Panhandle dropped as nuke waste site

HEREFORD (AP) — News that a Panhandle site was dropped from consideration for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste repository drew cheers from Texas politicians, but complaints of an overly politicized selection system from winners and losers alike.

Hanford, Wash., was also taken out of the running for the repository Thursday, leaving Yucca Mountain, Nev., as the primary site now being considered. The agreement still must be approved by the House and Senate.

Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, said all work would stop at the Panhandle site under the agreement, and that even if the Nevada site is eventually rejected, the U.S. Department of Energy would have to start from ground zero in its search for an alternate site.

"Basically we assume they would start back at square one," he said, adding that by dropping the Texas and Washington sites from further consideration, the DOE would save $2 billion.

"So far as the Texas interest is concerned, this proposal has two clear pluses," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said Thursday. "First, there will be no nuclear waste dumped in Texas. And second, there will be no spending on any site in which waste will not be stored."

"That's how I spell relief," added Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. "This is a great victory for Texas. I have worked hard to see that some sanity was brought to the process and for Congress to point the way for the Energy Department, which had clearly lost its moorings."

Republican Rep. Jack Fields of Humble said of the agreement, "Merry Christmas to Deaf Smith County — we done it."

But despite the jubilation, even the head of a local nuclear waste task force who has worked six years in opposition to the Deaf Smith County location said the entire selection process was too political.

"Naturally, I'm happy that we're off the hook, but it's still poor business. Even picking Nevada is a poor way to do business," Delbert Devin said Thursday night.

"It doesn't make any sense to choose sites that are going to have obvious problems. When I told DOE six years ago that they had some lousy sites, I also told them that they were all political decisions," Devin said. "They said it was only 10 percent political. The political prevailed, though."

And that was clearly the opinion of Nevada officials, who angrily responded that Nevada was getting stuck with a waste site because it lacked the political muscle of larger states.

"I feel betrayed, especially by the House of Representatives," said Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev. "They took public health and safety, put it in a box, shoved it to one side and brought out a new box that had in it base, raw power politics."

Hereford Mayor Wes Fisher said energy officials recently indicated that the department would need at least a year to characterize the three finalists.

"But I'm not surprised that they have chosen Yucca," Fisher said. "In fact, from what we felt and heard, it was going to be Yucca Mountain all the time."

Approximately 340 jobs have been created in the DOE office in Hereford.

Pampans attending Jamboree

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

With snow and ice still covering the ground here, two young Pampa youths have decided to break away and head south for some warmth — way south.

Joe and Jereme Ragsdale, 13-year-old twin sons of Bill and Jan Ragsdale of the Grandview-Hopkins Community, left this morning to board a plane in Amarillo for a trip that will take them to New Zealand and Australia.

Those two nations of the Southern Hemisphere are experiencing their early summer months now while Pampa shivers in early winter.

The two young men are among 13,000 youth from more than 100 countries who will attend the XVI World Scout Jamboree to be held near Sydney, Australia, Dec. 30 through Jan. 10.

Ordinarily, the World Jamborees are held in summer — as the residents of the Northern Hemisphere perceive it. But then, this is summer in Australia, giving Joe and Jereme the chance to escape some of the bitter cold experienced at this time of year in the Texas Panhandle.

The grandsons of Bill and Iris Ragsdale, 1709 Coffee, Joe and Jereme are the only two from the Pampa area and among only six from the Texas Panhandle that will be at the jamboree, representing the local Golden Spread Council.

Currently eighth-grade students at Pampa Middle School, they live with their parents on a farm 16 miles south of Pampa and two miles northwest of Lake McClellan.

The two are members of Boy Scout Troop 414, chartered to First Presbyterian Church. John Curry serves as their local Scoutmaster. They have been in Scouting for five years and each holds a Life Scout rank.

They will fly to Denver today to join up with other Scouts from across the nation and then go on to Los Angeles. From there, they will fly on to New Zealand as two of the 2,500 young men who will represent the Boy Scouts of America at the quadrennial event.

Prior to heading on to Australia, they will do some touring and enjoy a home visit with a New Zealand Scout family. Joe and Jereme will spend Christmas day in New Zealand.

"This is a part of Christmas" for the two boys, Jereme said Thursday night while enjoying a pre-Christmas gathering at his grandparents' house. He explained that the trip is in part a kind of Christmas gift. "It will be a fun experience," he added.

The youths will leave New Zealand the day after Christmas, arriving in Australia a few days before the jamboree, allowing more time for touring. Among other things, they will be spending a night at a sheep "station" — or sheep farm, as Americans would call it.

Joe said they decided that this would be a good time for them to go to a World Jamboree. "The next one we might not be interested in. Or we might be too old," he said, explaining that since the world Scouting gatherings are held only every four years, they would be 17 years old by the time the next one comes around.

Joe added that another reason they wanted to attend a World Jamboree is because their father went on one. A 1965 graduate of Pampa High School, their father attended the 1963 World Jamboree in Greece.

Bob Lile of Booker, jamboree Scoutmaster of Troop 707, will be accompanying the twins and four other Panhandle youths. The jamboree contingent from this area also includes boys from West Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma, from such places as Amarillo, Lubbock, El Paso, Albuquerque, Carlsbad, Las Cruces and Beaver.

Lile noted that the world gathering is designed to be a "dramatic demonstration of Scouting's ability to develop world brotherhood, a spirit of fellowship, and a source of understanding among young people of all races, creeds and nationalities."

The jamboree will be held at Cataract Scout Park, 40 miles southwest of Sydney. Using the theme "Bringing the World Together," Scouts will test skills with youth from many lands, take part in competitive events and enjoy the fellowship and pageantry of world Scouting.

Texas oilmen say 'Humbog' to drop in price of crude

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — Texas oilmen and state officials were hoping for something other than declining oil prices for Christmas, but this week's tumble has some wondering what the new year will bring.

"I think this is sure going to put a damper on the Christmas spirit in the industry, and the Texas taxpayer should be concerned," Jim Nugent, a member of the Texas Railroad Commission, said Thursday.

In a wild session Thursday that saw crude dip below $15 a barrel for the first time in more than a year, oil prices plummeted then recouped most of their losses. By the end of trading at the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for January delivery of West Texas Intermediate stood at $15.84 per 42-gallon barrel.

price for the benchmark U.S. crude grade down 12 cents from Wednesday and $2.71 in the last six sessions.

"It may be a less-than-happy Christmas for a lot of people," said John E. Watson, president of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners. "I don't know how small independents can insulate themselves against fluctuating prices."

"There are still some people that are hanging on by their fingertips," said Kent Hance, another Texas Railroad Commissioner. "I think that we'll have a few more of them that will go (out of business)."

Oil prices have been falling since the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries failed at its year-end meeting to deal with the over-supply of oil on the world market.

"I think this is really a panic," Houston oilman Michel Halbouty said. "I feel everybody has gotten panicky."

Supreme Court expected to decide 'white oil' case

AUSTIN (AP) — An attorney for an independent oil operator predicts an opinion will be handed down next month by the Texas Supreme Court that could settle a lengthy squabble over the "white oil" issue.

The Supreme Court heard arguments Wednesday in an appeal of the case of Amarillo Oil Co. vs. Energy-Agri Products Inc.

The court's opinion in the case could affect at least five other white oil cases in litigation, said Broadus Spivey, attorney for Energy-Agri.

The suit, filed by Amarillo Oil in 1982, states that Energy-Agri infringed on a gas-only zone and stole Amarillo Oil's gas. Energy-Agri claimed it was merely producing casinghead gas, a byproduct of its oil production.

"The litigants need a decision from this court about what is legally casinghead gas," Energy-Agri attorney Paul Knisely told the court.

Amarillo Oil attorney Tom Reavley argued that the statutory definition of casinghead gas, which is limited to gas produced from an oil zone as part of oil production, must be followed.

"We're asking the court to settle once and for all that casinghead gas is limited to gas produced with oil from an oil zone," he said.

An Carson County jury ruled against Amarillo Oil, and the company appealed to the Seventh Court of Appeals.

State title game spurs Mustang mania in Wheeler

Risner

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Staff Writer

WHEELER — Shoe polish is a rare commodity in Wheeler this week.

It's hard to find a window anywhere in town that is not decorated in some fashion with a slogan to boost the town's high school football team to success.

The Wheeler Mustangs play the Bremond Tigers Saturday night in Abilene for the state's Class 1A championship.

Adrian Risner, Richard Wallace and Don Whiteley exemplify the town's love for their Mustangs.

Win or lose, Wheeler residents cheer for their team all season long, but this week, this town of 1,500 is particularly primed.

Risner remembers the lean days. The days when success on the Wheeler football field was actually scarce.

It may be hard to imagine, but once up on a time, the Wheeler Mustangs had a team that finished with a 5-5 record.

A 5-5 finish? In Wheeler of all places?

That was 1941. Risner was 17 years old and played left end for the 'Stangs.

Nowadays, Risner, 63, sits behind a desk at Wheeler's First National Bank where he is vice president and cashier. He said he enjoys Mustang football more than ever before.

"I think they're a swell bunch of guys," Risner said. "Like our coach says, they do a lot more than they should be capable of doing. 'I think they'll win it,' Risner said. "I feel like the talent (between the two teams) is about equal."

"My roots are pretty good here. I'm getting to the stage where I might even be considered an old-timer."

Pretty good roots, indeed. Risner has followed the Mustangs for as long as he can remember, at least since 1934. He has spent 61 of his 63 years in Wheeler and has looked forward to each football season with great anticipation.

"I'm just a Wheelerite from head to toe. I've got every schedule with every score since the bank started printing them in 1971. I'm for the Mustangs all the way."

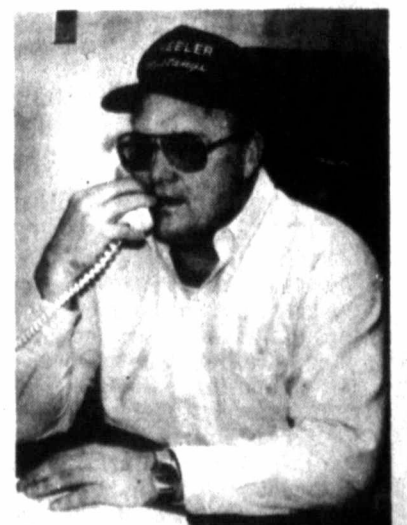

Across Wheeler's town square on Texas Street, the windows of Wallace's Tax Service read, "Tax 'em 'Stangs."

Inside is business owner and Wheeler taxman Richard Wallace, known affectionately by the team as 'Coach.'

Wallace, like Risner, has cheered for and occasionally suffered with the team for many years.

Wallace, a Class of '65 graduate, was quarterback of the regional championship team that finished 12-0 that year. In those days, regionals were as far as a team could advance. Wallace said, though, that if there'd have been a state championship game in those days, he feels Wheeler could have — or would have — won the title.

CHS to present Dickens classic

CANADIAN — A Christmas Carol, Charles Dickens' tale of how miserly Ebenezer Scrooge learns the true meaning of Christmas after visiting with ghosts, may be the most familiar story in English literature.

But what if it was told from a different point of view, say that of Scrooge's deceased business associate Jacob Marley?

That's what Canadian High School theater students will explore tonight when they present an original adaptation of Dickens' Christmas classic. Performances will be at 7:30 p.m. today at the Canadian Middle School, 404 Sixth St. Admission is $3 for adults and $1.50 for children.

CHS drama teacher Tal Lostracco, who adapted the novel for the Canadian stage, said he followed Dickens' original storyline. But he wrote it from the point of view of Jacob Marley, Scrooge's miserly predecessor who spends eternity bearing the burdens of his selfish life. Marley, played by CHS student Gabriel Brown, narrates the play.

The story follows Scrooge (Mike Wagner) as he changes from a miserable miser to a giddy giver.

It is Christmas Eve, and Scrooge is grudgingly giving his assistant Bob Cratchitt (Rick Donaldson) the holiday off. Scrooge prefers to spend his holiday home — alone.

That's what he planned to do, anyway.

Scrooge is visited by three spirits. The Ghosts of Christmas Past (Elisa Thrasher), Present (Tiffany Crouch) and Yet To Come (Frank Young).

Canadian sixth-grader Chris Barney will play Tiny Tim, Bob Cratchitt's lame and loving little son. Other Cratchitt children will be played by Molly Barney, Colby Ezzell, Roberta Kendall and Brian King. Carol Taranto plays

Mrs. Cratchitt.
Young plays Scrooge's nephew Fred, and Amy Goodwin plays Fred's friend Fan. Tammy Hinkle plays Janet.

Toby Langford, Nick Hemstra and Seth Crouch play Scrooge at three earlier stages of his life. Tammy Hinkle plays Janet, and Wesley Holland and Kiowa Garcia play stockbrokers.

Lostracco said the setting, costumes and music will be as close as possible to the Victorian London portrayed in Dickens novel. The set will go beyond the boundaries of the stage to generate more audience involvement. Many of the costumes come from the CHS theater department while others have been borrowed.

"It's not as old English as we would like," Lostracco said. "But it's good family entertainment, and the message still is real appropriate. The ending is really good."

Inside trader Boesky sentenced

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock speculator Ivan Boesky was sentenced today to three years in prison and no fine on his guilty plea in the Wall Street insider trading case.

U.S. District Judge Morris E. Lasker told Boesky his offense "cannot go unpunished. ... Its seriousness was too substantial merely to forgive and to forget."

Boesky could have been sentenced to a maximum of five years and a $250,000 fine on his plea of guilty to one count of conspiracy to make false statements to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Lasker said he was not imposing a fine because of the record $100 million civil penalty Boesky paid the SEC and "it is appropriate that your legitimate creditors be given a claim on your assets prior to that of the government."

Boesky, who faces a score of civil lawsuits, stood impassively and slightly stooped with his hands clasped behind his back as the judge spoke.

About 200 reporters, lawyers and spectators filled the third-floor courtroom.

No one has ever been sentenced to more than four years in prison on an insider trading conviction.

Boesky, 50, admitted to conspiring with others, who have not been identified, to lie to the SEC regarding 1984 purchases of stock in Fischbach Corp., an electrical company.

Prosecutors and defense attorney Leon Silverman have told Lasker in lengthy pre-sentencing memos that Boesky revealed his involvement in far more widespread illegal activity.

"And I think they've got as good a chance this year," Wallace said. "These kids know what it takes to win."

"In (the championship years of 1977 and 1979), we might've had more pure athletes, but as far as knowing what it takes to win, there's no difference.

"I think our kids are hard-nosed enough that they realize the kind of talent they're playing. Like with Monday, the kids realized the challenge, and they met it. They can play against about any situation."

