Support grows for community rally

Pampa to stop in its tracks for show of support Dec. 3

By LARRY HOLLIS

In less than a week since its conception, the communitywide rally growing out of the Nov. 14 Hoechst Celanese disaster already has gained hundreds of volunteers in its support.

Meeting Monday afternoon to discuss their progress, project and committee chairmen stressed that the Dec. 3 rally in Harvester Stadium is "a Pampa rally," though the focus will be on Hoechst Celanese.

With the message "Hoechst Celanese: The Heart of Pampa," the 2 p.m. rally is expected to attract thousands of Pampa area residents, Texas Secretary of State Jack Rains, various state agencies officials, Hoechst Celanese officials, U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, state Rep. Foster Whaley and various city, county and school officials from the Pampa area.

Secretary Rains is scheduled to attend the rally in the stead of Gov. Bill Clements, who is scheduled to be out of state that day. Clements has designated Rains as his official representative.

Mayor David McDaniel, one of the project co-chairmen, stressed that proceeds from the rally and various donations will be used to start a relief fund to assist those who have been laid off from work.

That includes the 177 Arthur Brothers contract employees who lost their jobs in the aftermath of the shutdown of the Hoechst Celanese Chemical Co.'s Pampa Facility after two explosions ripped through a portion of the plant, killing three and injuring 37.

But the fund also will be designated to aid other Pampa workers who have been laid off or otherwise lost their jobs in the recent economic troubles in the city, McDaniel said.

Details of how the fund will be set up and administered are still being worked out.

Donations to the workers benefit fund are being accepted through the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. Checks should be made to the chamber and earmarked for the Rally Fund.

Pampa school Superintendent Harry Griffith, the other project co-chairman, emphasized that the rally is for all of Pampa.

"This is a Pampa day," Griffith said Monday at the meeting of committee chairmen at First National Bank.

While the emphasis is on Hoechst Celanese "as family, the rally is really for all the community, all of us pulling together," Griffith said, adding that the rally is "a Pampa family day" to include the whole community.

"Celanese is the focus," he explained. "But it's not just that, it's the whole community" that will eventually benefit from the display of community support.

Griffith said he hopes the rally will be the start of continuing community projects to extend concern and assistance to all those who have been laid off because of economic difficulties.

Discussing the progress of rally plans, Griffith said, "The response to this project has been almost overwhelming," noting that calls and offers of assistance have been received from numerous individuals, businesses and groups since the organizing meeting Thursday afternoon.

Addressing the committee chairmen, he added, "What this group is doing is terrific. The whole community is going to be involved."

Reports from the various committees indicated the extent of community involvement that has already been committed.

Program designed to inspire feelings of unity and goodwill

A large portion of the work for the community rally on Dec. 3 in support of Hoechst Celanese in Pampa will involve the logistics of planning the program, getting the stadium ready and handling the traffic.

With just over a week left until the rally, Hoechst Celanese Rally committee chairmen discussed those matters Monday at their first general meeting since the rally plans were formulated Thursday.

Program Committee Chairman Dona Cornutt said a tentative program schedule will involve representatives from the city, schools, county, state and federal levels, along with Hoechst Celanese Chemical Co.

"All those areas will be represented on the program," she said. In addition, there will be music, songs and balloons to add to the community rally atmosphere in Harvester Stadium, along with a card section like that seen at college football games, Cornutt noted.

As tentatively outlined, the program will go as follows:

♥ Pampa Mayor David McDaniel will serve as master of ceremonies.

♥ Pampa school Superintendent Harry Griffith will give the welcome.

♥ Dr. Darrel Rains, First Baptist Church pastor, will deliver the invocation.

♥ The Pledge of Allegiance and presentation of flags will be under the direction of the local unit of the Texas National Guard. ♥ Singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" will be led by Pampa High School senior Chris Wilson, student body president.

♥ Pampa Middle School student Josh Campbell will give a speech. ♥ Brief speeches will be given by Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy, U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter and state Rep. Foster Whaley.

♥ The main speaker will be Texas Secretary of State Jack Rains, who is attending the rally to represent Gov. Bill Clements. ♥ Hoechst Celanese will give a response.

♥ The program will conclude with the singing of "God Bless America," with those in the crowd holding hands with each other.

In addition to those on the program, others possibly attending will be representatives from Santa Fe Railroad, Damson Corp., Northern Natural Gas Co. and the state Texas National Guard, with others also being lined up.

Stadium Committee Chairman Bill Potts said his committee is gathering materials to set up the program area and to handle the seating needs.

Five flatbed trailers have been obtained to form the platform area on the stadium field for the program participants and visiting dignitaries. Arrangements are being made for a large sound system and the needed electrical power.

Special seating sections in the stands will be designated for Hoechst Celanese and Arthur Brothers employees. The bands

Fourteen die in commuter plane crash

HOMER, Alaska (AP) — A twin-engine commuter plane crashed and skidded through a fence while trying to land, killing 14 people and injuring the seven others aboard, authorities said today.

The Ryan Air Beechcraft 1900 crashed Monday night in clear skies and came to a halt 200 yards from the runway at Homer Airport.

"There was no fire, but there was quite a mess," said Sgt. Jim Stogsdill, of the Alaska State Troopers in Soldotna.

The flight originated in Kodiak, and after a stop here, was to continue to Kenai and Anchorage, 150 miles to the north.

The fuselage of the aircraft, which can hold 19 passengers and a crew of one or two, came to rest in a snowy field after plowing through the fence.

"Nothing broke off. The wing and the tail were crumpled. The plane was intact. They took out six bodies; eight are still in there waiting for inspectors," said Melon Grover, a photographer among the first on the scene.

Two NTSB investigators were headed to the site from Anchorage, and a team from Washington, D.C., was expected this afternoon, Michelangelo said.

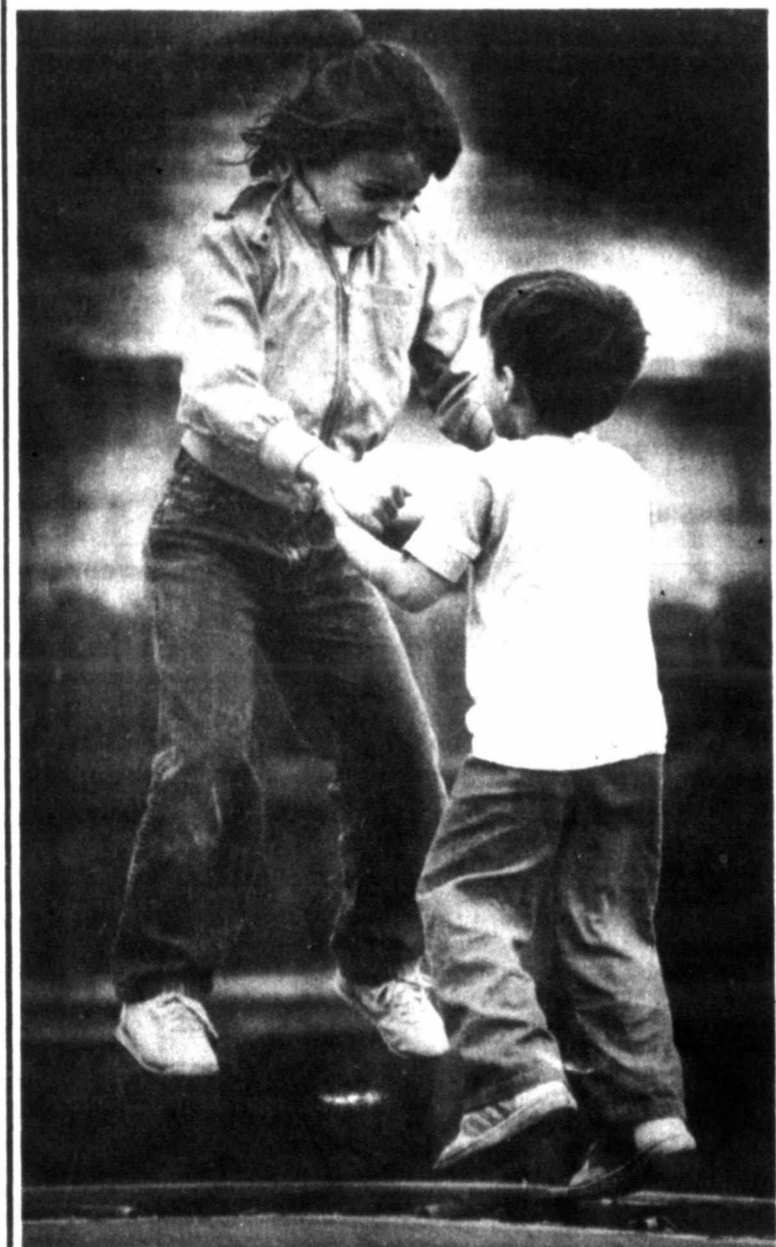

Homer Fire District administrator Robert Purcell said the injured, some unconscious, were taken to South Peninsula Hospital in Homer. Several were in critical condition, he said, and were flown to hospitals in Anchorage.

A morgue was established in the Ryan Air hangar, Purcell said.

Dick Bottini, Ryan Air director of operations, declined comment pending an investigation.

Homer is a town of 2,200 residents near the mouth of Cook Inlet.

Cuban inmates hold hostages despite offers; riots continue

ATLANTA (AP) — Cuban inmates who seized a federal prison refused to release any of their 75 hostages today despite an offer to delay deportations, while other Cuban prisoners in Louisiana paraded two of their 28 hostages to show they were unharmed.

There were reports of as many as six dead after Monday's uprising at the federal penitentiary in Atlanta, but only one death could be confirmed.

Helicopters circled the Atlanta complex after a new blaze broke out shortly after 6 a.m. today. Spanish-speaking inmates could be heard over walkie-talkies shouting, "What's going on in the factory? What's going on in the factory?"

The riot by Cuban inmates fearing deportation left at least 12 people injured. Eight Cuban prisoners were hospitalized in satisfactory condition today, five with gunshot wounds, authorities said.

The rioting began Monday morning, two days after an uprising by Cuban inmates at the Oakdale, La., federal detention center, left 31 injured.

The inmates revolted after the State Department announced that Cuba had agreed to take back 2,500 refugees, most of them criminals or mentally ill, who had been in legal limbo in the United States since the 1999 Mariel boatlift.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese II offered a moratorium on deportations to Cuba if the inmates ended their uprisings and freed the hostages. Meese said Monday the moratorium would be in effect until each case could be reviewed in a "full, fair and equitable" manner.

At the half-burned Oakdale center, inmates brandished weapons in a show of force early today of force and brought two hostages to the compound's gates to show that they are not being mistreated. The inmates have threatened to kill the hostages if any assault was made.

The riots brought these other responses:

■ Sen. John Breaux, D-La., said he met briefly with the Cubans at Oakdale center. Breaux said he relayed Meese's offer and hoped to continue talks today.

■ Law enforcement officers in Texas searched around Laredo for six Cubans remaining at large from 17 who broke out of a minimum security detention center Sunday.

■ Security was tightened at other institutions around the nation where Cubans were being held, but no other riots were reported.

In Atlanta, one inmate death was reported by Rep. Pat Swindall, R-Ga.

A television reporter sat in on negotiations between authorities and four prisoners representing the approximately 1,500 Cubans to assure that any agreement be made public. The reporter said inmates brought out a body of a prisoner who was shot, apparently to bolster their contention that guards and not other prisoners were responsible.

Mike Caltabiano, executive assistant to the warden, said none of the inmates had guns, and that guards fired warning shots.

The television reporter, Marc Pickard of WSB-TV, said he was told the inmates were holding 75 hostages, including two suffering from unspecified medical problems. He said prison officials were seeking the release of those two as a good-faith gesture before giving the inmates a written promise of no punishment for the uprising.

In Louisiana, inmates broadened their demands Monday, seeking freedom in the United States. Heavily armed officers continued to surround the $17 million complex, but Warden J.R. Johnson said the Cubans had threatened to kill the hostages if police stormed their stronghold.

In Atlanta, where the 85-year-old prison houses more Cubans than any other institution in the nation, National Guard helicopters dumped water on three smoldering buildings.

ing performing as the crowds enter the stadium prior to the main program. After the rally, students will return to their respective schools.

"This is not an early dismissal day," Griffith said. "It's a social studies project; it's called civic responsibility."

In addition, students will help make signs and banners encouraging community attendance at the rally. Others will serve on some of the committees.

Publicity/Media Committee Chairman Ramona Hite said every school student and teacher will be involved in the rally in one area or another.

She said her committee will try to inform every community resident about the rally. The rally will be publicized through marquees, banners, signs, church bulletins, handbills, window decorations, door signs, radio, television and newspaper, she said.

Teresa McNabb, assistant Phone Committee chairman, said the school booster clubs will organize a telephone contact project, with the senior citizens groups and other organizations also helping out. Scouts and high school students also may be used to assist in making the phone calls.

Business Committee Chairman Bill Hite said there has been "a very positive approach" from businesses, professionals and service institutions in helping the town to close down for the rally.

"The town is going to be closed down from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m., as it looks now," he said, adding that the response to date has been very favorable.

He said letters urging the 2-hour closing will be sent to all businesses and other work places, with person-to-person contacts also to be made.

The Panhandle Area Committee, under the chairmanship of Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy, has already sent out 90 letters to surrounding area community leaders urging their support for the project.

The Finance Committee noted that enough contributions have been received from local sources to cover the costs of the rally. Those contributions are separate from the donations to the benefit fund.

McDaniel stressed that there are contributions to cover the rally expenses without having to use any of the money donated for the relief fund.

and choirs will be seated in chairs on the field, while elementary school students will ring the stadium by sitting on the track. Additional risers will be placed at the north end of the stadium to provide more seating capacity.

Both Cornutt and Potts said alternate plans are being prepared in case the rally has to be moved to McNeely Fieldhouse in case of inclement weather. Cornutt said alternate program plans are also being readied in case weather or other circumstances prevent some of the program speakers from arriving.

Handling transportation and traffic concerns are Transportation Committee Chairman Dr. Darrel Rains and Traffic Committee Chairman Jess Wallace.

Rains said the task of the Transportation Committee is to provide safe, efficient transportation to citizens in various areas of town to and from the stadium.

In addition to the school buses that will transport elementary school students to the stadium, churches have volunteered buses and vans to transport residents from six locations throughout the city.

The transportation route locations will be at Pampa Mall, Coronado Center, Southside Senior Citizens Center, Pampa Senior Citizens Center, the former Lamar Full Gospel Church building at 1200 S. Sumner and the downtown area on Cuyler Street.

Rains said pickup at these locations will begin at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 3, and will continue after the rally until everyone is returned to his location.

Training and orientation for the bus drivers will be provided by Doug Carmichael at a time and place to be set later.

Rains said exact transportation schedules, with locations and addresses, will be provided to the Publicity/Media Committee for use in the broadcast and newspaper media.

Providing the public transportation vehicles are First Baptist Church, Briarwood Full Gospel Church, Central Baptist Church, First Assembly of God, Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ and First United Methodist Church.

The Pampa Police Department will coordinate traffic around the stadium area. Ten police officers will be located at sites around the school and stadium to direct traffic, with members of the local Texas National Guard unit directing the parking.

