Israeli troops attack worshipers in mosque

GAZA CITY, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP)—Israeli troops rushed into a mosque compound today to confront hundreds of stone-throwing worshipers after noon prayers. In a separate incident, troops killed one youth who stabbed a soldier.

The fatality brought to at least 36 the Palestinian death toll in nearly six weeks of anti-Israeli unrest in the occupied territories, according to U.N. figures. At least 200 Palestinians have been wounded.

An army spokesman said the stabbed soldier suffered moderate injuries. No other details on the attack and the killing were available.

Israeli officials, meanwhile, criticized an offer by Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, that he would recognize Israel if Israel and the United States took part in an international Middle East peace conference.

In discounting Arafat's offer Thursday, Foreign Ministry spokesman Ehud Gol said, "It's yet another demonstration of the double talk of Mr. Arafat. We never took these statements seriously in the past, and we don't take them seriously now."

Troops sealed off at least one mosque in Gaza and clashed with Arab protesters at a second after the noon service. In Arab east Jerusalem, soldiers fired tear gas to disperse protesters near the Temple Mount, holy to Jews and Moslems alike.

The clashes came after the Palestine Liberation Organization and Arab fundamentalists Thursday urged a day of mourning today for Palestinians killed in rioting.

Curfews remained in force in a dozen refugee camps in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, affecting about 250,000 residents, or one-sixth of the population in the territories captured by Israel from Egypt and Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war.

All stores were shuttered in a complete commercial strike in Arab east Jerusalem and Gaza City.

At Al Amari Mosque, the largest in Gaza City, troops rushed into the compound firing tear gas after more than 300 young Arab worshipers burst out of the mosque shouting "God is Great" in Arabic and pelting soldiers with rocks.

Many youths, whose heads were wrapped in checked Arab scarves, held photographs of PLO chief Yasser Arafat. Some threw stones at Palestinian onlookers, urging them to join the protest.

White clouds of tear gas hung over the compound as loudspeakers atop the mosque blared the message: "The army is surrounding you. Be ready." Troops were heard firing rubber bullets and at least three rounds of live ammunition.

After the army rushed the compound, six soldiers were seen atop the mosque and one Israeli sniper was poised on the rooftop of an adjacent building.

Officials at nearby Ahli hospital reported receiving two wounded by gunshot and at least three injured from beatings.

Allison trustees delay action on superintendent's contract

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

ALLISON — School Superintendent Dr. Nora Hutto remains uncertain whether or not she'll keep her job after school trustees delayed action on renewing her contract Thursday.

In a 6-1 vote at their regular meeting Thursday, Allison trustees agreed to table action on the annual renewal of the superintendent's contract, leaving Hutto's job in question for another month.

At their December meeting, trustees announced — at Hutto's request — the results of their annual evaluation of her performance. The evaluation is normally done in private and sealed in an envelope.

The trustees' evaluation recommended non-renewal of her contract. The trustees gave Hutto unsatisfactory ratings on personal qualities, staff relations, school board relations, and business and finance abilities. Hutto got satisfactory marks in communication, educational programs and administrative process.

No action was taken on Hutto's contract at the Dec. 10 meeting. The contract vote was due in the January meeting.

But, after the executive session Thursday, trustees reached no conclusions and voted to wait until Feb. 11 to decide. No discussion was held. Trustee Vance Boydston cast a dissenting vote.

Hutto remained silent after the vote and declined comment on the board's action.

But school patrons were not silent.

After the meeting adjourned, Allison resident Lewis Grayson challenged the board's "unsatisfactory" mark on personal qualities — a category which covers common sense, integrity, high moral character, enthusiasm and good grooming.

"Mrs. Hutto, as far as I'm concerned, is as moral as any of you all's wife, mine or anyone else's," Grayson said. "I served in administration for 30 years. I thought that was one of the lowest tricks that I ever saw pulled."

Trustee Mike Dyer defended the board action and stressed that the personal quality evaluation covered other areas than just

Local schools face shortage in state-mandated classrooms

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Pampa will be four elementary classrooms short of meeting a state-mandated class size of 22 students next year, according to 1988-89 enrollment projections compiled by grade school principals.

Reporting to the school board Thursday, Woodrow Wilson Principal Ray Thornton said Austin and Wilson schools will each be two classrooms shy of complying with the limit come September.

