Freezing drizzle, snow threatening Panhandle

40

From Staff and Wire Reports

With patches of snow and ice still on the grounds and roads from the Christmas Day snowstorm, Pampa area residents braced today for another onslaught expected to drop even more snow and ice from cloudy skies.

The National Weather Service in Amarillo issued a freezing drizzle advisory for today with a winter storm watch for tonight and Wednesday

The NWS said there's a 40 percent chance of measurable precipitation today; mostly from drizzle and snow flurries, increasing to 60 percent chance of snow tonight with 3 to 5 inches accumulation expected as an arctic cold front plunges across the region.

There's another chance of more snow Wednesday, with additional accumulations of 2 to 4 inches, indicating a possibility of up to 9 inches from locally heavy

snowfalls, an NWS spokesman. said today

Highs for the Pampa region today and Wednesday are expected only to reach into the mid 20s, with overnight lows in the mid teens. Temperatures will be running 20 or more degrees below normal, but lows are not expected to reach record levels. Wind chill factors, however, will drop below zero degrees with southerly to southeasterly winds at 10 to 20 mph.

The early morning fog and drizzle in below freezing temperatures were already creating slick streets and roads in the area. with more hazardous driving conditions expected to increase during the day and into the night.

The Pampa Police Department reported two minor accidents before 9 p.m. The interstate near McLean was reported to have extremely icy and hazardous condi tions, with at least one accident occurring around 8 a.m.

A major ice storm is possible across North Texas, the National Weather Service said in issuing winter storm watches for a vast area of North Texas and West Texas.

A winter storm watch is in effect tonight and Wednesday for the Panhandle, South Plains, Permian Basin, Concho Valley and western portions of North Texas. And a winter storm watch is in effect for central portions of North Texas Wednesday, when the ice storm is possible.

The NWS issued a special statement to residents of North Texas, urging them to stockpile heating fuel and food and be prepared to use emergency systems such as lanterns for light in case of power outages

"Unless things change, this one (winter storm) looks dangerous, the NWS' Fort Worth office said in a statement issued early today

The storm could approach the scale of the ice storm that paralyzed a vast area of North Texas on New Year's Eve 1978 and Jan.

Few surprises as Gray candidates file

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

The '88 campaign officially got underway today as the filing deadline for candidates passed at 6 p.m. Monday

The deadline brought few surprises locally, but several new candidates in statewide races affecting Pampa.

Races without incumbents attracted the most candidates. A decision by U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, to give up his seat and run for the U.S. Senate has brought nine candidates into the race to replace him.

Boulter will face Georgetown businessman Ned Snead, former state Rep. Milton Fox of Austin and Houston businessman Wes Gilbreath in the GOP primary.

Incumbent Sen. Lloyd Bentsen meets San Antonio college professor Joe Sullivan in the Democratic primary

State Rep. Foster Whaley's decision not to seek re-election in the 84th District has drawn four candidates hoping to replace the Pampa Democrat. And in the 31st Senatorial District where Democrat Bill Sarpalius is hoping to move up to Boulter's vacant U.S. House seat, five candidates have filed

Locally, Gray County Democrats will décide three races county commissioner in Precincts 1 and 3 and tax assessorcollector, Gray County Republicans fielded one candidate each for those three positions, and a constable candidate in Precinct

The five-county 31st district attorney race, where incumbent Guy Hardin of Shamrock is stepping down to run for Wheeler County Attorney, has drawn only one candidate — assistant prosecutor Harold Comer, 54, of

The primary election will be held March 8, called Super Tuesday because a host of southern states will be selecting party nominees for president on that date. Any runoffs are scheduled for April 12, while the general election is slated for Nov. 8.

Offices up for grabs in Gray County, and the candidates seek ing them, are

Two area counties will be choosing among opponents for sheriff, while District Attorney Guy Hardin, who announced intentions to retire last July, isn't ready for private life yet.

Hardin, 63, is running for Wheeler County attorney. The Shamrock resident, who has been district attorney for Gray, Wheeler, Roberts, Hemphill and Lipscomb counties since 1982, faces incumbent Wheeler County Attorney Kent Sims, 42, of Wheeler in the March 8 Democratic primary have another challenge March 8 when they must choose among five Democratic candidates for sheriff. One-term incumbent Sheriff

Lonnie Miller, 54, faces a reelection challenge from Shamrock police officer Randy Bond, 28; Wheeler County employee Joel Finsterwald, 31; rancher Jimmy Adams, 41, and welder Carl Carter, 61. Adams opposed Miller in the 1984 general election for sheriff. There are no known Republican candidates.

Another heated sheriff race has developed in Carson County, where four Democrats and one

Incumbent Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed, 78, will be challenged in the Democratic primary by two of his deputies, Terry Timmons of Panhandle, 27, and Jerry Gaines of Groom, 55, and by Panhandle Police Chief Charles (Chuck) Flemins 47 White Deer Marhsal Tam Terry, 32, a co-owner of B & B Solvent, is the Republican sheriff candidate.

Incumbent District 88 Representative Dick Waterfield, R Canadian, is unopposed in his reelection bid. District 100 Attorney David McCoy of Childress is also unopposed.

In Wheeler County, a four candidate race has developed in the Democratic primary for Precinct 3 commissioner. Incumbent Cloyce Hanner is not seeking another term. Candidates hoping to replace Hanner are Shamrock rancher Brian Close, 56; Shamrock rancher W.H. Riley, 54;

Shamrock rancher Dan Macina and Wheeler County road employee Teddy Pope, 40.

Incumbent Precinct 2 Constable Jerry Bob Jernigan, 45, faces a re-election challenge from Ronald Settle of Shamrock, Wheeler County candidates with no Democrat primary opposition are incumbent Tax Collector-Assessor Jerry Hefley, 44, and incumbent Precinct 1 Commissioner Elmer Ray Harrison, 35. County Republican Chairman Richard Hefley could not be reached this morning.

Roberts County incumbents remain almost unchallenged in their re-election bids. The only race to develop is between incumbent Precinct 1 Commissioner William Clark and semi-retired well serviceman Rudolph Rank in, 60, in the Democrat primary Tax Collector-Assessor Carol Billingsley, 45; Sheriff Lando

World banks help rency from tumbling is to raise interest rates. But

WASHINGTON (AP) — Direct intervention in currency markets by the Federal Reserve and other central banks appears to be a factor in the dollar's rebound from post-World War II lows, but analysts suggest the respite might be temporary

Wednesday

The dollar strengthened on most international markets Monday amid reports of heavy buying of dollars by the Fed, the Bank of Japan, the German Bundesbank and other central banks

The intervention appeared to be in line with an agreement by the seven major industrial nations late last month to coordinate exchange rate policy in an effort to stem the dollar's sharp fall.

Intervention is the direct buying of a currency in this case dollars — by an official bank. The impact on currency prices can be significant.

However, even with their vast resources, central banks are limited in what they can do.

The amounts of money that central banks can pump into the system are tiny compared with transactions on foreign exchange markets that can reach $200 billion a day

"Even though central banks can coordinate intervention day-to-day, they do not have enough ammunition to fully counter the negative psychology of private investors toward the dollar," said David Jones, a senior economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a New York based government securities dealer.

Economists also say the Fed's flexibility is severely limited given its apparent reluctance to prop up the dollar with higher interest rates.

The dollar has fallen more than 50 percent since early 1985 against the Japanese yen and the West German mark A weaker dollar makes U.S. exports more competitive and can help ease the nation's trade deficit. But too sharp a decline can rekindle inflation, first by driving up import prices and then by giving U.S. manufacturers more leeway to raise prices. The usual way for a government to keep its curwill jeopardize what is shaping up to be a weak first half" of 1988 The dollar, which had fallen to record lows against other major currencies in the final week of 1987, rose decisively on Monday after the reports of intervention by central banks. In Paris, Finance Minister Edouard Balladur said there was a "secret clause" in a Dec. 23 currency stabilization agreement calling for intervention in currency markets when the dollar fell below a certain level.

U.S. Treasury officials refused to comment on Balladur's statement, but his comments made public what traders already had surmised.

The official December statement by the "Group of Seven" industrial nations declared further declines in the dollar would be "counterproductive" to world economic growth.

That statement hinted, but did not specifically state, that the seven nations — the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy — would intervene in currency markets to support the dollar. At the time of the statement, the dollar was worth about 1.673 German marks and 126

Japanense yen. On Monday, the dollar rose to 1.58 marks and 122.6 yen in New York trading, up from 1.57 marks and 121 yen last Thursday. It also was up in Asian and European trading and its rebound was cited as a factor in Monday's 76.4 point rally in the Dow Jones industrial average

GOP, Demos finalize ballots

AUSTIN (AP) — Former state Sen. Lloyd Doggett is back in politics, and all major Republican and Democratic presidential candidates have filed in time for Texas' March 8 primary elec-

Doggett, now an Austin lawyer. surprised many Democrats by filing Monday as a candidate for the party's nomination for Place 1 on the Texas Supreme Court.

Former Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado was the last major Democratic presidential candidate to file. His campaign paid the $4,000 fee a few hours before the 6 p.m. Monday filing deadline.

Former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont also filed Monday to fill the slate of Republican presidential candidates. The GOP requires its presidential candidates to file by submitting petitions with at least 5,000 signatures.

Doggett was immediately criticized by another candidate in the Place 1 Supreme Court race, former Congressman Jack High-

"I have been talking to Texas voters about my candidacy since June 1. Doggett's hasty decision somewhat deprives the electorate of an opportunity to thorougly examine his credentials and reason for seeking the Democratic nomination," Hightower said. But Doggett said voters know ful 1984 bid for the U.S. Senate. "My campaign rests on my record and one word -- fairness. I expect to act as a judge that will assure justice and fairness for every Texan, regardless of social status or economic condition," him well after his 11-year Texas

Senate career and his unsuccess-

Doggett said. Doggett, 41, served in the Texas Senate from 1973 to 1984. In 1984, he won a bitter Democratic primary for U.S. Senate over then-U.S. Rep. Kent Hance and former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger, but lost the general election to Republican Phil Gramm.

Texas has joined 13 other states in participating in the "Super Tuesday" regional presidential primary this year. Texas is the largest state taking part in the super primary and will send the third-largest delegations to both party national conventions this summer.

GOP presidential candidates who filed were Vice President George Bush, Pat Robertson, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, former Secretary of State Alexander Haig, and du Pont.

Democratic presidential candidates filing included Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, and Hart.

Others seeking the Democratic presidential nomination are political extremist Lyndon LaRouche Jr.; David Duke of Metairie, La., who said he is president of the National Association for the Advancement of White People; Norbert G. Dennerll Jr. of Columbia Station, Ohio, who listed his occupation as educator; and W.A. Williams, 61, a Dallas oilman.