Wallace has missed three games since graduation, when he became a fan. He is known as "coach" partly because he helps film the games and partly because he has attended almost every game since 1966.

"I missed one game because I was sick and two because of school," Wallace said.

As far as the actual Mustang coaches, Wallace had only words of praise for them.

"Coach Smith is an excellent coach — in any class — and Wheeler's lucky to have him. He can take average kids and by the time they're juniors or seniors, they're good Class A football players.

"We win at Wheeler because we've got real good kids that are willing to work. They've been shown the price you have to pay in order to win, and they're willing to do that. We also have good parents here who encourage their kids to stay with the program.

One thing that can be counted on about Wallace — he always wears his Wheeler Mustang cap.

"I wear it everywhere I go so people will know where I'm from," he said.

Another thing about Wallace: He has three kids, but none of them have made the team yet.

That's because the University Interscholastic League won't allow girls — even if they're Wallace's — to play on an all-boy high school football team.

"Football is an important part of Wheeler, Texas, and I think the businessmen realize that. There's been a lot of negative stuff said about Class A football but we've always been able to stay above that."

The phone rang at 2:15 Friday afternoon at Taylor's Petroleum just east of Wheeler.

When Don Whiteley answered the question put to him by the caller, a potential out-of-town customer, he also summed up Wheeler's love for football.

"There won't be anybody in town Saturday morning, I suppose," he said. "We play the state final in Abilene Saturday night."

Whiteley, whose son Shane is a senior guard for the team, has also followed the team and remembers well the '77 champs, quite possibly the best Wheeler team ever.

"I don't think we have the depth we had then," Whiteley said. "But these little guys want to play, and they want to win. They're a good bunch of boys. A lot of it's in their heads. When they get it in their heads that they want to win, and they get in shape, then they can do it."

If the 'Stangs somehow fall short of the championship, the townspeople here will probably not fret too much.

Even though the Mustangs have been raised to win, rest assured that in several years they'll look back on 1987 and remember only how they had a team that had what it took to play for the title.

Jamboree

Jereme and Joe will be camping out during the jamboree activities in the park. Among the activities will be caving, rappelling, hiking "and wind surfing." There will also be an obstacle course and an opportunity to participate in some events that might be entered into the Guinness Book of Records.

"Almost anything you want," Jereme said.
As part of the jamboree traditions, the two boys will be taking some pecan-wood neckerchief slides. Cut out in the shape of Texas, the slides also have rattlesnake rattlers attached on their fronts.
Jereme and Joe made them themselves; they're taking 40 each, in hopes of trading them for similar mementoes with other Scouts at the jamboree.

Their mother said they hope they can get the slides into New Zealand and Australia, noting that the two nations "are very strict" about what they will allow to be brought in to their countries.
The two Ragsdale brothers have been planning for the trip for nearly two years, having decided then that they would like to go. Applications must be submitted early since only a limited number are permitted from each nation sending representatives. There are also age and rank limitations, with the lowest age being 13.
They made the age limit easily: They will turn 14 six days after they return to the states Jan. 10, after an 18-hour flight back to the United States.

Joe and Jereme have obtained their passports and their visas to visit the two nations — "and travelers checks," Joe said.
As another means of preparation, they have attended the popular film Crocodile Dundee — several times. They also have been boning up on Australian lingo, including those phrases tossed at Americans by Paul Hogan in his commercials encouraging tourism Down Under.
One of the special attractions for having the World Jamboree in Australia is that the nation is observing its Bicentennial in 1988. The jamboree is part of that national celebration.

Wednesday morning.
"We had three dog search teams out during the night," Nielson said, adding that the crews are also searching the lake for Huu.
But the low cloud ceiling is keeping search crews from sending up an airplane or helicopter, Nielson said.
Huu has been reported missing since Wednesday afternoon, when he was supposed to report for work. A neighbor reported him missing Wednesday night, Lake Meredith Parks Superintendent John Higgins said.

Nielson said authorities found Huu's vehicle by the lake and suspected that he began walking along the Canadian River.
"Our main concern is that he could would get hypothermia by getting cold and wet trudging along the river," Nielson said.

Amarillo man missing near lake

FRITCH — Cold weather and low clouds are hampering efforts by area law enforcement agencies to find an Amarillo convenience store clerk who has been reported missing in the Lake Meredith area.
Larry Nielson, chief ranger for the U.S. National Parks Service at the lake, confirmed this morning that authorities still have not found Huu Nguyen, 33, who has been reported missing since

Lawmaker: State must raise taxes to meet 1990-91 deficit

AUSTIN (AP) — The 1989 Legislature will have to look at extending the sales tax to professional services or launching a state income tax to cover an estimated 1990-91 shortfall of at least $1.5 billion, Rep. Dan Morales says.

That's the amount needed to maintain current services, the San Antonio Democrat said at a Thursday meeting of the Select Committee on Tax Equity.

"We have topped out in terms of the sales-tax rate. We have topped out in terms of the franchise-tax rate. We have topped out in terms of the local property tax rate," Morales said.

"We've got to make the structural reforms that are necessary simply in order to create a system which more fairly and accurately characterizes the reality of the Texas economy," he said.

Morales, who was House sponsor of the major bill in the $5.7 billion tax increase approved by the 1987 Legislature, added that a sales-tax base expansion is more likely than an income tax.

"Politically and otherwise, that simply is where most support currently lies within both chambers of the Legislature," he said.

Legislative Budget Board Director Jim Oliver told the select committee, appointed to recommend tax system changes, that the 1990-91 state budget would be $43.3 billion if Texas maintains current services.

The budget board projection includes anticipated increases in public school enrollment and human services program caseloads.

The projection also includes the cost of meeting federal court orders and settlements related to mental health and prison facilities, and of servicing bonds.

The budget for this two-year budget cycle is $38.5 billion. The shortfall predicted by Morales is based on the expiration of the 1987 increase in the franchise tax and professional fees, and on the fact that the state used one-time revenue sources such as land sales in 1988-89.

The deficit in the next budget cycle could be as high as $2 billion, Morales said.

Tony Proffitt, spokesman for Comptroller Bob Bullock, emphasized that any projected shortfall is only theoretical until Bullock makes the official revenue forecast next year.

"The only way you can come up with a shortfall is to take the Legislative Budget Board's budget when they vote on it, and take Bullock's revenue estimate when he puts it out, and subtract the smaller number from the larger number," Proffitt said.

Even if lawmakers face a significant deficit, it will be difficult to convince them to approve another tax increase, said Morales and House Speaker Gib Lewis.

"My intent is not to raise taxes. It's going to be very, very difficult to impose another tax bill," Lewis said.

"From talking to my colleagues in the House, for them to again for the second, third, fourth time to go into session and increase taxes is going to be very difficult to do."

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Temple, said the budget board estimate is probably low because it does not take into account inflation or the need to increase some services.

"We've got a number of areas in which the level of services we provide, if people realized what those levels are, they'd be pretty much shocked," Jones said.

But Gov. Bill Clements said the budget board projection is premature.

"They're starting a hue and cry very early in the process, and we'll wait and see what eventually happens. I have a vivid memory of them saying they needed $41 billion or some such number as that in 1987, but it didn't turn out that way," Clements said.

Regulators close two banks

By The Associated Press

Texas has now suffered a record 50 bank failures this year, and officials at one of the latest two victims filed a lawsuit claiming their losses were caused by a check-kiting scheme that bilked $2.4 million in a three-week period.

USBank of Denton, with $84.2 million in deposits, and the Bank of Mabank, with $44.5 million, were shut down Thursday for similar reasons, said Deputy Commissioner Stephen Y. Scurlock of the Texas Department of Banking.

Both suffered from liberal and ill-advised lending practices, poor management and a soft Texas economy that made many loans worthless, he said. Both were to reopen today as branches of other banks, officials said.

The Denton Record-Chronicle reported today, meanwhile, that USBank officials have since last summer fought a legal battle against a former Frisco horse rancher who bank officials claim operated a check-kiting scheme with a Memphis, Tenn., cattle broker.

A court date had been set for November on the case, but a second bank involved, Commerce Union Bank of Memphis, was given more time to prepare its case.

According to records filed in the Denton County District Clerk's office, USBank officials allege that Lee Perkins siphoned more than $2.4 million from the bank over a three-week period during June and July of last year by trading hot checks with the Memphis man.

In addition, USBank claims in its suit that when officials there became suspicious of the number of checks passing through Perkins' account, Commerce Union knowingly gave the Denton bank false information about Memphis cattle broker, Leroy Abraham, calling him a "good customer" and vouching for his integrity.

USBank officials have said the alleged scheme primarily is what left the bank in trouble, and are seeking to recover the alleged loss through legal means.

But Dallas attorney Ken Herridge, who represents Perkins, told the newspaper that bank officials "caused their own problems" because they misunderstood the method of payment the two men used to conduct business.

Herridge said Perkins and Abraham were using draft requests that were supposed to be authorized by both the banks.

But, he added, USBank officials erroneously gave Perkins immediate credit without lining up authorizations and when the bank billed Commerce Union, the cash was unavailable because the drafts hadn't yet been approved.

USBank's sole office was to reopen today as a branch of United National Bank of Dallas, and its depositors automatically become United customers, regulators said.

United will assume about $84.7 million in 25,600 deposit accounts and will purchase $84.1 million of the failed bank's assets at a discount of $22 million.

The board of directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. also approved the assumption of the deposit liabilities of Bank of Mabank by First State Bank of Athens, Texas. The failed bank's sole office was to reopen today as a branch of First State.

First State will assume about $43.2 million in 6,400 deposit accounts, and has agreed to pay the FDIC a purchase premium of $302,000.

To aid the transaction, the FDIC will advance about $7.2 million to the assuming bank and retain assets of the failed bank with a book value of about $8.4 million.

Some exemptions to new taxes

Landscaping and surveying are now taxable services, but businesses should be aware that some exemptions exist, according to State Comptroller Bob Bullock.

The services are among those subject to the new sales tax law that went into effect Oct. 1, Bullock said, adding that many may not be aware of their inclusion under the new provisions.

"Under the law, some customers don't have to pay tax on every service provided by these types of businesses," Bullock said.

Examples of some non-taxable landscaping services are consultations, research and the preparation of design plans, he said. Harvesting, cultivating and fertilizing farm land or forest land, when the plants or trees are grown for resale, are also exempt.

However, the charges for these services must be clearly separated on the bill from any other charges. "Otherwise, the total charge will be taxable," Bullock warned.

Taxable services include planting, transplanting, sodding, pruning, spraying, watering, soil maintenance, mowing, trimming and edging. Tax is also due on the service of identifying, preventing and curing plant diseases, he said.

Consumers and businesses should keep in mind that construction is not the same as landscaping, Bullock said. Construction services include the installation of a lawn sprinkler system or swimming pool and the building of a deck, fence or patio.

"The two shouldn't be confused," Bullock said. "Charges for construction jobs should be separated from charges for landscaping."

The new law exempts services performed by individuals who are under 18 and self-employed if they earned less than $1,000 during the previous calendar quarter or if they earned less than $1,000 during the same calendar quarter the year before.

"This new law won't affect the neighborhood kids who earn their summer money mowing lawns," Bullock said.

Surveyors should collect sales tax on some of their services as well, including boundary recovery, lot surveying, title surveying, right-of-way surveying, residential surveying and as-built title surveying.

Exempt surveying services include topographical, aerial and tree surveying, construction staking and surveying to determine the placement of a new structure in relation to property boundaries, and oil well placement surveying.

Surveyors and landscapers who perform taxable services must apply for a sales tax permit, Bullock said. The application is available from the Comptroller's Office or by calling 1-800-252-555, extension 3-4600. The fee for a sales tax permit is $25.

The businesses must charge the 6 percent state sales tax and any local sales tax rate, such as the city's 1 percent tax.

Anyone having questions about what is or is not subject to the new sales tax rules should call the Comptroller's Office.

State to provide AZT to welfare AIDS patients

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Board of Human Services has approved a plan to provide AIDS patients on welfare with AZT, an expensive drug that combats the deadly disease.

"We feel that it certainly will alleviate much of the suffering," board Chairman J. Livingston Kosberg said after the decision Thursday. "It will, in fact, prolong the life of many patients who are waiting for a cure, so it might ultimately save their lives."

Beginning Jan. 1, the drug will be available to Medicaid patients suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome, a fatal disease that attacks the body's immune system. Its victims are often homosexuals and intravenous drug users.

AZT slows the spread of the AIDS virus in an infected person and is the only federally approved drug that has improved the health of some AIDS patients.

Glen Maxey, executive director of the Lesbian-Gay Rights Lobby of Texas, said his organization applauds the board's decision.

It's just another little snowfall?

Alright already, enough with the snow, for crying out loud!

Doesn't dear old Mother Nature know when to quit?

What's next, for heaven's sake?

I go to bed on Saturday night thinking, "Well, maybe a couple of inches. No problem."

I wake up Sunday morning. Snow. Go to bed Sunday night. Snow. Wake up Monday morning. More snow. And as I was getting drowsy Monday night, it was still snowing.

Tuesday morning I wake up to find the skies have snowed themselves out, but what looks to be the majority of the entire snowfall has landed on my front lawn.

Previous to this year, I thought a lot of snow meant maybe five or six inches.

Also prior to Tuesday of this week, I thought cold weather meant 7 degrees.

And then we get hit with 2 degrees. After my poor old car had sat out in the frigid air all night, I swear I heard it cry for help the next morning.

Then there were the slick roads.

People sliding around everywhere ... it looked like a ride at Six Flags.

After we moved here, people always told me, "People up here know how to drive in snow and ice."

Yeah, right.

The people I saw driving knew not the least little thing about handling their cars on the slick roads.

The people who knew how to drive in the snow and ice were the ones who had little experience doing just that — like me.

And you know what bugs me? What really bugs me?

Network weathermen.

I am so tired of not living in New York or Los Angeles.

Because only in those two cities does the weather really matter to these clowns.

We get 16 inches of snow, and Willard Scott says,

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

matter-of-factly, "Oh, about a foot of snow has fallen on the Panhandle and they're expecting lows in the single digits tonight." A little cold in Texas and the Plains states.

But, if New York gets the same amount of snow with temperatures identical to ours, ole' Willard will yell out, "16-INCHES OF SNOW IN NEW YORK AND BUNDLE UP, A LOW OF 2 DEGREES IS EXPECTED. BRRRR!"

It's like those New Yorkers have more to lose if they have the same irate weather conditions that we do.

Willard does a great job of making New Yorkers realize how great they are while making the rest of the country think how unfortunate it is that they don't live in the media capital of the world.

