes after the crisis has subsided.

In that aftermath of "general dissonance" in a person's life, growth in faith is more likely than at the height of anxiety, says researcher Constance Leean.

Based on the study, she says, faith is aroused more during periods of counseling and support people get following a crisis and in other periods of general unrest than at times of acute distress itself.

Faith develops "when people begin to raise questions about the meaning of life and about their priorities," she says.

These are among conclusions brought out in a study project, "Faith Development in the Adult Life Cycle," directed by Kenneth Stokes of Minneapolis and sponsored by the Religious Education Association.

Ms. Leean, a research evaluator of the Lutheran Church in America, supervised 41 in-depth interviews with individuals about their lives and faith as part of the study. In addition, a representative telephone survey was made by the Gallup organization of about 1,000 people.

Somewhat disconcertingly, it was found that involvement in a church or synagogue does not appear in itself to assure growth in faith, but religious organizations help to the extent they encourage a person's "spiritual quest."

Many respondents claimed their faith is nurtured more by experiences outside the church or synagogue, Ms. Leean said, adding:

"Personal spiritual disciplines as well as exhilarating and transcendent events are common resources in people's descriptions of spiritual growth," she says.

She says the study shows churches and synagogues are not offering members sufficient opportunities for structured spiritual reflection and guidance.

The study found that faith develops particularly when people have some memorable experience with a different culture or when they are "encouraged to share stories of their faith with others," she says.

In both of those cases, just as in times of being unsettled or of readjustment after a crisis, faith seems most apt to bloom when people are pulled out of their usual preoccupations — by another person or culture.

"Opportunities to stretch one's mind," such as in advanced education or other learning experiences, also were found to enlarge faith.

Getting problems resolved through psychological counseling also boosted development of faith, and a clear relationship was found between maturity of faith and psychological well-being.

Faith also is enhanced by development of social conscience such as involvement in political or other community projects to improve conditions in society, the study found.

The study turned up several differences between men and women in faith development, finding that women have a keener understanding of symbolism in life than men and are more open-minded to other people's views.

However women lag "slightly behind" men in moral judgment, she said, although this was detected as the weakest area for both sexes.

For women, high spiritual moments tended to be associated with "acceptance by others and personal insights."

Nation's wholesale prices dropped in October

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices fell 0.2 percent in October as cheaper food and energy combined to produce the first drop since July 1986, the government said today.

The Labor Department report provided dramatic evidence that inflation remains tame and all but erased the 0.3 percent rise in September.

The report came as economists suggested that last month's stock market collapse could bring about a slowdown in overall economic activity, further reducing price pressures in the months to come. But rising import prices due to the weak U.S. dollar could show up as slightly higher inflation next year, analysts suggested.

The Producer Price Index for finished goods, which measures price activity one stop short of the retail level, showed energy prices falling. But the 1.0 percent decline was not as steep as the 3.7 percent drop in September.

Gasoline prices, which had tumbled 6.4 percent in September, fell 0.6 percent. Fuel oil prices were up 2.2 percent, after a huge 11.4 percent drop. Natural gas prices fell 2.7 percent.

Food prices, up a sharp 1.1 percent in September, fell 0.1 percent in October, reflecting in large part a bountiful fall harvest.

Nearly all food categories posted price decreases except fresh fruits, up 6.3 percent, and fish, up 11.5 percent.

Egg prices fell 19.6 percent; beef and veal costs were off 1.4 percent; vegetable prices dropped 6.6 percent.

New automobile prices, up for the second month in a row, posted a 1.6 percent rise after a 3.6 percent increase in September.

For the first 10 months of 1987, wholesale prices advanced at an annual rate of 3.0 percent. Consumer prices, which also reflect the higher costs of services and imports, rose at an annual rate of 4.8 percent through September.

Inflation this year is considerably ahead of last year, when wholesale prices dropped 2.5 percent and consumer prices rose a scant 1.1 percent. But those figures were paced by a collapse in world oil prices. This year, prices generally have returned to the moderate levels of 1982-1985.

