

POWs Tell Of Hours Of Lonely Darkness, A Timeless Blur

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The hours of lonely darkness in Hanoi; hours with only memory for company; hours that stretched into days, into weeks, into a timeless blur.

The beatings whose only end was unconsciousness. Or capitulation. Or death.

The hope and the faith. And the determination to somehow stay whole while in the enemy's grip.

This is the story the prisoners of war are telling, freed at last from the restraints that kept the details of their ordeal from the nation they served.

The POWs spoke at news conferences and interviews about what it was really like as captives of the North Vietnamese or the Viet Cong.

Until now, they had kept silent lest they jeopardize men still held prisoner. The last of the 587 POWs originally scheduled to be released arrived at Clark Air Base in the Philippines on Thursday morning and the words of torture, degradation and determination poured out at home.

One man told of letting maggots eat away dead flesh to clean out his festering wounds; another told of a torture called "the strap" that paralyzed the nerves; a third said he kept "like an animal in a cage."

The former captives made these points:
—The prisoners were beaten, drugged, starved and tortured—sometimes fatally—by Communists who sought information or antiwar statements. Many of the men finally broke, but they tried to provide as little information as possible beyond the regulation name, rank and serial number.

—Conditions improved somewhat late in 1969; food rations were increased and the prisoners were allowed to speak to one another.

—The men maintained their own, military-style organization within prison camps; they kept in touch with each other by elaborately devised codes; newly arrived POWs passed on whatever information about the war and their fellow servicemen that they could.

None of the prisoners spoke of resentment or reprisals against POWs who reportedly cooperated with the enemy. No names were mentioned. Sources in Washington said the men had been told by the Pentagon to keep their silence on this subject.

The first man off the plane that brought the first batch of prisoners to Clark on Feb. 12 was Navy Capt. Jeremiah A. Denton Jr. of Virginia Beach, Va., who was captured July 18, 1965.

He told a news conference at Elon College, N.C., that he was tortured at least 10 times, kept in solitary confinement for four years. Describing one occasion, he said: "For three days, I had no food or water... seated on a stool... handcuffed. With the help of God, I felt no hunger or thirst."

At another point, he said, he was forced to lie flat on his back while a 10-foot iron bar was rested across his chin. Then his captors walked across the bar.

Denton indicated he was not bitter toward his captors. "There are as many evil Americans as North Vietnamese," he said, adding that in one instance a guard who had been beating him "broke down totally" and ran outside screaming that he would not continue.

In his news conference Thursday night, President Nixon disclosed that he met one of the prisoners at the White House on March 12. Aides later identified the man as Col. Robinson Risner of Oklahoma City, Okla., captured on Sept. 16, 1965, and said Nixon also met with Denton the same day.

Air Force Capt. Joseph Milligan of Annandale, N.J., said that when his plane was shot down on May 20, 1967, he suffered severe burns.

The only treatment he received, Milligan said, was a twice-weekly swabbing with hot water. Discussing his wounds, he added:

"They were draining quite badly, they were full of puss, they smelled rotten. One day I noticed some flies flying around my arms. I allowed them to land and lay eggs on my wounds. When the maggots hatched, they ate the dead flesh."

"After the dead flesh was gone, I went over to the buckets in my cell. I urinated over my arms to wash the maggots off, tore up a tee shirt and rewrapped my arms. And after that, they healed."

Milligan said there were constant attempts to "re-educate" the prisoners. "They were always trying to convince you of their side by constantly feeding you their propaganda," he said.

The men were awakened at 5 a.m., he said, and would "get up and sit around with nothing to do for the rest of the day." They used memory tricks to occupy their time, he added, learning the states in alphabetical order backward, making a mental record of everything they had eaten since being captured.

Chesley said they finally "broke me. I gave them basically the information they wanted. What we tried to do is minimize their gains by writing as little as we possibly could and make it bad English so if Americans read it they would know there was something wrong with it... I was always ashamed afterward that I had finally been broken, but I had the solace that I had done the best I could or thought I had anyway."

Great nations are never conquered from outside unless they are rotten inside.

Nixon Puts Freeze On Price Of Meats

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon has imposed a ceiling on supermarket and wholesale meat prices, effective now, while he seeks a permanent cure to soaring food costs.

Spurred by housewife unhappiness and meat-counter boycotts, the President told the nation Thursday night he was switching economic signals and in effect freezing beef, pork and lamb prices at about their current levels.

Disclosure of the meat-price ceiling was tucked into a televised address hailing the end of U.S. involvement in Vietnam, sternly warning Hanoi to quit violating the peace agreement, and calling for public support in his budget battle with Congress.

Members of Congress generally supported Nixon's economic move. But some Democrats raised a cry of "too little, too late" and said they would continue to push for a freeze on all prices. And leaders of a nationwide consumers' boycott said they intend to carry out their plans despite the presidential action.

"This is not enough. We boycott," said June Donovan of Los Angeles, one of the planners of the week-long boycott of meat and poultry scheduled to begin on Sunday.

Among Congressional reaction to the Nixon order: "A long step in the right direction," said Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania.

School Board Hires Lawyer

In a breakfast session this morning, members of the Pampa school board revised the school calendar for next year and hired a lawyer.

R.A. "Bob" Wilson, Amarillo attorney said to be experienced in school affairs, has been retained as counsel.

Chief concern of the panel is their legal footing regarding their rule about teacher residence. The board had decreed that, next year, all teachers employed in Pampa schools must live within the district.

When first considered, the administration's recommendation was that the requirement be waived for those now employed who live in other cities nearby but applied henceforth to all new personnel. The board decided to apply it en toto.

Some eight teachers now on the staff live outside the district.

Yielding to parental objections regarding the week of vacation following the Easter weekend, the 1973-74 school calendar was again revised to eliminate these "holidays," leaving only Good Friday and the Monday following Easter.

It was pointed out that, should there be no "snow days" used next year, school could conceivably be out Friday, May 17.

The board will have another morning meeting next Friday at the athletic building on the high school campus. Athletic staff recommendations will be made to the panel at this time. This will be an open meeting.

"A formula for shortages," said Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.
"Fundamentally a mistake," said House Agriculture Committee Chairman W. R. Foage, D-Tex. "I just don't think it will bring about a reduction in anything except the supply of meat."

In his 20-minute address, Nixon made only fleeting reference to housewife unhappiness, but sources reported it was a major factor in causing him to discard his insistence that food prices curbs wouldn't work.

Nixon said his administration was making progress in the over-all fight against inflation, then conceded that positive statistics "are no comfort at all to the housewife, etc."

"What we need is action that will stop the rise in meat prices now," he said after recounting recent steps to increase supplies and bring prices down later this year.

"That is why I have today ordered the Cost of Living Council to impose a ceiling on prices of beef, pork and lamb," the President said, adding:

"The ceiling will remain in effect as long as it is necessary to do the job. Meat prices must not go higher. With the help of the housewife and farmer, they can and should go down."

In New York, E. Douglas Kenna, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, said: "The NAM will cooperate with the Cost of Living Council, to the extent we can be helpful."

"We are concerned about the workability of any rigid and indiscriminate restrictions on price changes. We believe that the objective of the economic stabilization program, during the remainder of its life, should be to smooth the transition to an economy free of government intervention in wage and price matters," he added.

Here, according to administration officials, are the major points of the meat-price ceiling and related Nixon actions:
—Effective at 9 p.m. EST Thursday, meat retailers, wholesalers and processors cannot charge more than a figure computed on the basis of sales for

Local Men Hit Price Ceilings

By RAY BAXTER
Opinions on President Nixon's beef price freeze from two local men directly involved with beef production, one impartial and one highly prejudicial, were of the same philosophy if not the same wordage.

Foster Whaley, county agricultural agent, charged with helping local agriculture and livestock interests as a representative of the department of agriculture, felt the freeze was not the answer to the problem.

"Any time you put a ceiling on prices at a level where there is no profit you are discouraging production rather than encouraging it," Whaley noted. "And production is our pressing problem because of gain or death losses due to weather."

Whaley, with beef cows of his own, knows whereof he speaks on the rigors of the winter. He already had a story in print for the farm page of the News Sunday when the president made his announcement last night. In his column for Sunday, Whaley prints the local beef production picture in dollars and cents.

Rex McAnelly of Moody Farms, is representative of the burgeoning feedlot operations in the Panhandle. When asked his opinion of the price freeze on beef, he referred to the words of labor leader George Meany on a recent television broadcast.

the past 30 days. In most cases, the price ceiling will be at or slightly below current levels. The ceiling does not apply to poultry or seafood.

—By April 9, ceiling-price information must be posted at all meat counters.

"Meany quoted Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz," McAnelly said, "and Butz had said, 'anyone putting a price ceiling on raw agriculture products and livestock is a damn fool.'"

"I have to go along with that," McAnelly said.

A number of local men feeding beef animals said, when put to the same question, that Whaley and McAnelly said it exactly the way they felt about the matter.

Tax Office To Open For Tags

The Gray County Tax Office will be open for auto license sales from 8:30 a.m. to 12 noon Saturday.

That is the word of Tax Assessor-Collector Jack Back, who made the decision in the face of possible weather handicaps and the fact that the first of the month falling on Sunday, could present pay period problems.

Those who can make their tag purchases before 5 p.m. today are urged to do so to leave Saturday for those who have that day only.

Rains Lap Across Panhandle, More To Arrive Next Week

Once again, predicted snow missed the local area but... just barely.

While residents of the Dalhart and Dumas areas mucked through an inch of the white stuff on the ground with more falling this morning, Pampans floated about in more than two inches of water that had fallen between the start of the rain yesterday and noon today.

With snow still falling to the north and mixing with rain as near as Amarillo, Pampa still has a good chance of getting snowfall tonight with the continuing rain, according to official weather observers.

Cold rain will continue until late Saturday when skies should clear and temperatures warm a bit for a sunny Sunday.

However, another front is approaching and should be dumping more moisture in the Gray County area by mid-morning Monday.

Elsewhere in the state, turbulence prompted severe thunderstorm watches and tornado alerts from far West Texas into the central part of the state through the night. With the local front moving on there is not much hope of sunshine anywhere in the state until Sunday.

Roads are open in Texas but many closed by snow in New Mexico including Raton Pass.

In other Associated Press reports...

Roads were closed because of heavy snow in Northeastern New Mexico, and the depths ranged up to 15 inches at Las Vegas.

Forecasters warned against 4 to 6 inches more snow in parts of New Mexico and 1 to 3 inches in the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandles, where travel and stockmen's advisories were up.