During the rally time period, Duncan Street near the stadium will be only one-way south. Other streets will be blocked off to control traffic access to the area.

The field west of the stadium will be open for parking. Special parking spots for visiting dignitaries will be located at McNeely Fieldhouse.

On the day of the rally, students and faculty are being asked not to park on Duncan or on the north side of Decatur Street. Students and faculty are also being asked to car pool for the day to cut down on the number of vehicles parked at Pampa High School.

Prior to the rally, detailed parking and traffic patterns for the rally will be publicized in the local news media.

Plano school apologizes for racist skit at rally against black school

PLANO (AP) - Black parents and community leaders say the school superintendent's apology for a high school pep rally skit they considered racist wasn't enough and they will appeal to the school board.

H. Wayne Hendrick, superintendent of Plano Independent School District, said Monday a public assembly would be held to apologize for the skit and pep rally supervision would be reorganized.

The skit at Friday's pep rally at Plano Senior High School featured three students dressed in black trash bags with large red lips. The rally preceded Plano's defeat of Roosevelt High School, which is predominantly black.

Parents demanded an apology and public reprimands of principal Doyle Dean and cheerleader sponsor Carolyn Rodman.

Hendrick's response, which included a letter of apology to Roosevelt High School and appointment of a task force to investigate any complaints of racism, stopped short of reprimanding Dean or Rodman.

"I have an assurance from him (Dean) that this won't happen again. I feel Dean has been dealt with sufficiently," Hendrick said.

Chisum announces campaign for 84th District House seat

Warren Chisum of Pampa today announced his candidacy for 84th District Texas Representative.

Chisum

Chisum, 49, a Democrat, is running for the seat that has been filled by Rep. Foster Whaley of Pampa for the past 10 years.

Whaley, a Democrat, has announced he will not run for reelection.

Chisum announced his candidacy at a news conference and reception at 9:30 a.m. today at Coronado Inn.

In his announcement speech, Chisum said that his "Chisum Campaign Trail" involves three specific objectives.

The first is to work for financial responsibility in state government. Chisum cited the enormous increases in state spending during the past decade and a need to return to a more responsible budget.

The second objective, he said, is to have integrity in dealing with all concerned. Chisum noted Whaley has had a tradition of telling his constituents where he stood on a given issue, even when his position might not be popular. Chisum pledged to continue that tradition.

Chisum said his third objective is to be responsive to interests of all constituents in the 84th District.

He said many issues in state government affect farmers, others affect small businesses and the availability of jobs, and still others affect the quality of education available to Texas children.

He affirmed his interest in these and other issues he feels are important to people in the district.

Chisum was born in Miami and graduated from Lefors High School in 1957. He is married to the former Ila Omega Crutcher, and they have two children and two grandchildren.

Chisum was president of J.T. Richardson Trucking from 1972 until he sold the business in 1985. He currently is owner of Omega Energy and Chisum & Wilson Inc., an oil and gas exploration firm.

He is a Baptist and a Mason and is president-elect of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. He was honorably discharged from the U.S. Army Reserve in 1963.

China appoints new premier

BEIJING (AP) - China today named Li Peng, a 59-year-old technocrat, as acting premier to replace Zhao Ziyang, who left the post to become head of the Communist Party.

The standing committee of the National Peoples' Congress, China's legislature, followed Zhao's suggestion in appointing Li to the nation's most powerful government job, the official Xinhua News Agency said.

Li, a Soviet-trained electrical engineer, has been called a conservative who believes in Soviet-style central planning. He recently shrugged off that label as a "misunderstanding" and in public has always supported the market-oriented reforms pushed by Zhao and China's senior leader, Deng Xiaoping.

Although ultimate authority in China comes from the Communist Party, the premier, as head of government, is responsible for running the economy and looking after civil, public security and educational affairs.

Zhao, premier since 1980, was formally named Communist Party general secretary at a major party congress that ended earlier this month and resigned as premier.

Li, adopted son of the late Premier Chou En Lai, has been one of five vice premiers since 1983. He is virtually assured of being officially named Communist China's fourth premier — following Chou, Hua Guofeng and Zhao — when the National Peoples' Congress holds its annual full session next March.

Li has been the top contender for the post since January, when Zhao became acting party chief following the forced resignation of Hu Yaobang. Hu was blamed for not curbing pro-democracy student demonstrations.

Li's appointment today puts the concluding touches on a major rejuvenation of party leadership pushed by Deng at the just-concluded party congress.

Deng, 83, led a major exodus of aging party leaders in retiring from several of his top posts. The Politburo and its Standing Committee, the center of power in the party, were revamped to bring in younger leaders like Li, who gained one of the five spots on the Standing Committee.

Li is expected to hew to China's foreign policy of slowly improving long-strained relations with Moscow while relying on Western investment.

Dallas boy freed after being kidnapped, sexually assaulted

DALLAS (AP) - A 6-year-old boy who was abducted as he walked to school was sexually assaulted before he was found crying on a city street and returned to his parents, police say.

The kindergarten student, who was treated for minor scrapes and bruises and released from Children's Medical Center late Monday, apparently escaped his kidnapper by running away, police investigator Melba Martinez said.

The suspect, believed to be a 28- to 30-year-old white male, was still at large late Monday, said Lt. Bill Walsh, an investigator in the Dallas police's youth crimes division.

According to police reports, the boy said he noticed a man following him and his 7-year-old brother as they walked to school, about two blocks from their Dallas home, at about 7:30 a.m. Monday.

A man approached the boys and told them, "You have to come with me," police said.

They refused and the man grabbed the 6-year-old's arm, but the 7-year-old fled home. A neighbor called police, sparking an intensive 3 1/2-hour search that included police dogs and helicopters.

An unidentified man who noticed the boy crying and disoriented on a city street, flagged down a passerby and took the boy home.

In an interview after he was reunited with his parents, the 6-year-old said his kidnapper took him to a deserted lot about a mile from the school, removed his pants and tied his hands. Walsh said the boy was then fondled.

The boys' father said his two sons usually walk to school with a neighbor, but that on Monday, the neighbor wasn't able to accompany them.

"I was so worried," the father said. "I didn't know what to do. Now I thank God that he is alive."

Area residents protest newspaper's coverage

AMARILLO (AP) — A group of Panhandle business and civic leaders calling for more positive coverage in the city's daily newspaper have backed off an earlier demand that the Amarillo Globe-News' ownership be changed.

Following a Monday night rally to garner support for Panhandle Citizens for a Better Amarillo Newspaper, chairman Paul Engler said he was told the group was wasting its time pushing for a change of ownership.

He declined to say who told him that, however.

At the rally, attended by more than 1,500 people, residents waved flags and chanted "we deserve better" as several speakers lambasted the Globe-News coverage and its owner, Georgia-based Morris Communications Inc.

"The Globe-News is nationally known for its shabby journalism," said Engler.

But Globe-News Executive Editor Gareth von Netzer said later that "I think it's interesting that in the criticism that I've heard of our newspaper, none has been directed at the accuracy of material run."

"If it offends people for us to report the news because some of that news seems negative, then it's basically the type of thing that newspaper journalism has had to contend with throughout its history," he said.

The group — consisting of 18 Panhandle mayors and business leaders — was formed after a series of articles about the nearby town of Hereford and strained relations between whites and Hispanics. Residents claimed the series cast an unfavorable light on their community.

"We're sorry if people in Hereford were offended by the series of articles that were run. However, they needed to be run," von Netzer said. "If we hadn't considered them to be important enough to run, despite the controversy that might ensue, we wouldn't have run them."

He noted that the newspaper has offered some concessions to PCBAN, including a reader representative program and an editor's forum designed to gauge community sentiments.

That was among a list of seven changes called for by PCBAN at the rally. PCBAN also called for the newspaper to "make a dedicated and honest commitment to journalistic excellence," to apologize to Hereford and to allow an advisory board to write a monthly column detailing "the progress or lack of progress in efforts to build a better newspaper."

The group also wants the Globe-News to survey its readers to determine how to serve the community, to have the newspaper's management meet with leaders of Panhandle towns to hear their views on issues affecting their communities and public assurances from its owners that the newspaper will follow the group's proposals.

Von Netzer said he could comment only on the apology issue because the other demands were "so vague."

Oilman and corporate raider T. Boone Pickens attended an earlier meeting of the group and has lent resources of his Mesa Petroleum Co., but did not attend the rally.

PCBAN has called for subscription cancellations and withholding of advertising on Tuesdays, beginning today. Engler said he did not know how much advertising had been pulled.

People at the rally said the newspaper's coverage of issues was negatively slanted and that local topics were not given enough play.

"We don't care what goes on in the outside world — we've got three networks and (Cable News Network) for that," said Arthur Ware of Amarillo.

But von Netzer said, "I find it rather shocking that people in this or any community would go to such lengths to organize to suppress their own freedoms to be informed of all sides of the issues."

Not everyone at the meeting was opposed to the Globe-News. Jerry Black of Amarillo circulated through the crowd wearing a sandwich board which read, "Globe-News as is OK."

"I think (the newspaper) is fair," he said, adding he attended the rally because he thought the publication was "being kind of butchered out there."

Bell has less phone lines now

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell will end the year with fewer Texas lines than it had on New Year's Day, a top company executive says.

The last time that happened was in 1932 when the nation was suffering through the Great Depression.

But Jim Adams, the phone firm's Texas president, also said Monday that a recent increase in business lines could be a harbinger of better economic times for the state.

Through October, Southwestern Bell recorded a net loss of 15,400 Texas lines, spokesman Dale Johnson said Monday. That included 37,000 fewer residential lines and 25,000 more business lines. Changes in total lines for some specialized services accounted for the net decrease of 15,400, he said.

The decrease amounts to less than 0.01 percent, he said. Southwestern Bell now has 6.3 million lines in Texas.

"It's just one more of many reflections of what we've been experiencing in the state of Texas. We've had some economic opportunities and challenges, I would call them," Adams said.

In 1986, the company had a net increase in Texas of 105,400 lines, including 94,100 residential lines, Johnson said.

The phone company's largest one-year increase in lines was in 1978, when the net increase was 296,700.

By comparison, Clovis McAllister, spokesman for General Telephone of the Southwest, said figures indicate his company will show an increase in total Texas lines this year, with 19,500 more lines through September.

Despite the overall loss, Adams said the 1987 numbers include potentially encouraging news for the Texas economy.

"In the last nine months there have been some positive gains in business lines. Residence lines haven't turned around yet, but generally the history has been that when there is a downturn the business lines lead the way back. If business lines improve, residence lines generally follow in six to nine months," Adams said.

Authorities search brush country and city for six Cuban escapees

LAREDO (AP) — At least three of six Cuban refugees are believed to have made it to Laredo and allegedly committed burglaries after escaping through the brush from a detention center, an official said.

Agents tracked them to a mobile home, four vehicles and a filling station that were burglarized, Deputy Chief Richard Marroquin with the Border Patrol's Laredo Sector said Monday.

They then are believed to have disappeared into the border city, he added.

Officials Monday searched the city and countryside for the six, who were among 17 Cubans who broke out of a minimum security detention center Sunday morning.

Eleven of the escapees have been captured, and the group apparently out of fear they would be returned to Cuba, Marroquin said.

Cuban detainees were responsible for more serious disturbances at a minimum-security detention facility in Oakdale, La., and at the federal prison at Atlanta.

The Cubans who escaped from the Webb County Detention Center 12 miles east of Laredo probably would not have been among the 2,500 — mostly criminals or mentally ill — that Cuba agreed to take back, Marroquin said.

"I think they got some bad information," said Oscar Garza, the Laredo Border Patrol's assistant chief patrol agent.

Two Border Patrol airplanes and a helicopter were in on the search that also included the sheriff's and police departments.

Agents continued Monday night to search the area and keep an eye on the bus station, Marroquin said, but added the Cubans could be far away by now, especially if someone was waiting to pick them up past the Border Patrol's highway checkpoints.

"They know if they can make it to Florida, they're safe," Marroquin said.

Marroquin said he suspects the escapees committed the burglaries to find clothing to replace their white detention-center uniforms.

"We don't know that anything was stolen," Marroquin said. "We just know they broke into them."

The escape, through a steel roof grating, was discovered Sunday morning. There were 171 federal detainees, including 77 Cubans, at the Webb County center at the time the 17 broke out.

Webb County Sgt. Rickey Cortez said the center has space for 288 prisoners. The remaining 60 Cubans had caused no problems at the detention center Webb County operates under contract with the federal government, Cortez said.

"We've beefed up our security and they're under constant supervision," Cortez said.

Pipeline route proposal gets agency's support

WACO (AP) — The federal Bureau of Land Management says in a new report that a proposed All American Pipeline route that passes near Waco is the best of four choices it reviewed.

The proposed oil pipeline — sponsored by Celeron Oil & Gas Co. of Louisiana, a subsidiary of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. — would stretch 486 miles from McCamey in West Texas to the Gulf Coast near Webster.

A Final Supplemental Environmental Impact Statement from the bureau says the Waco-area route presents fewer problems than three other alternatives and is the preferred choice.

The bureau's final decision will be announced in early January by Edward Hasty, California state director of the Bureau of Land Management, bureau spokeswoman Candy Johnson told the Waco Tribune-Herald Monday.

Last August, bureau spokesman William Haigh said pipeline builders agreed to abide by the bureau's environmental impact statement.

The new pipeline would expand a pipeline from California and is designed to funnel oil production surpluses in California to the under-used refineries along the Texas coast.

The four alternatives include a northern route passing near Waco, a central route passing south of Austin, a southern route passing south of San Antonio and using existing pipelines or tankers.

During the past two years, the bureau conducted pipeline public hearings in Temple, Waco and other cities across Texas. Most testimony came from Cameron residents who opposed the pipeline because of pollution, negative effects on preserved prairie grass fields and destruction of property.

Crude oil spills are likely to occur about eight times over the life of the project and the average spill would be about 3,750 barrels, the environmental report said.

As early as last January the bureau stated a preference for the northern route, but this month it reinforced its position.

The northern route would pass just north of Star, Evant, Arnett, Gatesville, Oglesby and McGregor before turning southeast to pass near Moody, Eddy, Troy, Rogers, Buckholts, Cameron and Rockdale.

The pipeline could carry 300,000 barrels per day with two of the five proposed pipeline stations near Evant and Buckholts on the northern route.

The latest report says the northern route would cross fewer miles of steep slopes than the central or southern routes and would cross fewer miles of sensitive aquifers. The northern route would not cross streams that contain sensitive fish populations such as those in the central and the southern routes.

The report says the northern route crosses several streams above municipal water supplies, but "it would be much easier to clean up spills into rivers than a comparable spill which entered a limestone solution aquifer such as the Edwards."

Charges filed against man in church stabbing

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police filed attempted murder charges against a man who is accused of stabbing five people during church services before he was critically wounded in a struggle with ushers.

The suspect, Pavel Dragonirescu, 28, remained in critical condition at John Peter Smith Hospital Monday. Two of the victims also remained hospitalized.

The charges were sent to the district attorney's office Monday, Fort Worth police Sgt. Paul Kratz said.

