Celanese prepares to return

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

The day after Thanksgiving is usually a holiday for Celanese employees — but not this year.

Cleanup of the Pampa Hoechst Celanese chemical plant — which was heavily damaged in a Nov. 14 explosion — and moving equipment from the company's temporary office in the Hughes Building to the plant required several Celanese employees to call off their holiday and report to work today.

Pampa plant Manager Ron Guard said Celanese employees are beginning to move some of the plant's operations back to the damaged facility west of Pampa. He said he does not know how many employees reported for work today.

"We have some things that need to get done," Guard said, adding that while the regular operations and maintenance are being moved back to the plant, the company will still keep its central operations — accounting, nursing, environmental records and employee relations — at the Hughes Building.

Guard acknowledged that it is unusual for employees to report for work on a holiday, but "these are unusual circumstances." Employees were able to take Thursday off for Thanksgiving.

Two plant operators who were able to celebrate Thanksgiving at home were Gary Starnes, 42, who was dismissed from Northwest Texas Hospital Thursday, and Bennie Woodward, 52, who was dismissed Wednesday from Colorado Hospital. They are two of the 33 people injured in the explosion. Three workers were killed. Guard observed that since the explosion nearly two weeks ago, "I kind of lost track of whether it's Friday, Saturday, Sunday."

"But we're all trying to hang in there together," he said. On Monday morning, all of the plant's 400 employees are expected to report to work, and they will either be assigned to a job or put on stand-by. Guard hopes to have the whole staff working by the end of next week.

Despite the return to a more routine schedule, Guard said, a corporate decision on whether to reopen the plant is not due until the end of the year.

Rioting Cuban inmates break talks in Atlanta

By ALBERTO FRANCO
and DAVID SIMPSON
Associated Press Writers

Cuban inmates negotiated a possible release today of 27 hostages being held in a detention center in Louisiana, but talks to free 94 hostages in the Atlanta federal penitentiary broke off, officials said.

Most of the action occurred away from public view, inside the fire-ravaged Oakdale, La., detention center and Atlanta prison.

However, in a dramatic development, a Cuban inmate and a federal official in Oakdale shook hands before a television camera Thursday night and spoke of signing a hostage-release agreement today.

"We need to have ... all four (Cuban negotiators) to sign," the unidentified official said on a WBRZ-TV videotape released to news organizations. "That's when the other 27 will be released."

One of the hostages taken when the Cubans seized the compound in a riot Saturday was released Thursday night.

At a news briefing early today, U.S. Justice Department spokesman Mark Sheehan refused to confirm an agreement had been reached.

"I will not confirm or deny that the negotiators' comments are valid," Sheehan said. "I don't know with certainty what will happen tomorrow."

As to how to interpret the videotape, he said, "The handshake was an indication of the tone of the negotiations."

In Atlanta, Justice Department spokesman Tom Stewart said no further talks were scheduled, but FBI official Wayne Davis said the inmates told an FBI negotiator Thursday night "they'll reconsider their position tomorrow morning."

The Atlanta talks broke off after about 1,100 rebellious Cuban prisoners held a mass meeting and voted against a proposal to free 50 hostages.

Davis said authorities at the 85-year-old penitentiary remain hopeful because of signs the inmates are more unified.

A gate at the prison was decorated with 94 yellow ribbons placed by hostages' relatives, who spent a tense Thanksgiving waiting for news. The relatives shared a holiday meal, and heard a telephone message from Attorney General Edwin Meese promising that "the safety of your loved ones is our paramount goal."

The Atlanta siege began Monday night with rioting that resulted in one Cuban inmate being shot to death and at least 12 people injured.

If a deal is struck in Oakdale, it would end the five-day siege in which the year-old, $17 million facility was heavily damaged by fires set by inmates.

The hostage released Thursday night, William Hoffpauir, is a detention center guard at Oakdale in his early 30s, said his brother-in-law, Mike Marcantel.

"He said they were treated royally," said Marcantel. "They never were abused — physically, mentally, any kind of way."

Hoffpauir was taken to a hospital for rest and observation, and doctors would not let him meet with reporters.

J.D. Williams, a Bureau of Prisons regional deputy commissioner, did not say why Hoffpauir was released.

Negotiations have centered on Meese's offer of a moratorium on a deportation accord with Cuba, according to Sen. John Breaux, D-La.

The proposal to free 50 of the Atlanta hostages came up Thursday night as three inmates met for 90 minutes with an FBI negotiator and three prominent Cuban exiles. It was not known who made the proposal.

Volunteers pile food on plates of homeless

By MICHAEL HIRSH
Associated Press Writer

Celebrities and politicians joined hands with the nation's homeless and hungry for traditional Thanksgiving feasts.

For millions, Thursday's holiday meant the usual staple of plates overflowing with turkey, stuffing and gravy, pageant-filled parades and a double bill of pro football. For others, this was a different kind of year.

In economically beleaguered Texas, about 150 people lined up for a "hip" free Thanksgiving Day dinner at the Hard Rock Cafe in Dallas.

"It's the nouveau needy," said restaurant promoter Janna Brockman of the crowd. "They aren't used to needing help, and that's why we have this cool atmosphere. It's not like a bus stop or anything."

In New York City, 80 residents of a welfare hotel were invited to Central Falls, a chic Soho restaurant-art gallery that provided a band, a magician and clowns. Actors Matt Dillon and Griffin Dunne helped serve the traditional meal.

An estimated 2 million people who watched Macy's 61st annual Thanksgiving Day Parade in the city saw four new towering helium-filled balloons and floats, clowns, bands and colors galore. About 55 million others watched on TV.

"We got born just in time for the parade, didn't we?" Gale O'Conner of Bethany, Conn., asked her silent 3-week-old son, Patrick, as the new Spider-Man balloon passed by.

Skies stayed mostly dry, but temperatures were cold for parades in Detroit, Dallas and Philadelphia, where Miss America Kaye Lani Rae Rafko and Santa Claus helped usher in the holiday season.

The day was one of true thanksgiving for the family of William Hoffpauir, a guard who was released from the Federal Detention Center in Oakdale on Thursday evening by rebellious Cuban inmates who took him hostage along with 27 others.

On the nation's highways, the holiday weekend highway death toll rose. Victims included 28-year-old California Highway Patrol Officer Mark Taylor. Authorities said he was writing a traffic citation when struck and killed by a car alongside crowded Interstate 10 on Thursday.

In several cities, the nation's luminaries gave a helping hand to the long suffering.

Adopted siblings reunited after 58-year separation

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — Five siblings put up for adoption 58 years ago by parents who were unable to feed them finally reunited over a Thanksgiving feast, and found they had more in common than similar features.

"The whole group likes jigsaw puzzles, reading and gardening," Ed Maddox, 62, of Sunland said Thursday as he stood surrounded by leftovers and half-empty paper plates at Holy Spirit Church.

"It was a marvelous day," said his 67-year-old sister, Marie Peterson of Minneapolis. "I didn't believe it would ever happen. It has, and I'm so glad I was alive to be here."

The reunion brought together three brothers, two sisters and 44 relatives from across the nation.

But it was far from complete despite national news stories on the search that Maddox, a Christian missionary, began last July for his six brothers and four sisters.

Two brothers are dead, one sister is in a nursing home suffering from Alzheimer's disease, and three others are still missing.

moisture, in the 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m. today. Skies were expected to remain clear through the weekend, with temperatures warming to the mid 40s. The low tonight was expected to dip to the lower 20s.

Typhoon pounds Philippines; Aquino declares a 'calamity'

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino today declared a "state of calamity" in 11 provinces as the death toll from this year's worst typhoon climbed to 281.

Officials said at least 23 people were missing. Relief agencies reported that nearly 63,000 people were homeless after typhoon Nina, with peak winds of 127 mph, slammed across Luzon and smaller islands before entering the South China Sea on Thursday.

U.S. Ambassador Nicholas Platt released $25,000 in emergency assistance and sent U.S. Agency for International Development officials to help in relief work in Sorsogon province, one of the hardest hit areas.

A U.S. Embassy statement said Platt released the money immediately after learning of Mrs. Aquino's proclamation, which prohibits profiteering and allows the government to commandeer food and other supplies needed for relief and rehabilitation.

The Office of Civil Defense said 200 people were killed when giant waves churned by the typhoon smashed the ferry port of Matnog in Sorsogon, 250 miles southeast of Manila, Wednesday night. Sixteen other people were reported missing there.

Reports from OCD and the Philippine National Red Cross showed that Sorsogon and Albay provinces, both in Luzon's Bicol region, were the hardest hit, accounting for most of the 11,000 families left homeless.

At least 65 people were reported killed in Albay.

Aquino's proclamation prohibits profiteering and allows the government to commandeer food and other supplies needed for relief and rehabilitation.

Other fatalities were from the central islands of Romblon, Marinduque and Masbate and from the Luzon provinces of Quezon and Laguna.

Officials of the the government's weather service said Nina was the strongest of the 15 typhoons, tropical storms or depressions to enter the Philippine area of responsibility this year.

Typhoons usually strike remote eastern provinces where communications to the capital are poor, and it often takes days or weeks to compile complete lists and assess the impact of a major storm.

Officials said many roads were flooded and telephone and power lines were knocked down throughout the Bicol region of southeastern Luzon, which includes Sorsogon province.

Authorities have said that while a desire to remain in the United States was the central demand, the Cubans have disagreed among themselves over whether to also hold out for freedom and clemency.

Stewart said nine more inmates surrendered Thursday night, and estimated the total of Cuban inmates in the Atlanta prison at 1,140.

Since Monday, 257 Cubans have surrendered in Atlanta. Most of them have been moved to other prisons, along with 171 of the 194 U.S. prisoners.

Celanese

rate officials are still studying the extent of damage the plant sustained when a pair of explosions ripped the huge chemical complex.

Reed said earlier this week that by setting up temporary control units and boilers, some of the nine manufacturing units at the plant may begin regular operation within four months.

Meanwhile, Celanese employees will have a covered-dish Thanksgiving dinner beginning at noon Sunday at the M.K. Brown Heritage Room. Guard said employees are encouraged to bring a covered dish vegetable or salad. Turkey and ham will be provided.

Today also was not much of a holiday for many city and school officials, who used their day off to prepare for Thursday's citywide rally - "Hoehst Celanese: The Heart of Pampa."

Pampa High School business teacher and rally publicity chairman Ramona Hite said today that the rally has grown from a "support Celanese" rally to a "support Pampa" rally.

"The whole community is more aware of the area's economic problems," Hite said, adding that the proceeds from the rally will go to all unemployed Pampans, not just those laid-off after the Celanese explosion.

"The telephone has been ringing off the wall with people calling about the rally," Hite said. - The rally will be held at 2 p.m.

Thursday at Harvester Stadium. Rally Transportation Committee member Doug Carmichael said there will be three shuttle bus routes - at the First National Bank drive-through on Frost Street, the M.K. Brown Auditorium, and the Pampa Mall - for those wanting to park their cars and ride to the rally.

Carmichael encourages people to use the buses, to car pool or walk to the rally to ease traffic congestion around the high school field.

The buses for the rally will be provided by the First United Methodist Church, Briarwood Full Gospel Church, First Baptist Church, First Assembly of God Church, Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ and Central Baptist Church.

Reunited

"It was nice to be able to bring each other up to date about what's happened in our lives," Maddox said. "We hope next time, there will be three more with us."

The 11 siblings were put up for adoption by their poverty-stricken parents, Agnus and Harry Bunan, in 1929.

The Bunans and their children had camped all summer on the bank of a creek in what is now Fremont, about 40 miles southeast of San Francisco, on the eve of the Great Depression.

Alameda County authorities at first refused to take responsibility for the children of transients. Unable to feed the youngsters, the couple gave 10 of them to well-wishers attracted by newspaper accounts of their plight.