Skies were cloudy throughout Texas and there also was drizzle or light rain as far downstate as Austin, Houston and Victoria.

Fog hung low in early morning around Childress and Corpus Christi.

Temperatures dropped as low as 32 degrees at Dalhart in the Panhandle. Readings ranged from the higher 30s into the 60s in other sections, staying as high as 68 at Brownsville and 69 at Corpus Christi.

Top marks Thursday afternoon reached 83 at Alice and Cotulla, and 86 at McAllen in the south while the maximum was only 38 at Dalhart.

More showers and thunderstorms were promised in most sections of the state tonight, with skies starting to clear Saturday.

A wide-ranging spring storm lashed the Southwest today, dumping more snow on the central and southern Rockies and spawning thunderstorms eastward into the Plains.

Las Vegas, N.M., was isolated by a snowstorm Thursday that closed down Interstate 25 U.S. 104 and U.S. 84. Stranded travelers were offered shelter in the school gymnasium.

Seven inches of snow fell on Las Vegas, during the night. Albuquerque received five inches and three to six inches was common from New Mexico into southern Colorado.

Rep. Price Wants Prohibition Of Aid

Congressman Bob Price of Pampa introduced legislation yesterday to prohibit any form of economic aid or assistance to the government of North Vietnam.

Price, who was discharged from Bethesda Naval Hospital in Washington last Saturday and continues to convalesce from a mild coronary occlusion which hospitalized him several weeks ago, blasted North Vietnam in one of his most strongly worded public statements as "an outlaw nation guilty of the worst type of aggression, terrorism, and utter disregard for international law and the value of human life."

Price emphasized his office was receiving a heavy volume of mail from constituents in opposition to aid for North Vietnam.

"I fully share the views of the people of the 13th Congressional District that the American people should not be asked to dip into their pockets to pay tribute to North Vietnamese renegades who have spent the last ten years attempting to defeat and humiliate the United States," the congressman said. He emphasized that at a time when necessary budget cuts were being made in domestic spending and in the face of a serious balance of payments deficit problem, spending money to assist Communist North Vietnam would be "an insult to conscience and common sense."

Price drew a sharp line between aid to North Vietnam and American assistance to Japan and Germany following the close of World War II. "Both nations have given an unconditional surrender and both militaristic regimes were deposed," he said. "There is no similarity to the situation today where the bandits in charge of the North Vietnamese government still ride roughshod and impose an iron-fisted tyranny complete with secret police over the people of that unfortunate country."

The Congressman cited statistics focusing on the reign of terror by the North Vietnamese against civilians in South Vietnam and denounced the barbaric treatment given to American POW's.

"Let us 'Tell it to Hanoi' that the American people will sacrifice for the cause of freedom but will not pay tribute to a pack of criminals who are not worthy of recognition as a civilized government," he added.

"Uncle Sam must stop playing the role of Uncle Sam," Price said.

Final Acceptance Of Plant Nearing

By TEX DEWEESSE

If the prime contractor has paid all of the sub-contractors and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development finds everything okay, the City of Pampa plans to make final acceptance of its $1.2 million water treatment plant next Thursday.

In a meeting at City Hall this morning, the City Commission approved the final change order for the plant in its entirety.

It included approval of $9,000 in additional cost for construction changes and $16,500 in liquidating damages against the A. E. Mitchell Co. contractors of Dallas. That left a deduction of approximately $7,000 from the original contract price.

The commission authorized partial final payment of $47,988 to the prime contractor. That left approximately $80,000 to be paid to the A. E. Mitchell Co. on final acceptance.

Mitchell, present at today's meeting, was told he would receive final payment when HUD gives its okay on bills paid to sub-contractors.

Also accepted today was the final inspection report of Jack Moseley, project engineer from the consultant engineering firm of Forrest and Cotton, Dallas.

Representatives of the federal Housing and Urban Development Department will be in Pampa next Wednesday to make their final inspection of the water treatment plant.

Officials at the treatment plant said this forenoon water being pumped into the city's distribution system today was 100 per cent from Lake Meredith.

When the plant resumed operation a week ago last Wednesday after a long shutdown only about 5 per cent of lake water was mixed with city well water.

The flow of lake water was increased daily until placed on a 100 per cent basis three days ago, plant engineers said.

Oil Crisis Gets Closer, Zlomke Says

"Nobody is making oil. You have to drill for it," said C.D. Zlomke, "and 83 per cent of the exploratory holes drilled last year were dry holes."

Zlomke, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Oil and Gas Committee, spoke last Wednesday noon to the Pampa Rotary Club as the guest speaker during Oil and Gas Appreciation Week. He is a Rotarian.

Last winter, more than 40,000 production workers were laid off in Louisiana and Mississippi, continued Zlomke, as he said the energy crisis is touching more and more people and getting closer to Texans.

"By 1980 our country will have to import one-half of its oil needs," he stated. "This will result in a $16 billion deficit, in present dollars. In another 10 years, the deficit would amount to $53 billion."

Zlomke pointed out the oil and gas industry is subject to the requirements of 61 governmental agencies. He felt with the proper incentives the present dwindling reserves of gas and crude oil could be increased to three or four times the current figures.

Last week Lakan Mariano, American Field Service student from the Philippines, spoke to club members how his education differed here with his native country.

Pioneer Gives Scouts Check For Council

Pioneer Natural Gas Co., a sustaining member of the Adobe Walls Boy Scout Council, presented a check to the council yesterday in a brief ceremony at Boy Scout headquarters here in Pampa.

The presentation was made by K.B. Watson of Amarillo, Pioneer executive vice president, who also is a member of the executive board of the Llano Estacado Boy Scout Council, Amarillo.

Watson presented the utility company's sustaining membership check to William McElroy, Adobe Walls Council scout executive.

McElroy said sustaining memberships account for 38 per cent of the council's $119,000 budget. Fifty-three per cent is derived from United Funds in the 15-county area of the Texas-Oklahoma-Panhandles.

The remaining nine per cent comes from foundations and individual contributions outside the council area, McElroy said.

Pioneer Natural Gas serves Pampa, Fritch, Panhandle and Sanford as natural gas suppliers and has production facilities throughout the Adobe Walls Council area.

Panel Says Experiment Unjustified

WASHINGTON (AP) — A citizens' panel says a controversial government syphilis experiment was not justified and recommends that Congress establish an independent board to regulate all federally funded human experimentation.

In its concluding session this week, the government-appointed advisory committee decided to take note in its final report of the context of the times when the experiment involving Alabama black men was begun 40 years ago.

And the panel said it would include mention that the U.S. Public Health Service experiment might have had some scientific validity in its first months, however sloppy in method it quickly became.

But committee members were unanimous in saying the experiment, called the Tuskegee Study, was not justified, particularly on ethical grounds. A panel member, Prof. Jay Katz of Yale Law School, compared the study with Nazi concentration-camp medical experiments.

In the experiment, more than 430 poor, rural, black men in Macon County, Ala., were denied treatment for syphilis so that doctors could study what eventual damage the untreated disease does to the human body. At least 28, and possibly as many as 107, men died as a direct result of the untreated disease.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare appointed the committee in August after The Associated Press disclosed existence of the experiment. The panel quickly recommended that the experiment be halted and whatever treatment necessary be given to the survivors.

Moon's Pull

The moon's gravitational pull affects more than the oceans. A full moon directly overhead may lift the North American continent six inches and the earth's atmosphere may bulge out a mile or more toward the moon. Even people respond to the moon's gravity, gaining and losing a fraction of an ounce with each rise and fall of the tides.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — He was the symbol of the rebel generation, a muscular young man who styled his life in defiance of the Establishment.

He challenged the studios and won, wasting millions of dollars by caprice. He got away with it because he was Marlon Brando, hailed by many as the best actor of America's mid-century.

But in his middle years the muscles sagged, and the sharp edge of his talent seemed to have dulled. The star who could demand $1 million a picture now found himself unemployable by the Hollywood studios.

But with two stunning achievements—"The Godfather" and "Last Tango in Paris"—Marlon Brando at 48 is once again the most talked about, the most in-demand star in the film world.

His triumphant reemergence was signaled Tuesday night at the 45th awards of the Motion Picture Academy. Brando won his second Oscar because of his performance in "The Godfather." Brando, however, refused to accept the award, to protest what he called the ill treatment of Indians in America.

Brando was awarded his first Oscar in 1954 for "On The Waterfront." Elia Kazan, who directed the film, termed Brando's performance as the ex-fighter dock worker "the best acting I have ever seen in an American film."

HEW Orders New Plan On Desegregation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has ordered 25 school districts to submit new desegregation plans by April 10 or risk the loss of federal funds, it was learned Thursday.

Letters were sent to the districts last Saturday in response to a federal court injunction ordering compliance action by mid-April.

"It is our hope that your board will comply voluntarily with this request, thus avoiding the possibility of legal action as required by the court," wrote Peter E. Holmes, acting director of HEW's Office for Civil Rights.

Also in response to the court order, HEW has asked 10 Southern and border states for updated reports on their college desegregation progress by April 23.

Seventeen elementary and secondary school districts were informed, however, that they are not affected by the court order because they either are under federal court jurisdiction or are in compliance with civil-rights laws.

"On The Waterfront" was the climax of a series of unparalleled successes for a new film actor. The movies:

"The Men" (1950), in which he portrayed a war-crippled paraplegic.

"A Streetcar Named Desire," with Brando repeating his stage success as the brutish Stanley Kowalski.

"Viva Zapata!"—as the martyred Mexican revolutionary.

"Julius Caesar," with Brando playing Shakespeare's Mark Antony to prove that he could do more than mumble through a role.

"The Wild One," first examination of the motorcycle subculture.

He followed those achievements with some commercial hits ("Sayonara," "The Young Lions"), but 18 years would pass before he would play roles with the brilliance and intensity of those early films.

Brando's decline dates from "One-Eyed Jacks," which was released in 1961. The Western was being made by his own company, and Brando fired Stanley Kubrick and decided to direct the film himself. The result was chaotic—eight hours of edited film.

Then came the disastrous remake of "Mutiny on the Bounty." Bad Tahiti weather and script deficiencies ballooned the cost to $19 million and nearly sank MGM into bankruptcy.

"But it wasn't Marlon's fault," asserts the producer, Aaron Rosenberg. "The studio bosses made promises to him that they didn't keep."

But Brando was handed the blame for the "Bounty" fiasco. Then came the deary decade in which he strolled through humdrum films like "The Chase" and "The Countess from Hong Kong."

Some Brando watchers believe that his off-screen life helped contribute to his professional fall. From the very beginning of his career, he proclaimed his disdain for convention.