State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle said, "I could have done without Lyndon LaRouche and Duke. They kind of put a little trash on the ballot. That's what I think of their viewpoints."

In a top statewide race, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen filed for reelection to the office he has held since 1971, while four Republicans seek the nomination to oppose him. Also filing for the Democratic Senate nomination is Joe Sullivan, a San Antonio college professor.

"I don't think anybody's going to beat Lloyd Bentsen - Democrat or Republican," Slagle said.

One of the Republicans, Amarillo Congressman Beau Boulter, told a Capitol news conference Monday that the GOP needs to mount a full-scale challenge to Bentsen.

"I know that Lloyd Bentsen is almost an institution in Texas and that the self-appointed political wizards and so-called experts say that it can't be done. But I have overcome the political odds before, and I intend to do it again," Boulter said.

Others seeking the GOP's Senate nomination are Ned Snead, a Georgetown businessman; former Houston state Rep. Milton Fox, and Wes Gilbreath of Houston.

For the first time in four years, voters will see candidates on the ballot for the State Board of Education.

That 15-member panel has been appointed since the House Bill 72 school reforms took effect in 1984. But because voters last year rejected a proposal to keep the panel appointed, the board reverts to an elected body at year's

Also filing Monday were candidates for Congress in all 27 Texas districts, the Texas Senate, Texas House, Railroad Commission. Texas Supreme Court and the Court of Criminal Appeals.

However, it took only minutes for him to come in for criticism from a Democratic colleague.

State District Judge Thomas Phillips of Houston was sworn in as chief justice Monday by outgoing Chief Justice John Hill, who resigned halfway through his six-year term.

Phillips, the only Republican on the nine-member court, immediately was criticized by Justice Oscar Mauzy for holding his swearing-in ceremony in the House chamber rather than the Sup-

Man charged with capital murder in fatal fire

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - A 19year-old man has been jailed on capital murder charges in connection with a fatal fire sparked by a neighborhood feud, author-

Roland San Roman was being held late Monday in lieu of $250,000 bond set by Magistrate Quon D. Lew Arson investigators arrested San Roman at his home in the same housing project in which 5year-old Kara Holmes died early Sunday. Capital murder charges were filed because San Roman is accused of setting a fire with the intention of hurting or killing someone, Ortiz said.

Authorities believe San Roman used a cigarette lighter to ignite a mattress, which had been propped up against a window that was broken by vandals last week.

The girl's mother, Lynn Holmes, told police Sunday that former neighbors, who were evicted from the project after she complained about harassment, had stolen her checks and food and had attacked her children.

"I was told later on, 'Don't forget them because they would get even with you worse than you got them," "she said. "People are scared to get involved here. They know what will happen - revenge, like this.

San Roman is a friend of the evicted neighbors, Ortiz said.

Ms. Holmes said when the fire erupted about 3 a.m. Sunday, she went to a neighbor's home to call apartment to awaken her 11year-old brother, Daniel.

The girl thought her mother was still in the unit and wanted to go back downstairs after her, Ms. Holmes said.

The boy escaped through a second-story window, but the girl remained inside. She was found underneath a bed and had suffered second-degree burns over 75 percent of her body, officials

"She wouldn't go with him, so he went ahead and went out the window," Ms. Holmes said. "She probably got scared and panicked

The fire caused an estimated $20,000 damage.

Dead cats and other animals have been tossed through broken windows, neighbors said.

'They used to do her a lot of damage," said Eunise Camirillo, who lives next to the Holmes family. "I told her that they're going to end up killing her or one of her kids. Now they killed the little girl.

Housing officials said they will move the family to another home in the project complex.

an intensely partisan Democrat when he was a state senator, told a news conference that holding the ceremony at the Capitol, where the Legislature meets, "blurs further ... the distinction between the three branches of govern-

He said Phillips himself described the ceremony as 'non-traditional and unprecedented.

After swearing in Phillips, 38, Hill commented briefly on his support of a so-called merit - or appointed - system for selecting judges, instead of the current elective method.

Mauzy said Hill's remarks were out

Hill said in leaving the court he was more convinced than ever that Texas needs to adopt an appointive system. "I truly believe that most Texans, most lawyers and most judges think that the present system of selection, with its dependence on massive contributions from lawyers and litigants, gives an appearance of impropriety that must be removed," Hill said in a speech. Mauzy said, "I regret very much that he (Hill) chose a traditionally nonpolitical event to continue this political contest which he has chosen to pursue."

Mauzy, an opponent of the appointive system of selecting judges, described Hill's comments as a "political grandstand play" in a "war that has been going on for some time.' Phillips was appointed by Gov. Bill Clements to the Supreme Court after Hill announced his resignation. On Monday Hill said, "Gov. Clements and I have not agreed on very much during our political lives, but I think Gov. Clements deserves praise for the careful, studious manner in which he selected Chief Justice Phillips.

Clements, in his first term after defeating Hill for governor in 1978, also appointed Phillips as judge of one of four new Harris County courts created by the Legislature in 1981. Phillips ran unopposed for election in 1982 and 1986.

He has said his desire to be on the high, court can be traced to his service as a law clerk in 1974-75 to then-Justice Ruel

Walker, who later retired. Phillips has a bachelor of political science degree from Baylor and a law degree from Harvard.

He, too, says he thinks judges should be appointed and then run to hold their positions, based on their records, as is the case in such states as Missouri. But he did not mentioned that issue Monday

He said in a speech that judicial power, "like all power, is most effective when restrained.'

Hill, 64, is moving to Houston and will be associated with the law firm of Liddell, Sapp, Zivley & Hill, with offices in-Austin and Houston.

He was secretary of state from 1966 to 1968 and attorney general from 1973 to 1979 before losing the governor's race to

Boulter raps

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Republicans should try hard to defeat Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and not simply field a token candidate, says Amarillo Congressman Beau Boulter.

"I think the way you build a party and build values and represent values and try to change things ... the way you do that is to take on the incumbent," Boulter said in launching his campaign Monday for the GOP Senate nomination.

Boulter said state Republican officials are wrong if they think this election year will be similar to 1982. Then, Republicans challenged Bentsen only to see a Bentsen-led Democratic Party sweep the ballot and oust incumbent Gov. Bill Clements, the first Republican to hold that post in a century.

'This is not a 1982 year," Boulter said. "There are some Republicans — and I just have to respectfully differ with them — who do not want an aggressive campaign against Senator Bentsen. They fear his colossal strength.

Also seeking the GOP Senate nomination are former state Rep. Milton Fox, an unsuccessful Railroad Commission candidate in 1986, and Georgetown businessman Ned Snead, who's making his first bid for public office.

Asked about Fox's candidacy, Boulter said, "I will respectfully differ with any Republican who supports a person who says he's not going to run an aggressive campaign against Lloyd Bentsen ... He (Fox) says that his campaign will be low-key and not aggressive. I'm not a token candidate.

"He'd better get his facts straight," Fox said. 'I'm certainly not running a token campaign. I don't give 10 months of my life to tokenism.

But Fox, in a later interview, disagreed.

Boulter first was elected to Congress in 1984, defeating incumbent Democrat Jack Hightower. That was the same year Texas elected Republican Phil Gramm to the Senate, and Boulter said he expects to win Gramm's support before the primary

"I fully expect you will see Phil Gramm endorsing me not only in the general election — that wouldn't be a big deal — but also in the primary-,"he said. "I think you'll see Phil Gramm actively supporting me in the primary.

Boulter said he wants to serve in the Senate to continue his fight against tax-and-spend Democrats - among whom, he said, is Bentsen, who heads the Senate Finance Committee.

"Nobody has argued more forcefully for tax increases than Lloyd Bentsen. He, after all, is the one senator who has the most say about our nation's

Man, later slain, mailed letter with names of 2 men who might kill him

CORSICANA (AP) — Last July, a Corsicana man mailed a letter to two men, accusing them of robbing his residence nine months earlier and demanding a return of the stolen items.

Dwight Bradley also warned the men in the letter that they should not try to harm him because he had made copies of the letter that would be turned over to authorities if anything happened to him.

Bradley was murdered a few days later, although it was more than four months before his remains vere found, and authorities said they are looking for the two men the victim named in his letter. No arrests have been made.

As promised, Bradley made copies of the letter. Bradley's attorney, James Paul Barklow of Dallas, turned over to authorities a copy he said he received last July 27 from another attorney that Bradley had left the letter with.

Bryan Dunagan, chief deputy with the Navarro County sheriff's department, said Bradley was reported missing on Aug. 4, eight days after Barklow got his copy of the letter.

Bradley reportedly borrowed a car from his brother-in-law to run errands and never returned, officials said. The car was found burned on an Ellis County road.

A witness told police he saw the vehicle in flames and heard what he believed to be three or four gunshots coming from the site, Dunagan told the Corsicana Daily Sun. Law enforcement officers recovered a shotgun shell at the location.

More than four months later, on Dec. 7, a man collecting aluminun cans along a service road off Interstate 45 near Rice, a community 10 miles north of Corsicana, found skeletal remains that later were identified as Bradley's

His family made tentative identification by clothing and four gold teeth, and officials added their confirmation two days before Christmas.

The letter is a piece in a bizarre puzzle that authorities have been trying to put together since Bradley's body was discovered.

'(Dwight) said he was going to get his 'stuff' back from the guys that took it. He said he left letters with people in case anything happened to him," Barklow said.

Bradley's letter was written to two of the three men he felt took part in the Oct. 2, 1986 break-in of his home. Dunagan said.

"I want the Money and Jewelry you stole from me and I can not get back at you for what you done to my mother," reads the letter, which was released Monday by investigators.

"If anything happens to me this letter has been Xeroxed twenty times. It has also been given to ten lawyers and other people. If anything happens to me they will notify the Police and the F.B.I.

"I am not trying to get you in trouble I just want what belong (sic) to me. And the Lord will take car (sic) of the rest.

Bradley also wrote "I know about the Judge you killed" and another man.

Law enforcement officials have not been able to find any record of such murders, Dunagan said.

Bradley himself was awaiting trial on murder charges when he disappeared. He admitted fatally shooting Horace Hunton, the third man he suspected in the robbery of his residence. Bradley also believed Hunton "fingered him" for a robbery seven years earlier, Barklow said.

Plane crash, fire kills one person

MIDLAND (AP) — The pilot of a twin-engine plane died in the fiery crash of his aircraft that slammed into the ground after striking power lines and erupting into a ball of flames, authorities

Melvin Leon Anderson, 49, was flying the Cessna 414 plane, which went down northwest of the Midland Airpark airport Monday. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe

Anderson was the craft's only occupant, officials said. The crash caused a small grass fire and temporarily knocked out power to about 1,300 area homes, officials and witnesses said. "It just disintegrated." said

Lee Fisher, 41, who lives about 150 yards from the cotton field where the plane crashed. "Nobody in the plane walked away.' "It went straight into the ground," he said. The crash was reported at 9:49

a.m., Midland Fire Department dispatcher Lloyd Dunagan said. Three fire trucks and one ambulance were sent to the scene, he said. The fire was reported out by 10:20 a.m.

