Familiar themes in final State of Union speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is heading to Capitol Hill for his last State of the Union address, attempting to set an upbeat tone but offering no sweeping proposals for his remaining months in office.

Reagan appears before a joint session of the House and Senate for tonight's 9 p. m. EST speech, which will be nationally televised.

The president, aides say, will stick to tried-and-true themes from his seven-year tenure. He'll challenge Congress to drop partisan bickering and address what he considers the unfinished business of his administration.

But there will be no mention of the Iran-Contra affair that rocked Reagan's administration in 1987.

Offering a taste of his remarks in his Saturday radio address, Reagan said he wants to make sure the nation preserves "the economic growth of the past five years."

One White House official familiar with the speech said it reflects Reagan's approach to his final year at the nation's helm, calling it "upbeat, but realistic." The official spoke on condition of anonymity.

"It's not conciliatory, but it's not drawing a line in the sand, either," the official said. "It just tries to say that even though Congress and the president have their differences, they can work together to get things done."

Another official, also speaking anonymously, said it would be inappropriate for Reagan to offer "wild and exotic" policy proposals in his final year.

"You're completing an agenda that spans eight years. You're trying to put it in place," the official said.

Reagan will challenge Congress to revise its erratic budget process and will press for cuts in federal spending. Yet he'll also pledge to put more money into public education — nearly $21 billion — and suggest new initiatives to battle illegal drugs.

"I will mention ways to raise the quality of our schools," Reagan said. "But I will remind Congress that the most important thing is not to throw quantities of money at education but to tie funding to results and to have a commitment to quality and to state and local control of schools."

Last year, Reagan proposed slashing school spending and targeted anti-drug programs for cutbacks.

To spur budget reform, Reagan will criticize the last-minute spending bill approved by Congress just before Christmas, a 2,000-page document that contained surprises discovered only after it was signed.

Reagan said he'll speak on cutting the federal budget deficit. "And I may have a surprise, too, a way right now for Congress to show it's serious about putting the government's house in order," Reagan said without elaborating.

On foreign policy, Reagan will push for Senate ratification of the U.S.-Soviet treaty banning intermediate range weapons and will attempt to rebut those in Congress who would cut his "Star Wars" missile defense program, also known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Reagan also will pledge a make-or-buy effort to obtain more money for the Contra rebels battling the leftist Sandinista government of Nicaragua.

Although Reagan is not expected to discuss the specific amount of aid for the rebels in his speech, he'll send Congress a formal request later this week in a legislative package that fleshes out the themes of his address. If Reagan loses the battle, with votes scheduled in the House and Senate next week, Contra aid dries up Feb. 29.

Commissioners to consider legal opinions

Pampa city commissioners will consider two legal opinions from City Attorney Don Lane during their regular meeting at 6 p. m. Tuesday.

Both matters — one concerning a $10 fee imposed for driving citations in Municipal Court and the other concerning accounts payable — arise from discussions at the Jan. 12 commission meeting.

During the citizens request period at the previous regular meeting, former mayor candidate Gene Finney alleged the court was imposing a $10 fine illegally in cases where an offender opted to take a safe driving course for dismissal of a traffic citation.

Finney claimed the court should not be assessing the fee since the city had not passed the necessary applicable ordinance when presented during September.

In a written opinion included in this week's agenda packet, Lane states the fee is not illegal but is permitted by other state statutes granting the court the discretion of imposing a fee in those cases.

The other matter arose during a sometimes heated discussion Jan. 12 regarding accounts payable. Commissioner Richard Peet raised questions regarding the city manager's responsibility in presenting accounts payable to the commission for approval.

Hart claimed the City Charter does not require the commission's actual approval of the accounts, noting that the checks had already been issued. He said he was presenting them to the commission under tradition established in the past in line with the requirement that he keep the commission informed of the city's financial condition.

Peet claimed that the commission should be doing the actual approving of the accounts.

The two also disagreed over definitions of warrants and checks, with Peet saying a warrant is a check. Hart had stated the commission only authorizes the warrants by which the city writes its checks to pay accounts.

In his written opinion in the agenda packet, Lane discusses the legalities of warrants and checks, noting there are specific definitions legally accepted in government codes concerning the two terms. The two terms are not interchangeable in relation to city expenditures under government codes, Lane writes; a warrant is a promise to pay the amount specified, while a check is a draft drawn on a bank and payable on demand.

Lane notes that the City Charter recognizes that the city operates under a city manager form of government, with the city manager being the administrative head with authority to administer the city's programs. Lane explains that he interprets the charter to also authorize warrant financing.

The City Charter was adopted in 1927 and does not refer to expenditures made under an approved budget, he notes. But a state Budget Act enacted by the Legislature in 1931 requires municipalities to adopt budgets, with municipal funds to be spent in compliance with budgets except in emergency cases.

Under those conditions, the city manager, as administrative head of the government, has the authority to authorize expenditures in accordance with the budget, Lane indicates. Accordingly, the city manager's presentation of accounts payable to the commission is in accordance with his responsibility to keep the commission informed of the city's financial condition.

Expenditures made in accordance with the budget approved by the commission thus fall within the city manager's authority without his having to get formal permission from the commission for every check issued, Lane implies.

In other business Tuesday, the commissioners will consider:

- second and final reading of an ordinance requiring consumers and sellers of natural gas to obtain a city permit to transport gas through pipelines constructed on public ways;
- creation of a task force to review the utility rate structure and set a meeting date;
- adoption of a resolution establishing procedures for the conduct of commission meetings;
- authorization for the mayor to execute Amendment 1 to the engineering contract with CH2M Hill for wastewater treatment plant modifications; and
- approval of the list of disbursements.

In other matters, the commission also has scheduled an executive session to discuss personnel matters, including the semi-annual evaluation of the city manager.

Soldier inspects plane's wreckage.

Survivor says CIA air-dropping Contra aid from Honduras

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A crewman of a Contra supply plane shot down by leftist Sandinista troops said the aircraft took off from a CIA-manned base in Honduras, and the Nicaraguan government claimed the pilot worked for the CIA.

President Daniel Ortega said late Sunday that the statements by Alejandro Sanchez Herrera proved Honduras is violating provisions of a Central American peace plan by allowing anti-Sandinista rebels to operate out of Honduras.

The Defense Ministry said four crewmen — three Nicaraguans and a Colombian pilot — were killed when the vintage DC-6 supply plane was shot down with a Soviet-made, surface-to-air missile over southern Nicaragua late Saturday.

There were no Americans on board, according to the government and the U.S.-backed Contras.

Sanchez Herrera, a Nicaraguan, said the plane was known to the other crew members only as "Richard." The Defense Ministry said the pilot worked for the CIA. Sanchez Herrera was allowed to talk to reporters Sunday while under military custody in the town of San Carlos, a few miles from the crash site.

Sanchez Herrera said two men parachuted from the plane with a supply of food and ammunition for the Contras before it was shot down. He said he believed the men had received explosives training in the United States.

He said the plane took off from a CIA-manned base in Swan Island in Honduras and that about 30 CIA operatives directed the mission from the island. The U.S.

has used Swan Island to monitor shipping and military activity in the area.

Spokesmen at the State Department were not available Sunday night to comment on the charges against the CIA.

Addressing leaders of the National Farmers and Ranchers Union, Ortega said Sanchez Herrera's statement is proof that Honduras is allowing the United States to use its territory in activities against Nicaragua.

The peace plan which Ortega and the presidents of Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala and Costa Rica signed last August prohibits the signatory nations to allow insurgents of other countries to operate on their territory.

It also calls for cease-fires in the region's wars, democratic reforms and amnesty for political prisoners.

Earlier, both Ortega's brother, Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, and Contra spokeswoman Marta Sacaza in Miami had said there were 11 people on board the plane and only one survived and was captured.

But journalists who visited the scene Sunday said they saw four bodies in or near the wreckage. They were told by military and other authorities that these were all the bodies found.

Two Americans, Eugene Hasenfus of Marinette, Wis., and James Jordan Denby of Carlinville, Ill., have been shot down over Nicaragua.

Hasenfus, whose plane was downed Oct. 5, 1986, was convicted in 1986 of flying supplies to the Contras but was pardoned by Ortega after serving less than 90 days of a 30-year sentence.

Shultz leads off drive for INF treaty approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is the lead-off witness in the Reagan administration's drive for Senate approval of a treaty with the Soviet Union to abolish intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

The treaty, signed last month at the superpower summit here, has the endorsement of the West European allies, all the Democratic candidates for president and the two leading Republican aspirants, Vice President George Bush and Senate GOP leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

But a determined band of conservatives led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., will try to amass the 34 votes required to kill the treaty by denying it a two-thirds Senate majority.

Helms took an advance shot at the treaty Saturday when he released a 180-page memorandum criticizing the pact section-by-section.

Helms has accused the Soviets of submitting false data on their nuclear forces and has tried to revive accusations leveled principally in the past by President Reagan: that Moscow is a habitual violator of treaties with the United States.

Treaty supporters are as concerned about so-called "killer" amendments as they are about outright rejection. Such amendments could imperil the accord by requiring a reopening of U.S.-Soviet negotiations.

They also are concerned that an anti-Soviet mood in the Senate might make it difficult to complete a second accord to curb longer-range nuclear weapons. Negotiations on that pact are under way in Geneva in an attempt to reach agreement before Reagan and Soviet General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev hold their next summit meeting, probably in Moscow in June.

Super collider bewilders, worries some residents

RED OAK (AP) — Residents in Ellis County are asking a multi-million dollar question: "What is the 'super collider'?"

The best answer to date is that the super collider is a giant atom smasher that is promising hundreds of jobs and a huge payroll to its host state, but will require the state to borrow at least $500 million to help build.

Some area residents are concerned about the prospect of having the expensive — or lucrative — mystery project in their backyard, while others say they're simply confused by the federal research project touted as the biggest single scientific research instrument ever.

"I have no earthly idea what it does," said Billy Hefflin, 51, manager of Knox Fuel Stop on Interstate 35 in Red Oak, 15 miles south of Dallas. "Does it break up comets or something?"

An Ellis County site is one of seven finalists for the $4.4 billion super collider, to be built in an oval tunnel 52 miles in circumference beneath pastures and farmland. Passing near Red Oak, Bardwell and other small county towns, it could displace homes and businesses.

It would be used to engineer collisions between atomic particles at ultra-high speeds.

Dale Biggs, a 58-year-old contractor who lives near Red Oak, said he thinks he knows what the super collider would do and what the benefits could be.

"It will break down atoms to try to determine what the most basic matter is," he said. "And if they can solve that puzzle, they can make clothes that will last a lifetime and thin plastics as strong as steel."

Biggs knows of other benefits if the atom smasher is built in Ellis County. He said he has a $120,000 house he'd like to sell to one of the scientists who would move to the area.