Kennedy overcomes big obstacles to Senate confirmation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anthony M. Kennedy's Supreme Court nomination is clearing early obstacles to Senate confirmation, with a conservative Republican dropping potential opposition and a leading Democrat declaring "his prospects are good."

Kennedy's nomination was in even better shape Thursday than when it began the day before, as a new spirit of cooperation pervaded the White House and Congress after two earlier nominees failed.

In a great relief to Kennedy and the White House, prominent conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., declared after meeting with nominee, "I think he'll make a fine member of the Supreme Court."

Helms, who two weeks ago left the impression he could filibuster against the federal appellate judge, said he wouldn't make a final decision until the Senate Judiciary Committee completed confirmation hearings.

But Helms said he felt "very comfortable" after meeting the 51-year-old jurist from Sacramento, Calif.

"He's a very impressive gentleman," Helms said. "I was pleased with what I heard."

President Reagan also met with Helms to reassure him about the nomination. Reagan also chatted amiably with Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., who led the successful fight to defeat the first nominee for the court vacancy, Robert H. Bork. Reagan's second nominee, appellate judge Douglas H. Ginsburg, asked the president to withdraw his name last Saturday after Ginsburg's admission of past marijuana use.

Biden said Reagan requested early confirmation hearings, and the senator told reporters he would try to comply. "I know of no one who wants to move this slowly," he said.

Pillow cats are purr-fect pets

By BETH COTTEN

I'm known as The Zookeeper to the neighborhood kids. I thought it was because my own children (and husband) act like wild animals.

Then I learned it's because my house is full of animal projects—stuffed animals, wooden toys and wall hangings. I can't take all the credit, though. A lot of those projects are made by my kids!

Most normal children get bored, especially during the weekend and vacations from school. The result can be wild and woolly behavior.

For days when indoor activities are in order, try getting them involved in creative animal projects like these pillow cats. They are easy to assemble and look very dimensional, because the tails and heads are made separately and sewn to the bodies.

For kids with any interest in sewing, these are the perfect thing. For extra help, our step-by-step plans include materials lists, full-size patterns and illustrated instructions.

They are included in our country crafts pack, which contains complete plans for a variety of projects: pillow cats, dolls, wreaths, baskets, picture frames, patchwork firewood cradle, folk art projects, quilts, fireplace cover, stuffed animals and a quilted hearts wall hanging.

To order, specify the country crafts pack, No. 4202, and send $19.95. Mail to: Makin' Things with Kids, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008.

To make a pillow cat, you'll need calico or other fabric for the body, head and tail; and coordinating ribbon for a neck tie.

Cut out two body pieces (your cat can be sitting, stretching, lying down or in whatever position you like). Stitch them right sides together, leaving an opening for turning.

Clip the curves and turn right side out. Press the seam allowances to the inside along the opening. Stuff with fiberfill and whipstitch the opening.

Cut two combination head-and-ears pieces and assemble in the same manner. Make a curved tail in the same manner. Blindstitch the head and tail to the body. Wrap the ribbon around the cat's neck and tie in a bow at the front.

Leave the pillow cat as is, for a simple country look, or add facial features. There are lots of ways to add features: embroidery, fabric marking pens, glue-on felt appliques and acrylic paints are a few suggestions. For inspiration, visit the library and check out some cat picture books.

Pillow cats are a purr-fect project for kids with time on their hands.

Non-profit organization gives little people a leg up in life

DEAR ABBY: I saw a letter in your column advertising Tall Clubs International, so I hope you will do as much for short people. Our club, the Billy Barty Foundation for Little People, is a non-profit organization founded by Billy Barty in 1957 for anyone 4 foot 10 and under.