The plane, owned by a local businessman, took off from Airpark without incident heading for Ruidoso, N.M., but was flying east when it suddenly lost altitude, struck the power lines and slammed into the ground, said Midland Department of Airports spokeswoman Marcy Blauvelt.

Activist: Utilities owe Texans $500 million in excess taxes

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas ratepayers could get immediate refunds of more than half a billion dollars in overcollected taxes from electric utilities under a measure pending in Congress, according to a consumer watchdog group. The money was collected by utilities before the federal tax rate on utilities was lowered from 46 percent to 34 percent in 1986, Joseph Kriesberg, an energy analyst for Public Citizen, said Monday. The House Ways and Means Committee is to consider a bill this year that would allow state regulators to order the money to be returned through immediate refunds, which now are prohibited by federal law, he said. "That money belongs to ratepayers and should be refunded immediately," Kriesberg said. Current law allows utilities to take up to 30 years to make the refunds, he said. Public Citizen said overcollected tax money that could be refunded immediately if the bill passes includes $84 million at Central Power and Light Co., $198 million at Houston Lighting & Power Co., $119 million at Gulf States Utilities, $196 million at Texas Utilities and $43 million at El Paso Electric

But Graham Painter of Houston Lighting & Power said Congress made an in-depth study before deciding to allow delayed refunds to consumers. The funds cited by Public Citizen are tax deferrals given to businesses for investing in construction. Painter said. Because the money has been invested, utilities would have to borrow money to make immediate refunds, and ratepayers would

'Utilities don't have bank accounts sitting around with that money in it ... It would have to all be financed, and that would be a cost of business and would end up in electric rates," Painter said. A staff task force at the Public Utility Commission is studying whether any electric utilities are now overcollecting taxes, PUC spokesman Bill Dunn said. The commission considers the current federal tax rate when deciding on utility rate increases, he

Kriesberg also released a new report saying it may cost more than $1 billion more a year to operate Texas' unfinished nuclear plants - the South Texas Nuclear Project and Comanche Peak than estimated by the industry.

Painter disagreed, citing a study by the Washington-based Utility Data Institute that says nuclear plants cost less to operate than coal, oil or natural gas plants.

Gorbachev hasn't turned from Lenin

The Dec. 7 Gorbachev-Reagan summit recedes into the past, but its legacy remains. To judge it in perspective, and to understand Gorbachev's motives in starting a new round of detente, we should turn to the words of Vladimir Ilich Lenin, the first Soviet dictator. Gorbachev quotes Lenin at every turn, and Lenin remains the major idol of all Soviet society and policy

Lenin was especially perceptive when writing about how to deal with the West. In 1921 Lenin sent a memo to Georgy Chicherin, commissar of foreign affairs. With our emphases added, the letter reads:

'Following my direct observations during my years of immigration (in the West), I must conclude that what one calls the cultivated circles of Western Europe and America are totally incapable of comprehending either the present situation or the real correlation of forces.

'These circles must be considered deaf mutes. The revolution never develops in a straight line or by uninterrupted exchange; revolution consists of a series of accelerations, sudden brakes, attacks, truces and periods of relative calm, during which the power of the revolution reinforces itself and prepares itself for final victory. ... given the long length of time required for the growth of a world socialist revolution, we must resort to special maneuvers that can accelerate the ultimate victory over capitalist countries.

"A. Announce, with a view to reassuring the deafmutes, the fictitious separation of our government and government organs, on the one hand, and the Politburo — especially the Comintern — on the other. The Comintern (Communist International, the old name for the Kremlin office that controlled international Communist activities) must be clearly categorized as an independent political group whose presence is merely tolerated within our borders. The deaf-mutes will believe this.

'B. Express our hope to establish immediate diplomatic relations with all capitalist countries on the basis of total non-interference in their internal affairs. The deaf-mutes will believe us again. They will even be delighted and will throw their doors wide open. Through these doors will enter the emissaries of the Comintern and our secret service under the cover of diplomatic, cultural and trade representatives. To tell the truth is a pretty bourgeois habit, whereas to lie is justified by our objectives.

The capitalists of the whole world and their governments will close their eyes on the kind of activities I have described and will become blind as well as deaf-mutes.

They will extend loans which will provide us with the equipment and technology we lack and will thus help rebuild our military industry which we need to launch subsequent victorious attacks against our suppliers. In other words, the capitalist nations will always work to prepare their own

Protectionism not an answer

A few years ago, with the U.S. economy in a recession, the dollar strong and American auto companies deep in the red, Detroit got the federal government to cut the flow of Japanese im-

Today, with the economy in the sixth year of a recovery, the dollar at historic lows and the Big Three gobbing up big profits, the auto industry still demands Washington's help against foreign competition. Its attitude is: "Protectionism is the answer. Now, what's the question?"

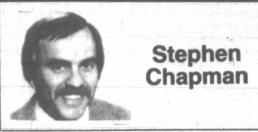

Back in 1981, under intense pressure from the Reagan administration, the Japanese government decided to limit its exports of autos to the United States, which had grown dramatically in the 1970s. Those limits were supposed to last only three years. But now, Ford and Chrysler, along with the United Auto Workers, are demanding that Washington take new steps to reduce auto imports.

Here lies a lesson about protectionism — or, rather, several lessons.

The first is that it has no reasons, only excuses. It has nothing to do with promoting fairness or helping the economy or "levelling the playing field" or any of the usual pretexts used to justify it. It is simply a ploy to enrich the executives and workers of the favored industry.

The second is that it doesn't achieve the noble goals it is supposed to. The argument here was that the Big Three needed a respite from ruinous competition, during which time they would revamp to beat back the Japanese challenge. That got a sympathetic hearing in 1981, when U.S. automakers were being battered by two unwelcome developments: a severe recession and the shift in demand toward small cars caused by the 1979 oil crunch.

But despite all the helpful changes since 1981.

the American industry still isn't willing to risk a fair fight. The strong dollar did make exports more expensive and imports cheaper, putting the Big Three at a big cost disadvantage. In 1981, at prevailing exchange rates, Japanese auto makers could produce a car for $1,400 less than their U.S. rivals.

But the dollar has dropped precipitately from its peak, obliterating the advantage enjoyed by Japan. Today, it's Detroit that has a substantial Another lesson is that however elusive the benefits of protectionism, the costs are large and inescapable. The primary effect of these voluntary export restraints" was to force up prices on both foreign and domestic cars. The typical new car now costs $13,520, some 78 perent more than in 1980.

After allowing for inflation, that's the equivalent of a tax of nearly $2,300 on every new car with the proceeds going to Japanese as well as American manufacturers. Even people who never buy new cars suffer: The high prices raise the demand for used cars, which boosts their prices as well.

These costs are often forgotten in the rush to revive a failing industry and save its workers' jobs. But they far exceed the benefits.

estimated in 1983 that every auto workers' job saved by these restrictions cost consumers $160,000 — this for jobs that typically paid a quarter that amount. We'd have been better off if, instead of saving their jobs, the government had paid the same workers their full wages to do nothing

The picture drawn by Crandall may actually overestimate the help to workers. His Brookings colleague Clifford Winston says that U.S. automakers responded to the easing of competition not by selling more cars, but by selling fewer - at higher prices. By 1984, he estimates, Detroit had produced 300,000 fewer vehicles than it would have without the trade barrier. The result was a loss of 30,000 jobs.

The only arguable benefit of the program was to encourage Japanese automakers to build plants in the U.S., thus providing new competition for the Big Three. Honda, Nissan and Toyota have proved they can make the best cars in the world with American labor. But Sen. Carl Levin, a Michigan Democrat attuned to the demands of the auto industry, now wants to limit sales from those "transplant" factories, since roughly half of their components are made

That makes every bit as much sense as restricting Japanese imports in the first place. Our venture in auto protectionism has produced higher prices for consumers while possibly destroying auto workers' jobs. Does it really deserve to be broadened?

General Motors is alone in calling for free trade, believing its cars can attract consumers regardless of what else the market offers. Ford and Chrysler have shown that their interest is not in learning how to compete with Japan, but Robert Crandall of the Brookings Institute in assuring that they'll never have to.

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 5, the fifth day of 1988. There are 361 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Jan. 5, 1896, an Austrian newspaper, Wiener Presse, reported the discovery by German physicist Wilhelm Roentgen of a form of radiation that became known as X-rays.

On this date:

In 1589, Catherine de Medici of France died at the age of 69.

In 1781, a British naval expedition led by Benedict Arnold burned Richmond, Va.

In 1895, French army Capt. Alfred Dreyfus, convicted of treason, was publicly stripped of his rank. He was later declared innocent

In 1925, Nellie Tayloe Ross became the first woman to become governor of a state as she took office as governor of Wyoming, finishing the term of her late husband.

Questions on privacy vs. right to know

By SARAH OVERSTREET

Gary Hart's re-entry into the presidential race heated up an ongoing discussion I've waged with several of my friends since he dropped out in May.

I use the noun "discussion" because we've been civilized about it; they like me and respect my opinions, and I like them and respect theirs. But I use the verb "wage" because, at times, the discussion hasn't been too pleasant.

My friends didn't like the press's coverage of Hart, and I didn't like Hart's reaction to it. I was disgusted at the way he whined and blamed the press, instead of owning up to reck-less judgment. I use the word "judgment" instead of "behavior" because I think his recklessness in judgment says more about moral character and fitness to lead than his behavior does.

I've always thought of the political arena as a considerably heated kitchen, one you ought to stay out of if you can't stand a charred image. Hart knew the rules, yet he thumbed his nose at the political watchers and dared them to catch him doing something he knew would rile some voters.

But my friends are as appalled at the invasion of Hart's privacy as I was at Hart's press-blaming. They don't like the idea of journalists staking out Hart's townhouse. And they don't like reporters asking "Have you ever committed adultery?" any more than Hart liked answering the question. It made their skin crawl.

I don't think I'll ever fully agree with my friends, because I'll never get over the idea that the presidency is the most important job in the nation, and that having a full portrait of a person gives me a better idea of who to endorse for the job. Nearly 30 years later, John Kennedy's daring womanizing makes me furious - as in Hart's case, not so much for the deeds themselves, but for his nose-thumbing That conveyed a sense that Kennedy thought he was the most powerful man in the United States who could do whatever he pleased, and the rest of us just better not be so disrespectful as to say anything about it. Why should I not assume that that attitude carried over into every decision he made?