The county later reconsidered, took custody and offered all the children for adoption. No one knows for sure what became of the elder Bunans, although it's believed they moved to Arizona.

Born Edward Birdsel Bunan, Maddox was adopted by an Oakland streetcar motorman and his wife.

Maddox and his daughter, Cherri, began the search by combing courthouse files in Oakland for adoption papers.

The Associated Press ran a story on their effort last August and within two weeks Maddox had located all but the three missing siblings.

Those found were:

■ Walter Berman, 65, a retired federal government worker from Hamilton, Ohio.

■ Agnes Durand, 69, of Citrus Heights, Calif. She told Maddox their eldest sibling, Har-

Volunteers help needy celebrate Thanksgiving

By The Associated Press

An after-dinner nap may have seemed welcome to many overstuffed Thanksgiving celebrants, but the energy of thousands of volunteers who fed the needy couldn't be dampened by excess gravy.

In downtown Houston, 10,000 people enjoyed a turkey dinner and all the trimmings at the Fourth Annual Thanksgiving SuperFeast on Thursday. Organizer David Moeller said about 4,000 people volunteered to help with the feast.

"I think it's something that we could do toward making a contribution to helping people who have less in the world than what we have been blessed with," said attorney Bill Stradley, who volunteered at the event with his wife, Emmalee.

At the Salvation Army Harbor Light Center in Houston, hundreds of people lined up in the cafeteria to receive a free meal, said John Blake, food service director.

"It's a blessing to us," Blake said. "The volunteers feel great about helping someone. Me, personally, I enjoy preparing the food."

Volunteers in Fort Worth and San Antonio worked around the clock preparing dinners provided to thousands of senior citizens by restaurateur Raul Jimenez.

It was the 15th Jimenez giveaway in Fort Worth and the eighth in San Antonio. In San Antonio, 20 city buses transported senior citizens from nutrition sites and housing projects to the Jimenez dinner at the San Antonio Convention Center.

"We thank God because we are still alive and he gives us something to eat," said Virginia Castillo-Galvan, 58, of San Antonio, who attended the dinner in a wheelchair after recently losing a foot and part of a leg to diabetes. "We think Thanksgiving Day is special and we think Mr. Jimenez and his family are special, too."

An estimated 4,000 of Dallas' needy and homeless were given warm clothing and Thanksgiving dinners by about 300 volunteers from the Bigheart Ministries. Staff and volunteers at the Salvation Army's Carr P. Collins Center provided dinner for more than 1,100 people, officials said.

About 150 people lined up for a "hip" free Thanksgiving Day dinner at the Hard Rock Cafe.

"It's the nouveau needy," said restaurant promoter Janna Brockman of the crowd. "(They) aren't used to needing help, and that's why we have this cool atmosphere. It's not like a bus stop or anything."

What was intended to be a free meal for 300 homeless people, organized by Holy Covenant Presbyterian Church, turned into a casual Hard Rock lunch for 50 foster families and about 100 people who signed up through a United Way agency.

The south Texas town of Vattman, so small it's not on the map, swelled to nearly 1,700 for the town's 73rd Thanksgiving dinner.

"It is like a gathering or reunion," said Jennie Schonefeld, a member of a church that co-sponsors the community get-together. "It just keeps growing."

Hundreds bundled up against the cold weather to watch the Foley's Thanksgiving Day parade in downtown Houston Thursday morning. Thousands more watched the event, which featured marching bands and floats depicting fairy tale characters, on statewide television.

Missing plane sought

PORT MANSFIELD (AP) — Authorities hoped for cooperative weather and planned to expand the search today for three Dallas-area doctors who have been missing since their single-engine plane took off from the local airport Wednesday.

Volunteer pilots and observers of the Civil Air Patrol coordinated the search and were aided offshore by the Coast Guard.

"We didn't find anything," said Maj. James Cooper, of Group Nine of the Civil Air Patrol, Thursday. "I wish we had."

The missing men were identified as Frank Rainone Jr., 61, the pilot, a surgeon at Arlington Memorial Hospital; his brother, Carl Rainone, 62, a retired dentist and manager of art galleries in Arlington and Las Colinas; and William H. McClarty, 64, also a dentist. They were flying back to Arlington after a fishing trip.

Carl Rainone, a former professional baseball player in the minor leagues, is the team dentist for the Texas Rangers. He helped found the Little League in Arlington and helped persuade the city of Arlington to add fluoride to the water supply as an aid in fighting tooth decay, family members said.

Four planes, carrying 14 volunteers, and a Coast Guard helicopter searched the area 15 miles north and 10 miles south of Port Mansfield, Cooper said.

The search was called off in the late afternoon, after seven hours, because of inclement weather, which brought low clouds and reduced visibility.

Cooper said the search area would be expanded today to 45 miles north of Port Mansfield.

FHLB considers selling Texas thrifts to private investors

DALLAS (AP) — The new president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas says resolving the problems of Texas savings and loans and reestablishing public confidence in the industry are major priorities of the agency.

Two proposals to sell troubled Texas thrifts to private investors have been sent to Washington to be reviewed by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, new president George M. Barclay said.

Barclay declined to detail which savings and loans might change hands.

A time for ingesting ignorance

Thanksgiving. A time for people to reflect. A time to count blessings. And, of course, a time to welcome relatives from far away places.

Ahhh! You say you, too, have been blessed with relations coming in by the busloads in order to share the holiday spirit with you?

Ours got here Tuesday. So, instead of just one person cooking the turkey Thursday, we had six.

A turkey just seems to cook slower if several people hover around it and wonder if it's brown enough, done enough, good enough.

When all was said and done, the turkey was very tasty. I expect it was because at our house, we had more chefs than Reagan has wrinkles.

That poor turkey.

As a group, turkeys get a raw deal. You've heard that old tale: Turkeys are so dumb they stand out in the rain, heads turned toward the sky, wondering what on earth is falling from the clouds.

Eventually, the turkeys drown. Or, so goes the fable.

My only question is, if these birds are as dumb as they say they are, how come we eat them? Why do we ingest such ignorance?

No one gives a hoot about turkeys for eleven months out of the year.

But when November rolls around, watch out. These senseless birds suddenly become so popular, their pictures grace more front pages than turkeys of the political sort.

And then there's the poor gobbler that has stood imprisoned this week at a local food emporium.

We're talking one paranoid bird, guys. He's probably the only turkey that ever felt the need to make an appointment with a psychiatrist.

All week, people were walking up to the bird while his back was turned and either gawking or plucking at him.

When Tommy Turkey was not worrying about the next 5-year-old sneaking up behind him, he may have been thinking how special he was.

"Well, here I am," Tom probably thought. "Out here for all these people to see. I must be one beautiful bird! I wonder what's next? The Turkey Hall-of-Fame?"

Poor old Tom didn't realize his days were numbered. He didn't know he'd go from prison to platter by week's end.

But enough about turkeys. There are other things my parents and grandmother from Irving noticed when they arrived in Pampa earlier this week.

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

For instance, the Christmas lights that were already gracing the streets of downtown.

I told them we like to consider them Halloween lights, since that's about the time they first went on display.

Since the decorations went up so early, does that mean they'll stay up until Valentine's Day?

And the weather was just downright Thanksgivingly.

Fog. Wind. Temps in the 20s and 30s. Wind chills that would rival a turkey's IQ. Even some snow.

My family probably thought how it was appropriate to get such wintry weather just for the holidays.

They don't realize we were using blankets during the "hot" August nights.

Another tradition experienced Thursday was the Cowboy football game.

Folks in Texas just don't know it's time to eat turkey until they see Danny White throw an interception.

"White threw an interception? Time to carve the bird!"

And then there's the annual clash between Texas A&M and the Texas Longhorns.

The big Turkey-Aggie clash. Or Turkey-Longhorn clash, depending on where your loyalties lie.

Even if you don't like football, Thanksgiving is just not Thanksgiving unless you can hear the roar of a football crowd and the blathering of Brent Musberger in the background while you're passing the stuffing or hoarding the cranberry sauce.

Without reservation, though, I can say Thanksgiving was another successful holiday for the Patterson clan.

Successful, in part, because I made it through another turkey day without my wife mistaking me for the bird, basting and stuffing me.

There's only one concern I have: How long do we have to eat the blessed leftovers?

Deputy needs heart transplant

HOUSTON (AP) — A Dallas County sheriff's deputy, stricken with an irreversible heart condition, needs a heart transplant to live, a doctor says.

Merle Nicholson, who has worked for the sheriff's department for 7½ years, became ill during a trip to Jacksonville, Fla., to pick up a fugitive.

Nicholson, 26, checked into a local hospital, and doctors determined he needed a transplant as soon as possible.

On Tuesday, the wheelchair-bound deputy flew to Houston and was admitted to the Texas Heart Institute. A team of cardiologists began tests Wednesday to evaluate Nicholson for a transplant.

Dr. Bruce Barnum, the lead physician, diagnosed Nicholson's condition as congestive cardiomyopathy, a degeneration of the heart muscles in the pumping chambers.

The condition is irreversible.

Campaign 'reform' punishes taxpayers

Democratic presidential candidates Richard Gephardt, Paul Simon, and Bruce Babbitt solemnly pledged that, if elected in 1988, they will end America's federal budget deficits. Yet the way they're financing their own campaigns doesn't inspire confidence.

They've just borrowed $300,000 and Simon and Babbitt keep their bandwagons rolling across the country on campaign plans. Babbitt had earlier borrowed $1 million and is expected to borrow up to $400,000 more. Money was "secured" against federal campaign funds provided by, you guessed it, your tax dollars. In Babbitt's case, he's expected to receive $1 million in tax dollars. No wonder he favors a "reform" of campaign laws. Without taxpayers involuntarily footing the bill, Babbitt wouldn't have a campaign.

By borrowing against taxpayer cash, these candidates show that they are unable to balance their own campaign budgets. And by robbing your tax dollars to run their campaigns, they show they don't care about making the federal budget deficit even worse. It's all part of the scam of modern politics, stemming from the "reform" instituted in the mid 1970s after the Watergate scandal. The purported reason for the reform was to remove special interests from politics. The Federal Election Commission was set up to regulate campaigns and shovel out tax dollars to candidates.

The reform has turned into a farce. It produces candidates who have no business running. They achieve a meager level of private support and their campaigns continue on federal bucks and their self-inflated egos.

The reform system had its defects, to be sure. It had three major virtues. First, no FEC contribution limits on campaign and limited each candidate's right to free speech. A candidate could use his own money and didn't force taxpayers, those who loathed him, to support his campaign.

Second, his campaign was actually cleaner than today's "reformed" campaigns. True, the candidate was beholden to a few large interest groups, but everyone knew which those were. In today's system, the FEC limits contributions from special interest, forcing candidates to raise money from hundreds of hidden special interests.

Third, in those days the candidate represented a broad base. The old political machines were their candidate was acceptable to a broad segment of the public. They wanted to win. Today a candidate gets nominated by a party's intricate nomination system. Today's candidate will repulse the general public.

Fourth, it is a George McGovern or a Jimmy Carter who has figured out the game and won. It will prove a disaster on the campaign trail. If by some fluke he wins, the presidency is one big fiasco.

The "reform" has proved costly both to the country and to our wallets.

Berry's World

"I figure, if Moscow's new thinking might radically alter superpower rivalry, MY new thinking might alter ours."

Reagan fails to cut expansion

A joke that circulated in the 1960s went as follows: "They told me if I voted for Goldwater, we'd have half a million troops in Vietnam and race riots in the cities. I voted for Goldwater, and it turns out they were right."

One of the unspoken premises of American democracy is that voters can affect government policies by voting for candidates who share their views. But there is a minority school of thought that suggests that the surest way to get your way is to support candidates representing the opposite of your own beliefs. Politicians are tricky. So voters have to be trickier.