"I'd like to get out from under the payments," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

In Bardwell, about 20 miles southeast of Red Oak, Curtis Farmer said he questions the $1 billion in inducements the state has offered to sweeten Texas' bid for the project. The package includes issuing $500 million in general obligation bonds that voters must approve in elections next November.

"I've seen it on TV, and you can't make heads or tails of it," said Farmer, who runs a general store. "The state is broke. Why be excited about something that's going to take your money away from you?"

Some area residents welcome the economic boom that would accompany the atom smasher.

"If it comes out here, they say land values will double," Hefflin said. "You'll see supermarkets and every kind of business out here. We'll be another Plano" — a reference to a far north Dallas suburb that has boomed over the past decade.

But others are concerned about problems the project could bring. See WORRIES, Page 2

Escape systems being studied by NASA

HOUSTON (AP) — NASA is studying two escape systems for future space shuttle flights to avoid any Challenger-type accidents, officials said.

Ejection seats and a concept called "seated extraction" are the two systems being studied. The difference is in how the astronauts get out.

Explosive charges would shoot ejection seats to safety with the occupants strapped in them, while extraction would pull crew members from their seats with small rockets.

NASA this month asked the orbiter's prime contractor, Rockwell International, to estimate the cost and weight of both alternatives.

William Chandler, manager of crew escape systems for the shuttle orbiter, said he hopes to make a recommendation in September to shuttle program manager Arnold Aldrich.

Both systems being studied would significantly increase the number of possible emergencies a crew could survive, but installing them requires major reconstruction, ranging from enlarging an existing escape panel to slicing off the roof of the shuttle's cabin, a Johnson Space Center manager said.

"It would probably put each (shuttle) vehicle down for a year to 18 months," Chandler said. "If they're used at all, it would be five years from now, probably."

The agency has considered both systems previously along with a self-contained crew module thought to be the best way to save shuttle astronauts from a catastrophic launch. NASA concluded the module weighs too much.

Ejection seats require a larger hatch and stronger seats than extraction. Either method needs a new hole in the cabin, Chandler said.

"Frankly, anything we do from this point on becomes a major change," he said. "It's kind of like going in and making an addition to an existing house."

Rockwell built the first shuttle, Columbia, with ejection seats. The hardware was removed as scheduled after Columbia's fifth flight because NASA felt the ejection seats wouldn't enable an entire crew to escape from the spacecraft in an emergency.

Chandler said he doubts astronauts will use either escape method if something goes wrong during a shuttle's boost phase, but not because they fear burning in the engines' exhaust.

The crew probably would try to ride out the two-minute boost, he said, because bailing out then would sacrifice the orbiter, a $1 billion-plus machine.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is testing simpler escape systems that will be ready in time for the next shuttle mission, scheduled to begin no earlier than July 15.

The Challenger blew up 73 seconds after liftoff on Jan. 18, 1986, as its engines and two booster rockets were firing. The seven crew members had almost no warning and no way to get out.

Businessman seeks senate seat

AMARILLO — Businessman Mel Phillips has formally announced his intention to seek the Democratic nomination for the 31st District state senate seat currently held by Sen. Bill Sarpalus.

Sarpalus, D-Canyon, is giving up the office to run for Congress. Phillips will face H. Bryan Poff and Nancy Garms, both of Amarillo, in the Democratic primary. The winner will face either Teel Bivins or Ron Slover, both Amarillo Republicans.

Phillips, 42, and his family moved to Amarillo in 1947. He holds a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Texas. He served in the U.S. Navy as an aviator and computer systems analyst. He was honorably discharged in 1980 with the rank of lieutenant.

Phillips currently serves on the Texas Aeronautics Commission, and was chairman in 1983-84. He has also served on the Canadian River Authority, the Amarillo Airport Board, the Amarillo Child Care Association and as Randall County Democratic Chairman.

He and his wife, Becky, have three children. The family attends First Presbyterian Church of Amarillo.

Phillips said he is concerned about the Panhandle not receiving back from the state all it pays in taxes. He said he would work to ensure the Panhandle receives its fair share of funds for education, highways and services to senior citizens.

"Recent studies indicate that this senate district receives approximately $1 in services for every $7 it pays in taxes," he said. "It's time that the people of this region received the same consideration as those in the rest of the state."

Calling himself "an old-fashioned Texas Democrat, Phillips said in his campaign announcement that he opposes a state income tax.

"My first-hand experience in government has taught me that we can make government work without raising taxes or interfering in people's lives," he said. "Government can be more efficient."

Large earthquake hits Baja peninsula

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A large earthquake struck the Baja California peninsula in Mexico today, shaking some Californians awake but triggering no immediate damage reports north of the border, officials said.

A preliminary reading put the quake at 6.0 or greater on the Richter scale, said Bill Davis of the California Office of Emergency Services. An earthquake of that magnitude is capable of causing severe damage in a populated area.

He said the quake hit at 5:18 a.m. and was centered 25 miles southeast of San Felipe, a town in Baja California about 125 miles south of the U.S. border.

There were no immediate reports of damage.

All existing locks should be used at all times. Additional locks may be added for more security. Garage doors should be kept closed at all times, especially when you are away from home even for a short time. A crime can occur in a very short period of time.

The city of Pampa currently has two officers — Sgt. Kenneth Hopson and Patrolman Jay Lewis — who have completed a 100-hour course in crime prevention through the Crime Prevention Institute at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

These officers were trained in conducting security surveys for homes and businesses. A security survey is an in-depth, on-site examination of a physical facility and its surrounding property. A survey is conducted to determine a facility's security status, to identify deficiencies or security risks, to define the protection needed, and to make recommendations to minimize criminal opportunity. The security survey is done as a public service at no cost.

The Crime Prevention Unit of your police department also has other methods of crime prevention such as Neighborhood Watch and Operation I.D.

Those who want more information about any of these programs can contact Cpl. Terry Cox at 665-8481, Extension 244.

Burglary, property crimes on rise

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

Burglary and other property crimes are on the rise in our city. No businesses or residences are exempt. These offenses occur in all parts of our city. You can reduce the chances of becoming a target for burglary by using a little extra care, a little extra thought about the security of your home or business.

There are several inexpensive ways to make your home or business more secure. Lighting is the most effective and inexpensive form of security. All bushes, shrubbery and trees should be trimmed to minimize hiding places for criminals.

Worries

"If property values go up, taxes would go out of sight," said Nancy Williams, 42, who lives on the western side of the proposed 52-mile circle.

"The biggest problem is the people who will follow the people who build it," said her husband, Roger, 45. "A lot of them are the wrong kind of people."

Williams said a friend in Glen Rose told him there had been a lot of trouble there since construc-

Shock turns to anger among slain officer's colleagues

DALLAS (AP)— Shock among fellow officers of slain policeman John Chase turned to anger because of a perception they are in a city trying to protect a populace that doesn't support them.

"I think I can speak for a lot of officers. We feel abandoned," Dallas policeman J.C. Harris said Sunday, a day after Chase was shot to death by a homeless man who took his gun during a routine traffic stop on a downtown street and shot him to death as some onlookers urged him on.

"When you feel like nobody, really, cares whether you live or die, and so many people seem to express the sentiment that they want to see you dead, it makes you wonder whether it's really worth it or not," Harris said.

Police Chief Billy Prince blamed the shooting partially on recent criticism of police by Dallas City Council members who have attributed problems between the department and the community to racial tensions.

At the central division station where the 25-year-old Chase worked, flags were at half-staff Saturday. Inside, many officers were in tears, their badges masked with black tape.

"It's something we have to accept," said Sgt. Gary Beck, who supervised Chase on the day shift. "Unfortunately, we can't fail to come to work." A congressional committee met in Dallas last year to look into complaints by black leaders, including some council members, that police used excessive force on several incidents in which officers fatally shot blacks.

Chase was white and the man who shot him was black, but investigators said they knew of no motive for the Saturday shooting.

Relations between the police department and some city leaders were so strained Sunday that police officers asked Mayor Annette Strauss and council members Al Gonzalez, Diane Ragsdale and Al Lipscomb not to attend memorial services scheduled Tuesday morning for the slain officer.

Chase pleaded for his life before he was shot, Prince said at a news conference. Witnesses indicated some people in the crowd watching the incident urged the suspect to shoot the officer, the chief said.

"This is very tough on the officer on the street," Prince said. "Constant bashing" of the police department had created a volatile situation, he said.

"The officer was saying 'Don't shoot me. I'll help you whatever way I can.' But the guy shot him in the head," witness Melitha

Johnson said. Chase, who last month switched from an evening to a day shift to spend more time with his bride, was shot shortly after 8:30 a.m. Saturday before a crowd of about 30 people, some of whom urged Chase's killer to shoot, witnesses said.

The suspect in the shooting, 34-year-old Carl Dudley Williams, was shot by off-duty police officers who responded to the call. The man died a few hours later at Parkland Memorial Hospital, police said.

Williams, described as a street person with a history of mental illness, began arguing with Chase, who was preparing to give a traffic ticket to the driver of a vehicle he had pulled over, police spokeswoman Vicki Hawkins said.

Williams, who didn't know the driver of the car, began fighting with the officer and took his .44-caliber Magnum gun, Ms. Hawkins said.

After the shooting, witnesses said Williams then strolled down the street, dangling the gun from his hand.

Chase, a 2½-year veteran who had received three commendations from the police department, was pronounced dead at the scene. He was wearing a bullet-proof vest but was shot in the face, witnesses said. Officer H.L. McGuire's voice cracked with emotion Sunday as he talked about the incident.

"He (Chase) always had such a positive attitude. Just so full of life. He'd do anything to help you, do whatever it took. But he didn't get any help. Instead he had people cheering the guy on, 'Shoot him! Shoot him!'" McGuire said.

Monica Smith, president of the Dallas Police Association, said some City Council members' criticisms and lack of support in the wake of several shootings by police prompted many rank-and-file officers to hold the council indirectly responsible for the deaths.

Ms. Ragsdale, an outspoken critic of the department, said she didn't understand Ms. Smith's complaints.

"It's unfortunate," Ms. Ragsdale said. "Their comments tend to only heighten the conflict."

Williams had a criminal record dating to 1978 with an arrest in August for assault on a police officer, authorities said. His father, Carl L. Williams, said the family was in "deep shock."

"All we know is what the police have told us," the father said. "This is very unusual. It's not like him."

His son, Williams said, was a gentle person but also had a history of mental problems. He declined to elaborate or to explain why Williams lived on the streets. Chase was the second Dallas police officer to be shot and killed in as many weeks. On Jan. 14, two burglary suspects fatally shot James A. Joe, an off-duty officer.