Texas House Bill 72, the state's landmark education reform package passed three years ago, imposes a 22-student maximum for kindergarten and first- and second-grade classrooms. The limit is scheduled to extend to third- and fourth-grade classrooms this fall.

Calling the situation "critical," Pampa school Superintendent Harry Griffith said the figures do not account for temporary growth expected with the rebuilding of the Hoechst Celanese Chemical Co. plant west of town. The plant was damaged by two explosions in November.

"We have some emerging classroom problems at the elementary level," Griffith said.

Griffith recommended appointing a committee made up of school officials, business people and parents representing each campus to study the problem. Possible solutions include:

- expanding existing buildings to accommodate more students.
- utilizing portable classrooms as a short-term answer.

- shifting the boundaries of existing elementary school districts. However, Griffith said the district wouldn't gain much by changing the boundaries.

- busing students away from their community schools. Under such a plan, Griffith recommended allowing students currently attending a school to remain there, and only busing new students who move to the district.

- reopening the Sam Houston School campus, currently used by Clarendon College for its Pampa Center. Griffith said such an option would have to include assurances that other space would be found for the community college to have classes in Pampa by making sure "we strengthen our relationship" with the college.

- putting a bond issue before taxpayers for construction of a new school. A bond issue is not realistic, Griffith said.

"Whatever we do, we won't need a bond issue," he said. "I don't think it's necessary under any circumstances."

Griffith also cautioned that many elementary classrooms are at maximum capacity now, meaning any growth spurt could require the district to seek out even more classrooms. Ideally, he said, schools should be at about 85 percent capacity to give principals flexibility.

"You don't want to underutilize a campus, but you don't want to overutilize it either," he said.

School Board President Joe VanZandt said he is surprised

Pampa firefighters keep watch on a gas fire spouting from underneath the ground near a sidewalk in the 1400 block of South Bond about 4 p.m. Thursday near Lamar Elementary School. The fire apparently erupted from a leak in a gas pipeline. Firemen watched the blaze until Energas personnel arrived to shut off the gas.

Officials commend handling of disaster at Pampa plant

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

State officials joined local and area officials in praising the handling of the Nov. 14 Hoechst Celanese plant explosion during critiques Thursday at the quarterly meeting of the Community Awareness and Emergency Response (CAER) Steering Committee.

Main theme of the remarks was that emergency response activities went fairly smoothly despite the unexpected explosions and the potential disaster situations that ensued.

Approximately 50 people, including committee members and guests, attended the luncheon meeting at Coronado Inn.

The two blasts on that Saturday afternoon two months ago killed three men and injured 37, with flames shooting 250 feet into the air and the shock waves shattering windows in Pampa six miles away.

State emergency management officials said much of the success in handling the disaster goes to the Pampa-Gray County CAER program, noting that it's one of the best in the nation.

Robert Landis, state coordinator of emergency management, said crisis management depends upon local planning and personnel. "We don't run problems from Austin," he said.

But the local disaster response was handled extremely well, demonstrating that Pampa "has one of the finest emergency training programs in the nation, and certainly in the state," Landis said.

"I wish all cities and counties were like this in the state," he said.

State emergency management training officer Don Freeman praised the local emergency response, saying much of its success is due to the training that Pampa has given its personnel.

"We have had a lot of trouble around the state, but in Pampa we don't have that trouble," Freeman said. "I don't know of another Texas city this size that's taken the training opportunities as Pampa has."

He said that when Pampa is accessed on the state computer, "it rattles and beeps almost endlessly" in listing all the training

Open house, markers dedication scheduled for City Hall

The city of Pampa will be hosting an open house at City Hall from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday in conjunction with the dedication ceremony for two historical markers.

The 2 p.m. dedication ceremony, featuring 11 present and past mayors, concerns two Texas State Historical Commission markers placed at City Hall.

The first, erected on a pole south of the structure, commemorates the establishment of the railroad telegraph station in Pampa in 1888, when the site was named Glasgow.

The second, located on the west side of the building, commemorates the completion of City Hall in 1930.

City Hall, which is also listed on the National Register of the U.S. Department of the Interior, was designed by W.R. Kaufman and built by H.L. Case and Co. Contractors.