Lyndon Johnson's change of heart about keeping American boys out of Vietnam is only one example of presidential unpredictability. Conservatives who voted for Richard Nixon because of his anti-communist instincts didn't envision him trading toasts with Chou En-lai.

Liberals who liked Jimmy Carter's dovish promises eventually found him demanding more Pentagon spending. Ronald Reagan, who even now decries "50 years of deficit spending" by Democrats in Congress, will not be remembered by posterity as the president who balanced the budget.

Reagan has confounded his constituents in other ways. Among his 1980 campaign pledges was a promise to dismantle two symbols of Washington's expanding power, the departments of energy and education. Seven years later, he coexists happily with both, having never made the slightest effort to close them down.

Those who believed Reagan would lead an assault on big government now have fresh proof of betrayal. On the eve of Veterans Day, he endorsed a bill in Congress to create a Cabinet-level Department of Veterans Affairs. A president who insisted he would reduce the cabinet count by two before he left office may end up raising it by one. For fans of limited government, that's a net loss of three.

Reagan's turnabout didn't result from any change in his thinking, or apparently from any thinking at all. His explanation was that the occasion demanded it: "There is no better time or better way to salute those valiant men and women than to announce today my decision to support the creation of a Cabinet-level Department of Veterans Affairs." In other words, it's Veterans Day, so why not?

Plenty of reasons. Those who have served in uniform, who richly deserve the nation's gratitude, already have a token of it in the form of the Veterans Administration. They have another liberal expression of thanks in the agency's $27 billion budget. Washington provides a host of benefits to veterans: Educational grants, civil service hiring preferences, mortgage guarantees, pensions for those who are elderly and poor, medical care.

Does Reagan think all this is inadequate? Well, not exactly. The point of the change, says the White House, is largely symbolic. "Making it a Cabinet agency would not necessarily increase its size or budget but would give it a greater say in the councils of government and would make it an active and working part of the president's Cabinet," declared press secretary

Martin Fitzwater.

But veterans' organizations, which had pushed the idea, wouldn't be so fond of the idea if they figured a Cabinet department would change nothing of consequence. They assume that giving veterans a "greater say" will also give them more money. Otherwise, what's the point?

Once the department is created, it's hard to resist the logic. If veterans are important enough to have their own Cabinet officer, aren't they important enough to deserve more help? Isn't a gesture like this awfully hollow if it doesn't mean additional funds?

The new department would encourage liberality at a time when these programs deserve greater scrutiny. A lot of the benefits are irreproachable efforts to compensate former soldiers for their sacrifices: Pensions for disabled veterans, medical care for those with service-related illnesses, support for the families of those killed in the line of duty.

But others — particularly the free medical care offered to all veterans aged 65 or over, rich and poor, even if their ailments have nothing to do with their experiences in uniform — look suspiciously like any other special interest subsidy. Given the growing numbers of elderly veterans, and the state of the federal budget, we can't afford to encourage the notion that veterans programs are off limits.

That's exactly what creating a Department of Veterans Affairs would do. Reagan, whose budget office once toyed with trimming unwarranted veterans benefits, has plainly given up hope of restoring fiscal discipline here. Anyone who still entertains such hope will do well to find the candidate who promises to do the most for veterans, vote for him, and hope he's as faithful to his promises as Reagan.

Disney characters blast away

The Magic Kingdom, Fla. — This reporter was granted an exclusive interview with the law officer who is heading the investigation into a bloody shootout that occurred here at Florida's No. 1 tourist attraction, Walt Disney World.

"It was bound to happen, sooner or later, with Florida's gun laws," said Deputy Dawg, who was called in on the case.

Although some restraints have been added to the controversial gun laws in the state, one observer has noted, "It's easier to buy a gun in Florida than to rent furniture."

Deputy Dawg explained how the incident began:

"It started at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mouse. Mrs. Mouse (Minnie) and Mr. Mouse (Mickey) became involved in a domestic quarrel. Mrs. Mouse picked up the family .45 and wounded Mr. Mouse in one of his ears."

"How serious was the wound?" the deputy was asked.

"He had a hole in his ear big enough for Tinkerbell to fly through," said the deputy, who went on to explain what happened next.

"Mr. Mouse left the house to seek medical help, and then Mrs. Mouse got Goofy."

"You mean she lost her senses?"

Lewis Grizzard

"No, I mean she got Goofy, that stupid dog that hangs around here, right between the eyes."

"Did the shooting end there?"

"Sadly, no," said Deputy Dawg. "Mr. Mouse, after having the hole in his ear patched, went and picked up a bazooka and began shooting up Fantasy Land."

"Who was injured?"

"Peter Pan got it, and so did Jiminy Cricket."

"What ensued?"

"A suspect identified as D. Duck and his three nephews, Huey, Dewey and Louie, began firing at Mr. Mouse with Ak-47 machine guns they reportedly purchased at a convenience store."

"Mr. Mouse was able to take cover, but the Seven Dwarfs got caught in the crossfire."

"Who was hit?"

"Grumpy and Sneezly. The other five ran up under Snow White's dress and took cover."

"Was Ms. White hurt?"

"No. She began firing back with a rocket launcher she won at a church raffle. All we found of the duck family was a few feathers."

"Were there any more casualties?"

"Pinocchio decided to stick his nose in the matter."

"And?"

"Dumbo, the Flying Elephant, went airborne with two Saturday night specials he got for buying ten gallons of gas at Shorty's Amoco, and shot it right off."

"Certainly that was the end of it?"

"I'm afraid not. Bambi went down too."

"Who on earth would shoot Bambi?"

"Three National Rifle Association lobbyists who stopped by for some hunting on the way to the state capitol in Tallahassee."

"Did you arrest them?"

"What? And violate their constitutional rights?"

I thanked Deputy Dawg for his time and drove away from the scene in my Hertz Rent-a-Tank.

Hard to trace products' origins in world

By Robert Walters

NEW YORK (NEA) — In the popular albeit misleading version of the economic struggle between this country and Japan, "American corporations are portrayed as the hapless victims of a second Pearl Harbor," notes Steve Max.

Domestic companies are stereotyped "as straight shooters and fair fighters in a world where sneaky foreigners cheat," says Max, economic policy director of Citizen Action, a national coalition of community organizations.

"In reality, the game is quite different," he adds, debunking the conventional wisdom that "in international trade competition, it's always our country against some other country."

In an era of intense global competition and transnational corporate relationships, identifying the country of origin of either the participants in the worldwide economy or the goods they produce is becoming increasingly difficult.

"National boundaries fade before the new internationalization of production," notes Max, who cites Taiwan as an especially vivid example of that phenomenon.

"Very few Taiwanese companies export... to the United States," the Wall Street Journal reported earlier this year. "Instead, Americans come here to send back to the United States, under American brand names, everything from cheap shoes to consumer electronics."

Reporting that "many American companies operate their own Taiwanese factories solely to ship products back home," the Journal said 83 percent of the 7 million bicycles imported into the United States last year were from Taiwan.

But "there isn't any Taiwanese bicycle company that competes in the United States," acknowledges a vice president of the firm that makes Schwinn bikes. "It's only American brand names and American companies. The competition from Taiwan is us."

That disturbs many politicians, including the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who regularly offers these observations as he runs for next year's Democratic presidential nomination:

"Who is the biggest exporter from Taiwan? None other than the U.S. transnational, General Electric. Not far behind are Texas Instruments, Digital Equipment, General Instrument, Atari, Sears, K Mart and other U.S. firms."

"These major American corporations are getting the best years of our labor, getting their profit from America and then reserving the right to close plants on us without notice."

"They just take our jobs to slave-labor markets abroad, make American workers feel guilty for demanding a living wage and then play upon our sense of patriotism and national spirit when they say, 'If we could just get that trade surplus down from the Taiwanese, the Japanese and the Koreans, we could put you back to work again.'"

Indeed, so far the trend cited by Max and Jackson has placed tremendous downward pressure on the wage base of production workers in this country.

A GE economist bluntly poses this question: "What in the Bible says that we should have a better living standard than others?"

An official of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce says "many manufacturers now feel that we are not going to be able to afford wage differences with South Korea, Brazil, Mexico, Hong Kong, Taiwan and Singapore."

In each of those nations, however, factory wages averages less than $3 per hour. South Korea's highly touted economic boom, for example, has been built upon the backs of those who supply cheap labor. The average Korean worker puts in a 54-hour week and earns $1.75 per hour.

The solution, Max suggests, lies not in slashing wages here but instead in "raising the wages and living standards of people in the Third World for our own good and theirs."

That is easier said than done, however, especially in world where workers too often are exploited.

Nation

Reagan said embittered by Iran-Contra findings

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan feels "personally put upon" by a congressional finding that the Iran-Contra affair sprang from a climate of disrespect for the law, his top aide says.

White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. also said Thursday that at one time he feared the arms-to-Iran furor would paralyze the Reagan presidency, if not end it.

Baker said that while Reagan "really, really did not like" the report released Nov. 18, the president is moving "full-throttle" on superpower arms-control initiatives, efforts to attack the federal deficit and other issues.

Baker, however, in an impromptu question-and-answer session with Cable News Network and NBC News, acknowledged for the first time that he had had doubts whether Reagan could weather the scandal of clandestine arms sales to Iran and a diversion of proceeds to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

"It's good to go back and think about where we were in the spring, and where we are now," Baker said as the president relaxed with his wife, Nancy, and members of the family at his 688-acre ranch nestled in the Santa Ynez Mountains north of Santa Barbara.

"When I came on board in March, you know, the real question was, 'Is this man going to survive? Is this the end of the Reagan administration, if not impeachment, at least immobilization?" the chief of staff said. "And now, here we are near the end of the year, and he's going full throttle."

Baker refused to say whether Reagan wants to grant pardons to Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter and Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, two former White House aides who are central figures in the continuing investigation of the affair by independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh.

William Clark, who formerly served as Reagan's national security adviser and then headed the Interior Department before returning to private law practice in California, has urged Reagan to grant pardons to the two military officers, sources have said.

Reagan said last week he thought the House-Senate congressional investigative committees had "labored and brought forth a mouse" with the Iran-Contra report.

The committees' 690-page final report on the nearly year-long investigation concluded among other things that Reagan had fostered a climate in the White House that produced a "cabal of zealots" which overtook foreign policy-making and stripped it away from the normal checks and balances, such as congressional oversight.

Baker said Thursday that Reagan "really feels personally put upon by many of the implications and many of the assertions in the report."

"It did not destroy him by any means, did not immobilize him, and he's still the strong, vigorous president he was when he was elected," Baker added. Baker said Reagan anxiously awaits signing a treaty with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to eliminate the superpowers' arsenals of intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Reagan is overjoyed at the recover of his wife, Nancy, from surgery to remove her cancerous left breast, Baker said.

The Reagans are scheduled to return to the White House Sunday.

Standardized tests paint too rosy picture

NEW YORK (AP) — If scores on most standardized tests are to be believed, America's grade school children are like the tykes living in humorist Garrison Keillor's mythical Lake Wobegon, Minn.: all "above average."

A nationwide survey by Friends for Education Inc., a 700-member West Virginia watchdog group, found that "no state is below average at elementary level on any of the six major nationally-normed, commercially-available tests."

A draft copy of the 26-page report contended that the scores being tallied in every state on the Iowa Test of Basic Skills, Metropolitan Achievement Test and other standardized tests "give children, parents, school systems, legislatures, and the press misleading reports on achievement levels."

Scores included in the survey, conducted by mail and telephone in August, were sent back twice to state education departments for verification, according to Dr. John Jacob Cannell, a Daniels, W. Va., physician who founded Friends for Education, wrote the report and paid for the research with $11,000 of his own money.

Among the findings: —Eighty-two percent of 3,503 school districts surveyed reported above-average scores for elementary students.