"I am myself," he once said, "and if I have to hit my head against a brick wall to remain myself, I will do it."

In the beginning, he gained the reputation as an erratic young man who dressed in T-shirt and jeans and rode his motorcycle through Manhattan streets with his pet raccoon. He was appalled by the public's conception of him and began dressing in coats and ties and expounding on weighty matters.

His private life remained unconventional. Although Brando strove to keep his romances secret, they often erupted in print. His engagement to a French model was announced in 1954 by her father, a fisherman, but the wedding never happened.

Brando has married twice, both times to actresses who were pregnant with his sons. The first was Anna Kashfi, who proclaimed herself a native of India although her parents said she was Irish. Wife No. 2 was the Mexican actress Movita, who had costarred with Clark Gable in the first version of "Mutiny on the Bounty."

The actor also has two children by Tarita, his own costar in "Mutiny on the Bounty"—Simon, 9, and Tarita, 3.

During the 1960s, Brando further upset Establishment-minded citizens by becoming a political activist for blacks and Indians. He marched for racial equality in Gadsden, Ala., and he was arrested for his part in a "fish-in" of Indians on the Puyallup River in Washington.

Although some of his admirers applauded his courage in supporting causes that were unpopular with segments of the film audience, many others were outraged—or bored—by his behavior.

Hollywood producers got the message. They viewed the string of Brando film failures and decided that he was washed up. And he might have been, except for "The Godfather."

Here is another slam swing from that same IMP match. When North bid four no-trump East inquired the meaning of the bid.

This is permissible in duplicate games. South replied that it was strong but rather ambiguous.

Then East bid five diamonds. South thought a while and went to six clubs.

This made it West's turn to think. He didn't have any defense against clubs or hearts but maybe his partner's five-diamond call had indicated defense. So West passed and opened a diamond. Three seconds later South had drawn trumps and claimed all 13 tricks.

At the other table East decided to pass his 11 high card points. South opened one heart. North responded two clubs and East backed in with a takeout double.

This takeout double didn't keep North and South from getting to a slam. In fact, they bid it in hearts and would have won a couple of IMPs on the board if allowed to play it. Unfortunately for their well being, West took the save at six spades.

The defense could only collect four tricks so the 500-point loss was worth 10 IMPs to that East-West pair.

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	1 ♣	2 N.T.
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	3 N.T.
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	5 ♣
Pass	5 ♣	Pass	?

You, South, hold:
▲ K J 3 ♥ K J 3 ♦ K 10 5 4 ♣ K 9 6

What do you do now?
A—Bid six clubs. Your partner is trying to get to seven. Maybe your king of clubs is just what he needs.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, MARCH 31 YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Spiritual needs are of more importance this year than all other factors, if you are to thrive. Shed material clutter, leftovers of earlier enterprises. Today's natives are usually dreamers, prosper if allowed to mature slowly.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Everybody has some pet scheme, ranging from practical jokes to subtle social power games. Postpone major decisions.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Without realizing it, you may drift into an awkward spot with somebody whose regard you value.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: It is easy to busy yourself with trivial matters and miss the great message. Time out for reflection, prayer, to do better.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Explaining anything is difficult today. If you must do so, take care to be explicit, be sure you are being heard.
Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Once past quirks of circumstance, reversals of form, humorous morning surprises, you are on your way and upward at that. Begin a new personal program.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Let others sort out their feelings unpressured; you have enough routines at home to fill three days.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: You may not find today's chores and requirements convenient, but there's nothing for it but to do the best you can.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Guessing comes too easily, and is bound to miss because of factors you've no inkling of.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Your sportive energy finds excitement, curious new expressions. You may be somewhat out of step with your friends today.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: If it is convenient, you may not want it; but at least try the easy path for a while today.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: You'll be very glad later that you kept adequate records of the complex deals going on, notes of your own promises.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Major attention belongs to those matters where you are the judge and immediate benefactor.

Lively Look
Canvas bags for warmer weather are decked out with bright crochet trim for a livelier look.

A Good Cut
Hairstyles are even shorter this year. But whatever the length, keep an easy-to-care-for style that begins with a good professional cut.

Waist Emphasis
The long waistline is back and is emphasized with blouson tops and dresses, all reminiscent of the 1930s.

BETTY CANARY

How To Undoldrum Husband

By BETTY CANARY

What with the furor over women's rights, there is no wonder that more and more husbands are showing the classic signs of depression.

Certainly a woman should recognize these symptoms in a man. He is less sure of himself today. He feels unloved, unappreciated, unworthy. Most of all, he feels as dispensable as a paper napkin. And any wife wants to let him know he is loved, needed and masterful.

How to convince a man he is indispensable? First, realize that nothing makes a man feel more useless than to have nothing to complain about.

You can assert your dependence on him by, for example, forgetting to pick up his clothes at the cleaners unless he pins a note on your coat collar.

Or ask, "Will you explain that, honey?" at least 15 times while he's watching his favorite ball club on TV.

Smile and say, "You're cute when you're mad," when he screams about your sending his favorite golf shoes to Good Will.

Look wonderingly at him when he asks why you didn't deposit your paycheck at the bank. Say, "Why, I bought the sweetest dress and three pairs of shoes." Look blankly at him and let him tell you about rent on the apartment and car payments.

At a party, stay with him constantly. Clutch at him as if he's a Royal Doulton figurine that's just been knocked off a mantel.

Refuse to go to the supermarket without him. Tell him you're afraid to drive on the expressway. Make him take an afternoon off work and take you to your doctor's appointment.

If he begins walking through the house with a whip and chair, you've done the job too well and he's too masterful. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Put yourself in her place, then decide

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A group of couples have been attending a Saturday night dance together for a number of years. We are all good friends. Recently one couple divorced and the lady continued to attend these dances as a "single."

For a while the group accepted her to help her over her adjustment period. The gentlemen in the crowd continued to dance with her as they always had, but this created a problem, for one of the wives was always left to sit out the dance while her husband danced with "Single."

Abby, don't you think "Single" should realize that she is creating a problem and should drop out of the group until she obtains a partner? How can we end the dilemma, but still be friends?

"SITTING DUCK"

DEAR SITTING: Put yourself in "single's" place and be a little more charitable. The life of a single is lonely and difficult and those Saturday night dances are probably her only opportunity to socialize.

Ask your husbands if they can't come up with a single man who could be her partner on those Saturday nights. Singles need all the help they can get.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing out of concern for young teen-aged girls who find themselves burdened with unwanted pregnancies.

Please, please encourage mothers to provide birth control measures for their teen-aged daughters. Fear of pregnancy does not always prevent girls as young as 13 or 14 from having sexual experiences. Many girls do not stop to consider the risks when they are confronted by strong sexual desire.

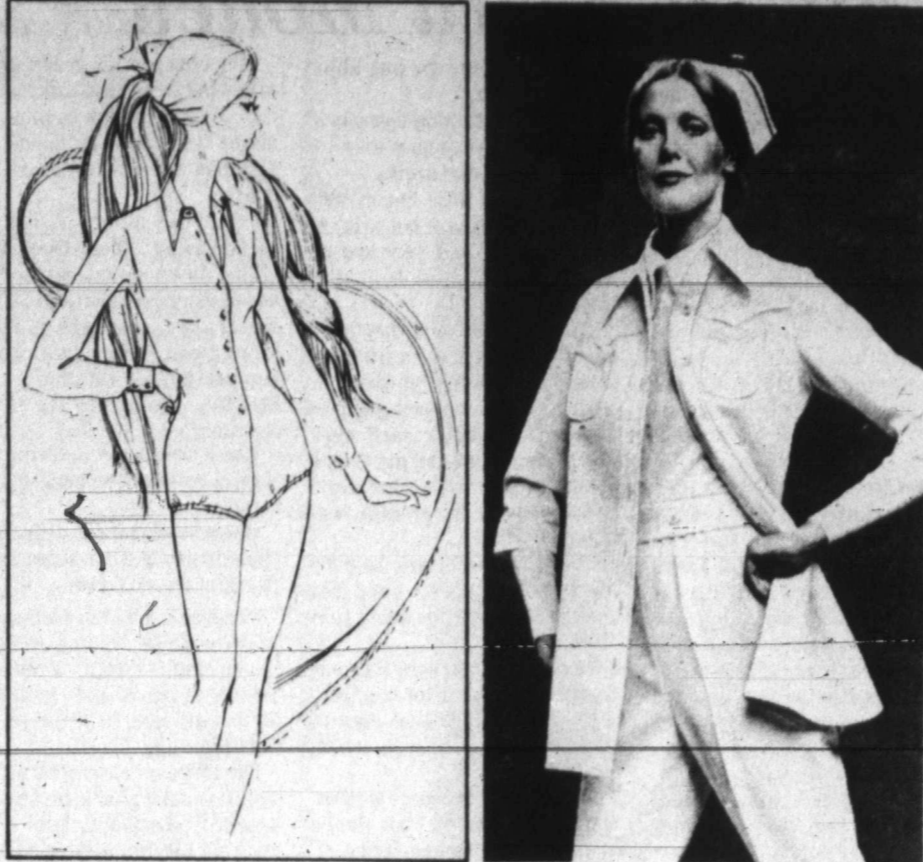

At 17 I found myself hitchhiking to a hospital to have, fortunately a safe, legal abortion, about which I felt I could not tell my own parents. Since then I have been taking birth control measures and seeing a doctor regularly for venereal disease checks. No, I am not promiscuous—both V. D. and unwanted pregnancy can happen to the nicest people.

Now, at 49, I see similar heartbreaking, terrifying experiences happening around me. Please, remind girls that there are free clinics. And if they are lucky enough to have understanding parents, they should ask them for help. If this is printed, and I hope it is, sign me . . .

SADDER BUT WISER

DEAR SADDER: I'll print your letter, altho I will probably be accused of condoning pre-marital sex, which I am not! However, once that decision has already been made, the price some girls pay is so tragically out of proportion to the "crime." I believe an ounce of prevention is better than eight pounds of unwanted baby or a venereal disease.

Variations On A Theme In White

Undercover agents at Bestform suggest a comfortable body shirt (left) complete with shirt-styling details of buttons, placket fronts and long-pointed collars as the newest way for women-in-white to look their best in hospital corridors. From the White Swan collection of uniforms for spring comes the shirt, pantsuit and jacket (right).

By HELEN HENNESSY
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—For the American women-in-white, the only thing that hasn't changed dramatically in the last few years is the color itself. Beyond that, Florence Nightingale would have a hard time recognizing those professional women who perform their duties with authority and a sense of chic which goes a long way in making a patient feel better, too.