The foundation fights for little people's rights. It also acts as a resource center, giving information about available jobs, special clothing, shoes, health care, independent living and emotional support as well as social interaction. We welcome people of all ages, races and religions. For information about the club nearest you, write to: Billy Barty Foundation for Little People, 10954 Moorpark St., North Hollywood, Calif. 91602. Please enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope, and be patient because we rely on volunteers to staff our office. SHARON ALBERTS

DEAR SHARON: Here's hoping this gives "little people" a big boost. ***

DEAR ABBY: My daughter has a 10-month-old son, and I can't believe some of the advice she's been receiving from some friends and relatives regarding disciplining her child. For example: "Never remove articles that you don't want the baby to touch. Each time he touches or grabs something he shouldn't, say NO firmly, then slap his hand. He has to learn!" Please print your opinion. CHICAGO GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: I go along with letting a child know what he may and may not touch, but children are smart and often test their limits. So, mothers, remove your highly prized pieces, or the one who will learn the lesson will be you. ***

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the safety of our four young children (three girls ages 8, 7 and 6, and a son almost 4). The other day we were shopping in a mall department store. While I was shopping in one part of the store, my wife took the four children to another area of the store. When I went to join her, I found the children alone in the toy section. She had left them there while she went to the catalog department, which was in another section of the building — out of sight and sound of the toy area.

I was very upset and don't feel that they should be left alone yet. She says that they can take care of themselves. Abby, the two younger ones are a handful for us, and I can't see how they can be controlled by an 8-year-old. Kidnapping, although very unlikely, is a fear of mine. Also they could get hurt, or damage something. Am I wrong? Also, at what age can the oldest be left alone at home to baby-sit the others?

OVERPROTECTIVE FATHER? ***

DEAR FATHER: "Overprotective" is not in my book. Three children 7 and under should not be left in the care of an 8-year-old. Furthermore, children under 12 should not be left unsupervised in a toy department — or any other department, for that matter. Unattended children have been known to "disappear" from shopping malls and other public places.

The age at which a child is competent to look after younger siblings would depend on the level of maturity of the child. In my view, the average 8-year-old lacks four or five years to qualify.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (30 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Information sought on Bain family

NORMA BAIN, 6206 South State Highway 83, Franktown, Colo. 80116, is searching for proof of the following family tradition about her ancestor, ALEXANDER BAIN.

About 1775-1800, a group of BAINS emigrated to America. On board ship, ALEXANDER BAIN married an Irish girl named PEGGY FARR or FURR.

They settled at the Yadkin River in Randolph County, N.C. After a short time, ALEXANDER moved his family into Tennessee.

Later they moved into Alabama Territory Creek Nation, part of which is now Marshall County. They settled on the mouth of Short Creek and built a water mill. Later he sold this mill to an "Old Colonel" Crutcher. ALEXANDER moved two miles upstream to the mouth of Hurricane Branch.

ALEXANDER and PEGGY FARR-FURR were buried in the old BAIN graveyard one-fourth mile north of the present family cemetery. Date of ALEXANDER's death is thought to be about 1850.

None of the above has been proven, nor has the graveyard been located. Any assistance with the BAIN family would be appreciated, and surely there is some truth to this detailed family tradition.

Land properly in aerobic dance

NEW YORK (AP) — Roll onto your midfoot and heel when landing from a jump during aerobic dance, suggests the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

It says a Pennsylvania State University study found that aerobic dancers who landed only on their toes hit the ground harder than those who rolled onto their whole foot.

The researchers suggest instructors emphasize complete foot involvement during jumping, since this would lessen foot strike force and thus reduce the potential for injury.

Pampa ends season tonight against Estacado

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

After losing 51-13 to Canyon last week, the Pampa Harvesters must face another formidable foe in the season's final game tonight.

Although Lubbock Estacado has fallen on hard times the past two weeks, PHS Coach Dennis Cavalier considers the Matadors to be the equal of any team in District 1-4A, including Canyon.

In fact, Estacado owns a 10-7 win over Canyon before stumbling against Hereford 7-6 and Borger 21-14.

"Estacado is a team with great athletic ability and speed. They're the type of team that can strike quick and often," Cavalier said.