The funniest thing concerning our most recent cold spell had to come Tuesday afternoon.

For those of you with cable television and access to the Weather Channel, you may have caught this.

Every few minutes, the Weather Channel runs the local forecast.

Tuesday afternoon, the forecast for that night read, "Tuesday night ... Clear and not so cold. Lows 3 to 8 degrees."

Not so cold?

I suppose 2 degrees is cold, but 3 to 8 degrees is balmy?

What would those people have called 32 degrees that night? Unseasonably warm?

Shaky governments devalue currencies

The dollar's sharp drop in recent days has White House economic wizards poised to push the panic button. Obviously, these fellows don't know their shakels from their pesos. Actually, a few basic principles rule the value of any currency and give us a clue into what's happening to the dollar.

1. How hard is the money? That is, what stands behind it? If you have a gold-coin, you know what's behind it; gold has a certain value, and that's what the coin is worth. Paper money used to be backed by gold; whenever you wanted to, you could turn in your dollars or marks or yen for a fixed price of gold. But no more.

What now stands behind every major currency is faith in the government that prints it. Because governments are fickle and inconsistent, it's not surprising that a currency is worth one value today, another tomorrow.

2. The more reliable the government, the more stable the currency. For years, Switzerland has had the smallest and most efficient government. For that reason, Switzerland has long had the world's most solid currency — and strongest economy. The dollar has jumped up and down in the past five years, but the Swiss franc has remained steady.

In contrast, Mexico has one of the most unwieldy and inefficient governments around. It tries to cover its bumbling by devaluing the peso, as we've seen in recent weeks. That's why a good chunk of the Mexican economy actually runs on dollars, as a visit to any border town shows.

3. A country that shifts between the Swiss model and the Mexican model will see its currency jump around, some years up, some years down. Currency holders act on expectations of the country's policies. If a country passes high taxes, imposes controls on businesses, and sparks inflation by printing too much money, that means its government doesn't know what it's doing. People then dump that country's currency for something else.

During Jimmy Carter's administration, the United States took a long shot of economic tequila, and the dollar plummeted in value. During Ronald Reagan's early years, the United States sobered up, instituted some sane economic policies, and the dollar soared. But over the past year, President Reagan has given us new taxes and economic controls, America is hitting the ol' fire water again, and the dollar has dropped lower than it was even under the Rev. Dr. Jimmy.

The solution to this mess? Because South Africa and the Soviet Union are the world's main gold suppliers, we cannot, alas, return to a full gold standard. But we could return to something close, such as a commodity index, which would peg the dollar's value to a basket of goods.

A second solution would be to let private banks issue their own currencies. They would "sell" dollars like any other good. The banks with the most stable currencies would do best. There's no reason government needs a monopoly over money.

Mo Udall leaves 'em laughing

WASHINGTON — Are you running for office? Making a speech? Could you use a few laughs? Then get to your bookseller and ask for Morris K. Udall's Too Funny to Be President. It is the happiest book of the Christmas season.

Mo Udall (no one ever calls him "Morris") is pretty well known across the country as a member of the House from Arizona. He came to the lower chamber in May 1961, a tall, gangly fellow who briefly played professional basketball with the Denver Nuggets. At 65, he now ranks 20th in seniority.

He's also remembered as the engaging candidate who ran in 22 of the 27 Democratic primaries of 1976. He didn't win a one of them, but he finished in second place in six and he rolled up 1.6 million votes. Trouble was, Jimmy Carter won 17 of the primaries and rolled up a 6 million votes. But no question about it: Mo had the most fun.

Now he's put together a book of his favorite stories. He looks back on politicians he has known, and he looks upon most of them gently, with his good eye, forgiving their political sins.

Udall's theme is that humor is a vital lubricant for the successful working of political machinery. Leave 'em laughing. Make your point with a joke. "The best political humor," he writes, "however sharp or pointed, has a little love behind it." He is a man unashamed to give love, and he receives it abundantly in return.

This was never more evident than in the '76 campaign. Mo never had much of a chance. Carter benefited from early organization and a superlative staff. George Wallace was unbeatable in Florida and North Carolina. Edmund Brown was California's favorite son. Henry "Scoop" Jackson was a force in Pennsylvania. About all Mo Udall had going for him was his record as a true-blue Democrat — that, and his sense of humor. Those of us who covered that campaign came to cherish a great affection for the guy. He knew how to field a question without fumbling. "What separates you from Jimmy Carter?" he was asked. "About seven hundred delegates," Mo replied.

Many of the jokes, quotes and one-liners in his book might be classified as old stuff, but so what? "The truth is," he writes, "there is very little new political humor." From time immemorial the people have joked about Congress. Good lines speedily get appropriated. Udall attributes to the late Everett Dirksen this splendid boast: "I am a man of principle. And my first principle is flexibility." He attributes to Yogi Berra a line that I thought belonged to Niels Bohr: "Prediction is a very difficult art." (Pause). "Especially when it involves the future."

Several of his finest yarns involve Henry Fountain Ashurst, who served as a senator from Arizona from 1912 to 1940. The old boy was quite an orator. He learned to speak by reciting Shakespeare as he walked up a hill. It gave him wind power. "I could throw 56-pound words across the Grand Canyon," he said. The senator never worried about changing his mind. "The clammy hand of consistency," he said, "has never rested for long on my shoulder." Ashurst had a gift for metaphor: "When a public official accepts a gift, he dissolves the pearl of independence in the vinegar of obligation."

Udall is an inveterate collector of malapropisms and euphemisms. He quotes a Southern politician who felt that his opponent "deserves to be kicked to death by a jackass — and frankly, I'd like to be the one to do it." Rep. Silvio Conte provided a splendidly mixed metaphor: "This is no time to pull the rug out in the middle of the stream." In the bureaucracy, the crash of an airliner became "premature impact of the aircraft with the terrain below." An explosion of a nuclear reactor could be defined as "a rapid energetic disassembly."

Just about any subject will lend itself to a joke, Mo believes, provided the tale-spinner stays away from jokes that depend upon race or sexism. He never has hesitated to joke about his glass eye, the consequence of a boyhood injury. He suffers from Parkinson's disease, which God knows is no joke, but when a blond bombshell of a lobbyist named Paula Parkinson came along, he managed to find a touch of humor.

During the long fight over the Alaskan wilderness bill, Udall was bitterly denounced for his supportive leadership. He was philosophical. His experience with national parks, he said, had persuaded him that at first people hate you, "but in 20 years they'll probably name a mountain for you." One of these days, someone will indeed name a mountain for Mo. He'll be touched, but he'll be laughing.

What have they done, Dolly?

Entertainer Dolly Parton says her new TV show is a disaster. She says "It went downhill because I let so-called Hollywood 'experts' talk me into doing things I knew in my heart were wrong."

Dolly, if I read you correctly in the National Enquirer, you have discovered something significant, and I hope you have discovered it in time. I grew up with what we now call "country music." My first job was on KVOO in Tulsa, Okla., a hundred years ago. When I wasn't reading news I was announcing Bob Wills and his Texas Playboys.

He called his a "hillbilly band." It never tried to be anything else, and it outlasted his own lifetime.

In the years since, I have watched cow-country music, convinced it had to "adapt," become so homogenized that the real thing got lost.

The WLS Barn Dance of the 1940s got the largest following of any regional radio program until it tried to "adapt" to what a network wanted — and it died.

Nashville's "Grand Ole Opry" allowed itself

Paul Harvey

to be mongrelized in the 1950s, sacrificing its magic.

Ralph Foster's "Ozarks Jubile" was so phenomenally successful on KWTO in Springfield, Mo., that a network offered to expand its audience nationwide.

But within weeks, the network version was including New York cabaret singers and slick production numbers that killed the program graveyard dead.

Johnny Cash was given his big "network break" until Manhattan-oriented producers tried to make him and June into something they weren't — and that series succumbed.

So — Hello, Dolly!

It was well-intentioned but inept PR people who had you in a bubble bath with a glass of champagne, inviting your listeners to tune in. That did not appeal to "your" listeners.

They featured you flirting each week with some gorgeous Hollywood type, and your fans thought you were cheating on your husband.

You wanted to invite bona fide country music guest stars, and the network said no. They even had you singing such uncharacteristic numbers as "Someone To Watch Over Me."

Anyway, with your silly "variety" program headed for the ashcan, you appear to have caught on in time, and, starting in January, the Dolly Parton show will abandon the glitz in favor of your distinctive down-home flavor.

Bully for you. Dolly, what does a newsman care? I hesitate to give you anything else to worry about right now, but Manhattan-based media tend to reshape our whole country in their image — politically, socially, morally.

And you and I know grass-roots Americans are not like that.

Conservatives must judge treaty's merits

By William A. Rusher

The media are entitled to gloat a bit, if they wish, about the disagreement that has broken out over the INF treaty between President Reagan and various people who are usually counted among his supporters. But broadcasting film clips of Richard Viguerie declaring that he feels "betrayed," or of Howie Phillips dismissing Mr. Reagan as a "useful idiot" from the Kremlin's standpoint, comes pretty close to dishonesty if it isn't accompanied (and it wasn't) by the observation that Viguerie and Phillips have been denouncing Mr. Reagan mercilessly for at least five years.

The attitude displayed toward the treaty by various candidates for the Republican presidential nomination is of more interest. Not surprisingly, in view of polls showing overwhelming support for it among Republican voters, the front-runner (Bush) has endorsed the treaty, and his closest pursuer (Dole) seems likely to, after ostentatiously taking some time to study it. Three of the other contenders (Kemp, du Pont and Robertson) know that it will be the GOP's right wing that will most need massaging after Bush is nominated, and, by opposing the treaty, are positioning themselves to represent it at that fruitful juncture.

That leaves Haig, who also opposes the treaty, though hardly in the hope of becoming the spokesman of the party's conservative wing. He is a member of the small but influential clique of Machiavellians grouped around Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger, who are opposing the treaty in an effort to obscure the memory of their own disastrous experiments with "detente" when they were in power in the early 1970s.

Mr. Reagan, in criticizing extremists who think war with the Soviet Union is inevitable, carelessly left open the inference (false, of course) that he was accusing all critics of the INF treaty of believing this. My colleague Bill Buckley, whose pipeline to Henry Kissinger is in excellent repair, promptly tried the shoe on and announced that it didn't fit. Rather, he asserts, "some of us" believe that the INF treaty "weakens the West's defensive posture."

Why? Buckley advances two reasons. First, verification (which the treaty's proponents insist will be iron-clad) is useless, because the record demonstrates that the Soviets will cheat anyway, and that when they do our domestic doves will manage to pooh-pooh the violations so effectively that Congress and the public will fail to respond.

This may be true, but it is an argument against suicide, not against an otherwise worthwhile treaty. If this country is incapable of responding to clear evidences of Soviet treaty violations, it will not be saved by avoiding treaties. It can only be saved by demonstrating the kind of will it takes to enforce them.

Second, Buckley argues, the treaty is undesirable even if it is observed to the letter, for it deprives NATO of the only theater nuclear weapon capable of reaching Soviet territory. It is true (so this argument goes) that the United States would still possess ICBMs capable of doing so, but our European allies understandably doubt that we would launch them to defend Germany. So the INF treaty threatens to "uncouple" the NATO alliance.

But why, then, did the NATO alliance remain "coupled" in the 35 years prior to December 1984, when deployment of the Pershing IIs and the cruise missiles began? And how will it remain coupled a decade or so hence, when the Soviet Union, following our example, deploys a satellite defense against incoming missiles?

No one has opposed ill-adviced agreements with the Soviet Union — including the Nixon-Kissinger set — more strenuously than I. And no one will resist more vigorously the use of the present treaty as an excuse for greedy businesses to sell these thugs the Western technology they so desperately need. But the INF treaty deserves to be judged on its own merits, and they are considerable.

Budget bargainers reach tax agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — An agreement by legislative bargainers on a $23-billion, two-year tax increase and progress on a $600 billion spending bill are giving Congress momentum in its drive to finish a deficit-reduction package.

House-Senate negotiators announced agreement Thursday night on a revenue package that would raise an additional $9 billion in fiscal 1988, which began Oct. 1, and $14 billion more next year.

Other bargainers reached accords on most portions of a record spending bill that would provide $600 billion for federal agencies through September 1988 while also chipping $7.6 billion from the deficit.

Major disagreement remained on issues including aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, slashing Medicare spending and the fairness doctrine for broadcasters.

Legislative leaders hoped to complete bargaining on both bills and secure final congressional passage in time to send the measures to the White House for President Reagan's signature over the weekend. As several disputes were settled Thursday, legislative leaders said they were optimistic the work could be completed quickly.

"Everything seems to be moving along," said Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

The companion bills were being sculpted to the form of the budget agreement reached Nov. 20 by the White House and congressional leaders. That accord, sparked by the stock market plunge of October, was for a two-year, $76-billion reduction in the projected increase of the federal deficit, including $30.2 billion this year.

To prod the legislators into action, a measure enacted Wednesday temporarily financing the government will provide funds only until 12:01 a.m. Saturday. With most federal offices shut over the weekend, this meant lawmakers had until Monday morning to finish their work and avert a government shutdown.

The agreement on taxes was reached in a closed session by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who heads the Senate Finance Committee. House negotiators then gave their approval on an 8-1 vote, with Bill Archer, R-Texas, voting no, and senators agreed without dissent.

The final proposal, said Bentsen, is "a good agreement and a fair one." Rostenkowski hailed the plan as good tax policy, noted it grew out of an agreement with President Reagan and added, "I fully expect the administration ... to fully support our efforts."

Almost all the tax burden would fall on corporations. The major exceptions: a three-year extension of the 3-percent tax on telephone service and a token restriction on deduction of mortgage interest. That includes a $1 million limit on deductible mortgages used to buy a house, which could include up to $100,000 for a boat or mobile home, and a $100,000 limit on deductible home-equity loans.

The bill would restrict the completed-contract method of accounting, which now benefits defense contractors; limit tax advantages of installment sales by manufacturers; and require corporations to accelerate tax payments.

Other portions of the tax bill, however, need work. The measure is also to contain $13.6 billion in benefit reductions and asset sales this year, and many agreements — such as how to cut Medicare — remained elusive Thursday.

Large chunks of the spending bill were also falling into place as all 13 negotiating teams completed their work on the money provisions of the measure. The agriculture and transportation panels were the last to finish.

Farm negotiators agreed to drop a potentially costly soybean payment program and accepted a slight cut in government target prices.

Other bargainers agreed to language making it likely that Yucca Mountain, Nev., would become the nation's burial ground for high-level nuclear waste. The provision would end the need for further study of two other potential disposal sites in Deaf Smith County, Texas, and Hanford nuclear reservation in the state of Washington.

