Massive oil slick clean-up resumes today

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Emergency crews worked to contain a 20-mile-long oil slick that has contaminated two of the city's three rivers, threatened the drinking water for 750,000 people and halted shipping along the Monongahela.

About 7,000 of the approximately 1 million gallons of diesel fuel floating in the Monongahela River was recovered by late Sunday, officials said.

More equipment was heading to the area today to help, but officials said the cleanup could take weeks.

The fuel stretched at least 20 miles, from the Monongahela at West Elizabeth into the Ohio River near downtown Pittsburgh. The rivers were moving early today at only 1 to 2 mph, the National Weather Service said.

The cleanup was suspended Sunday evening and was to resume this morning, said Coast Guard Lt. John Farthing.

The spill occurred Saturday night when a new, 4-million-gallon storage tank collapsed at Ashland Oil Co.'s Floreffe Terminal near West Elizabeth, officials said.

One million of the estimated 3.5 million gallons in the tank flowed into the river; the rest was contained near the tank, Farthing said. About 820,000 gallons have been recovered from the tank area.

Traffic on the heavily used Monongahela was halted, and adjacent rail lines and highways were temporarily closed.

No communities downstream from the spill lost water service Sunday, officials said. The Western Pennsylvania Water Co. closed one of two Monongahela intakes to prevent the fuel from contaminating water supplies serving about 750,000 customers in Allegheny and Washington counties.

Pittsburgh's water is from the Allegheny River and was unaffected. The Allegheny and Monongahela rivers converge near downtown Pittsburgh to form the Ohio River.

Gov. Robert P. Casey placed the Pennsylvania National Guard on alert to deliver emergency water supplies.

Authorities don't know what caused the collapse. A damage estimate has not yet been set. The cleanup could take weeks, said Roger Schrum, an Ashland spokesman.

On Sunday, Allegheny County's hazardous materials team, private contractors, the Coast Guard and others helped stretch booms across the Monongahela to dam the oil as it floated on the water. Specialized pumper trucks skimmed the oil from the surface, but downstream of the booms, greasy ribbons of oil meandered on a 5 mph current into the Ohio.

The company planned to bring in several skimmer barges to recover oil in areas inaccessible to workers Sunday. Those areas made up most of the 20-mile stretch, Orchrum said.

Speed was important because the fuel is slowly dispersing into the water, making it more difficult to recover, he said.

"It may become almost impossible to recover at all," Farthing said.

Authorities had not determined how much fuel has flowed into the Ohio River or how far it traveled, Farthing said.

Casey said he's invited the governors of Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois and member of Pennsylvania's congressional delegation to join him in asking the federal Environmental Protection Agency for aid.

A spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers said the cold weather should minimize the impact on wildlife. Most shore birds have gone south for the winter and fish were not spawning, said Michael Koryack, a corps biologist.

Waterfowl and fish kills are expected, however. "It will be a month before they can assess the damage to wildlife," said Samuel E. Lockerman, a supervisor for the state Game Commission.

Unemployment expected to be relatively steady in '88

DALLAS (AP) — Texas' relatively stable 1987 unemployment rate is expected to continue through this year, although an economist cautioned that a catastrophe in oil prices or the national economy could darken his forecast.

"We'll see some modest improvement, but nothing dramatic," said Bernard Weinstein, director of the Center for Enterprise at Southern Methodist University. "At year's end there should at least be more people employed than at the beginning of the year."

Unemployment in Texas fell a full percentage point in 1987 and hovered around 8.5 percent for much of the year. The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics is to release December's tally Friday.

Wide swings in the number of working Texans belied the stability of the unemployment rate, which is computed from the numbers of jobholders and people looking for work. An estimated 725,000 Texans were seeking employment in November, the BLS reported last month.

"1987 was a real see-saw year," Weinstein said. "During the first six months, we lost jobs. During the second six months, we recaptured a lot of those job losses."

He predicted the number of Texas jobs will grow between 1 percent and 1.5 percent this year, but only if the economy is not sidetracked by a national recession or another sharp slide in energy prices.

Two women charged in Wheeler murder

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

WHEELER — Two Oklahoma women have been implicated in the Dec. 7 shooting death of a Wisconsin drifter, Wheeler County Sheriff Lonnie Miller confirmed today.

Tammy Dye, 22, and her mother, Carolyn Willey, 41, both of Drumright, Okla., are being held on charges of shooting Dye's boyfriend, Dale Duessler, 37, in the incident occurring eight miles east of Wheeler. They are in custody at the Wheeler County Jail, each on $50,000 bond.

The original suspect in the shooting, 33-year-old Richard Lee Woodard of Berlin, Okla., remains in custody at the Beckham County Jail in Sayre, Okla., on a Elk City, Okla., forgery charge.

Miller expects Beckham County officials to decide next week whether to proceed with the forgery charges or to extradite him to Wheeler County.

Woodard was Duessler's brother-in-law.

Dye was arraigned Friday before Wheeler County Justice of the Peace Herbert Stacy and Willey was arraigned Saturday, also before Stacy.

Duessler, a Waterloo, Wis., native who was traveling through the region with the suspects, was shot in the stomach on Dec. 7 in a trailer eight miles east of Wheeler. His body was found the following morning in a burned Chevrolet at a lake in far western Oklahoma.

Miller said today that the implication of Duessler's wife and mother-in-law in the shooting raises a question as to who did the shooting.

"They are implicating each other," Miller said, adding that his deputies are seeking a motive for the shooting.

"Apparently they were all on a forgery spree and they thought Duessler would report them," he added.

Miller said that Duessler, Dye, Willey and Woodard were living in the trailer with Woodard's wife, Gwinneta Woodard, 18, Willey's son and several children.

Dye and Mrs. Woodard had been held as a material witness. Mrs. Woodard was released Friday on a $1,000 bond.

Willey was arrested Friday at the Wheeler County Jail as she was attempting to obtain the two women's release.

Miller said he expects the two women to appear before a Wheeler County grand jury when it convenes, but he does not know when a date will be set.

State's highway carnage exceeds DPS estimate

By The Associated Press

While undercutting the Department of Public Safety's Christmas prediction, Texas outpaced the New Year's Eve forecast as at least 40 people died on the state's highways during the latter holiday period, a spokesman said today.

The New Year's count topped the DPS prediction of 35 on Sunday when, for the second time in as many days, Texas recorded a multi-fatality collision involving a car traveling the wrong way on an interstate highway.

The DPS' 102-hour period ran from noon Wednesday through midnight Sunday. During the 102-hour Christmas count, the DPS predicted 42 fatalities but recorded 36.

DPS spokesman David Wells said 20 of the later period's fatalities occurred in a 10-hour span beginning at 8 p.m. on New Year's Eve.

"That is extremely unusual to have that many fatalities in that short a period during the holidays," Wells said.

Nine of the 40 victims were pedestrians, Wells said, and another 20 victims were not wearing seatbelts.

Katherine Dean, 58, of Mission was killed Sunday night when the car she was driving collided with another vehicle in Hidalgo County, crossed a parking lot and crashed into a convenience store, Wells said. Five other occupants of the two vehicles were injured.

John Peter Connelly, 37, of Houston, was killed early Saturday while crossing Gulf Freeway in Houston, Wells said.

Unidentified pedestrians were also killed Sunday night in Dallas and Elgin.

James John Jamison III, 27, of Lubbock and a passenger, Mark Arnold Schweigert, 22, of Lubbock were killed early Sunday when the car Jamison was driving collided head-on with another car on Interstate 27, about three miles south of Plainview in Hale County. The driver of the other car was hospitalized in critical condition.

About 3 a.m. Saturday, two people were killed and another person critically injured in a head-on accident on Interstate 10 near Sealy in which one of the vehicles was going the wrong way.

One-vehicle accidents claimed two other lives early Sunday.

Kimberly Ann Kellett, 19, of Henrietta died after losing control of her car about 1:30 a.m. Sunday on a curve on Farm Road 2847 about 3½ miles southwest of Henrietta in Clay County.

Officials said the car was attempting to take the curve at a high rate of speed.

Tension returns as Arab woman killed

JERUSALEM (AP) — A rash of small-scale protests broke out in the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank today after an Israeli soldier killed an Arab woman and the army said it would deport nine Palestinian activists.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, speaking on Israel Radio, said the Israeli army sought to avoid casualties and described the shooting on Sunday as a "regretful incident."

"Everybody knows how much we want to avoid, as much as possible, loss of lives," Shamir said. "The army is doing its utmost and shows maximum restraint."

Witnesses in the West Bank town of Ram said Haniya Suleiman, 25, was hanging laundry when she was fatally shot, becoming the 23rd Arab killed by army gunfire since a wave of violence began last month.

Her death came just as officials were expressing cautious satisfaction that violence was ebbing in the occupied territories of the Gaza Strip and West Bank, which Israel captured from Egypt and Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war.

Israel Radio said the new tensions forced the army to postpone plans to reduce the number of soldiers in the territories, where there was a large buildup after the riots began.

The army refused comment. Authorities released nearly 200 of 1,200 Palestinians arrested and said they would free more if calm prevailed.

The army said 500 Arabs were brought before judges and about half pleaded guilty to incitement and other riot-related charges. Most received one- or two-month sentences, but one man in Gaza was sentenced to 1 year for throwing a firebomb at soldiers.

In the Gaza Strip, youths burned tires on Omar Al Mukhtar Street, the main shopping thoroughfare, and a demonstration by 50 students was dispersed by soldiers in Gaza City, an Arab reporter said.

Stone-throwing was reported in Khan Younis and Rafah, where many shops were closed in a commercial strike. Shops were also reported closed in areas of East Jerusalem and the West Bank towns of Nablus, Ramallah and El Bireh.

The Palestine Press Service, an Arab-run news agency, reported protests in which youths erected barricades, threw stones or set tires afire at a dozen places in the West Bank and Gaza. It said hundreds of students at the Bir Zeit University near Ramallah blocked the main road leading to the campus.

Maher Nasser, a United Nations spokesman, said students left classes at seven U.N.-administered schools in Gaza City and two in Khan Younis. The other 139 elementary and secondary schools were open but attendance was reported down.

Four of the nine Arabs slated for deportation began hunger strikes Sunday, according to the Palestine Press Service and the office of Felcia Langer, their attorney, who has appealed the expulsion orders to a military tribunal.

Wheeler honors state champs

WHEELER — Mustang mania continues here this week as residents honor the state champion Wheeler High School Mustang football team during Mustang Week.

The football team, which took Class A state champ honors after defeating Bremond on Dec. 19, were to be honored with a parade at 3:45 p.m. today down Main Street from the Wheeler School to the Wheeler County Courthouse.

Wheeler Mayor Wanda Herd said that city council members agreed on Dec. 21 to wait until after the Christmas and New Year holidays to commemorate the victory.

The Dec. 19 victory marks the third time Wheeler has taken state in 11 years. Wheeler took state in 1977 and 1979.