New college tests await high school graduates

DALLAS (AP)— College-bound high school students in Texas are being advised a year ahead of time on a new exam that could sidetrack their college plans if they aren't prepared for it.

Brochures describing the test requirement will go out to 400,000 Texas high school students within a few months, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

For the first time in Texas, students enrolling at public colleges and universities will be required beginning in the summer of 1989 to pass a statewide exam before they can take the upper-level courses necessary for graduation.

"We are putting these students on notice that they will have to take this test," said Nolan Wood of the Texas Education Agency, adding that it might provide additional incentive to prepare for college.

The first wave of students to be tested, those now in the 11th grade, are being notified about the exam this spring by the TEA. Sophomores also will be notified.

The new exam — the Texas Academic Skills Program (TASP) Test — could shake up the state's higher education system when it is first administered in 1989. An estimated one in four freshmen lack the skills necessary to do college-level work.

The 150-question exam, measuring competence in English, math and writing, will be given to all incoming college freshmen starting in 1989. Students will be given four hours to complete the test, which also includes a written essay.

Those who fail will not be barred from attending college, but they must pass the exam before they can attain junior status. And they must take remedial courses until they pass.

The new testing requirement was perhaps the most significant of several higher education reforms passed by the legislature last year.

In recommending the exam to state lawmakers, a higher education reform panel cited statistics that a quarter of the 120,000 freshmen entering Texas' public colleges and universities each year lack basic skills to do the work.

"It would be wonderful if our expectations of a large number of students doing poorly on this test were wrong, but most of us expect to see a high failure rate," said Rep. Wilhelm Delco, D-Austin, chairman of the House Higher Education Committee and a sponsor of the testing legislation.

Ms. Delco said the initial embarrassment of the failure rate will be more than offset by the remedial help that will be given the students.

"More of these kids will be prepared to do college-level work if their weaknesses are identified early by the test and they are given the remediation they need," she said.

"It is much better to beef up our help for these students rather than let them coast along and eventually drop out of college."

The Austin lawmaker said another requirement — that scores be reported back to the students' school districts — is also important.

"It is going to let those high schools not doing such a good job know that they must do better in preparing their students for college," she said.

"People from low-scoring schools look at the scores and say, 'Why is it that kids from our district aren't doing as well as the kids in the next district?'" she said.

The TASP test will actually be given for the first time to a small group of students in the spring of 1989. It replaces another exam now given to college freshmen and sophomores who want to be teachers.

The current exam for prospective teachers, the Pre-Professional Skills Test, was the subject of a lawsuit alleging discrimination against minority students seeking to become teachers.

Number of Texans not members of church worries Baptists

FORT WORTH (AP)— The church is having less and less influence on legislation and other facets of life in the state, say worried leaders of Texas Baptist congregations.

"The secular population, not the Christian population, is influencing the state," said Carol Childress, a research and program consultant for the Baptist General Convention of Texas. "All you have to do is look at what has happened: the gambling legislation, the abolition of Sunday blue laws."

The growing number of Texans not affiliated with a church was a main topic at the Texas Baptist Evangelism Conference, which met last week in Fort Worth.

About half the state's population, or 8.5 million people are not church members, according to statistics from the Glenmarry Research Center in Atlanta.

Many of Texas' residents now are people from non-Bible Belt areas of the United States, immigrants from Mexico and Central America, Hispanics and an influx of people from the Middle East, Southeast Asia, the Far East and other parts of the world, another leader said.

"The mission field has moved to us," said Don Lewis, director of church mission development for the Tarrant Baptist Association.

The state's population grew by 2.3 million from 1980 to 1985, Childress said. A survey of the church groups in Texas that included Baptists indicated an increase of 50,000 in church membership during the same period.

Conference attendees launched several programs to bolster religious influence, including a plan to build 2,000 new churches in Texas by 1990. A similar program begun in 1985 has resulted in about 800 new congregations, said the Rev. D.L. Lowrie, director of the State Missions Commission for Texas Baptists.

"History tells us that when we were busy starting new churches, we had good growth. We are convinced Texas Baptists will continue to grow through the rest of this century through this program," Lowrie said.

Baby abandoned on doorstep of social worker

LUBBOCK (AP)— Officials at Children's Protective Services of Lubbock say they will seek emergency custody of an abandoned newborn baby girl found on a Lubbock social worker's doorstep.

Moe Dozier, program director at CPS, said a petition will be presented today to Lubbock County Court Master Paula Lanehart for custody of the child, who Beth Anderson of Lubbock found on her doorstep Friday evening.

The naked baby was wrapped in a towel with her umbilical cord attached, Ms. Anderson said.

Ms. Anderson used to work at Women's Protective Services in Lubbock and believes the baby may have been left by a woman who at one time sought help at the shelter.

"I really think it was either somebody very young — like a teen-ager — or somebody who has had one or two children already and was having a tough time making it," Ms. Anderson said. "Whoever it was, the woman knew I would take care of the baby."

Ms. Anderson took the baby to Lubbock General Hospital, where she was listed in good condition Sunday night.

If the petition is granted, Dozier said, the state agency will receive temporary management conservatorship of the child.

It's difficult to say goodbye

"You're not going to Pampa," Mom exclaimed. "The weather's awful. There's nothing to do. It's the armpit of the universe!"

Mom knew about Pampa, and Canadian. She spent her early wedding years in a duplex on South Faulkner. The landlady was Fern Snoddy.

Canadian memories were more vivid. Dad bought a blue suit at the Abraham's clothing store; he probably still wears it. They had Sunday supper at the Shallahs' after church. Mom did her laundry at the Helpy-selfy, where she had to use arm-power to crank up the washer. For entertainment, the VFW sponsored a dance with a Dixieland band that had to be out of town by midnight.

"Miami? Oh, is that what that big red building was?"

Pampa, 1951. Canadian, 1952. Here I was, more than 30 years later, going to Pampa for a job interview. I was young, unemployed, and I didn't have anything better to do.

Wally Simmons asked me to see him about the job opening. So I hit I-40 west and away I went. I caught a strong whiff of a beef cattle company as I was passing west of Wheeler and wondered what I was getting into.

"So can you start Monday?"

I packed what belongings I could in my Horizon — it worked then — and started work here as a area reporter without having any idea where I was going to live. After driving up in a blinding snowstorm — typical weather, Mom warned — I spent Monday at the Black Gold Motel and Tuesday with family friends in Borger. I moved what I had into the apartment and spent the rest of the week sleeping on a beanbag chair.

Louise loaned me a company pick-up truck so I could get my mattresses and furniture. Pepper tinkled on the vinyl front seat. As I passed the gas station in Mobeetie, a girl flagged me down and told me one of my dinette chairs had fallen off the back of the truck.

I went to McLean to cover a livestock show. Tres Hess showed the best steer. Donnie Smith had best sheep. Tina Cummings had best barrow.

I got lost in Miami.

Dear Mom, I'm here. It stopped snowing. Miami is bigger than you thought. Canadian is lovely.

Off Beat

By Cathy Spaulding

Your Shallahs aren't there anymore; neither is the Helpy-selfy. Pampa has a lot of awesome parks and it is not the armpit of the universe. There really are trees out here. Mobeetie kids are very nice.

First impressions. Now, nearly four years later, I'm gathering my final impressions. It's hard to believe.

In two weeks, I go to Chandler, Okla., to be editor for a weekly newspaper there. It's about 40 miles from where Mom lives. I'm leaving home and going home at the same time.

I was offered the job on the week of the Celanese explosion. I felt insecure about my future and I told the publishers I would think about it. I forgot about it until I returned from my vacation — moments after I dumped my suitcase on the floor, they called with a firmer offer.

It was a tough decision which took a lot of prayer and wrestling. I asked God to give me "signs" on what He wanted me to do.

Lord, if you want me to leave, let me get fired tomorrow. Lord, if you want me to stay, make the people in Oklahoma pick someone else.

God didn't work that way.

I don't know if it's the "right" decision, but it's too late now. I'm still in the denial stage and I'm putting off the packing, the account closings and the weepy goodbyes for as long as I can.

That way I can go out and hit all those West Texas restaurants, museums and tourist attractions I promised I'd go see.

Social Security has hidden costs

Anyone under about 45 years of age realizes he'll never get much, if anything, out of his Social Security payments. The baby-boom generation born between 1945 and 1965 was followed by the baby bust generation of 1965 to 1980. When the baby boomers begin retiring en masse come 2010, there won't be enough baby busters working to pay for SS. By some estimates, baby busters would have 50 percent of their incomes taken just to finance SS.

So the question is not whether something must be done, but when. The problem was brought once more to every worker's attention Jan. 1, when Social Security taxes rose again, the 11th hike in the past 20 years. "Happy New Year," Social Security Commissioner Dorcas R. Hardy jokes sickly to taxpayers.

The new increase boosts SS tax rates from 14.30 percent to 15.02 percent, to be charged against incomes up to $45,000 a year. And a 1990 increase will boost that to 15.3 percent. Note that our figures combine what the government calls the worker's "half" of the SS levy with the employer's "half." The government figures say your "half" of the SS payment rose from "only" 7.15 percent to "only" 7.51 percent. But this is a fraud.

The fact is that the full brunt of Social Security is paid for by you, the employee. Your employer just figures the cost in with your salary, medical care, insurance and other costs. When your employer pays his "half" of the SS tax boost, he just reduces your benefits elsewhere, perhaps with a smaller salary increase.

In many companies, SS increases push costs so high that companies fire workers or even go broke. The record SS tax boosts of the 1970s led directly to the high unemployment of the late 1970s. Only Ronald Reagan's counterbalancing tax cuts, made concurrently with the SS tax boosts, have precluded an unemployment rise in the 1980s.

Of course, retired Americans wonder what happened to all the money they've put into the system over the years. What happened is that, instead of investing the money, as a private retirement system would have done, the government wasted it on pork-barrel programs. It was "easy money" used to buy votes.

But now is the time of reckoning. To solve the Social Security mess, there are several things that should be done.

■ Stop the fraud of listing only the employee's "half" of the Social Security tax on his paycheck. List the full dollar amount of the 15.02 percent charged to him. Employers could take this step themselves.

■ Restore the full tax deductions for Individual Retirement Accounts. This would let workers build up their own, private retirement accounts. That way, if the government delays reform and SS completely collapses, at least some people would be protected.

■ Allow workers to shift from Social Security to private pension plans.

■ Fold SS into the general federal budget. Any increase in costs should be paid for by reducing the $25 billion in farm subsidies and $60 billion in welfare payments, which actually hurt farmers and the poor.

Such reforms would gradually shift Americans' dependency on the bankrupt Social Security system to a private system resting on solid financial footing.

They're ganging up on Siegan

WASHINGTON — In the pending battle over Bernard H. Siegan, the Senate Judiciary Committee once again will go back to square one. The same antagonists who fought last fall over the nomination of Judge Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court next month will take to the field anew.