Airlines ordered to change security checks by Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The airlines are scrambling to change their airport passenger screening programs after the government ordered all airline and airport employees, even those in uniform, to pass through the security checkpoints beginning Monday.

The tighter security measures were directed Thursday by the Federal Aviation Administration and will go into effect two weeks after a fired USAir employee smuggled a gun aboard a Pacific Southwest Airlines jet and began firing during flight.

The plane crashed Dec. 7, killing all 43 people aboard, including the gunman, who apparently had bypassed the screening checkpoint at Los Angeles International Airport as he boarded the plane, according to investigators.

The FAA action came as congressional investigators described a recent survey of six major airports in which they said they found thousands of employee identification badges unaccounted for, sloppy security in restricted areas and inadequate screening near aircraft gates of airport and airline employees for possible weapons.

Investigators for the congressional General Accounting Office examined security at six major airports considered by the FAA to be among 16 airports that could be most vulnerable to terrorist or hijack attempts.

The investigators did not identify the airports, but other sources said they were Los Angeles International, Miami International, Atlanta Hartsfield, New York's John F. Kennedy, Washington's National and Chicago's O'Hare.

At Los Angeles International the GAO investigators found 6,000 security badges, or about 16 percent of the total number, unaccounted for. Airport officials later said their own investigation showed about half that number missing.

Los Angeles International Airport manager Stephen Yee disputed parts of the report at a Los Angeles news conference, where he announced plans for a new high-tech system of identification badges for employees. A similar system, intended to clamp down on unauthorized access to runways and cargo areas, will also be installed at San Francisco International Airport.

"They have their figures and we have our figures," Yee said when asked if he believed the GAO report inaccurate.

Airline pilots union officials said, meanwhile, that the new directives could cause havoc at some airports.

"If you think delays and passenger misconnections are bad now, see what happens if we clog the checkpoints with thousands of pilots, flight attendants and other airline and airport employees," said Henry Duffy, president of the 40,000-member Air Line Pilots Association.

Employee screening programs are likely to vary among airlines and from one airport to another, depending on available space and equipment, industry officials said.

Where there is room, separate screening stations might be set up for employees.

The mountains above downtown Los Angeles are covered with snow late Thursday afternoon after an unusual winter storm dumped rain, snow and high winds across the Los Angeles basin. Over a foot of snow fell in Southern California's mountains over the past two days.

Consumer prices rise

By The Associated Press

Consumer prices rose a moderate 0.3 percent in November as energy prices rose after two months of declines, the government said today.

With just one month to go in 1987, inflation at the retail level was running at an annual rate of 4.7 percent — more than four times last year's tiny 1.1 percent increase but still in the range considered moderate by most economists.

The November rise in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index followed a 0.4 percent increase in October.

Analysts suggested the rise in energy prices might be short-lived, however. More recent declines in oil prices, including sharp drops this week, should help cushion the domestic inflationary impact of a weaker dollar.

Overall energy costs rose 0.8 percent in November following a 0.9 percent drop in September and a 0.5 percent fall in September.

Gasoline prices rose 0.3 percent, after falling 0.3 percent in the previous month. Home heating oil costs were up 0.5 percent; natural gas and electricity prices jumped 1.4 percent.

Police arrest Korean election protesters

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — More than 1,200 people were arrested throughout Seoul today as police clashed with protesters who accused the government of cheating to win presidential elections.

A newspaper reported today that a neighborhood leader tried to burn himself to death after claiming he received money from the governing party.

Government party candidate Roh Tae-woo handily defeated opposition candidates Kim Dae-jung and Kim Young-sam in Wednesday's balloting. The opposition rejected the unofficial results and called for its supporters to take to the streets in protest.

The worst clash was in southern Seoul where about 2,000 protesters occupied the Kuro polling place.

Riot police, firing tear gas and waving clubs, arrested more than 900 demonstrators there. Police said 31 people were injured and 10 vehicles gutted by firebombs.

Protesters hurled rocks and firebombs as riot police stormed the building, smashing in doors and swarming up ladders to upper floors.

"Down with the military dictatorship," protesters yelled during the three-hour confrontation.

Clashes also broke out in Seoul's center, where scores of radical students showered police with firebombs and rocks near the Bank of Korea. Large detachments of police broke up those protests quickly. Few people in the crowded streets showed any sympathy for the protest.

"The election was rigged," groups of protesters yelled.

Protesters throwing firebombs attacked and gutted two small police posts in the capital. Police, who had no figures on injuries, said about 300 people had been arrested in the clashes in the city center.

In the southwestern city of Kwangju, about 5,000 people battled police in the downtown area. Kwangju is the stronghold of Kim Dae-jung.

The newspaper Chosun Ilbo reported today that Huh Ki-soo, 38, who heads a neighborhood association in suburban Seoul, doused himself with kerosene and lit a match Thursday in a demonstration against purported cheating in the election.

The Seoul daily said Huh was in critical condition with severe burns in his face, arms and legs.

"I have received 25,000 won ($31) from the ruling party during the election. Fraudulent election ought to be ended even at the cost of my life," witnesses quoted Huh as shouting as he set a match to his body, the newspaper reported.

Huh did not say what he received the money for, according to the report.

South Korean residential areas are organized into neighborhood associations, each containing about 10 families. Association heads are not on the government payroll but normally cooperate with government offices in relaying official instructions on monthly civil air defense drills and similar matters.

Opposition parties contend that many of the association chiefs helped the governing party during the presidential campaign, leading drives to increase the membership of the governing Democratic Justice Party.

They also claim the chiefs actively campaigned for Roh and appeared at pro-government rallies.

The opposition has refused to accept Roh's victory in South Korea's first democratic presidential election in 16 years. Calls for demonstrations to overturn Wednesday's vote initially received little or no response.

But today, about 2,000 protesters poured into a polling place in the Kuro district of south Seoul and hurled rocks and firebombs as riot police stormed the building, smashing in doors and swarming up ladders to upper floors.

"Down with the military dictator: hip," the protesters yelled in the three-hour confrontation during which police turned fire hoses on the demonstrators.

National Police headquarters announced today it was extending indefinitely a nationwide police alert. The government has warned it will not tolerate demonstrations.

Roh offered to meet with the two Kims, the main opposition candidates, to urge them to work with him on restoring political calm and introducing full democracy.

A former general, Roh campaigned on the platform that he alone could ensure both democracy and stability.

Three Palestinians killed in Gaza Strip

GAZA CITY, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Israeli troops stormed a hospital in the Gaza Strip today to disperse Palestinians throwing stones and firebombs, and the army said three Arabs were killed in clashes in the occupied territory.

In Jerusalem, Israeli riot police fired tear gas at hundreds of Palestinians who staged an anti-Israeli demonstration after traditional Friday prayers at Al Aqsa mosque, one of Islam's holiest sites.

French writer dies

PARIS (AP) — Marguerite Yourcenar, one of the 20th century's great writers in the French language and the first woman to be admitted to the Academie Francaise, died in the United States, Europe 1 radio reported today.

Ms. Yourcenar, a longtime resident of Maine who became an American citizen in 1947, was 84.

The cause of her death was not immediately known. The French news agency Agence France-Press quoted her private secretary, Jane Keane Lunt, as saying the writer died Thursday night after a hospitalization of five weeks.

Cotton crop sustains slight damage from snow

LUBBOCK (AP) — South Plains cotton growers will suffer some damage to their crops from this week's blanket of snow, but most were saved by the autumn's good weather that allowed them to finish harvesting before the storm hit, officials say.

"If we would have had any significant bad weather before this, we would have been looking at a tremendously big loss to the cotton crop," said Spencer Tanksley, agent for Bailey County, where 16 inches of snow fell Monday and temperatures Wednesday plummeted to 9 degrees below zero.

In Bailey County, farmers were out removing the snowdrifts Thursday that piled up against the modules to prevent moisture damage, Tanksley said.

"For any cotton left still in the field, it will be a while before they can get in there and strip it," he said.

Moisture caused by the snow may hurt the fibers, adversely affecting grade and yield, agents said.

But farmers who have already harvested and packed their cotton into modules should be safe from moisture damage if it was packaged tightly enough, said Hockley County agent Billy Warrick.

"If it's packed correctly, it can stay out in the field for weeks" before ginning, he said.

But where melting snow wets the top of the modules, seed quality will suffer, said Terry County agent Tom Gaither.

In Hockley County, about 90 percent of cotton was out of the field when Sunday night's storm hit, Warrick said.

A few larger farmers in Texas' South Plains, which received an average of about 8 inches of snow this week, still had not brought in their crops, he said.

"They just had so many acres they couldn't get it in," Warrick said. Those farmers could be left with stringy cotton, where fibers are strung out 4 to 5 inches from the plant.

"As long as that's the extent of it, you can still get in and harvest it," said Warrick. "But if it's on the ground, you've lost it."

The approximately 4 inches of snowfall in Terry County caused delays at some smaller cotton gins, but most of the larger gins continued to operate around the clock despite the storm, Gaither said.

But gins shut down for three days this week around Muleshoe, putting ginners behind.

Two South Texas uranium processing sites to close

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The closing of two uranium processing facilities in South Texas will ease fears about their safety, a state senator says.

A uranium mill tailings disposal site in Karnes County and the Mount Lucas uranium mine in Live Oak County will cease operations in 1988, Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said Thursday.

Truan said he learned of the closings from the Texas Railroad Commission's Surface Mining Division and the Texas Department of Health's Bureau of Radiation Control.

"The closure and restoration of these two sites will be a big relief for thousands of South Texans who live near the mines" and had questions about their safety, Truan said.

Truan is heading a study of uranium mill tailings disposal to be conducted by the subcommittee on health services, and also serves on the Waste Management Policy Committee, which is expected to begin hearings next year.

The Live Oak County mine is operated by Everest Minerals Corp. of Corpus Christi.

The Karnes County Conquista disposal site is operated by Conoco Inc.

Man's front yard minitrain offers trip back into time

HARPERS FERRY, W.Va. (AP) — Bob Wallich's front yard would cause envy for most children who have dreamed of finding a Lionel engine and caboose under the Christmas tree.

For 50 cents, he'll take you riding in a miniature fun park train car that dates back to the days when amusement rides didn't carry warning labels for people with queasy stomachs and weak hearts.

Seventeen years ago, Wallich built a set of tracks on his Jefferson County property, rescued some aging train cars from outdated, bankrupt fun parks and invited a few area children in for a ride.

Now, every weekend from April to October, the 69-year-old semiretired salesman dons his engineer cap and conducts passengers around his yard on a colorful, waist-high train, over a trestle and past an authentic railroad station he brought to Harpers Ferry from Hagerstown, Md.

News of the rides spreads by word-of-mouth; Wallich's only advertising is a handmade sign in front of his property: "Train Rides — 50 cents." Most patrons are children and adults who have been to the farm before, he said.

An average of 40 people ride Wallich's train each weekend, although sometimes fewer than 10 show up. When riders tire of the trains, they can walk up the hill to Wallich's model train museum.

With Wallich as engineer, the train chugs efficiently around the 1,780-foot track, crossing a small creek on the trestle and passing red-painted storage buildings for spare trains. A trip in the child-sized cars is over in two minutes.

"We made all the switches and the trestle," Wallich said. "For 2½ years, we just worked on it on the weekends."

Wallich said he had tried to build a lake inside the oval track, but "the water just ran right through" because the region is honeycombed with caverns.

Wallich bought his train cars "second-, third- and fourth-hand" at auctions of old amusement park equipment for about $4,000 each. The sets, which include a gasoline-powered engine and four cars, sold for around $20,000 each when they were new.

"We had a live steam engine — a 1900 Cagney. That's the Cadillac of trains," Wallich said. "But it took three hours to get the steam hot and two hours to get it cold — it was too much work."

Wallich and his wife, Kitty, bought the Harpers Ferry property, 1½ miles outside town off

U.S. 340, just to set up the train. The two lived in the town's historic section until 10 years ago, when they moved to the farm, which they call Prospect Hill.

An admitted railroad junkie, Wallich is a smiling, agreeable man who lets his wife do most of the talking unless the subject is trains. Mrs. Wallich evidently is used to the role — she speaks enthusiastically about her husband's addiction to railroading.

"When he was 12, he had trains in his basement," she said.

Dallas Police Association leader, former nun, aims to improve image

DALLAS (AP) — In the early 1970s, Monica Smith dressed in a black habit, pulled a black veil modestly over her face and, as a nun with the School Sisters of Notre Dame, tended the sick and needy in the piney forests of Chatawa, Miss.

Nearly 15 years later, a .38-caliber revolver at her hip and a Dallas Police Department badge on her chest, Ms. Smith stood in an alley behind Lemmon Avenue and examined the lifeless body of a young doctor from Parkland Memorial Hospital who had been gunned down in his car.

The transition, she said, was not as dramatic as it might seem. Ms. Smith, now an 11-year police veteran and president-elect of the Dallas Police Association, said the skills she needed as a nun are not so different from those she uses every day as a burglary and theft investigator.

She thinks it is those same qualities—discipline, compassion and devotion—that helped propel her to the presidency of the association, which represents about 95 percent of the department's sworn officers.

"Police officers, like nuns, need a great deal of dedication and conviction that we do make a difference in the world," said Ms. Smith, who assumes her new, unpaid post Jan. 12.

Ms. Smith will be the association's first woman president. She defeated Rusty Goin with 58 percent of the vote in an election Dec. 8 and will succeed J.K. Ramsey, who did not run for re-election.

She said she hopes she will make a difference in the powerful 2,000-member association, which is suffering from a tarnished public image and has clashed with police department administrators. During the spring, 58 percent of the association's members voted they had "lost confidence" in Police Chief Billy Prince.

One of Ms. Smith's main goals will be to polish the image of the beleaguered department. She said she will encourage association board members to become involved with community groups.

"We have some wonderful people in this department," said Ms. Smith, 41, a native of Guatemala. "We make a lot of contributions, and we make a difference. If it wasn't for the dedication of the police officers, the city could never be as well-known and respected as it is."

She wants to work for a more effective grievance procedure for officers and better communication between rank-and-file officers and police administrators. She also stressed the importance of boosting the department's manpower.

The sister city gets no respect

EDITOR'S NOTE — On the Kansas side of the river is the other Kansas City, the one that gets no respect. Even tourist brochures put out by the city boast of a wide range of cultural and recreational activities — all on the Missouri side. But things might improve for the Kansans since the city landed a new General Motors plant and the state legalized pari-mutuel betting.

By CRAIG HORST
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — The city saved itself by selling everything but its soul to General Motors.