—In the 18 states where local districts choose and administer tests, cities such as New York, Boston, Hartford, Conn., Trenton, N.J., St. Louis, East St. Louis, Ill., Kansas City, and Grand Rapids, Mich., reported above-average scores.

—Each of the remaining 32 states which test children statewide reported above-average scores, including Southern states which rank low by most measures of school performance.

In South Carolina, which ranks 47th in graduation rates and 50th in college entrance exam results, 62.9 percent of fourth graders scored above average on the Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills (CTBS), according to the survey.

More than 68 percent of Georgia's second-graders scored above average on the Iowa Test of Basic Skills, another commercial standardized test. And, 79.6 percent of Kentucky's third-graders, and 86 percent of Tennessee's second-graders scored above average in the most recent testings.

However, education officials often neglect to explain that 1987 students are not ranked against their contemporaries, but against a norm based on a select group of students who took the test as many as eight years ago.

Thus when compared with their contemporaries, West Virginia third-graders had the lowest CTBS math scores of any third-graders tested statewide, even though they scored at the seemingly "above average" 54th percentile.

Douglas believed federal agents tried to plant marijuana on ranch

WASHINGTON (AP) — The late Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas suspected federal agents of trying to plant marijuana at his ranch and feared that a Pennsylvania mob might lynch him for his role in the Rosenberg spy case.

Those and other glimpses of the personal life of Douglas, who in 36 years on the high court built a reputation as a fierce defender of individual liberties, emerge from "The Douglas Letters."

The book, edited by Virginia Commonwealth University history professor Melvin I. Urofsky, offers insights on Douglas' views on foreign and domestic affairs, constitutional freedoms and political realities.

Personal letters included in the collection reveal fascinating glimpses of Douglas, who retired from the court in 1975 and died in 1980.

Douglas, in a 1970 letter to two of his Cascade Mountains ranch neighbors, wrote that he suspected federal agents spotted on his land were "planting marijuana with the prospect of a nice big TV-covered raid in July or August."

"I forgot to tell you that this gang in power (the Nixon administration) is not just in search of the truth. They are 'search and destroy' people."

Douglas, who retired from the court in 1975 and died in 1980, continued that he wasn't even sure what marijuana looked like or whether it would grow in the harsh climate of the central Washington Cascades.

In an angry letter to Defense Secretary Robert McNamara in 1967, Douglas demanded that Air Force planes stop producing sonic booms over the Cascades because it was spooking horses.

Douglas wrote McNamara that the Air Force reaction to the complaints had been "callous."

"I assure you, Mr. Secretary, that your 'villagers here are not as voiceless and impotent as your 'villagers' in Vietnam," Douglas said.

In a letter to Robert Lynd in 1959, Douglas recalled the "volatile atmosphere" around the country when he issued a stay in the case of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, who were executed in 1953 for espionage.

"The atmosphere seems to be as inflammable as that in a gasoline plant," Douglas said in his letter to Lynd, who along with his wife had done the Midtown sociological surveys.

Douglas said he had received one letter from some western acquaintances who promised a "lynching party when I reached that part of the country" and described a mob that surrounded him outside a Pennsylvania motel.

"That was the only real mob I had ever seen face-to-face and I thought surely they were going to move into action," Douglas wrote. "But they broke forth into loud cheers and applause."

In other letters and memoranda, Douglas: —Urged that the Sierra Club launch a campaign to have a plaque installed on Mount Hood commemorating the man who vetoed the idea of putting a chair lift to the top of the Oregon peak.

—Revealed that he was visited by several "gentlemen from our Central Intelligence Agency" who were "preparing a list of things that they would have me look into" during a 1950 trip to Iran.

Urofsky was given access to the Douglas papers by Cathleen Douglas Stone, the justice's last wife. The book is published by Adler & Adler Publishers, Inc., of Bethesda, Md.

Conditions worsening, ex-hostage says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Beirut hostage David Jacobsen says things are getting worse for the eight Americans who remain captive in Lebanon.

Jacobsen told a news conference Thursday that he had received his information from sources in government and the Middle East. He did not identify the sources.

The 56-year-old Huntington Beach, Calif., man, who headed American University Hospital in Beirut before his 17 months of captivity, urged Americans not to forget the hostages on Thanksgiving Day.

"We just wanted people to remember when they sit down and eat Thanksgiving dinner with their families that there are eight decent Americans being held hostage for no apparent reason," Jacobsen said.

To dramatize his point, Jacobsen displayed chains similar to the ones his Moslem extremist captors used on him before he was freed Nov. 2, 1986.

Washington would understand sudden scramble for power

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Harold Washington made politics his life, and those who knew him say he would understand the scramble for power that has followed his death.

"I am sure the mayor would not have been surprised that there would be maneuvering for power at such a time — and it's definitely going on," said Alton Miller, who served as Washington's chief spokesman.

Within hours of the mayor's fatal heart attack Wednesday, phone lines were humming as powerbrokers grappled with the question of succession.

"I wouldn't call it anything frenetic like a feeding frenzy," Miller said Thursday.

But the stakes are high.

An acting mayor, who would head the nation's third-largest city until regular municipal elections in 1989, could be chosen as soon as Tuesday, when the City Council is scheduled to meet for the first time since Washington died. The city's first black mayor died at age 65 just six months into his second four-year term.

The off-stage politicking is "going on fast and furiously, and it may not be settled by Tuesday — the situation's much too fluid to predict right now," said political analyst Don Rose, who worked in Washington's spring re-election campaign.

"They probably started in on it an hour before the mayor was pronounced dead," Rose said. "I've heard of dozens of small meetings between aldermen, and there seems to be another one every two hours or so."

Vice Mayor David Orr was quietly sworn in as interim mayor Thursday until the council makes its choice, but the alderman said at a news conference that he would not be in the running for acting mayor.

Among those considered in the running for acting mayor are Aldermen Timothy Evans, Eugene Sawyer, linked more to the regular Democratic organization than to Washington's reform administration; and Richard Mell, a white aspirant whose opposition to the late mayor subsided with Washington's re-election.

City officials had said they were uncertain how long an acting mayor would serve. There had been speculation that the council's choice could serve out the remainder of Washington's term until 1991 or a special election early next year.

"We think the law is pretty clear," Orr said Thursday, referring to the 1989 election.

Washington's body lay in state at City Hall, and was to be buried Monday.

Lackluster Christmas shopping season forecast

NEW YORK (AP) — The Christmas shopping season that begins today will probably get off to a slow start, hurting retailers who traditionally get half their profits from holiday spending, analysts say.

"I think it's going to be lousy," said Robert Buchanan of L.F. Rothschild & Co. Inc. "I think the consumer is not in a buying mood because of very meager growth in real disposable income along with a dose of fright caused by the stock market crash."

Analysts said their negative predictions also stem from the fact that consumer spending has not picked up this month after being slow all year while Americans paid off heavy installment debt.

"People have been extremely pessimistic," said Jeffrey B. Edelman, an analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. "Consumer spending is drifting sideways."

"I don't think there's reason for alarm, but I don't think there is reason to be ebullient," said Edelman, predicting sales would be mediocre.

Consumer spending, considered an important barometer of the nation's economic well-being, accounts for two-thirds of the gross national product. The gross national product is the total value at retail prices of all goods and services produced by the U.S. economy.

A survey by the Conference Board, a business research organization, indicated that Americans don't plan to cut back their Christmas spending. More pessimistic analysts such as Buchanan said sales could decline from last year after being adusted for inflation.

Two Americans among 16 killed in massacre

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Anti-government rebels massacred 16 whites, including two Americans and a Briton, on two farms run by Pentecostal missionaries, fellow preachers and the government said today.

Home Minister Enos Nkala said the victims included five children, five women and six men. Colleagues of the missionaries said two children escaped the Wednesday night massacre in Matabeleland province, in western Zimbabwe.

It was the bloodiest attack on whites since black-ruled Zimbabwe gained independence from Britain seven years ago and became black-ruled Zimbabwe.

Nkala, who is in charge of police, said the missionaries and their children were bound by the wrists and butchered with axes by a gang of about 20 armed men.

The gunmen then torched their communal houses on the two farms, New Adam's and Olive Tree, before fleeing into the bush.

"These were innocent missionaries, white people, engaged in production, talking about peace," Nkala said. "They were people we so much value."

Earlier reports from the victims' colleagues in the area said a black farm worker was killed. Nkala made no mention of this.

Nkala said the gang was led by Gayigusu, an anti-government rebel whose name means "grind the bush" in the local Ndebele language.

He said the gang appeared to have staged the massacre on behalf of squatters who had been ordered by the government to vacate the missionaries' farms, southeast of the Matabeleland provincial capital of Bulawayo.

The squatters' leader, Charles Masuku, had warned the missionaries they would "not eat another meal," Nkala said.

He refused to identify the victims and would not answer questions from reporters.

Simon Rhodes, an Assemblies of God minister living in Bulawayo and who formerly stayed with the missionaries, identified the two dead Americans as David Emerson, 35, and Karen Sharon Iversdahl, about 34, both of Montana.

He said Emerson and Ms. Iversdahl, whose hometowns he did not know, had planned to marry in a few weeks. He identified the Briton as Jean Campbell, 56, of Britain.

Rhodes said the rest of the victims were Zimbabweans and identified them as Jerry Keightley, 40, his wife, Marian, 39, their daughters Deborah, 16, and Glynis, 14, and son Barnabas, 18 months.

He also said David Marais, 38, his wife Gaynor, 27, and their son Benjamin, 6 weeks; Penelope Lovett, 28; Hazel Russell, 46, were among the victims.

Rhodes said the Marais' 6-year-old son, Matthew, escaped through a window and slept in the bush, where he was found by security forces on Thursday.

Mrs. Russell's daughter, Laura, 13, was spared by the gunmen and ordered to take a note to authorities, Rhodes said.

Nkala read extracts from the note in jumbled English. The note said the killers were "Marxist-Leninist fighters" prepared to "fight to the last man" to drive "Western, capitalist-orientated people from the country."

The note also accused Prime Minister Robert Mugabe and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of acting contrary to the "people's revolution" and charged Mugabe with leading "a bloody, barbaric system."

The note claimed the government had massacred 60,000 members of opposition leader Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union (Patriotic Front) party.

Nkomo has long disavowed links to the rebels and has urged his supporters in Matabeleland to report the rebels to authorities.

Nkomo family members, contacted in Bulawayo, said he was on a visit to England.

Mugabe led the former white-ruled British colony of Rhodesia to independence as black-governed Zimbabwe in 1980, after he and Nkomo led two separate guerrilla armies in a seven-year war. After independence, hundreds of Nkomo loyalists returned to Matabeleland province, and have been blamed for killing hundreds of civilians.

Israeli leaders vow to punish guerrilla group

KIRYAT SHMONA, Israel (AP) — Israeli leaders vowed to avenge an attack by a hang-glider guerrilla that left six soldiers dead. A Syrian-based group claimed responsibility and Israel said Syria also bears some of the blame.

Meanwhile, an Israeli army officer investigating the infiltration near the Lebanese border said it appeared the guerrilla could have been stopped at the main gate of the army camp he attacked, but a guard apparently did not act in time.

The 10-member inner Cabinet of senior ministers held an emergency meeting Thursday to consider Israel's response to the attack.

"We believe that the attack in northern Israel was carried out by the organization of Ahmed Jibril and we will do everything we can to punish him," the Itim news agency quoted Foreign Minister Shimon Peres as saying Thursday.

Gen. Ehud Barak, the deputy commander in chief of the army, also blamed Jibril's organization, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command for the attack. He told reporters that "in due course they will pay the price."

In the bloodiest infiltration from Lebanon in nearly a decade, a guerrilla flew a motorized hang glider from Lebanon and landed in northern Israel Wednesday night. The guerrilla launched a rifle-and-grenade ambush on a passing army truck, then attacked a military outpost.