Some relief expected for Texas lending institutions

By The Associated Press

More Texas banks will fail and some thrifts will post record losses, but industry observers also see a little relief for the state's lending institutions in 1988. But barring a doubling of oil prices, the industry observers expect that some of the same problems will remain when 1988 ends. The new year brings some reason for hope with regulators addressing the lending institutions' problems, but a quick end to their troubles is not expected. "The recovery of the thrift industry is not going to come anytime soon," said H. Robert Bartell, chairman of Houston's San Jacinto Savings Association.

Owing to a collapse in energy prices, the spillover into the real estate market and some instances of abusive lending practices, two out of three Harris County thrifts are losing money, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday. On a January day in 1987, the liabilities of the state's 281 savings and loans, taken together, overtook their assets. But corrective steps are being taken. Under a government recapitalization plan approved last year, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. has received some cash—a little more than $1 billion so far—that can be used to close, merge or reorganize insolvent savings and loans. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, regulator of the nation's 2,100 thrifts, expects to close about one institution per week in 1988, the newspaper said, with many being in Texas. The bank board is exploring solutions for the Texas thrift crisis and is expected to release a plan shortly. It has given only a rough outline of its intentions, but thrift executives with whom board officials have consulted say the plan will address the problems without creating others. Regulators will try a new approach, thrift executives say. Instead of substituting cash for repossessed real estate, they will substitute a note, which is basically an IOU that allows the FSLIC to keep most of its cash. The government also will hold off on selling real estate property it picks up until it can get a price that won't further erode the value of neighboring properties. And instead of selling sick thrifts to healthy institutions one by one, healthy thrifts will be encouraged to buy a number of them at one time. In addition, the takeover terms will be standardized to hasten mergers. If all goes as planned, some of the state's most troubled thrifts will disappear, and so will the enormous rates they are paying to lure depositors. "The biggest thing that we hope will happen this year is that deposit rates will return to normal," said Jenard Gross, chairman of United Savings Association in Houston. High rates are devastating to profits.

The problems of the banking industry aren't as acute, and regulators so far have been able to contain them. While the cash-strapped FSLIC was able to close only 11 thrifts in 1987, regulators closed nearly 200 banks. In Texas, 52 were closed, nearly twice the old record of 26 set in 1986. More banks will be closed in 1988, but the number might not be as high, Texas Banking Commissioner Kenneth Littlefield said. "I don't think we will see 50 (in 1988) next year," he said. "Through the first half of the year, they will probably fail at the same rate. I'm hopeful the failure rate will substantially slow down in the second half."

Arson ruled in fire that killed young girl

SAN ANTONIO (AP)— Authorities say the fire that killed a five-year-old girl whose family had been terrorized by former neighbors was intentionally set. Kara Holmes died Sunday when fire roared through her apartment in a housing project. She suffered second-degree burns over 75 percent of her body, authorities said. Lynn Holmes, the girl's mother, said someone set fire to a mattress she had used to cover a window that was broken out last week. The girl went to the second floor of the apartment to awaken her 11-year-old brother, Daniel, the mother said, while she went to a neighbor's home to call the Fire Department. The girl apparently thought her mother still was in the unit and wanted to go back downstairs after her, the mother said. "Daniel said, 'No, no, mom's outside. Come on, come on, we've got to get outside.' I thought they'd have sense enough to go out the second-story window and go down the balcony," she said. The boy escaped by that route, but the girl remained inside. Firefighters found her under her bed. The fire was ruled an arson, and police are searching for two suspects, Fire Capt. Dan Davila, chief arson investigator, said. Fire officials estimated the damage at $20,000. Holmes, 32, said former neighbors have been harassing her since the neighbors were kicked out of the project after she reported a juvenile was burglarizing her house. "I was told later on, 'Don't report them because they would get even with you worse than you got them,'" Holmes said, adding she has been burglarized numerous times and her children have been attacked. Dead cats and other animals have been tossed through broken windows in the home, neighbors said. The last time the apartment was vandalized, someone shattered the first-floor window. The mattress the mother placed in the opening to keep out the cold is believed by fire officials to have been ignited with a cigarette lighter. "They used to do her a lot of damage," said Eunise Camirillo, who lives next door. "I told her that they're going to end up killing her or one of her kids. Now they killed the little girl."

Big game spells quiet

HOUSTON (AP)— It was a quiet time for emergency personnel in the Houston area during the National Football League playoff game between the Houston Oilers and the Seattle Seahawks. On Sunday afternoon, during the American Football Conference wild card game, Houston fire and ambulance dispatchers, homicide investigators and Harris County deputies all reported a quiet afternoon. That is, until the game ended. "You betcha, things have picked up," said Houston Fire Department dispatcher J.B. Williamson after the game ended. "When I came in between 5 and 6 p.m., there was hardly any traffic on the road," he said. "By 7:30 p.m., 25 ambulances were on calls—at a time when there are usually 10 to 15." Sgt. Vernon West of the Houston Police Department homicide division, said that while Sundays are usually slow days for homicide investigators, it's often even quieter when big games are televised locally. "I don't know if crime drops, but the calls go down," he said.

Mrs. Holmes, who is staying with a friend, said she recently completed a course in data entry and was waiting to get transferred to another project before getting a job. "There will be some people paying for this," Mrs. Holmes said. "They may not be able to bring my baby back, but they're going to pay. They got me, but I'm going to fight back, legally."

Five GOP presidential candidates file Saturday for Texas primary

AUSTIN (AP)— Ten Republicans and Democrats have formally filed in Texas as presidential candidates in the March 8 "Super Tuesday" primary election, and officials said four more are expected to file by today's 6 p.m. deadline. Pete du Pont of Delaware, the only announced Republican presidential candidate who did not file in Texas Saturday, is expected to file today, said John Weaver, state GOP executive director. Democratic officials said that Bruce Babbitt, former Arizona governor; Gary Hart of Colorado, who rejoined the race for president last month; and U.S. Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee were also expected to file today. Five candidates formally filed for the Republican presidential nomination Saturday at the state GOP headquarters. Campaign officials for Vice President George Bush were the first in line, at 10:30 a.m., and submitted a stack of petitions about 3 feet high that bore signatures of nearly 35,000 Texans, while former Secretary of State Alexander Haig's filing was so tardy officials had to keep the office open after 5 p.m.

U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, the Rev. Pat Robertson and U.S. Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas also filed as Republican candidates. Officials from each of their campaigns submitted between 6,000 and 10,000 signatures. Republican presidential candidates must submit at least 5,000 signatures to file for the primary in Texas. Five candidates had filed in the Democratic primary by Saturday—the Rev. Jesse Jackson, U.S. Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, U.S. Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and political extremist Lyndon LaRouche Jr. of Virginia. U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Texas, of Amarillo filed Saturday for the U.S. Senate seat held since 1971 by Democrat Lloyd Bentsen. Five Republicans are expected to seek the nomination and an eventual head-to-head race against the powerful incumbent whose get-out-the-vote effort in 1982 helped the Democrats oust Clements from the governor's mansion and sweep all other statewide races. State Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, announced as a candidate for Boulter's congressional seat.

Schools springing up to teach how to spot drunks, minors

HOUSTON (AP)— A new law that opens the door to lawsuits against those serving alcohol to people already inebriated or under age has generated a lot of business for firms offering courses on how to spot drunks and minors. In September, a law took effect that makes it possible for employees to be sued if they serve or sell alcohol to someone under age or already intoxicated. The seller or server may become liable for personal injury or property damage the drunk person or minor may have caused. Texas legislators also passed a bill providing for private seller training programs to be approved and monitored by the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission. Employees are protected from liability if their employees have attended an approved program, but the programs are not mandatory. And there is a big market for the programs—more than 40,000 Texas businesses are authorized to sell alcohol and each employs an average of eight people, said Jim Strickland, president of Austin-based Human Services Risk Management. "There are so many drunks on the road. There will probably never be enough schools to handle that problem," Strickland said. Strickland's 2-year-old consulting firm advises service companies such as day-care centers and nursing homes on their liability risks. But last month, it started programs for sellers of alcoholic beverages on how to recognize intoxicated customers and those under the legal drinking age. The firm is one of 16 companies authorized so far by the state to certify sellers of alcoholic beverages to absolve their employers of liability. Roy Hale, coordinator for seller training for the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission in Austin, said he expects to see more businesses formed in the future to train alcohol-beverage sellers. "There's so many people to train and the turnover in those operations is so high," said Strickland, whose firm offers a four-hour course that usually costs about $10 to $15 per person. The Alcoholic Beverage Training of Texas Inc., which has offices in Houston and Dallas and smaller operations in other Texas cities, has taught 2,000 people since it opened in November. Students come from "a lot of convenience stores, package stores, grocery stores, restaurants and bars," said Katherine M. Houston, who teamed up with her sister, Deborah Flores, to start the company.

Tighter security planned for fiberglass companion

DALLAS (AP)— The owner of a popular Western night club says he'll have to keep a tighter rein on the fiberglass horse hitched on his roof after somebody tried to gallop off with it. Bill Pence, general manager of the Belle Star nightclub, said the horse has been a "faithful companion" that never went anywhere since he bought it in California five years ago. But Saturday, a man managed to unscrew the bolts that secured the $3,000 statue to the roof of the country-western nightclub on North Central Expressway. Club employees managed to corral the would-be horse thief and his accomplice before they could hoof it away with Trigger, the club's 7-foot-high trademark palomino statue, police say.

Officers said two men from suburban DeSoto were arrested early Saturday after they were spotted unscrewing the bolts that hold the statue onto the club's roof. Jeffrey Alan Lovett, 22, and Steven Ray Storm, 23, were released Saturday after posting $200 bond each on the attempted theft charges. Three club employees saw the men on the roof at 2:35 a.m. Saturday, police said. One of the men was unscrewing the bolts while the other was serving as a lookout, the employees told police. An off-duty police officer, who was working as a security guard at the club, walked outside to confront the men and they ran, witnesses told police.

Union Pacific is leading state in accidents involving hazardous materials, records show

AUSTIN (AP)— Three railroad companies account for two-thirds of the 84 rail accidents that occurred in Texas during 1987's first three quarters, including five that involved the release of hazardous materials, records show. The Union Pacific Rail System led all other railroads with accidents involving hazardous materials in Texas in 1987, records show. State and federal records indicate that trains belonging to Union Pacific and Missouri Pacific, a subsidiary, were involved in 20 accidents involving hazardous materials from January through September 1987, the Austin American-Statesman reported Sunday.

The statistics were calculated before chemical-laden trains operated by Union Pacific were involved in derailments near Round Rock and Marshall within the past four weeks. Union Pacific also leads in the total number of train accidents of all kinds in Texas, with 36 of the 161 train accidents reported to the Federal Railroad Administration and the Texas Railroad Commission. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Co. had the second-highest number of accidents, 19, involving hazardous materials in Texas during the first three quarters of 1987. Southern Pacific was third with 18. The accidents do not include those involving pedestrians and motorists at highway crossings. According to a log of accidents reported to the Railroad Commission, Union Pacific trains also were involved in grade-crossing accidents that killed three people.

John Bromley, a spokesman for Union Pacific at its headquarters in Omaha, Neb., said the company's record in hazardous material accidents is related to its size.