Siegan, 63, was nominated by President Reagan nearly a year ago for a seat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit. He has every qualification that reasonably might be asked of a judicial nominee. After his graduation in 1949 from the law school of the University of Chicago, he engaged for 24 years in a wide-ranging private practice. Since 1973 he has been a professor of constitutional law at the University of San Diego. He has published widely in professional journals; he has written several books about the law.

The only charge against him is that he is "controversial." This has been reason enough to delay full-blown hearings on his nomination.

Now the same forces that ganged up on Bork are ganging up on Siegan. What is his sin? Siegan believes that in matters of constitutional interpretation, great deference should be paid to the intentions of both the Congress that framed an amendment and the states that ratified it.

He is opposed by a flaky school of liberal philosophers, led by Justice William Brennan and Harvard's Professor Laurence H. Tribe. In their view, original intention is often unfathomable and generally irrelevant. What counts is not what a word may have meant "then." It is what the word means "now."

James J. Kilpatrick

Theirs is the school of that eminent semanticist, Humpty-Dumpty, who decreed that words should mean exactly what he chose them to mean, and neither more nor less.

On this issue the battle turns. Professor Siegan, exhibiting more valor than discretion, has dared to criticize the Supreme Court's landmark decision of 1954 in the school segregation cases, Brown v. Board of Education. Siegan is no friend to racial segregation. He regards it as "totally repugnant." But he makes the point that the 39th Congress that framed the 14th Amendment in 1866, and the states that ratified that amendment on 1868, never intended the 14th to prohibit segregated public schools.

This position outrages Professor Tribe. Professor Siegan's interpretation, he says, "is so bizarre and strained, so incompatible with meaningful enforcement of the right to integrated education and so at odds with ordinary ways of thinking about constitutional law as to bring into question both Mr. Siegan's competence as a constitutional lawyer and his sincerity as a scholar."

What rubbish! Siegan is precisely on target.

On this issue, the distinguished Professor Tribe exposes himself as a distinguished ignoramus. Those who framed the 14th Amendment intended to lock into the Constitution the essential provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1866. There is not a scintilla of evidence to support Tribe's breathtaking belief that either the act or the amendment created a "right to integrated education." That is pure hokum.

On the contrary, the understanding of the amendment was made explicit not only by words but also by deeds. The very same Congress that approved the amendment simultaneously provided for segregated schools in Washington, D.C. Among the ratifying states were such non-Southern states as California, Illinois, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Every one of them maintained racially separate schools for years after the amendment became operative. It is inconceivable that the 14th was meant to abolish such institutions.

Indeed, the Supreme Court conceded almost as much in the Brown decision. Chief Justice Earl Warren, in a false and feeble phrase, found the evidence "inconclusive." Instead of relying upon familiar grounds of contemporaneous interpretation, Warren relied upon "intangible considerations" and "psychological knowledge." The nine members of the court, having concluded that segregation was unconscionable, simply declared it unconstitutional. This was a naked usurpation of the states' power to amend. It is this kind of thing that Siegan questions.

And of course it should be questioned.

A new education for doctors

You resent the degree to which the practice of medicine has become impersonal, how the patient has become a "number" instead of a "name," forgetting that production-line medicine is rough on the doctor also.

Treating "numbers" on a computer printout — however successfully — robs the doctor of the triumph of healing.

When his high calling becomes a job — when the practice of medicine is allowed to become dull, boring, depressing — the practitioner is likely to seek more leisure time.

If your doctor is now working a three- or four-day week — vacationing frequently — he may be seeking some of the enjoyment and fulfillment that he used to experience during working hours.

At long last a new book seeks to prescribe for the physician ways in which he can heighten his own professional satisfaction and enjoyment while at the same time improving patient care.

The book is called: Medicine: Preserving the Passion.

The book's authors are Drs. Phil Manning, recognized as the international dean of continuing medical education, and Lois DeBakey, an expert in language and literacy and the leading scholar in medical communications.

Paul Harvey

It is a "how-to book" for physicians including personal essays by some of the most respected names in medical science.

The authors urge a shift from traditional classroom instruction in continuing medical education to more energetic self-instruction linked to the physician's actual practice.

Every medical scholar since Hippocrates has agreed that the education of the doctor that goes on after he has his degree is, after all, the most important part of his education.

Yet, knowing that, the patient's demands on a modern physician's time may leave him pre-scious little or no time even to scan the voluminous new information relating to his medical specialty that cascades across his desk each day.

Yet, some illustrious physicians have managed it. And this book gives them a chance to describe how they provide the most effective care for their patients, keep abreast of the latest medical knowledge and still maintain enthusiasm for, and joy in, their work.

Dr. DeBakey is convinced that inevitable new technologies will require continuing changes in medical education — changes "that will encourage independent, practice-related study and will deepen the physician's involvement in his practice."

"Computer technology will encourage and accelerate these changes, but it is more efficient to gain experience with the concepts of active, practice-related learning before enlisting the help of the computer."

"Medicine," she says "is both a master and a mistress — a master when it is allowed to possess, oppress and enslave; a mistress when it preserves the passion by remaining engrossing, intriguing, exhilarating."

School censorship cripples democracy

By CHUCK STONE

It's hard to believe that five Supreme Court justices never read the majestic logic of John Stuart Mill. All five, however, did read the fatuous drivel of "See Dick run. See Jane run."

On the basis of a preference for pedagogical tyranny over dialogical freedom, the justices took a giant step backwards (and didn't even say, "May I?"). Affirming a Hazelwood, Mo., high-school administration's right to censor the school newspaper, the court was as contradictory as it was despot.

"A school need not tolerate student speech that is inconsistent with its basic educational mission even though the government could not censor similar speech outside the school. (My emphasis.)"

"Educators do not offend the First Amendment by exercising control over the style and content of student speech in school-sponsored expressive activities, so long as their actions are reasonably related to legitimate pedagogical concerns."

That jargonistic disregard for the First Amendment is almost too silly to refute. Are "legitimate pedagogical concerns" the same in a high school in Harlem and Hattiesburg, Miss., as they are in Hazelwood?

Years ago, as a parent of three very young children, I might have found myself a bit closer to the court's position. But my three children are grown now and ... when I became a man, I put away childish things.

Today, as both a journalist and a university professor, I struggle to balance the equities between the students' right to speak freely and the teachers' right to exercise responsibility. Most parents of elementary-school children would endorse last week's court ruling. But at the high-school level, I see no difference between the censorship of textbooks and the censorship of school newspapers.

Obviously, the reasonable and prudent limits to free speech would not permit a high-school newspaper to publish scatology, child pornography, or social paroxysms of racial hate.

Yet where do we draw the line?

If presidential candidates discuss abortion or the breakdown in family values due to a spiraling divorce rate, could their discussions be published in a high-school newspaper? Not in Hazelwood, Mo. The Supreme Court upheld the right of the high-school principal in this Rip Van Winkle community of 13,000 to censor the school newspaper's articles on divorce and teen-age pregnancy.

Such high-button-shoes censorship obscures a modern reality. Most of today's kids already know all about sex. They watch soap operas, listen to suggestive song lyrics, rent X-rated videos, and read steamy novels.

In today's information explosion, many teen-agers also are intellectual sophisticates. Rather than serving as receptacles into which Mother Goose rhymes are deposited, they should be encouraged to grapple with truth and falsehood.

John Stuart Mill did. By the age of 10, he had gone through all of the Latin and Greek authors, some of whom discussed incest and adultery. By 14, he had mastered history, logic and political economy. Perhaps this early exposure to the clash of divergent ideas impelled Mill to be such an unrelenting defender of free speech. As he wrote:

"Truth gains more even by the errors of one who, with due study and preparation, thinks for himself than by the true opinions of those who only hold them because they do not suffer themselves to think."

In 1988, five Supreme Court justices and a Hazelwood, Mo., principal need to "suffer themselves to think." Their conclusion might even be that teen-agers must think more responsibly about why so many babies are being born out of wedlock and why so many parents are getting divorced. Censoring their developing cognitive capacity only cripples democracy.

Wright says non-military aid for Contras possible

WASHINGTON (AP)— House Speaker Jim Wright says President Reagan's call for fresh assistance to Nicaragua's Contra rebels will merit careful consideration if the president does not insist on immediate military aid.

According to a report in today's Washington Post, Reagan is leaning toward a package that would provide immediate humanitarian aid to the Contras but would place accompanying military aid into an escrow account pending the outcome of regional peace negotiations.

If the plan prohibited military spending for the Contras without further congressional review, it might be worth exploring, Wright, D-Texas,

"I think it's something worthy of consideration," Wright said Sunday on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Wright and House Deputy Whip David Bonior, D-Mich., both said it should not be left solely to the administration to decide whether to release any military aid.

Wright noted that the peace plan endorsed by the presidents of all five Central American nations sets up a committee to monitor compliance.

Wright said he understands that the presidents of the Central American republics "do not have objections to humanitarian aid, food and clothing and shelter and things of that kind. I want to comply with the Central American agreement."

The Post quoted an administration official, whom it did not identify, as saying that putting military aid in escrow would improve chances for congressional approval and show Reagan was willing to take "an extra step for peace."

Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, appearing Sunday on the ABC program, had declined to say whether or not the administration proposal would contain an escrow feature.

However, he made clear that the administration will ask for military aid in one form or another.

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, in a letter to Reagan, made another in a recent series of conciliatory gestures, according to a report in today's New York Times.

Ortega promised to give up power if national elections show "that is what the people wish," the Times said. However, the Nicaraguan leader also called for "the immediate cessation of all support for the Contras."

Reagan, returning Sunday to the White House from Camp David, was asked whether he thinks he will be successful in getting Congress to approve military aid for the Contras. "We'll try," he said.

But Bonior expressed skepticism about an escrow fund.

"From past experience the escrow issue has been skewed by this administration to be harmful to peace prospects," Bonior told reporters Sunday at a conference in West Virginia. "Our people have seen that escrow issue for six years and suspect the phonyess of it."

Abrams said the administration policy of supporting the Contras has pushed the Sandinistas into a corner and forced them to negotiate.

Asked whether the administration will "accuse the Democrats and Speaker Jim Wright of selling out to the communists" if it loses a Contra aid vote scheduled the first week in February, Abrams said, "That is generally correct."

Wright later called that "a McCarthyite tactic."

Soviet team to visit U.S. nuclear site

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)— A team of Soviet scientists spent the night in a posh hotel-casino in downtown's Glitter Gulch before heading for the top-secret Nevada Test Site in a visit that could be a prelude to a nuclear test ban.

Igor Palenych, leader of the 20-member delegation said on arrival Sunday night he hoped the visit would be the first step toward the goal of "limiting and eventually stopping all nuclear testing."