He killed six soldiers and wounded seven others before being shot dead. Israeli soldiers wounded a civilian who they mistook for a guerrilla.

On Thursday Israeli troops tracked down and killed the pilot of a second glider. He had been shot down in southern Lebanon the night before but hid out until morning, the army command said.

Jibril's organization, a Syrian-based splinter group of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said Thursday it was responsible for the attack.

It issued a communique in Damascus, the capital of Syria, saying five commandos flying hang gliders took part in the attack. One of the pilots was killed, another captured, and three returned safely to base, the communique said.

PLO chief Yasser Arafat ordered his forces in Lebanon on full alert in case of possible Israel reprisal attacks, a PLO statement said.

Latin American presidents discuss mutual problems

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Eight Latin American presidents began searching today for a common approach to a vexing foreign debt problem that has stunted the economies of their countries, led to social unrest and in some cases threatened their rule.

Alan Garcia, the combative president of Peru, set the tone for the meeting upon his arrival, calling on his colleagues to "stand up to the dictatorship of a single world currency," a clear reference to the American dollar.

"Foreign debt is the most dramatic danger that troubles the economies of our people," said Garcia, who earned the enmity of international lenders by limiting payment of his country's $14.5 billion debt to 10 percent of its export earnings.

"I am convinced the salaries of our people, the prices of our products and the expenditures of our governments are influenced by the foreign debt," Garcia said, adding:

"It constitutes the greatest challenge and also ... could cause an historic rebellion of the people of the continent. Now is the time for Latin America to act."

The leaders arrived at this Pacific coastal resort Thursday afternoon and began their discussions a few hours later at a private dinner at the plush Las Brisas Hotel overlooking Acapulco Bay.

They were greeted individually at the city's seaside airport by their host, President Miguel de la Madrid of Mexico, given a 21-gun salute by a battery of army howitzers, and driven to their mountaintop hotel amid tight security. Their informal dinner was strictly private.

Novelist says literary prizes 'happy accidents'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican author Carlos Fuentes, fresh from winning the top Spanish-language literary prize, said in an interview published here Thursday that such honors are happy accidents.

"Literary prizes are happy accidents," he said in the phone interview from Boston with the left-leaning Uno mas Uno newspaper. "Or, if you'd like, accidental happinesses."

Fuentes spends much of his time outside of Mexico. He currently is a literature professor at Harvard, where he learned Wednesday about his winning of the Spanish Ministry of Culture's Miguel de Cervantes prize.

But he said in the interview, "I visit (Mexico) regularly. I go to places where no one goes. I talk with the common people more than with the intellectuals."

Fuentes also was named earlier this year as a top candidate for the Nobel Prize for literature, along with Mexican poet and essayist Octavio Paz.

Paz, who was the first Mexican writer to win the Cervantes prize in 1981, described Fuentes as being "the most complete and of the most universal talent in this Mexican end of century."

He also said, "I hold his sayings in esteem because in him the words are alive; they are true characters in his works, characters of flesh and blood."

Uno mas Uno, or One plus One, carried the extensive interview with Fuentes on its front page.

First Thoughts.

At First Assembly of God we have much to be thankful for. We thank God, our Father, for giving us His Son, and through Him eternal life, forgiveness, and love. We give thanks to God for placing us here in Pampa, Texas a community that we love and serve. We are thankful for a loving group of people who make up our body and the "First Family".

An finally, we are thankful for this city and its people as they have joined together in support of all those affected by the Celanese disaster. We too pledge our prayers and support during this time of rebuilding. May God bless you and keep you during this time and as in Phil. 4:19, "Supply all of your needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Our hearts are with you...

West Texas museum boasts record long horns

By SARAH LUMAN
Big Spring Herald

BIG SPRING (AP)—Big Spring's Heritage Museum boasts its collection holds the world's largest set of Texas longhorn steer horns—and now "The Guinness Book of World Records" for 1988 features the museum's prize.

Curator Angela Way displays the book on the counter just inside the door. "We're on page 88, under mammals," she says, opening the lavishly illustrated volume.

On the page is a color photograph of the 10-foot-6-inch span of horns, balanced beside Katie Grimes, the president of the museum's board of trustees. The horns' ivory-marbled length extends nearly twice her full height. She estimates their weight at 40 pounds.

"The collection (of horns) is our newest permanent exhibit," explains Ms. Grimes, standing in the shadows of the 52 pairs of mounted horns in the museum's specially-renovated Longhorn Room.

Longhorns hang in rows from the upper walls of the two-story-deep room in a breathtaking walk-in display. Each pair has been cleaned with glass shards and hand-polished to the brilliance of gemstone marble.

The horns are mounted in hand-tooled leather, Ms. Way said. She said the width of the leather mountings duplicates the width of the steer's head that carried the respective horns.

Like the old range cattle from which they came, the horns vary in appearance. Many are marbled in shades of ivory, cream or silver. Others are tipped or swirled with ebony and russet.

Fifty pairs are symmetrical, sweeping steer horns; above the entrance hangs an intimidating pair of Brahma bull horns, one of only two sets of bull horns in the collection.

Although the world record horns are exceptional, several pairs of horns in the collection come close to them in sweep.

Ms. Way said the horns have been on exhibit in the Heritage Museum for about four years.

To keep the mounted horns in prime condition, the museum maintains the entire room at a constant temperature of 70 degrees Fahrenheit, Ms. Way said, and a relative humidity of 50 percent. The horns also are coated with a special protective wax.

"It's a lot like the wax you would use on your car, only harder," Ms. Way said. "And about five or 10 times more costly."

Ms. Way said that before the museum began using the conservator's wax, the horns used to be cleaned and polished with saddle soap—a laborious chore.

"A year and a half or two years ago, we had them down and dusted them," Ms. Grimes said. "We had two men busy all day for three full days just taking them down, dusting them and putting them back up."

The horns graced steers raised in South and East Texas, Ms. Way said, and were collected by the late H.C. Clay Read and his son, Earle A. Read.

The exceptions are the two sets of bull horns. Horns not collected by the Reads, who at one time exhibited the horns in the Read Hotel, were donated by Ted O. Groehl Sr. Earle Read also donated a chair—made of horns—which won a blue ribbon at a World's Fair in New York.

The museum's literature quotes Earle Read on the value of the collection:

Port to get $3 million explosion settlement

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP)—The Port of Corpus Christi will get $3 million for property damages suffered in a 1981 grain elevator explosion as part of a settlement reached with a fumigator manufacturer, officials say.

The port had sought $36 million in damages from Degesch GmbH, Degesch America Inc. and Phostoxin Sales Inc. After a week of testimony in state district court, attorneys announced Oct. 14 that a settlement had been reached.

The terms of the agreement were not made public until Tuesday, when the settlement was filed in Judge Joaquin Villarreal's court. Degesch and the port agreed to the $3 million settlement.

The port settled separately on Oct. 14 with Phostoxin Sales Inc. for $1.25 million.

Council told citizens should hear complaints

DALLAS (AP)—The president of the Dallas Police Association predicts a court fight if the City Council goes along with a recommendation that a citizens committee be created to investigate complaints against officers.

"In some cases, we believe that would violate an officer's civil rights," Sgt. J.K. Ramsey said of a proposal that the committee have its own investigative staff and limited subpoena power.

"The first time they stumble, we'll end up in court," Ramsey said.

A council subcommittee has recommended the creation of a 15-member citizens committee and the Public Safety Committee has suggested that the police department review its controversial deadly force policy within 90 days.

Those recommendations come at a time when the police department has destroyed or lost documents considered crucial in the case of a Dallas officer who accidentally shot and killed an Addison officer during a joint drug raid,

Holiday glow

About 175,000 people turned out Thursday night for the annual Christmas lights ceremony at the Country Club Plaza in Kansas City. More than 150,000 bulbs along 47 miles of wiring light up the shopping district from Thanksgiving to New Year's.

Railey to move to California, friends say

DALLAS (AP) — A former Methodist minister who attempted suicide and eventually surrendered his credentials as a minister after a brutal attack left his wife comatose will move to California, friends and acquaintances say.

Walker Railey has decided to move to California to pursue job opportunities, friends said Thursday. Railey was minister of the First United Methodist Church of Dallas prior to the attack on his wife, Margaret Railey, about seven months ago.

The friends said Railey is spending the Thanksgiving holidays with friends in Houston before moving to California. They said he sold the home where his wife was attacked.

Railey determined that it would be almost impossible to find employment in the Dallas area following extensive publicity about the attack.

friends said. Railey's situation was complicated by testimony from Dallas psychologist Lucy Papillon, who told a Dallas County grand jury she was romantically involved with Railey for more than a year before the attack.

The former minister surrendered his credentials as a minister after receiving his last paycheck from the church in September.

Police have not called Railey a suspect in the attack on his wife, his lawyer, Doug Mulder, has said Railey is the only suspect police have.

The former minister's move to California will not significantly affect the investigation into the attack, according to Police homicide Lt. Ron Waldrop.

He's refused to talk to us while he's been here, so his leaving shouldn't have any impact on our investigation," Waldrop said.

Mont Belvieu is literally on the move

MONT BELVIEU (AP) — This small town is slowly moving away from the giant salt dome where 120 million barrels of volatile liquefied gases are stored underground.

Many families have sold their homes and moved away from the dome, and four churches have relocated to a spot about two miles east of downtown Mont Belvieu. On Dec. 5, voters will be asked to approve a bond issue that would move the Mont Belvieu civic center complex to the same new area.

For years, the West Chambers County community had been rocked by gas leaks, fires and explosions. Propane, ethane, butane, propylene and other hydrocarbons are stored in the underground caverns hewn out of the Barber Hills Salt Dome, said to be the largest such storage facility in the nation.

Pressure for a buyout plan mounted after a liquefied petroleum gas pipeline ruptured in a series of explosions and fires that killed two men more than two years ago.

A consortium of 13 industries put up $20 million for a buyout plan, Charles Lashley of Texas Eastern Corp., which has managed the buyout program, said 90 percent of those who received buyout offers accepted them.

The town's new destination is along Eagle Drive, a north-south artery that cuts across the coastal plain between Interstate 10 and Farm Road 565.

The First United Methodist Church stands there. The new Assembly of God Church, the post office and the West Chambers County Courthouse Annex also are in the immediate area and several schools are about a half-mile away.

"I think it's a very positive direction for the city," said developer Gordon Speers, who was born in Mont Belvieu.

But Mayor Fred Miller and city council members believe there are still issues that need to be addressed by industry officials including the exclusion of commercial properties and undeveloped land in the buyout plan. City leaders also think the consortium should make second offers to property owners that turned down the first proposal, and that there are several other properties that should have been included in the buyout plan.

"There are people still living on 'The Hill,' and we have got to do everything we can so they don't live with that fear anymore," Miller said.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

We all thrill to a...
FAMILIAR TUNE

It is so soothing, comforting, and pleasing to listen to our favorite tunes when played by capable artists. These tunes can make our minds wander back to pleasant memories of days gone by, and also awake us to new joys. Each Sunday we have the opportunity to be thrilled by the preaching of God's word, and the story of God's great love for us. Attend church Sunday and enjoy worshipping God with others.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Then I (Nehemiah) said to them, "You see the trouble we are in: Jerusalem lies in ruins, and its gates have been burned with fire. Come, let us rebuild the wall of Jerusalem, and we will no longer be in disgrace." I also told them about the gracious hand of my God upon me and what the king had said to me.

They replied, "Let us start rebuilding." So they began this good work. (Nehemiah 2:17-18 NIV).

My husband works for Hoechst Celanese. This is my third attempt to write about the explosion, but seeing the results in print has been too depressing.

Like everyone else, I've been numb with shock and bewilderment and bogged down in uncertainty. In an effort to write a column which would lift rather than depress, I began to search for some beauty amidst the horror.