"We haul more chemicals than any other carrier, so we have a wider exposure," Bromley said. "Statistically, the odds would be that we have more (accidents) than any other carrier."

Suspect shot, killed in fight for gun with DPS trooper

BRENNHAM (AP)— An armed robbery suspect was shot and killed during a fight with a Department of Public Safety trooper that began when the officer tried to arrest him during a routine traffic stop, authorities said. DPS Capt. R.E. Martin said the 29-year-old man was stopped for speeding at 7:50 p.m. Sunday just outside the Brenham city limits by trooper A.J. Miller when a computer check showed the man was driving a stolen car and was wanted for armed robbery in Corpus Christi. Martin said that when Miller told the man he was under arrest, the man pulled away and leaped into his car, dragging Miller behind him. He said the man pressed the accelerator to the floor while Miller was still hanging out of the car. Miller pulled himself into the speeding car when the man reached for the trooper's gun.

Martin said the man eventually pulled the gun from Miller's holster, and during a struggle one shot was fired that struck the suspect in the chest. "The pistol was in his holster and he was trying to keep it in the holster with one hand and hold the wheel with the other," Martin said, adding that the struggle was taking place as the car continued to spin in a wide circle on steep embankments.

Gary Hart may be only a slippery eel

The 1988 Democratic presidential race descended from the banal to the ridiculous. Gary Hartpence, a.k.a. former Sen. Gary Hart, threw his derby back into the circus ring.

It is hard to see why the man would subject himself and his family to the abuse he is certain to take. Perhaps Hart thinks it is courage; foolhardiness is a better word. There are a couple of other reasons.

A major reason is that Hart's 1988 campaign remains deeply in debt. By returning to the campaign hustings, Hart qualifies for federal matching funds. In other words, Hart's new campaign is based, at least in part, on his need to grab more of your tax dollars.

This is further proof of why we should abolish federal finding of political campaigns. The government has no right to steal your tax money to subsidize candidates you don't support and may loathe. Every presidential candidate, Republican or Democrat, promises to reduce the budget deficit, yet actually worsens it by accepting federal campaign bucks.

Another reason for Hart's re-entry is that, looking at the other six declared Democratic hopefuls, he must have seen an obvious opportunity. Gary Hart has committed many disreputable deeds, but he looks almost tall next to the other six Democratic dwarfs.

And Hart still considers himself the candidate of "new ideas." Well, politicians do have their delusions. If you look closely, of course, Hart's campaign themes are rubber stamps of the other Democratic candidates' planks. Gary hates nuclear bombs, bemoans the federal deficit and wants to build "the best education system in the world."

But his actual stated positions, like those of the other Democrats, would only make nuclear war more likely by strengthening Soviet superiority; would worsen the deficit; and would make it harder for parents to give their kids a real education by opting out of the government school monopoly.

Gary also seems to have learned nothing from his public ordeal. "Sometimes the best thing to do is what you feel you must do," he said about re-entering the race. To put it another way: If it feels good, do it.

"I believe I represent a brand of leadership that draws its strength from its independence and its experience in politics that it's not purely political," Hart said, in an awkward formulation. "Most of all, traditional politics has to take second place. It may be interesting, it may be exciting, it may occasionally even be fun." Is Gary still taking Caribbean cruises on his buddy's yacht, "Monkey Business"? "In the long run, politics isn't what matters," added the man from Troublesome Gulch.

The final word on Gary Hart's revived candidacy was written long ago by Ambrose Bierce, the great American satirist. Bierce defined a politician as, "An eel in the fundamental mud upon which the superstructure of organized society is reared. When he wriggles he mistakes the agitation of his tail for the trembling of the edifice."

Is it disease or misconduct?

WASHINGTON — Eugene Traynor started drinking to intoxication before he was 10 years old. James P. McKelvey was an alcoholic at 13. Both went into the Army, both got out with honorable discharges and for a time both kept on boozing. Now they are plaintiffs in a case before the U.S. Supreme Court that could profoundly affect an estimated 10 million alcoholics in the United States.

If the high court takes a broad view of the case, private and public employers could find themselves under new obligations. Companies writing health and hospitalization insurance would feel the impact. The key question, if the court wishes to face it, is an old as it is troublesome: Is alcoholism a disease? Or is it what the Veterans Administration terms "willful misconduct"?

These were the facts: Traynor enlisted in the Army in 1968, but his drinking caused such medical and disciplinary problems that he was discharged in 1969. Over the next five years he was hospitalized five times for alcoholism. The Veterans Administration diagnosed his condition as "primary" alcoholism, a term used to denote alcoholism without an underlying psychiatric disorder.

In 1977 Traynor licked the demon. He invoked his education benefits under the GI Bill of Rights and enrolled in college. Under the law, such benefits must be used within a 10-year period following discharge. Traynor's time ran out in August 1979. He applied for an extension, arguing that his illness, i.e., his alcoholism, had prevented him from taking full advantage of the program. The VA rejected his petition under a long-standing regulation. In the VA's view, Traynor's "willful misconduct" was all his own doing.

James J. Kilpatrick

McKelvey followed the same path. He was discharged honorably in 1966, then hospitalized 33 times for alcoholism before he joined Alcoholics Anonymous and put booze behind him. He too used some of his educational benefits before time ran out, and he too was refused an extension.

Both veterans brought suit in federal courts, and both won at the trial level before losing in the circuit courts of appeal. They argued that Congress itself had defined alcoholism in a 1970 act as "an illness requiring treatment and rehabilitation." In support of their position they cited an impressive array of medical opinion.

The National Council on Alcoholism has filed a friend-of-the-court brief in their behalf. In the council's view, alcoholism "is neither misconduct nor a moral failing, but a complex and insidious medical condition that can and must be treated." The government's position is "archaic, erroneous and stigmatizing."

The alcoholic is a handicapped person under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Excessive drinking "is not something over which he or she has conscious or voluntary control." The council notes that the World Health Organization definied alcoholism as a disease in 1951, the American Psychiatric Association in 1953 and the American Medical Association in 1956.

It is quite possible that the Supreme Court will sidestep the broad question altogether. The Veterans Administration operates under a peculiar system almost unmatched elsewhere in the bureaucracy: Final decisions of the Board of Veterans Appeals are not subject to judicial review. The 2nd U.S. Circuit cited this fact in its divided opinion rejecting Traynor's claim.

This immunity, however, applies only to "any law administered by the Veterans Administration providing benefits to veterans." Is the Rehabilitation Act such a law? It protects handicapped persons from discrimination in any program receiving federal benefits. The government contends that the VA does not administer the Rehabilitation Act; the VA administers only acts affecting veterans.

There the jurisdictional argument stands. The Supreme Court traditionally refuses to get to the merits of a case if there is any plausible way of avoiding the merits on technical grounds. The theory is that it is better to leave essentially statutory questions up to Congress, and there is much to be said for that theory. It would be a simpler matter for Congress to rewrite the VA regulation on "primary" alcoholism if Congress agrees with the medical opinions.

I take no side on this one. Over a long life in the newspaper business I have known a good many alcoholics. Were my friends sick? Were they handicapped as handicaps are usually understood? Or did they simply lack the self-discipline to control their drinking? Perhaps the high court will say.

U.S. lags on nuclear energy

I have always thought it a shame that the nuclear age dawned with a ghastly military bomb burst over Hiroshima.

If you had first been introduced to electricity by way of an electric chair, you'd still be scared to plug the toaster in its socket.

Ever so gradually, Americans are coming to realize that nuclear energy, harnessed, is the most efficient servant mankind has ever had, a source of great light and great might.

Three times in seven years some frightened people in Maine have demanded a statewide vote on nuclear power.

Those opposed tried to load the question. On the ballot it asked, "Do you want to let any power plant like Maine-Yankee operate after July 4, 1986 if it makes nuclear waste?"

Nonetheless, for a third time, the majority of Maine's voters have voted their support for nuclear power.

And the support came from all segments of the electorate — business, labor, physicians, scientists — even from some environmentalists.

Maine has had 15 years' experience with nuclear energy and likes it. Nuclear power supplies one-fourth of all the state's electric power and at a cost, two-and-a-half cents per kilowatt hour, which is the lowest of any major power plant in New England.

The United States now has 108 licensed reactors, with another 16 under construction or waiting to be licensed.

However, no new plants have been ordered in the United States since 1973. Costs have multiplied — Seabrook which was supposed to cost $2 billion will cost $5 billion — and any electric utility which dares now to undertake the astronomical and unpredictable cost risks bankruptcy!

Meanwhile, the rest of the world races on ahead in the development of nuclear power plants. Three of four United States manufacturers now have orders for new reactors, all from foreign buyers.

France has 66 plants operating or under construction, and presently gets two-thirds of all its energy from nuclear power. And, incidentally, entirely safely.

The Soviet Union, with 61 plants operating or under construction, derives 11 percent of its energy from nuclear power.

Japan has 31 plants in operation, 13 more abuilding.

Canada has 15 plants operating, 7 under construction.

While the United States is committing itself to no new ones.

Something is happening in nuclear plant construction technology which may rescue us. G.E. and Westinghouse are developing smaller (300 megawatt) modular facilities which can be built within two years and subsequently, if desirable, expanded. It may have paid us to wait.

Power politics needs some feminization

By CHUCK STONE

Just before Colorado's gift to American politics, Rep. Pat Schroeder, withdrew as a Democratic candidate for president, I toyed with the wicked notion that had she stayed in the race... it could have been dubbed "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

The jest should not obscure a-treasured reality. Schroeder still reigns as one of the brainiest and brightest stars in America's political constellation.

But we've been reduced to six candidates in both parties; and voters are cartwheeling with about as much enthusiasm as a North Pole Eskimo buying an air-conditioned igloo with an automatic ice-maker. Maybe the absence of a woman candidate partially explains the televised torpidity of the remaining Tweedledees and Tweedledums.

Whatever the reason, the bipartisan "Dirty Dozen" (who are giving the movie of the same name a bad rap) painfully demonstrate the need for "The Feminization of Power." And that's the name of a new movement that has targeted 14 states in an attempt to increase the number of elected women officials.

"We're fed up with voting for the lesser of two evils," Eleanor Cutri Smeal declared at the founding convention of the Fund for the Feminist Majority. "We're not going to beg for our rights anymore, but go in there and vote in our rights!"

Maybe I'm a feminist, because as I watched a video of her impassioned eloquence, I wanted to stand up and shout, "Tell it, sister!"

An explanation in the Fund's organizing letter is particularly inspiring: "The Fund is not a membership organization: You can't join the Feminist Majority — you are the feminist majority."

Smeal could have been re-elected easily to a third term as president of the National Organization of Women. But the Reagan administration's "sleaze factor" radicalized her. Citing seven dismal years of Reagan "relentlessly unraveling the gains of the past 60 years of civil rights and women's rights," as well as the Iran-Contra scandal, "a secret government of arms dealers and drug traders," the closing of plants, the busting of unions, the shrinking of the middle class, and the increasing numbers of homeless on our streets, Smeal offers more women in elected office as a moral corrective.