"We have instructions from the top leaders of our countries to continue the work begun at the summit last month," Palenych said of last month's meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

The next goal following this week's visit will be to conduct joint experiments at the test sites in both countries.

The scientists were to leave this afternoon for the tiny town of Mercury, the hub of the testing operation, and remain there until Friday. They were scheduled to return home Saturday.

The delegation arrived at McCarran International Airport after a flight via New York City.

Troy Wade, acting assistant secretary for defense programs, welcomed the Soviets and said they would be accorded the same information provided American scientists in a trip to a Soviet test site two weeks ago.

The scientists were taken to the Golden Nugget Hotel and Casino, where guests watched the commotion caused by security guards and police.

The scientists went from their buses directly to the hotel elevators, seemingly oblivious of banks of video poker machines in the lobby of the plush resort.

Department of Energy officials said the scientists were free to do as they pleased until they were taken by bus to the desert site.

The visit to the remote desert site 65 miles northwest of here follows a trip by U.S. scientists to the Soviet test site at Semipalatinsk in central Asia on Jan. 11-14.

The visits, designed to familiarize U.S. and Soviet scientists with each other's secret testing grounds, are a prelude to a possible exchange of test verification data later this year.

No weapons will be tested at this week's visit.

Soviet scientists visited the Nevada site in 1971.

Kidney disease victim's name lives on in TV soap opera

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)— A 21-year-old kidney transplant recipient who died before mailing a letter to her favorite soap opera has had a character on the program named for her by a screenwriter who lost a brother to kidney disease.

Jodi Butler wrote the letter to NBC's "The Days of Our Lives" in late September to point out a misleading statement by one of the characters concerning kidney disease, which also led to the death of Jodi's brother.

A few weeks later, on Oct. 25, the Brigham Young University junior died at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center of pneumonia and staph infection brought on by an immune system weakened by anti-rejection drugs.

Jodi's mother, Janet Butler, mailed the letter to the program, along with her daughter's obituary.

"I didn't know about the letter until her last day at the hospital. I was picking up her room and by her nightstand I found it," recalled Mrs. Butler, of Orem. "I thought Jodi would want that, so I did mail it."

Leah Laiman, the show's head writer, had lost a 13-year-old brother, Daniel, to kidney failure more than 20 years ago.

"Just as a gesture, I said I would name a character 'Jodi Butler' as a kind of little tribute to her," the New York-based writer said. "I thought had Jodi been alive, she would get a kick out of that."

In the character's first appearance last week, "nurse Jodi Butler" engaged in some friendly banter with a doctor. Mrs. Butler said she looks forward to viewing a videotape of the show supplied by NBC.

"It was a beautiful and generous gesture," Mrs. Butler said. "Yes, she would have gotten a kick out of it, as hospitals had been a central part of Jodi's life for so many years."

The family's tragedy was compounded six weeks after Jodi's death, when her 26-year-old brother, Kurt, died of kidney failure following a transplant in Los Angeles.

"It was and is a rough time for us," Mrs. Butler said. "But my feeling is and always has been that our kids didn't die in vain, even though they suffered so much over the years."

Janet and her husband, Lavar, have four surviving children, two boys and two girls. None has developed kidney disease.

Jodi, who had dreamed of becoming a veterinarian, had struggled with kidney disease since early childhood. She had her first kidney transplant at age 10. Her second, in 1981, worked well until two years ago when she again "began going downhill," her mother said.

Unable to regularly attend school, she passed a high school equivalency examination. At age 16, she entered Brigham Young University, where she earned academic honors in animal sciences.

Though Jodi died before achieving her goal to become a veterinarian, Mrs. Butler said the letter showed that her daughter died feeling successful.

In her letter, Jodi took the character "Dr. Mike Horton" to task for ignoring the option of a transplant when counseling a kidney patient about dialysis.

Arab youths attack Israeli soldiers in West Bank

JERUSALEM (AP) — Hundreds of Palestinians clashed with Israeli soldiers in the occupied West Bank, and the prime minister ordered a top aide to the United States to respond to recent Middle East peace initiatives.

The attack, which occurred Sunday in the city of Ramallah, left two Arabs injured, one seriously. Several stone-throwing incidents were reported in and around east Jerusalem, where an Arab commercial strike persisted.

On Sunday night, a tourist bus was stoned outside the Arab village of Abu Gosh 20 miles west of Jerusalem, Israel radio reported. Police arrested three Arab suspects. Arab protesters also smashed the front window of an Israel-owned bank in east Jerusalem.

No other violence was reported in the occupied territories, where riots began Dec. 8 when rumors spread that a traffic accident that killed four Palestinians had been planned to avenge the death of an Israeli businessman.

At least 38 Palestinians have been killed. Recently soldiers were ordered by the government to use beatings instead of bullets to control the rioting.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir dispatched a top aide to the United States to give Shamir's response to the peace initiatives, including proposals made by President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt who will visit Washington later this week.

Cabinet Secretary Elyakim Rubinstein, who was to leave for Washington today, also will prepare ground for Shamir's visit to the United States in March, said Yossi Ben-Aharon, director-general of Shamir's office.

"We should not expect a breakthrough in the next few days. But as calm is hopefully restored in the territories, the focus of events moves to the political arena," Ben-Aharon said on Israel Television.

Shamir responded Sunday to messages from Mubarak and King Hussein of Jordan that were brought to him by American Jewish Congress officials.

Avi Pazner, Shamir's spokesman, said the messages urged Shamir to endorse an international Middle East peace conference.

Pazner said Mubarak proposed setting the stage for talks with an Israeli promise to halt building settlements in the occupied lands in return for a Palestinian pledge to refrain from anti-Israeli violence for six months.

Pazner said Shamir explained his opposition to the international conference, and said he wanted to meet Mubarak and Hussein "face to face, openly or secretly, formally and informally, to discuss peace with them."

Shamir has said accepting the conference would be tantamount to agreeing to a Palestinian state and Israeli withdrawal from occupied lands, which his right-wing Likud Bloc opposes.

Ben-Aharon said Mubarak's plan was "unacceptable... (because) it puts riters on the same level with the government of Israel."

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher of West Germany on Sunday called on Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and President Reagan to discuss the Arab-Israeli conflict during their summit later this year in Moscow.

Genscher met separately with Shamir, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, Shamir's political rival in the coalition government and a supporter of an international conference.

Genscher also met with a group of Palestinian leaders from the occupied territories who called on him to pressure Israel to take part in an international conference.

Manigat dictates his presidential address.

Manigat declared president; promises honest government

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Political scientist Leslie Manigat pledged to lead an honest government representing all sectors of Haitian society after being officially declared the country's new president.

A man who served as a police chief during the Duvalier dictatorship was declared the winner of the mayor's contest in Port-au-Prince.

Opposition leaders called the election a sham, and two defeated candidates said they would contest the results, announced Sunday.

"May everybody be reassured, I will be in power as president of all Haitians without distinction or exclusion, because I will be the man of reconciliation and national union," Manigat said Sunday night.

In a 10-minute address broadcast on state television and radio, Manigat called on all Haitians to "turn the page on their quarrels."

The junta-appointed Electoral Council announced that Manigat won 50.27 percent, or 534,080 votes, of the 1,061,916 cast in the Jan. 17 election.

The United States and Canada have criticized the election, and a U.S. State Department spokesman said it could not be considered "free and fair."

Election officials said 35 percent of the 3 million eligible voters took part in the election, but opposition leaders said the figures were inflated and estimated voter turnout at from 2 percent to 10 percent.

Irregularities noted by election observers, reporters, opposition leaders and the Roman Catholic Church included multiple voting, voting by minors and ballot-buying. On Saturday, the Haitian Bishops Conference, which sets policy for the influential Catholic Church, said the election was "not truthful."

Gerard Bissainthe, political coordinator for the Front for Concerted Action, an anti-government coalition, said: "Everything was counted in secret; nobody can guarantee the figures."

The Electoral Council also declared former police chief Franck Romain the winner in the election for mayor of Port-au-Prince, with nearly 80 percent of the vote. Romain has been accused of opponents by forcing children to watch the execution of dissidents during Duvalier's rule.

A university professor who taught in France, the West Indies and Venezuela during 23 years in political exile, Manigat, 57, has pledged to reconcile Haiti's powerful military with its vocal opposition. However, opposition leaders have called him an opportunist and government puppet.

Haiti's three-man ruling junta has promised to turn over power to an elected president Feb. 7.

One foreigner killed, three others injured in train wreck

BEIJING (AP) — The Railways Ministry said today that at least one foreigner was among the 90 people killed when a train derailed in southern China, and three foreigners were among the 66 injured in the accident.

The Japanese Embassy's first secretary, Shigeo Ito, said the ministry told his embassy that one of the three injured foreigners was believed to be Japanese. Ito said the ministry did not give the nationalities of the dead foreigner or the two others injured. People answering telephones at the ministry today refused to answer any questions.

The U.S. Embassy said it had received no word of any Americans involved in the derailment, China's third fatal train accident this month.

The train, an express from Kunming in remote Yunnan province to Shanghai, derailed early Sunday 220 miles northeast of Kunming, according to the state-run Xinhua News Agency.

The cause of the derailment was not known, the report said. It did not say how many cars derailed or how many passengers were on the train. The Xinhua Evening News, an official Shanghai newspaper, said 10 train cars overturned.

In an unusual move for a high Chinese official, Railways Minister Ding Guangen apologized for the accident and said it showed defects in railway work. He is an alternate member of the Communist Party's 17-member Politburo.

Since issuing its initial report on the derailment about 21 hours after it occurred, Xinhua has been silent on the crash.

North Korea severs U.S. contact

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea today retaliated for the United States branding it a terrorist state by severing contacts with U.S. diplomats and refusing to discuss the return of the bodies of servicemen missing from the Korean war.

The move came less than a week after the State Department put North Korea on its list of countries that support terrorism, declaring that it did not "live up to the standards of civilized behavior."

On Thursday, the United States withdrew authorization for U.S. diplomats to hold "substantive discussions" with North Korean diplomats in neutral settings, canceling a policy set last March to help pave the way for North Korean participation in the 1988 Summer Olympics, being held in South Korea.

The action was in response to the bombing in November of a South Korean jetliner carrying 115 people. A woman who had been a passenger on an earlier part of the flight confessed Jan. 15 that she was a North Korean agent and had planted a bomb on the jet, which disappeared over Burma. All aboard died.

South Korea said the bombing was intended to discourage other nations from participating in the Olympics in Seoul. North Korea had demanded unsuccessfully to be made a co-host for the 1988 Olympics.

North Korea's communist government has denied involvement in the destruction of the plane. The other nations on the terrorism list are Iran, Libya, Syria, Cuba and North Yemen.