Typically, the sacrifice was overlooked.

Kansas City, Kan., closed its airport and gave the land to GM, issued millions in bonds, deferred taxes, relocated industries to provide more land — all to persuade the automaker to build a new plant here rather than looking elsewhere. At stake were more than 4,000 jobs.

When it was all over, GM put up billboards around town thanking the state of Kansas and the auto-workers union for their cooperation. No mention of the city itself.

So it goes in a city which lies quite literally in the shadow of the bigger and better-known Kansas City on the Missouri side.

The 160,000 citizens of the Kansas version — most wearing blue collars — are not enough to make it even the largest city in a state largely known for wheat fields. That honor is claimed by Wichita, almost twice as big.

And you could live a lifetime in Kansas City, Mo., without ever thinking that it might be nice to see what's on the other side of State Line Road.

"I'm as bad as anyone else," says Mayor Joseph E. Steineger. "If you want to go to a nice place for dinner, you go to Kansas City, Missouri. We don't have a lot to offer people. If you look at Starlight (Theater), if you want to go to a ball game, it's over there. There is not much on our side of the river at this time."

Promotional material put out by the city boasts a wide range of cultural and recreational activities — all on the Missouri side. It makes no mention of wrestling at Memorial Hall, where the likes of Hustler Rick Rogers and Bulldog Bob Brown grapple.

Drive past City Hall, where Steineger has his office on the 18th floor, past the county building, past the federal building, past a few square blocks of downtown and the modest convention center and pretty soon comes the Fairfax Industrial District where GM is just about finished with its modern plant.

"It's state of the art and it's in Kansas City, Kansas," says Steineger, obviously proud of the 68-acre facility.

It's a city of ethnic neighborhoods filled with hardworking, poor, honest people who believe in family, says Steineger, who lives on the same land his grandfather farmed after emigrating from Switzerland.

Per capita income in Wyandotte County, which includes the city, is about $11,500, about $2,000 less than the average in the four other counties that make up the metropolitan area.

COMMUNICATION

Telephone lines spread across our nation, giving us immediate contact with loved ones. Vital business is rapidly contracted through this medium.

Our linkage to God is prayer. Through prayer we can express our love, our thanks, and seek God's help.

"Hearken unto the voice of my cry, my King, and my God: for unto thee will I pray."

Attend church, join others in fellowship and prayer to God.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Coleman Adv. Serv.

St. Mark plans annual combined musical service

St. Mark Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, 406 Elm, will be having its second annual musical worship service at 3 p.m. Sunday, featuring selections from eight church choirs from Pampa and Borger.

Leading the service will be Rev. H.R. Johnson, pastor; C.D. Coleman, presiding bishop; Homer L. Pacely, presiding elder; and Bea Taylor, secretary.

Devotion will be presented by stewards and deacons. Congregational hymn will be "Leaning on the Everlasting Arm." Jessie Samuels will deliver the welcome.

St. Mark choirs will open the inspiration singing under the direction of choir presiders Susie Durham and Eula Bradshaw.

Guest choirs from Pampa include New Hope Baptist Church, Rev. V.C. Martin, pastor; Holy Temple Church of God in Christ, Elder H. Kelly, pastor; Macedonia Baptist Church, Rev. I.L. Patrick, pastor; Progressive Baptist Church, Mrs. Davis; and Open Door Church of God in Christ, Elder A.T. Anderson, pastor.

Guest choirs from Borger include Bethel Baptist Church, Rev. J.H. Blakemore, pastor, and New Zion Baptist Church.

Choir presidents will conduct the offering.

Refreshments will be served after the program.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Great is the Lord and most worthy of praise; his greatness no one can fathom. One generation will commend your works to another; they will tell of your mighty acts. (Psalm 145:3-4)

I recently attended a state fair.

Since I never met a doll I didn't like, I was especially enthralled by the magnificent doll display. Dolls of all sizes and shapes were dressed in elaborate costumes which ranged from lacy christening dresses to punk garb to period costumes.

The doll clothes were as varied as the dolls and the imaginations of the seamstresses could make them. The sweepstakes winner was an Indian "baby" bound on a papoose board made of genuine leather.

Included in the display was an impressive collection of antique dolls and paper dolls. Little Lord Fauntleroy and Shirley Temple were represented, as was a Fuzzy Head paper dolls set that was on display in the original box.

When I was a little girl, my dolls were my children and friends with "real" personalities and feelings like anybody else. I received one doll each Christmas, and that doll had to last till the next Christmas. Because I played constantly with my dolls and they were usually made of a quality of rubber that deteriorated and split, I was always in dire need of a replacement by the time Christmas rolled around.

Therefore, as I admired the doll exhibit at the fair, I was impressed with the exhibitors' tenacity in the preservation of so many antique dolls; and for paper dolls to still be intact seemed nothing short of miraculous.

No doubt, many of the old dolls had been lovingly handed down to daughters and granddaughters. Others must have been collected at great effort and expense.

Whatever the method, the dolls were acquired out of a passion for ownership of such lovely items; and they were displayed out of a desire to share the pleasure of them.

What kind of a world would flourish if every Christian placed such value upon and invested such effort into a right relationship with the Lord?

Just as we take only pleasure from the acquisition of ephemeral collectables, suppose we sensed no imposition upon our time or energy from the nurturing of our spirit lives. Imagine the eternal results if we passionately pursued and preserved all God has for us, lovingly passed down our beliefs through generations and craved to share our soul possessions with others.

Christianity would be proliferated and preserved phenomenally; individual Christians would experience blessings beyond imagining; and our Lord would be glorified in the farthest reaches of heaven and earth!

First Pentecostal schedules annual candlelight show

The First Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1700 Alcock, will conduct its annual Christmas Candlelight Service at 6 p.m. Sunday.

For two decades the candlelight service has been included in Christmas activities at the church. An unusual feature is that before the service concludes, everyone present is holding a lighted candle. The only illumination in the sanctuary is the soft glow of candlelight.

"Beautifully simple and simply beautiful" is a phrase that has been used to describe the presentation.

Pastor Albert Maggard describes it as "our Christmas gift to Pampa."

The service was originally developed by Mary Maggard and featured young people of the church doing the speaking parts and a choir of women singing. Through the years, this has been varied.

This year, speaking parts will be given by the men of the church.

Included in the speaking parts are Will Hahn Jr., Shelby Ruff, Archie Cooper, Eugene Stubbs, John Hahn, Benito Chavez, Glenn Wright and Paul Peters.

Special solo numbers will be sung by Mary Maggard, Susan Fisher and Katie Chavez.

Organist for the occasion is Charlotte Hall. Carols sung by the choir and congregation will also be included. The Children's Church, under the direction of Becky Long, will present a brief program before the Candlelight Service begins.

Pastor Maggard and the congregation welcome the public to attend the special Christmas season service.

Holiday Feast plans under way

It's only a week until the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church serves its third annual Holiday Feast free to Pampa community residents.

The Holiday Feast, featuring turkey, ham and all the trimmings, will be served from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday, Dec. 25, in the Fellowship Hall of the church, 1342 Mary Ellen.

The meal will be prepared by the women of the congregation, with approximately 90 people involved in the preparation and serving of the meal.

In the past two years, the Holiday Feast has been served to more than 600 people in the community.

Persons unable to come to the church for the meal or needing transportation to the meal may call the church office at 665-0031 before Wednesday, Dec. 23, to make arrangements. Persons will need to leave their names and addresses.

People who are currently on the Meals on Wheels route need not call. They will be contacted to make any necessary arrangements for the Holiday Feast.

Man reaches out to third world

By ELIZABETH CAMPBELL
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

HURST, Texas (AP) — The Rev. Les Townsend hands out Bibles, spiritual advice and clothing. He says prayers and he counsels.

There are others like him — in Tarrant County, in Texas, in America. But the people he touches are just a little worse off than most.

Townsend, of Hurst, as director of World Prison Outreach, visits the hundreds of inmates incarcerated in prisons throughout Central America.

The 59-year-old pastor says God called him to start a prison ministry 10 years ago to visit inmates in Honduras, El Salvador, Mexico and Colombia.

World Prison Outreach is a branch of Precious Seed Ministries in Denton, a group that provides money for evangelists, church building programs and helping the poor.

"I used to be in the advertising business," Townsend said. "All the time I was there, the Lord kept speaking to me. He said, 'condescend to men of low estate.'"

Townsend, now a graphics artist for Bell Helicopter Textron in Hurst, said he came to North Texas to find work after the advertising agency he worked for in Abilene filed for bankruptcy.

"When I lost everything, I started listening to God," he said. He said he met other ministers who preached in prisons and later joined them.

"I felt right at home when I started visiting the prisons, and I wanted to reach out to other prisoners in foreign countries," he said.

Many of those prisoners, he said, never have a chance to hear the gospel.

"Prisoners are dying in their sins faster than we can get to them," he said.

Townsend said his first prison visit was in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, in 1979. And getting permission to go was not easy, Townsend said.

"We had to go to the justice departments in each of the countries to get permission to go inside," he said.

Often, it took several months to get official responses in Mexico, Honduras, Colombia and El Salvador.

"These governments do not trust North Americans," he said.

He recalled the officials telling him they had never heard of people wanting to go to prison to take Bibles, clothes, soap, shampoo, mattresses and blankets to the inmates.

"The thrust of our ministry is to Third World countries," Townsend said. "Our mission is to bring God into prisons. Our goal is to see that prisoners receive salvation."

When Townsend travels to the different prisons, he organizes crusades and prayer meetings. He says he spends anywhere from a day to a week in one prison.

On visits where he finds men and women, he often spends one or two weeks with them to ensure that they get medical supplies, soap and blankets.

"The main thing we do in prisons besides personal contact with people is to start Bible classes," he said. "Considering that there is little follow-up, we ask the inmates if any of them have been called by God to minister to other prisoners."

Sometimes, one or two volunteer to lead prayer meetings and counsel their fellow inmates.

Townsend said he makes several trips each year to Central American prisons. Last year, he made four trips to El Salvador, five to Mexico and one to Honduras.

When he travels, Townsend said, he is accompanied by a team of Spanish-speaking evangelists and ex-convicts.

"I like taking ex-convicts with me for their testimonies," he said.

Townsend said he sees a great need for medical supplies, such as aspirin, penicillin and vitamins.

Deadline change

There will be no issue of The Pampa News on Friday, Dec. 25, because of the Christmas holiday.

LOCAL BRIEFS

First Presbyterian

First Presbyterian Church, 525 N. Gray, will have its annual Christmas Eve Candlelight Service from 11 p.m. to 12 midnight Thursday.

Selected scriptures will be Matthew 1:18-21 and Luke 2:1-20, with congregational singing of Christmas music being part of the program.

The Christmas Meditation will be delivered by Rev. Darrel Cory, minister of youth and evangelism. His topic will be "All Is Calm, All Is Bright."

The Chancel Choir will sing the choral anthem, "Come Jesus, Holy Son" by G.F. Handel, and the choral prayer, "Break Forth O Beauteous Heavenly Light" by J.S. Bach.

Special music will be provided by Bill Hildebrandt, guitar; Katrina Hildebrandt, flute; and Carol Morgan, Paul Pinkham, Benny Horton and J.B. Horton, trumpets.

Organist will be Mrs. Doris Goad.

Rev. Cory invited the public to attend the special Christmas Eve service.

Central Baptist

Last Sunday's snowstorm resulted in the cancellation of a Christmas musical presentation at Central Baptist Church, but the show has been rescheduled.

The Music Ministry will present Glorious Christmas at 7 p.m. Sunday at the church, Starkweather and Browning.

Glorious Christmas is a musical proclaiming the love of Jesus that wrote the Christmas story.

The 50-voice choir will give the account of Christ's coming into the world from the glory and splendor of a heavenly throne. The Nativity events will be retraced, with solos by Lonnie Shelton, Joyce Field and Sharon McCormick.

Rev. Norman Rushing, pastor, and the congregation invite the public to attend the special Christmas season production.

"There are no uninteresting things, there are only uninterested people."

Religion Roundup

ATLANTA (AP) — Jack U. Harwell, editor for 21 years of the Georgia Baptist Convention weekly, Christian Index, is retiring Dec. 31, blaming "restrictions and censorship" demanded by now dominant fundamentalist officials.

Fundamentalists, after nine years of electioneering, have gained the upper hand in the Southern Baptist Convention, including its Georgia wing.

Harwell has been under fire from fundamentalists for several years, and last year, a "review board" was set up to check contents of the weekly newspaper, founded in 1822 and the oldest in the convention.

In recent weeks, Harwell said, he noticed that "I had not written my conscience" but only "what I knew would pass muster with the review board," rather than "what I felt to be true and honest." "I could no longer live with the restrictions and censorship placed upon this newspaper and be true to my God, my heritage, my denomination or my conscience."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has let stand rulings of two lower courts that a former Jehovah's Witness shunned by other church members for leaving the sect may not sue the church for damages.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Enrollment in Roman Catholic seminary colleges dropped from 2,872 last year to 2,248 in the current term, the lowest ever and down from 13,261 in 1968-69, says the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate.

Wooden drum, flute is for kids' play

By BOB SAWYER

It was one of those days when, as the song lyric goes, "if the thunder don't get you then the lightning will."

My son, the aspiring drummer, was pressing his plea for a set of drums. My wife, the woman who can detect the sound of a caterpillar on carpet from two rooms away, was having none of it.

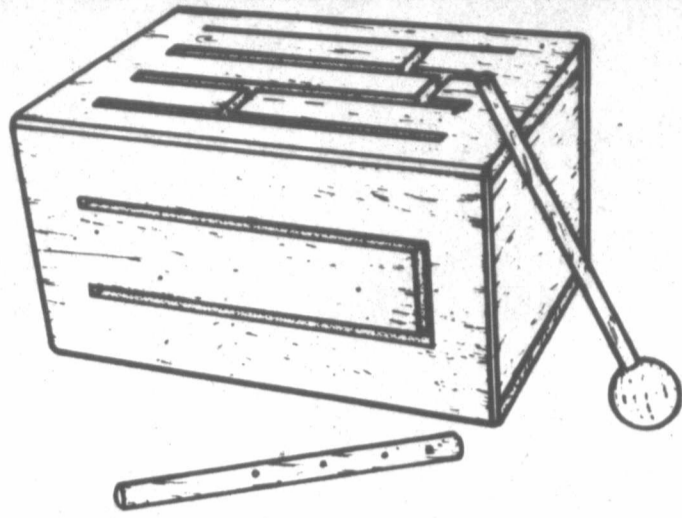

They were headed toward an agreement that I should construct an entirely soundproof outbuilding to house the drummer, when I intervened. Why not, I reasoned, put together a relatively quiet but oh-so-cool wooden drum box?