When I directed my mind in the right direction, I didn't have far to look, for I haven't seen our town so united in spirit, effort, and pure, unadulterated love since the economy crunch hit several years ago.

The "love notes" displayed on business billboards and in the newspaper evince the attitude of supportiveness and concern. Donations of money and supplies have been made with the same anxious willingness as a family pooling its resources.

A town rally is being organized as a tremendous rallying of spirit and bulwarking. And friends and neighbors reaching out to people on a one-to-one basis will eventually be the healing balm for many.

We've a mighty rebuilding job to do whether the chemical plant is rebuilt or not. We've broken people and damaged lives to love back together, and our townspeople have shown we are willingly bent to the task.

May God continue to grace us with open hearts and cohesiveness of purpose. May He re-enforce our community spirit with a lasting sensitivity and a powerful determination to carry us through the long haul. And may God warm our efforts with rays of mercy. Amen.

Groom church schedules parish mission program

GROOM - The Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic Church in Groom is making preparations for its Parish Mission program in December.

Scheduled for Dec. 13-17, the mission will be conducted by Father John La Bauve, S.V.D. of the Society of the Divine Word.

Ordained to the priesthood in 1951, Father La Bauve has served as pastor, administrator of a parish and missionary priest in various parts of Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

His preaching headquarters are at St. Nicholas Church in St. Louis, Mo.

Theme for the mission is "Getting to Know Jesus."

In addition to his preaching the mission, La Bauve also will be available for the Sacrament of Penance.

Religion Roundup

HOUSTON (AP) — Full-scale Catholic weddings no longer are allowed for cohabiting couples under a new policy of the Galveston-Houston diocese.

Unless they agree to live separately for six months before the wedding, only a simpler, smaller church wedding will be allowed, the diocese says.

"It challenges them, for the good of their marriage, to cease living together," says a diocesan priest, the Rev. Dan Scheel. He says reaction to the new guidelines from pastors has been favorable.

Some other Catholic dioceses have similar policies.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Southern Baptist Public Affairs committee has petitioned the denomination to end its 50-year participation in the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs.

That inter-Baptist agency which lobbies on church-state matters is made up of nine Baptist denominations.

The separate Southern Baptist committee was set up under fundamentalist control in the wake of last summer's Southern Baptist Convention at which the joint committee has been increasingly criticized.

At 40, University of St. Thomas is still firm in beliefs

By JULIA DUIN
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP)—Tucked into a pocket in the heart of the Montrose area, the University of St. Thomas celebrates its 40th anniversary this year.

Begun in the years following World War II, this Roman Catholic liberal arts university had an elegant beginning in its first building, the three-story T.P. Lee Estate, constructed in 1912 by Texas oilman T.P. Lee and equipped with a library, music room, many fireplaces and a ballroom on the third floor. Its first freshman class of 42 full-time and 28 part time students arrived in the fall of 1947.

The university, 3812 Montrose, has always leaned toward a conservative orthodox Roman Catholic perspective. Even in 1969, when the university's powerful benefactors, John and Dominique DeMenil, urged the school to lean toward a more liberal ecumenical orientation, the school suffered the loss of potentially millions of dollars in DeMenil funds rather than change the nature of its character.

During last year's fracas involving Charles Curran, the Catholic University of America professor who became widely known for dissenting from traditional Catholic teachings, the theology faculty at St. Thomas sent a letter to German Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, head of the Congregation for the Doctrine of Faith, in support of the decision to remove Curran's license to teach theology.

"The University of St. Thomas," said the Rev. Michael Miller, theology department chairman, "is not a center for dissent."

It's not just a center for Catholics, either. Just 60 percent of the university's 1,600-member student body is Roman Catholic.

The university's president is the Rev. Frank Bredeweg, 59, a member of the Basilian Fathers, a teaching order in the church.

"Theology is part of our reason for existing," Bredeweg said. "About half of our majors are liberal arts, and the other half are career-oriented, but even an accounting major gets somewhat of a combined degree (with theology)."

Bredeweg, who began as acting president in June 1985, becoming president in January 1986, has a formidable challenge ahead of him: making a school built around a framework of absolutes work in an age of relativism.

He got an earful of how to do that a few weeks ago while in New Orleans, listening to Pope John Paul II address leaders of Catholic higher education at Xavier University. As a former college professor talking to other professors, the pope advised his listeners to give students a moral framework for life, to wed theology studies to church teachings and to preserve individual schools' identity as a Catholic institution.

"I'm glad he did it," said Miller, who also attended the pope's lecture. "We've maintained our Catholicism. We teach Catholic theology, not just religious studies." That is quite a task, considering that in New York state, Catholic universities had to give up their rights to be called Catholic institutions if they wanted to qualify for state funding, he added.

St. Thomas University is privately funded. It raised $600,000 during its first fund-raising campaign in 1948. Today's budget is $8.1 million, and funds are being raised under the aegis of a Friends Campaign, instituted by Bredeweg, which raised $1 million two years ago for the school's operating fund and $2 million for its endowment.

The university, named after St. Thomas Aquinas, the brilliant 13th-century Italian theologian whose treatise "Summa Theologica" laid the groundwork for much of Western thought, came about after many years of planning.

Three men — Galveston-Houston Bishop C.E. Byrne, Houston Chronicle publisher George Cottingham and the Rev. T.P. O'Rourke—had long discussed the need for a Roman Catholic university in Houston. The Basilian Fathers had planned to found such an institution since 1929, but World War II intervened, and not until 1945 did Byrne announce that St. Thomas was due to open soon.

Houston oilman George Strake obtained the necessary papal blessing from Pope Pius XII for the new university in March 1946, and in January 1947 the board of trustees, chaired by Cottingham, met for the first time. That spring, professors were interviewed, a charter was written, and students were admitted that fall.

Since then, Houston has become more of an ethnic city. The university has developed an international studies program for companies, which trains employees on how to survive in foreign countries. Bredeweg says he wants to reach out more to the black, Vietnamese and Hispanic communities.

"A lot of people are looking for answers because fundamentalism is hot in the United States," Miller said, "but the fundamentalists are offering answers at the expense of questioning and probing."

Students who have grown up in the relativistic 1970s and 1980s still want an education with a theological undergirding, he added.

"We introduce them to patterns of thinking," he said, "such as: what is the great idea; what does it mean to be good, who is the virtuous person; and what is the best kind of government?"

"We're much more open than a secular university that excludes religious faith as being too narrow, personal or impolite," Miller added. "The fact that there are some answers does not impede learning. Ours is an environment where there's no limit to the range of questions, but they're asked from the point of view of one who's a believer. A lot of people like relativism because they are jaded already and they have no passion for the truth."

Evangelist to lead services for Apostolic Faith Chapel

Evangelist Calvin Springer of Waco will be leading special services beginning Sunday at the Pampa Chapel of the Apostolic Faith, 711 E. Harvester.

The services will last from Sunday, Nov. 29, through Sunday, Dec. 6.

Sunday service times will be at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. and weeknight services will be daily at 7 p.m.

Special singing will be provided by gospel singing group Evergreen, comprised of Russell Ball, Buffalo, Okla.; Janae Harris, Bayard, Neb.; and Wendel Christenson, Kingsmill.

A church dinner will follow the Sunday morning service on Dec. 6, Rev. Austin Sutton, pastor, said.

Springer began his ministry in 1951. He pastored two churches for a period of more than 20 years and has been traveling in evangelistic ministry since 1973.

He served four years as vice president and seven years as president of the Full Gospel Evangelistic Association, headquartered at Houston.

Springer travels as an evangelist, ministering in youth camps, conventions, camp meetings, evangelistic crusades and marriage seminars. He has traveled throughout the United States as far north as Alaska and south into Mexico, Nicaragua and the Bahamas.

He now resides near Waco, where he has his headquarters from which he and his wife travel in evangelistic ministry.

Rev. Sutton invited the public to attend the special services in the coming week.

First Baptist to host 'Singles Happening'

Marilyn Nash of Phoenix, Ariz., will highlight the "Singles Happening" Dec. 4-5 at the First Baptist Church, 203 N. West

Events will begin at 7 p.m. Friday, Dec. 4, in the auditorium. Sessions will resume at 8:15 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 5, and will include a brunch and a special for children of single parents.

Featured speaker Nash, a native of Wheeler, is currently serving on the staff of North Phoenix Baptist Church at Phoenix.

Also appearing on the program are Bob and Karon Hamlin. They have been associated with singles ministries in Amarillo and Canyon. "Try Giving Yourself" is the theme for the conference.

Child care will be provided for children 10 years old and younger.

Pre-registration is $10. For additional information, call the church office at 669-1155.

Give gifts with a genealogical theme

Only four weeks until Christmas. Are you ready for your family celebration? Does it include exchanging gifts?

It's time to think about a gift related to the family tree. Suggestions are endless this year as more companies market lines for the genealogist.

You might want to complete a lineage chart. Purchase one from any of the mail order companies or design your own.

Always popular is the family tree with the ancestors on the branches, and if it is your tree, add your children by placing their names under the tree. Names written on fallen acorns or apples will extend the lineage for you.

Aprons, small appliance covers, hot pads or tea towels with the family lineage make excellent gifts not only for Grandmother but aunts or cousins. The liquid paints or cross stitch are the most common, and if you are really adventurous, try a block print. Block prints are easily made using a potato, sponge or cork to carve the tree design, and the ink rolls instead of pads lead to a no-mess craft.

Photographers might want to take that picture now to enclose with Christmas cards. If it is a family picture, remember the family pet.

Another idea is to include some type of item that tells something about the interest or hobby of the individual. My favorite last year was the picture of the family with each member and their favorite sports equipment. Golf clubs, tennis racket, a chess set or a jump rope were some of the items. Design your own card with one of the family trees or lineage charts.

Add books, maps, pictures and camera equipment to the list of possibilities. Treat yourself! A gift "to ME, from ME" creates chuckles from others but insures receiving something that you have wanted but did not splurge to purchase.

How does your family celebrate the holiday? Please send a brief description to me for my Christmas column. The address is: Gena Walls, 205 Admiral's Walk Drive, St. Marys, Ga. 31558.

JOHN ERICKSON

'Hank the Cowdog' creator to speak at realtors' banquet

Nationally known author and humorist John Erickson will be the speaker for the Pampa Board of Realtors' annual banquet, Thursday, Dec. 3 at Pampa Country Club.

Publishing through his own company, Maverick Books, Erickson has written the popular "Hank the Cowdog" series about the humorous antics of a canine head of ranch security. The first book of the series, "Hank the Cowdog," was produced as a animated feature for CBS Story-break.

In addition to the Hank series, Erickson has written a number of books dealing with the traditions and life of the cowboy. He examines the day-to-day job of the modern Texas cowboy from the point of view of a man that has been a cowhand in the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandles.

Erickson has also published a collection of cowboy humor and tales. "The Devil in Texas," "Cowboys are Partly Human," "Alkali County Tales" and "Cowboys Are a Separate Species" have received wide acclaim throughout the Western ranch country. He has developed a radio program around the book

"Cowboys Are Partly Human" and another for "Hank the Cowdog."

Erickson has written the only authorized biography of Ace Reid, the creator of "Cowpokes" cartoons. This combination of two of the most popular humorists of our day resulted in a book that brings the comic genius of Ace Reid to life.

The latest release from Erickson is the ninth book in the "Hank the Cowdog" series, "Hank the Cowdog and the Case of the Halloween Ghost." Erickson has 21 published books, and there are more than 100,000 Hank books in print since 1983.

Erickson is a native of Perryton and lives there with his wife, Kristine, and their three children, Scot, Ashley and Mark. He has spoken to groups all over the United States and Canada. He has lectured at the Library of Congress and is a member of the Texas Institute of Letters and the Philosophical Society of Texas. He is a board member of the Western Writers of America.