Yet my friends' argument is compelling. Reporters hiding outside a person's house and asking such personal questions do tend to make the skin tighten. None of us would like the same questions asked of us, and sensitive people can't help but put themselves in Hart's shoes.

So what's a sensible compromise between the voters' right to know and a decent respect for privacy? Not one of my friends denies that overall character is a powerful statement of the measure of a person. I can't deny that I'd just as soon not have someone hiding in my bushes at night.

On one point, I can't fault my friends: They are as angry at the constant hammering Hart received from the press after the May revelations as they are at the reporting itself. They have a legitimate beef. The national media has behaved in recent years more like a pack of buffaloes all thundering after the same watering hole than independent tradespeople using their profession's "rules" to decide what information they have a responsibility to bring to the public. Sort of reminds you of the candidates themselves, all rushing herdlike toward whatever issues they believe will get

Gary Hart has said that the voters should decide, and he's right. I believe readers and viewers have the same responsibility toward what they receive from the media. Use that voting hand to flip the dial and turn the newspaper page

We don't have a free press unless every journalist asks the questions he or she believes are important to ask. But the public's demand for information - and its reaction to the ways that information is gathered and presented - has as powerful an effect on editors and news directors as the ballot has on politicians.

Thousands jam shelters as arctic cold moves in

By The Associated Press

Thousands of people jammed homeless shelters as an "arctic outbreak" of icy air and wind-whipped snow knifed into the Northeast today and continued to grip the nation's midsection, breaking records for electricity usage.

Western states, meanwhile, braced for a new storm after snow squalls on Monday piled up to 14 inches of snow on higher elevations of Oregon, California, Nevada and parts of Utah.

A storm that dumped up to 8 inches of snow on the Atlantic states headed offshore, but little relief from iceslickened roads was in sight as windchill as cold as minus 70 degrees were predicted for the rest of the week.

"Some areas in the East Coast are saying this is going to be the coldest since '78. It's the coldest I've seen it in the last three years," said Dan McCarthy, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Since Saturday, at least four deaths were blamed on the weather.

Temperatures plunged below zero across Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Iowa. The lowest temperature in the nation this morning was 25 below zero in Huron, S.D., and Warroad, Minn., slightly above Monday's low of 31 below in West Yellowstone, However, with winds gusting to 30 mph, it felt as cold as 64 below zero at Rochester, Minn., and 59 below at Mason City, Iowa.

"It's just an arctic outbreak," said Greg Dickey, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Chicago. 'We have a large area of arctic air that's been seeping down from the upper reaches of North America.'

Homeless people normally satisfied with heating grates and makeshift cardboard roofs swiftly crowded shelters in Chicago, Detroit, New York, Dallas, Des Moines, Minneapolis and Indianapolis.

"We're pretty full up," desk clerk Ernie Boling said about the Lighthouse Mission in downtown Indianapolis. "We have 55 beds in the back and 20 on the floor, and we're all full.

Police in New York City declared a cold weather emergency, meaning they could transport the homeless to the city's 26 shelters, which housed 9,775 people on Monday as 6 inches of snow fell on Commonwealth Edison Co., in Chicago said it set a record high for winter electricity usage between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. Monday with 12,258,000 kilowatts, shattering the previous record of 11,713,000 kilowatts set on Dec. 18, 1985.

People are using greater amounts of electricity for furnace motors, electric heat and heat pumps," said spokesman Ron Russell

Snow accumulations ranged from 2 inches in the northern mountains of North Carolina, up to 8 inches in eastern Massachusetts, and 7 inches in Connecticut, New York's Long Island and

The Pacific coast storm dumped a record 14 inches in Lovelock, Nevada, in 24 hours, surpassing a 93-year-old record of 9 inches

Two people died in traffic accidents on icy roads in Connecticut and Utah, while one person was found frozen to death in Illinois and a fisherman died off the northern California coast when his boat capsized because of the storm.

School board moves against controversial principal

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) -Protest chants and the singing of "We Shall Overcome" greeted school board members who voted to draw up insubordination charges against an inner-city principal renowned for get-tough policies.

The board voted Monday night to direct its attorney to draw up the charges against Joe Clark, a principal cited by the Reagan administration for improving his high school.

About 500 singing and jeering parents, students and other residents joined Clark at the meeting to back his methods, which include roaming the halls of Eastside High School in this aging industrial northern New Jersey city with a bullhorn and baseball bat.

He recently came under fire for expelling 60 students without notifying the board and for locking fire doors in violation of fire codes. He later readmitted the students under board orders

Clark said the expelled students were chronically failing and that he told them to get an education at alternative schools because they did not belong at Eastside. He said the doors were locked to keep out drug dealers.

Later Monday, on ABC-TV's 'Nightline," Clark said some of the expelled students were as old as 21.

"At some point you have to go to work and become a contributor rather than become a leech on the building, taking away from the educational process of other, younger people," Clark said.

The dispute surrounding Clark, who is black, once again focused national attention on Eastside High, a school of 3,000 students, mostly black or His-

U.S. Education Secretary William J. Bennett visited the school in 1986 and praised Clark's no-nonsense approach to educating minority students. Clark's methods also have the backing of many community leaders and the city's law-and-order-minded mayor, Frank Graves.

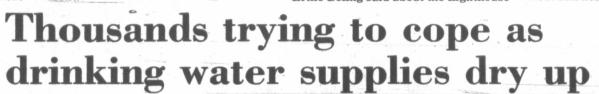

The school board, comprised of six white, one black and two Hispanic members, voted 7-1 with one abstention to order its attorney to draw up charges of insubordination and unbefitting conduct against Clark.

The board announced its vote after going into a private session to discuss the matter, a move that caused the audience to boo and yell "chicken." The crowd chanted "We want Joe!" when Clark entered the auditorium.

After the decision was announced, the Rev. Fred LaGarde, of the Community Baptist Church of Love, ran to a microphone and led the audience in singing "We Shall Overcome.

WEST ELIZABETH, Pa. (AP) - Dry spigots forced thousands of residents to buy bottled water or lug buckets from tank trucks in the aftermath of a million-gallon oil spill that shut off water in Pittsburgh's suburbs.

"I was shocked when I got home," said Judy Schramm, pouring water into a plastic eontainer from an emergency tank. "Not a drop came out of the spigot. Nothing. I just don't think people prepared enough.

Ms. Schramm, of Robinson Township, was among 23,000 area residents left without running water. Thousands more faced empty lines later today. Five of seven school districts that closed to conserve water Monday remained shut today, extending the holiday weekend for 18,000 students.

"It's really a bad situation. It's close to panicky,," said Joseph Facenda, senior vice president at Giant Eagle supermarkets, where bottled water sold out almost as quickly as it hit the shelves

On Saturday, a 40-year-old Ashland Oil Co. tank crumpled and spilled 3.5 million gallons of diesel fuel as it was being filled. A dike captured 2.5 million gallons, but 1 million gallons poured into the Mononghela River 27 miles south of Pittsburgh.

The Monongahela, which usually churns with commercial traffic, has been closed from the Ashland terminal to Pittsburgh since the spill. The Coast Guard hoped to re-open it today.

No existing water supplies were polluted. But water companies shut down their intake pipes from the Monongahela and Ohio rivers as patches of the clear, smelly oil flowed as far away as Newell, W.Va., 53 miles downstream.

'Most of our tanks are depleted. They're empty," said Robert Ross, vice president of Western Pennsylvania Water Co., which serves 750,000 people and had to close one of its two Monongahela River intakes.

About 10,000 West Penn customers in North Fayette Township were without water late Monday, as were 13,000 customers of the Municipal Authority of Robinson Township.

Ross estimated it would be "at minimum three to four days, more than likely five to six days. before the pump was turned back on. About 50,000 people would be immediately affected by a water shutoff.

"There will be a considerable amount of oil lost to the environment. Eventually, the oil will break up and go into a dilution state and totally dissipate out of the water," said Jerry Saseen, on-site coordinator for the U.S. Environmental Protection

It would take at least three or four days — possibly weeks — for oil to be skimmed off or diluted enough to meet federal standards that would allow water com-

Nozzle failure may stall space shuttle for another 10 weeks

WASHINGTON (AP) - NASA officials say it may be as late as mid-August before America's astronauts again fly into space.

Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Monday that the puzzling breakup of a rocket nozzle part during a test may add six weeks to 10 weeks to the delay in getting the shuttle Discovery off the ground

That could push the resumption of shuttle flights into mid-August, 2½ years after an explosion destroyed the shuttle Challenger and killed its crew of seven.

NASA at first hoped to be able to fly again in the summer of 1987. But the complexity of redesigning the shuttle booster rocket caused that first-launch date to slip steadily — to February this year and then to June 2.

The new failure has pushed that liftoff target even farther into the distance. A full-scale test firing of the redesigned booster on Dec. 23 was considered a success until engineers found pieces of an 8-foot-diameter "boot ring" inside the nozzle and on the ground outside.

The industry magazine Aviation Week and Space Technology said in its Jan. 4 edition that the most optimistic launch date is September and that shipment of the aft rocket segments to the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral, Fla., has been delayed until March 24 at the ear-

Five months is required to prepare a shuttle for flight after the booster rocket segments arrive by rail at Canaveral.

Morton Thiokol Inc., which builds the rockets in Utah, was to have shipped aft sections for the first flight by rail last Saturday, but the shipment was delayed. David Drachlis, a NASA spokesman at Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., said that if everything goes well, the shipment might take place in the latter half of February.

The boot ring, 2 inches thick and 7 inches wide, was used for the first time in the December test. The ring attaches a flexible boot that allows the rocket nozzle to swivel in flight.

"At this point, we know we are not going to use the component,' said Sara Keegan, a NASA spokeswoman. She said it wasn't certain whether a version of the ring that had withstood an earlier full-scale firing will be used in-

Of the delay caused by the latest problem, Ms. Keegan said, "Our best guess is somewhere in the area of six to 10 weeks. That's our best assessment of what the problem is going to entail.'

John Thomas, an official at the Marshall Space Flight Center, said through a spokesman that the delay will be held to the sixweek to 10-week range if the earlier design of the boot ring is used and everything else remains on schedule

Morton Thiokol officials said close examination of the testfired booster rocket showed no failures other than that in the rocket's nozzle. Company spokesman Rocky Raab said engineers picking apart the solid-fuel motor Monday found that the rocket's case-to-nozzle joint worked as designed, preventing gases from escaping.

Failure of a rubber-like O-ring seal in one of Challenger's booster joints was blamed by a presidential commission for leaking super-hot gases that ignited the explosion which destroyed the spacecraft.