I'd seen drummers in popular bands play them, and they didn't look difficult to make. Then, if the drummer showed a sustained interest, we'd consider spending our life's savings on a drum set and soundproof outbuilding (ha!).

The wooden drum is a real winner with both the teen-age rocker and with all the rest of the kids, from little to 80. It's easy to play, with slotted top and side walls that produce eight different tones when struck with a small mallet.

Plans for the drum box are included in our Wooden Toys pack. Also featured are plans for

Honored faculty member

Linda Thompson of 2208 Zimmers receives a plaque from Larry Gilbert, director of Clarendon College-Pampa Center, for being chosen Faculty Member of the Year for 1987. Mrs. Thompson, a homemaker, holds bachelor's and master's degrees in English from West Texas State University. She has taught English Composition and Literature classes at the Pampa Center for the past three years in both day and evening classes. "Each year we like to honor one of our part-time faculty to demonstrate our appreciation for their important contribution to our community college," Gilbert said.

Start a family tradition with video history

Christmas is just a week away. Have you completed your holiday shopping? Perhaps you have one more gift to buy but cannot decide what it should be this year. Consider making a video family history.

Rob Huberman and Laura Janis have co-authored a book, "Video Family Portraits," that can be purchased for $9.95 from Heritage Books, 1540 E. Pointer Ridge Place, Suite 300, Bowie, Md. 20715. This is intended to be used as a guide in producing your own family video.

Chapters cover a wide range of topics, including initial interviews of family members, family history question guide, copying home movies onto video, how to add sound to your old movies,

Gena on Genealogy

Gena Walls

plus many other helpful hints. One helpful section details how to edit your video or movies for the more professional look.

This would be a great tradition to start this year. Next year, view this video while making the sequel. Include special events that have happened through the year and have one person, perhaps the oldest family member, narrate the video.

Every year I ask for Christmas

traditions to share with readers, and this year I received several that merit special attention. One family has used the same angel on top of the tree for 39 years. It was purchased the first year of marriage for the couple, who are now grandparents.

To keep the tradition, the angel is passed along to the family member that is going to host the family Christmas party. This variant was necessary when the children married and left home and the family gathered at different homes each year.

I remember when I was a little girl and my family was stationed at Chitose Air Force Base in Japan, we shared our Christmas celebration with several orphans from a nearby home. It was a real blessing for all of us. Naturally, we had presents for our guests and, to our surprise when we took them home, the first thing they told the others was that we had served "hot chocolate with a white mountain in it."

I share this with you as a reminder that a Christmas gift need not be expensive...thoughtfulness and a token gift given from the heart will be remembered forever. Share the joy of the season. Help make a memory!

The Pill: Like mother, like daughter?

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old high school student. About six months ago, I became sexually active with my 18-year-old boyfriend. My father died two years ago and my mother has had a boyfriend for about a year. Yesterday I noticed birth control pills in her bathroom. I think I should be on birth control pills, too, but I'm afraid to talk to my mother about it because I don't think she'd approve. I resent the fact that she is on the pill because I loved my father very much and I hate to even think that my mother is sleeping with another man. My mother and I are very close and we can talk about almost anything, so she knows how I feel about her having relationships.

I feel cheated. If my mother can be on the pill, why can't I be? Should I talk to her about this, or should I keep my big mouth shut?
MAD AT MOM

DEAR MAD: Since you and your mother are "very close" and can talk about almost everything, quit judging her behavior and discuss yours. I do not condone sex outside of marriage at any age, but I urge those who are sexually active to protect themselves and their partners.

DEAR ABBY: I was married to one man for 51 years. He died. I was alone for four years, then I married a 72-year-old man. I was 70. We have been married for 13 months and there is a problem, or why else would I be writing this?
After we had been married for

Dear Abby

only two weeks, my husband got up in the middle of the night and yelled, "This g.d. woman is hogging the bed!" Then he took his pillow and went to sleep on the sofa. I cried myself to sleep.

Abby, we never discussed sleeping arrangements before we were married. I just took it for granted that all married people sleep together. I was wrong. To me, going to bed with someone you care about (sex or no sex) was the happiest time of the day. That's the time to put your arms around each other and feel a closeness that can't be expressed in any other way.

I don't need counseling. I just need someone to hold me at night. Thanks for giving me a chance to say this. I feel better already. Have you ever had a letter like this, Abby?
SMALL TOWN, TENNESSEE

DEAR SMALL TOWN: Yes, many. And the solution is found in discussing and negotiating "sleeping arrangements" before the wedding so there are no disappointments.

In your case a compromise would be in order: "cuddling time" before "serious sleep time." You shouldn't be starved for affection and he shouldn't be taking his pillow to the sofa in order to sleep. All married couples do not sleep together. Twin beds have improved many marriages.

DEAR ABBY: In answer to the "Waitress in Banff" who asks why people seem to prefer "dirty" tables: They don't necessarily prefer "dirty" tables; the choice tables are occupied more than the others. And which tables are preferred? Studies have shown, and restaurant designers have long known, that people will fill a restaurant in a predictable order. People like to have a wall at their backs. They like to be able to see the door. They like to be able to look out the windows. They don't like their backs exposed. Restaurants tend to fill outer walls first, then window walls, and finally — and only if there is no other choice — center tables.
FRED MASLAN, SEATTLE

DEAR FRED: Interesting. Add to that, nobody who has a choice will sit near a noisy kitchen, or rest rooms where the traffic is usually steady and disruptive.

DEAR ABBY: While you're at it, please ask "Waitress" why hostesses in nearly empty restaurants always seat you right next to the only other occupied table in the joint.
WINONA A., PORT LUCIE, FLA.

CONFIDENTIAL TO THOSE INTERESTED IN SEPARATING FACTS FROM FICTION: According to the Dallas Times Herald: In a recent survey of local teen-agers about AIDS, 65 percent of the respondents thought they didn't need to use a condom if the girl was taking birth control pills. Sixty percent believed they wouldn't get AIDS if they had sex with someone they loved.

Wooden drum, flute is for kids' play

By BOB SAWYER

It was one of those days when, as the song lyric goes, "if the thunder don't get you then the lightning will."

My son, the aspiring drummer, was pressing his plea for a set of drums. My wife, the woman who can detect the sound of a caterpillar on carpet from two rooms away, was having none of it.

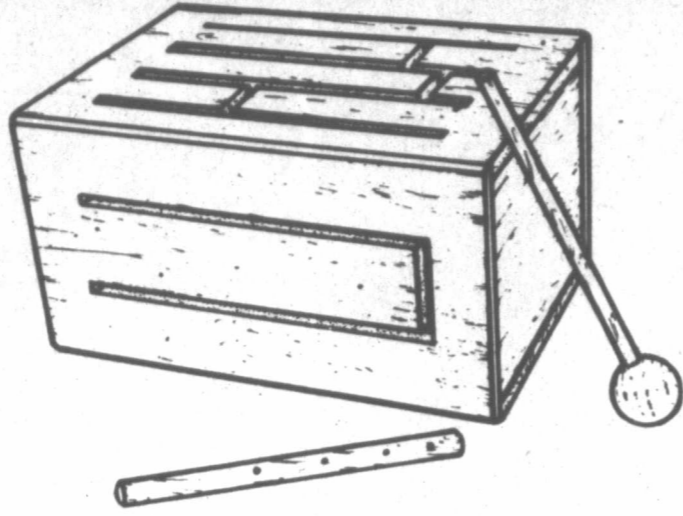

They were headed toward an agreement that I should construct an entirely soundproof outbuilding to house the drummer, when I intervened. Why not, I reasoned, put together a relatively quiet but oh-so-cool wooden drum box?

I'd seen drummers in popular bands play them, and they didn't look difficult to make. Then, if the drummer showed a sustained interest, we'd consider spending our life's savings on a drum set and soundproof outbuilding (ha!).

The wooden drum is a real winner with both the teen-age rocker and with all the rest of the kids, from little to 80. It's easy to play, with slotted top and side walls that produce eight different tones when struck with a small mallet.

Plans for the drum box are included in our Wooden Toys packet. Also featured are plans for

Honored faculty member

Linda Thompson of 2208 Zimmers receives a plaque from Larry Gilbert, director of Clarendon College-Pampa Center, for being chosen Faculty Member of the Year for 1987. Mrs. Thompson, a homemaker, holds bachelor's and master's degrees in English from West Texas State University. She has taught English Composition and Literature classes at the Pampa Center for the past three years in both day and evening classes. "Each year we like to honor one of our part-time faculty to demonstrate our appreciation for their important contribution to our community college," Gilbert said.

Start a family tradition with video history

Christmas is just a week away. Have you completed your holiday shopping? Perhaps you have one more gift to buy but cannot decide what it should be this year. Consider making a video family history.

Rob Huberman and Laura Janis have co-authored a book, "Video Family Portraits," that can be purchased for $9.95 from Heritage Books, 1540 E. Pointer Ridge Place, Suite 300, Bowie, Md. 20715. This is intended to be used as a guide in producing your own family video.

Chapters cover a wide range of topics, including initial interviews of family members, family history question guide, copying home movies onto video, how to add sound to your old movies, plus many other helpful hints. One helpful section details how to edit your video or movies for the more professional look.

This would be a great tradition to start this year. Next year, view this video while making the sequel. Include special events that have happened through the year and have one person, perhaps the oldest family member, narrate the video.

Every year I ask for Christmas

traditions to share with readers, and this year I received several that merit special attention. One family has used the same angel on top of the tree for 39 years. It was purchased the first year of marriage for the couple, who are now grandparents.

To keep the tradition, the angel is passed along to the family member that is going to host the family Christmas party. This variant was necessary when the children married and left home and the family gathered at different homes each year.

I remember when I was a little girl and my family was stationed at Chitose Air Force Base in Japan, we shared our Christmas celebration with several orphans from a nearby home. It was a real blessing for all of us. Naturally, we had presents for our guests and, to our surprise when we took them home, the first thing they told the others was that we had served "hot chocolate with a white mountain in it."

I share this with you as a reminder that a Christmas gift need not be expensive...thoughtfulness and a token gift given from the heart will be remembered forever. Share the joy of the season. Help make a memory!

The Pill: Like mother, like daughter?

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old high school student. About six months ago, I became sexually active with my 18-year-old boyfriend. My father died two years ago and my mother has had a boyfriend for about a year. Yesterday I noticed birth control pills in her bathroom. I think I should be on birth control pills, too, but I'm afraid to talk to my mother about it because I don't think she'd approve. I resent the fact that she is on the pill because I loved my father very much and I hate to even think that my mother is sleeping with another man. My mother and I are very close and we can talk about almost anything, so she knows how I feel about her having relationships.

I feel cheated. If my mother can be on the pill, why can't I be? Should I talk to her about this, or should I keep my big mouth shut? MAD AT MOM

DEAR MAD: Since you and your mother are "very close" and can talk about almost everything, quit judging her behavior and discuss yours. I do not condone sex outside of marriage at any age, but I urge those who are sexually active to protect themselves and their partners.

DEAR ABBY: I was married to one man for 51 years. He died. I was alone for four years, then I married a 72-year-old man. I was 70. We have been married for 13 months and there is a problem, or why else would I be writing this? After we had been married for only two weeks, my husband got up in the middle of the night and yelled, "This g.d. woman is hogging the bed!" Then he took his pillow and went to sleep on the sofa. I cried myself to sleep.

Abby, we never discussed sleeping arrangements before we were married. I just took it for granted that all married people sleep together. I was wrong. To me, going to bed with someone you care about (sex or no sex) was the happiest time of the day. That's the time to put your arms around each other and feel a closeness that can't be expressed in any other way.

I don't need counseling. I just need someone to hold me at night. Thanks for giving me a chance to say this. I feel better already. Have you ever had a letter like this, Abby? SMALL TOWN, TENNESSEE

DEAR SMALL TOWN: Yes, many. And the solution is found in discussing and negotiating "sleeping arrangements" before the wedding so there are no disappointments.

In your case a compromise would be in order: "cuddling time" before "serious sleep time." You shouldn't be starved for affection and he shouldn't be taking his pillow to the sofa in order to sleep. All married couples do not sleep together. Twin beds have improved many marriages.

DEAR ABBY: In answer to the "Waitress in Banff" who asks why people seem to prefer "dirty" tables: They don't necessarily prefer "dirty" tables; the choice tables are occupied more than the others. And which tables are preferred? Studies have shown, and restaurant designers have long known, that people will fill a restaurant in a predictable order. People like to have a wall at their backs. They like to be able to see the door. They like to be able to look out the windows. They don't like their backs exposed. Restaurants tend to fill outer walls first, then window walls, and finally — and only if there is no other choice — center tables. FRED MASLAN, SEATTLE

DEAR FRED: Interesting. Add to that, nobody who has a choice will sit near a noisy kitchen, or rest rooms where the traffic is usually steady and disruptive.

DEAR ABBY: While you're at it, please ask "Waitress" why hostesses in nearly empty restaurants always seat you right next to the only other occupied table in the joint. WINONA A., PORT LUCIE, FLA.

CONFIDENTIAL TO THOSE INTERESTED IN SEPARATING FACTS FROM FICTION: According to the Dallas Times Herald: In a recent survey of local teen-agers about AIDS, 65 percent of the respondents thought they didn't need to use a condom if the girl was taking birth control pills. Sixty percent believed they wouldn't get AIDS if they had sex with someone they loved.

Abby's favorite recipes are going like hotcakes! For your copy, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

WT cage program in trouble

AMARILLO (AP) — AN NCAA investigation has led to 18 allegations of misconduct against the West Texas State men's basketball program, including free plane travel, recruiting violations and illegal phone card use.

West Texas Athletic Director Bruce Grimes released the 21-page text of the National Collegiate Athletic Association's 14-month investigation, prompted by an $18,000 credit card phone abuse uncovered in October 1986.

The NCAA said the misconduct occurred between April 1984 and October 1986 under former head coach Gary Moss, who is now at Sam Houston State University.

The allegations, which are not connected with any current coaches or players, were contained in an NCAA official inquiry released to university officials Wednesday.

"Yes, they are serious," Grimes said at a news conference. "We will continue to do everything we can to assist and to cooperate with NCAA in its investigation. As requested, we will respond to each of the allegations."

Grimes said some of the allegations were a surprise and conflict with university information. Most of the allegations center on Moss, who told the Amarillo Globe-News he has never broken an NCAA rule.

Names of players were blotted out in the official inquiry released to reporters. One of the allegations says that Moss told a recruit his "needs would be fulfilled" and that "he'd be taken care of" if he enrolled in the university.