For example pants, a subject which as recently as three years ago was as controversial as acupuncture is at the moment, now are in every nurse's working wardrobe. And this season they're being topped with what is the high-fashion look for spring—the shirt. The new White Swan collection has shirty pantsuits, carefully detailed with plackets, tailored collars, stitch treatments and unusual pocket treatments. The pants themselves range from semiflare styling to up-dated versions of the "baggie" another important fashion trend.

The latest innovation in the nursing department is a do-your-own-thing with accessories and separates. Bestform body shirts, a way of life garb for every hour off-duty is being combined with the snappy uniforms. The body shirts, supercomfortable with gentle support, are available in coordinate shirt styling—buttons, placket and pointed collars. Many are long-sleeved and become part of a layered look with jacket, shirt and pants. In addition to the tailored shirt there are mandarin styles, rounded and turtle neck collars which add a softer more stylized note for the pro-on-the-go who wants a change of pace.

Although white is still rigid in nurses uniforms for

Cost Of Living Takes Care Of Extra Money

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — When she recently looked over last year's family expenses, Barbara Hayes discovered to her surprise that the taxes withheld from her husband's paychecks equalled his total salary 12 years ago.

"But I don't feel I have much more money to spend now than then," she said. "Joe's salary has gone up steadily, but our standard of living hasn't. The cost of living has taken care of the extra money."

Starting this week Hayes, 37, will make approximately $26,000 a year in his new job as director of training and management development for Eastern Air Lines. His salary now is about $24,000.

Despite the raise, the Hayeses, who say they've always been careful with money, are cutting back where they can.

At the same time, they insist on keeping nonessentials in their budget which they feel are important for the development of their family: a private school for one daughter, travel and more hobbies.

Hayes, his 35-year-old wife and their two daughters, Laurie, 12, and Wendy, 9, live in a $43,000, four-bedroom home in an upper middle-class neighborhood in southwest Miami.

The ranch-style, split-level house, which looks out on a golf course, is furnished simply but stylishly, with heavy Mediterranean furniture and thick shag carpeting.

A black and white television set sits in one corner of the living room. "We've deferred buying a color TV because of the price," Hayes said.

Carrying the house costs $350 a month for the mortgage and taxes. "The rooms are small and we have no pool. We really thought we could get more for our money," Mrs. Hayes said.

Yet homes like theirs, which they bought 13 months ago, are now selling for $9,000 more than they cost, Mrs. Hayes said.

An even greater shock to Mrs. Hayes has been the skyrocketing cost of food.

She said her weekly food budget of a tight $45 is a little more than she spent last year, but at the same time she's buying fewer groceries.

"I'm boycotting the meat counter — roast beef, steaks and even hot dogs, which went up 20 cents a package the last time I looked at them," she said. "I'm buying more chicken, fish, macaroni and cheese, and spaghetti."

Mrs. Hayes usually makes a couple of shopping trips a week to two nearby supermarkets.

buying most of her meat and produce at one and the rest of her groceries at the other.

With her grocery list and a pocket calculator in hand, she pushed her cart down the supermarket aisles on a recent shopping trip.

She watched carefully for sale items, breaking her meat boycott to buy a canned ham, normally $8, but on sale for $4.99. She picked up some packages of frozen perch — three for a dollar — and several cans of tuna fish, on special for 39 cents.

She said she also tries to save money by not bringing her daughters shopping with her. "They talk me into buying things I wouldn't buy otherwise."

She buys few desserts or snack foods because of their cost and because "Joe, I and Laurie are perpetually on a diet." Mrs. Hayes said she usually buys name brands of groceries rather than the cheaper, house brands because of "the big difference in quality."

The Hayeses hope to cut their transportation costs by keeping their cars — a 1970 Maverick and a 1972 Plymouth — for at least six years or "until they fall apart," Mrs. Hayes said.

"What we would like to do is save for the purchase of our next cars after we finish paying our present ones off," Hayes added. "But we just can't do it. The money's not there."

Clothing is a budget item where the family also skimps, probably too much, Mrs. Hayes said.

"The girls wear shorts all year round, and I wear pants and shirts," she said. "Most of the dresses and pant suits I buy are in the $20-$40 range. The most expensive thing I own is a $75 pant suit."

Hayes buys his clothes at a factory outlet or from an importer who has suits made in Hong Kong.

"I was a little upset recently," he said, "because I broke my own rule and bought a suit over $100. I only buy clothes when I run out of them."

"The four of us used to go out to eat once a week," Mrs. Hayes said. "Now we go out about twice a month."

Their entertaining consists of having several couples over for cards, snacks and drinks.

Hayes buys little liquor. "We bought five fifths of booze in the Virgin Islands last year and we still have some of it," Mrs. Hayes said.

The Hayeses said they have tried to economize on little expenses as well as large ones.

Mrs. Hayes stopped going to the beauty parlor each week "because it bothered me to look at that $5 stub in the checkbook and know that the product lasted only one day."

Hayes is also trying to keep the family's credit card and charge account spending to a minimum.

Because American Express charges $15 a year for membership, he dropped that card in favor of Master Charge, which has no fee.

His wife had accounts at three department stores, but Hayes has stopped one temporarily.

Despite the burgeoning cost of practically everything, Hayes tries to save between 15 and 20 per cent of his gross income.

Interstate Road Aids Small Town

By BOB COOPER Associated Press Writer CARROLLTON, Ky.

(AP) — No need to pity this small riverfront community. The concrete snake we call an interstate highway did no great harm. In fact, it's been a boon.

Like hundreds of other little towns, Carrollton was fearful when the traffic flow of its main street, a major intercity highway, was siphoned off by the new interstate four miles away.

"I'd say at least half of the town was afraid, especially the fellows who depended on tourists — like me," Tommy Combs, owner of a small motel, said.

Carrollton, population 4,200, is located on U.S. 42, halfway between Louisville and Cincinnati. It has both the Ohio and Kentucky rivers on its borders, but isn't a port of call for either of them.

For years, the steady parade of cars and trucks poured through the town, a percentage of them stopping for rest, food or lodging and making Carrollton just a little bit richer.

Then, in the summer of 1969, I-71 was opened to traffic.

"So many people here made the remark that they'd seen other towns where the inter-states killed 'em," Randall Kelly, a liquor store clerk, recalled.

But, for Carrollton, it wasn't that way at all. If anything, the community has prospered since that summer day in 1969 and I-71 has helped it.

"When the interstate road first opened, we had a reduction in traffic flow, of course," H.C. Fryman, assistant cashier at a local bank, said.

"But this was mainly heavy trucks and that sort of thing and those people weren't stopping here much anyway. For them, our being centrally located didn't mean much. They just wanted to get to Louisville or Cincinnati as fast as they could," he added.

William G. (Butch) Livesay, who operates a restaurant and bar, figures the profit from and loss to the interstate road just about balanced out as far as Carrollton is concerned.

And having a state park next door was the key, he said.

"Sure there was a lot of traffic here on 42, but the volume is probably double or triple on I-71 and if you've got that many people on the interstate, there are bound to be more that drop off it," he said.

"And, in the summer, we have a lot of tourist trade and Gen. Butler State Park brings a lot of that," his wife, Lynn, said.

Then, too, Carrollton now is the world's second largest burley tobacco market.

During the 15 years that I-71 was on the drawing board, industry came to Carrollton. Dow Corning has a plant just outside town; a division of American Can Co. is located closer to the city limits and Kentucky Utilities Co. has an expanding power plant eight miles north, at Ghent, Ky.

"We never would have bought up this plant site except for the interstate," Arthur Mandell, plant manager for American Can's M&T chemical plant, said, adding that he employs 310 persons.

But not everyone could profit from the new road. "It always happens to a small town. When you get good roads leading out of it, your customers leave home to shop," grocer Harold Carlisle said.

DAVID POLING, D.D.
New Cults Are Burden for Church

By REV. DAVID POLING

Any time you walked down Fifth Avenue in New York you would bump into this group of kids dancing and swaying and chanting their Eastern devotion: "Hare Krishna, Hare Krishna, Krishna, Krishna, Hare Krishna, Hare Krishna."

By chanting their names for God, by the wearing of a saffron robe (for men) and a sari for women, these young American converts to Hare Krishna who stalk so many American cities believe they can find God through the repetition of His name. Through the discipline of yoga, they also believe that their bodies are liberated from evil and meaning is found in life.

The Krishna cult is just one among dozens that has attracted followers across the land—people in search of meaning and purpose in a civilization soaked with upheaval, uncertainty, and unhappiness. These cults and sects and new religions are no longer the California experience which seemed to spawn so many sideshows for the lonely and lost. They extend into Western Europe and can be found in Des Moines as well as Dallas. And many of these cultic clans are not the gentle swaying Krishna types but downright violent, evil-producing organizations that prey upon people and slide into the Charles' Manson set with murderous brutality.

To help us sort out these "new religions which are springing up like crab-grass," William Petersen of Eternity Magazine has produced a powerful book, "Those Curious New Cults" (Keats $4.95) which deals with 16.

For some people this volume will be amusing and entertaining, for others it will be a good survey of the contemporary religious scene in America, and for more than you would guess, it will be a life-saving course—preventive medicine, perhaps an early warning signal. Petersen spares no one. He takes on astrology, Zen, Scientology, Black Muslims, Edgar Cayce, the Children of God, Inc. and the whole assortment of Satanism.

Everyone is exposed, even vaguely and distantly, to these new religions. One sees the Scientology storefronts, the newspaper ads they produce. Yet how many know that their founder L. Ron Hubbard, a science-fiction writer, has attracted several hundred thousand members in the United States and enjoys a gross income of $70 million in the 50 states? All this from a leader who flunked out of college, getting his Ph. D. from Sequoia University a school that has its campus in a Los Angeles postal box!

The chapter on the Black Muslims is essential to our understanding of that sect and the convulsions it is going through in our society. Notes Petersen: "While the movement is called Black Muslim or Nation of Islam, it bears little resemblance to orthodox Islam. Most foreign Muslims give no recognition to Elijah Muhammad at all. While they admit Black Muslims use a few prayers and occasionally quote from the Koran, they charge that most of Muhammad's doctrines are directly opposed to Muslim doctrines."

This column reviews many books during the year but few qualify as an absolute requirement for understanding the scene around you. "Those Curious New Cults" should be in the hands of a great variety of public officials aside from the natural audience within the churches. Police officers and social workers should have a working knowledge of these sects—for some are very dangerous and very sick. High school libraries should have several copies to help young people study the background—and too often, the foolishness of many of these cults. Newspapers that feature astrology should read the five points that Petersen makes concerning these promotions.