A parishioner who was late to Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral Sunday said he was the first to be wounded in the scuffle.

Rudy Galvan, 55, who said he usually arrives 10 minutes late for Mass, said he stepped into the aisle after seeing an usher pursue a man with a bag, which Galvan mistakenly thought contained church funds.

"The usher said, 'This guy's creating a disturbance,' so I just sort of grabbed the man and said, 'Come on, let's go outside,'" Galvan said.

Galvan said he received a cut on the hand, for which he later sought treatment.

The Rev. Gonzalo Morales, who was conducting services, said a disheveled man arrived for the 8 a.m. service, the first of three morning Masses at the downtown church, which operates several programs for the homeless.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Radicals destroyed Reagan's nominees

Note how American radicals have worked their will on the U.S. Supreme Court by denying President Reagan, who won two landslide victories from the American people, his choice for the next justice. Both Judge Douglas Ginsburg and Judge Robert Bork were destroyed by unethical character assassinations.

Ginsburg was ripped apart by the radicals' own radio network, National Public Radio, which is funded by your tax dollars. In recent broadcasts, NPR broadcaster Nina Totenburg has gloated about how she single-handedly bushwacked Ginsburg. While doing research on Ginsburg up in Cambridge, Mass., Totenburg was told that as a professor there in the late 1970s Ginsburg had sometimes smoked marijuana. Who told her this?

Totenburg hasn't identified her sources — she's protecting their privacy, you see. But it's likely that Ginsburg's snitching colleagues are the same radical Harvard professors who harp all the time about protecting our rights of privacy. It's also likely that they would have remained mum had Ginsburg been, like them, far-left radicals. As George Orwell would put it, to them some privacy rights are more equal than other privacy rights. And Reaganauts have no privacy rights at all.

Let us remember, again, that Totenburg's salary is paid for with your tax dollars, as is a large chunk of the Harvard Law professors' salaries. These radicals are using money robbed from decent Americans to pack the court with justices supporting more of such plunder.

Judge Bork was destroyed by similar disreputable means. Prof. John T. Baker is a distinguished law professor at Indiana University; he formerly was dean of the Howard University law school. Baker also happens to be black. He was scheduled to testify before the Judiciary Committee during the hearings on Judge Bork. His testimony would have refuted the slanders that Bork is "racist," and might have carried the day for Bork's confirmation.

But just before he was to testify Baker received a call from Linda Greene, a black staffer working for Judiciary Committee member Howard Metzenbaum. Greene threatened Baker, telling him that his defense of Bork would put him "in a visible position, not only as an academic but as a black. Are you sure you're prepared to deal with those questions? Are you prepared to deal with what this does to your professional reputation?" Baker quickly withdrew his name. He later admitted he "just couldn't take the heat."

When such tactics are used in a court of law, it's called intimidation of a witness, and the perpetrators are charged with a felony. But in the Senate, such actions have apparently become business as usual.

As the lynchings of Judges Ginsburg and Bork show, radicals don't care at all about privacy rights or anything else in our Constitution. They care only about advancing the radical liberal agenda. The horrifying thing is, they're getting away with it.

AFTER THE NOMINEE TO THE SUPREME COURT DISCLOSED THAT HE FEIGNED HAVING A COLD AND STAYED HOME FROM SCHOOL, WHEN HE WAS IN THE FIFTH GRADE ...

Both sides erred in Iranamok

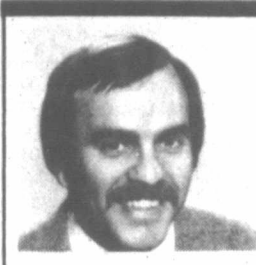

Just a week after the Speaker of the House of Representatives presumed to act as Secretary of State by negotiating directly with the Nicaraguan government, the congressional committees investigating the Iranamok affair issued a scalding report demanding of President Reagan "a renewal of the commitment to constitutional government and sound processes of decision making."

The president's real sin in the Iranamok scandal was selling weapons to the government of Iran, assisting it in a war that it is in our interest for Iran to lose — or, at least, not to win. The least of that sin was that Reagan disregarded the relevant laws, though disregard them he did. The central question is not whether it was legal, but whether it was wise. No serious person believes that it was.

But Reagan also committed an unforgivable political sin; flouting the declared preferences of Congress. He did that by tolerating and possibly encouraging subordinates who used the proceeds from the Iran arms sale to furnish secret help to the Nicaraguan rebels. The crucial issue for most members of the congressional investigating committees is not whether it was wise, but whether it was legal. The insistent theme of the report is that the aid was "an evasion of the letter and the spirit of the law."

That it probably was, though Congress didn't regard potential violations seriously enough to specify any penalties. The president is obliged to obey laws, even those that may be unconstitutional, unless he is willing to defy them openly, placing his case before the people.

The White House concealed its efforts to circumvent the Boland amendment, which banned U.S. aid to the Contras, not for security reasons but for political ones. It feared that if its activities became known, Congress would take measures to stop them. The administration doubted it had the public support to win such a fight. And it declined to contest the constitutionality of the ban in court.

Those were mistakes. In a democracy, elected officials are obliged to answer to the people for their policies, and the people can't pass judgment on those policies unless they know what they are. Only in rare cases is secrecy justified, and then only in pursuit of ends that enjoy public support. It was precisely the absence of firm public support that forced the administration to employ secrecy in this instance. The motive was a distrust of democracy.

But Congress' devotion to the separation of powers varies according to whose turf is at stake. Nothing gives Jim Wright the authority to carry on negotiations with foreign governments against the wishes of the executive branch. Nothing gives Congress the power to forbid the president from asking other governments to assist the Contras, as the Boland amendment did. Nothing necessarily allows Congress to exercise a veto over the commitment of U.S.

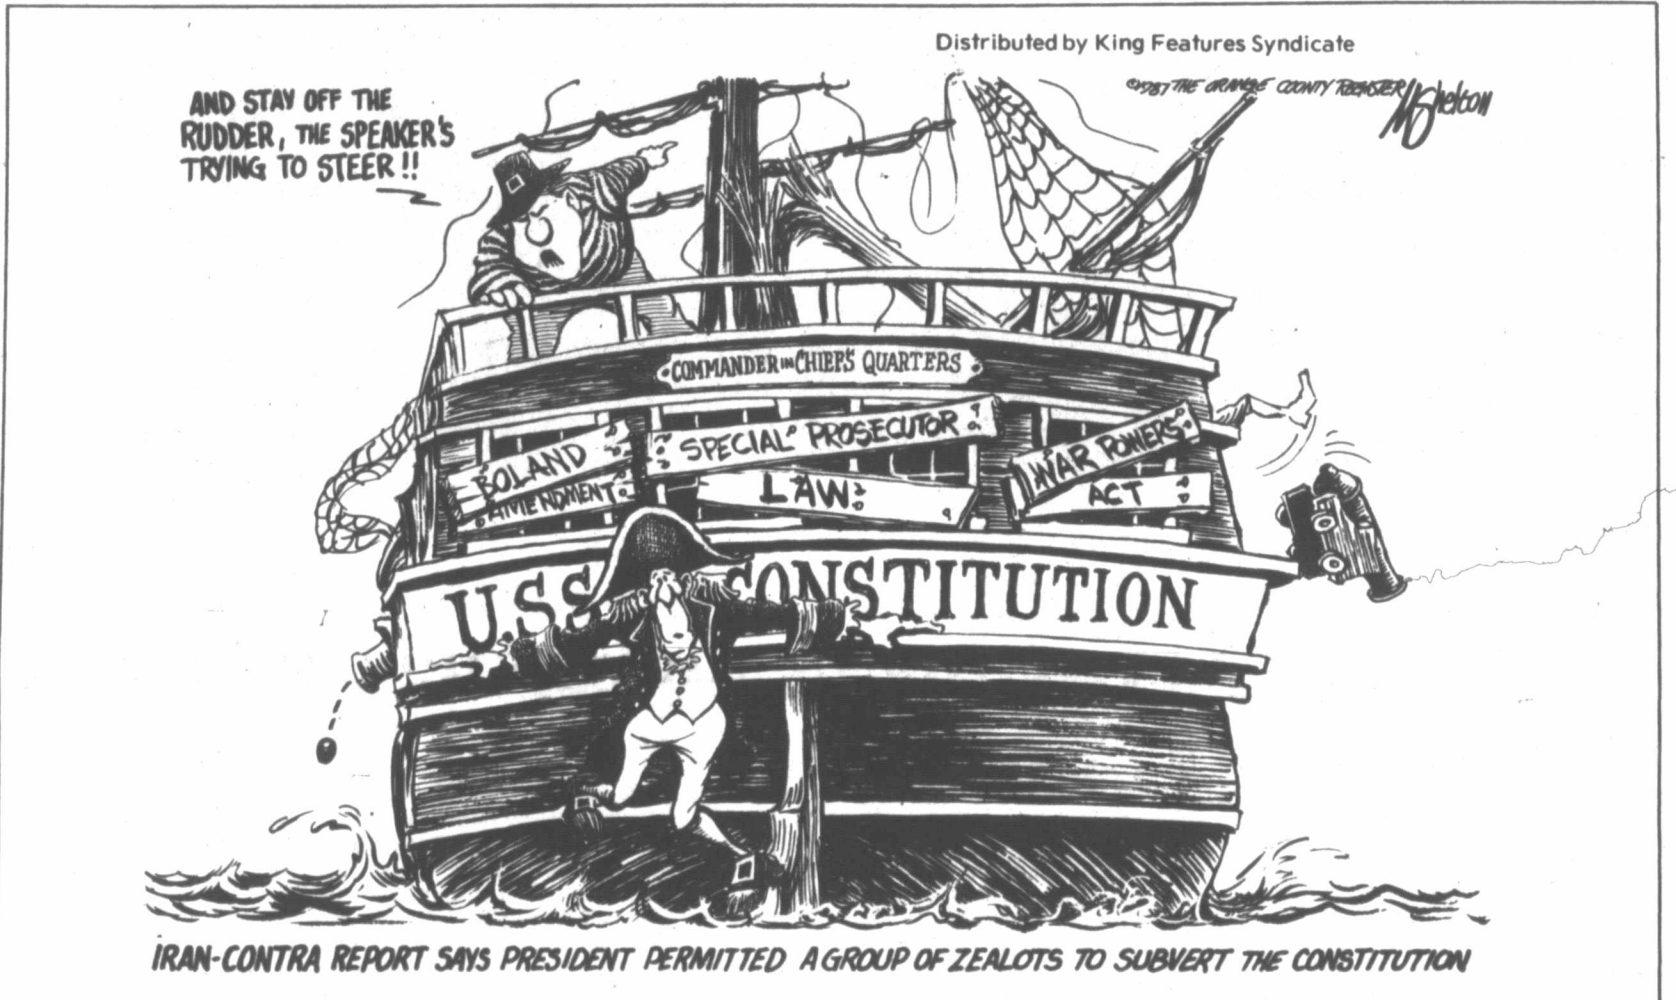

forces abroad, as the War Powers Act does. No congressional committees, however, will investigate these departures from "constitutional government."

The committees' attention is immovably fixed on means instead of ends. What is important, in their view, is not what the administration was trying to accomplish but how it went about it. That is important — but so is the fate of Central America, a subject that gets short shrift. Oliver North and John Poindexter erred gravely in putting the Contras' cause above all other considerations, including the tedious processes mandated by the Constitution. But Congress erred in cutting off aid to begin with.

Wright and his fellow Democrats are eager to facilitate a settlement in Central America that will allow them to take credit for advancing peace and averting direct U.S. intervention in Nicaragua. But they owe that opportunity at least partly to the surreptitious support that the report condemns. The Sandinistas would not be so willing to negotiate today if they hadn't been drained by a costly war with the rebels. And the rebels would have been gone long ago if congressional Democrats had gotten their way.

That isn't to condone the conduct of the president and his aides. Nothing could possibly excuse the ransom paid to Iran in a largely vain effort to free American hostages in Lebanon. And not even a good cause can justify the administration's disdain for the democratic process.

But not all the blame lies with the White House. Its policy to try to evade the Boland amendment was illegal but not stupid, while Congress' ban on Contra aid was stupid but not illegal. There are grounds for humility and repentance on both sides.

Smoked marijuana just to fit in

I smoked some dope once. It was back in the early '70s. Here's how it happened.

I was one of the last members of the beer and button-down generation. A few years after I got out of college, the world changed drastically, however. Men grew their hair down their backs, women stopped wearing bras, drugs replaced beer, and the music changed.

I found myself divorced from a wife who came from an identical background as mine, dating younger women who had never heard of Bill Haley and the Comets and couldn't help out when I sang along with the Diamonds on "Little Darlin'."

I had a date with one such young woman, and she suggested we go to an Elton John concert. I had never heard of Elton John at the time, but I didn't admit it. When you're having trouble fitting in, you don't admit it when you've never heard of something or somebody everybody else seems to know a great deal about.

I bought tickets to the Elton John concert. Four very skinny and pale-looking young men opened the show and took some musical instruments and made generally unrecognizable sounds at an incredibly high decibel level for over an hour.

Then, Elton John was introduced. He turned out to be an English piano player-singer wearing a silk Uncle Sam suit, complete with a star-spangled top hat and star-spangled sunglasses.

Lewis Grizzard

Oh, say could I see? Not much, because of the smoke that had begun to hang in the auditorium. "I think the building is on fire," I said to my date.

The smoke and the smell of it got worse. Just then, I saw a man who looked like Buffalo Bill must have looked after a hard day's ride hand my date a cigarette.

She thanked the man, took a drag from the cigarette, then handed it to me. "Lucky Strike," I said, knowing there was no filter on the cigarette. "I haven't seen one of these in years."

My date thought I was making a joke and laughed.

"Take a hit and pass it down," she instructed. Ah Ha! I might have rolled into town on a turnip truck but at least I sat in the cab. It was at that moment I figured out I had in my hand the first marijuana cigarette I had ever seen.

Sensing my need to fit in, I pulled the cigarette to my mouth and had about a half a drag when the fire on the end of the cigarette fell off and rolled between my legs.

Coughing and gasping, I jumped out of my chair to avoid having a hole burned in the seat of my pants by an illegal substance.

"Where's that joint," somebody two seats down from me asked.

I was still coughing and could not yet speak. I pointed to the seat of my pants.

"Groovy," said the individual two seats down. "I never thought of putting it there."

Naturally, my date decided I was some totally uninformed relic of the past and refused ever to see me again. The last I heard of her she was in law school.

And here's some advice to the next poor soul Ronald Reagan nominates for the Supreme Court.

Just say no.

National security adviser packs a punch

By Ben Wattenberg

Paradox in politics:

Consider the job of national security adviser to the president. The person in that job also runs the National Security Council. He is almost invariably one of the most powerful men in the executive branch of government. It's the post from which Henry Kissinger gained status as a world-class power broker. It's from whence Zbigniew Brzezinski rose to fame.

Originally, the Reagan administration intended to downgrade the post. But as we saw from the Iran-contra revelations about the roles of NSC advisers Robert McFarlane and John Poindexter, it's a hard post to downgrade. The adviser is located in the White House and in direct contact with the president.