"When the 101st Congress convenes in 1989, we want at least half the new members to be feminist women (my emphasis) — double to triple the current number of women in Congress," explains Smeal.

Start with five simple statistics and try to reconcile them as a ratio for justice. Women make up 54 percent of the population. But women comprise only 15.6 percent of the state legislators, 4.9 percent of the House of Representatives, 2 percent of the Senate, and 4 percent of state governors.

At the present rate of growth, congressional parity won't be achieved until the year 2120. A change is long overdue, and America can start by amending Aristotle's 2,000-year-old arrogant error, "Man is by nature a political animal," to read "man and woman."

Note the Fund's goal to elect feminist women. There is a difference. All women don't embrace the 13-point National Feminist Agenda: Equality; Reproductive freedom; Peace and disarmament; Civil rights; Lesbian and gay rights; Economic justice; Homemakers' rights; Elimination of poverty; Rights of the disabled; Human services; Elimination of violence; Preservation of the environment; Support for the arts and humanities, and fairness in the media.

The Fund for the Feminist Majority is far too modest. There's a national humanitarian agenda. If you want more information about the Fund, write to its headquarters at 8105 W. 3rd St., Los Angeles, CA 90048.

In the meantime, good luck, sisters.

Snow snarls traffic; Upper Midwest shivers

By The Associated Press

Nature rolled out a white carpet to welcome millions of East and West coast residents back to work today after a long holiday weekend, while Arctic air surged across the heartland.

"You may feel the punch of an Atlantic Coast storm, the bite of a cold Arctic outbreak, or the blow of a Pacific Coast storm but you are not likely to escape all three," said Hugh Crowther of the National Weather Service in Kansas City, Mo.

The Pacific storm, blamed for at least one death, dumped snow on the higher elevations of Oregon, California and Nevada. The storm that hit the middle Atlantic states caused snow as far south as North Carolina, where ice-laden trees were blamed for 10s of thousands of power outages.

Below-normal temperatures prevailed in the Midwest, where St. Louis had a high Sunday of 30 degrees. The weather service said winds from the northwest caused below-zero temperatures overnight in North Dakota and Minnesota to have wind chills as cold as 76 degrees below zero.

The eastern snowstorm came just in time to disrupt today's rush-hour commute for people going back to work after the holidays.

Five hundred snow plows and more than 300 salt spreaders were mobilized today to clear the 6,000 miles of roads in New York City, where almost 4 inches of snow fell before dawn.

Philadelphia officials dispatched 88 salt trucks this morning in anticipation of up to 4 inches of snow. Mike Nucci of the managing director's office said the crews probably would use 5,200 tons of salt.

In New Jersey, where about 400 salt trucks and plows were dispatched overnight, up to 3 inches of snow had fallen by early this morning.

The storm worked its way north from the Carolinas coast, causing about an inch of wet snow early this morning across much of southern West Virginia and in the northern mountains of North Carolina, the weather service said.

Freezing rain snapped tree limbs and power lines across much of North Carolina on Sunday, knocking out power to an estimated 85,000 customers, including some holiday travelers at Raleigh-Durham Airport, and putting several radio stations off the air.

Snow also fell Sunday in the Chesapeake Bay area. A snow emergency alert in Baltimore and 15 Maryland counties Sunday night allowed only vehicles equipped with chains, radial tires or snow tires on the streets, police said.

A fast-moving Pacific storm coated Oregon roads with ice and caused heavy snow in the mountains of California and Nevada. Major traffic delays occurred on westbound roads across the Sierra Nevada as thousands of Californians tried to make it back home after New Year's weekend vacations in the Reno and Tahoe areas of Nevada.

Reagan returns to work on budget

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Reagan is buckling down to work on a new federal budget and making more international travel plans after winding up a year-end interlude of golf and relaxation in California.

Aboard Air Force One, as the president flew back from Palm Springs on Sunday, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said budget director James C. Miller III would begin briefing Reagan on the fiscal 1989 budget this week.

Fitzwater said the briefings probably would start Tuesday or Wednesday. The budget, covering the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, is expected to be submitted to Congress in mid-February.

Asked about reports that the president plans extensive overseas travel during 1988, Fitzwater said "a Mexican summit is possible in February" and the president hopes to go to Moscow in May or June, but "it will be pretty difficult to work in other trips."

Besides the Moscow and Mexican summits, Reagan will attend an economic summit in Toronto, Canada, in June.

The president made no public comments as he and his wife, Nancy, returned from eight days in Southern California, six of them spent playing golf at the estate of multimillionaire publisher Walter Annenberg near Palm Springs.

On another issue, Fitzwater said Reagan will participate in a ceremonial signing sometime this week of a bill pumping additional millions into the troubled Farm Credit System.

He said the National Security Council and the Economic Policy Council of the White House will hold joint meetings to discuss "economic and social issues" in preparation for the president's meeting Jan. 13 with Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita.

In his Saturday radio address, Reagan prodded the Senate to act on the ratification of the arms control treaty with the Soviet Union.

The president also called on both houses to approve the new U.S.-Canadian trade pact, which binds the two nations into the world's largest free-trade zone.

The president's drive to get Senate approval for the treaty to ban intermediate-range nuclear weapons comes amid the Geneva negotiations on a second accord to slash by half the superpowers' strategic arsenals and his administration's preparations for a fourth summit with Moscow.

The president and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, in their exchange of New Year's greetings Friday, both expressed hopes for a strategic accord that could be ready in time for the Moscow summit.

The No. 1 item on Reagan's domestic agenda is the confirmation of Judge Anthony Kennedy to the Supreme Court. The nomination has received a generally favorable reception in contrast with Reagan's failed attempts to place Douglas H. Ginsburg and Robert H. Bork on the high court.

Many former Hart supporters, campaign workers are otherwise engaged now

WASHINGTON (AP)— While a handful of Gary Hart's former top supporters and organizers have joined his renewed presidential campaign, in state after state many more say they are finding another way to spend their time.

"My involvement with the '88 Hart campaign went down with the good ship Monkey Business," was the way his former Seattle fund-raiser, Tom Keefe Jr., put it.

"No, I'm not going to support him; I have something else to do," said Regan Burke, who eight months ago was Hart's Midwest campaign director.

Associated Press interviews with former Hart campaign leaders around the country found a few enthusiastically rejoining his effort but many keeping their distance.

Hart said he didn't expect all his supporters to return when he rejoined the race last month but welcomed those who would. His once formidable organization scattered in the aftermath of the sex scandal that prompted him to leave the race last May, with many workers joining rival candidates and others choosing to sit out presidential politics for a while.

"I'm Gary's friend but not his supporter," said Mark Green, a New York Democrat who was a Hart speechwriter in 1984 and active in his campaign in early 1987. Green said he knows of few former Hart backers returning to the fold.

One of Hart's most valued Democratic establishment endorsements last year was from Texas Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who now dismisses Hart's return as "a non-event, significant only in that it shows a lack of political realism." Another prominent supporter and national campaign coordinator, Florida House Speaker Jon Mills, was endorsing Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. today.

Former Hart deputy campaign manager, John Emerson of Los Angeles, said he is "an unofficial, informal adviser to Gary," but will remain officially unaligned.

The three most prominent California politicians who had endorsed Hart in 1987 — Assemblyman Tom Hayden and state Sens. John Garamendi and Gary Hart, who is unrelated to the candidate — are remaining neutral too.

There are traces of bitterness in the remarks of some former loyalists.

"Ultimately, it's rather selfish," said Ken Canfield, his former Georgia co-chairman who has joined Illinois Sen. Paul Simon. "It dredges up all those awful feelings people had last May and sickens them in the process." "I think it's just another example of poor judgment on his part," said Gary Koch of Winchester, Ill., now a supporter of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis. "I've think he's done a disservice to the party and the staff people who were on his payroll."

Hart has recovered some old campaign workers in crucial New Hampshire, site of the first primary, and in states including North Carolina, Minnesota, South Dakota and Massachusetts.

New Hampshire coordinators Greg LaBelle and Edgar Helms left Gore's campaign to rejoin Hart, and several other former Hart workers have returned from the sidelines. Dan Calegari left his job as regional coordinator for Rep. Richard Gephardt, a week after saying he would stick with the Missouri congressman, to rejoin Hart. Paul Weissmann departed Bruce Babbitt's campaign last week to rejoin Hart as his South Dakota chairman.

St. Paul lawyer John Sherman abandoned Dukakis to return, saying that while he was disappointed with Hart's personal problems "even more stupid was his dropping out of the race."

Israel raids Palestinian guerrilla bases, killing 26

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rescuers dug out five more bodies from the wreckage of buildings hit when Israeli jets raided Palestinian guerrilla bases, raising the death toll to 26, police said today.

Three people were still missing after the night-long search through the rubble of devastated buildings in south Lebanon's port of Jiyeh and the nearby town of Barja, police said.

The attack by 12 Israeli fighter-bombers was in apparent retaliation for the Nov. 25 raid, in which a Palestinian guerrilla flew a motorized hang glider to an army outpost in northern Israel.

The guerrilla killed six soldiers and wounded eight others before he was gunned down. A second airborne guerrilla was shot down inside Israel's self-proclaimed "security zone" in south Lebanon.

Lebanese police said Saturday's raid killed six guerrillas from the Syrian-backed Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command along with three members of the Druse Progressive Socialist Party, the militia that controls Jiyeh and Barja.

The rest of the fatalities, including at least four children under 10, were listed as civilians.

The guerrilla group said only three of its guerrillas were killed, with another six wounded.

The raid also flattened three of the front's command centers and left 30 wounded.

Those killed included 12 members of two Lebanese families, at least four of them under age 10, whose homes took direct hits, authorities said.

The three areas targeted were the teeming Ein el-Hilweh refugee camp near the southern port of Sidon, in the port of Jiyeh to the north, and in the nearby Druse-controlled Chouf region inland.

An Israeli army spokesman said the pilots reported accurate hits in the raids, "carried out as part of our policy against terrorist bases in Lebanon."

Israeli officials say the Progressive Socialist Party militia of Druse warlord

Walid Jumblatt has been using Jiyeh to smuggle Palestinian guerrillas back to Lebanon.

Lebanese police said one Palestinian guerrilla died in Odied in Ein el-Hilweh and five in Jiyeh. They said three guerrillas were wounded in the refugee camp and nine in Jiyeh and Barja.

In Barja, three Druse militiamen and 12 members of two Lebanese families were killed. Rescuers found the bodies of four more civilians in Barja and that of another in Jiyeh late Sunday, police said.

Police said the houses in Barja were about 500 yards apart and less than a half-mile from the guerrilla command center.

A 57-year-old farmer, his wife and their five sons and daughters whose ages ranged between 6 and 19, were killed. A 36-year-old shoemaker, his wife and their three children, ages between 3 and 9, also died, authorities said.

Eighteen other natives of Barja and Jiyeh were wounded.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command maintains training bases and artillery positions in the Chouf region, the power base of Lebanon's 300,000-strong Druse minority sect.

It is allied with Jumblatt, whose Druse militia is among the most powerful in Lebanon's civil war.