Petersen is not gentle and the honesty of his investigation is going to anger many people. But now the discussion can be joined, for as the author concludes, "man would rather create God in his own image than be created in God's image."

Dallas Native Returns To Presbyterian Pulpit

DALLAS (AP)—Dr. John F. Anderson, a Dallas native, will return next June 15 as senior pastor of the 3,000-member First Presbyterian Church.

The announcement of the nomination of Dr. Anderson, 52, was unanimously approved Sunday by members who packed the 128-year-old downtown church for a congregational meeting.

Dr. Anderson will succeed Thomas A. Fry Jr. who resigned last September to accept an associate pastorate at the Second Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Fry assumed the Dallas pastorate in 1958 after the resignation of Dr. Anderson, whose grandfather and uncle had preceded him in the Dallas pulpit.

Since 1965 Dr. Anderson has served as executive secretary of the board of church extension, Presbyterian Church U.S. (Southern), based in Atlanta, Ga.

Revival In Progress

Mary and Eric Carison, Black Canyon City, Ariz., are the evangelists in a revival meeting in progress at Revival Center, 1101 S. Wells St.

Services begin at 7 each evening and are open to the public.

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

Happy are those whose hearts are pure, for they shall see God. Happy are those who strive for peace—they shall be called the sons of God. Happy are those who are persecuted because they are good, for the Kingdom of Heaven is theirs. When you are reviled and persecuted and lied about because you are my followers—wonderful! Be happy about it! Be very glad; for a tremendous reward awaits you up in heaven. And remember, the ancient prophets were persecuted too.
Matthew 5:8-12

No Great Shakes
Only about three per cent of the more than 44 million tons of salt produced in the United States each year fills table salt shakers. Other uses include tanning leather, making glass, soap and chemicals and for melting snow and ice on sidewalks and highways.

Panel Trying For Total Film Viewing

The local committee in charge of the premiere showing of the Billy Graham film production, "A Time to Run" coming to the Capri Theater, is making an all-out effort to see that tickets are made available to those who are not Christians.

From now until April 10, tickets may be purchased in advance at a discount. Single tickets are $1 in advance and a book of 30 may be bought for $25.

Those who have no one to give tickets to are invited to send a check payable to the "Time to Run Committee," Box 2317 and the gift will be used to help as many as possible in the city see the film, according to S. Gene Hall, committee chairman.

Advance tickets are available at Hall's office on Price Rd., Coronado Men's Wear, Patrick's School Supplies, Pampa Tent and Awning, Furr's Family Center, Clement's Flower and Barber Shop and Malone Pharmacy.

Sacramental Service To Be Observed

The sacrament of Holy Communion will be observed during morning worship at First Presbyterian Church. Pastor Martin Hager will serve assisted by elders of the church.

His sermon topic for this occasion will be "The Me in Thee." He will be assisted in the pulpit by Elder William K. Mackey.

Members of the senior high fellowship will meet at 5:30 p.m. in fellowship hall to meet their new sponsors. Following supper there will be a bowling party.

Youth To Lead Revival Effort

The young people of Calvary Baptist Church will be leading the congregation in revival the weekend assisted by a team of two from Hardin-Simmons University, Abilene.

Steve Stroope, H-SU, will be preaching and Dan Meeker from the Baptist school will be in charge of music.

Services are today, Saturday and Sunday. Both young people and adults will be welcomed to these services. The church is located at 824 S. Barnes St.

Bible Church Now On Alcock

Bible Church of Pampa has moved to a new location at 2401 Alcock.

Providing fundamental Bible teaching for all ages, the church has Sunday School at 10 a.m. and church services at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

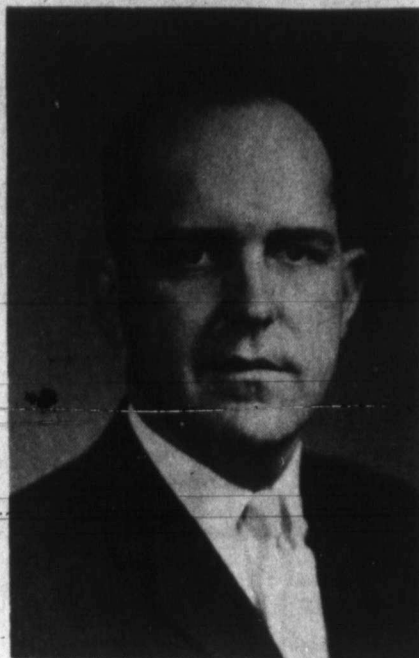

H.M. Somerville is currently serving as interim pastor.

WE WOULD CARPET

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Enough latex foam-backed carpeting will be made in the U.S. this year to cover Washington D.C., according to the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Approximately 157 million square yards of broadloom carpeting produced last year—enough to carpet 8 million large living rooms—had latex foam backing which makes carpeting easier and more economical to install, says Goodyear, a supplier of synthetic latex.

The Weekly Message Of Inspiration
Hi-Land Christian Church

By HAROLD STARBUCK, Minister

"Why Be Anxious?"

TEXT: "Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself" (Matt. 6:24a)

Anxiety often has been called the great disease of our age. As a disease it is no respecter of persons. It strikes the rich as well as the poor; the healthy as well as the unhealthy; the educated as well as the uneducated; the Christian as well as the non-Christian. The effect of anxiety is revealed in our lives through unusual worry, fear and guilt.

In our Scripture, Jesus seeks to deal with this most difficult of diseases. By asking many questions that can be summed up in the one question "Why be anxious?" He gives much needed advice for all who are anxious. To him anxious care is that which distracts our thinking disturbs our worship, disorganizes our lives, and destroys our joy and peace with God.

Although we sometimes feel that Jesus cannot understand nor speak to our anxieties, we must never forget that He was always aware that He was the child of the laboring classes; that His mother, at His birth, had brought the gift of the poor to the Temple; and that from boyhood, He has been accustomed to the shifts of poverty. When He asks "Why be anxious?" We can know that He understands our problems. Henry Drummond said once, "Above all things do not touch Christianity unless you are willing to seek the kingdom first. I promise you a miserable existence if you seek it second. It is impossible to know peace if we allow anxiety to stop us in putting God first, but a sign that He is not."

Jesus made the promise to His followers that if they would put God first, then their need for food and clothes would be met. We simply must trust and obey Him.

Today In History

In 1746, the Spanish artist, Francisco Goya, was born.
In 1842, ether was used as an anesthetic for the first time on record. It was administered by Dr. Crawford Long in Long Jefferson, Ga.
In 1858, Hyman Lipman of Philadelphia was granted the first patent on a pencil equipped with a rubber eraser.
In 1870, Texas was readmitted into the union after the Civil War.

In 1870, the 15th Amendment to the Constitution was ratified, guaranteeing that the right to vote could not be denied because of race, color or previous condition of servitude.

In 1967, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization met the French demand that it close its military headquarters in France.

Milk Diet Experiments Tied To Infant Deaths

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Globe reported Thursday that a University of Texas research team, which it said deprived 17 infants of an essential nutrient in a 1956-57 study, "later repeated the experiment with 428 infants, seven of whom died during the course of the project."
Four of the infant deaths were among 109 premature babies used in the study, the newspaper said.

"It has not been possible to determine how many of the seven deaths occurred among infants receiving severely deprived diets, because the 428 babies were divided into five groups receiving different amounts of the nutrient, linoleic acid," The Globe said.

"However, a report of the four-year experiment, published in 1963, states that one premature male infant died of a lung infection after he had been fed a formula deprived of all linoleic acid starting at the age of two days," the newspaper said.
The Globe said the report noted "that severely deprived infants had more severe reactions to infection."

"Young infants receiving diets very low in linoleic acid seemed to react severely when outbreaks of staphylococcal infection developed in the hospital environment," the researchers reported. The Globe said.
The later study, like the first one, was exhumed from the medical literature by Dr. Alvin F. Poussaint, a black psychiatrist who is associate dean for student affairs at Harvard Medical School, the newspaper reported. Poussaint began his search after reading news accounts of congressional hearings on human experimentation.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

Austerity Program

President Nixon's austerity program has congressmen talking out of one side of their mouths for publication and out of the other side in private conversation.

In Washington, they are privately agreeing with Nixon that the handout programs are eating this country alive, while back at home they are deploring Nixon's drawback of funds.

Meantime, mayors of cities being hit by the economy moves origination in Washington are screaming like stuck pigs, demanding that the funds be restored even before they are cut.

It is quite evident that this country has been on a 40-year binge and that it is time somebody took a rather hard look at where we were, where we are and where we are going. President Nixon seems to be attempting to do this. So, let's give him a chance.

This country is $500 billion in debt and going more in debt every day. People have been saying for years that "something needs to be done." President Nixon has said he will do something, and it looks as though he is trying.

Many of the Utopian commitments of the Great Society amounted to nothing more than great islands of boondoggery. In case after documented case, it has been proved that the cost of administering such programs often exceeded their value.

Certainly the President knew that such cutbacks would not be popular. Nixon has proved already, however, that he is capable of making unpopular decisions and of sticking by them.

Nobody likes his own ox to be gored, and when one's own ox is gored, the owner yells. So the cries are coming, but mostly from people who have cushy jobs doing nothing or from mayors of towns and cities who have grown accustomed to counting on the federal government for about a third of their municipal budgets.

The demonstration in Washington the other day of representatives of "poor people" was a sham. They couldn't jostle each other in the crown for fear of losing a diamond earring or getting expensive shoes trampled on.

Certainly there has been some good to come out of the poverty programs of the past, but at what cost? While a relative handful of youngsters or really poor were benefiting from the millions, even billions of dollars directed into poverty programs, there were many more who got fat off poverty. The tax payer got stuck, as usual, and the disadvantaged got little more than broken promises.

Sadly, the poverty programs have been dismal failures. While some good has come from a few programs, most of them have been mere shakedown of the harried tax payer.

What the Nixon Administration is trying to do, apparently whether it succeeds or not—is to get the federal budget somewhere near balance. That's not an easy task, and it might just be an impossible task unless Americans are willing to do some belt tightening themselves and are willing to support the elimination of outmoded programs that were designed for conditions that no longer exist.

We cannot afford to support programs simply because, down through the years, this or that special interest has acquired a proprietary concern for never-ending federal benefits.