A North Korean Foreign Ministry spokesman, in a statement carried by the Korean Central News Agency, monitored in Tokyo, said North Korea has "suffered due to the U.S. and has the right to take even severer steps than sanctions against the United States."

The United Nations Command in South Korea has asked North

Korea on several occasions, most recently last summer, to cooperate in the effort to find and return the remains of the dead still unaccounted for after the 1950-53 Korean War. It has said it has handed over maps and charts of likely burial sites and air crash sites, but North Korea has not responded.

The U.S. Defense Department says about 8,200 Americans are missing in both North and South Korea.

TREATMENT FOR STIFF NECK

If you're suffering from a stiff neck, don't wait for it to take care of itself when treatment is available to correct it.

Of all the bones in the spinal column, none are more easily injured or more vulnerable than the seven vertebrae in the neck. None are moved more often. We are constantly turning our heads to look at people and things.

Neck stiffness can have many causes, from sudden and violent accidents to such simple activities as painting a ceiling or just sitting reading a book for a long time. But there's nothing simple about the pain.

A careful examination will reveal the source of the pain and how best to treat it. Any misaligned vertebrae in the spinal column should be properly adjusted so there will be no abnormal pressure on your nervous system. Treatment may also include exercises for the cervical muscles such as gently rotating your head in all directions. This can help restore muscle strength and tone.

Moving figures go from windmills to whirligigs

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

To scare birds and rabbits away from vegetable gardens, plastic geese with whirling wings, farmers digging incessantly and other moving figures were placed on posts.

The whirligig is an old idea. Windmills with moving arms were used in Holland by the year 1200, and miniature ones were common toys by the 1500s. When the toys were first placed in gardens is not known.

The whirligig was used in America by the late 18th century. A few folk art examples of early whirligigs still exist, some of them representing soldiers or sailors with waving arms and swords.

By the 19th century the whirligig had become a favored folk art form. Men riding bicycles, dandies in bowler hats, flying birds, women washing clothes and many others were portrayed in wooden whirling figures. The home magazines of the late 19th and early 20th centuries pictured plans for many types of whirligigs to be used in the garden or just as lawn ornaments.

The idea of a whirligig was even included in some early automobile accessories. A metal policeman with waving arms was a commercial automobile hood ornament sold in the 1930s.

Q. My mother has a glass boat. It is 7 inches long and 3 1/2 inches high. The top is removable so you can put small trinkets inside. On the side is the saying "Remember the Maine."

A. The Maine was a battleship in the United States Navy that was sent on a mission to Havana, Cuba in January 1898. All the usual courtesies were extended by Cuba.

On Feb. 15, the Maine was destroyed, along with 266 American lives. After an investigation, President McKinley became convinced that the explosion had been caused by a mine and demanded that the Spanish withdraw from Cuba.

On April 24, the Spanish government declared war. The United States Navy and Army fought through Cuba and gained control of the country in a month.

The slogan "Remember the Maine" was a rallying cry for the troops during the Spanish-American War. Your glass boat, several plates and other dishes were made and sold at that time.

Q. I have a small figurine that looks like the famous Hummel figure of the goosegirl. A label on the bottom says "Original Hummel reproduction, hand painted." Is it a real Hummel?

A. Sister Maria Innocentia

Antiques

Hummel sketched pictures of charming children living in a convent from 1931 until her death in 1946. The rights to produce figurines based on her sketches were sold to the W. Goebel firm of Rodenthal, Germany.

The first figures were made in 1935 and they are still being made. The figurines have been copied by other firms, sometimes with legal permission, sometimes without, and many copies are popular with collectors. Your goosegirl figurine is one of a series made in the United States.

The new book, "Hummel Copycats With Values" by Lawrence L. Wonsch (Wallace Homestead, $14.95), includes pictures and prices of hundreds of different items.

Q. My very old silver-plated bowl is strange. It has a pedestal foot, two handles and a cover topped by a bird. Around the top rim of the bowl is a series of small hooks. How was it used?

A. You own a combination sugar bowl and spoon holder. The hooks held small spoons used for stirring sugar in coffee or tea.

Sugar was kept in the covered bowl.

These silver-plated bowls were first made in the 1870s. They continued to be popular as late as 1920.

Q. My blue pottery pitcher with a lid has a raised grape cluster design on it. The bottom is marked Uhl Pottery Co. in a circle. I think it is about 50 years old.

A. Uhl pottery was first made in Evansville, Ind. in 1854. Starting in 1908, the pottery was made in Huntington, Ind. Stoneware and glazed pottery like yours were made until the mid-1940s.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Is college a den of sexual iniquity?

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to all those parents who are shocked at the "sexual promiscuity" going on in college dorms. I am currently a senior at the University of California-Davis and I've been through the whole dorm scene. Although I would not deny that there has been a marked decline in college morals, do these parents actually believe that college dorms are the first place their "children" were exposed to sexual promiscuity? Most kids have experimented with drugs, drinking and sex in high school. Some even started in junior high and grade school.

If parents of college students are concerned, I suggest that they are about 10 years too late. Morals and ethics are taught in the home, and no amount of college regulation and policing will control an already promiscuous student.

ROBERT AT DAVIS

DEAR ABBY: You were generous to give an entire column to parents who were horrified to find their college kids were living in a "brotherly atmosphere." They blamed the colleges for not having stricter rules. Abby, when you said, "Parents cannot expect college authorities to assume guardianship of their children's sexual behavior," you were right on the money.

I am a sophomore in a small liberal arts college. Sure, sex and alcohol are available for those who want to go that route. But there are plenty of students who do not go wild just because they no longer have Momma and Daddy looking over their shoulders.

If parents have given their children the proper upbringing, they won't have to worry about them being corrupted at college.

SUZIE Q

DEAR ABBY: I had to smile when I read all those letters from parents who were upset because their children were not properly supervised at college.

Don't they realize that 18-year-olds are legally adults, and free to make their own decisions? Their letters would have one believing that college sex, partying and underage drinking are something new.

When I graduated from college 15 years ago, those things went on in the back seat of a car on a lonely country road.

I agree with your statement: "If young adults are inclined to fool around, they will find a way to do it on their lunch hour." By the way, so will old adults!

COLLEGE EDUCATED,
TUCSON

DEAR ABBY: Just because someone is still "in school" doesn't mean he or she is immature. I have been in coed dorms where the signs on bathrooms read: "Please Knock." These signs were put there by the students — and they are respected.

I lost my virginity at a "good Christian college" that had separate dorms for men and women. They had a strict no-alcohol policy and restricted visitation. Obviously, if some people want to break the rules, they will find a way.

TULSA

DEAR ABBY: In response to the furor of outraged parents who feel that college dorm life has become infested with booze, drugs, wanton sex and general chaos: Parents should not worry. If their child was raised in accordance with the lifestyle they support, then the "wildness" of dorm life will not erase those values. Instead, the dorm-life experience will help him or her to grow into an adult who is capable of dealing with the real world that must be faced after college has ended.

ANN MATHISON,
STANFORD SOPHOMORE

DEAR ABBY: You have had many letters in your column about the lack of moral supervision in college dorms. I hope you won't mind one more.

Nine years ago, I entered one of the top universities in the country. I will never forget the morning all the new residents of my freshman dorm were gathered together to learn how to live harmoniously in our coed dorm.

For openness, the resident adviser said, "You may drink whatever you wish, smoke whatever you like, and sleep with whomever you desire, but PLEASE DO NOT PLAY WITH THE FIRE EXTINGUISHERS."

DISILLUSIONED

Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, how to prevent unwanted pregnancy and how to handle the pain of growing up. It's all in Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." NOMINEES
AMARILLO — Congressman Beau Boulter announced Monday, Jan. 18 that he has nominated 36 students from throughout the 13th Congressional District for positions in the nation's four military academies.

In releasing the names of the students, Boulter praised the quality of the group, saying they represent some of the brightest students in the area.

"I believe this is one of the strongest groups of students we've nominated yet. I am privileged to recommend each of these students to represent our state in the nation's military academies' Class of 1992." Boulter said.

Joseph Antone Homer of Groom was nominated to the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md.

Mark William Powell of Shamrock was nominated to the United States Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Kelly Hendrick of Pampa and Reid Douglas Minyan of Canadian were nominated to the United States Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, N.Y.

Students will be notified by the academies in April regarding their acceptance.

Each member of Congress is permitted five slots in each academy at any given time. This year at least two positions are available at the U.S. Naval Academy for students from the 13th District, and at least one student from the 13th District will be selected for each of the remaining three academies.

Students were interviewed Saturday, Dec. 12 in Childress.

In the 4-H leadership program, youth learn to:

- Seek guidance in leadership development, which will provide opportunities to develop self-confidence.

- Strengthen local 4-H units by becoming involved in leadership responsibilities and encouraging other youth to do so.

- Actively participate in program planning, development and implementation, and help recruit new members and leaders.

The 4-H leadership program is supported by Reader's Digest, which provides numerous awards to top individuals. These include medals of honor, an expense-paid trip to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago each fall for one member per state, and nine $1,000 scholarships and two silver trays at the national level.

Lidy honored by Panhandle hall of fame

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

It's no secret that college coaches have had their collective eye on Pampa sprinter Tanya Lidy ever since the speedy senior won the 200-meter dash at the Class 4A state meet two years ago.

After a repeat win last year, collegiate recruiters are now savoring the thought of inking Lidy to a scholarship.

Lidy, who was in Amarillo on Sunday to accept the 1987 Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame award as track athlete of the year, has begun a tour of South-west Conference schools to help narrow her choices.

"I went to the University of Houston last weekend and I plan to go to Texas A&M this weekend," she said.

Wayland Baptist coach John Creer, who was also at the ceremonies to accept the PSHOF track coach of the year award, didn't waste an opportunity to speak to Lidy about competing for the NAIA national champion Flying Queens.

"We're trying to recruit more athletes from the West Texas area and maybe I can talk Tanya into coming to our school," Creer said.

the 200 last year set a new record at the Class 4A state meet. It was the all-time best in the area as well.

Lidy is the first female athlete and only the second athlete from Pampa to receive the PSHOF track award. Olympic gold medalist Randy Matson was the first.

Wheeler's Preston Smith and Sam Zepeda were also on the long list of athletes and coaches honored in Amarillo College's Ordway Auditorium.

Smith received a special achievement award for coaching Wheeler to the Class 1A state football championship.

The Mustangs compiled a 13-2 record and defeated Bremond 23-21 in the finals.

"After our game with Bremond their coach (Wendell Robinson) told me you can make all kinds of preparations for an opponent, but your team has heart and there's no way you can prepare for that," Smith said.

It was Zepeda's 19-yard field goal with no ticks left on the clock that gave the Mustangs their state championship victory.

Zepeda, along with Guymon's Darin Booth, were co-winners of the Leslie Cazzell Memorial Big Play Award.