Doctors Invent Lôse Weight

Guarantees Fast Weight Loss

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)-An amazing new weight loss pill called 'fat-magnet' has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly 'guarantees' that you will easily lose fat by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

No Dieting—Eat Normally Best of all, "you can continue to eat all of your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You will start losing fat from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight and figure you desire." There has never been anything like it before. It is a totally new major medical breakthrough for weight loss (worldwide patent pending)

Flushes Fat Out of Body The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in fat particles. Then, all that trapped fat is naturally "flushed" right out of your body because it cannot be digested. Within 2 days you will notice a change in the color of your stool as the fat particles are being eliminated.

"Pills Do All the Work" According to the doctors, the fat-o magnet pills do all the work while you quickly lose fat with no starvation diet menus to follow, no calorie counting, no exercising, and no hunger pangs. It is 100% safe. You simply take the pills with a glass of water before meals.

The fat-magnet pills have just been offered to the American public and are already sweeping the country with record sales and reports of dramatic weight loss. It's the "lazy way" to lose weight for people who enjoy eating.

Now Available to Public If you need to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these new highly successful fatmagnet pills (now available from the doctor's exclusive manufacturer by mail or phone order only) by sending $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$2 hand-ling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), cash, check or money order to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd. Dept. uspected Lebanese terrorist denies kidnapping

DUESSELDORF; West Germany (AP) - A Lebanese on trial for kidnapping two West Germans in Beirut today denied any role in the crime, but issued a statement in court calling for the release of the one hostage still held.

The statement by defendant Abbas Ali Hamadi was read to the packed courtroom by defense attorney Eckhard Hild. It called for the release of Rudolf Cordes, a West German businessman held hostage in Lebanon since Jan. 17, 1987.

"While the defense rejects any direct or indirect participation of (Abbas) Hamadi in the abduction of Cordes, the defense calls on the kidnappers to set him free immediately," Hild said.

Asked by one of the judges whether it was his statement. Hamadi responded in German: "I authorized him (Hild) to read that statement."

School hours are shifted due to air pollution

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Parents complained it is inconvenient to have to drop their children off at school at 10 a.m. - two hours later than usual — under a new government-decreed schedule for Mexico City public schools that will remain in effect for 45 days.

The later hours were implemented beginning Monday because of dangerous air pollution levels brought about by winter thermal inversions.

At 7,392 feet above sea level, Mexico City is in the Valley of Mexico, surrounded by mountains that normally impede air the free flow of air.

Officials concede that Mexico City, the world's largest metropolitan area with more than 18 million people, also has the worst air pollution.

The new schedule affects 1.4 million children attending primary and secondary schools in the metropolitan area, according to Public Education Department estimates.

On Monday, a dense gray smog cap under a blue sky was clearly visible to anyone looking out from downtown office buildings toward the north of the city.

Many complaints were heard from parents used to taking their children to school on the way to work. The national service of Excelsior newspaper also reported that confusion surrounded the change and many children were dropped at schools at the regular hour

Nemesio Zuniga, an office worker who commutes from his home in southern Mexico City to children must wait outside his office each morning until it is time to take them to school.

'Even if the government wants to protect the children's health. this measure only benefits those who live close to the schools, not those who live far away," Zuniga told a reporter. "And the children will breathe the air pollution anyway.

Teresa Juarez, a mother of two, commutes from the east of the city to work in the south. She said she normally takes her children to school each morning, but now must ask her sister to do so. "None of the working mothers in this office knows what to do,' Ms. Juarez said. "I have someone to help me, but what about the others who don't?

With holiday vacations ending Monday, the city's estimated 3 million vehicles - the leading source of air pollution — returned to the streets.

Thermal inversions occur when high cold air traps warmer air — fed by heat from asphalt and the city's buildings - underneath, along with pollutants emitted overnight by factories and

Court officials, speaking to The Associated Press on the condition of anonymity, confirmed the statement was Abbas Hamadi's.

More than two dozen police officers guarded the heavily fortified Duesseldorf courtroom, as the defendant beganfacing witnesses who are expected to include his brother, alleged hijacker Mohammed Ali Hamadi.

Shortly before the trial began, a group in Lebanon that is holding one of the West Germans Abbas Ali Hamadi allegedly kidnapped issued a statement in Beirut accusing West Germany of mistreating Hamadi's brother Mohammed, who is in Frankfurt awaiting trial on the hijacking charge.

The statement, which did not offer evidence of mistreatment, was from the Holy Warriors for Freedom and was delivered before dawn to a Western news agency, along with a snapshot of the hostage, Rudolf Cordes. The statement appeared to disprove earlier reports that Cordes would be freed soon. Officials at the trial had no immediate comment on the statement. The trial in Duesseldorf was held in a former police barracks gymnasium that was converted into a courtroom for leftist terrorists in the 1970s

Abbas Hamadi was shuttled to the courtroom in an armored police van, said Duesseldorf court spokesman Klaus Forsen.

Although the defendant is charged with kidnapping two West Germans to win freedom for his brother, his trial also will explore Middle East terrorism and may provide firsthand views of the hijacking of the TWA jetliner in June

Mohammed Hamadi was allegedly involved in the TWA hijacking which left an American sailor dead. U.S. authorities want the 23-year-old Shiite on suspicion of masterminding the 1985 TWA hijacking to the Lebanese capital.

Thirty-nine Americans were held hostage for 17 days before being released. The jet was flying from Athens, Greece, to Rome when it was hijacked.

West German authorities say they will try Mohammed Hamadi on similar hijacking charges in Frankfurt, although no date has been set and no indictment has been issued. West Germany's refusal to extradite Mohammed Hamadi to the United States led to strains between Washington and Bonn. Mohammed Hamadi was arrested at carrying explosives.

Abbas Hamadi, 29, is charged with taking two West German businessmen

Frankfurt Airport on Jan. 13, 1987, for hostage in Beirut, in an attempt to force West Germany to free his brother after his arrest.

According to the indictment in the Abbas Hamadi case, the defendant helped arrange the Jan. 17, 1987, kidnapping of Cordes and the abduction of Alfred Schmidt three days later. Schmidt was freed Sept. 7.

A third Hamadi brother, Abdul Hadi Hamadi, is security chief in Beirut for Hezbollah, a radical Shiite group close to Iran.

Court officials say he also participated in the kidnapping.

Abbas Hamadi was arrested at Frankfurt airport on Jan. 26, 1987, after returning to West Germany on a flight from Beirut. He is charged with trying to blackmail the West German government, hostage-taking and having illegal explosives.

Opposition: Sandinistas are holding up regional peace plan

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Opposition leaders in Nicaragua said they would tell an international commission visiting Managua today that the Sandinistas have failed to take steps needed to comply with a regional peace plan.

The commission began its six-day trip Monday in Costa Rica, one of five nations covered by the plan and the only one fully at peace.

In Managua, where the panel planned to meet today, 14 opposition political groups issued a statement Monday accusing the government of failing to live up to the accord. They said 1988 had begun on a "somber" note because of that.

The critics include editors of the opposition newspaper La Prensa, and Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, the Roman Catholic primate who has mediated cease-fire talks between the government and U.S.-financed Contra rebels

Two negotiating sessions in the Dominican Republic failed to produce more than a brief Christmas truce, and no further sessions have been scheduled.

The commission was to spend two days in Nicaragua, during which Obando y Bravo said he would present a document outlining what government opponents see as the Sandinistas' failure to bring about peace.

The panel also was to hear testimony from both warring sides.

After visits to Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador, the commission will present the results of its findings at a summit Jan. 15 in San Jose. The presidents of the five nations then must decide whether to pursue the plan, signed Aug. 7, or abandon it as unworkable. In addition to ceasefires, amnesties and greater democracy in Central America, the peace plan calls for an end to all outside aid to insurgent forces in the region.

With only 10 days to go, the plan appears to be in serious trouble and the presidents are likely to extend its deadline for compliance by several months

If that take that step, it would be the second deadline extension. The first deadline, Dec. 5, was pushed back when it became clear that full compliance by then was impossible.

The Reagan administration indicated it would probably object to another deadline extension. President Reagan delayed asking Congress for $175 million more in Contra aid, largely at the insistence of Democratic leaders who urged him to give the peace plan time to work.

The peace plan is in trouble not only in Nicaragua but in El Salvador and Guatemala. An 8-yearold civil war continues in El Salvador, and Guatemala has not been able to achieve a cease-fire with a small but determined band of leftist insurgents that has been fighting the government for 20 years.

The accord was devised by Costa Rica's president, Oscar Arias, who won the Nobel Peace Prize last year for his efforts.

The international commission is made up of representatives of the United Nations, the Organization of American States, the eight so-called Contadora nations of Mexico, Colombia, Panama, Venezuela, Argentina, Brazil, Peru and Uruguay and the five Central American countries

Firefighters scream for more ice cream

EL PASO (AP) — When a fresh group of rookie firefighters graduates from the training academy, veterans know they're going to get a good dose of fire 'n' ice cream.

Every time a firefighter does something for the first time like going on a first run, or making his debut behind the wheel of a fire engine — his colleagues shout, "Ice cream!" and he has to treat the whole fire station with the frozen dessert

Any firefighter who makes a minor error has to do the same. Rookies end up making the most purchases for the crews of the city's 25 fire stations...

'I had to buy three half-gallons of ice cream for my first 10 shifts. That was 25 years ago," Deputy Chief Albert Williamson said.

No one remembers when or why the tradition started. Shorty Williams, a retired district fire chief, said the custom was in full force when he joined the department in 1949. A firefighter who made a mistake had to buy sodas for everyone, and "on your second offense of the same nature, then you had to buy ice cream for the whole station," Williams said. "I first goofed when I missed a

Analyst: Changing dietary habits means lower egg consumption

WASHINGTON (AP) - The legendary ham 'n' eggs breakfast is gradually giving way to lighter fare among many health-conscious Americans, and Agriculture Department experts say the trend is hurting poultry producers.

"Americans are reducing their consumption of eggs, pulling down egg prices," economist Jack S. Ross says. "A recent report by a governmentsponsored panel of health specialists recommends that doctors monitor their adult patients' cholesterol level and prescribe corrective diets for risk cases.

Ross continued: "If doctors heed this report, there is no doubt it will hurt demand for highcholesterol foods, contributing further to the longrun decline in egg consumption.

Older Americans in the 50-plus age group are the greatest consumers of eggs, he said. They were brought up by parents who often ate eggs for breakfast.

But younger people, the baby-boomers, consume fewer eggs, probably as a matter of preference, Ross said. Therefore egg consumption is expected to decline in the future.

The U.S. per capita consumption of eggs was around 251 eggs last year and could dip to 246 eggs, on the average, in 1988. Since 1975, when the average dropped to 276, per capita egg consumption has been at the lowest levels since USDA began keeping records in 1909.

Ross said wholesale egg prices this year may average 59 cents to 65 cents a dozen for Grade A large eggs in cartons on the New York City market, compared with an estimated 62 cents last year.