Mail Pace Slows

One of our readers must have been musing about changes in postal rates for first class mail. Remember there was once a two-cent stamp, and two deliveries a day, and since there have been three-cent, four-cent, six-cent and now eight-cent stamps. And mail does travel cross-country faster than in the two-cent days, but perhaps our reader was thinking of how long it takes him to get mail back and forth from Pampa to Dallas, when he was moved to write the following ditty which was pasted on the reverse side of this envelope to use.

"First the P.O.D. upped the rate. Then they slowed their gait. Now we sit and wait and wait. That seems to be our fate."

"Proclaim liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

Stand Up And Be Counted?

By MARILYN MANION

This is the story of a man who did what he believed was right. It is written in hopes that the saga is yet unfinished.

Filimon Kowtoniuk was born in the Ukraine. During World War II, he fought in the anti-Nazi and anti-Communist undergrounds. He was imprisoned during the last half of the war in Nazi concentration camps.

Dr. Kowtoniuk — he earned his Ph.D. in Germany — came to the United States in 1949. In 1961, he began teaching Russian at Virginia State College. In 1965, he became a tenured associate professor of modern languages at that institution. Shortly thereafter, his troubles began.

In October, 1969, the administration at Virginia State decided to support a weekend of faculty-student protests against American involvement in Vietnam. Professor Kowtoniuk refused to support the affair; in fact, he organized a counter-protest.

In early 1970, Professor Kowtoniuk voiced his vigorous objections to the United Nations resolution calling for commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Lenin. "Lenin's real role," he wrote, "in victimizing millions of human beings and depriving entire nations of freedoms and the right to determine their own destinies, surely brings him in one line with such self-styled heroes as Adolf Hitler, Benito Mussolini and Joseph Stalin."

Later in 1970, Kowtoniuk protested campus demonstrations against the sending of American troops into Cambodia. By this point, he was known on campus as an anti-Communist activist. Apparently, such persons are not allowed at Virginia State. Dr. Kowtoniuk was fired for "misconduct." Wrote Kenneth Lamott in the January 23, 1972, New York Times Magazine: "Professor Kowtoniuk's troubles seem to have arisen from his anti-Communist activity and his resistance to campus demonstrations opposing the Vietnam war, the Cambodian incursion, and the killing at Kent State, rather than from any lack of competence as a teacher of German and Russian."

Fired because of his deep convictions, the beleaguered professor applied for unemployment compensation from the State of Virginia. He was refused his request; the commission ruled that he was fired from Virginia State for "misconduct" and was therefore not eligible for compensation. Dr. Kowtoniuk appealed his case, but Judge Robert Merhige rejected him.

If he were a Communist like Angela Davis, Professor Kowtoniuk would be in fashion and in demand. As it is, he is penniless and alone. Surely that is not the way things should work in America!

BRUCE BOSSAT Current Misdeeds An Old, Old Story

By BRUCE BOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The appraiser of the Washington scene in 1973 has to be constantly appalled and deeply puzzled at the steady disclosure of sordid dealings involving the Nixon administration.

The ITT case, the Vesco affair, other evidences of political contributions by donors looking for help in their difficulties with the government or simply for favorable rulings, all these have polluted the capital's atmosphere with more "particulate matter" than is healthy for the body politic.

We must not, of course, view this phenomenon as if it were new. Harry Truman, personally clean as a whistle, eulogized for his stout qualities at the time of his death in December. He gave the Republicans the chance to cry "clean up the mess in Washington."

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, always judged by millions of Americans as an impeccable public servant "above politics," had to see his top aide, Sherman Adams, depart the fold under a cloud. Other cases arose to plague the general in his two terms as president.

The list of heavy contributors to the John F. Kennedy campaign of 1960 was not entirely savory. We know very little about what favors, if any, some of them got—or might have gained had Kennedy lived longer.

Furthermore, only a rank newcomer to politics and government could think that even this brief cast-back in history suggests the full dimension of the phenomenon.

Favoritism has been a factor in government—and business—for at least a very long time, and perhaps since the beginnings of truly organized society. It is so commonplace as to deserve being called natural, if that can be said without seeming to endorse it.

An experienced observer knows, too, that favors are not purchased solely by money. Indeed, as viewed across the whole span of society's relationships, the exchange of money may be less a factor than friendship. "Clubbiness" among men is a highly practiced art.

Doctors and lawyers have endlessly been charged with illegally splitting fees. Even novices know that lawyers try to get their cases before "friendly" judges. The whole structure of high-priced legal effort in Washington is rooted in the idea that the most prestigious law firms have not only special expertise in the ways of government, but invaluable "contacts" which can accomplish small miracles of special advantage.

It is obviously no different in business. After all, a high proportion of those seeking favors from government are businessmen. But their dealings with each other have the same off-key ring. Many first will order only from those companies which will order from them.

So what are we witnessing today? Just more of the same?

One striking thing in 1973 is the magnitude of the activity in dollar terms. Is this just a sign of the times, a measure of enlarging affluence?

Or is there something about the caliber of the men drawn into the Nixon fold that encourages such foolish boldness? It surely is foolish, since so much of it has come so easily and quickly to light.

Some politicians here, not unfriendly to the Republican cause, think there are just too many men in this administration—some at or near high level—who truly believe that money moves everything.

There are no proofs the President is one of them. But he may be far too preoccupied with his personal, special concept of being president to attend properly and wisely to what these men are doing.

All that I am I owe to Jesus Christ revealed to me in His divine Book.—David Livingstone, Scottish missionary.

Question Box

QUESTION: The former director of the State Department's International Finance Division recently urged establishment of a world currency to help prevent international monetary crises. What sort of currency would this be?

ANSWER: We have no way of knowing specifically what was in the mind of the former political figure. As we understand it, he called for central banks of various nations, including the Federal Reserve, to deposit gold, "acceptable" national currencies or the International Monetary Fund's special drawing rights with the IMF in return for the world currency. This would be used in place of local currency.

It has long been a dream of the one-worlders to have such a world monetary unit. It is noted that the proposal included the deposit of gold as well as fiat currency in the IMF which would issue and control the paper. We fear that, like the IMF special drawing rights, it would be just another attempt to cover up the real problem, which is inflation in most countries of the world.

The people who are responsible for inflation, the politicians of the world, do not want to be regulated by the one international monetary unit of any value—gold, that precious metal, being scarce, universally acceptable and durable, is the one product which people of all nations will accept. And when it is used as a basis for money, there is an international monetary unit.

But it is necessary to eliminate the artificial restrictions on the ownership of gold, such as those in the United States. A restoration of gold as a medium of exchange world-wide would have no meaning, if individuals here were prohibited from owning, buying and selling that commodity.

The politicians, however, are not prepared to relinquish their privilege of issuing valueless paper currency and continuing the inflation that is causing present problems. And we suspect most persons are unable to see the true advantages they would have from having an honest money supply.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The 1970 Census revealed that the median age of the U.S. population was 28.1 years—down from the 1960 figure of 29.5 years, but higher than the median ages from 1790 through 1930. The World Almanac notes. Those under 18 years accounted for 34.3 per cent of the 1970 population or about 68,000,000, while children under 5 years of age numbered 17,200,000.

Inside Washington

Senate Liberals Unfeeling To Plight of Soviet Jews

By Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — The tender solicitude some liberals display toward Communist Russia is wondrous to behold.

In glaring contradiction to the lofty principles and ideals they stridently invoke against so-called "reactionary" and "fascist" governments, the leftists are blandly unconcerned about what the totalitarian Kremlin does.

On one hand, they are piously outraged moralists; on the other, they are deaf, dumb and blind.

A striking example of this sorry double standard is unfolding in the Senate regarding the proposal by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and seconded by 75 other Senators, barring most-favored-nation treatment to countries that "deny their citizens the right or opportunity to emigrate by imposing the payment of more than nominal taxes, fees or other charges."

Principal target of Jackson's measure (in the form of an amendment to the administration's still-awaited trade bill) is Russia—which virtually prohibits emigration by exacting excessive exit payments.

As a consequence, Jews, writers, scientists, and other professionals and intellectuals are unable to leave the Soviet.

There is no question about the existence of this iron-fisted Communist curb. The grim facts are indisputable. Authoritative and detailed accounts about victims are frequent and unchallengeable.

But as far as the astigmatic, double-standard Senate liberals are concerned, they unctuously see no reason why anything should be done about it.

To do that, they self-righteously declaim, would be "meddling in the internal affairs of another country"—which they are flatly against for two reasons: it's no business of the U.S., and it's wholly contrary to their principles.

So they santonimously say—in direct contradiction to their records.

The Record Curiously, while sonorously against "meddling" in Soviet affairs, they had no qualms about doing exactly that regarding other regimes. Examples:

They vehemently opposed giving economic and military aid to "fascist" Greece. Similarly, they strenuously insisted on retention of the UN embargo on chrome from "racist" Rhodesia—which Sen. Harry Byrd, Ind.-Va., succeeded in discarding. And they were equally all for cracking down on "segregationist" South Africa by voting to deny it a quota under the Sugar Act Extension.

Legislating punitively against these "right-wing" countries was righteous and just. But doing the same thing to Russia?—include them out!

Foremost among this group is Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis.—McGovern-type radical, militant dove and carping critic of the military, and zealous prober and crusader. Nelson's ambition is to keep in the public eye as adroitly and persistently as his head-lining Wisconsin colleague, Sen. William Proxmire.

Others include: Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., test chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee and rancorous dove still smarting from a stinging verbal pasting administered by Sen. Jackson in a floor debate. Jackson bluntly accused Fulbright of "arrogance," inconsistencies and contradictions.

Also Sens. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., leading dove with a penchant for mod attire and the Washington social whirl; James Abourezk, D-S.D., McGovern protege and, like him, a militant radical; William Hathaway, D-Maine, whose sole claim to fame so far is his unexpected defeat last year of Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, ranking Republican member of the Armed Services Committee.

There are others—in the House as well as the Senate. But these stand out for their particularly blatant inconsistency and reluctance to crack down on Red Russia.

Under Fire

President Nixon's proposal to replace the bumbling 50-member American Revolution Bicentennial Commission with a single administrator is in hot water in the House Judiciary subcommittee considering the plan.

Chairman Harold Donohue, D-Mass., told this column, "I would say majority opinion is against it. We are still deliberating the President's plan, but as of now I doubt very much it will be approved."

"What is likely to be agreed on?"

"Various ideas are under consideration," replied Donohue. "It could be one of them or a combination of them."

"What's wrong with having a single administrator and an assistant administrator, as the President proposed? Certainly there can't be any question that the existing set-up of a 50-member commission has been a dismal flop. Your own subcommittee issued a report strongly criticizing it."