The contracting company was owned by Harland Loran Case, the first baby born in Pampa. His parents were Samuel and Emily Case, the second family to live in the area. Case was the brother of Mrs. Thomas H. Lane, wife of the section foreman who first settled here in 1888 to run the railway telegraph station.

City Hall is recognized for its beaux arts style, which features triumphal arch entrances with classical detailing and pilaster elements around the perimeter.

Kaufman designed the structure with the Georgian style of architecture that originated in the United States before 1800. It includes bas-relief with decorative urns on the roof.

When it first opened in 1930, City Hall was also used as a community center. In addition to housing the city departments, it also contained the public library, welfare department and the Board of City Development. It also had an auditorium and rooms used for women's and civic clubs meetings.

City Hall is located on the center portion of the planned Albert Square included in the original 1902 city plat for Pampa. Albert

Square was designed to be one long block bounded on the east and west by Russell and Frost streets and by Kingsmill and Atchison avenues on the north and south. In later years, though, Foster Street was cut through the block and the one long block became two city blocks.

With the oil boom developing in the 1920s, City Hall formed a part of the so-called "million dollar row" of buildings erected in the vicinity of the Albert Square section. These other structures included the Schneider Hotel, the Pampa Fire Department Building and the Gray County Courthouse, as well as the Combs-Worley Building and Worley Hospital.

In the past two years, City Hall has undergone extensive renovation, including cleaning up of the exterior, removal of cluttered wires and pipes that had crept along the building side, installation of a handicapped accessible ramp and an elevator, remodeling of the interior and new landscaping and redesigning of the parking area around the building.

But the original structure has been retained, with restoration work bringing back much of its original glory.

Joining the city of Pampa for the dedication ceremony and open house will be representatives of the Gray County Historical Commission and Texas State Historical Commission.

Present Mayor David McDaniel will serve as master of ceremonies. Former mayors participating in the short ceremony will be Fred Thompson, 1940-1944; Ferris Oden, 1944-1947; Ed Myatt, 1959-1961; E.C. Sidwell, 1961-1963; Jim Nation, 1965-1969; Milo Carlson, 1969-1973; R.D. Wilkerson, 1973-1979; Ray Thompson, 1979-1983; Calvin Whatley, 1983-1985, and Sherman Cowan, 1985-1987.

Coffee and refreshments will be served in the City Commission Room on the third floor during the open house.

Schools

that Pampa doesn't face a larger classroom shortage next year.

Pampa is not alone in not having enough classrooms to go around. The Texas Education Agency reported this week that 121 school districts in the state aren't complying with the 22:1 ratio in kindergarten through second-grade classrooms.

Until now, TEA has granted exemptions to districts claiming they are unable to meet the requirements, but no exemptions will be granted after the current school year. TEA is considering waivers for districts that say they can't meet the additional requirements for third- and fourth-grade classrooms next year.

In other business Thursday, trustees began discussing next year's school calendar.

Under a preliminary proposal by Griffith, school would begin

Thursday, Sept. 1, and end Friday, June 2. Students would receive a 12-day break at Christmas, a four-day weekend in February, a five-day weekend at Easter and a series of six three-day weekends in March and April.

Griffith stressed that the proposal is only preliminary. He said the calendar would give the district enough flexibility to schedule snow days without forcing students to attend class on Saturdays.

Trustees Jim Duggan and Keith Teague were assigned to meet with staff members to come up with a school calendar recommendation.

Trustees also:
 ■ agreed to purchase two new buses to replace some of the aging fleet currently in use;
 ■ purchased paper products from Jim Walters Paper in Lubbock at $2 per ream;
 ■ met with Gray County Justice of the Peace Wayne Roberts to discuss implementation of a teen court program;

■ discussed the possibility of employing drug-sniffing dogs in school hallways and began planning a community-wide anti-drug effort set for March;

■ joined the Texas Association of School Boards legal assistance fund at a cost of $200;

■ learned that schools will have to re-tested for asbestos;

■ received a Texas Education Agency school accreditation report and the district's annual performance report for review;

■ recognized foreign exchange students; and

■ accepted the resignation of Debra Zahorsky (Wilson fifth grade), and the employment of Randall Stephenson (middle school math and computer), Deborah Robertson (middle school reading), Susan Birdsell (high school business) and Roberta Young (Wilson fifth grade).