America will soon have a new national security adviser. When Frank Carlucci leaves the adviser's role at the NSC to replace Casper Weinberger as secretary of defense, Carlucci will be succeeded by Lt. Gen. Colin Powell. By every standard, Powell is the right man for the job. He has been Carlucci's deputy and Weinberger's top military aide. He has been a White House fellow and a student at the National War College. He has commanded an Army corps in West Germany and a brigade of the 101st Airborne. He served two tours in Vietnam.

Oh, by the way, he is black.

In fact, he will probably be the most powerful black official in American history. A protocol chart might tell you that Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Samuel Pierce, a black, outranks Gen. Powell. Or that former U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young outranked him (the U.N. job had Cabinet rank). But those are just lines on a chart. The U.N. job typically has lots of visibility but little power. Powell will be powerful and visible.

There has been little public comment about the fact that Powell is black. There are some refreshing reasons for this. First, the military has become the most integrated institution in America. About 20 percent of the U.S. military is black. About 10 percent of Army officers are black. Of the active Army generals, 7 percent are black.

So as Powell rose through the ranks, he was not that unusual. He was only excellent. When his turn came for the big job, it was not much news — because it felt naturally right. This was not Jesse Jackson running a sure-lose presidential candidacy but becoming famous because he was black. It was not Geraldine Ferraro, selected as vice presidential nominee because she was a woman, and becoming a sensation because of it.

The appointment did not make Colin Powell immediately famous because it was based on merit, not race or gender or politics. That is the way a society that salutes equality of opportunity is supposed to work.

There is a certain irony and paradox to all this. Ronald Reagan did the appointing. You remember Reagan, don't you? He's the president the liberal black leadership denounces for racial insensitivity. Democrats have been counting on using the race issue against the Republicans.

It may not work. Having made a highly principled decision, Reagan and the Republicans will organically gain tactical political advantage from it. Those are the rules of the road. Thus, Powell will be trying to gain support for a foreign policy that is in trouble. He is a very articulate man. The fact that he is black, and a remarkable personal success story, may well help him make the administration's case, particularly to liberal politicians. He may also become a highly prized symbol for Republicans on the civil rights issue.

Will he be a "token"? No, way; paradoxically, he'll be an important black man because he's important, not because he's black. Accordingly, Powell may also turn out to be an important role model for blacks. He can be all of these things because he reached power the old-fashioned way, he earned it.

Economy expands but economists expect recession

WASHINGTON (AP)—The economy expanded at a robust annual rate of 4.1 percent last summer, even better than previously thought, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, was climbing sharply in the three months before the stock market collapse, led by strong increases in consumer spending and business investment.

The new figure on overall growth from July through September was revised from last month's estimate of a 3.8 percent summer growth rate.

Inflation, however, was a bit worse than initially thought. The GNP inflation index rose at an annual rate of 3.3 percent, compared to the previously calculated 2.7 percent.

The 3.3 inflation rate was still an improvement from the first half of the year, when prices were rising at an annual rate of 4.3 percent. A moderation of energy and food costs along with decreases in clothing prices were key factors in the change.

The 4.1 percent GNP growth rate compared to growth of 2.5 percent in the April-June quarter and 4.4 percent in the first three months of the year.

The economy will need to expand at a rate of just 1.8 percent in the current quarter to meet the administration's forecast for growth of 3.2 percent for all of 1987.

But with the collapse of the stock market in October, some economists think even this growth level may be unobtainable.

They maintain that the record 508-point drop in the Dow Jones industrial average on Oct. 19, which wiped out $500 billion of wealth in one day, has made consumers jittery and less likely to purchase big-ticket items.

Some analysts are predicting that the recovery from the 1981-82 recession, which turned five-years-old this month, will not last through next year.

A survey of 49 top economists taken after the market crash found that 22 percent of them were now looking for a recession to begin in 1988, a prediction unlikely to cheer Republicans who hope to hold on to the White House in next year's election.

While the Reagan administration is still officially predicting GNP growth of 3.5 percent next year, even better than this year's expected growth, the survey of private economists done by Blue Chip Economic Indicators, an investment newsletter, found that analysts have shaved a full percentage point from their 1988 forecast because of the stock market decline. They now expect growth will slow to a crawl of just 1.9 percent.

The 4.1 percent growth in the summer was accomplished despite the fact that the country's trade deficit, after adjusting for inflation, turned down again after three consecutive quarterly improvements.

But the decline was a small one of $2.2 billion, caused primarily by a big jump in oil imports, which pushed total imports up at an annual rate of 16.3 percent. Still, U.S. exports shot up 19.4 percent, reflecting the fact that the fall in the value of the dollar has made American goods competitive once more on overseas markets.

The $2.2 billion deterioration in the trade deficit represented a revision from the initial report, which put the trade decline at $5.2 billion.

Business investment to expand and modernize production facilities showed a giant gain of 26.3 percent in the third quarter, the largest increase in four years. Analysts said this surge in investment reflected the improving fortunes of the manufacturing sector, but they said the increase is not likely to continue in the face of the expected slowdown in consumer spending.

For the third quarter, consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of overall economic activity, shot up 4.9 percent, with much of the strength coming from auto sales. This is the category that is expected to weaken in the months ahead as consumers, worried about the future, put away their pocketbooks.

Housing construction was one of the few areas of weakness in the report, falling by 6 percent in the third quarter, the third consecutive decline this year as the housing industry has been hurt by rising mortgage rates.

In a separate report, the Commerce Department said today that corporate after-tax profits rose 5.2 percent in the third quarter. This gain followed a 4.3 percent second quarter increase and was the best showing since a 6.5 percent advance in the third quarter of 1986.

Reagan reaffirms stance on 'Star Wars'

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Reagan vows he'll put his "Star Wars" missile defense system into space and not bargain it away for an arms control deal with the Soviet Union.

The president drew applause from a friendly audience Monday as he renewed his often-stated assertion that the space system he calls the Strategic Defense Initiative "is not a bargaining chip."

"It's a cornerstone of our security strategy for the 1990s and beyond," he said. "We will research it. We will develop it. And when it's ready, we will deploy it."

"We cannot — we will not — bargain it away to get strategic arms reductions," he said.

Reagan was returning to the subject today as he flew to Denver to address employees of Martin-Marietta, an SDI contractor. He was making the stop en route to a Thanksgiving weekend at his California ranch.

The president will spend Thanksgiving at his mountaintop ranch north of Santa Barbara with members of his family. He and first lady Nancy Reagan, who flew to Los Angeles on Monday and will join the president at the ranch, plan to return to Washington on Sunday.

Reagan spoke Monday to a group billed by the White House as "Reagan Activists for the INF Treaty" — supporters of the agreement on intermediate-range nuclear missiles that is expected to be signed at next month's summit meeting in Washington.

"If all goes well, we'll sign an agreement," the president said. "It would, however, be hasty to assume that we're at the point where we're ready to put pen to paper and sign the treaty. Any treaty that I sign must provide for effective verification."

Reagan then said U.S. negotiators in Geneva are making progress in negotiations.

Mister Rogers tapes show with his Soviet counterpart

PITTSBURGH (AP)—It was a beautiful day in the neighborhood as Mister Rogers welcomed the host of a Soviet children's television program.

Tatiana Vedeneva brought along a special friend during her visit Monday with Fred Rogers.

"In Russian fairy tales, rabbits are traditionally very cowardly," Ms. Vedeneva said through a translator while holding Stepashka, her rabbit hand puppet. "But because he wanted to see Mister Rogers so much, he got on an airplane and flew all the way here to America."

Ms. Vedeneva presented Rogers with a set of colorful, wooden Matruska dolls during a special taping of "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood," and Stepashka gave him a videocassette explaining how the dolls are made.

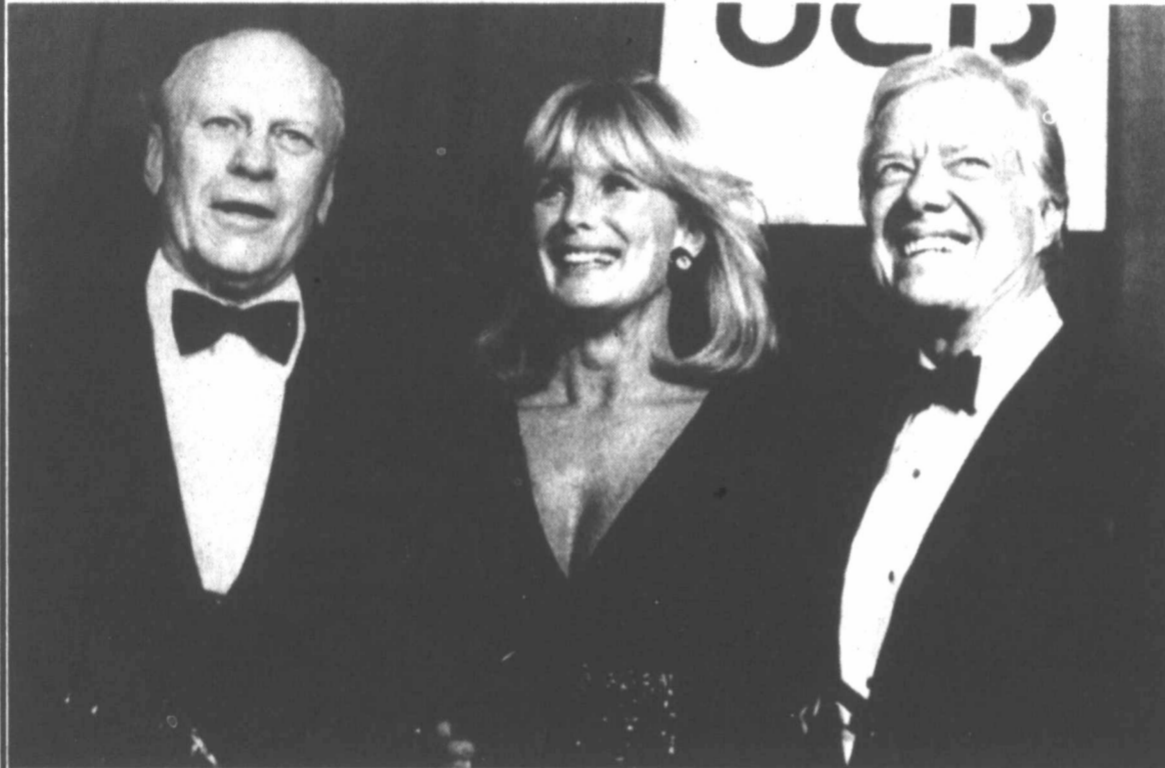

Rogers, in turn, sang them a tune he'd written for the occasion.

"We would like to welcome you. It's good to be in touch. We would like to welcome you. Our friendship means so much," Rogers sang, accompanying himself at the piano.

Ms. Vedeneva, whose "Good Night, Little Ones" is the Soviet Union's longest running children's program, smiled as Rogers showed her around the set at Pittsburgh's WQED-TV. Because she speaks little English, she was accompanied by a translator.

"Here's my closet where I keep my sweaters," the quiet-spoken Rogers said, displaying a half-dozen sweaters on hangers.

Presidential winners

Former Presidents Gerald R. Ford, left, and Jimmy Carter are joined by Dynasty star Linda Evans Monday during an awards dinner in New York honoring the former leaders. The two men were recipients of the United Cerebral Palsy's 1987 Humanitarian Awards.

Turkey prices flutter downward

By The Associated Press

With less than three days before Americans gobble down their Thanksgiving feasts, turkey price wars have broken out around the country as aggressive grocery promotions and an increased supply drive prices down to practically nothing.

"It's totally insane," said Lary Lindbo of Certified Grocers Midwest in Chicago. "I just came back from McDonald's, and I spent $4 for lunch. You can buy a 20-pound turkey for that."

Or less. Bridgeport Foods in the Windy City is giving turkeys away — if the purchaser buys $60 in other goods. Similar offers are being made by supermarket chains in Philadelphia and Phoenix, Ariz.

The average price of a complete Thanksgiving dinner for 10 is $25.41, 18 percent lower than last year's $29.75, the American Farm Bureau Federation said Monday.

In addition to a bird, $25.41 buys stuffing, sweet potatoes, peas, rolls, cranberries, pumpkin pie with whipped cream and more, according to the federation's survey of markets in California, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Kentucky, Minnesota, New York, Texas and Washington, D.C.

For those who don't want to bother cooking all that food, dinner can be had — but it can cost a lot more. In Los Angeles, for example, a caterer called Renta Yenta will deliver turkey with all the trimmings for a party of 10 for $350.

Lila Greene, whose company takes its name from the Yiddish word for a woman who gossips, has 150 orders for her Thanksgiving meals for 10 for people who either don't have the time to prepare dinner or don't know how.

"And you can say you made it yourself," she said.

Turkey production is up 16 percent this year, and is expected to reach 240 million birds, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"With ample turkey supplies, it is anybody's guess to what level prices will fall," said David Goldenberg, director of industry relations for the National Turkey Federation.

"It's not unusual for turkeys to be sold below cost at Thanksgiving time, but this year it got very, very competitive," said Michael J. Rourke, vice president of communications and corporate affairs for A&P in Montvale, N.J.

Powerful earthquake hits Southern California

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A strong earthquake rattled through the Southern California desert early today, causing at least one injury, authorities said. There were no immediate reports of damage.

The quake, which registered 6.3 on the Richter scale of ground motion, was reported around 5:20 a.m. PST and was felt in Palm Springs, Palm Desert, San Bernardino, Hemet, San Diego and downtown Los Angeles.

"I have one injury reported but it's minor. I don't have any reported damages yet and we are without power," said a dispatcher with the Imperial County Sheriff in El Centro. The dispatcher said she was too busy answering calls to provide any more information immediately. San Diego police said there were no reports of damage.

The quake's epicenter was near Westmorland in the Imperial Valley about 90 miles east of San Diego, said Russ Needham, geophysicist with the National Earthquake Information Service at Golden, Colo.

The area was also hit by a strong earthquake Monday night that cracked windows and shook people as far away as Las Vegas, Nev.

The quake Monday registered from 6.0 on the Richter scale in Menlo Park to 6.4 in Berkeley, and was more powerful than the 5.9 tremor that inflicted massive damage in the Los Angeles area Oct. 1, officials said.

and visiting President Julio Maria Sanguinetti of Uruguay Monday.

D'Aubuisson says he's innocent

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Right-wing leader Roberto D'Aubuisson denied he ordered the 1980 assassination of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero and said President Jose Napoleon Duarte's allegations were politically motivated.

D'Aubuisson said Monday the Duarte government implicated him in Romero's 1980 slaying to shore up political power after the return of exiled leftist opposition leaders Guillermo Ungo and Ruben Zamora.

Ungo arrived Monday night and said leftist rebels want to resume peace negotiations with Duarte's centrist, U.S.-backed government.

"With the arrival of Mr. Zamora and Mr. Ungo ... to me it's a very clear strategy the Christian Democrats are carrying out," said D'Aubuisson, a 42-year-old former National Guard major. Duarte is the leader of the Christian Democratic Party.

Duarte said the man who drove the getaway car in the Romero slaying was willing to testify. The president identified the man Monday as Amado Antonio Garay, and said Garay overheard that D'Aubuisson ordered the killing.