Donohue readily admitted that, but shook his head over one-man rule.

The veteran Massachusetts legislator maintained "this isn't the kind of operation that lends itself best to such an administration. Maybe the best answer is an executive functioning under the direction of a board of directors, like corporations operate."

"Is that what you think your committee will recommend?"

"Could be," smiled Donohue somewhat like that.

The last Congress was so disgusted with the commission's aimless and fruitless record that it voted funds only up to Feb. 15 of this year. As a consequence, when the present Congress took its time in voting a supplemental budget, commission employees faced payless paydays.

A little-noticed 200-page report of Donohue's committee concluded:

"As presently structured, the commission would be unable by 1976 to provide the country with a meaningful bicentennial commemoration. Unless reorganized, given a clear definition of role, and afforded an unambiguous mechanism for executive direction, the commission will continue to flounder in its current haphazard fashion."

There are no crown-wearers in heaven that were not cross-bearers here below.—Charles H. Spurgeon, English clergyman.

Weather Threatens All Sports Events

By CLAY LIVELY

The weather, which is becoming more or less predictable this spring — whenever an athletic event is scheduled you can count on it being wet, cold, windy or all three — threatens to wipe out all the athletic contest slated this weekend.

As of the 9 a.m. deadline for the sports page this morning, only one event slated for today had been cancelled. The girls golf tourney in Borger was called off because of the rain.

Pampa High's boys golf and tennis squads went to Amarillo early this morning but athletic director Ed Lehnick said that he rather imagined they would come back to Pampa without getting any competition — except for the rain.

Lehnick said that he planned to take the injury-depleted track squad to Amarillo later this a.m. to see if it was possible to run in the 24th-annual Amarillo Relays.

He also expressed some doubt as to whether or not he would even let any of the team off the bus.

The Relays had been changed from Dick Bivins Stadium to the West Texas Stadium in Canyon as of this morning. Buffalo Stadium has an all-weather track, but if it was knee deep in water you couldn't run on it.

Besides, to add to the woes of the track squad, two more of the key athletes on the team, Rick McGuire and Noel Hanson, have colds and it is doubtful if Lehnick would want them to run in wet, cold conditions.

McGuire and Hanson join Larry Marlar, Chuck Reeves and Steve Mathis in the ranks of the sick and injured.

The rainfall accumulation in Pampa for the 24 hours ending at 6:30 a.m. today was 1.88 inches.

That much water makes Optimist Park resemble a lake more than a ball park so the District 3-AAAA opener between Pampa and Caprock was sure to be postponed.

That just about takes care of all the sports scheduled for this weekend. Should a miraculous drying-out occur, Pampa's two junior highs may be able to compete at the Perryton meet tomorrow.

Girls Beat Palo Duro

Pampa High's volleyball team beat Palo Duro last night 15-3, 15-3 to move one step closer to the undisputed district title.

All PHS has to do is beat Caprock Monday to win the crown. A victory over the Longhorns would give Pampa a 5-1 record in the second half, a mark more than likely to be equaled by Tascosa.

Where the Harvesters have the advantage is that they tied with Amarillo High for the league's first half title, also with a 5-1 mark.

Should Pampa High tie for both rounds in the district, a playoff would not be necessary.

Los Angeles To Meet Bulls To Begin Defense

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers open defense of their National Basketball Association championship tonight with their first playoff opponent the Chicago Bulls, picked by the flip of a coin instead of the toss of a ball.

The Lakers were to have met the Bucks in Milwaukee for a pre-playoff matchup to decide the No. 1 spot in the Western Conference, since the teams finished with 60-22 records and their season series even at 3-3.

But Laker players balked, backed by the NBA Players Association, contending their contract called for only 82 games before the playoffs.

So instead playing a game, a coin was tossed and Milwaukee won the call Thursday, getting the top position, the home court advantage in the conference finals and the Golden State Warriors, fourth in the conference, as a playoff foe instead of third place Chicago.

Two other NBA series also get under way tonight—Golden State at Milwaukee and Baltimore at the New York Knicks.

The opening of the American Basketball Association playoffs finds Carolina entertaining the New York Nets and Virginia at Kentucky.

Just about everyone except the Lakers commented on the coin flip.

"When I was told LA didn't want to play us I couldn't believe it," Bucks Coach Larry Costello said in Milwaukee.

"To me, if you don't have the guts to come in here and play a game for a conference championship—well, it's hard for me to visualize," he said.

Owner Frank Meuli, whose Warriors said they would rather play Los Angeles than travel to Milwaukee, said, "This decision to use a frivolous toss to decide upon a championship after a long, hard season of 82 games is without precedent in major league sports history."

About the only person to voice some tentative approval was Bulls' Coach Dick Motta, who said, "Maybe we'd just as soon play the Lakers right now, because the Bucks are awfully hot at the moment." Milwaukee has won its last 14 games.

Golden State was second to Los Angeles in the Pacific Division while Chicago finished second behind Milwaukee in the Midwest. If Los Angeles had won the coin flip, the Lakers would have played Golden State in the best-of-7 series and the Bulls the Bucks.

In New York, it will be the Knicks against the Baltimore Bullets and the Bullets against Madison Square Garden.

"The home court is particularly difficult in the Garden," said Baltimore Coach Gene Shue. "The Knicks are very tough there because of the fans and other things." He apparently was referring sarcastically to past criticism of officiating in New York.

In the ABA, Carolina, coming off a fifth-place finish a year ago, ran and pressed its way to the Eastern crown thanks to the coaching of Larry Brown and the addition of all-star forward Billy Cunningham.

When the playoffs are over, the Nets will lose Coach Lou Carnesecca back to the college ranks where he came. The Nets finished third a year ago but made it all the way to the finals, only to lose to Indiana and hope history repeats.

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Lee Elder fired a career best round of 64 and took the first round lead in the $210,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

Lee Elder Leading Greensboro Golf

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — "This week," Lee Elder promised with a big smile, "it'll be a little different from last week."

Elder, now down to this one last chance to win his way into the Masters, had just fashioned a sparkling seven-under-par 64 but admitted it could have been better for the first round lead Thursday in the $210,000 Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

And the personable guy from Washington, D.C. seeking to become the first black player to compete in the famed tournament at Augusta, Ga., next week found himself in a familiar position.

He'd opened with a 65 for first round lead in the New Orleans Open last week. He clung to a share of the top spot in the second round, then faded in the last 36 holes as his chances for a Masters' berth appeared to have vanished.

He needs to win to make it and few thought he could sustain the pressure to challenge two weeks in a row.

It was obvious the pressure didn't bother him as he heeled off seven birdies and no bogeys. In fact he even complained, "I got a little too relaxed" after hitting a bad tee shot that cost him a chance at a birdie on the final hole.

Elder 38, held only a one-stroke lead over veterans Doug Sanders, Mason Rudolph and Rod Funseth, tied at 65 in the exceptionally low scoring of the first round.

First time Jack Nicklaus played the Masters golf tournament as a pro was in 1961. He finished seven strokes back of Gary Player. Since then he has won the title four times.

Four Teams Left

GALLUP, N.M. (AP) — The defending national champions from John F. Kennedy College in Wahoo, Neb., and the second-seeded Raytown, Mo., Pipersettes are among the four teams left in the National AAU Women's Basketball Tournament. The tourney has narrowed to semifinal action today, with only two matches scheduled. The winners of today's games will meet Saturday for the national championship.

The two top seeded teams are accompanied into the semifinals by a surprise darkhorse team from Allentown, Pa. The unseeded Crestettes have bumped off two seeded teams in two days.

Thursday, the Crestette's downed Ouachita Baptist University from Arkadelphia, Ark., 63-53.

The Crestettes meet Raytown, which beat the New York Chuckles 73-44 Thursday.

Kennedy College, which beat Marion Kay of Brownsville, Ind., 62-39, meets Parsons College of Fairfield, Iowa in the other semifinal match.

Parsons downed Home Federal of Des Moines Iowa Thursday, 58-48 to move to the semifinals.

Tryouts Changed

The second and third tryouts for Babe Ruth League baseball have been postponed because of the rain.

Monday and Tuesday are the tentative dates. The tryouts will be at 5:30 p.m. each day at Optimist Park for all interested boys ages 13 through 15.

Boys may still register for the league by going to the tryout Monday. To be eligible to play a boy must make two of the three tryouts, so it is not too late—if a ball player makes both the remaining tryouts.

Dolphins To Swim

The Pampa Dolphin Swim Club and the Amarillo Aquatic Club will meet in a dual swim meet at the Pampa Youth and Community Center Saturday.

There will be over 50 events for swimmers of all age groups with ribbons awarded to the first 6 places in each event.

The meet starts at 9 a.m. All members of the Pampa Dolphin Swim Club will be competing in the meet.

On April 7 the Dolphin Swim Club will enter a meet at the ABC Boys Club in Lubbock, Tex. and on April 14, the swim team will enter the West Texas AAU Junior Olympic Meet at the Amarillo Aquatic Club.

These three meets complete the short course swimming season for the Dolphin Swim team.

Following the Junior Olympic meet, the team will hold an annual banquet and most improved swim trophies will be awarded to the girl and boy who have compiled the most points for improved swim times during the present year.

Scott Martin and Pam Mills are the current point leaders.

Off to Britain? Better Brush up on Your English

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Americans who visit foreign countries often hire an English-speaking guide. When they visit England they might do well to hire an American-speaking guide.

Failing that, they could resort to a new book by Norman W. Schur, "British Self-Taught: With Comments in American." It's a dictionary that bridges the communication gap between those who speak American and those who speak British.

An American in England can be bewildered to learn that you can go by motor coach, by tram or by underground to a shop, where you take a lift to an upper storey and buy a reel of cotton, some nappies and a pram. Unless you have enough notes in your notecase to give the shop assistant, you'll have to use hire-purchase.

With the help of Schur's glossary it's easy enough to figure out that what you can do is go by bus, by streetcar or by subway to a store, where you take an elevator to an upper floor and buy a spool of thread, some diapers and a baby carriage. Unless you have enough bills in your billfold to give the salesman, you'll have to use the installment plan.

Schur is a lawyer here in New York — a solicitor in England, where he spends five months a year and has a special license to practice. He began collecting Britishisms after a conversation with his British-oriented son during which he realized they were speaking two different languages.

"I have always been interested in words, syntax, usage," says Schur, who in addition to American and British speaks

Italian, "credible" French, "decent" German, "a bit of" Spanish and "not so bad" Yiddish. "I began making a list of words I came across in books, letters and conversation. I expanded it with comments and somehow or other it became a book."