"Production costs likely will be a little higher than 1987's 62-cents-per-dozen average," he said. 'Hence, the outlook for the industry is not bright.' Ross noted that the egg industry can expand output fairly quickly when prices go up. Producers operating below capacity can increase production forced molting. Since 1980, annual production of table-type eggs has been around 5.2 billion dozen, and little change is expected in 1988, he said.

rapidly by keeping older hens longer through

"Even though egg prices have been weak since last spring, the industry shows no inclination to curtail production," he said. Only about 1,800 producers own flocks of more than 10,000 laying hens, compared with approximately 6,000 commercial owners a decade ago, Ross said. The trend will continue toward fewer and larger egg producers as stronger operations buy out inefficient and financially pressed operations, he said.

H. Conner Kennett, director of poultry in the department's Agricultural Marketing Service, said egg production this winter is up about 1 percent from a year ago.

Thomas and Ray, right, warm themselves in front of a trash can fire outside their open shack

A shack is home of two men, a warm bed is their dream

CHICAGO (AP) — When frigid wind rattles the home of Harold Thomas and Tommy Ray, they pull their coat zippers a little higher, push their hands in their pockets a little deeper and pray for warmth a little longer.

They can't throw a rug to stifle the draft. There are no windows to slam shut.

Thomas, 35, and Ray, 37, live in an open shack along the Chicago River. It's built with rotted wood, discarded sheet metal, grimy canvas — and the hope that some day they'll have money to put a real roof over their heads.

'It's not much, but it's our home," said Ray as he invited a visitor to sit in a rusty chair. "It's the only home we have,"

he said Monday. The men are among Chicago's estimated 25,000 homeless. But unlike those who crowd city "warming centers" and overnight shelters to escape singledigit temperatures, Thomas and Ray choose to survive outdoors just west of the downtown Loop. They're tired of roaming the streets, and they distrust strangers found in the shelters. So for nine months, they've lived in a shack in a small lot filled with trash and rats.

A friend lives a few yards away in a cardboard box

"This is the second time I've been homeless," said Thomas, a carpenter who hasn't had fulltime work in more than a year.

'Some people say 'get a job," he added, tossing more wood on a roaring fire that sends ashes and termination and courage," Ray sparks around the filthy shack. "I'm willing to work. I just need a might as well go lay in the snow place to clean up. Look at me -I'm a mess.'

Each has a scraggly beard and wears layers of garments. Thomas' boots have holes while Ray's toes are chilled in vinyl

For meals, they often chew doughnuts washed down with water stored in a plastic jug.

"I've lived in shelters, abandoned buildings, abandoned cars, abandoned trucks. You name it," said Ray, a house painter who has lived on the streets since 1981. "I complain a lot. I made my bed hard, so I've got to sleep in it, but it shouldn't be this hard.

Their misery is contrasted by the area's prosperity.

Just north of the shack is the sparkling heaquarters of Montgomery Ward and Co., and the printing plant of the city's largest newspaper, the Chicago Tribune. To the east is the East Bank Club where wealthy members pay thousands of dollars to stay in

Above the shack are tracks used by trains carrying commuters between Chicago and the

"They seem friendly," Ray said of the passengers who often return waves. "But I can't say they're concerned."

The men don't know how long they plan to live outdoors. They don't have a permanent address, so they can't receive public aid.

They want full-time jobs. "The thing that we have is desaid. "Because if we lost that, we

FORT WORTH (AP) - A muchpublicized $5 million settlement agreed to between Priscilla Davis and her ex-husband, T. Cullen Davis in a wrongful death suit, is no longer a settlement, Priscilla Davis says.

The announcement of the nonsettlement came Monday night during a meeting of the Fort worth chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Priscilla Davis, who spoke at the meeting about her plans to write a book and sell a screenplay about her life, said the settlement is off because Davis and his lawyers broached the agreement by announcing details of the settlement to the news media.

The settlement had been in a personal injury and wrongful death suit Priscilla Davis had filed against her ex-husband in connection with the shootings at the Davis mansion Aug. 2, 1976.

A man dressed in black shot to death Andrea Wilborn, 12, Priscilla's daughter from a previous marriage and Stan Farr, a former Texas Christian Unviersity basketball player, who was identified as Priscilla's lover.

Wounded in the shooting spree were Priscilla Davis and a houseguest, Gus "Bubba" Gavrel.

Priscilla Davis, Gavrel and another witness, Beverly Bass, all identified Cullen Davis as the man in black.

Cullen Davis was acquitted in •the Wilborn slayiung in a 1977 trial in Amarillo.

A civil court jury in Fort Worth last year deadlocked 8-4 against Cullen Davis in a $16.5 million suit brought by Priscilla and Andrea's father, Jack Wi'lorn.

Davis, once considered one of the world's wealthiest men, later filed for bankruptcy and was relieved of $850 million in debts in bankruptcy court last Dec. 2. On Dec. 16, Eddie Roush Jr., a lawyer for Cullen Davis, announced that a $5 million settlement had been reached with Priscilla

'There is no deal," Priscilla Davis said Monday night. "We're dropping it. There is no settle-

"Unfortunately, they (Cullen's lawyers) chose to go to the press. By doing that, they violated the agreement," she continued. "We're going back to court. The. end of the movie has not been

6-year-old hospital volunteer a big hit Cars everywhere

DALLAS (AP) — At 96 years old, Harry Foster doesn't worry about remembering people's names any more.

He just makes them up. "He's a great kidder," Sandy Stuart said of Texas Scottish Rite Hospital's oldest volun-

'He'll always come up to the female employees and call them by some other name,' said Ms. Stuart, who makes out Foster's weekly work schedule. "He stares right at my name tag and then says, 'Hello, Matilda.' That way he doesn't have to remember everyone's name.

A frail-looking man with a shiny forehead, Foster musters his best grandfatherly charm one day a week, greeting children undergoing treatment at the hospital. His gentle manner calms the kids and helps them forget why they are there, his co-workers say.

You'd think at 96 he'd want to just come here and rest," Ms. Stuart said. "But he won't. He loves to work. It seems like he has to be busy all the time.

The bespectacled Foster says he refuses to be confined to a rocking chair for the rest of his life, like some people his age.

"Anything is better than sitting at home not doing anything, just watching the TV," he

Foster began working at the hospital last fall, soon after he moved from Canton, Ohio, to live with his son in Richardson. Most of his six-hour days are spent behind a desk compiling informational packets for hospital pa-

Still, in between stacking and sorting, he manages to sneak time with the children.

"I love visiting with the kids," he says "But some of the little ones are so small I can't see them from behind the counter. And then some of the other ones, they have so many toys to play with here that they just don't-want to be bothered. That's all right, though.'

A father of three, he says he always has had a "soft spot" for children.

While selling real estate in Ohio in the 1930s, Foster said, he met a little girl who was ill and took time out from his job to take her to a doctor because her mother did not have car.

"I saw her a few months later," he said, teary-eyed. "Her mother said the doctor pulled 13 teeth from her head. Said she would have been buried if I hadn't gotten her to a

Retired Americans find bargains in Mexico

CUERNAVACA, Mexico (AP) - Retired Americans living in Mexico find their dollars go a long way, despite soaring inflation that rapidly eats away the gains made from the steady devaluation of the peso currency.

Most Americans who have retired here, whether longtime residents or newcomers, caution that the going is easy only for those who can count on a steady income in dollars arriving from outside Mexico.

And they say it helps to be a bit adventurous and prepared for surprises that greet those living in a foreign land.

"The person who is willing to pull up roots is, age and all, a person with a certain amount of flexibility," says Dasha, a psychologist who is a native New Yorker but a resident of Mexico since 1939. She uses only one

Dasha said that most of her clients see her to "re-evaluate" their decision to live outside the United States, and that in the past few years more have come to discuss events in light of Mexico's continuing economic up-

The onset of the economic crisis in 1982 included a freeze on all dollar accounts in Mexican banks, a traumatic experience for many Americans who retired in Mexico.

Real estate values plummeted with the fall of the peso, which traded at 26 to the dollar in 1982. Now the rate of exchange is more than 2,200 pesos to the dollar. Stories abound of people who bought luxury homes for $300,000 and then were lucky to get $140,000 when they

"People who bought houses with dollars (before 1982) would like to get that back - and more," said Dr. Nan Platas, a native of Gainesville, Texas, who has been practicing in Mexico for some time. "So some people are trapped here.

The peso-dollar comparison is deceptive, however, because inflation also has run steadily in double- and triple-digit figures during the years of the crisis. Analysts say inflation will likely have exceeded 140 percent for 1987. A study done for The New York Times' travel section found prices for visiting Americans had not changed appreciably since 1985, despite the fall of the peso.

Even so, especially outside resort areas. bargains are available.

"If your money comes from the States, you're better off every day," said another longtime Cuernavaca resident, who spoke on condition of anonymity because he has business interests in Mexico. "Nowhere in the world could they live like this. ... They live like kings.

He said, for example, that he pays a maid $15 per week, down from the equivalent of $50 weekly before the economic crisis began.

The low cost of labor — Mexico's minimum wage went up to about $3.50 per day as of Jan. 1 — has spread the word in the United States that handicapped people and others needing personal care can do well in Mexico.

"One can employ a servant that will substitute as sort of a nurse or nursemaid," Platas

The 1980 Mexican census found 417,000 American citizens living in Mexico, but there is no breakdown on how many of them are retired Cuernavaca, in the mountains 45 miles southwest of Mexico City, is a favored spot for retired Americans. The actress Helen Hayes maintains a home in the city.

Other important American retirement colonies are found in San Miguel de Allende, Puerto Vallarta, Morelia and Acapulco. Without a doubt, the biggest such colony is in Guadalajara and at in its nearby Lake Cha-

The number of retired Americans "went down after (1982) for several years, and now it's starting to come back up again," John Roney, spokesman for the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara, said in a telephone interview. "It's more attractive now the last year and a

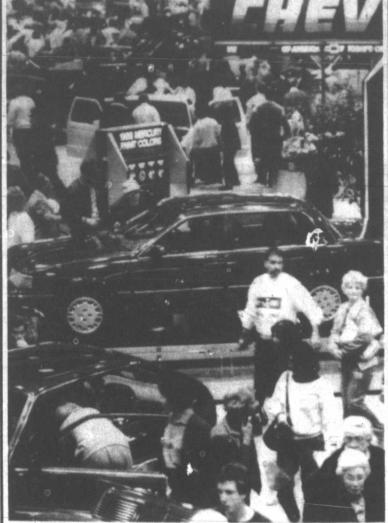

The consulate estimates 30,000 Americans live in the Guadalajara area.

By no means do all live well on a cocktail party circuit, with servants galore.