D'Aubuisson, who said he was not in El Salvador during the killing, said Duarte was trying to hide his failure to enact social programs and follow the Central American peace plan, designed to end the 8-year-old civil war with leftist guerrillas.

Ungo, leader of a civilian group allied with the rebels, told a news conference that his Democratic Revolutionary Front and the leftist rebels, grouped in the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, had offered "to renew the dialogue" in Mexico on Dec. 5.

He said the proposal was sent to Duarte through the Roman Catholic archbishop, Arturo Rivera Damas, who is acting as a mediator between the government and rebels. Ungo said he did not plan to meet directly with Duarte during his trip to El Salvador.

There was no immediate reaction from the government.

Talks between the two sides on a cease-fire and other measures to bring peace under the new regional accord were interrupted Oct. 26 when unidentified gunmen killed Herbert Ernesto Anaya, the president of the Human Rights Commission.

Leftists blamed the assassination on right-wing death squads.

Ungo, the president of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, and Zamora, the group's vice president, said they were visiting El Salvador to examine the possibilities of returning home permanently to work for political change. Zamora arrived Saturday.

Labor leader demands emergency wage increase, threatens strike

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A top labor leader said he will demand an immediate emergency increase in the minimum wage to match the devaluation of the peso, threatening a nationwide strike if authorities do not comply.

"The truth is that we cannot continue under the conditions which the devaluation has brought," Fidel Velazquez, general secretary of the giant Mexican Labor Federation, told a news conference Monday.

"The panorama throughout the country is black," Vazquez was quoted as saying by the government news agency Notimex.

The federation, which claims a membership of 4 million workers, is the country's largest labor organization and also forms part of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, which has been in power in Mexico for 58 years.

Velazquez said he will ask the federation's 34 union representatives to approve his demand and promised they would comply.

He said he then will approach officials with the demand and expressed hope it will be accepted. "Otherwise, a general strike will be called," he added.

The legal minimum wage is negotiated once a year by the National Minimum Wage Board, which is made up of representatives from organized labor, the government and employers.

Normally it is raised once a year in January, but because of a 105 percent inflation rate, it was raised twice last year. This year it was raised three times — a total of around 80 percent — and predictions are the consumer price index, by which inflation is measured, will go up a total of 140 percent by the end of December.

Last week the peso took a nosedive when the Bank of Mexico stopped selling the currency on the free market, where about 25 percent of the foreign currency transactions are carried out. The peso lost an estimated 35 percent of its value against the U.S. dollar.

The Bank of Mexico cited a sudden high demand as the reason for halting the sale of pesos. The bank said it wanted to protect its foreign currency reserves currently estimated at $15 billion.

The government-controlled "official" market, where three-fourths of the country's transactions are carried out, remained virtually unchanged, requiring around 1,700 pesos to buy one dollar.

The rate on that market is allowed to slide between one and three points every day.

Leaders seek to wrap up treaty details

GENEVA (AP) — Top U.S. and Soviet arms control officials today renew efforts to sweep away obstacles to a missile treaty to be signed Dec. 9 at the superpower summit.

Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze planned to begin their second and final day of talks at the Soviet mission.

Meeting separately will be a group of experts appointed by Shultz and Shevardnadze on Monday to try to resolve remaining obstacles to a treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

The two sides were unable during a first day of talks Monday to wrap up the treaty, but both sides have said they are close to agreement. President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev are to meet in Washington Dec. 8-10.

Legal Aid plans to petition for depositions on donations

PECOS (AP) — Saragosans wondering how tornado relief donations were distributed hope to get some answers after filing court papers today.

Texas Rural Legal Aid, representing the Saragosa Foundation, planned to ask a state district judge today to supervise depositions by Reeves County officials in what could be the first step toward filing a lawsuit against the county.

Members of the Saragosa Foundation, a private group that has collected and distributed some tornado relief donations, have expressed concern that county officials have been lax or even dishonest in collecting and distributing the money, building materials and supplies.

People nationwide sent donations to Saragosa following the May 22 tornado that killed 30 people and destroyed more than 60 houses.

Legal Aid, acting on the foundation's behalf, earlier this month collected 3,000 documents — mostly deposit slips and canceled checks — from county officials after threatening a lawsuit. But the documents, obtained under the Open Records Act, weren't enough, Legal Aid spokesman John Muir said Monday.

"There's a feeling it (the county's response) is inadequate and there are continuing questions," Muir said, adding that foundation members want to know who got how much and with what criteria.

Foundation president Tony Gallego told the Pecos Enterprise that Legal Aid wants to question district clerk Juana Jaquez and officials from the sheriff's office, the Pecos Jaycees and the Saragosa Relief Fund Finance Committee, which was appointed by county commissioners.

Most of the donations were distributed through the sheriff's office and the Jaycees.

Muir, who is not a lawyer, characterized Legal Aid's action as filing a lawsuit against the county. But county attorney Scott Johnson said Legal Aid's action is just a step toward filing a lawsuit.

"What it amounts to is they want to have judicially supervised depositions," Johnson said. "They have questions about the documents they want answered with judicial supervision."

One such question has to do with a $200 check given to jailer Sandy Kelly, Gallego said. The $200 of relief money was spent on a trip to Odessa, 45 miles from Pecos, he told the Enterprise.

"We'd just like to know why the trip was made," Gallego said.

Gallego did not return calls Monday to The Associated Press, and Muir declined to discuss details until today's 1:15 p.m. news conference in Pecos.

Johnson said he is interested in providing answers to any questions the Saragosa Foundation and Legal Aid have.

"I have no problem with turning over any of the records with the Saragosa incident," he said. "I think it'll probably engender more public confidence in governmental affairs. I think they, as citizens and recipients of this aid, are entitled to know where it went."

Legal Aid attorney Alpha Hernandez, who was out of the office and unavailable for comment Monday, has praised Johnson for his cooperation, but has reported problems obtaining records from Sheriff Raul Florez.

Oil prices rise on speculative trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Speculators have driven up the price of crude oil at least temporarily, but market analysts say there's little evidence to support the increase.

The January-delivery price of West Texas Intermediate, the main U.S. crude, rose to $18.78 per 42-gallon barrel Monday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, up 22 cents from the $18.56 closing price Friday.

At one point during the day the price rose to $18.97 a barrel in speculative buying, but traders said underlying fundamentals of supply and demand quickly drove the price back down. In the absence of any significant economic news, the traders said, prices would probably remain in the $18 range.

'Gizzard Lady' to be on TV

MARLIN (AP) — A woman who for almost 30 years has collected turkey gizzards and the odd things that come out of them will get to talk about her bizarre hobby on the "Late Night With David Letterman."

Ruth Stone's unusual hobby got her a round-trip ticket Monday to New York to appear on the popular variety-talk show hosted by Letterman. Her appearance will be broadcast tonight.

Mrs. Stone used to clean and inspect gizzards while working at a turkey processing plant in Marlin. She noticed many of the gizzards contained an odd assortment of small objects.

"I even got a spark plug," Mrs. Stone said. "And things like rocks and marbles. Oh, and I got one dice out of it."

Mrs. Stone and David Letterman might never have crossed paths had it not been for a friendly cup of coffee she offered Brent Shehorn, 19, and his father one afternoon at her home.

The Shehorns immediately saw display boxes, built by Mrs. Stone's husband, filled with items that had been discovered in turkey gizzards: spark plugs, crucifixes, change, springs, water nozzles, glass, marbles and shiny rocks.

"We were just amazed with it," Brent Shehorn recalled. "When I saw them, the first thing I thought was, that was something David Letterman would have on his show."

Shehorn wrote Letterman about the "gizzard lady" last summer and was finally contacted about her appearance.

Mrs. Stone said the unique knickknacks lining the walls of her home are a big hit with visitors, who often express amazement.

Virus causing blindness in AIDS victims

AUSTIN (AP) — Many AIDS patients are going blind before they die, according to an ophthalmology professor who says a virus that can go unnoticed in healthy people is leaving some AIDS sufferers sightless.

"An eye disorder may be the first sign that AIDS has begun in a patient infected with the human immunodeficiency virus," Dr. Gary Cowan said Monday. "Diagnosis is further complicated by the fact that the eye disease symptoms may mimic those caused by other diseases."

Cowan is a physician, retinal specialist and assistant professor of ophthalmology at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio. He said eye problems associated with AIDS are so new that many doctors do not consider the possibility of AIDS in their diagnoses.

"We now have a significant number of patients who are going blind a long time before they die," he said. "So, their quality of life is further diminished."

During a recent fellowship at the Jules Stein Eye Institute at the University of California, Los Angeles, Cowan saw many AIDS patients with eye problems.

He said eye disorders in patients with acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which cripples the immune system, often stem from organisms that would cause only mild, temporary symptoms in people with healthy immune systems.

The main infection involved is called cytomegalovirus, or CMV. In healthy individuals, Cowan said, CMV might remain dormant or cause no more illness than the symptoms of a bad cold. In AIDS patients, however, it can cause retinitis, which can lead to blindness.

Prior to the spread of AIDS, "these infections were seen only in transplant patients whose immune systems were compromised by the drugs they were taking to prevent organ rejection," Cowan said.

Dr. Ken Blair, an Austin physician who has treated many AIDS patients, said he has had patients whose vision was threatened by cytomegalovirus. He said the disease also complicated their treatment with AZT, or azidothymidine.

AZT is the only federally approved drug for AIDS patients.

Be thankful for gardening; plant trees, shrubs in fall

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

THANKSGIVING

Well, gardeners, "Turkey Day" is fast approaching. Thanksgiving to most of us is that time in late November when we get a few days off work and the kids are at home from school driving us nuts.

It's that day when we can legally overeat and forget our diets. After all, it's almost un-American not to eat turkey and dressing on Thanksgiving!

Thanksgiving is a day to sit down, be quiet and give thanks for the many privileges and opportunities which we, as Americans, enjoy. Try as we might, we often overlook some of our most valuable blessings.

I would like to take this opportunity to point out some of the "Thanksgivings of Gardening" which all of us share:

- Be thankful for the physical strength which is necessary to prepare a garden.

- Be thankful for your concern that your family enjoys fresh, nutritious vegetables.

- Be thankful for agricultural researchers and educators who make your gardening efforts much more productive.

- Be thankful for friendly neighbors who become friendlier as the garden approaches maturity.

- Be thankful for an understanding family who will eat your garden-grown vegetables regardless of how they look.

- Be thankful for that look of joy that flows from your youngsters when picking that first red tomato.

- Be thankful for the personal pride stimulated by a successful garden.

- Be thankful for the invaluable experience gained from struggling to produce a garden.

For Horticulture Joe VanZandt

- Be especially thankful for the vegetable farmer who does produce a crop every year to supply us when we fail; and last but not least,

- Be thankful for the miracle of growth which we all, whether young or old, experience each and every time we plant a seed and watch it grow.

Remember... we often tend to overlook the blessings with which we are most familiar. Merry Thanksgiving and Happy Gardening.

FALL IDEAL FOR PLANTING TREES, SHRUBS

With fall weather at hand, gardeners can think about adding a new tree or a grouping of shrubs to the home landscape. Or perhaps there is an area in the landscape that needs "remodeling" or rejuvenating.

Fall planting allows a tree's or shrub's root system to develop and become established. When spring arrives, this root system makes it possible for the plant to take advantage of the full surge of spring growth.

Also, fall planting of balled and burlapped plants gives them ample time to recover from transplanting shock before hot weather arrives.

Of course, there are exceptions to fall planting. All bare root plants, including roses, pecan and fruit trees, should not be planted until winter.

When you buy plants for your home grounds, be sure to get healthy, well-grown plants. Always buy from a reputable dealer, one who is in the plant selling business year-round and who depends on repeat customers.

Beware of plant bargains. They can easily turn out to be real headaches. A bargain is no good if it dies. The price tag — especially the cheapest one — is not the best guide to quality.

Also, remember that it's first come, first served. The best plants are sold first. Don't wait until everything is picked over.

All plants have growing requirements. Think about the plant's needs before you invest. Does the plant prefer an acid soil? Will it grow in sun or shade? Does it need wet or dry locations? Is it hardy or tender? Some nurseries have this type of information on tags beside the plant. If not, ask the nurseryman.

Of course, always plan before you plant. Whether you are planting a single plant or an entire landscape, plan first, then plant.

Good planning is a worthwhile investment of time that will pay off in greater enjoyment through more attractive and useful home grounds as well as increasing the value of your home. It's much easier to move plants on paper than to dig them after planting in the wrong place. A plan saves many planting mistakes.

Plants properly planted should serve a purpose. Ask yourself, Do I want this plant for screening, for privacy or for shade? How large will it be five years from now?

If it takes a machete to cut your way through the plant jungle to the front door after three years, you've planted the wrong plant! Plants, like people, grow up. Be sure to provide your plants with the space they require.

Study says moderate activity can help avert heart attacks

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Running is a needlessly strenuous way to fight the risk of a fatal heart attack, says a study published today that found yard work and golfing are plenty of exercise for middle-aged men prone to coronary trouble.

"Moderate and low intensity activities, done frequently enough and in long enough duration, can reduce the chances of dying of heart attack," said Dr. Arthur S. Leon, who conducted a study of more than 12,000 such men.

"This would include walking, working around the house and yard, light sports like golf and bowling, and dancing," said the researcher from the University of Minnesota's School of Public Health.

"About three-quarters of an hour a day of this type of activity seemed to offer this protection. That seemed to be the optimal amount."

Longer periods of activity or more intense exercise offered little additional protection against coronary death in high-risk men, though it did reduce the risk of non-fatal heart attacks, he said.

"There is no reason to assume that this is not also true for women," the researcher added during a telephone interview recently from Minneapolis.

The findings come from a study of 12,138 men whose high cholesterol levels, high blood pressure and smoking habits put them in the upper 10 percent to 15 percent of risk level for heart disease among middle-aged U.S. males.

Results of the study by Leon and colleagues at the university were published in the latest Journal of the American Medical Association.

The subjects, ages 35 to 57 at enrollment, were questioned about their leisure activities four times during the six to eight years they were tracked in a nationwide study called the Multiple Risk Factor Intervention Trial and coordinated by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute at Bethesda, Md.

Leon and his colleagues found the men who engaged regularly in moderate leisure activity had just 63 percent the rate of fatal heart attacks and sudden deaths as men with low leisure activity levels.

Death rates among men with high activity levels were similar to those at moderate levels, but the combined rate of fatal and non-fatal heart attacks for the high activity group was 20 percent lower, the researchers said.

Men with low activity levels had a heart attack death rate of 24.6 per 1,000, while subjects with moderate and high activity levels had rates of 15.4 per 1,000 and 15.8 per 1,000, respectively, the study said.

The least active men averaged about 16 minutes of leisure time physical activity per day, the moderately active men about 48 minutes and the most active men about 2 hours and 14 minutes, the researchers said.

Just 570 men, or 4.7 percent, reported they engaged an hour or more a week in heavy physical activity such as jogging, stair climbing or singles in tennis, the study said.