Some differences are only a matter of spelling, he points out, such as those ending in -our (colour, honour); the re-group (centre, theatre); the -ise words (criticize, agonize) and -ion words (connexion, inflexion), plus variations such as tyre and kerb.

"There's so much back-and-forth traveling now that they're picking up our Yankeeisms and we're picking up their Britishisms, but I think we're giving us," says the Boston native, a man with iron-gray hair and matching mustache. "Their flat is becoming an apartment, they're substituting radio for wireless and not long ago they wouldn't have known what a T-shirt is."

Though Americans don't actually have to use sign language in order to talk to their British cousins, there are a few things they would find handy to know, he notes. "For instance, a 'public convenience' is what is often a private necessity — a rest room. And don't ever ask an English friend to hang his coat in a closet, which means toilet. Ask him to hang it in the cupboard."

American motorists, too, might find things a bit confusing, aside from the initial confusion that comes with driving on the left. There are no turnpikes or thruways, but only motorways. You often drive on a dual carriageway, which in U.S. terms is a divided highway and you park at a lay-by, more familiarly known in this country as a rest area.

Beware of asking for a martini, he warns, or you'll wind up with a glass of vermouth. "If you really want a martini ask for a gin and French, specify extremely little French and say you want it served very cold by stirring over blocks (cubes) of ice."

A Famous Place?

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Don't be bugged with the commonplace!" the advertisement says. "Locate your offices at the Watergate in Washington."

"Is there a better known location?" asks the ad in The Washington Post and the Star-News. "This is the best known office building in the world."

For rent is a sixth-floor area of 16,000 square feet being vacated by the Democratic National Committee, which is moving to less expensive quarters.

The offices were bugged last summer. Lee Eisen, vice president in charge of real estate and advertising at the Watergate, decided it might pay to advertise his property had been burglarized.

"As far as we're concerned," he said, "it has been a plus for our complex. It has made Watergate a world-famous name, and we were famous before."

IN WATERGATE CASE

A New Credibility Gap Could Hurt Republicans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new version of an old issue, the credibility gap, may harm the Republican White House as detailed accounts of political espionage and wiretapping unfold in court and in Congress.

Already, disclosures about campaign spying have overtaken official White House denials of any involvement.

Now the question, along with what was said and contradicted, is what will remain unsaid because of President Nixon's use of executive privilege.

Nixon invoked that shield—created by custom and precedent, not by law—to prevent congressional testimony by former and present members of his personal staff.

The President has said specifically that he will not allow John W. Dean III, counsel to the President, to testify before Congress in formal session.

Dean will furnish information to Senate Watergate investigators, Nixon said, "provided it is pertinent to the investigation."

That leaves it to the White House to decide what is or is not pertinent.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, the Democratic whip, said he suspected a White House coverup, despite Nixon's assurance that executive privilege would not be used to prevent disclosure of embarrassing information.

So far, indications are that the public doesn't think much about the whole affair anyway.

Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern made no headway in his 1972 campaign effort to turn the Watergate into a cutting issue against Nixon.

Indeed, surveys indicated Nixon was gaining support as a candidate more people trusted. The credibility issue worked to his advantage in the landslide victory over McGovern.

It had been a helpful issue four years earlier, too, when Nixon ran against the record of a Democratic administration that had gradually escalated an undeclared war, had told voters that conflict could be financed without any belt-tightening at home.

Nixon addressed himself specifically to the credibility gap—a Democratic problem—in that 1968 campaign, and said: "I think that a president must, wherever he possibly can, make the decision for more knowledge rather than less. I have great confidence in what the American people are able to assimilate, and I think, if you tell the American people the truth, they will make the hard decisions."

Early in his first term, Nixon issued instructions that were to have strictly limited the use of executive privilege. Those guidelines were amended by the new rules which, presumably, will keep Dean and such men as former White House appointments secretary Dwight L. Chapin from testifying about the Watergate and related affairs.

Before the election, there were published reports that Chapin and Herbert W. Kalmbach, Nixon's personal attorney, were involved in hiring an alleged political spy for the Republicans.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Jerome will make millions of teachers howl! But his comment about the "educational and hospital complex" is prodding many taxpayers into a threatened revolt. So ponder his idea of having teachers bid to operate various rooms in our school buildings!

CASE W-565: Jerome D., aged 37, is an advertising executive.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "last fall our schools didn't open for several weeks because of a teachers' strike."

"Yet I have youngsters in grammar as well as high school and the caliber of teaching is so inferior, I am ready to vote for a return to private schools."

"But our Teachers' Colleges keep stressing the need for 4 years of college and now they even demand a Masters' Degree for high school."

"Yet the number of degrees behind the teacher's name is no guarantee as to the output of the students under her care!"

"Some of our most educated teachers are the poorest in motivating youngsters to read or add and subtract."

"And I am not joking! I tested my daughter's Girl Scout Troop and found only 3 who could add a simple column of 4-place numbers!"

"Why, the average waitress nowadays can't even add correctly the price of a cheeseburger, pie and coffee on the luncheon tab she gives you."

"So why not wash out the heavy burden on taxpayers for our public schools, as well as public colleges."

"In my state, for example, a budget of $669,000,000 was demanded for our 6 state colleges, just to tide them over the next 2 years."

"But taxpayers have already financed their huge buildings, laboratories, libraries, etc."

"And 50 private colleges in my state don't soak us taxpayers a red cent, but rely on tuition!"

"Our Founding Fathers didn't expect Uncle Sam to compete with private enterprise."

"So why should my state's 6 tax financed colleges compete with the other 50 private universities and colleges?"

"Isn't that unfair, as per our Founding Fathers' intent?"

"And every village has several churches, whose religious education quarters could be used 5 week days for teaching the basic courses, such as math, reading, history and English."

"And we have enough housewives who are superb educators (many being former top-notch teachers) to operate grammar schools in the now unused church facilities."

"Let the parents pay a reasonable tuition."

"And even at the high school level, let's use our already massive multi-million dollar educational 'palaces' but let the teachers enter into competitive bidding for the right to teach 9th grade English or sophomore math, etc."

"Then the teachers would depend on tuition, so they'd take a greater personal interest in their pupils' advancement. Otherwise, they'd not be able to recruit another roomful the next term, so their income would drop!"

"This would force the teachers to operate like businessmen or lawyers and doctors, whose income is based on 'output' rather than mere college degrees and 'tenure'."

"At present, I am not so worried about the 'military-industrial' complex that President Eisenhower mentioned as the 'School and Hospital' complex that threatens to bankrupt Uncle Sam."

"Our Founding Fathers didn't attend free public schools!"

"Their mothers or clergymen and private tutors gave us Washington, Jefferson and those signers of the Declaration of Independence."

"Dr. Crane, didn't Benjamin Franklin and Lincol'n show what ambitious kids could do without any B.A. or M.S. faculty?"

"So challenge your readers to debate the total elimination of free public schools."

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Bldg., Melilot, Indiana 47538. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 12 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Gun Deaths Showing Increase

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In one week this month, 345 men, women and children in the United States were shot to death. Some were the victims of armed robbers, some were policemen killed in the line of duty, some were shot during family quarrels.

Other gun deaths were more bizarre: a bartender machine-gunned as he sat in his car at a Boston intersection, a teenage couple executed as they kneeled by a sleeping bag in the Arizona desert.

The 345 deaths, counted in an Associated Press survey the week of March 4-11, represented a 40 per cent increase over those counted in the last similar survey four years ago.

In each of three previous AP surveys, gunshot deaths totaled about 200: There were 199 in June 16-23, 1968; 192 in July 7-14, 1968, and 206 in June 15-22, 1969.

The dates for the AP surveys were chosen at random. The first two were taken in the wake of the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. The third came a year later after passage of a federal gun control law.

In the latest survey, 236 deaths were classified as homicides, 89 as suicides and 20 as accidents. While the total number of gunshot deaths rose 40 per cent since the 1969 survey, homicides climbed 44.5 per cent, suicides 33.7 per cent and accidental deaths 20 per cent.

The weapons included the small, cheap handguns called "Saturday night specials" and often used in holdups, a father's revolver in the hands of a curious infant, the family shotgun grabbed during a quarrel.

In most states, there are no attempts to compile comprehensive, statewide records of gun deaths until weeks or months after they occur. And, in many cases, the type of weapon is not always listed immediately.

But in the 345 gun deaths counted March 4-11, at least 128 — or 37.1 per cent — of the weapons used were handguns. Handguns were responsible for at least 41.4 per cent of the homicides, 25.8 per cent of the suicides, and 20.5 per cent of the accidental deaths.

Ten persons were killed during holdups; and five robbery suspects were killed by police.

In Washington, D.C., a bank robbery suspect pointed a gun at a police officer and pulled the trigger five times; each time the gun misfired. Before the man could pull the trigger again, the officer fired, killing one of two armed men who had fled from the scene of the robbery.

The 1968 federal gun control law banned interstate mail or der sales of rifles, shotguns and all types of ammunition. It also banned most over-the-counter sales to out-of-state residents.

The 1968 law also banned imports of cheap, small caliber pistols, but a number of U.S. firms sell "Saturday night specials" assembled locally from parts shipped in from overseas.

Attempts to get tighter controls have failed in Congress.

Last year, the Senate passed a bill to prohibit the sale of easily concealed handguns, ranging from the cheap "Saturday night specials" to expensive, snub-nosed handguns. But the House took no action on the bill, and its chief sponsor, Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., says he sees no point in reintroducing it this year unless there are signs the House will pass it.

One bill reintroduced this year would require registration of all firearms and licensing of owners. The bill, proposed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., failed 78-11 last year.

No hearings have been scheduled in either of the houses on any of the proposals.

MOVING DAY for a Saturn IB at Kennedy Space Center marks a major step forward in the Skylab orbital workshop project. The huge rocket makes the slow journey from the huge assembly building to the launch site for the first stage of the manned orbital workshop. Launch is scheduled for May.

David, Julie To Washington

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — David Eisenhower and his wife, Julie, have headed for Washington after his discharge from the Navy.

Mrs. Eisenhower had been living in Atlantic Beach while her husband served as a lieutenant (j.g.) aboard the Guided Missile Cruiser USS Albany at Mayport Naval Station much of the past two years.

Eisenhower was discharged Wednesday after serving two years and five months in the Navy.

Mrs. Eisenhower said earlier that they will stay at the White House with her parents temporarily and later will move into a home in Maryland which they will rent from C.G. "Bebe" Rebozo, close friend of President Nixon.

Eisenhower said he plans a career in journalism.