Jean Andersen, who is her mid-30s, works for the American Benevolent Society in Cuernavaca. She said she has worked with about 10 retired Americans this year, most of them "in their own little world" and with no one to visit them

"I'm sure there are a lot more than the 10 I know about," she said. "They keep coming

Soviets to add to space complex, study Mars

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet space officials plan to expand their orbiting space station this year and gather data on gamma radiation and Mars, a newspaper reported Vyacheslav Balebanov, deputy director of the Soviet Academy of Sciences' Institute of Cosmic Research, told the military newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda that one of the main goals of the Soviet space program in the next five years will be gathering information about Mars to prepare for a possible manned flight.

Balebanov said that the Soviets will take part in the international "Phoebus" probe of Mars and its moon. Phoebus, which is to be launched in July.

New modules to be attached to the Mir space complex will study the Earth, its atmosphere and the Pacific Ocean, he said.

The orbiting space station is home to cosmo nauts Vladimir Titov and Musa Manarov, who blasted off just before Christmas on a year-long

Last April, the Soviets docked the Kvant orbiting laboratory to the space station, and Balebanov's comments indicated that the space complex would continue to grow.

Another observatory, the Gamma-1, will be launched to carry out studies on gamma radiation, he said

Gamma rays are electromagnetic radiation emitted from a radioactive substance which are similiar to X-rays although they have a shorter wavelength.

Soviet scientists plan to use opportunities in 1992 or 1994 to send more probes to Mars to study its atmosphere and ground conditions for the eventual landing of a manned flight, he said.

Previously, Soviet scientists have talked about the possibility of a manned flight to Mars, which would take about three years, at the end of the

Routine company physical probes too deep for worker

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are both employed by the same large company. Recently we were required to take physical examinations for health insurance.

We were each given a question-naire to fill out. On the form was a section "for women only." The women were asked: "At what age did you have your first sexual encounter?" (The men were not asked this.)

I refused to answer it, and told the examining nurse that I thought it was nobody's business. She insisted it was "scientific and important to complete the report." As a matter of principle, I left that question unanswered, but I suspect the nurse filled it in for me so the questionnaire would be "complete."

that question? And of what possible use could that information be in a routine health examination?

A PRIVATE PERSON. ATLANTA

DEAR PRIVATE PERSON: Congratulations. You are also a thinking person. I would not have answered that question. It was inappropriate, irrelevant and an invasion of privacy.

Thank you for giving me this opportunity to again tell my readers that they are not obligated to answer a question in a questionnaire simply because it is asked. Leave a blank space, or write in "not relevant" to the questions you find an invasion of your privacy.

A registration fee of $5 will be charged per person or family.

MUSHROOMS — SELECTION AND CARE

The word "fungus" does not have an aesthetically pleasing quality, yet a large number of certain fungi are consumed by the American public each day.

mold with a cap, gills and stem. It has gained tremendous popularity recently, with consumption doubling in the past 10 years.

Mushrooms are classified as vegetables and are available fresh, canned and freeze-dried (limited), Fresh mushrooms are sized into three categories: Special, 11/4 to 11/2 inches in cap di11/4 inches in cap diameter; and Buttons, less than 1 inch in cap

Unlike other vegetables, size is not an indication of mushroom quality. Large ones are just as tender as the small ones, and they generally look more appealing; therefore, they command higher prices. The larger mushrooms ameter; Fancy or Mediums, 1 to are best for stuffing, while the smaller ones are great for slicing or chopping. Mushrooms with closed

"veils" pulled up tight around their stems are the freshest. However, they are still perfectly good for use after the veil has opened and the gills are exposed or even with an occasional bruise. Those with badly bruised or pitted caps should be avoided.

In the past, white mushrooms had been offered in the East and brown ones in the West. Now there are various shades from white to brown being marketed in all areas. It is important to remember that outside color has little relation to quality or flavor, as long as they are free of disease and have not turned black.

If mushrooms are purchased in film-sealed containers, they should be refrigerated in this carton until prepared. Puncture one or two small holes (pencil size) in the plastic film to insure air movement in the container. Wash mushrooms gently just prior to use and let drain or pat dry.

All of the mushroom is usable and should not be peeled. Mushrooms purchased in bulk can be refrigerated in plastic bags as long as there is proper air

Canned mushrooms are very handy and practical for most mushroom dishes.

ech offers chemical engineering course in

A graduate level chemical engineering course on corrosion control will be taught in Borger during the spring 1988 semester, offered by Texas Tech University.

"Special Problems in Chemical Engineering," a part of the university's Master of Engineering program (formerly known as the Flying Professor program), will convene at 5:15 p.m. Tuesdays at the Phillips Petroleum building in downtown

Instructor will be Tech faculty member Dr. Harry Parker. Classes begin Jan. 12 and will continue for 15 weeks

The course will be an integrated approach to corrosion of metals, ceramics and polymers. Corrosion problems from both the environment and from processing fluids will be included.

Prerequisite for the course is one year of college chemistry as taught to engineers or chemistry majors. Materials science and physical chemistry courses would be helpful but not essential.

For additional information about the course content, call Parker at 742-1760 in Lubbock. For information regarding the Master of Engineering degree program at Tech, call Mary Bacon, College of Engineering, 742-3451. The office of Ed Davis at Phillips Petroleum in Borger can supply information regarding local arrangements for the course; his phone number is 273-2831, ext. 1225.

Vietnam vets to meet Wednesday

BORGER — David Parkhurst will present a documentary film on the Vietnam War to members and guests of the North Plains Chapter of Vietnam Veterans of America at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 6, in the American Legion Hall near the Aluminum Dome in Borger.

Johnny Garrard, chapter president, said area veterans and the public are welcome to see the special film.

Garrard said the local group has obtained more than 40 signatures of Vietnam veterans to request a charter and affiliation with the national VA organization. Wednesday night will be the deadline to become a charter member of the local chapter, he said, but the group will continue its membership drive for the next few months.

Membership in the local chapter is open to anyone who served in the military during the Vietnam War era, 1964-75.

Garrard expressed appreciation to the local American Legion and VFW members for their contributions to the Pat Armstrong Fund. Armstrong was a victim of Agent Orange during his tour of duty in Vietnam, and has experience many problems as a result, Garrard said

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Oilers get no respect from the oddsmakers and other NFL teams, but that's fine with Coach Jerry Glanville. The Oilers, who will face Denver in the semifinals of the AFC playoffs in Denver Sunday, are once again the underdogs. 'I think that's great, and I hope the feeling continues," Glanville said Monday. "It's more fun to be the Rodney Dangerfield of the league and try to get respect in three more weeks.

Sunday in the AFC wild card game. They were underdogs against Seattle and they'll be even less of a favorite against the Broncos.

'We've only been favored in one game we've played all year, so we're just going for upset No. 10," Glanville explained. "We'd all be totally shocked if we were anything but underdogs. The Oilers were favored to beat Cincinnati, 4-11, in the regular season finale and they won 21-17. The Oilers hadn't had a winning season since 1980 and finished 5-11 the past two seasons until they rebounded to a 9-6 record this season.

have made the playoffs. They want more

We have a goal to win four games in this miniseason (playoffs)," Glanville said. "We're not thrilled just to be going to Denver. We are thrilled to go up there and have a chance to win.'

The Oilers led the injury-plagued Seahawks into the closing minutes but Steve Largent caught a 12-yard touchdown pass from Dave Krieg with 26 seconds left in the game, forcing an overtime

The Oiler defense that had contained the Seahawks throughout the game, stopped Seattle on three plays in overtime, allowing Tony Zendejas to kick a 42-yard field goal with 6:55 to go in the over-

Seattle's Curt Warner, the AFC's No. 2 rusher, missed the game with an ankle injury.

The comeback advanced the Oilers to Denver's Mile High Stadium where they'll face not only the Broncos but possibly icy weather.

"We can't give in to Denver or to any other conditions, including the weather," Glanville said. "We went to overtime (losing 13-10) in Cleveland last year and it was 9 degrees.

Will Earl Bruce be next SMU coach?

Bruce interviewed for SMU job

DALLAS (AP) - Southern Methodist University Athletic Director Doug Single says his interview with fired Ohio State football coach Earle Bruce does not mean that a decision is imminent on the selection of a new coach for the school's troubled football program.

Bruce was on the SMU campus Monday for the interview with Single, but did not meet with SMU President A. Kenneth Pye, Single said.

'Don't jump to the conclusion that if Earle Bruce is here today that we're going to name a new coach tomorrow," Single said. "He certainly will not be the only candidate we will talk to."

The new coach will replace Bobby Collins, who resigned during the final days of the scandal that led to the suspension of the school's football program by the National Collegiate Athletic Associa-

The school was given the NCAA's so-called "death penalty" for violating NCAA rules against paying players at a time when the school was on probation for previous rules violations.

The NCAA action suspended the Southwest Conference school's 1987 season and placed severe sanctions against the school for the 1988 season, prompting SMU officials to cancel any plans to resume play until 1989.

Bruce was fired at Ohio State only a few days before the end of the season after the Buckeyes had compiled a 6-3-1 season. Ohio State finished with a 6-4-1 season.

Bruce compiled an 81-26-1 record in nine years at Ohio State and had the best Big 10 record of any coach during his tenure with the Buckeyes.

Single has already interviewed Minnesota coach John Gutekunst, who apparently said he was not interested, and plans to interview several other candidates

The other candidates reportedly include former Kansas City Chief coach and Dallas Cowobys assistant John Mackovic and L.D. Bell High School coach Tim Edwards. Another coach mentioned for a possible interview is William & Mary coach Jimmye Laycock.

Single has said he plans to interview five or six candidates and hopes to name a new coach within two weeks.

Johnson next Cowboys' coach?

News reports draws rebuttal from Landry

DALLAS (AP) - A television report that Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry will resign and be replaced by University of Miami coach Jimmy Johnson drew a quick rebuttal from Landry.

The Dallas Times Herald reported today that a Miami television station had reported Monday night that Landry would retire and be replaced by Johnson, who coached the Hurricanes to the national championship in a season culminated by last week's 20-14 victory over the University of Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl.

Told of the report, Landry told the newspaper, There's nothing like a vote of confidence.'

Does Landry plan to resign? "If I'm going to resign, I don't know anything about it," Landry said. "I'll be at my office in the Landry was returning Monday from a weeklong vacation. He and the coaching staff will begin their 1987 review today.

Cowboys president Tex Schramm was also returning from a vacation in South Florida. But he said he has had no contact with Johnson a reaction," Schramm said. Schramm said he did meet Johnson at a cocktail party in Dallas about a year ago.

"That's the kind of report you don't dignify with Johnson, 44, told a post-Orange Bowl news conference he would consider leaving Miami for the right job, especially if the school toughens academic standards for athletes. He is reportedly being considered for an NFL head-coaching job, and attended Cowboys training camp last summer in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Johnson told WPLG-TV, in an interview aired Monday night, that he is happy with his current situation at Miami.