Popular remodeling

Kitchen remodeling has become one of the most popular home improvement projects. More than 3 million kitchens were redone in 1986 alone. The remodeling can have a dual purpose: personal enjoyment and increased home resale value, says William Hodge, Sears kitchen remodeling product manager.

Father suggests bridesmaids wear something old, not new

DEAR ABBY: The other day, my wife and daughter and I were talking about our daughter's upcoming wedding. Since our daughter has a closetful of expensive dresses she's worn only once, I made what I thought was a very good suggestion: "Why not let all the girls you want in your wedding party just pick out the prettiest dress they have hanging in their closets and wear it? For those who don't have one or can't afford to buy one, let them borrow one of yours, or another friend's. Guys rent tuxedos for weddings; why should girls have to buy an expensive dress to wear only once? A lot of girls are left out of weddings because they can't afford to buy a dress."

Well, Abby, my suggestion went over like a lead balloon. What do you and your readers say?
PRACTICAL ALABAMA DADDY

DEAR DADDY: You are indeed practical, but if each bridesmaid were to wear the prettiest dress she found hanging in her closet, the bridal procession would look more like a garage-sale fashion show than a wedding.

Nice try, Dad, but I'm afraid your idea would never play in Birmingham, Montgomery or Tuscaloosa.

DEAR ABBY: I have a neighbor who used to be a good friend, but now he won't talk to me. This is why: My husband was diagnosed as having Alzheimer's disease about six months ago. His memory is very faulty and he has to be watched all the time, but there are times when he is quite all right, so I am keeping him home as long as I can.

Well, I do not drive, and my husband is not able to drive anymore, so I sold his car. This neighbor asked me several times to sell it to him, but I refused. Instead, I sold it to a man who does not live in our neighborhood because I was afraid that if my husband saw that car in our neighborhood he might insist it was his car and want it back.

I know I did the right thing, but the neighbor who wanted to buy it first is still not talking to me. Do you think I did the right thing or not?
HURT FEELINGS

DEAR HURT: I think you did exactly the right thing by selling the car to someone who did not live in your neighborhood. If you explained this to your neighbor and he still refuses to talk to you, shame on him.

DEAR ABBY: "Mrs. Whipple's" problem with her mother stealing toilet paper from motels brings to mind an incident that happened to my wife during a trip last year.

We stopped at a motel for the night and on leaving in the morning, my wife asked the manager for the address of the manufacturer of the excellent little coffee maker that was attached to the wall of our room.

"I can give you the address," he said, "but this would be much easier — and cheaper." Then he reached under his desk and brought out a screwdriver and handed it to my wife.

"Try it off the wall and take it home," he said. "The one in your room is the only one that hasn't been stolen!"

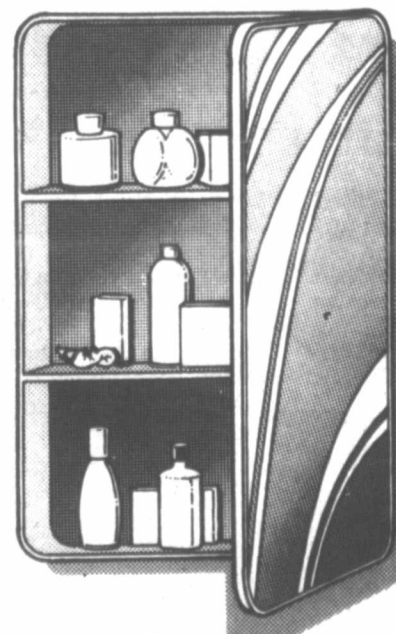

Maybe he was just kidding, but he certainly didn't act like it. What do you think?
VIRGIL IN BANDON, ORE.

DEAR VIRGIL: I think he was just kidding. Since you didn't take him up on it, we'll never know.

DEAR ABBY: Do you know Perry Como? If you don't know him personally, maybe he will see this and make my dreams come true. I cannot find Perry Como's record, "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows." I have looked everywhere — I even wrote to Canada, but nobody has it. I am willing to pay $100 for it. Please help me, Abby. Thank you with all my heart.
EMILINE ZIMMERMAN

DEAR EMILINE: I don't know Perry Como, but maybe someone who has "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows" will sell it to you. Please send me your address in case I get lucky. (P.S. You have excellent taste. Frank Sinatra says Perry Como is the finest male vocalist in the business.)

Dear Abby's Cookbooklet is here! To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage and handling are included).

Range of housing options exist for elderly residents

LEXINGTON, Mass. (AP) — Most people don't realize the wide range of housing options that exist for the elderly in addition to nursing homes and moving in with grown children, says Dr. Vivian Carlin, a specialist on the aging.

There are many alternative living arrangements that should be considered, advises Carlin, a psychologist and consulting gerontologist involved in housing and pre-retirement planning.

She recently retired as supervisor of the Office of Planning and Policy Analysis of the New Jersey State Division on Aging, where she developed the Elderly Home Conversion program.

It is a problem more and more people face every year — helping elderly parents find safe, affordable and suitable housing, she points out.

"As we age, we all experience some physical, economic and social changes. These must be taken into account in the housing choices you and your parents make together," she notes in a new book, "Where Can Mom Live?: A Family Guide to Living Arrangements for Elderly Parents," written with Ruth Mansberg.

For years it has been assumed that nursing homes or living with children are the only solutions available, say the authors, who add that not only are these not the sole choices open, but they are too often not even the best choices.

"Housing should provide a living environment that will allow the person to continue her preferred lifestyle while at the same time safeguarding her health and independence for as long as possible," they write.

Using the experiences of real people, they recount ways families have coped with living arrangements for both men and women, and explain how to go about investigating the alternatives.

Among their suggestions:

- Home, sweet home: Staying put but finding services and people to help make this a safe and satisfying solution.

- Group-shared homes: unrelated people living together and sharing the expenses and some or all of the work of maintaining a household.
- Life-care and other congregate communities: studio and one-bedroom apartments. Usually included in the rent are some meals, housekeeping services and social, recreational and cultural programs.

Lowly Rams shock 'Skins Brown leads LA victory

By DAVID GINSBURG
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It didn't quite erase the agony of what has been a frustrating season, but the Los Angeles Rams are feeling a lot better about themselves after their 30-26 upset of the Washington Redskins.

Ron Brown returned a kickoff 95 yards for a touchdown and caught a scoring pass from Jim Everett on Monday night to lead the Rams to their second victory in a row after a miserable 1-7 start.

"The last two weeks we have gotten our stuff back, and we're very proud of our performance," Rams Coach John Robinson said.

"We're winners," Brown said. "We had been losing to teams we shouldn't be losing to, but now we're getting the job done."

While Los Angeles has bounced back in the past two games, Brown, moments after he dropped a sure touchdown pass from Everett, caught a 26-yard toss to give the Rams a 30-19 lead with 3:38 left in the third quarter.

Doug Williams' second touchdown pass to Art Monk cut the gap to 30-26 four seconds into the fourth quarter, and the Redskins drove to the Los Angeles 14-yard line in the closing seconds before LeRoy Irvin intercepted a pass that went through Monk's hands in the end zone.

Monk caught five passes for 93 yards, including touchdowns of 17 and five yards.

Williams, who earned the starting spot after replacing an ineffective Jay Schroeder last week, completed 24 of 46 passes for 308 yards and ran for a touchdown. But his first-quarter fumble was returned 35 yards for a touchdown by Rams linebacker Mike Wilcher and he was sacked four times.

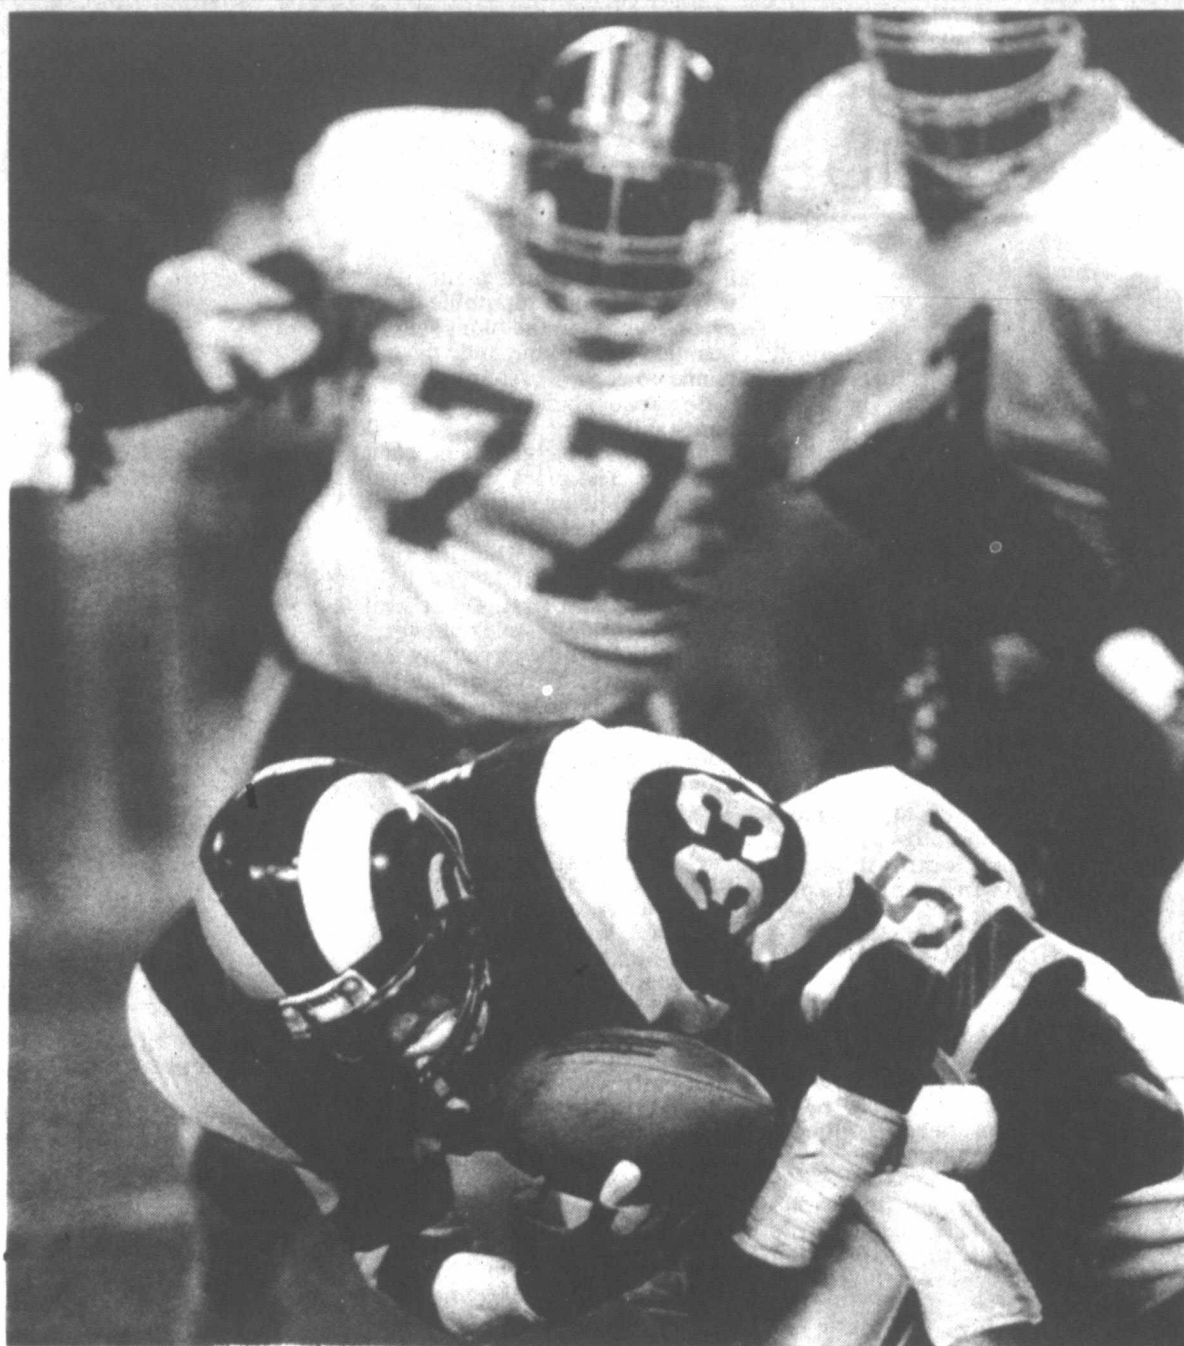

After the game, Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs said Williams performed well enough to maintain the starting job until at least next week, when the Redskins face the New York Giants.

Washington, which gained only 66 rushing yards, fell to 7-3 and missed a chance to move three games ahead of Dallas in the NFC East.

In addition to being stung by Brown's fourth career kickoff return for a touchdown, Washington allowed a blocked punt that set up a 1-yard scoring run by Charles White that enabled the Rams to take a 23-9 second-quarter lead.

Brown's kickoff return, longest in the NFC this season, came seconds after Washington took a 9-7 lead and put the Rams on top for good.

Los Angeles could muster only four first downs in the first half, but used Wilcher's fumble return and help from its special teams to take a 23-16 halftime lead.

Rams' Charles White churns for yardage. White, the NFL's leading rusher, had 112 yards on the ground.

White may start

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Veteran Danny White may come to the rescue of young Steve Pelluer on Thanksgiving Day against the Minnesota Vikings.

White could be the starting quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys instead of Pelluer, whose performance in a 20-14 loss to Miami Sunday night drew mixed reviews.

"I'll probably use them both, but Danny could start," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said Monday. "I think Steve handled himself pretty well. He'll get better as he plays more."

White missed the loss as the scrambling Pelluer came within 50 yards of running (84) for as many yards as he gained passing (134).

Pelluer's 1987 debut was less than spectacular, although he threw touchdown passes of 8 and 18 yards to Timmy Newsome. He also suffered two interceptions.

Dallas, 5-5 in the NFC East, has a quick turn-around game against the Vikings Thanksgiving Day.

"The rest helped Danny's wrist and he feels excellent today," Landry said. "I may start him against Minnesota."

"Steve had some excellent runs and hurts the defense with his running ability, but the mistakes cost us. He threw one pass that was intercepted he should have never thrown."

Bruce fighting for job

Court rejects latest move

By RUSTY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — An attempt by an Ohio State alumnus to block the firing of football coach Earle Bruce isn't getting instant support in court.

A judge rejected that move Monday following the filing of a lawsuit in Franklin County Common Pleas Court by Columbus attorney Phillip D. Cameron, a former Buckeye baseball player. It was the latest legal action since Bruce was fired last week after nine seasons.

In a separate legal maneuver, Bruce's attorney, John Zonak, filed a $7.44-million suit Friday in Common Pleas Court against the university and President Edward Jennings, alleging slander and breach of contract.

Judge William T. Gillie on Monday denied Cameron's request for a temporary restraining order. But he set a hearing on Cameron's request for a preliminary injunction against Ohio State for Dec. 7 before Judge Frederick T. Williams.

Cameron asked for a temporary restraining order prohibiting Jennings from firing Bruce "and from continually obligating the taxpayers' funds for the retention of substitute and replacement coaches' services."