Zepeda, a junior, said senior leadership played an important role in Wheeler's drive to the state title.

"The seniors really helped me out a lot and I'm hoping I can be as good a leader as they were," Zepeda said.

New members inducted into the PSHOF were former National Football League stars Ron Shanklin and Billy Hobbs, area golf champion Rosemary Thompson and Ralph Dykeman, executive director of the Amarillo Mavericks Boys Club for 48 years. A relative accepted the award in behalf of Dykeman, who died in 1986.

Shanklin, a three-sport athlete at Amarillo's Carver High School, played five years with the Pittsburgh Steelers. He was a member of the Steelers' Super Bowl IX championship team which defeated the Minnesota Vikings 16-6. As a wide receiver at North Texas State, he led the nation in touchdown receptions in 1986.

Hobbs, an Amarillo Tascosa High graduate, played five seasons for the Philadelphia Eagles. The highlight of his pro career came in 1971 when he was named NFL player of the week after a win over Denver.

Thompson is only the third female inducted into the hall of fame. Thompson dominated women's golf in the 1970s, winning virtually every major local tournament several times over.

Dykeman was a successful coach in many sports at the Maverick Club, most notably in gymnastics, tumbling, trampoline, swimming, boxing and wrestling. Dykeman was considered a world leader in working with boys.

Warren Hasse of Pampa served as master of ceremonies at the 30th annual event.

Upsets!

Syracuse, Temple fall

By The Associated Press

Georgetown put up a crazy shot. Nevada-Las Vegas put up an exceptional defense.

Each spelled victory Sunday, Georgetown stopping 14th-ranked Syracuse 69-68 at the Carrier Dome and Nevada-Las Vegas handing No. 3 Temple its first loss of the season, 59-58.

Charlie Smith hit a twisting, underhanded layup as time expired to give No. 15 Georgetown its victory. For Smith, the shot was routine.

"My teammates, they are not amazed anymore," Smith said. "I always throw up something crazy."

No. 8 Nevada-Las Vegas held Temple scoreless in the final four minutes while scoring eight straight points to nip the Owls.

Brothers Karl and Keith James each hit 3-pointers and Anthony Todd sank a 10-foot jumper with two seconds left to give the Runnin' Rebels the victory. Both Keith James and Todd are reserves.

Temple coach John Chaney's team fell to 14-1.

In other Top Twenty games Sunday, No. 1 Arizona defeated UCLA 86-74, No. 2 North Carolina defeated No. 20 North Carolina State 77-73, and No. 7 Michigan defeated Indiana 72-60.

Coogs gig Ags

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

Houston Coach Pat Foster could see a familiar pattern developing in the closing minutes of Sunday's Southwest Conference game against Texas A&M.

His team had lost five of its six games this season by seven or fewer points, and the Aggies were closing in with the final seconds ticking away in Hofheinz Pavilion.

"I was beginning to have visions of some of those games we lost on 20 percent shots," Foster said. "But now that we have a full team, we have a chance to improve drastically."

The Cougars held off the Aggies' late surge for a 67-63 victory that dropped A&M from the unbeaten ranks into a tie with Arkansas for the league lead, each with 4-1 records.

Foster has been juggling his lineup because Randy Brown quit the team briefly and Horace Chaney sat out Tuesday's 69-65 loss to Southern Methodist because of scholastic questions.

Chaney was back on Sunday and was one of five Cougar starters who scored in double figures. "Horace (Chaney) helped us more on defense than offense," Foster said. "It feels a lot better now with a full crew."

"It's been tough to lose by two, three or four points with either (Randy) Brown or Chaney out.

The Aggies, 12-7 for the season, trailed 36-26 at the half based on a 14-3 Houston surge over the final 6:37 of the half. During that streak, Upchurch scored 10 of his 18 points.

The Aggies cut the gap with a 10-2 spurt to start the second half, but the Cougars never lost the lead.

The Aggies still had a chance when James McGhee hit a 3-point basket with 12 seconds to play but Rolando Ferreira's two free throws with eight seconds to play, ended the comeback hope.

"We didn't play together as a team," Aggie guard Darryl McDonald said. "I think they were out-hustling us. They tried to 'body' us and make us play harder and we weren't ready for it."

In games Saturday, Baylor defeated Baylor 84-68; Southern Methodist beat Texas Tech 80-75 and Texas beat Texas Christian 74-56.

Walker remains highest paid Cowboy

DALLAS (AP)—Running back Herschel Walker will make more than twice as much as any other member of the Dallas Cowboys in 1988 with total compensation of $1.8 million, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

The next highest would be quarterback Danny White, at $775,000 — if he starts eight games, according to the newspaper.

The salary figures, obtained from sources close to the team and in part from the NFL Players Association salary survey, show Walker, entering the third year of a five-year, $5 million guaranteed contract, will have a base salary of $800,000 and collect the final installment of his $1.4 million signing bonus.

Walker, who signed Aug. 13, 1986, after the rival USFL folded, has base salaries of $400,000, $500,000, $800,000, $900,000 and $1 million in addition to the $1.4 million signing bonus.

The Heisman Trophy winner from Georgia also received $400,000 of the bonus in 1987 and will get the final $1 million in 1988. Last season, Walker stayed on strike with the majority of his teammates and lost $125,000, or 25 percent of his $500,000 base salary.

White, who broke his right wrist in the ninth game of the 1986 season, signed an unusual contract last season protecting the team against his recurring physical ailments.

His base salary of $725,000 remained intact as long as he started eight games; he started nine in 1987. Had White, 36, started fewer than eight games, part of his base would have been pro-rated at a base of $500,000.

White has the same type deal in 1988 and 1989. He will make $775,000 if he starts eight times in 1988 and $852,000 if he starts eight times in 1989.

Part of his salary will be pro-rated at a base

$250,000 lower if he doesn't start eight. Steve Peluer is considered the favorite to start for the Cowboys next season.

Randy White ($550,000), Tony Dorsett ($500,000) and Everson Walls ($500,000) follow Walker and Danny White as the Cowboys' highest-paid players in 1988.

Dorsett may be making his money from another team, with coach Tom Landry saying he will try to honor Dorsett's trade request. In addition, the final $2.4 million of Dorsett $6 million annuity will be funded over the next two seasons.

Strong safety Bill Bates is among several Cowboys who accepted the team's offer to pay up to $3,500 for a certified financial planner to work on investments.

Players have the right to pick the planner from a list the team provides.

Joyner-Kersee named top female athlete

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Track and field star Jackie Joyner-Kersee, considered the finest all-around woman athlete since Babe Didrikson Zaharias, was named today The Associated Press Female Athlete of the Year for 1987.

The 25-year-old Joyner-Kersee, who equaled the world outdoor record in the women's long jump last year, was honored one day after sprinter Ben Johnson of Canada was selected Male Athlete of the Year.

In the nationwide balloting by 244 sports writers and broadcasters, Joyner-Kersee received 128 first-place votes, 68 seconds and 16 thirds for a total of 880 points, with points allotted on a 5-3-1 basis.

Tennis player Steffi Graf of West Germany, winner of 11 tournaments, including the French Open, and winner of 75 of 77 matches in 1987, finished second with 806 points. She garnered 108 firsts, 82 seconds and 20 thirds.

Another tennis star, Martina Navratilova, the 1983 and 1986 athlete of the year who won the Wimbledon and U.S. Open titles last year, was a distant third with 10 firsts, 26 seconds and 54 thirds for 182 points.

Completing the top five were figure skater Katarina Witt of East Germany, with six first-places and 140 points, and pro golfer Ayako Okamoto of Japan, 68 points.

Joyner-Kersee equaled the women's world outdoor long jump record of 24 feet, 5 1/2 inches, at the Pan American Games in Indianapolis Aug. 13. She also won the long jump and heptathlon gold medals in the World Outdoor Championships at Rome.

In the long jump, she sailed 24-1 3/4, beating East German Heike Drechsler, with whom she shares the world record, and took the heptathlon with 7,128 points, 564 more than her closest competitor. It was only the third time the 7,000-point total had been surpassed in the heptathlon — and Joyner-Kersee is the only one to do it.

The two victories in the World Championships also made Joyner-Kersee the first woman to capture gold medals in multi-sport and individual events in the same competition at Olympic or world championship levels. The last time this was accomplished by a man was in 1924, when Harold Osborn of the United States took the Olympic high jump and decathlon.

Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson

Johnson voted Male Athlete of the Year

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Ben Johnson and his coach say the sprinter's world record of 9.83 seconds for the 100-meter dash, set last year, is just another mark to break.

"We're looking for something like 9.78 this year," Coach Charlie Francis said.

"I think that's reasonable," Johnson said. "I think I can run that fast."

Johnson's record time in the World Outdoor Track and Field Championships at Rome last summer, along with 20 victories in 20 other races, helped the Canadian win The Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year award Sunday night.

Johnson, the first Canadian track athlete to receive the honor in the award's 57-year history, was an easy winner in voting by 244 national sports writers and broadcasters. He received 48 first-place votes, 18 seconds and 28 thirds for a total of 322 points, with points awarded on a 5-3-1 basis.

Runner-up Jerry Rice, the San Francisco 49ers' wide receiver who set an NFL record with 22 touchdown receptions in only 12 games, finished exactly 100 points behind Johnson. Rice got 22 firsts, 26 seconds and 34 thirds for 222 points.

He was followed by Chicago's Michael Jordan, the NBA's leading scorer this season, with 206 points, including 24 first-place votes.

Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers, the NBA's most valuable player last season, also received 24 first-place nominations and tied for fourth place in the voting with Bo Jackson, who played baseball for the Kansas City Royals and football for the Los Angeles Raiders. Jackson got 20 first-place votes.

Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson also had 24 firsts, but finished ninth with 170 points. Last year's Male Athlete of the Year, Larry Bird of the NBA's Boston Celtics, got four first-place votes for 20 points.

The powerful Johnson, a native of Jamaica, will be honored by the Tampa Sports Club Feb. 26 at a banquet in Florida. His world record performance came in the year's most important track and field meet, against the world's best sprinters, and earned him the title of "World's Fastest Human" and the world's No. 1 ranking in the 100 for the second consecutive year.

Bullets shooting straight

By The Associated Press

Wes Unseld has sparked the Washington Bullets by bringing fun back into the game. At least it was fun for the Bullets Sunday when Washington defeated the Philadelphia 76ers 131-99.

"They're feeling confident, and I think they're having fun for a change," Unseld said of his team, which has a three-game winning streak. "If you've been around here for a while, you know it hasn't been fun for a long time."

The Bullets are 6-0 at home and 7-9 overall since Unseld was named head coach three weeks ago.

In other NBA games Sunday, it was Atlanta 118, New Jersey 111; Indiana 128, Phoenix 109; the Los Angeles Lakers 116, Seattle 109; and Portland 119, Detroit 111.