"Sometime in the future, I'd like to take a look at professional football, but right now, we have a great program at the University of Miami. We have some outstanding players," Johnson said. 'Maybe some day, down the road, I might look at professional football, but right now, I'm happy with Miami.

Temple routs Rutgers

College basketball

By The Associated Press

Tim Perry was recruited by Temple mainly for his defensive potential.

John Chaney, coach of the sixth-ranked Owls, said, "When we first got Timmy, there was no question he was going to be a great shot-blocker. We didn't anticipate his offense to come along like it has.

On Monday night, the 6-foot-9 senior forward scored 16 points to lead Temple to an 86-60 Atlantic 10 victory over Rutgers. More important, he became the 26th player in Temple history to break the 1,000-point plateau.

In other games involving ranked teams, it was No. 8 Oklahoma 109, Austin Peay 69; No. 9 Duke 101, William & Mary 70; No. 10 Purdue 81, No. 19 Illinois 68; No. 13 Nevada-Las Vegas 71, Long Beach State 68; No. 15 Florida 77, Towson 55; No. 18 Kansas 67, Washington 57 and Villanova 69.

No. 20 St. John's 62. Perry, who now has scored 1,003 points, also grabbed 10 rebounds and blocked four shots as the Owls raised their conference record to 4-0 and remained unbeaten in eight games this season, defeating Rutgers for the 11th straight time. It was a big night for Perry, made bigger because his brother, Lee, plays for the Scarlet Knights and a number of their family members were in the stands for the game in Philadelphia. I really wanted it bad tonight," Temple's Perry said. 'Playing against my brother and with my family here, I wanted to do it tonight.

The brothers were not matched against each other during the game, but Tim was uncomfortable playing against Lee.

"It's pretty hard playing against your brother," he said, You want him to do well, but you want your team to win.

Mike Vreeswyk had 17 points and Howard Evans 10 points and 10 assists for Temple, while Darren Campbell had 15 points for Rutgers, now 3-6 and 0-3.

No. 9 Duke 101, William & Mary

Danny Ferry's 26 points — 18 in the first half — helped the Blue Devils to their seventh victory in eight starts.

Kevin Strickland and Phil Henderson added 12 points each for the Blue Devils. Robert Brickey, making his first start of the season, scored 11 for Duke.

Jimmy Apple scored 21 to lead William & Mary, 2-7.

No. 10 Purdue 81, Illinois 68 Troy Lewis scored 25 points to pace Purdue in the Big Ten opener for both teams.

The Boilermakers, 11-1, led 32-31 at the half, then Lewis sparked a 9-4 spurt at the start of the second half with a 3-pointer.

The Illini, 9-3, fought back to within 41-40 with 16:30 left. But the Boilermakers went on a 14-6 spurt to remain safely in front.

He and Semanick, 20, of Bridgeville, Pa., also have limited their routines in deference to Gregory's condition. They eliminated all the lifts from their program, although they hope to do them at the Olympics.

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Felix Wright waited more than two years to become a starter for the Cleveland Browns before he finally took matters into his own hands.

Wright became a minor overnight sensation with two long interception returns against the Los Angeles Rams on Oct. 26. He became the Browns' starting free safety two weeks later. "I think that (Rams' game) was the turning point, because that very next game I was getting more playing time," Wright said after a workout Monday at Dodgertown, where the Browns are practicing for Saturday's AFC divisional playoff game against the Indianapolis Colts. Wright is the third player to start at free safety for the Browns since former first-round draft pick

Chris Rockins, a No. 2 pick in 1984, was Cleveland's free safety in 1986, and Al Gross started at that spot for the first four regular games this

But Gross injured a knee shortly after Wright's performance against the Rams, and Wright has held the starting job despite Gross's return to health a month ago. Rockins continues to get plenty of playing time at safety and linebacker.

'This is the first position I've ever started at in the NFL," Wright said. "It's something I always wanted to accomplish. I would get down and out, but I had people around me trying to help me keep my head up. This is a great feeling.

Wright, 28, joined the Browns in 1985 after three standout years with the Hamilton Tiger Cats of the Canadian Football League.

He was Cleveland's "nickel" back for two-plus seasons, entering games as the fifth defensive back in passing situations, until Oct. 26

In that game, Wright stopped one Rams' drive with a goal line interception that he returned 68 yards, and he took another interception 40 yards for a touchdown.

He got more playing time the following week against San Diego, and his first start came in a Nov. 8 victory over Atlanta.

Wright said the Browns always had confidence in his ability to cover pass receivers, but they weren't so sure he could play as well against the run as Rockins and Gross. "But now I've shown them I can come up and make the big plays against the Wright claims Pro Bowl cornerbacks Hanford Dixon and Frank Minnifield have accepted him as a member of the "Dawgs," the term coined by Dixon several years ago to describe the way Cleveland's defense hounds opponents.

Wright's ability to work against the run will be tested seriously again on when Eric Dickerson makes his third trip of the season to Cleveland.

Dickerson's last game as a Ram was the Monday night game in which Wright stole the spotlight. Dickerson then ran for 98 yards on 27 carries in the Colts' victory at Cleveland last month.

"There's no interest in revenge," Browns Coach Marty Schottenheimer said. "I think they played very, very well against us. We also hurt ourselves on a number of different occasions. But that was then, and this is about to be now."

Unseld named Bullets' coach

BOWIE, Md. (AP) - Wes Unseld admits he's not comfortable yet with being the head coach of the Washington Bullets. He's had only 27 games experience as an NBA assistant.

"It happened so quick. To be honest with you, I was asked a question and I gave an answer," Unseld said Monday after running his first practice at the team's training facility at Bowie State College.

Bullets owner Abe Pollin offered the job to Unseld on Sunday afternoon after meeting with team Vice Chairman Jerry Sachs and Vice President-General Manager Bob Ferry Ferry said that, at Sunday's meeting, it was decided "something had to be done.

'The team was not functioning as a unit," Ferry said. "It was really a case of 'It's the coach's job.' Hopefully, Wes can come in and blend the talents together."

He added that Unseld "brings a new dimension, a new look: Something fresh, something Unseld inherits a team, after expecting to improve upon its 42-40 record last year, that lost eight of its first 10 games this season and has already had three losing streaks of four or more games.

The Bullets lost 111-100 Saturday night to the Houston Rockets for their fifth straight loss under former coach Kevin Loughery. "I don't feel thrust into anything," Unseld said. "It was my decision (to take the job). I could have turned it down.

He met with the team for more than 30 minutes before Monday's

"I told them what I expected from them and what they could expect from me," said Unseld, who still looks much as he did when he led the Bullets to the 1978 NBA championship as a player.

Unseld hasn't given up on the 1987-88 season, but isn't about to rush into any changes

"At this point, there isn't enough time," he said."The only thing I've done is eliminate a number of plays. We're somewhat groping, but I've explained the way I envision this team having to play defense. I cut down the (offensive) plays to a select few so we can concentrate on execution.

Unseld said that changes will be made gradually.

Ditka says Bears will pull together

By PHYLLIS MENSING AP Sports Writer

LAKE FOREST, Ill. - Chicago Bears Coach Mike Ditka says some of his players may have lost confidence in him for a variety of reasons, but he has no doubt the team can pull together for the NFL playoffs. Talking with reporters Monday before the Bears left to practice indoors at Notre Dame, Ditka called this season "different" and tumultuous" for himself and the Bears.

Last week, Bears President Michael McCaskey was quoted as saying some of the players had lost confidence in Ditka, in part because of bad feelings remaining from the NFL players strike. McCaskey's comments came a day after linebacker Otis Wilson got into a shouting match with Ditka over play-

On Monday, Ditka was asked whether he would consider resigning if he felt people lacked confidence in him. "Sure," Ditka said.

Have the players, indeed, lost confidence in

"Oh, certainly," Ditka said. "I'm too tough on them, I guess.

Asked if that loss of confidence had increased since last year, Ditka said, "Sure," although he said he didn't know why. "We won two more games last year than we won this year," he said. "You have to talk to the other people, the principals involved," he said, when pressed again about reasons. "I mean, I'm just answering your question. I'm agreeing that there is (a loss of confidence) and that's all I'm going to say about it." Bears players didn't want to make an issue of it, either. Linebacker Mike Singletary said the McCaskey comments had been blown out of proportion and noted that controversy among the Bears was nothing new. Tackle Dan Hampton said the team doesn't want to be distracted from Sunday's NFL playoff game with the Washington Redskins. Ditka is leading the Bears into the playoffs for the fourth straight season, and has a 65-29

"I'll talk to you about that in February," he replied. "There are a lot of things going through my mind right now.

The coach was particularly upset last month when a San Francisco fan accused him of throwing a wad of gum at her after the Bears' 41-0 loss to the 49ers.

Ditka said he becomes concerned when people lose sight of what is important in the game, and sometimes gets upset when things go wrong. But he said the Bears can put the turmoil behind them. "I'll say generally that this football team knows what it takes to win and they want to win and they play hard," Ditka said. "And I'm proud of them for that."

What about the coach? "It's been different," he said. "I'm not going crazy. I've got all my facilities - contrary to a lot of public opinion. I'm OK." Perryton Lions Club to DALLAS (AP) - Republican presidential hopeful Pat Robertson said Monday he would like to avoid taking nearly $4.5 million in federal campaign funds, but doesn't know if he can afford to.

Speaking at his Texas headquarters-opening ceremony, Robertson said the matching funds due his campaign from voluntary $1 contributions on tax returns will be deposited in a separate account.

"It may be if the people are as generous as I hope around the nation in the next couple of months that I will be able to give that back. I would like to do that if I. can," he said.

But Robertson said he needs the money to overtake the campaign of Vice President George Bush. "I don't want to lose the election. The main goal is to win the presidency," he said.

Robertson said he is confident he can beat Bush in the Southern "Super Tuesday" primary, which he described as a winner-take-all contest.

Robertson predicted that the Republican winner of the March 8 primary will be the next president.

"So a lot is riding on what you are doing here today," he told the crowd of about 100 supporters, including his daughter, Elizabeth Robinson of Dallas, and his 21/2-year-old granddaughter. Catherine.

Texas has joined about a dozen other states for the Super Tuesday regional primary this year. Texas is the biggest state in the lot and will send the thirdlargest delegation to both party national conventions this summer.

Robertson, an evangelist who left his 700 Club television ministry to wage his presidential campaign, said he will try to present a "crystal-clear vision of how this nation can restore its greatness and moral strength."

The Southern Baptist minister from Virginia Beach, Va., criticized Bush for not indicating what he would do as president, although Bush supporters countered that claim.

"The vice president has certainly stated his goals and aims, as far as what he will be doing as president, better than any other candidate has," said Betty Doke, co-chairwoman of the Bush campaign in the Dallas area.