Cameron did not return telephone calls and did not comment after the hearing.

Bruce was fired in the second year of a three-year contract, and Ohio State officials have said they will meet the terms of the contract.

Bruce was fired Nov. 16 by Jennings, effective after the Buckeyes' 23-20 victory Saturday over Michigan.

The Plain Dealer of Cleveland reported today that legal questions were raised about whether the university's board of trustees might have violated Ohio's open meetings law by reportedly taking a secret vote to fire Bruce.

Zonak said he would explore whether the trustees failed to give public notice of their Nov. 5 dinner meeting. Board member Deborah E. Casto had told The Columbus Dispatch the decision to fire Bruce was made at that meeting.

A spokesman for the Ohio attorney general's office confirmed the board of trustees was subject to the open-meetings law and must give public notice of meetings and specify the topic of the meeting.

Saturday night, Zonak said Bruce was fired because of a clash of lifestyles between Jennings and Bruce. Zonak's suit also accused Jennings of slandering Bruce, although Jennings has refused to state the reasons for Bruce's dismissal.

Zonak said Monday that Bruce asked him Sunday night to refrain from publicly commenting on the coach's dispute with Jennings. Zonak said he would respect Bruce's wishes and not make further public attacks on Jennings.

In the lawsuit, Zonak asked to take the deposition of Barbara Real, director of OSU's regional fundraising campaign. The Plain Dealer reported Monday that Jennings and Real were to leave today for London for a nine-day vacation.

Both the Dispatch and Plain Dealer reported today that a reservations clerk said Jennings' reservation was canceled on Monday but that Real's reservation was rescheduled for another flight today.

Earl Bruce was fired after nine seasons at Ohio State.

Chamber basketball tournament tips off Friday

Defending champ Tascosa opens tourney; Harvesters meet Perryton in first round

By L.D. STRATE

The second annual Pampa Chamber of Commerce Invitational Basketball Tournament is scheduled for Friday and Saturday in McNeely Fieldhouse with defending champion Amarillo Tascosa leading a field of eight teams.

The Rebels, a Class 5A team, tip off the tournament at 10 a.m. Friday against Class 2A two-time defending state champion Morton. The Rebels return 6-3 forward David Sapper and 6-1 guard Tim Johnson. The Indians lone returning starter off that championship squad is 6-4 post Tony Joyce, who averaged 12 points per game.

Pampa plays its first game at 2:30 p.m. Friday against Perryton. The Rangers were 10-16 a year ago and return 6-2 seniors Tucker Barnes and Craig Wright from the starting lineup.

Plainview meets Lubbock Dunbar at 11:30 a.m. and Dumas goes against Amarillo Caprock at 4:15 p.m. in Friday's other first-round game.

Plainview may be the team to beat with three starters returning from a team that just missed going to the playoffs a year ago. Three-sport star Willie Ansley leads the Bulldogs. The 6-1 Ansley averaged 16.6 points and 7.1 rebounds last season.

The championship game is set for 8 p.m. Saturday.

Tascosa defeated Dimmitt 64-39 in the finals a year ago.

Harvesters at Caprock
Pampa and Amarillo Caprock tune up for the Chamber tournament against each other at 7:45 p.m. tonight in Amarillo.

The Harvesters (1-1) will try and get back into the win column after a 57-42 loss to Amarillo High last Friday night. Pampa's win came against Palo Duro 53-51.

The Longhorns, who won only six games last season, dropped a 67-53 decision to Borger last week. The Longhorns are led by 6-3 John Fennel, who is averaging around 16 points per game.

Pampa's inside players, 6-4 Dustin Miller and 6-2 Jason Farmer, are averaging 14 and 13 points respectively for the Harvesters after two games.

Pampa girls host S-F
Pampa's unbeaten Lady

Harvesters (2-0) host Sanford-Fritch at 7:30 p.m. tonight in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa Coach Albert Nichols looks for a tough game against the visitors, who are picked to win the District 1-3A title.

"It's not going to be an easy game for us. They're a good pressing team," Nichols said. "We only won by four points against them last year and they only graduated two girls off that team."

The Lady Eagles posted an 18-9 record last year and finished second in their district.

In Pampa's spine-tingling 66-65 overtime win over Palo Duro last Friday, Nichols pointed out the clutch play of seniors Keitha Clark and Tacy Stoddard.

"I was real impressed with Clark," Nichols said. Her shooting, especially early in the game, held our club together."

Clark finished with 17 points, including a 3-pointer in the fourth quarter that started a Pampa rally.

Stoddard scored 11 points, including four of Pampa's five points in the overtime period.

"Stoddard had only two points in the first three quarters, but I wasn't about to give up on her," Nichols said. "She came through when we needed it."

Junior post Yolanda Brown overcame a tightly-packed PD zone to score 23 points and pull down a dozen rebounds.

"Brown was open a lot early in the game, but Palo Duro closed her down and we had a lot of turnovers trying to force the ball into her," Nichols said. "We stopped trying to force the ball once we realized their zone was leaving other people open. We started hitting those open shots," Nichols added.

Shawn Ford, who was scheduled to start for the Lady Harvesters before a car accident left her hospitalized, is progressing nicely, according to Nichols. "She's still a little sore, but she's doing fine," Nichols said. "We hope to get her back for the Abilene Tournament."

Ford is sophomore transfer from White Deer.

Bulls rally past Celtics

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Chicago Coach Doug Collins doesn't mind victory, but he'd also like to see his team get some respect this season.

The Bulls gained both Monday night after rallying in the final four minutes to hand the Boston Celtics a 107-102 NBA loss behind a 31-point effort from Michael Jordan, 20 points from rookie Scottie Pippen and 19 from John Paxson.

"Chicago is no longer a one-dimensional team," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "Pippen, Paxson and (Charles) Oakley to go with Jordan, that ain't a bad combination."

The Bulls won the game by outscoring the Celtics 32-15 in the final quarter to overcome a 12-point deficit.

In the only other NBA game Monday, San Antonio defeated the New York Knicks 117-112.

Playing without injured stars Larry Bird and Kevin McHale, the Celtics got 14 points from Fred Roberts and 10 from rookie Brad Lohaus in the first half. Boston led 63-51 at halftime after leading by as many as 18 points.

In the second half, Jordan scored 20 of his points while Pippen, with seven down the stretch, helped secure Chicago's fourth win over Boston in 24 games since 1983-84.

"We're 8-2 and something has to be working right," said Jordan, the league's top scorer with a 34-point average. "It's a nice start for us and a good way to begin the road trip."

The Bulls, 4-0 on the road, play eight games over the next 14 days away from Chicago, starting Wednesday at Milwaukee.

Boston was paced by Dennis Johnson's 23 points and 20 from Danny Ainge.

The Celtics, 8-3 overall, are 2-2 without Bird, who is expected to return to action Wednesday against Atlanta at Boston Garden.

Spurs 117, Knicks 112

San Antonio won its first road game in five tries as Johnny Dawkins scored eight of his 24 points in the last three minutes at New York.

After New York closed the gap to 106-105 with 3:41 left, Dawkins hit two consecutive jumpers and added another basket and two free throws in the final minute.

Richard Smith takes a breather during a recent game. 'Huskers like Richard Smith

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

WHEELER—When the future comes knocking at your door, you usually let it in.

But when the future wears an orange and white uniform, is ranked No. 5 in the country and goes by the nickname "Cornhusker," you open the door and you say, "Come right in, sir."

Richard Smith ... meet Nebraska.

Richard, a senior linebacker for the No. 4 ranked Wheeler Mustangs, has not actually seen or met a 'Husker recruiter yet, but staff members for Nebraska head coach Tom Osborne have sent Richard information through the mail and have shown interest in having him on the squad, via a football scholarship.

"I'd have to say if they offered me something, I'd sure go," Richard said. "But that's so far away."

Both Richard and his father, Wheeler head coach Preston Smith, have expressed doubts about fantasy becoming reality. In other words, is Richard big enough in stature to play for a national powerhouse like Nebraska?

"I'd have to say there's nothing I'd rather do than play football," Richard said. "I'm not real big or real tall. I don't weigh more than 191-197, but I'd really like to do it."

If Nebraska fails to come through, he could always opt to stay in his home state and play for either East Texas State or WTSU, both of which have shown a keen liking of Richard's defensive talent.

Richard, though, has not played his last game for Wheeler. The Mustangs are romping over opponents and will meet the Plains Cowboys Friday night at 8 p.m. in Hereford in regional playoff action.

To say the least, Richard is confident of the Mustangs' chances at going to state.

"Daddy and I talked about it today," he said. "I don't want to get big headed, but if we play up to our potential, I don't see anybody that can beat us."

Admittedly, leaving Wheeler, where he has lived since he was 7-years-old, will be a tough chore.

"I'll never forget the place," he said. "I came in here in second grade and all I ever dreamed of was being a big Wheeler Mustang.

"I cried like a baby in our last home game. I'm gonna miss it."

A starter since the last game of the season his freshman year, Richard, who's friends simply call him "Rich," is an avid hunter. During a recent outing, he shot 46 quail in a two-day period.

Even though somewhat hesitant to talk about himself, Richard does have plenty to say about others.

On Bubba, his brother and the Mustangs' starting tailback: "Bubba could go (to any college) he wanted to. He can run, he can tackle."

On Grayson Benson, Wheeler's senior fullback: "Grayson is everything that Bubba's not. Grayson can run around and get through you, whereas Bubba's big and strong."

On his mother, Linda Smith: "My mother's very supportive. She's always wanted whatever Bubba and Tres (Richard's youngest brother) and I have wanted. There's no one more stout-hearted than she is. She's a special lady."

Aside from his linebacking abilities, Richard also has a knack for excelling in track.

In 1986, Richard was the Class A state discus champion, with a throw of 159-feet, 9-inches. At the state meet in Austin last May, Richard was the bronze medalist with a toss of 161-2.

On his chances at regaining his discus title at next year's track meet, Richard said: "I've got a lot of growing up to do. If I'm gonna want to compete ... if I'm gonna make it to the state meet, I've gotta grow."

With a 2.8 grade point average, Richard is making plans for his future if, for some strange reason, football doesn't work out.

"I'd probably ... well, my granddad was a rancher, and I live seven miles in the country. He's not always gonna be here, so I'd like to be here and ranch cattle."

But there is little doubt whether Richard will make it in football. He may lack the size right now, but he has the ability and the yearning to succeed. And, it has been said that if a player's mental attitude is good, then half the battle is won.

"I have a great mental attitude," he said. "My dad told me it's not how big you are or how tall you are, it's how big you are in your heart."

Oilers hope to rebound

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP)—The Houston Oilers lost a decisive 40-7 AFC Central Division game to the Cleveland Browns Sunday, and Coach Jerry Glanville says he wants the trend to stop right there.

"The good teams stay away from long losing streaks," Glanville said Monday. "Everyone loses a game, but the good teams don't have long streaks."

It's true the Oilers suffered an embarrassing loss in a divisional showdown. They lost six turnovers, quarterback Warren Moon completed only five passes and Browns took over the division lead.

"The key for this week is to feel good about ourselves," Glanville said. "We've won eight of our last 12 games. If we stay on that, we'll be okay. We can't let the Nov. 22 game interfere with the Nov. 29 game. That's the way we'll approach this week. We've done it before."

The Oilers rebounded last season from a 27-0 loss to San Diego to win their final two games of the season, and they soundly defeated Pittsburgh Nov. 15 one week after losing to San Francisco.

"I thought we came back good after San Francisco against Pittsburgh," Glanville said. "No one has beaten Pittsburgh worse than we lost them."

The loss dropped Houston to a 6-4 record and into second place in the AFC Central Division behind the Browns, 7-3.

Moon completed five of 23 passes and had three intercepted. He completed only one pass in the second half, an 83-yard touchdown to Ernest Givins and went to the sidelines midway in the fourth quarter.

Glanville said the Oilers helped out the Browns defense.

"It was a hard-hitting game but (Mike) Rozier's fumble wasn't from hard hitting," Glanville said. Curtis "Duncan muffed the kickoff return was just a matter of him not being in a game like that."

Duncan, a 10th-round draft pick from Northwestern, bobbled the opening kickoff, forcing Houston to start its first drive from its 8-yard line.

Glanville's greater concern on Monday was an injury list that included starting guard Mike Munchak, left tackle Bruce Davis, linebacker John Grimsley and backup safety Allen Lyday. Grimsley will miss Sunday's game at Indianapolis with an ankle injury, while Davis may be able to play with his ankle injury.

Munchak suffered a shoulder injury in the first quarter, but his status was unknown for Sunday. Lyday will undergo a complete knee operation, Glanville said.

"It's total reconstruction on Lyday," Glanville said. "It's what we call a flat tire. He blew everything out."

The Oilers return home Dec. 6 to play the San Diego Chargers.

Charges dropped against ex-Poke

DALLAS (AP)—Bad-check charges against former Dallas Cowboys running back Ron Springs have been dropped, officials said.

Springs, 31, was indicted Sept. 13 on charges that he wrote two bad checks totalling $776 to a Dallas-area travel agency, court records indicate.

The Dallas County district attorney's office dropped the charges Monday after Springs made full restitution to the travel agency, officials said.

Springs said the checks were written for plane tickets to Cincinnati for his wife, brother-in-law and himself. He said he deposited $6,000 with his bank before writing the checks, but the bank did not credit the deposit to his account.

Swimmers from the Pampa Dolphins Swim Club will have their annual Swim-a-thon on Wednesday, Nov. 25th at the Pampa Youth & Community Center from 4:30 to 6:30 P.M. They will attempt to swim 200 lengths of the 25 yd. pool in two hours whichever comes first. Two hundred lengths is a little less than 3 miles.

The swimmers are soliciting pledges and donations. They hope to raise enough money to maintain the local age group swim program.

Help promote age group swimming among the youth in Pampa.

- Swimming:
- *is a lifetime sport - something kids can continue to do even after high school or college and for the rest of their lives.
 - *is a healthful and safe alternative sport for kids;
 - it increases the aerobic capacity of their heart and lungs.
 - it reduces possibility of joint and muscle injury so common in other sports.
 - *fosters self competition through carefully monitored and recorded performances as well as head-to-head competition with other kids in the same age group locally and regionally.
 - *promotes fun and discipline.

So, come out to the Pampa Youth & Community Center on Wednesday, Nov. 25th from 4:30 to 6:30 P.M. and watch our Swim-a-thon. Please call Coach Bob Hill at 665-2596 for the names of Dolphin swimmers you would like to sponsor.

Spurs finally win on the road

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Road trips, San Antonio guard Alvin Robertson said, are best looked at one game at a time.

"Winning the first game of a road trip is like climbing a ladder," Robertson said. "You win one and go on to the next step."

The Spurs, winless in their first four games away from HemisFair Arena this season, started a four-game NBA road trip off with a giant step Monday night as they defeated the New York Knicks 117-112.

Robertson, an All-Star starter the last two years, was off on the wrong foot against the Knicks, missing his first eight shots, including six straight in the first half. But despite Robertson's problems, the Spurs were in synch in the first two periods, taking a 70-60 lead at halftime.