New record low

The U.S. dollar hits yet another new record low against the Japanese yen during the first trading of the year on the Tokyo foreign exchange market Monday. The dollar opened at 120.45 yen, then bounced back to 120.50 yen in mid-morning trading.

Protests, celebrations dot border areas

OTTAWA (AP) — Celebrations and protests at assorted border points between Canada and United States marked the weekend signing of a historic trade pact by Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and President Reagan.

In Windsor, Ontario, Sunday traffic was brought to a halt on the Ambassador Bridge by about 900 Canadians protesting the free trade agreement.

"We're looking at losing a lot of employment here in Windsor," said Bernie Molche, one of the marchers Saturday on the bridge between Windsor and Detroit. "I don't believe that, really, it's going to benefit anybody."

The agreement was signed separately Saturday by Reagan and Mulroney. It lifts trade restrictions between the world's largest trading partners but still faces approval in Congress and in Parliament.

Another Windsor protester, Bert Rovers, accused Mulroney of "a betrayal of the Canadian public" by abandoning his opposition to the agreement after becoming prime minister.

Another Saturday protest at the Peace Bridge between Fort Erie, Ontario, and Buffalo, N.Y., was brief and peaceful, said Mike McAllister of the Niagara Regional Police. About 300 people held a rally about noon and then left.

The deal would gradually lift all tariffs and ease or eliminate restrictions on investment, energy, and certain services over the next 10 years.

It was reached in October although details weren't completed until last month.

Pentagon denies trip signals expanded U.S. role

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — U.S. Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci begins a trip to the Persian Gulf today, but the Pentagon denied assertions by diplomatic sources that his visit signals an expanded U.S. military role in the region.

Knowledgeable diplomatic sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said U.S. Navy ships apparently have been escorting merchant vessels not flying the Stars and Stripes. They said such actions were "a forerunner" of what Carlucci would make official.

Carlucci was scheduled to arrive today in Kuwait, beginning an eight-day trip that will include Bahrain, Saudi Arabia and Oman. It is his first visit to the area since replacing Caspar Weinberger in November. The Defense secretary is to inspect the 30-ship U.S. naval force assembled in and near the gulf to protect 11 reflagged Kuwaiti tankers from attacks by Iran, which has been fighting Iraq since September 1980.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman said Sunday there was "no basis" to the report of an expanded U.S. role in the gulf.

The United States admits only to protecting U.S.-flagged ships, its stated policy, although numerous reports have emerged in recent weeks of American warships appearing to escort other neutral shipping in the waterway.

The diplomatic sources said such a move would "pull the carpet" from under a Soviet suggestion that a United Nations naval force replace warships from several Western nations in the gulf.

Meanwhile, the Maltese-flagged freighter Alga sailed into Dubai harbor Sunday for repairs to a gaping hole made in a missile raid. Gulf-based shipping sources still were unsure whether 1988's first victim of the so-called tanker war was attacked by Iran or Iraq.

Late Sunday, an Iraqi military spokesman denied the Iraqi air force mistakenly hit a non-Iranian tanker, the official Iraqi News Agency reported.

Iraq sometimes has attacked non-Iranian vessels, apparently by mistake, such as when it hit the USS Stark on May 17, killing 37 American seamen.

The Alga attack followed the worst year of the tanker war, an outgrowth of the Iran-Iraq war. The belligerents hit commercial vessels 178 times in 1987.

Iraq attacks Iranian oil shipping and Iran retaliates on a ship-by-ship basis with strikes at neutral vessels, concentrating on those trading with Kuwait.

Comfortable chairs became popular in England in 1850s

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL

Comfort finally became fashionable in England in the 1850s. Folding chairs and adjustable chairs were popular, footstools were common, tufted and padded seats were in style, and chair arms were padded and chair backs curved to make sitting more comfortable.

Today experts would call these chairs "ergonomically designed." Our ancestors didn't know such terms; all they knew was that it was easier to sit in the new chairs than in the straight wooden chairs favored earlier.

One interesting Victorian chair had an adjustable footrest and back. The seat could be adjusted so you could almost recline in the chair. Sufferers from gout appreciated the comfort of being able to sit with raised feet.

It is possible to date these antique adjustable chairs from the style of the legs and arms. Flowing curves and button-tufted upholstery were popular from 1830 to 1850. Straighter legs and arm- and smoother upholstery came into fashion by the 1860s.

Folding chairs gained popularity in America during the 1870s. New technologies, including the use of iron chair frames, made many varieties possible, and adjustable chairs are still being manufactured in currently fashionable styles.

O'Neill's best-known dolls. She created Ho-Ho in 1940, and it was her last doll; she died in 1943. In 1965 the Ho-Ho doll was made of soft vinyl. Four sizes were made of this clown-like Buddha doll with an infectious grin.

Q. I just saw a large brass chameleon that measured about 12 inches in length. It seems to be a huge paperweight. On the flat bottom of the creature are the words "Sherwin Williams Paint." Since a chameleon is known for its colors, we thought this might be an old trademark used by the company.

A. One of the most famous trademarks in the world is the "Cover the Earth" mark used by Sherwin-Williams Company. It is a picture of a can of paint being poured over a world globe.

The company started about 1880 and first used this mark in 1905. As early as 1895, the company had used a mark showing a chameleon mounted on a painter's palette, but that mark was discontinued when the globe symbol was introduced.

Q. I have an old amber pint bottle with a paper label that says "Clorox." How old could it be?

A. Clorox liquid bleach was first sold in 1913. It was first packaged in 5-gallon crocks for use by commercial laundries and breweries, and by 1918 the 15-ounce amber bottle was sold for use at home. The bottle was used for many other products besides Clorox, so labels were necessary to identify the bottle's contents. The Clorox Company began using special bottles marked with the company name in 1928.

Q. My plate is similar to one I just saw at an antiques shop. The center has a blue W with a spiderweb design. The border has a chain with names of states inside each link. The bottom is marked "Made in England for Daniel Low & Co., Salem, Mass."

A. Your plate is in the Chain of States pattern. The design was first used by Martha Washington in the 8th century. Her dishes were made in China and shipped to the newly formed United States. The 15 states named in the chain were those in the original group.

The center design is MW (Martha Washington's initials) plus rays of the sun. The design was often copied during national celebrations such as the Centennial.

An English company made a flow blue copy of the original plate for the Daniel Low company in Massachusetts. A more authentic-looking copy of the dishes was made in 1968 by Haviland and Company of France.

Wife's inner beauty triumphs over ravages of disease

DEAR ABBY: I noticed with sadness the letter from "Half a Woman." She should know that any truly caring man would not be put off after learning of her mastectomy.

At the ripe old age of 32, my wife was diagnosed with metastatic breast cancer. Both breasts were removed. In the next five and a half years, she had extensive chemotherapy and radium treatments, numerous surgeries (including total hysterectomy), and finally ended up in a wheelchair.

After her death, I was left with her memory and three children (12, 8 and 6) to help heal my pain.

However, not once during all those years of her trauma did I ever consider her less than the most remarkable, beautiful, loving person that she had always been. Not once did anyone who knew her consider her as less than a whole woman.

I did not marry her breasts or any other part of her anatomy; I married her, what she was at any given point in time — her personality, her essence, if you will.

"Half a Woman" should understand that the physical "problem" is hers, in her mind, and should really be no problem at all. If I could find any woman who is half the person my wife was with no breasts, I would never let her go! Sign me ...

STILL LOVING

AND STILL LOOKING

DEAR STILL: You appear to be a very special man who deserves to find another high-quality woman. I hope with all my heart you do.

DEAR ABBY: I recently went on a short trip and asked a good friend and neighbor to water my plants. Naturally, I gave her a key to my house. When I returned from my trip, someone told me that in my absence, this friend had taken several people through my house on a "Cook's tour," made coffee and entertained them in my home!

Needless to say, I feel disappointed and betrayed that my "friend" would invade my privacy in this manner.

Am I being too sensitive about this unscheduled "tour"? It's weighing on my mind and has affected my friendship with her. How would you handle it?

BETRAYED

DEAR BETRAYED: At the appropriate time, I would tell my friend what I had heard, and give her a chance to confirm or deny the story. It is unfair to silently buy a tale without giving the accused an opportunity to defend herself — or at least explain the circumstances.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter about the mother-in-law who complained about her 30-year-old daughter-in-law who puts her two small children down to nap while she watches the soaps for two hours. I am furious!

I also have a 30-year-old daughter-in-law with two small children. She never watches soaps or anything else. She also never puts her children down for a nap; instead she gets up in the morning and heads for the mirror. She has a beautiful face and she knows it. She thrives on constant attention wherever she can get it. So off she goes every day with the two little ones in the car.

She runs to tennis lessons, clubs and wanders through stores and malls shopping, dragging her tired, sleepy children with her.

On weekends the kids get a nap while my wimp son baby-sits so his wife can run and shop some more!

What I wouldn't give for a daughter-in-law who would stay home and watch the soaps every afternoon while her little ones nap!

Israel raids Palestinian guerrilla bases, killing 26

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rescuers dug out five more bodies from the wreckage of buildings hit when Israeli jets raided Palestinian guerrilla bases, raising the death toll to 26, police said today.

Three people were still missing after the night-long search through the rubble of devastated buildings in south Lebanon's port of Jiye and the nearby town of Barja, police said.

The attack by 12 Israeli fighter-bombers was in apparent retaliation for the Nov. 25 raid, in which a Palestinian guerrilla flew a motorized hang glider to an army outpost in northern Israel.

The guerrilla killed six soldiers and wounded eight others before he was gunned down. A second airborne guerrilla was shot down inside Israel's self-proclaimed "security zone" in south Lebanon.

Lebanese police said Saturday's raid killed six guerrillas from the Syrian-backed Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command along with three members of the Druse Progressive Socialist Party, the militia that controls Jiye and Barja.

The rest of the fatalities, including at least four children under 10, were listed as civilians.

The guerrilla group said only three of its guerrillas were killed, with another six wounded.

The raid also flattened three of the front's command centers and left 30 wounded.

Those killed included 12 members of two Lebanese families, at least four of them under age 10, whose homes took direct hits, authorities said.

The three areas targeted were the teeming Ein el-Hilweh refugee camp near the southern port of Sidon, in the port of Jiye to the north, and in the nearby Druse-controlled Chouf region inland.

An Israeli army spokesman said the pilots reported accurate hits in the raids, "carried out as part of our policy against terrorist bases in Lebanon."

Israeli officials say the Progressive Socialist Party militia of Druse warlord

Walid Jumblatt has been using Jiye to smuggle Palestinian guerrillas back to Lebanon.

Lebanese police said one Palestinian guerrilla died in Odied in Ein el-Hilweh and five in Jiye. They said three guerrillas were wounded in the refugee camp and nine in Jiye and Barja.

In Barja, three Druse militiamen and 12 members of two Lebanese families were killed. Rescuers found the bodies of four more civilians in Barja and that of another in Jiye late Sunday, police said.

Police said the houses in Barja were about 500 yards apart and less than a half-mile from the guerrilla command center.