Unseld has taken several pages out of the playbook, simplifying the Washington offense. He has put more emphasis on the running game.

Whatever it is, it works. "The biggest key is we're doing a good job of getting guys open," said Bernard King, who was 10 of 14 and led Washington with 25 points. "And they're getting the ball where they like it and taking the shot they feel most comfortable taking. There's a big difference between being open and being open where you want to be."

Philadelphia has lost three straight games and its last seven on the road. The 76ers were led by Maurice Cheeks with 20 points and Charles Barkley with 19.

Jeff Malone had 20 points and Moses Malone 17 for the Bullets.

Trail Blazers 119, Pistons 111
Clyde Drexler scored nine of his 27 points in the final quarter as Portland downed Detroit. Second-year center Kevin Duckworth, starting in place of the injured Steve Johnson, added 22 points and 15 rebounds, both career highs.

Detroit was down only 88-87 with 10:52 to play. But Portland scored 10 straight points to take command.

Dennis Rodman led Detroit with 30 points and 18 rebounds.

Lakers 116, Sonics 109
Magic Johnson scored 34 points and James Worthy added 24 points and 12 rebounds as the Los Angeles Lakers snapped Seattle's 17-game homecourt winning streak. The Sonics lost despite Xavier McDaniel's 35 points and 32 by Tom Chambers.

Hawks 118, Nets 111
Dominique Wilkins scored 31 points and Atlanta withstood a fourth-quarter rally to beat New Jersey. The victory gave the Hawks the best record in the Eastern Conference, 29-11 to Boston's 28-11, and made Mike Fratello the coach of the East team in the NBA All-Star Game at Chicago Feb. 7.

Pacers 128, Suns 109
John Long scored 24 points and Wayman Tisdale had 19 as Indiana took control early and coasted past Phoenix, handing the Suns their fifth straight loss.

Texan to compete in Olympic rodeo

By VAN HILBURN
Marshall News Messenger

MARSHALL — After a seemingly endless list of accomplishments, national champion barrel racer Martha Josey of Marshall now has the "icing on the cake." She has been chosen to compete in a rodeo at the Winter Olympics.

Mrs. Josey, who has set several national records in barrel racing, will be one of three U.S. riders competing against Canada in the Rodeo '88 Challenge Cup, which is part of the Olympic Arts Festival during the games in Calgary, Canada, Feb. 22-27.

"This is the icing on the cake for me," Mrs. Josey said Tuesday. "I have loved the Olympic Games over the years, but I never, never, never thought I would actually be a part of it. It's one of the highlights of my career," she added.

The U.S. and Canadian riders will be judged on speed and accuracy from seven rides through the barrel race course.

The event is not a sanctioned Olympic sport, but has been included as part of the games' festivities. The winners' honors will not count toward in the country's medal standings.

Mrs. Josey was chosen for the Olympics after finishing 11th in the National Finals Rodeo barrel racing competition in December in Las Vegas. After competing against the nation's best racers in Nevada, Mrs. Josey is optimistic, and even more patriotic, as the Olympic date draws near.

"This is something that's going to be so rewarding because at the Olympics, you are not just trying for yourself, you are trying for your country," she said.

Mrs. Josey, who has competed in eight NFR championships, became the only woman to compete in NFR competition on four different horses.

In 1968-69, she competed on Cebe Reed, and in 1978, '79, '80 and '81 on Bit O' Both. In 1985 she mounted Fred, and in December on seven-year-old J.C.

During the Texas Rodeo Finals in Fort Worth on Dec. 28, Mrs. Josey captured another championship, after winning the last go-around (15.53) at Fort Worth's Cowtown Coliseum.

She will be riding J.C., short for Jesus Christ, in the Olympics.

Mrs. Josey's invitation to the Olympics didn't come overnight. It probably began when she was blazing the rodeo circuit trails in the 1960s and '70s.

On the first horse that that she ever owned, Cebe Reed, Josey captured the Texas Barrel Racing Championship four straight years, in addition to seven horse-trailers.

She also rode Clabber's Bar Maid to the 1975 Texas Barrel Racing Futurity Championship and Miss Baby Dude to the 1977 Oklahoma Maturity Championship. Miss Cop Beretta helped her win the 1977 Louisiana Maturity Championship.

In 1979, Josey captured the World's Champion Barrel Racing Futurity on Bit O' Broth.

Probably her greatest accomplishment on the rodeo circuit came when she won the 1980 Women's Professional Rodeo Association's World Championship.

Not only did she win the 1980 title, but she set another record that year by capturing the American Quarter Horse World Championship on Bit O' Broth.

Mrs. Josey will be competing on the Olympic team with Charmayne James of Clayton, N.M., and Malene Eddleman of Ordway, Colo. Cathy Felts of Yoakum is the Olympic alternate.

The women will be competing in barrel racing, while the men will compete in calf-roping, bareback riding, saddle-bronc riding and bull-dogging.

Mrs. Josey, who also teaches barrel racing, is coached by her husband, R.E., who has also gained fame on the rodeo circuit.

"R.E. is my biggest supporter. He's been great in helping me prepare for this and hauling me to all of those rodeos. I know without him, I couldn't have done it," she said.

Thon hopes for major league comeback

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Houston Astros shortstop Dickie Thon, who left the club last season because of recurring eye problems, says he may return to the major leagues.

"I feel good, but I have to see how things go when I start playing again," Thon said. "If I'm in good shape, I know I can play."

Thon, 29, has spent the last few months in Puerto Rico preparing for his possible return.

"The fact he wants to play again is news to me," Astros General Manager Bill Wood said. "The last time I saw him (two months ago), he said he was retired and he didn't want to play any more. He said he wanted to join our organization in some capacity, like a minor-league manager or coach. But we'd have to get the grievances settled first."

The Los Angeles Dodgers reportedly have discussed the possibility of signing Thon to a minor-league contract for the upcoming season. If Thon performed well in the minors, the Dodgers then would consider playing him at short in a revamped infield alignment that would send Mariano Duncan from short to second base and Steve Sax from second base to third.

"I probably will go to spring training and try to win a job with somebody," Thon said. "I hope I'm somewhere. If I'm not playing, I'll be pulling for the Astros."

Although he hasn't heard anything from any clubs, he believes part of the hangup has been his contract status with the Astros.

Make that Professor Sherrill

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M's board of regents will be asked Monday to grant head football coach Jackie Sherrill a professorship and tenure, school officials announced Sunday.

The regents' Committee on Academic Campuses, headed by regents chairman David G. Eller, recommended that the additional title of professor of athletics be extended to Sherrill, who guided the Aggies last season to their third straight appearance in the Cotton Bowl.

The Aggies defeated Notre Dame in the Jan. 1 classic.

A resolution proposed by Eller noted the "effectiveness and distinction" with which Sherrill has served since joining Texas A&M six years ago, on Jan. 19, 1982.

"It's an honor for me just to be at Texas A&M and it's certainly a great honor to be designated a professor with tenure," Sherrill said in response to the resolution. Sherrill's record at A&M is 45-23-1, with 29 of the victories coming over the past three SWC championship seasons.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It seems that oilman Marvin Davis' family has taken a $28 million liking to what popular singer Kenny Rogers can do with a hammer and nails.

The Davis family recently purchased Liongate, a 50-year-old Bel-Air mansion once owned and renovated by Rogers, for $7.7 million.

That's the second home purchased by the Davis family that Rogers has owned and renovated. The first was a Beverly Hills manor called the Knoll, which Davis bought in 1984 for $20.5 million in what was one of the highest prices ever paid for a home.

Kemp, Gephardt bill themselves as populists; Gephardt draws fire

By The Associated Press

Jack Kemp and Richard Gephardt, the two congressmen running for president this year, say they are the populists among their parties' hopefuls as each displays new strength in key early states.

Democrat Gephardt's resurgence in the Iowa polls made him the target for heavy fire from his rivals as they met for debates Saturday and Sunday in New Hampshire and Iowa.

The Democratic hopefuls scheduled their third debate in three days tonight in Boston, just before President Reagan's State of the Union address.

Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, initially scheduled to take part in tonight's event, canceled all campaign appearances today following the death of his father in Flagstaff, Ariz. Paul J. Babbitt Sr., died Sunday at the age of 89, family members said.

Earlier, Gephardt and Babbitt had faced queries about possible irregularities in campaign finances.

Kemp, a New York Republican, took shots at Vice President George Bush and Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole as he moved up to a strong third in the latest New Hampshire poll behind Dole in second.

"Bush and Dole represent the old guard of the Republican Party," Kemp, an 18-year House veteran, said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

"I would like to see the Republican Party have a populist as its candidate, not an elitist," Kemp said.

Bush led the field in New Hampshire with 35 percent in a Los Angeles Times poll conducted Jan. 16-21. Dole drew 22 percent, with Kemp at 18 percent. The telephone survey had an error margin of 4 percentage points, meaning Dole and Kemp could possibly be tied for second.

Gephardt's trade ideas, in particular, were the focus of the debate Saturday in Ames, Iowa, and another one on Sunday in Durham, N.H., after a weekend poll put him in the top ranks in Iowa.

"The worst old idea I've heard of in this campaign is protectionism," Gary Hart told Gephardt during the debate Sunday.

"That's nonsense," Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. said of Gephardt's support for automatic sanctions.

The Des Moines Register poll in Iowa showed Gephardt, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis bunched tightly together — Gephardt at 19 percent, Dukakis at 18 percent and Simon at 17 percent. Hot on their heels were Jesse Jackson with 11 percent and Babbitt at 10 percent.

With the Democratic debates moving to Dukakis' hometown late today, a late poll in New Hampshire showed him well ahead of the field in the neighboring state, which holds the nation's first primary on Feb. 16.

Dukakis was the choice of 37 percent of the New Hampshire Democrats surveyed by the Los Angeles Times, followed by Simon at 19 percent and Babbitt at 13 percent. The other Democrats registered in the single digits; again Hart was a big loser, falling to 6 percent support.

Questions were raised about Babbitt's and Gephardt's campaign finances after it was revealed that both obtained $10,000 computer tapes listing 1984 Iowa caucus attendees without actually paying for them.

Condom machines not paying off for vendors

HOUSTON (AP) — A salesman told David Stegman he could pay off his condom vending machine just by selling a batch of the goods inside.

With the AIDS scare in full force, Stegman believed him.

He bought six of the tastefully designed machines at a national trade convention and placed them in upscale nightclubs where he has vending contracts.

He put one machine in a women's restroom at a fashionable club on a Friday afternoon and waited for the money to roll in. But on Monday all he found was $1.50 — three sales at 50 cents each.

Every two months for the past year Stegman said he has collected an average of $6 from his vending machine.