Then San Antonio scored only 15 points in the third quarter, allowing the Knicks to take an 83-74 lead with a 19-0 spurt.

It was then, when the Spurs were reeling, that Robertson took over, scoring 11 of his 14 points in the last 14 minutes.

"Alvin was the difference after we went down by nine points in the third quarter," said Robertson's backcourt teammate, Johnny Dawkins, who led the Spurs with 26 points, eight of them in the final three minutes. "He not only started to hit his shots, but he was directing the offense, moving things around."

"They told me to keep taking my shots even though I didn't feel like it after the first half," Robertson said. "I made a conscious effort to come out strong in the fourth quarter. I took one shot, then another, and kept taking them as long as they went in."

Walter Berry had 20 points and Greg Anderson scored 15 for the Spurs. Patrick Ewing had 21 points and rookie Mark Jackson 20 points and 15 assists, both season highs, for the Knicks.

Spurs Coach Bob Weiss agreed with Robertson that it was important that the team started the road trip with a victory.

"I hope this starts a trend because we're playing some good teams on this trip," Weiss said. "We still have three tough teams left on the road."

The Spurs play at Indiana, Detroit and Atlanta the rest of this week.

San Antonio led 105-99 with 4:55 remaining, but New York closed the gap to 106-105 on Kenny Walker's basket with 3:41 left.

Dawkins responded with two consecutive baskets and added another basket and two free throws in the final minute. The Knicks got no closer than threepoints the rest of the way.

The Knicks had a chance to tie it after stealing an inbounds pass with seven seconds remaining, but Trent Tucker missed a 3-point attempt and Frank Brickowski hit two free throws with two seconds to go for the final margin.

McWilliams concerned about Aggies

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP)—Texas Coach David McWilliams says the Longhorns' best may not be good enough to beat Thanksgiving foe Texas A&M, which is seeking its third consecutive Southwest Conference football championship.

McWilliams said A&M has a great offensive line, an excellent defense, a tough running back in freshman Darren Lewis, a good leader in quarterback Craig Stump — and a noisy crowd that can throw an opponent off stride.

A&M, 8-2, and Texas, 6-4, will play for the SWC football title at College Station, where A&M has won 12 consecutive conference games.

ESPN will televise the game nationally, with kickoff at 7:15 p.m. CST. The stadium seats 72,387, and A&M officials predict a crowd of more than 75,000. The single-game record is 77,607 against Texas in 1985.

The winner will play Notre Dame, 8-2, in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas on Jan. 1. The loser will play Pittsburgh, 8-3, in the Bluebonnet Bowl at Houston on Dec. 31.

McWilliams told his weekly news conference Monday he thought his team believed it could beat A&M.

Federal red ink flows heavily into fiscal 1988

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government's attempt to reduce the flow of red ink is getting off to a rocky start in the new fiscal year with a giant $30.7 billion imbalance for October.

The shortfall between government revenues and spending for the first month in the 1988 fiscal year was 21.6 percent higher than the same month a year ago and was much worse than many economists had been expecting.

It was particularly bad news for the Reagan administration and congressional budget negotiators who have been working to come up with a credible deficit reduction package aimed at calming financial market jitters following the big plunge in stock prices last month.

The negotiators reached agreement Friday on a package aimed at trimming the deficit for this fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, by $30.2 billion.

But even with these cuts, the Congressional Budget Office says the deficit will still rise above the $148 billion deficit for the 1987 fiscal year, which ended Sept. 30.

CBO analysts are forecasting a deficit for the current fiscal year of around $150 billion, and some private economists said even this estimate is likely to be far too optimistic.

The problem is that the government had a boost in cutting the red ink last year from an unexpected $28 billion in higher tax receipts triggered by the overhaul of the tax law. That increase will not be available this time around.

In addition, many economists are reducing their forecasts for overall economic growth because of the shock to consumer confidence caused by the collapse of the stock market. Lower growth will mean lower government tax revenues and higher government spending on such things as unemployment benefits.

Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm, said he had been predicting a 1988 deficit of around $175 billion, even with the reductions approved by the administration and congressional leaders. But he said this figure could swell to $200 billion if the recession he is predicting for next year is worse than anticipated.

Economists blamed higher-than-expected government spending in a number of areas for the October shortfall, suggesting that agencies may have held back on spending in September to make the 1987 deficit figure look even better.

In one case, the Defense Department did just that under orders from Congress. The government "saved" nearly $3 billion by changing the pay day for 2.1 million active duty military personnel from the last day of the month to the first day of the month.

Instead of getting paid on Sept. 30, members of the armed forces had to wait until Oct. 1, providing a painless way for budget writers to appear to reduce defense spending for 1987 without actually having done so.

That's a sleight-of-hand won't be available for budget writers this time around.

The package of deficit reduction measures that the administration and congressional negotiators have agreed to still must be approved by Congress before they can go into effect.

Until that approval takes place, a package of $23 billion in automatic spending cuts required by the Gramm-Rudman law is in effect, starting last Friday.

Security beefed up at Houston detention centers holding Cubans

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal officials in Houston are beefing up security and postponing all visits to four area detention centers housing Cuban inmates in an effort to prevent riots like those in Louisiana and Georgia.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officers on leave were told to remain in the Houston area and vacations were suspended. In addition, riot gear — shields, batons and helmets with faceguards — were placed in areas where they quickly would become available to officers, he said.

Cuban inmates who had access to telephones knew of the uprising Saturday among fellow Cubans at a federal facility in Oakdale, La., before word of the disturbance was publicly known.

"They have a very sophisticated network throughout the prison system," said Ron Parra, INS district director. For that reason, Parra said inmates now were being denied telephone privileges.

"It's one of those things — we'd rather be well-prepared than react later," he said.

Parra said it was likely the alert status would continue until the problems in Georgia and Louisiana were resolved.

Parra said INS intelligence agents were trying to determine if the outbreaks were an orchestrated campaign or random incidents.

About 50 Cubans are imprisoned at four Houston facilities, including a privately run detention center that was the scene of a disturbance last New Year's Eve involving Cuban inmates, Parra said.

"We have curtailed information into the facilities and we have postponed all visits," Parra said. "Our main concern is to preserve the buildings and the property and to make sure no lives are in jeopardy."

No problems were reported. Except for a detention center near Houston Intercontinental Airport, federal authorities declined to identify other facilities housing Cuban inmates.

"We're operating, as far as they can see, in a normal situation," Deputy Director Michael McMahon said. "We want to be cautious."

New amendments affect couples

AUSTIN (AP) — No longer will a married couple in Texas have to write a will or go through a legal proceeding to guarantee that when one of them dies, their community property will go to their spouse.

That's because a new amendment to the Texas Constitution, approved this month by voters, has given them an easier option.

Under the new provision, a husband and wife simply can agree in writing that upon one's death, all or part of the deceased spouse's community property belongs to the remaining spouse.

Before the constitutional change, community property not divided by a will was apportioned under the Texas Probate Code.

That probate law said half of the community property — property acquired during a marriage, with certain exceptions — would go to the surviving spouse. If there were children, the other half automatically went to the deceased spouse's children.

A married couple was able to get around the provision by converting their community property into separate property through a partition agreement, then establishing joint tenancy with the right of survivorship.

Under that procedure, the property was owned jointly, and one owner's property automatically passed to the other owner after death.

Under the amendment approved by voters, a couple now does not have to write a will or enter into a partition agreement to establish survivorship rights for community property, experts said.

Sen. Kent Caperton, a Bryan Democrat who sponsored the new plan along with Rep. Nicolas Perez, D-El Paso, said the amendment makes the disposition of community property easier for Texans, many of whom were unaware of the requirement for partition.

For example, Caperton said, many couples assumed that by signing the survivorship agreement on their bank's signature card, they created survivorship rights.

But before the amendment passed, the deceased spouse's interest in a joint bank account would go to the children, not to the surviving spouse, unless a will called for something else, he said.

"A lot of people went to their lawyer after their spouse died and said, 'What do you mean I don't have the right to all of that account? It's an account I shared with my husband,'" Caperton said.

"That (signature card) didn't dispose of it, even though they were married," he said.

A partition agreement "is an extremely complex prospect for the ordinary citizen, who frankly would rather stay away from his lawyer as much as he can. As a lawyer, I can tell you, 'No, it's not that involved.' But for a citizen ... it is involved, and it costs you money," Caperton said.

Under another new amendment that affects married couples, the protection against school property tax increases on a homestead that a Texan receives at age 65 will be extended to his or her younger spouse, after the older spouse dies.

The exemption applies to a widow or widower who is at least 55 when the older spouse dies.

"The statistics pretty well prove that the male, the breadwinner, is normally the first to die," said Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, co-sponsor of the bill.

"All of a sudden (the widow) is hit right off the bat next year with maybe a doubling, tripling or quadrupling of her property taxes. It's a real hardship."

Walter examines a belt.

Move from hobby to business a cinch

By PAULA BLESENER
Corsicana Daily Sun

KERENS (AP) — Life in the dog-eat-dog world of business is a cinch for T.R. Walter.

Walter and his partner, Dan Star, operate TR Belt Collection in Kerens, and their wares are more than pieces of leather to hold up pants. Their intricately patterned, Western-style belts have sold as far away as Paris, France.

The rush to get belts made for wholesalers' Christmas orders recently ended, and now the duo has time for what they're known for in Kerens — golf.

"We golf a lot," Walter said. "That's mainly what we get kidded about. It's hard to say how much we play. My wife would hate to know."

Besides hitting the links when business is at a lull, Walter and Star have their own entertainment center at the Colket Street store.

In the manufacturing area of the business, away from the eyes of customers browsing in the showroom, the partners have a basketball goal, dart board, weight room, and video game.

But Walter and Star aren't all play and no work.

Last year, they sold about 20,000 belts to wholesalers mostly in the western United States.

The bulk of the company's business is wholesale, but they maintain a showroom and sell their belts to retail customers at wholesale prices.

The partnership was formed about five years ago when Walter and his wife, Deborah, moved from Oregon to Texas so she could take a job as a manager and trainer at Manx Farms between Corsicana and Kerens.

Mrs. Walter hired Star's wife, LouAnn, and as they say, the rest is history. At the time, Walter was making hand-tooled belts in a five-wheel trailer.

Walter has hand tooled leather since he was young.

"My grandmother was an art teacher," he said. "She bought me a set of tools, and I played around with it."

Working at a wholesale level, Walter has had to give up hand-tooling.

"It's getting to be a lost art," he said. "I don't really do that much any more. It takes so much time. Business-wise, it's not profitable. But I hate to see it go down the drain."

Rebuilding difficult for the poor

GIDDINGS (AP) — The area of Giddings hardest hit by last week's tornado destroyed the section of town that housed many retirees, minorities and low-income families — those least able to afford to rebuild — officials say.

All 36 of the destroyed houses and five of the six destroyed mobile homes are in the area, said City Manager Larry Pippin. Another 143 houses there were damaged.

Pippin said losses for the area, known as the northwest quadrant, totaled between $2.2 million and $2.5 million. The total value of the area on the tax roll is $3.38 million.

"It was our good fortune that we had no deaths and no major injuries, but our concern now is that we have an area that is a primarily low-income, minority and retired community," Pippin said.

The tornado ripped the roof off the small frame home of Arquette Joiner, a retiree.

"I had a little insurance, but it won't rebuild a house," said Ms. Joiner. "I'm barely getting by living on a set income, much less have enough money to invest in good insurance."

With the exception of some mobile homes, officials say most of the houses in northwest Giddings are similar to Joiner's — small, frame structures that average about 1,000 square feet.

Most are 30 to 40 years old and have an average value of about $11,992. The appraised value of the average house in the Giddings Independent School District this year was $35,000, officials said.

The majority of the families living in the northwest quadrant have an average income of $6,500 annually, Pippin said.

"They can't afford to pay the cost of rebuilding," he said.

Deputy stalks orchards, markets full-time in search of citrus thieves

PRIMERA (AP) — Ed Allison stops his truck by a grapefruit orchard and doesn't like what he sees. Certain trees on the outside rows had been picked nearly clean of fruit.

"You see this row here, the vehicle and foot tracks? Somebody's been in there," Allison says. "They're going to lose all the fruit from those outside rows."

But not if Allison catches the culprits. The 55-year-old former policeman and retired U.S. Customs investigator now carries a gun and badge with the full-time mission of stopping the thousands of dollars in theft from orange and grapefruit trees in the Rio Grande Valley.

Professional thieves cause most of the problem, he says, but trespassing tourists are equally subject to prosecution.

Recently, he surprised a group of four "winter Texans," retirees usually from the Midwest who live at the southern tip of the state in the winter. "I advised them under no uncertain terms they were trespassing and had they been found with fruit, I would have filed on them," Allison says.

Sometimes he has more interesting encounters, such as the night he surprised a man and woman parked between some orange trees.

"The man yelled, 'I'm not stealing fruit. I'm with my neighbor's wife,'" Allison said, adding he advised the man to find a more suitable place.

Fruit sellers and truck drivers must be able to provide documentation that the fruit came from a legitimate source.

In most cases, Allison said he seeks a $200 fine for stealing fruit and an additional $200 for trespassing.

A typical call on his mobile phone one afternoon was from a fruit stand operator in Weslaco offering the license number of individuals attempting to sell some citrus. When the merchant asked for proof of ownership, the would-be wholesalers sped away.

The Texas Valley Citrus Committee pays the salary for Allison, who was deputized in Hidalgo County, but also is recognized in Cameron and Willacy counties.

Until he hired Allison, the Weslaco-based marketing and regulatory group had not employed a full-time theft investigator since a 1983 freeze decimated the Texas citrus industry. Les Whitlock, committee manager, says the need for Allison full-time is a sign the industry is coming back.

Allison says sheriff's departments have done a good job cracking down on fruit theft, but his job would be easier if grove owners or managers would install signs forbidding trespassing and provide phone numbers where they can be contacted.

An upsurge in drug smuggling adds danger to the job.

"There's lots of drugs going north under a load of fruit," Allison says.

Beam's ex-wife wants custody of daughter

HOUSTON (AP) — The ex-wife of white supremacist Louis Ray Beam Jr. says she is trying to raise money for a legal battle to regain custody of her daughter and to pay for counseling she knows her daughter will need.

Kara Lynn Giesenschlag said she married Beam in a fit of rebellion, but after three years of marriage they filed for divorce. Beam sought custody of their 18-month-old daughter, Sarah, citing an attempted suicide by Kara.

Ms. Giesenschlag was awarded custody of her daughter, but five months later the girl was kidnapped by a man she said Beam hired to pose as a delivery man.

A few days after that, Beam appeared in an Idaho court with Sarah and was granted a divorce and custody.

Ms. Giesenschlag filed an aggravated kidnapping charge against Beam but she says she was forced to sign over custody of Sarah in December 1982 because Beam threatened to never let her see her child again.

She didn't see her daughter again until Jan. 1, 1983, in the Vancouver airport.

About a month later, she was allowed to visit her daughter with Beam at the compound of another white supremacist group, the Aryan Nations near Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, she said.

After that, Ms. Giesenschlag said she could only visit her daughter at Beam's whim.

Beam was captured two weeks ago in Mexico, and Sarah was returned to her mother.