The Matadors have a stable of swift running backs, led by Butch Smith and Greg Ross. Smith leads the team in rushing with 782 yards.

Estacado is just as potent through the air with the Wes Issacs to Steve Stewart combo.

"Stewart is an outstanding athlete. They like to throw him the ball and run in his direction," Cavalier said.

Stewart, a 190-pound senior, has 300 yards in receptions this season. His coach, Louis Kelley, is pushing him for all-state honors.

"Stewart is a good college prospect. He's played well for us all season long," Kelley said.

For Kelley, his hopes of the Matadors reaching the state playoffs again died at the hands of Borger last week. However, Kelley wasn't all that surprised.

"I knew we weren't as strong as we were last year, but we were in playoff position going into those last two weeks. We just couldn't quite make it over the hump. Hereford and Borger just flat out beat us," Kelley said.

Estacado, 6-3 overall and 5-2 in district, has won seven district titles in the past eight years under Kelley.

The Matadors also have a strong, physical defense led by middle linebacker James Dobbins, a 190-pound junior.

"On the films I've seen, I'm impressed with his tough defensive play," Cavalier said.

Cavalier hopes to control the ball and the clock against Estacado by using more of a ground game.

"We've been able to throw the ball all year long, but the problem against Canyon was that we were forced to throw to keep the ball," Cavalier said.

"We let Canyon snap the ball too many times. Hopefully, we can keep the clock on our side by running more against Estacado."

Pampa's ground game centers on junior fullback David Fields, who is Pampa's leading rusher with 452 yards despite missing two games due to an ankle injury. Fields has scored twice. Quarterback Dustin Miller, who is the team's leading scorer with four touchdowns, has rushed for 133 yards.

Brandon McDonald has rushed for 257 yards and one touchdown while Brad Sokolosky has picked up 217 yards along with two scores.

Pampa is 2-5 in district play with one of those victories coming against Hereford, via a forfeit. Overall, the Harvesters are 2-7 and the 28-13 win over Dumas Oct. 30 snapped a 20-game losing streak.

"Even though we haven't had many wins come along, the players have continued to hang in there, which is gratifying to me as a coach," Cavalier said.

Lubbock Estacado is favored over Pampa by 23 points (Harris Rating System) going into the 7:30 p.m. game at Harvester Stadium.

Pampa 9th graders take runnerup honors

By whipping Canyon 16-8 Thursday night, the Pampa ninth-grade Threshers finished the season with a 6-3 record and the district runnerup title.

With the score tied 8-8 in the third quarter, Quincy Williams—behind a key block by wide receiver Pete Towles—scored the winning TD on a 33-yard run. The conversion was good on a pass from Logan Hudson to Brad Hoover.

Pampa struck first in the second quarter on a 68-yard TD pass from Quincy Williams to Jason Williams. Patrick Jackson ran the conversion to make it 8-0. Canyon scored its only TD on a 33-yard run as the Threshers' defense held the visitors to less than 100 total yards.

Wayne Cavanaugh was Pampa's leading rusher with 73 yards on 8 carries while Quincy Williams added 55 yards on 14 tries.

Coby Harris and Hudson picked up 36 and 35 yards respectively. "Hudson did a good job of leading the team at quarterback," Pampa Coach Rod Porter said. "When he couldn't find anyone open on a pass play, he was able to scramble for some good yardage. Harris did a good job of running the ball and blocking."

Defensively, Patrick Jackson, Brad Hoover, Jeff Rector, Guy Savage, Quincy Williams and Scott Frazier were the standouts for the Threshers. Williams and Frazier also had interceptions.

"It was another team effort. It seemed like every play someone different would come up and make the stop," Porter said. "This is a talented group of players. I believe in a couple of years they're going to help make our high school football program successful."

Porter said he appreciated the support of the fans this season.

"It was good for the players to know there were people in the stands cheering for them," he added.

Spartans need win for Rose Bowl trip

By The Associated Press

Although the Rose Bowl is in the picture, 13th-ranked Michigan State didn't watch any films this week.