"high moral character."
 Trustee Bob Dukes said that was the first time he had ever heard the rumor.

In other business, Principal John Schreiber announced results of the Science Research Associates test administered to students in grades 1-11 in fall. The scores were based on percentiles, or how well the students place against other students in the country who took the test.

First-grade pupils were graded on reading and math and received a composite score in the 79th percentile — meaning they did better than 79 percent of the rest of the first-graders who took the test.

Second-graders, who also took a language test, placed in the 87th percentile. Third-graders scored 80 and fourth-graders scored 91. Science, social studies and reference material usage tests were added for grades 5-10. Fifth graders scored 71 composite; sixth-graders, 91; seventh-graders, 88; eighth-graders, 93; ninth-graders, 86; tenth-graders, 72. Eleventh-graders were also tested on application of skills and received a composite score of 79.

Trustees also accepted the school performance report for the 1986-87 school year, after amending small parts.

Among the achievements noted in the report:

■ composite SRA results gained 22 points from 1985 to 1987.

■ formation of a faculty-community committee to begin reviewing material for a gifted and talented program, expected to begin in 1988.

■ a half-time librarian and aide began work and a new inventory was taken for the library.

■ installation of a new roof and carpet, repainted facilities and improvements to teacher housing.

Dukes questioned a performance report statement that taxes decreased in 1987. Hutto explained that the tax rate of 41 cents per $100 valuation is lower than the computed (effective) tax rate of 46 cents per $100 valuation.

Also questioned was the installation of mini-blinds, which trustees said were installed in 1987-88 school year, not the 1986-87 school year.

In other business, trustees renewed a contract with Hemphill County Appraiser James McCarty to collect school district taxes. The school will pay McCarty $16,433.

Hutto reported that 80 percent of school taxes have been collected. After deducting early payment discounts, the school has collected about $584,000 in taxes, she said.

Pampan injured in shooting

An east Pampa man was listed in satisfactory condition this morning at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo after being shot in the right arm and right side Thursday night.

Pete Rodriguez, 39, a resident of the Davis Trailer Park east of Pampa, was shot at the trailer park early Thursday night. Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said this morning.

Jordan said he and sheriff deputies have few details about the shooting other than that the Deputies Paul Ortega and Oren Roller responded to the call at about 8:55 p.m. Thursday.

"He was shot in the right arm and the bullet went through the arm into his right side," Jordan said, adding that deputies apparently didn't find anything at the scene of the shooting.

Officers do not have any suspects yet, he said.

"We are talking with other Hispanics to get information," Jordan said.

The sheriff said he remembers seeing Rodriguez at the sheriff's office Monday.

Rodriguez was brought to the emergency room at Coronado Hospital shortly after 9 p.m. by Rural/Metro Paramedics.

Borger pioneer dies in Stinnett

STINNETT (AP) — L. A. "Pete" Borger, who along with his brother "Ace" founded several towns in Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle, including the one that bears the family name, has died. He was 93.

Borger managed to survive a bounty on his head in the wilder days of the towns that bears his family name.

Borger, a native of Sarcoxie, Mo., moved to Hutchinson County in 1925.

In 1926, he and his brother started lot sales for the city of Borger. In 1927, they started the cities of Stinnett and Gruver.

Borger, who died Wednesday, told the Amarillo Globe-News in 1984 that he had heard there was a bounty on his head in the early days of the Borger township.

Graveside services for Borger will be Saturday in Peace Valley Cemetery at Anderson, Mo.

Survivors include a son, Roland Borger of Amarillo; a daughter, Marcella Hedgcock of Stinnett; four grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren.

In those days, he said, Borger was known as much for its crime as for its booming oil business.

His brother, "Ace," founder of the Borger township, was shot and killed by a Hutchinson County treasurer in 1934.

The Borger brothers began in the lumber business.

programs that have been taken.

Briefly discussing the training classes, Freeman said those who take advantage of the training "are more efficient government employees," especially when they take the training, gain expertise and "keep coming back for more."

"Pampa is a beautiful example of how CAER works," said Michael Scott, state Title III implementation officer. "You're a great example for what you're doing."