The public is welcome to attend the banquet. Tickets are $11 per person. For more information, contact any local realtor.

Christmas wreath shows holiday spirit

By BETH COTTEN

The spirit of the holidays is something more likely homegrown than store-bought. Not that shopping isn't fun — and not that you can't find wonderful, exciting gifts and decorations in the stores.

But home-centered, homemade activities are a great way to savor the full flavor of the season.

Our family gets together for at least two or three evenings during the early part of the season to make ornaments and decorations. It's always entertaining and enjoyable — sometimes it's even the high point of the holidays.

One idea that came out of a family gathering was the Christmas JOY wreath. It's easy to make, and it is a bright, cheery, unusual way to greet visitors with a true message of the season.

The wreath is the word JOY cut from a hard foam board, about 12 x 15 inches overall, padded and covered with fabrics and trims. Our detailed plans include full-size patterns, a materials list and complete, illustrated instructions.

To really get into the swing of things in time, order our Christ-

Gifts should be a joy to give, receive

DEAR READERS: Well, are the Christmases getting closer together or does it just seem that way? It's time to start preparing for the holidays again, so do yourselves a favor and do your Christmas or Hanukkah shopping early.

Here's my annual — slightly revised — column on holiday shopping.

If you're wondering what to give Aunt Olivia or Grandpa, who doesn't go out much, let me tell you what not to give them: Forget dusting powder, aftershave and cologne. (They probably have several unopened boxes gathering dust on their closet shelves.)

Grandpa doesn't need another necktie, and Aunt Sylvia doesn't really want any more brooches, necklaces, bracelets or earrings.

With the price of groceries so high, older folks who live alone on a fixed income would be delighted to receive a basket of goodies. Include small cans of salmon, chicken, ham, tuna, fruit, instant coffee, tea bags, crackers, cookies and instant soup mixes.

Older people who live in con-finer quarters do not need more "things" that are ornamental only. Don't send music boxes, statuettes or other bric-a-brac.

A truly thoughtful gift: postcards and some lined stationery with envelopes and a generous supply of postage stamps. (Enclose some felt-tip pens, too.)

A handy gift: an assortment of greeting cards for all occasions, so that they, too, can send birthday, anniversary, graduation, get-well and condolence cards to others.

Don't give a gift of clothing unless you're absolutely sure the size is right.

If you're tempted to pass along a scarf, purse, wallet or some little doodad you received three Christmases ago, please don't; the recipient will probably find it just as useless as you did. (Besides, you might get it back the year after next.)

If someone on your gift list is living on a pension, a check for any amount would be far more appreciated than some useless little trinket. Another thoughtful gift would be a year's subscription to a newspaper or magazine you are sure he or she will enjoy.

If you buy a gift on sale, be sure it's appropriate, since if the recipient tries to exchange it, he will be told, "Sorry, sale merchandise is not returnable."

Never give a pet to anyone unless you're absolutely sure a pet is wanted and will be properly cared for. And if you want to delight someone who considers his pet a "member of the family," include a tin or two of cat or dog food for the pet.

Don't give wine or liquor unless you're sure the recipients imbibe. Candy, nuts and fruitcake make wonderful gifts for those who aren't counting calories, but please have compassion for those who are, and lead them not into temptation. Also remember that many older people have difficulty chewing hard candies and nuts.

Instead of giving someone a gift with permission to "take it back and exchange it if it's not what you want," save yourself (and them) time and effort by giving gift certificates in the first place.

For those who maintain their own homes and apartments, consider a gift certificate for other types of service needed — window washing and rug cleaning. And don't forget certificates for the barber shop, beauty parlor, taxi rides or dinner out to a fine restaurant. And (don't laugh) a trip to the podiatrist!

Holiday time can be depressing for people who are alone, so if you know someone who might be alone and lonely, give him (or her) the best gift of all — an invitation to have a holiday meal with you and your family. Loneliness is the ultimate poverty.

Therapy aids women who love too much

By TANYA MADISON
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The subject of women who love too much has exploded onto the market in books and on television talk shows, but some say it is a behavioral pattern that has always existed.

"Women who love too much are a phenomenon about women's relationships of all times," said the Rev. Elizabeth Reed, a Methodist minister who leads several therapy groups for women. "It's catching on now because we've found a way to control it."

Co-dependency is the clinical name for women who love too much, who land in abusive or manipulative relationships because they lack the self-esteem to be sufficiently self-reliant.

Books about it have been around for about 10 years, Reed said, but the issue was focused by Robin Norwood's 1985 book, "Women Who Love Too Much," largely because of its title.

Co-dependency, which can lead to physical and mental abuse, is a learned behavior that is perpetuated in American society by the family, church and school, Reed said.

"Our parents teach us to be nice little girls ... to take care of others before we take care of ourselves," she said. She contends that women's personalities are molded this way as children, and many never develop their own self-identity.

"Women who look outside themselves for self-worth and identity seek reassurance from outside things and other people," she said. "They set themselves up for fear, guilt, confusion and hurt."

Co-dependency can manifest itself as chronic headaches, backaches, gastrointestinal problems and cancer, she said.

Men can also be co-dependent, but it's not as common as with women and is shown in other ways, Reed said. Men are more concerned with impression management, which is demonstrated in sports, on the job and on dates.

The Women's Diagnostic Center of the Mount Carmel Medical Center recently began a six-week seminar on co-dependency. The 15-person limit was reached so quickly that a second group was created. Most of the women who registered for the $45 seminar belong to other support groups, such as Children of Alcoholics, CHOICES for battered women or Incest Survivors Anonymous.

At the group's first meeting, several women clutched paperback copies of "Women Who Love Too Much," which is the name given the seminar. Two women had traveled 80 miles from Cambridge to attend.

As Reed described some primary characteristics of co-dependent women, participants nodded in agreement. They recognized relationship addiction, "clinging" relationships and the need to feel indispensable.

"Loving too much puts us out of touch with our own feelings because we keep wanting to please others," Reed told the group.

One woman — participants are not asked to identify themselves — said, "I've been in bad relationships and I keep making the same mistakes."

"I'm a child of an alcoholic mother, and now I'm married to an alcoholic," said another.

Trying to hold back tears, another woman told the group, "I was abused when I was a child and now my husband abuses me. But I still love him. I just want to know why."

Reed told the group that the only way to overcome co-dependency is to first understand and recognize it.

"The term co-dependency came out of an alcohol abuse context to describe the spouse of an alcoholic," she said. A number of books were written about alcoholics, but it wasn't until the mid-1970s that books began to appear describing partners of alcoholics and their problems.

"Most of us have an addiction to something, and women tend to have an addiction to relationships, even when they are bad," she said.

Co-dependents try to nurture their mate while denying themselves emotional and even physical well-being, Reed said. For example, many battered women stay with abusive partners.

However, symptoms can be displayed in less extreme ways, such as a mother who continues to pamper her adult children, fussing over them and discouraging them from leaving the nest, she said.

During the first few weeks of the seminar, Reed will discuss the characteristics of co-dependency and assess the co-dependency level of each participant. Then the women will learn to recognize when they are engaging in co-dependent behavior.

Book tells how to be a mensch

NEW YORK (AP) — "Raising Your Child To Be a Mensch" (Atheneum) is written by a rabbi, but you don't have to be Jewish to get the point of this book.

The term mensch, says author Neil Kurshan, rabbi of the Huntington Jewish Center in Huntington, N.Y., literally means a "person" or "man."

However, he explains, "it represents a moral ideal for all people, men and women alike. Kindness and decency transcend gender. A mensch brings a sense of responsibility to every undertaking and treats everyone fairly and justly."

"Menschlichkeit is the opposite of cruelty, pettiness and self-centeredness. It means being sensitive to other people's needs and seeking out ways to help them. It is acquired by living close to family and extending one's sense of obligation beyond the family to the broader community."

"I have an inexhaustible number of Catholic married nieces and nephews I'm going to give this book to," says John Cardinal O'Connor of New York, "so that I can look forward to dozens of grandniece and grandnephew mensches."

Aggies lasso 'Horns

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — It took a little help from the old guard and the new for the 15th ranked Texas Aggies to make their third straight trip to the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day.

Senior running back Keith Woodside broke 90 yards for a touchdown and freshman quarterback Bucky Richardson scored the game-winning touchdown with 4:33 to play, leading the Aggies to a 20-13 victory over the Texas Longhorns Thursday night.

Their combined efforts helped the Aggies, 9-2, win their third straight Southwest Conference title and host berth in the Cotton Bowl.

The Aggies will face Notre Dame in the New Year's Day game.

The Longhorns, 6-5, accepted a berth to play Pittsburgh in the Bluebonnet Bowl New Year's Eve.

"They seemed to want our quarterbacks to run the ball," said Richardson, whose 7-yard run put the Aggies ahead for good. "They did exactly like we thought they would do. I was wide open."

The victory sent the Aggies to the Cotton Bowl for the sixth time and cut Texas' series lead to 63-26-5.

Playoff hopes dim for 'Pokes

By DAVE GOLDBERG

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Minnesota Twins won baseball's World Series despite only the ninth-best record in baseball. The Minnesota Vikings have the best non-strike record in the NFL but will probably have to take the wild-card route to reach the Super Bowl.

The Vikings, 7-1 in games played by their regulars, just about assured themselves a wild-card playoff spot by beating the Dallas Cowboys 44-38 on Thursday. Darin Nelson's 24-yard touchdown run with 6:09 left in overtime gave Minnesota its fifth consecutive victory and put a severe crimp in Dallas' playoff hopes.

Minnesota, 7-4 overall because its replacement team went 0-3 during the 24-day NFL players strike, is now two games ahead of Dallas in the race one of the NFC's two wild-card playoff spots. New Orleans, 7-3, is the other likely wild card. With only four games remaining, the Vikings or Saints would have to fall apart for Dallas to have a chance.

The Vikings still have a mathematical chance of catching the Chicago Bears, who lead the NFC Central race by two games. A loss on Sunday to Green Bay would drop the Bears to 8-3, setting up a Dec. 6 showdown with the Vikings at Minneapolis.

"We're not 7-4, we're 7-1," yelled linebacker David Howard, but most of his teammates were more realistic.

"It's just one of those unfortunate things. It's a hole that we were in that we had to get out of," said defensive end Chris Doleman, who had three sacks, two of which caused fumbles.

"It's a hole we're in that we've got to get out of. Whatever happens, you've got to give us credit for getting this far."

"It's just something we have to put behind us," said Nelson, who had 118 yards on 16 carries and his first two touchdowns of the season.

The Vikings nearly let this game get away by three times allowing Dallas to come back from 14-point deficits. The last comeback occurred after Rick Fenney's 1-yard scoring run with 8:24 left gave Minnesota an apparently safe 38-24 lead.

Quarterback Danny White, who had his best game in two years despite an ailing right wrist, threw scoring passes of 14 and 18 yards to Mike Renfro, the latter with 2:08 left in regulation.

"I can't remember one that was as personally disappointing as this one. I lost the game," said a tearful White, who sat out last week's game because of problems with a wrist still aching after being broken last season.

"All I had to do was execute but I got brave too many times," White said, "and the defense can only cover up for you for so long."

Pampa JV girls win

Pampa defeated Sanford-Fritch 42-36 in a junior varsity girls' game played Tuesday night.

Schivonne Parker was top scorer for Pampa with 10 points. Traci Cash and Leslie Bailey each added nine points. Parker and Valerie Choate each had 10 rebounds.

It was first win after two losses for the Pampa JV girls.

Navarro College romps by Mesa Community College

By WALTER BERRY
AP Sports Writer

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Navarro College football Coach Bob McElroy says his Bulldogs had to be bullish runners if they wanted to beat Mesa Community College in the seventh annual Valley of the Sun Bowl here.