The Spartans will be at home to Indiana, ranked No. 16 in this week's Associated Press poll. Last year, with the same scenario, Indiana came away with a 17-14 victory.

Michigan State Coach George Perles won't even show the Spartans the films of that game.

"I want to keep things positive this week," Perles said.

In last year's game, the Hoosiers committed just one turnover to Michigan State's five while rolling up 153 yards on the ground and 147 through the air. The passing yards all came from backup quarterback Dave Kramme, who came in when starter Dave Schnell suffered a shoulder separation.

Kramme will be the starter this week while Schnell recovers from an appendectomy that kept him out of last week's game against Illinois.

A Michigan State victory will give the Spartans the Big Ten Conference title and a trip to the Rose Bowl. If Indiana wins, the Hoosiers must also beat Purdue the following week in order to represent the conference against the Pac-10 winner on New Year's Day.

Indiana is 5-1 in the conference and 7-2 overall. Michigan State is 5-0-1 and 6-2-1.

In Saturday games involving The Associated Press Top Ten, it will be No.

1-ranked Oklahoma at home against Missouri, No. 3 Miami of Florida playing host to Virginia Tech, No. 4 Florida State at home against Furman, No. 5 UCLA at home against Washington, No. 6 Syracuse at home against Boston College, No. 7 Notre Dame playing host to No. 11 Alabama, No. 8 Georgia at home against No. 12 Auburn, No. 9 Clemson against invading Maryland and No. 10 Louisiana State at home against Mississippi State. No. 2 Nebraska is idle.

Will Friday the 13th help or haunt the Harvesters?

NO PASS-NO PLAY or whatever, something has bitten the Estacado Matadors since the end of the first six weeks. Considered one of the state's strongest 4-A teams at season's start, Coach Louis Kelley's club has been virtually punchless since handing the Canyon Eagles their lone defeat.

Estacado entered that game four weeks ago averaging 25 points per contest. In the three since, including the Eagle victory which placed the Mats in the district driver's seat temporarily, they have been reduced to 10 points per game. And the current 6-3 record is one of the poorest since Kelley took over the Lubbock school's reins. After opening with a big win over Plainview, EHS sustained an upset 5-point loss to Big Spring but rebounded for five straight conference victories. That string ended three weeks ago at Hereford, and then Borger apparently knocked them out of the chase with a one TD win last Friday. So the Matadors should be coming to town tonight in a feisty mood.

The series doesn't need them like that, either. In the five meetings since the 4A classification initiated the series, the Lubbock school owns five easy wins. Pampa has scored a total of three touchdowns in the five games, blanked twice, while allowing 136 points. The Mats hope to accomplish what the other Lubbock district entry Dunbar did, extend the all-winning streak to six, and they are the prohibitive favorites to do so.

The question is really: how surly will they be. Since it is the last game of the season there is no reason to hold anything back. After Canyon scored 34 in the first period last Friday, we have to return to the record book. The 311 points the first nine opponents have scored so far is the second worst defensive effort in school history. The 1967 team, coach by Eural Ramsey, gave up 372. You can do your own math.

Four times in school history, all in the last three decades, the football season has ended with just one win — 1958, '65, '82, and '84. Seven teams have ended with two victories. This group of Harvesters, though relatively small in number, have fought hard all the way each game, learning as they went. A nice reward for that effort would be that second win on the field. Maybe being Friday the 13th will help!

CHAFF: By finishing its season first, Levelland was able to make Lobo Field available for bi-district play and will host Abernathy-Shallowater tonight. Note that Texas Tech's Jones Stadium and Amarillo Bivin's Stadium will host games, but Kimbrough Stadium at West Texas State will not. Apparently the price wasn't right...Hereford's girls and Canyon's boys finished first in regional cross country last week, and will represent the district well in the state meet. Tacy Stoddard must be the first Harvester girl in years to compete at regional, finishing the Lubbock course in 15:57. Another dedicated runner, Willie Jacobs, just missed qualifying...Boys and girls basketball open their seasons here Tuesday night against Amarillo schools. Girls meet Caprock, boys face Palo Duro, where football fever is rampant over the bi-district meeting with Odessa. Swimming teams are at the San Angelo invitational today and tomorrow.