A 57-year-old farmer, his wife and their five sons and daughters whose ages ranged between 6 and 19, were killed. A 36-year-old shoemaker, his wife and their three children, ages between 3 and 9, also died, authorities said.

Eighteen other natives of Barja and Jiye were wounded.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command maintains training bases and artillery positions in the Chouf region, the power base of Lebanon's 300,000-strong Druse minority sect.

It is allied with Jumblatt, whose Druse militia is among the most powerful in Lebanon's civil war.

New record low

The U.S. dollar hits yet another new record low against the Japanese yen during the first trading of the year on the Tokyo foreign exchange market Monday. The dollar opened at 120.45 yen, then bounced back to 120.50 yen in mid-morning trading.

Protests, celebrations dot border areas

OTTAWA (AP) — Celebrations and protests at assorted border points between Canada and United States marked the weekend signing of a historic trade pact by Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and President Reagan.

In Windsor, Ontario, Sunday traffic was brought to a halt on the Ambassador Bridge by about 900 Canadians protesting the free trade agreement.

"We're looking at losing a lot of employment here in Windsor," said Bernie Molche, one of the marchers Saturday on the bridge between Windsor and Detroit. "I don't believe that, really, it's going to benefit anybody."

The agreement was signed separately Saturday by Reagan and Mulroney. It lifts trade restrictions between the world's largest trading partners but still faces approval in Congress and in Parliament.

Another Windsor protester, Bert Rovers, accused Mulroney of "a betrayal of the Canadian public" by abandoning his opposition to the agreement after becoming prime minister.

Another Saturday protest at the Peace Bridge between Fort Erie, Ontario, and Buffalo, N.Y., was brief and peaceful, said Mike McAllister of the Niagara Regional Police. About 300 people held a rally about noon and then left.

The deal would gradually lift all tariffs and ease or eliminate restrictions on investment, energy, and certain services over the next 10 years.

It was reached in October although details weren't completed until last month.

Pentagon denies trip signals expanded U.S. role

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — U.S. Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci begins a trip to the Persian Gulf today, but the Pentagon denied assertions by diplomatic sources that his visit signals an expanded U.S. military role in the region.

Knowledgeable diplomatic sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said U.S. Navy ships apparently have been escorting merchant vessels not flying the Stars and Stripes. They said such actions were "a forerunner" of what Carlucci would make official.

Carlucci was scheduled to arrive today in Kuwait, beginning an eight-day trip that will include Bahrain, Saudi Arabia and Oman. It is his first visit to the area since replacing Caspar Weinberger in November.

The Defense secretary is to inspect the 30-ship U.S. naval force assembled in and near the gulf to protect 11 reflagged Kuwaiti tankers from attacks by Iran, which has been fighting Iraq since September 1980.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman said Sunday there was "no basis" to the report of an expanded U.S. role in the gulf.

The United States admits only to protecting U.S.-flagged ships, its stated policy, although numerous reports have emerged in recent weeks of American warships appearing to escort other neutral shipping in the waterway.

The diplomatic sources said such a move would "pull the carpet" from under a Soviet suggestion that a United Nations naval force replace warships from several Western nations in the gulf.

Meanwhile, the Maltese-flagged freighter Alga sailed into Dubai harbor Sunday for repairs to a gaping hole made in a missile raid. Gulf-based shipping sources still were unsure whether 1988's first victim of the so-called tanker war was attacked by Iran or Iraq.

Late Sunday, an Iraqi military spokesman denied the Iraqi air force mistakenly hit a non-Iranian tanker, the official Iraqi News Agency reported.

Iraq sometimes has attacked non-Iranian vessels, apparently by mistake, such as when it hit the USS Stark on May 17, killing 37 American seamen.

The Alga attack followed the worst year of the tanker war, an outgrowth of the Iran-Iraq war. The belligerents hit commercial vessels 178 times in 1987.

Iraq attacks Iranian oil shipping and Iran retaliates on a ship-by-ship basis with strikes at neutral vessels, concentrating on those trading with Kuwait.

Oilers' placekicker Tony Zendejas lets loose with the winning field goal in Sunday's AFC Wildcard game.

Zendejas' field goal in OT lifts Oilers past Seahawks

Houston advances to second round of AFC playoffs

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — Houston Oiler kicker Tony Zendejas was convinced he would not wind up the joker in the AFC wild-card game. "I was grateful I got a second chance," Zendejas said after his 42-yard field goal gave Houston a 23-20 overtime victory over Seattle on Sunday. "I felt I let the whole team down."

All year long, he was perfect on field goals inside the 30-yard line, trying eight and hitting eight. When he lined up Sunday with 1:47 left in the fourth quarter, he faced a 29-yard chip shot that would give the Oilers a 10-point cushion.

But the kick slammed off the left upright and fell back to the turf. Given a last chance, Seattle moved 80 yards in 10 plays to tie the game at 20-20 and force overtime.

The Houston defense forced Seattle to punt in the extra period and quarterback Warren Moon engineered a 61-yard drive to give Zendejas a second chance.

"I was just thankful that I had another opportunity," Zendejas said. "I was pretty sure I could make it. I was kind of nervous, but you're nervous all the time."

Houston Coach Jerry Glanville was on his knees along the sideline as Zendejas lined up. Moon, so drained he doubted whether he could return to the field, huddled close to full-back Alonzo Highsmith along the Oilers bench. He chose not to look.

"From where I was, it was going close to the middle," Zendejas said.

"I was trying to decide whether or not to watch," Glanville said. "I watched. I was watching the blocking. I was looking at our guards and center to see if there was any penetration."

"I couldn't even watch," Moon said. "I just grabbed Alonzo and listened for the crowd reaction and hugged him."

Moon said Zendejas' missed field goal was a disappointment at the time, but he believed the Oilers defense could hold the Seahawks. It didn't.

Seattle marched 80 yards in 10 plays, with Dave Krieg hitting Steve Largent with the 12-yard scoring pass with 26 seconds left.

"We were fortunate to be in a position to tie the game," Largent said. "The guy missed a field goal that would have put us out of it. I know he was feeling a lot of pressure before that last kick, but they deserved to win."

Seattle won the coin toss to get the first shot in overtime.

"Winning the coin toss was a big break for us but we couldn't move the ball," Krieg said. "We started out in overtime trying to take what the defense gave us," Seattle Coach Chuck Knox said. "We were right back in it. We got the ball and couldn't do anything with it. And they got it and drove down the field with it."

"We nickel-and-dimed them," Moon said, describing the final drive. "We weren't going to do anything foolish. We didn't get conservative, but we moved the ball downfield and the rest was up to Tony."

"I knew it was just a matter of making the plays."

"They drove the ball down the field on us when they had to," Largent said.

Except for the first time they had the ball in the game and the last possession in regulation, the Seahawks struggled on offense, gaining just 29 yards rushing without the injured Curt Warner, the AFC's No. 2 runner.

"We had some success throwing the ball but unfortunately we couldn't move it the last time we got it," Krieg said.

"Three points — that was the difference in the game," Knox said. "We were right there at the end, forced overtime, won the toss, but had to punt it. We couldn't control the ball."

Vikings go wild against Saints

By AUSTIN WILSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS — Dah Minnesota Vikings, dat's who.

And decisively, too: 44-10 over the New Orleans Saints in the NFC wild-card game on Sunday.

So decisively that about half of the 68,127 partisan fans left early without waiting for the final answer to their chant: "Who dat? Who dat? Who dat say dey gonna beat dem Saints?"

It's a chant that had gone unanswered over the final nine weeks of the season as the Saints built the league's longest winning streak, going into the playoffs 12-3.

It was the first winning season in Saints history, the first playoff game for New Orleans in the 21-year history of the club, and the most lopsided defeat since San Diego hammered the Saints 35-0 in 1979.

Minnesota finished the regular season 8-7 after losing three of its last four games.

"They just manhandled us," Saints Coach Jim Mora said.

The victory sends Minnesota against the 49ers, 13-2, at San Francisco on Sunday. Washington is at Chicago in the other NFC semifinal.

The Saints recovered a Tommy Kramer fumble on the second play of the game and scored two plays later to take a 7-0 lead. Morten Andersen kicked a 40-yard second-quarter field goal for the rest of the Saints scoring.

The Vikings went on top for good at 10-7 in the first quarter on special teams play — a 42-yard field goal by Chuck Nelson and an 84-yard punt return by Anthony Carter, who had returned only three punts all season.

Joey Browner set up the field goal by recovering Mel Gray's fumbled punt at the New Orleans 27, another big play by the Vikings' special teams.

Carter's return was the longest in playoff history, breaking the record of 81 set in 1941 by Chicago's Hugh Gallarneau against Minnesota's Anthony Carter (81) raises his arms in victory as the Vikings shocked the once-powerful New Orleans Saints.

Green Bay.

Carter also scored on a 10-yard halfback pass from Allen Rice during the Vikings' 21-point second quarter. Tight end Steve Jordan scored the first touchdown of the surge on a 10-yard pass from Wade Wilson. After Carter's touchdown and Andersen's field goal, Hassan Jones caught a 44-yarder from Wilson on the final play of the first half for a 31-10 Minnesota lead.

Nelson kicked a 32-yard field goal in the third quarter and a 19-yarder in the fourth, and D.J. Dozier ran eight yards for the final touchdown with 1:46 left in the game.

Minnesota running back Darrin Nelson gained 73 yards on 17 carries against the NFL's third-best rushing defense as the Vikings rolled up 417 yards. St. Louis had allowed an average of 290 yards a game.

Minnesota surrendered 322 yards a game through the season, but allowed the Saints only 149.

Floridians rank 1-2 in final poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

The state of Florida is the undisputed ruler of the college football world.

With Florida State the runner-up to Miami's 1987 national champions, two teams from the same state are ranked 1-2 at the end of a season for the first time in the 52-year history of the Associated Press poll.

"It's not a league, but we call it 'Big Florida' because it's as good as any league in the country," Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden said of the rivalry among Miami, Florida State and the University of Florida, whose team was ranked in the Top Twenty seven times during the season.

Miami and Florida State were in the Top Ten all season. Miami also was a Top Ten team all last season, as well as the last seven weeks of the 1985 campaign. Once during the year, Miami was third, Florida State fourth and Florida 10th.

The Miami Hurricanes, the nation's only 12-0 team, were a unanimous choice for the national championship following a 20-14 victory over No. 1-ranked Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl.

The Hurricanes, who were ranked No. 2 in the last three regular-season polls, were No. 1 on all 57 ballots and received a perfect score of 1,140 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Florida State, 11-1, which defeated Nebraska, 31-28 in the Fiesta Bowl, moved up from third place to second with 1,071 points.

The Seminoles' only loss was to Miami 26-25 on Oct. 3 when a two-point conversion pass in the final minute failed.

Miami has won one other national championship, in 1983 under Coach Howard Schnellenberger.

Oklahoma, 11-1, which had been No. 1 in 14 of the previous 15 polls this season, slipped to third place with 1,008 points. The Sooners were the preseason choice to win the national championship.

They also finished third last year after winning their sixth national championship in 1985.