The NCAA charged that Moss "acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct."

The statement also says that Moss provided misleading information to NCAA enforcement representatives.

The NCAA charged that 12 commercial airline tickets and automobile transportation for personal travel were arranged for men's basketball players by Moss and two of his athletic assistants, Ken Smith and Anthony Smith, who are not related.

The NCAA also charges that members of the men's basketball coaching staff from August 1984 to August 1986 allowed players to make free long-distance calls.

Other allegations were that Moss and an assistant gave players money for rent, tuition, fees and university fines and weekly payments were handed out to at least one player.

The official inquiry says that two boosters gave players cash. The report alleges one booster gave several players $20 cash during a December 1985 basketball tournament in Hawaii. That booster also reportedly gave $175 cash to another athlete for a delinquent telephone bill in January 1986.

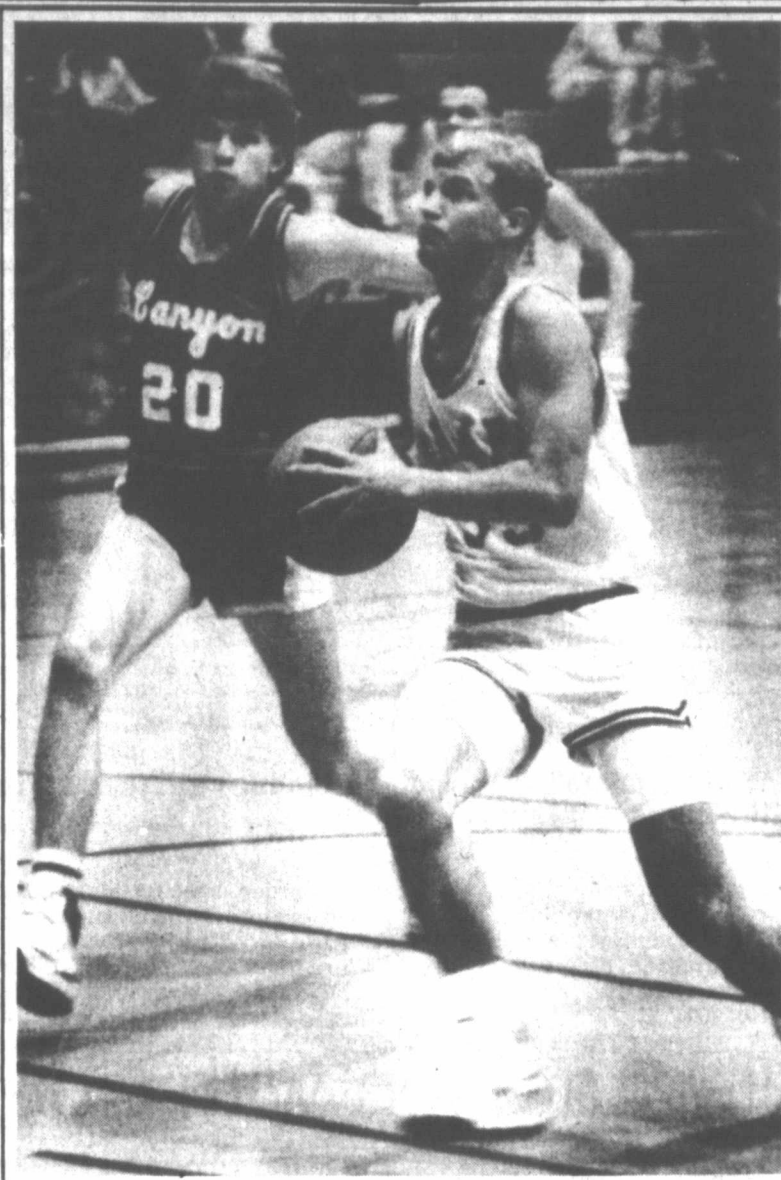

The NCAA inquiry also another booster gave $40 to a player during the Hawaii trip and wrote a personal check to an athlete to pay for repairs on the player's automobile.

University President Ed D. Roach will appoint by the end of the month a committee to conduct an internal investigation. The committee's findings would be presented to the NCAA, possibly within three months and two weeks after the filing, university officials would meet with the NCAA for a prehearing.

Sometime in late April the NCAA's final findings are expected to be handed down to West Texas.

Pampa shoots down Canyon Lady Harvesters stopped in girls' game

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

The wait was well worth it. After two cancellations because of winter weather, the Pampa and Canyon boys finally skidded into the gym for their District 1-4A basketball opener Thursday night.

Canyon would probably have preferred waiting for a complete thaw as the Harvesters stormed to a 66-52 win in McNeely Fieldhouse.

While the temperature was dropping outside, the Harvesters were heating up inside. Particularly, 6-4 junior center Dustin Miller, who scored a season-high 31 points to go along with 13 rebounds.

Pampa improved to 9-4 and 1-0 while Canyon saw its record dip to 4-8, 0-1.

"We pulled together as a team and got a great night out of Dustin and also Jason (Farmer)," said Pampa Coach Robert Hale. "When that happens, we're going to do pretty well."

Farmer, Pampa's other post player, backed up Miller with 15 points and nine rebounds. Zac Parker led Canyon with 15 points while Kirk Aduddell and Jimmy Dawson had 12 and 11 points respectively.

Maybe even more impressive than Miller's performance was Pampa's overall offense, which inaugurated district play with only eight turnovers. The Eagles were charged with 15 miscues.

"Cutting down our mistakes really helped us a bunch," Hale said. "All our players contributed, not necessarily in points, but in bal-handling, rebounding and defense."

Canyon fielded enough height in the 6-4 Parker and 6-3 Pat Cannon, but the Eagles still couldn't find a way to stop Miller inside.

"I thought Canyon's strongpoint was their board play, but it was just a case of Dustin having a good night," Hale said.

Canyon led 6-2 early, but Pampa—lifted by 3-point baskets by Mark Wood and Jimmy Massick—jumped ahead 10-6 and never trailed again.

Massick's steal and layup, sandwiched between a pair of Miller goals, gave Pampa a six-point run and a 10-point bulge in the closing minute of the first quarter.

Massick had seven points when he left the game for good with an ankle injury midway in the fourth quarter. Canyon had cut the lead to 20-16 on a pair of field goals by Parker, but the Harvester offense gathered steam again and outscored the Eagles 10-3 during a 3-minute span and went into halftime leading 30-19.

"Massick helped us a bunch. With his hot hand, had he stayed in, he would have had a great night, too," Hale said.

Massick sustained a twisted ankle, but the 5-10 junior is expected to play tonight when the Harvesters host Lubbock Estacado.

Pampa led by as much as 12 points in the third quarter and topped off the night with a 26-point fourth-quarter barrage, including 15 by Miller.

David Duke and Chris Evans had four points each for the Harvesters while Wood had three and Kerry Brown two.

Estacado, which lost to Levelland 68-47 in its district opener last night, plays the Pampa-Estacado girls' game tips off at 6:30 p.m.

Estacado shoots well from outside and they're always tough on the boards," Hale said. "I don't feel this year's team will be any exception."

Canyon, the state's No. 1 ranked Class 4A team, overwhelmed Pampa 61-35 in the girls' game last night.

Canyon is now 13-0 overall and 3-0 in district while Pampa is 8-4 and 1-2.

Canyon's press forced numerous Pampa turnovers and a sagging defense held high-scoring Yolanda Brown to 15 points, nine below her average.

"I guess we know why Canyon is rated No. 1," said Pampa Coach Albert Nichols. "We'll just have to try and bounce back tonight against Estacado."

Tammy Williams led Canyon's attack with 14 points while Missy Kraai added 12. Canyon led at halftime 35-16, holding the Lady Harvesters to four second-quarter points.

"We didn't handle the ball well and we can't have another four-point quarter. Things like that just kill us," Nichols said.

Sophomore guard Shelly Thompson, who was Pampa's second leading scorer with six points, left the game with a severely-twisted ankle in the third quarter.

"Shelly won't be able to play tonight, but we're hoping to have her back for the Slaton Tournament," Nichols said.

New sports agent bill sparks controversy

AUSTIN (AP) — The sponsor of the state's new sports agent regulation bill says it should not force anyone out of business, but some agents say they are not convinced.

"I'm in favor of doing something about agents, but I just think it's a very poorly worded piece of legislation," agent Paul Schoonover of Dallas said Thursday.

His comments came at a meeting called to discuss the new law. It turned into a gripe session as agents pointed out problems they believe they will face as a result of the law.

The Athlete Agent Act approved this year by the Texas Legislature requires agents to register with the Secretary of State if they plan to contact college athletes.

The law also requires sports agents to post a $100,000 bond if they plan to do financial services, other than routine contract negotiations, for their clients.

Lawmakers approved the law in an attempt to curtail improper dealings between agents and college athletes, who are banned by the NCAA from signing with an agent while they are eligible for intercollegiate competition.

In the most recent case, two Texas A&M football players were declared ineligible for the Aggies' Cotton Bowl game against Notre Dame Jan. 1 because they had signed with an agent.

The law does not affect agents dealings with professional athletes.

"We do want to assure you that by no stretch of the imagination nor by any intent of the Legislature are we attempting to put anybody out of business," bill sponsor Sen. Ken Armbrister, D-Victoria, told the agents.

"I agree with a lot of what's in here, but I don't agree with a lot of how it is written down," said Gary Kovacs, a Houston sports agent.

Many coaches have enjoyed thrill of coaching offspring

■ ONE DREAM ALL COACHES share in common is winning a state championship. And they enhance that wish with sugar plum thoughts such as having a son or daughter playing on that title winner. And then, maybe he or she could be the star of the game. But just coaching that sibling and his-her teammates to a championship would be great.

It has happened...and it has come close to happening. Some have enjoyed the thrill, others the sorrow. Some have had the job of coaching their own child be costly. There was the football coach at Lamar U. about 15 years ago who insisted on starting his sophomore son at quarterback for the Cardinals. The losing season was followed by another, and Dad got fired. Or take the case in Evans, Ga. last week, where a team forfeited a 4A semifinal victory because Dad the Coach had been caught illegally putting a radio receiver in the helmet of son Craig the Quarterback. Dad's coaching career could be ended; the team's season is.

There are many cases closer to home. Clifton McNeely had hoped to coach his twin sons, Phil and Mike. "Now I'm going to find out what a couple of boys can do with a basketball when they're given a chance," he told me in the hallway of old Highland General Hospital moments after the kids were born. Professional promotions into academic administration prohibited that from happening. His assistant, Terry Culley, had the chance to coach son Robert. And though they consistently won 30-plus games a season, the state tournament was unreachable.

John Malaise tried so hard to get son Dub and his Odessa teammates into the state meet that in the regional championship game against Lubbock Monterey in the Lubbock Coliseum, a strange thing happened in overtime. Malaise got so excited and in-involved, he left his bench area, walked past the scorer's table, past Coach Gerald Myers on the Plainsmen bench, hurried down UNDERNEATH the goal at the end of the floor and stood there directing his offense as if in practice.

Ray Bassinger, veteran coach at Caprock, wasn't living in that school district when his children came through high school. One played against him, another stood on the sideline as a cheerleader yelling against Dad's team. Joe Kerbel's son, Joe, Jr., was his Dad's starting center his junior year of college. But he then told Pop he was going to give up football to work on his grades so he could get into dental school. Joe, Sr. said "O.K. But will you come out and help us coach the centers?" Little Joe agreed. But at mid-season when things weren't going well, he returned to the role of starting player, the only case I know of a college coach reversing the role.

Highly successful San Antonio Churchill mentor Jerry Comalander has had the opportunity of directing two sons successfully. Son Gary was a receiver on the 1981 team that lost in the 5A semifinals. He is now a rookie coach at Marble Falls. Son Mark, who quarterbacked for Dad, also got to the 5A semifinals before being ousted from the 1983 playoffs. Mark now looks forward to a possible NFL career after finishing collegiately successful at Rice.

Stocky Lamberson, Greg Sherwood, the list is unending of those who have shared the dream. Most recently successful was Amarillo High School's Allen Simpson who captured a 5A state basketball title with son Sammy as probably the outstanding performer, epitome of the dream.

Tomorrow night, at Abilene, Wheeler's Preston Smith gets that opportunity. When the 12-2 Mustangs whipped No. 1 ranked Munday 18-0 last weekend, it assured at last a 50-50 chance of that dream coming true. The "Stangs now face Bremond for the Class A crown. Dokes impressive in ring comeback

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Boxing Writer

NEW YORK — Michael Dokes, a former heavyweight champion, has taken a step in the only direction he can go.

Fighting for the first time since March 15, 1985, the 29-year-old Dokes stopped K.P. Porter in the sixth round of a scheduled 10-round fight Thursday night at the Felt Forum.

"For a long layoff, he was pretty impressive," Porter said of the man whose career was sidetracked by drug problems and trouble with the law.

Asked where he thought he might be headed after the victory, Dokes replied: "Up. I'm on the bottom of the barrel."

"God gave me such a gift and he let me retain it all through the drugs and the turmoil," said Dokes, who is serving five years' probation after pleading guilty to a cocaine possession charge. He was released from a drug rehabilitation center last June.

Dokes, his belly protruding over his waistband, weighed 245 pounds for the fight. He said he hoped to get down another 15 pounds for his next fight, against an unidentified opponent, on the undercard of the Mike Tyson-Larry Holmes heavyweight title fight on Jan. 22 at Atlantic City.

Dokes pressured Porter from the start and hurt him several times with hard body shots. He knocked him down at the bell ending the fourth round with a left to the body and a left-right to the head. Porter got up at the count of four, but then was stopped 25 seconds into the fifth by a barrage of head punches.

Porter did catch Dokes with several good rights and one smashing left hook to the head.

"He caught me with a left hook but I didn't buckle and nothing flashed," Dokes said. "I didn't see Mickey Mouse."

It was the 30th victory and 17th knockout against one loss and two draws for Dokes, who was the World Boxing Association champion in 1982 and 1983.

Michael Olajide and James "Buddy" McGirt, both world-ranked fighters, scored knockouts in scheduled 10-rounders on Thursday's card.

Olajide, who lost a 15-round decision to Frank Tate for the vacant International Boxing Federation middleweight title last Oct. 10, knocked down Frankie Owens three times and stopped him at two minutes of the sixth round of a mauling match. Owens, 161, of Oklahoma City, was penalized the second round for holding and the fifth for kneeling.

Olajide, 162, of New York, is 24-1 with 17 knockouts.

McGirt, 140½, of Brentwood, N.Y., ran his record to 36-1-1 with 31 knockouts by knocking down John Sinegal, 137, of Carencrow, La., three times and stopping him at 1:54 of the first round.