Last weekend the girl swimmers won all four dual meets at Lubbock, while the boys lost four duals. Several football players are expected to strengthen the five-man boys team...Perhaps schools unable to play 11-man ball and not desiring 6-man squads, could investigate 9-man football as played in Minnesota public schools...Six 5A bi-district games will be played in the Astro dome this weekend, including a quadruple-header tomorrow; four at Texas Stadium, two each in the Sun Bowl, Rice Stadium, Alamo Stadium and the Cotton Bowl; one at Kyle Field; and how close will they come to filling Memorial Stadium in Austin tonight for the Smithville-Cuero matchup?...Only 5A of the three classifications starting playoffs tonight has the defending champion back. Plano is picked to repeat, while Jefferson (3A) and Shiner (2A) failed to reach the playoffs...Presuming it is Canyon and Borger that represent District 1-4A, it will be the ninth playoff appearance for the Eagles, the last time 1983; it marks the eighth time for Borger since the first trip 30 seasons ago (1958) and the fourth time in the 1980s. Pampa has been in post-season seven times, the last 1971...Thanks to the seniors who make their final appearance tonight for a great effort this season. It could be the last time any of them put on a football uniform, a fact hard to realize at age 18!

Lady Harvesters strengthen offense

1987-88 Basketball season tips off Tuesday night

Pampa's Lady Harvesters may be rebuilding this basketball season after the loss of four starters, but the 1987-88 team is rapidly shaping into a contender.

The Lady Harvesters dominated Amarillo High in a recent scrimmage, winning three of four quarters. The Lady Harvesters won by 59-43 in the overall score and their quarter loss was by only two points 18-16.

"Our offense was rolling along real good and I was impressed with our defense," said Pampa Coach Albert Nichols.

Yolanda Brown, the lone returning starter, was the sparkplug for Pampa as she blocked five shots and scored numerous points underneath.

"We had real good play from Yolanda throughout the scrimmage," Nichols said. Brown, a 5-11 post, led the Lady Harvesters in both scoring (14.0) and rebounding (10.8) as a sophomore last season.

Nichols also praised the performances of Melissa Redeemer, Tara Hamby and Keitha Clark.

"Tara came off the bench and shot the ball real well and Keitha did a good job of handling and controlling the ball for us," Nichols said.

Nichols said the Lady Harvesters need to improve more on defense, however.

"We weren't blocking out very well and they got some fast breaks off us," added Nichols.

The Sandie gals are rebuilding, also losing four starters to graduation. A point Nichols made with his Lady Harvesters following the scrimmage.

"I told the girls they're going to play teams a lot tougher and they need to get ready," Nichols said. "The Sandies may have the weakest girls' team in Amarillo this season."

Due to a lack of depth, Nichols has moved up Mary Ramirez and Lisa Johnson from the junior varsity to the varsity.

"We only had 8 people on the varsity and two of them fouled out during the scrimmage," Nichols noted.

The junior varsity scrimmage was almost a carbon copy of the varsity as Pampa won three of four quarters.

"Our JV girls shot and rebounded real well," Nichols said.

Schivon Parker was the standout in the JV scrimmage, Nichols said.

"She hit the boards and was all over the floor," he added.

Nichols has also moved freshmen Christa West and Shelia Reed up the junior varsity. Reed is the sister of ex-Lady Harvester star Jackie Reed.

The Lady Harvesters tip off the season Tuesday night against Caprock, with the game starting at 6 p.m. in McNeely Fieldhouse.

"We want to start the season off with a win and a good crowd would help, Nichols said. Caprock also returns one starter from a team that went 10-16 a year ago.

Caprock has some size, but they're young like us," Nichols pointed out.