By the end of Thursday night's game, Navarro College had compiled a record 428 rushing yards in a 47-34 victory.

"We knew we had to run effectively to win and that's just what we did," McElroy said. "Mesa is a patient and scrappy team. We were fortunate to win the game because it could have gone either way."

Terrell Washington rushed for 200 yards and four touchdowns — both bowl records — while Roman Nelson had a record 77-yard scoring run during a wild third quarter to pace the Bulldogs, ranked 11th in the final regular-season national junior college poll.

Nelson's touchdown with 59 seconds remaining in the third quarter put the Bulldogs ahead to stay at 35-31.

Mesa Community closed the gap to 35-34 on Greg Fichter's 27-yard field goal 4:51 into the fourth quarter before Washington added a 37-yard touchdown run with 3:51 left and a 1-yard run with 1:09 remaining.

The victory gave Navarro College, of Corsicana, Texas, an 8-2-1 record while Mesa Community, appearing in its first bowl game since 1976, ended its season at 7-3-1.

It was the first time in four years that an Arizona team had not won the Valley of the Sun Bowl. Phoenix College won the last three under Ken Stites, now Mesa Community's head coach.

"Navarro was the most balanced team we faced all year," Stites said. "They knocked us off the line of scrimmage all night. We had to battle for everything we got in the game."

Down 17-14 at halftime, the Bulldogs took a 21-17 lead on Washington's 56-yard touchdown run 2:57 into the third quarter.

Michael Johnson, who threw four touchdown passes for Mesa Community, hit Kyle Ide from 34 yards out for a 24-21 lead 1:56 later.

Navarro College quarterback Jay Mondick answered with a 61-yard bomb to Eddie Brown to make it 28-24 before Johnson's 17-yard strike to Ide put the Thunderbacks back in front 31-28.

The 35-point third quarter was one of 10 records broken in the game.

Washington had his record-setting yardage on 18 carries. Delisle Williams added 112 yards and one touchdown on 21 carries and Nelson had 94 yards on 10 carries.

Coach Bill Kelley convinced the school president football needed to recruit out of state when the met privately a couple of weeks ago... Word is that Pittsburgh Pirate Board chairman John Galbreath is the mover and shaker who got Earle Bruce fired at Ohio State, Galbreath's alma mater. Meddling with athletic programs by domineering outside power-minded individuals has created similar mistakes at many universities, including West Texas State, which resulted in dismissals of football coach Joe Kerbel and basketball coach Ken Edwards...

Wasn't that Bubba Jennings' dad who pulled a good prank on Amarillo ISD athletic director Ed Lehnick? Jennings, calling from Clovis, made a bid for a coaching job in the Amarillo system under a false name after an overly enthusiastic fan claimed he could coach better than veteran Caprock mentor Ray Bassinger. Ask any knowledgeable observer and they will tell you Bassinger does more with his material than any coach in the Panhandle area, ON and OFF the football field... Idiotic as the $26 million contract the Spurs gave first-round draft choice David Robinson may seem, the ulterior motive may be to increase the value of the shaky franchise. Reportedly it could have been bought for as little as $20 million, but with Robinson signed the price has doubled for openers.

Amarillo isn't the only city with an identity problem. John Scovell of the Dallas Convention and Visitors Bureau says: "Other people don't know there's much of anything here besides tall buildings and the Dallas Cowboys. I wonder if Dallas wouldn't be more of a draw for tourists if they still thought we all wore spurs and 10-gallon hats and fought Indians..." Many people in San Diego are hoping the Chargers don't make it to the Super Bowl, to be hosted by that city. With a home team playing, businesses expect to lose around $20 million from revenues for hotel rooms, restaurants, rental cars, etc. which visitors would spend if two outside teams play.

Smith Holt, the secretary of education for the state of Oklahoma, has problems with Oklahoma University. "If we're going to have the No. 1 football team in the country, I would also like to have the No. 1 university academically in the country. We need to make people understand they need to be equally enthusiastic about academics. She (Holt's daughter) never gave much consideration to OU. She felt UT (University of Texas-Austin) would be more challenging. He (Holt's son) hasn't looked at any other school. (but Texas). If we can whip Texas in football, we ought to be able to whip them academically..." And how about this scouting report from DePauw defensive coach Ed Meyer about next opponent, Dayton U.: "Dayton has three weaknesses: (1) They have a small parking lot. (2) The candle power in the lighting is too weak, so they had to move the game to afternoon. (3) There aren't enough shower heads in the locker room." P.S. Dayton won, 23-21 as DePauw missed a field goal at the gun.

Chiefs snap losing streak

By The Associated Press

Winning may be reward enough for Kansas City, but quarterback Bill Kenney also is pleased with how the Chiefs broke a club-record nine-game losing streak.

With Kenney pumping new life into the offense after being sidelined for two games with a wrist injury, the Chiefs scored 17 points in the second quarter Thursday and went on to beat the Detroit Lions 27-20.

In Thursday's only other game, the Minnesota Vikings just about assured themselves a wild-card playoff spot by beating the Dallas Cowboys 44-38.

"I wasn't going to just sit on a lead," Kenney said. "Too many times in the past, we got ahead and we just sit down and run the ball, run the ball, run the ball. We can't do that."

Kansas City ran for 162 yards, including 87 from Herman Heard and 58 from Christian Okoye, and got 246 in the air as Kenney completed 18 of 26 passes for two touchdowns. Heard ran for a score.

The Chiefs' Nick Lowery had field goals of 52 and 54 yards.

Both clubs now are 2-9, worst in the NFL. The Atlanta Falcons, 2-8, play Sunday.

The Chiefs, whose offense had gone 13 quarters without scoring a touchdown, got a 7-yard scoring pass from Kenney to tight end Jonathan Hayes on their first possession.

Kenney's 11-yard scoring strike to Paul Coffman on the second play of the second quarter made it 14-0 and the Chiefs went on to lead 24-10 at the half.

Detroit quarterback Chuck Long completed 21 of 41 for 206 yards and threw a 10-yard touchdown pass to Gary Ellerson in the fourth quarter.

Karl Bernard, starting in place of injured Garry James, carried 20 times for 99 yards and ran 11 yards for a second-period touchdown.

Howard University seeks to halt playoffs

By PAUL PAGE Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Howard University, is in federal court today contending its football team was unfairly excluded when 16 others with inferior records were selected to compete in the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs.

Howard's suit seeks to halt the playoffs, scheduled to start on Saturday, until the court decides whether the Bison were illegally omitted.

Howard sued the NCAA on Wednesday when its team, despite a 9-1 record, was excluded. The school's lawyers asked U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn to issue a temporary restraining order stopping this weekend's games.

The suit alleges anti-trust and breach of contract violations, and charges that Howard was kept out of the field "for unlawful and racially motivated reasons" even though it had a better record than any other team in the playoffs.

The suit seeks $27 million in punitive and compensatory damages.

Whether the restraining order would be granted depended on the likelihood of Howard winning the suit, whether the university would be irreparably harmed without the restraining order, and the prospect of harm to others and the public interest in granting the order.

Howard has asked for a jury trial in the case.

The school's record was second only to Holy Cross, 11-0, in Division I-AA, but because playoff assignments are based on rankings, Howard's No. 18 wasn't enough to qualify. With Holy Cross not taking part because of a Colonial League rule, Howard missed the playoffs by one spot.

Although Howard won the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, NCAA officials said its schedule was relatively weak. Four Howard victories were over teams ranked below the I-AA level.

Howard President James Cheek, said the suit would prove that Howard, a predominantly black school, had become the latest victim in "a historic pattern of racial discrimination" by the NCAA.

Alabama meets Auburn in SEC showdown

By HOYT HARWELL Associated Press Writer

Alabama Coach Bill Curry has no trouble understanding the fans who grumble about his coaching ability. He also understands they have no idea what the job entails.

"Absolutely, the response I have is to suck it up and try harder," said Curry, whose first Crimson Tide team was 7-3 and ranked 18th heading into today's Southeastern Conference showdown against No. 7 Auburn.

"I don't dislike the person for thinking that, because the person doesn't have a clue what I'm doing," Curry said.

"He has never set foot on the field, never gotten his nose bloodied. He has never stood there with 25 seconds left with a decision that may affect your future forever, with 15 million people watching."

"Until you've done that a few times, you really don't understand."

Curry's decision-making against Auburn will help decide which of three teams will earn the host berth in the Sugar Bowl against No. 4 Syracuse, 11-0. Auburn, 8-1-1 overall, would win the SEC title outright by beating the Crimson Tide. An Alabama victory would give the Tide a 5-1 league record and a share of the SEC title with No. 6 Louisiana State. If that happens, the Sugar Bowl will have to choose a representative.

No matter what happens, all three teams will go to bowls. The two who don't make the Sugar have spots waiting in the Gator and Hall of Fame bowls.

Curry was anxious to experience his first Alabama-Auburn collision at Birmingham's Legion Field.

"The crowd will be split 50-50 and I've never been a part of anything like that," he said. This is the last game to be played under an agreement giving each school 50 percent of the tickets. Beginning next year, the teams will alternate the roles of host and visitor, with the latter limited to only 10,900 tickets.

The game between Auburn, 8-1-1 overall and 4-0-1 in the conference, and Alabama, 7-3 and 4-1, pits strength against strength on the ground.

Alabama relies on Bobby Humphrey, the SEC's leading all-purpose runner, while Auburn's defense allowed only 124.4 rushing yards a game. Humphrey ran for 204 yards in a 21-17 loss to the Tigers last year.

"Offensively, you've got to start with Humphrey," Auburn Coach Pat Dye said. "He is the best running back in America. ... He's got speed, he's got great vision and balance. He's so strong and yet he doesn't weigh more than 190, 195 pounds. He just keeps breaking tackles." "It really presents a challenge to open some holes so we can run," Alabama's freshman center, Roger Shultz, said.

"I believe this is probably the best of the Auburn defenses that I've seen," Curry said, "and that's saying a lot."

Alabama's defense is faced with stopping the passing of Jeff Burger and what Curry calls an underrated running game. Burger, with talented receivers such as Lawyer Tillman and Duke Donaldson, has passed for 1,938 yards and 13 touchdowns.

On Saturday, the second-ranked Miami Hurricanes take on No. 10 Notre Dame in a battle of bowl-bound independents.

The Hurricanes, 9-0, hope they'll still be in contention for the national championship New Year's Day when they play top-ranked Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl. No. 10 Notre Dame, 8-2, will play No. 15 Texas A&M in the Cotton Bowl.

Buffaloes win Lone Star tourney opener

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Mark Benoit and Gerald Temple scored 16 points each Thursday night to lead West Texas State past Angelo State 71-66 in a first-round game of the Lone Star Conference pre-season basketball tournament.

Angelo State held a four-point lead early in the second half, but Benoit and Temple led the Buffaloes back. WTSU is now 2-1 on the season. Angelo State fell to 1-4. Tim Howard scored 14 points for the losers.

In other quarterfinal games, Midwestern State edged Abilene Christian 89-87, Texas A&I defeated Eastern New Mexico 68-49, and East Texas State beat Central State of Oklahoma, 90-76.

Midwestern State overcame an 11-point deficit in the second half of its win over Abilene Christian, last year's LSC co-champion with West Texas State.

Guard James Burkhalter scored 21 and forward Anthony Davis added 20 to lead the Indian comeback.

Midwestern State, guest team in the tournament, is 4-0.

Forward Emmitt Davis scored 22 to lead ACU, now 1-1 for the season.

Guard Bennett Fields and center Ken Hardy combined for 52 points to lead East Texas State to its win over Central State. The Lions are also 4-0.

Central State, an LSC member but ineligible for the league championship this season until it receives NCAA membership next year, is 1-2. Forward Scott Steller led the Bronchos with 18.