Syracuse, 11-0-1, was No. 4 prior to its 16-16 Sugar Bowl standoff with Auburn and finished fourth with 966 points.

LSU's 30-13 trouncing of South Carolina in the Gator Bowl vaulted the Tigers from seventh place to fifth with 864 points while Nebraska dropped from fifth to sixth with 825.

Auburn slid from sixth to seventh with 795 points and Michigan State remained No. 8 with 768 points by defeating Southern Cal in the Rose Bowl 20-17.

UCLA, a 20-16 winner over Florida in the Aloha Bowl, rose from 10th to ninth with 641 points, replacing South Carolina. Texas A&M's 35-10 rout of Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl lifted the Aggies from 12th to 10th with 629 points.

The Second Ten consists of Oklahoma State, Clemson, Georgia, Tennessee, South Carolina, Iowa, Notre Dame, Southern Cal, Michigan and Arizona State.

Wildcats again atop college basketball

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

Kentucky returned to the top of The Associated Press college basketball poll today as Arizona, which had held the position for the past two weeks, dropped to No. 3 following its first loss of the season.

Kentucky, 9-0, had been No. 1 for two weeks before being replaced by Arizona, which lost to unranked New Mexico 61-59 Saturday to drop to 12-1 and end its first-ever run at No. 1.

Kentucky received 40 first-place votes and 1,204 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters, well ahead of Pittsburgh, 9-0, which moved up one place from last week with nine first-place votes and 1,147 points.

Arizona had nine first-place votes and 1,061 points, 27 more than North Carolina, 9-1, which remained fourth. Wyoming, Temple and Syracuse also occupied the same spots as last week.

Kentucky won three games last week — 100-58 over Division II Alaska-Anchorage, 81-74 over Vanderbilt and 84-77 over Georgia, the last two games the first for the Wildcats in Southeastern Conference competition.

Pittsburgh won the Citrus Bowl Classic with victories over Florida State and Alabama and then beat then-No. 8 Florida 80-68.

The loss to New Mexico came after the Wildcats won the Fiesta Bowl tournament with victories over Michigan State and No. 9 Duke.

Arizona was the fourth team to hold the No. 1 position this season, following Syracuse, North Carolina and Kentucky.

North Carolina, which had 1,034 points, beat Nevada-Reno and UCLA last week, while Wyoming, 11-0, beat Eastern Kentucky, Cincinnati and Stephen F. Austin and received two first-place votes and 949 points.

Temple, with 888 points, and Syracuse, with 827, each won twice last week. The Owls, 7-0, beat Mississippi and Southern University, while the Orange-men, 10-2, downed Morehead State and Siena, averaging 116 points in the victories.

Oklahoma jumped from 10th to eighth, with one first-place vote and 795 points, after victories over Oral Roberts and Illinois State. The Sooners, 12-0, broke the 100-point mark in each game, the ninth time this season they have done that.

Duke, 6-1, remained ninth with the final first-place vote and 708 points, two more than No. 10 Purdue, 10-1. Duke beat then-No. 8 Florida in the Fiesta Bowl before falling to Arizona in the championship game. Purdue won the Palm Beach Classic with victories over Wake Forest and Miami, Fla., in improving one place from last week's poll.

Michigan led the Second Ten followed by Indiana, Nevada-Las Vegas, Georgetown, Florida, Iowa, Iowa State, Kansas, Illinois and St. John's.

Last week's Second Ten was Purdue, Michigan, Indiana, Iowa, Nevada-Las Vegas, Iowa State, Kansas, Georgetown, Memphis State and Louisville.

Illinois, 9-2, and St. John's, 8-1, each debuted in the poll, replacing Memphis State and Louisville.

Illinois — which becomes the fifth team from the Big Ten in the Top Twenty, joining Purdue, Michigan, Indiana and Iowa — beat Colorado 86-68 in its only game last week. St. John's won the ECAC Holiday Festival for the fourth consecutive year with victories over Marist and then-No. 17 Kansas.

Memphis State lost to Kansas in the semifinals of the Festival

before defeating Marist for third place, while Louisville lost to North Carolina State in the semifinals of the Rainbow Classic before rallying for third place with an 86-62 victory over Mississippi State.

Lakers throttle Blazers for tenth straight win

By BOB BAUM
AP Sports Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — The injury-plagued Portland Trail Blazers lost more ground on their Pacific Division rivals, the defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers.

The outcome of Sunday night's game was familiar: a Lakers blowout and the 23rd Los Angeles victory in the last 27 games between the two teams.

"We were so bad. We really stunk up the joint," Portland's Clyde Drexler said after Los Angeles won 98-81, their 10th straight victory.

Portland's .284 field goal percentage was an all-time franchise low and the worst in the league this season. Their 27 field goals also was a team record-low.

The only other NBA game Sunday night was no prettier. Atlanta beat the visiting Los Angeles Clippers 121-84.

Portland center Steve Johnson was out with bone spurs in his feet, and forward Kiki Vandeweghe, missed the game with a sore back.

Team doctor Bob Cook Johnson's ailment may bother him the rest of the season.

Portland beat the Lakers in Los Angeles a month ago. But without Johnson and Vandeweghe, the Blazers didn't have enough firepower to challenge the Lakers' defense.

Byron Scott had 31 points for the Lakers. He had a career-high 37 in his previous game and scored 26 the time before that.

The Lakers took control of the contest in the second quarter, boosted the lead to 25 in the third period, then withstood a minor Portland rally that cut the lead to 15 in the final quarter.

The loss snapped Portland's 11-game home-court winning streak. The Blazers' 81 points was their lowest total of the season.

Drexler scored 24 for Portland, but only nine in the last three quarters. Maurice Lucas added 15 for the Blazers.

Hawks 121, Clippers 84

Atlanta crushed the Clippers for its fifth straight victory, with Dominique Wilkins scoring all of his 26 points and Doc Rivers passing for all of his 15 assists as the Hawks grabbed a 74-40 halftime lead.

Wilkins scored 14 points in the first quarter, including eight in a row during a 12-0 streak that put the Hawks ahead 24-9 with 5:42 left in the period. Randy Wittman scored 12 of his 18 points in the opening period, which ended with the Hawks ahead 42-22.

Los Angeles, which has lost six straight, was led by Mike Woodson and Quintin Dailey with 14 points apiece.

LA Laker center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, center, looks for help while being double teamed in Sunday's game against the Portland Trailblazers.

Ticket hikes, sponsorship 'necessary' for Cotton Bowl

DALLAS (AP)—Expected increases in financial guarantees for participating teams are prompting Cotton Bowl officials to increase ticket prices and begin searching for a corporate sponsor.

The bowl's board of directors voted to boost the per-ticket price from this year's $25 to $30 next year, Jim Brock, the Cotton Bowl's executive director, said this weekend.

Financial commitments will force every major sporting event in the country to have a sponsor by the mid-1990s, Brock predicted. And he said that corporate sponsorship is the "No. 1 priority" for next season.

Brock said moves for a sponsor and ticket increase are necessary because the $2.3 million guarantee for participating teams may reach $3 million soon. He also said it was important to acquire a sponsor before the bowl's television contract with CBS expires in 1990.

That could spell problems for some bowls, Brock said, including the Bluebonnet Bowl in Houston's Astrodome.

The Bluebonnet Bowl, which barely made its commitment to pay Baylor and Colorado last year, attracted only 23,288 fans for Texas' 32-27 victory over Pittsburgh last week.

"My heart goes out to the Bluebonnet, but I think I ought to let them comment on their future," Brock said. Two possible sponsors for the Cotton Bowl fell through before the 1987 season, Brock said. Two Texas companies he declined to name — neither from Dallas — are being considered for sponsorship and he said he is confident a sponsor will be in place by next year's game.

Several of the 18 bowls already have sponsors — the Sugar Bowl's sponsorship by UFG&G, an insurance company, being the latest, Brock noted. More games will consider sponsors because the NCAA minimum guarantee of $500,000 per team probably will be increased to $750,000, he said.

Although four new sites for bowls are being considered, Brock said, he believes financial difficulties will reduce the number of bowls to 15.

The Cotton Bowl's last ticket increase came three years ago when the price was increased from $20 to $25. Cotton Bowl officials resisted a price increase last year because of the state's bad economy, Brock said.

The 1989 Cotton Bowl will not be played on New Year's Day for the eighth time in 53 years, Brock noted.

The game will be moved to Jan. 2 because New Year's Day falls on a Sunday and the bowl's directors did not want to compete with the National Football League playoffs, Brock said.

Bullets fire Loughery

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Washington Bullets coach Kevin Loughery is out. Wes Unseld is in.

Loughery, whose team lost 19 of its first 27 games, was fired by Bullets owner Abe Pollin on Sunday, a day after the Bullets lost their fifth consecutive game, a 111-100 decision to the Houston Rockets.

"Kevin is one of my favorite people, but with the team playing as it is, a move had to be made," Pollin said.

"I can't blame the management; they're good people, and I hope they do well," said Loughery, 47, who was on the last year of a two-year contract. "But you've got to win, especially at home. When the fans start booing the team for not performing, you can anticipate things happening."

He said Sunday that, except for impressive home victories over Detroit and the defending champion Los Angeles Lakers, a positive team chemistry never materialized.

"I think Wes will do a good job," Loughery said. "He's intelligent, he knows the game and he gets along with people. That's really all you can ask of a coach."

Enter: Unseld

Unseld, 41, a five-time All-Star and 1969 NBA Most Valuable Player, said he expects Loughery's longtime assistant, Bill Blair, to remain as his chief aide when he holds his first practice today.

"I don't think it's too late for us to still be competitive," Unseld said. "Whether we have enough talent to win consistently is still open to question, but we've at least got to go out and play up to our potential."

Loughery had replaced Gene Shue at the end of the 1985-86 season. Last season, the Bullets went 42-40, losing eight of their first 10 games, and already have suffered through three losing streaks of four or more games this season.

Exit: Loughery

Unseld, whose affiliation with the Bullets began in 1968 as a first-round pick out of the University of Louisville, played 13 years before becoming a team vice president in 1981. He was named both Rookie of the Year and MVP in his first NBA season and helped the Bullets to 12 consecutive playoff appearances.

Loughery, whose overall record is 341-503, previously coached the New York and New Jersey Nets, Philadelphia, Atlanta and Chicago in the NBA. He coached the Nets for three years in the American Basketball Association before moving with them to the NBA in 1976.

Loughery coached the Nets to the ABA title in 1974, but none of his NBA teams won more than 43 games in his 12 years of coaching.

Southern Methodist basketball Coach Dave Bliss still hopes the Texas A&M Aggies will still be celebrating the Cotton Bowl when his team arrives in College Station Wednesday night.

SMU, 11-2, and one of the favorites to win the SWC title, opens play against Coach Shelby Metcalf's Aggies after having whipped them 89-66 in the consolation finals of the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu last week.

"I know we are one of the favorites, but my team is good about not listening to all talk and just going out and playing its game," Bliss said. "We know A&M will be a different team than the one we played in Hawaii. I just hope they're still celebrating that fine Cotton Bowl victory (35-10) over Notre Dame."