Syracuse coach wins Bear Bryant Award

HOUSTON (AP) — Syracuse Coach Dick MacPherson told his players if they took care of team business this season, individual honors would come their way.

Little did MacPherson realize the statement also applied to the head coach.

MacPherson received the Bear Bryant Award from the Football Writers Association of America Thursday night as the college coach of the year.

The Orangemen, ranked No. 4 in the nation, will face Auburn in the Sugar Bowl Jan. 1, following an unbeaten 11-0 regular season after losing their first four games in 1986.

come away on each side of the scoreboard...as state champion and as runnerup.

When you're talking football championship games, the only name over the past dozen years out of the Panhandle is WHEELER. Lubbock Estacado, not exactly a Panhandle-area squad, was 4A runnerup in 1983. But for more than a decade the crown jewel of Panhandle football has been the Black and Gold, making its abnormal fourth appearance in 11 seasons in a title game. The Mustangs won the Class B title in 1977 and again in 1979, sandwiching a runnerup position in 1978. Over the past two decades the only other schools to reach the title game were Follett, Spearman, Clarendon and Childress (almost a Panhandle-area school).

Good luck to the Wheeler Mustangs, as you carry the hopes of the Panhandle football fans this weekend...along with the ultimate dream of any coach.

Steelers bid for title shot

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

It's not the Steel Curtain. Not yet.

The Pittsburgh Steelers dominated the NFL in the 1970s with their overpowering defense, solid running game and occasional big plays from quarterback Terry Bradshaw and a talented crew of receivers.

The 1987 Steelers aren't exactly a dominant team. But a victory in Houston Sunday will guarantee they will play for the AFC Central championship next weekend at home against Cleveland.

These Steelers have done it with defense and running. While Mark Malone doesn't compare to Bradshaw and the rushers aren't in the class of Franco Harris and Rocky Bleier, the defense steadily is gaining a reputation. It isn't on a par with the unit of Mean Joe Greene, Jack Ham, Mel Blount and a few other man-eating defenders, but it's getting there.

Pittsburgh is 8-5 and tied with the Browns atop the division mainly because it leads the league with 42 take-aways, including 25 interceptions.

The Steelers selected defensive backs on three of their first four picks in the last player draft. Rod Woodson, Delton Hall and Thomas Everett have had an immediate impact. The big plays have come from the defense, which has accounted for six touchdowns, the same number as Malone.

The Steelers were 6-10 last season with a stagnating offense and a defense that wasn't as aggressive as Coach Chuck Noll likes. This season, that defense has been gung-ho.

The Oilers, 7-6, will need plenty of big plays to stay in contention for the division crown or a wild-card spot.

Even if Cleveland loses on Sunday at Los Angeles against the Raiders and the Steelers beat Houston, the Browns would take the Central title by beating Pittsburgh in the final game. The Browns would win by virtue of a better division record.

The muddled AFC East will be less confusing if Buffalo beats New England this week and then Philadelphia in its finale. That would give the Bills the division championship.

For now, the Bills are tied at 7-6 with Miami and Indianapolis. The Colts play at San Diego and the Dolphins host Washington at night.

Even the Patriots and Jets, both 6-7, are alive in the East race. The Jets are at home to Philadelphia.

The Chargers are a half-game behind Denver in the AFC West despite having lost four straight games to drop to 8-5. San Diego is tied with Seattle, which plays at Chicago on Sunday. Denver, which visits Kansas City on Saturday, knows that victories in its last two games will clinch the West title and the home-field advantage throughout the AFC playoffs.

The only undecided race in the NFC is the West, in which San Francisco, holder of the league's best record at 11-2, has a one-game lead over New Orleans. The 49ers host Atlanta on Sunday while New Orleans is at Cincinnati.

The Redskins already have secured first place in the NFC East, as have the Bears in the Central. New Orleans or San Francisco will get a wild-card, depending on which wins the division race. The Rams, Vikings, Cardinals and Packers all retain a shot at the other wild-card slot.

Minnesota, which takes a 7-6 record into Detroit, can take that playoff berth by winning its last two games. The Packers, 5-7-1, visit the New York Giants on Saturday and the Cardinals, 6-7, are at Tampa Bay on Sunday.

The Rams, 6-7, are at home against Dallas on Monday night.

Foreman continues on comeback trail

LAS VEGAS (AP) — George Foreman, the former heavyweight champion who retired to become a preacher, seeks his fifth consecutive knockout since returning to the ring when he meets journeyman Rocky Sekorski in a scheduled 10-round fight tonight.

The 39-year-old Foreman, who was inactive for 10 years before returning to the ring in March, continues an improbable comeback that he hopes to cap with a fight late next year against heavyweight champion Mike Tyson.

"I'm coming back to become champion of the world," said Foreman, who also plans to benefit his youth center in Texas with his earnings.

Foreman, who lost his title on a shocking eighth-round knockout to Muhammad Ali on Oct. 30, 1974, has won all four of his fights by knockout since returning on March 9 at Sacramento, Calif., at a pudgy 267 pounds.

Now down to about 240 pounds, Foreman hopes to add some movement to the punch that seemingly hasn't deserted him even after a decade away from boxing.

"I'm a better fighter than I was 10 years ago," he said. "This George Foreman could beat the old George Foreman. I'm stronger and I'm wiser. Some of my strength went into my head."

Foreman, who turns 40 on Jan. 22, needed a special medical exemption from the Nevada State Athletic Commission, which hired independent doctors to determine his fitness to fight. "The doctors were impressed with the youth of his makeup," commission member Duane Ford said. "Everything was positive."

Foreman, an Olympic gold medal winner in 1968, looks in fairly decent shape and apparently still has the power that earned him 42 knockouts and a 45-2 record before his retirement.

But Foreman's reflexes are suspect and he has looked slow and plodding while knocking out four opponents who proved to be little more than punching bags who could climb into a ring. "They haven't been tough fights," Foreman admitted. "I expected things to be a bit tougher than they've been so far."

Gay paces Red Raiders to hard-fought victory

By The Associated Press

Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers says his team's victory over Jacksonville State was a good game for the Red Raiders because it made them work hard.

Sean Gay scored 21 points and grabbed nine rebounds to lead the Red Raiders to an 89-76 victory Thursday night.

In the only other college basketball game involving a Southwest Conference team, Minnesota upset the Houston Cougars, 65-60.

"It was a good game for us to have because they are a team that is not exceptionally big, but they play a full court, pressure type game and they made us really hustle and work to get the ball up the floor," Myers said. "We still made some mistakes, both mental and physical. But our guys played hard."

The Red Raiders evened their record at 3-3, while Alabama's Jacksonville State fell to 6-3.

Gay sat out most of the second period after picking up his fourth foul at the 18:39 mark, but reentered the game at 9:26 to score 10 second-half points.

The Red Raiders led for almost the entire game, stretching their lead to as much as 18, 63-45, with 11:24 left to play during a five-minute Gamecock scoring drought.

The NCAA Division II Gamecocks never threatened and led only in the game's opening minutes. Rodney Stallings led Jacksonville State with 22 points, followed by Derek Hicks with 10.

Jerry Mason scored 15 points for the Red Raiders. Three other Tech players scored in double figures — Steve Miles had 11, while Greg Crowe and Wes Lowe hit 10 apiece.

Tech stretched its lead to as much as 13 in the first half.

Melvin Newbern scored 24 points to lead Minnesota to a 65-60 victory over the Houston Cougars.

Houston, 3-2, jumped to an 8-0 lead in the opening moments of the game, but later saw a seven-point lead trimmed to 27-26 at halftime.

Hanson then ignited the Gophers with three three-point field goals in the first nine minutes of the second half.

Richard Hollis was the only Houston player in double figures, finishing with 24 points. The Cougars shot only 33 percent from the field.

Center Rolando Ferreira, who was averaging 20 points a game, scored only six against Minnesota.

"We got it inside 10 or 20 times in the first half but he either got fouled or the ball was knocked away. It was the most amazing thing. He lost 7 or 8 balls on the way up," said Houston Coach Pat Foster.

"People think of us and they're thinking of the old Houston. There's very little left of that but the name," Foster said. "We got beat by Nevada-Las Vegas by 20 points and struggled to beat three teams. We may not be worth a damn to be perfectly honest with you. It's still too early to tell."

Pampa Gold squad captures Borger frosh tournament

BORGER — Pampa Gold used a balanced scoring attack to win the championship trophy at the Borger Ninth-Grade Basketball Tournament.

Pampa Gold defeated Borger Red 63-58 in last weekend's finals. Quincy Williams and Jayson Williams had 15 and 14 points respectively to lead the Gold. Patrick Jackson added 10 points.

Jackson scored 20 points to lead Pampa past Borger White 48-34 in the opening round of the tournament.

Quincy Williams added nine points.

Pampa reached the semi-finals with a 45-41 win over West Texas High.

Jackson led the way with 14 points while Jayson Williams had nine.

Pampa Gold is 8-1 overall and 2-0 in district play.

Texaco, Pennzoil said closer to settlement

NEW YORK (AP) — The multibillion-dollar legal war between Texaco Inc. and Pennzoil Co. may be resolved soon, say officials who have been working all week on a settlement plan that also would extricate Texaco from bankruptcy court.

Wilbur Ross, financial adviser to a committee representing Texaco shareholders, said late Thursday that the committee expected a compromise plan to be filed for a hearing before U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Howard Schwartzberg "if not tomorrow, within a couple of days."

"We believe we have reached a substantive agreement with not just Pennzoil, but with all parties," he said.

Texaco's board was said to be meeting Thursday night, but an official of the White Plains, N.Y.-based oil giant, who asked not to be identified, said he could not comment on any developments.

Meanwhile, a cautious Pennzoil spokesman Robert Harper said Thursday evening that negotiations were continuing, adding: "We don't have anybody signed to this thing."

Even so, he said, "We think there will be, and we think there will be a plan and we think all the issues can be resolved."

"We're fairly optimistic that a plan will be filed," he said. "We are very hopeful that all the parties will be in agreement with the plan."

The historic feud between Texaco and Houston-based Pennzoil began nearly three years ago when Texaco bought Getty Oil Co., spoiling Pennzoil's plans to buy part of Getty. Pennzoil sued Texaco for damages and won a record judgment from a Texas jury that now stands at $10.3 billion.

Texaco filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code in April to avoid having to post a potentially ruinous security bond equal to the Pennzoil judgment while Texaco attorneys appealed.

Officers of the two companies, together with committees representing Texaco creditors and shareholders, have been working intensively since last week on proposals that might end the long legal battle.

Last Friday, Pennzoil and the two committees announced a proposal under which Texaco would pay Pennzoil $3.001 billion to settle the judgment and roughly $2 billion more for debts, interest payments and other obligations.

But certain elements proposed by the two committees were rejected by Texaco's management and financier Carl Icahn, a takeover strategist who is Texaco's largest shareholder.

Texaco also prepared a counterproposal containing terms that, if approved by shareholders, would keep the case in court for some time—blocking any payments to Pennzoil.

Ross said the new compromise plan had eliminated or modified controversial areas. One consisted of covenants that the creditors committee wanted, limiting the company's ability to borrow money. The committee felt this would prevent management from financing any post-bankruptcy restructuring that would weaken the value of outstanding debt.

"That's out," Ross said. The shareholders committee also dropped demands that the company eliminate certain anti-takeover provisions and expand the Texaco board to include 12 new directors—chosen by the shareholders committee.

Texaco objected to both provisions. The expanded-board proposal was especially criticized by Icahn, who told the committee such a move would be potentially ruinous to the company.

In the new agreement, Ross said, the committee asks the company to allow shareholders to vote on the anti-takeover provisions, and that it abide by the shareholder's wishes.

"If we get those kinds of corporate democracy features, we will no longer have any reason for shareholder directors," he said.

Dennis O'Dea, an attorney for the group, said the proposal was discussed in meetings Thursday with Texaco, Icahn, Pennzoil Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke, and representatives of the creditors committee.

"Everyone more or less reached the conclusion that there's room to make a deal on all the substantive issues," he said.

Creditors Committee representatives and Icahn did not return calls for comment late Thursday.

Group calls for study of WIPP

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A citizens group is calling for a halt to work on the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad pending a study of the slow but steady seepage of water into the planned nuclear waste repository.

Albuquerque attorney Joseph Goldberg of the Committee to Make WIPP Safe told a news conference Thursday afternoon that the evidence of water seepage also should prompt Congress to delay legislation to transfer 10,240 acres from the public domain for WIPP until safety concerns are addressed.

"There is, I think, no doubt that the Department of Energy is clearly pushing the land withdrawal act on a fast track," said Goldberg, a former state secretary of Health and Environment. "What should control here is the public's health and safety."

Meese financial manager's deals exceeded investment

WASHINGTON (AP) — In one day last year, Attorney General Edwin Meese's financial manager bought stock for Meese that was worth $100,000 to $250,000 more than the capital put up by the attorney general, according to financial disclosure forms filed with the Justice Department.

The stock trading by W. Franklin Chinn, a former director of scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp., is one focus of an independent counsel's criminal investigation of the attorney general's involvement with the New York defense contractor.

Meese filed amended ethics forms with the Justice Department earlier this month for 1985 and 1986 showing that on at least three trading days, and possibly as many as seven, Chinn bought and sold stock for Meese worth far more than the capital the attorney general had in the accounts of a limited blind partnership he set up with Chinn.

The attorney general invested $55,000 with Chinn, who turned a $40,000 profit for Meese in a total of just 22 days of trading over 19 months before the partnership was dissolved last summer, when Meese dropped Chinn as his investment manager.

Chinn, who also is under criminal investigation in the Wedtech scandal, used his contacts in the brokerage industry to obtain highly sought new stock issues which he bought and sold on the same day, a practice known as day trading.

FILING DEADLINE FOR CANDIDATES FOR WATER DISTRICT DIRECTOR

The deadline for filing as a candidate for Director in Precinct No. 5 of the Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District No. 3 is December 28, 1987. Application forms may be picked up and filed at the District Office, 300 S. Omohundro, White Deer, Texas between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. The application must be signed by the applicant or at least ten (10) qualified voters of the Precinct and must be filed at least 20 days before the date of the election. To be a candidate for Director, one must be a qualified voter and shall have resided within the Precinct for six months next preceding the date of the election. An election will be held January 16, 1988 to elect one Director in Precinct No. 5 to serve a 4-year term.

Director's Precinct No. 5 begins 2 miles east of Pampa and takes in roughly the northeastern portion of Gray County. John R. Spearman is currently serving as Director of Precinct No. 5.