Is Dorsett finished?

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas coach Tom Landry now says the Cowboys' future rests in Herschel Walker and indicated that Walker would start at tailback for the first time this season Sunday in New England.

That could mean the end of an era for 33-year-old Tony Dorsett, who has gained more than 1,000 yards in eight of his 10 seasons with the Cowboys.

Dorsett met with Landry Thursday, and afterward the coach said, "Tony has been a great player for us, and I'd rather have him finish by making his goals and doing the things he wants to do. Sometimes that's not possible. I'd love to see it happen that way, but I won't do anything that's detrimental to the team."

For a season and a half, the Cowboys have struggled with the problem presented by two Heisman Trophy winners in one backfield.

Injuries to both running backs last year kept coaches from resolving the dilemma, but this season the running game and the team (4-4) have languished despite both runners' being healthy.

Since the NFL players' strike ended in mid-October, Walker and Dorsett have expressed the need for the Cowboys to feature one back rather than trying to share the workload.

"Our future rests in Herschel. Everybody knows that, even Tony knows that," Landry said. "He knows where we're headed. We're moving through a transition period where eventually we'll put him (Walker) at starting tailback."

Dorsett, however, said he is unclear about the situation after his meeting with Landry.

"I said, 'Coach, I can see what's going on. I want to know what my role is.' I still haven't got a definition, but everybody knows that Herschel is the future back," Dorsett said.

"I don't know exactly what his thinking is. I am not going to spend a whole lot of time trying to figure it out. But we are going to try and make this work," he added.

Despite Walker's starting Sunday, Landry said, "Tony will come in sometime along the way. We'll still have formations where they'll both be in there at times. But our basic one will be with Timmy (Newsome) at fullback and a tailback running the ball."

Landry explained the situation to Walker in a meeting on Wednesday: "I just talked to him along those lines. I told him that his future is with us and what we're expecting of him."

Walker, 25, said reports that came out of a telephone conference call with New England writers, indicating he would like to be traded and was considering quitting after the 1987 season, were misleading.

"I answered questions that they gave me and they probably took those answers and left out the questions, which is unfair to me. But it's also unfair to them the way I answered the questions," Walker told the Dallas Morning News.

"I met with coach Landry and I just wanted to let him know that I'm here to play football. I'm frustrated but I'm not saying, 'Take me out, I'm going to leave.' If I can become better at my role, I'll be more comfortable."

Dorsett will have little choice but to accept his role as well, since the league's trading deadline was Nov. 3. The Cowboys said they made no attempt to trade Dorsett and would be prohibited from doing so until after the Super Bowl.

Dorsett has struggled since the end of the strike, averaging 1.8 yards on 36 carries, while Walker has been averaging 4.3 yards on 34 carries.

Last week in Detroit, Walker gained 65 yards to Dorsett's 29 but did not carry the ball in the fourth quarter, which touched off another round of Walker's complaints about his role.

Perryton wins Optimist Bowl

Perryton won the Optimist Tiger League Football Bowl held last weekend at Harvester Stadium while Dumas was second and Pampa third.

The tournament went into four overtimes after the teams had tied with one loss apiece.

Greg Moore was named the tournament's most valuable offensive player.

Pampa coaches praised Jeremy Helfer for his outstanding defensive play.

The Pampa All-Stars will play Dumas at 1 p.m. Saturday in the first round of the Dumas Tournament.

Pampa gymnast wins district

Laura Gilbert of the Pampa Dust Devils is the 1987 district gymnastics champion in the 15 and over age division.

Gilbert won the title with an all-around score of 34.50 at the USGF Class Three and Class Four District Championships held recently. Gilbert won the vault and placed second in the bars, beam and floor exercises. Her score in the vault was a 9.15 out of a possible 10.

Kari Bertram, also of Pampa, placed sixth in the 9-11 age group with an all-around score of 34.60.

Other Dust Devils competing in the meet were Ashley Childress, Jamie Smith and Carrie Whinery.