SMU ripped Morgan State 96-65 Saturday night to get ready for the Aggies.

The SWC regular season got under way on Saturday with the Texas Longhorns nipping the Houston Cougars 65-63 in Austin before only 3,639 fans in the Super Drum.

Texas, 7-6, took advantage of Houston's poor guard play for the victory. The Cougars' starting sophomore point guard, Randy Brown, left the team to go back to Chicago last week.

"Randy was the heart of the team and we missed him," said Houston's Richard Hollis. Houston is now 5-3 for the season.

"It's going to take us awhile to replace Randy," Houston Coach Pat Foster said.

Texas, bolstered by the return of Alex Broadway, went to a three-guard lineup. Broadway, who passed a class at a community college to become eligible again, had five assists in the victory.

In other games Wednesday night, Texas is at Arkansas, 9-2, the preseason SWC favorite; Rice, 2-7, is at Texas Tech, 4-5; and Baylor, 9-4 is at Texas Christian, 6-5, in a battle of the Iba cousins — Gene at Baylor and Moe at TCU.

In games last weekend, Arkansas downed Coastal Carolina 81-59, Texas Tech beat Sam Houston 67-63, Baylor downed Alabama State 111-72, and Rice bounced Wisconsin-Oshkosh 89-69.

"We were picked fourth in some polls, but I believe we've progressed and could become one of the better teams in the league," Bliss said. "We have to play well as a team. If we do that, then I think we could be pretty good."

SMU has lost only to North Carolina and Louisville while defeating Top Ten team Florida.

In games on Saturday, SMU hosts Baylor in a 1 p.m. regionally televised clash, TCU is at Arkansas and Texas Tech is at Houston.

Gay still an inspiration

By ED KNOCKE
The Dallas Morning News

FORT WORTH (AP) — Don Gay, an eight-time world bull riding champion, is basically retired from his sport these days, but he's still sought out for advice by the top riders of the day.

Reigning world champion Lane Frost is one. Last week, when a number of cowboys gathered to compete in the Texas Championship Rodeo at Cowtown Coliseum in Fort Worth, Frost was checking out some information with the former title-holder from Mesquite.

Gay may have turned in his bull rope for a lariat as a team roper, but he's still regarded as the authority on riding bulls.

"Don, I believe, can teach the older riders more than the younger ones," said Frost, who is in his fifth year on the tour. "He knows so much about the subject, he tends to go over the heads of the young ones."

"I feel real fortunate to have Don as a teacher. I always say that I've had the three best teachers in the world — Don, Freckles Brown and my dad."

Brown, now dead, was a legendary bull rider who competed well into his late 40s. Frost's dad, Clyde, was among the better bronc riders on the tour in the last 50s.

Frost himself won the world title last month at the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas. It was his fourth time to qualify for the NFR in his five years on the tour. He finished the year winning more than $105,000.

Despite having missed almost three months — from early August to late October — because of a broken collarbone, Frost led the standings almost the entire year in 1987.

Ted Nuce took over the lead during Frost's absence and stayed there until the finals, when Frost put on a big surge and beat him and Tuff Hedeman for the title on the last day. He won more than $42,000 at Las Vegas.

Frost credits Hedeman, last year's world champion, as playing a big role in his championship season, along with Cody Lambert and Jim Sharp.

Economists: Free trade with Canada will help Texas

DALLAS (AP)—Economists predict a new U.S.-Canada trade agreement could mean new business for Texas companies, and that any harmful effects from cheaper Canadian energy or timber will likely be small and temporary.

The proposal, which would drop all tariffs and reduce most other trade barriers between the two countries by 1999, may especially benefit Texas industries in the areas of aerospace, telecommunications, semiconductors, computers and oil-field equipment and services.

In addition, economists say the state could attract more Canadian investors and that Texas farmers may enjoy increased exports to Canada.

"We'll have a big market made more open to us," said Ray Perryman, director of Baylor University's forecasting service.

President Reagan and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney signed the free-trade pact Saturday. The agreement still must be ratified by the U.S. Congress and the Canadian Parliament.

Douglas Branson, Canadian consul general in Dallas, said the free-trade zone would add to the already strong trade between Texas and Canada, which amounted to $2.6 billion in 1986. The total between the two countries was $160 billion, making them the world's largest trading partners.

Branson said Texas has 40,000 jobs linked to Canadian trade, and ranks ninth among states in trade with Canada.

"I see trade growing both ways," Branson said. "For the United States, it's the same as expanding the U.S. market by a state the size of California."

Names in the news

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP)—President Reagan laughed it up with Bob Hope at a party to mark the opening of a $20 million entertainment center named for the comedian.

"Bob Hope has given generously of his valuable time and valuable talent in support of worthwhile causes, perhaps more than any human being alive today," Reagan said Saturday as the Bob Hope Cultural Center opened.

"Accepting the first 'America's Hope Award' from Reagan, the 84-year-old comedian said, 'I appreciate the nice things he said about me, even if I'm not Russian.'"

More than 1,000 people paid up to $10,000 a couple to attend the gala, which featured a five-course dinner and a laser-light show.

The dedication of the center's 1,166-seat McCallum Theatre featured pianist Van Cliburn, newlywed singers Vic Damone and Diannah Carroll and the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater.

NEW YORK (AP)—Actor-turned-businessman Fess Parker, remembered best as television's coonskin-clad woodsman Davy Crockett, has considered entering a new frontier: politics.

Family obligations, however, kept Parker from challenging Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., last year, the 63-year-old actor said in an interview published in this week's People magazine.

"I thought I could win," said Parker, a conservative. "But I didn't want to be away from my family more than I was."

Walt Disney chose Parker for a 1954 television special on Crockett, the woodsman and hero of the Alamo. Parker recreated the role in a subsequent TV series.

Parker, who made his last film in 1972, cashed in on his fame, earning millions on profits from merchandising of coonskin caps and Old Betsy toy rifles. With that money he turned to full-time real-estate development in California and Kentucky.

Last July, he opened his $50 million Fess Parker Red Lion Resort Hotel in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Mass killings are a small but growing phenomenon

By FRED BAYLES
AP National Writer

An Arkansas man methodically kills his family, then goes on a shooting spree. An Iowa farm family is wiped out; a son is suspected of murder-suicide. A postal employee kills 14 co-workers in Oklahoma, then kills himself.

Are these bloody cases of mayhem isolated, or is the phenomenon of mass murder a growing nightmare for society?

Those who have studied the minds, methods and motives of such killers say the recent spate of murders doesn't signal an epidemic. However, they warn that factors such as an aging baby boom generation and a growing rootlessness may yield a crop of multiple killers.

"Mass murder is still a rare phenomenon and it's hard to make predictions about the future," said James Fox, a criminologist at Northeastern University. "But over the decades, there has definitely been an increase in this type of crime."

Dr. Park Dietz, a psychiatrist at the University of Virginia and a consultant to the FBI's National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime, also believes mass murder is on the rise.

"I've been resistant to calling it an increase, but I think there's no avoiding the fact there is an increase," he said. "The numbers are becoming convincing to me as a skeptic."

Fox and Northeastern sociologist Jack Levin, co-authors of "Mass Murder — America's Growing Menace," analyzed 364 cases of mass murder from 1976 through 1985. The researchers defined mass murder as killing four or more victims within a short period of time.

The pair say there are three mass murders in this country, on average, each month. They estimate 1,772 people died in these cases over the 10-year period, but the number pales when compared to the approximately 20,000 homicides in the United States each year.

Mass murder is not a well-studied subject. The FBI collects crime statistics on murderers, but it does not break out figures on multiple killings. Murder usually is within the jurisdiction of local authorities.

Fox and Levin delved into the FBI statistics and scoured newspaper indexes of the past 50 years for mass murder cases. Fox says 1966 was "the onset of the age of mass murder."

That was the year Richard Speck strangled and stabbed eight student nurses in a Chicago apartment and Charles Whitman killed his wife and mother, then climbed a campus tower at the University of Texas in Austin and shot 14 others dead. "Richard Speck and Charles Whitman stunned the nation," Fox said. "They called Speck's murders the crime of the century. Nowadays it's happening all the time."

Analysis of the mass murder cases have toned down the image of a psychotic who suddenly runs amok. In 75 percent of the cases, the victims knew their killer, almost always a white male who often planned the killings for weeks.

Fox and Levin cite four other common threads running through most mass slayings:

- The killer was familiar with firearms.
- There usually was some precipitating event, like the loss of a job or divorce or separation from a spouse.
- The killer led a life of frustration filled with menial jobs and real or imagined slights.
- The killer had few outside contacts with friends or neighbors who might help vent the growing rage.

Prostitutes are having tough times

AUSTIN (AP) — The capital city is bucking its reputation as an easy town for prostitutes, and the AIDS scare, a depressed economy and aggressive law enforcement have made times tough for massage parlors and escort services, authorities say.

An influx of prostitutes from around the country peaked in 1984 and 1985 because they heard Austin was lax in its enforcement of prostitution laws, police Sgt. Gene Freudenberg said.

Managers brought carloads of prostitutes to work the streets, and clients came from throughout Central Texas, he said.

But in the past 1½ years, the vice squad has arrested more than 650 people on prostitution-related charges, Freudenberg said.

"As soon as the out-of-towners (prostitutes) found out that the heat was on, we'd give them a friendly invitation and they'd move on," he said.

For prostitutes who haven't moved on, business has become tougher.

"You used to see more than 20 girls on Congress between Oltorf and Ben White. Now I'm about the only one crazy enough to do it," Nina, 26, a prostitute who has been working in Austin eight years, told the Austin American-Statesman.

"It's dead," said the woman, who asked that her real name not be used. "If you see a girl on Congress, she's either lost or an out-of-towner, and she won't be out there long."

The economy has also decreased the number of clients somewhat, but the fear of AIDS is a major factor, she said, adding that many men now say they are just too scared to engage in sex with prostitutes.

"People are a lot more careful now, too. A lot of the guys bring their own condoms now," Nina said.

Vice officer Terry Payne agreed that AIDS is making customers more cautious. But he said many are still out there willing to pay the cost, medically and financially.

"The depressed economy cut it (prostitution) down in a round-about way, but normally, they're going to find the money if they want to do that," Payne said. "Everytime we've done 'john stings,' there's been no shortage of clients."

In the past 18 months, the vice squad has made 21 arrests for aggravated promotion of prostitution, or running an establishment that has two or more prostitutes; 24 arrests for compelling prostitution, or forcing or threatening of a juvenile to participate in prostitution; 29 arrests for promotion of prostitution, or acting as a prostitute's pimp; and 415 arrests for prostitution, or offering or agreeing to engage in sex for a fee.

Approximately 100 of the arrests were of men accused of offering female undercover officers money for sex.

Officers also have made 163 arrests for pedestrian in roadway, a charge sometimes filed when someone who appears to be a prostitute entices or flags down a driver.

Half of the establishments targeted by vice officers — such as massage parlors and escort services — have also been shut down in the past year, Freudenberg said.