Scott said partnership among city and county leadership, industry and business is important for the success of any CAER program. That successful partnership here has enabled Pampa to implement an excellent CAER program, with the whole community benefitting, he added.

"There are just some nights you don't forget," said Amarillo-Potter-Randall Emergency Management Coordinator Walt Kelley, who discussed Amarillo's role in the response.

Kelley said the Amarillo office, in communications with Pampa, coordinated contacts with the Federal Aviation Administration, Civil Air Patrol and area Red Cross and Salvation Army personnel, in addition to helping supply needed generators.

"We just made ourselves available... we were there if needed," Kelley said, adding that Pampa and nearby communities responded so well that Amarillo did not have to send any large number of volunteers or equipment.

"Y'all have done a fine job and should be commended for it," he said.

Kelley said that area emergency response personnel are hoping to develop a regional plan to support local operations centers during such crises in the future.

Chemical Manufacturers Association representative Jack Coe of Deer Park, Texas, said Pampa is considered a leader in CAER throughout the nation.

CAER implementation "is a volunteer initiative," Coe said, adding that Pampa has taken a strong initiative in developing a highly successful CAER program.

Hoechst Celanese and local emergency response personnel also discussed the disaster and response. While agreeing the situation was kept very much under control, they noted some problems in communications, traffic and water availability. But in the overall reaction, those were minor problems.

Pampa Fire Chief J.D. Ray said that while the disaster was "a spectacular event, a spectacular explosion, a spectacular fire," there was "really no excitement" in the emergency response end since "it was all under control, everything went right and everyone knew their jobs."

In other business, the group accepted seven new members and tentatively set April 14 for the next meeting.

Woman says children forged signatures

HOUSTON (AP) — Teen-age temporary workers say a partner in a political consulting firm told them to sign other people's names on presidential candidate filing forms, two newspapers reported today.

Travel agent Penny Harmening says her two children Jay, 18, and Stacy, 19, were hired in late December through a temporary employment agency by a man representing Southern Political Consulting, the Houston Chronicle reported.

Mrs. Harmening said her children were hired to gather signatures on petitions required to qualify Republican presidential candidates for the party's March 8 primary.

Southern Political Consulting collected signatures for Sen. Robert Dole, former Secretary of State Alexander Haig and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont, who under party rules has to submit petitions bearing at least 5,000 valid signatures by Jan. 4.

The FBI has impounded Dole, Haig and du Pont's petitions and Republican party officials are conducting their own investigation, following newspaper reports last week that found signatures under names of Democrats, supporters of other candidates and dead people on some petitions.

The GOP decided to leave all six candidates' names on the March 8 ballot. But if a candidate failed to submit the required 5,000 valid signatures to qualify, votes he receives will go to the "uncommitted", ranks.

Meanwhile, the Dallas Morning News reported today that Jay Harmening and another unnamed youth, also 18, said Rocky Mountain, a partner in Southern Political Consulting, instructed them to sign other people's names for petitions for du Pont.

Mountain did not return telephone calls Thursday to The News. Allen Blakemore, another partner in Southern Political Consulting, declined to comment.

Kevin Burnette, president of Southern Political Consulting, told the Chronicle he had no knowledge of such activity.

"I don't believe it happened," he said.

Calls by The Associated Press Thursday night to a listed Houston telephone number for Mountain were answered by a telephone company tape saying the number was no longer in service.

Ms. Harmening told the Chronicle the signing incident happened on a rainy day when few signatures were being collected.

"He said — to quote my son — 'they were going to resort to Plan B because they weren't getting any signatures,'" she told the newspaper.

"He set two cases of beer on the table, handed each one a voter registration print-out and told the kids to drink up and start signing," Ms. Harmening told the newspaper.

The News reported that Dick Wise, an employee of the Carlton Temporary Employment Agency in Houston said Thursday that he had provided some high school-age youngsters for a job with Southern Political Consulting.

Final cleanup

John McClure, owner of McGuire Motors in Pampa, scrapes the last of the ice and snow from his car lot Thursday afternoon. With today's temperature expected to reach the middle 60s, remaining ice should melt away quickly.

Snow removal, law enforcement on agendas

McLEAN — After spending most of the last three weeks digging through ice and snow, city officials decided this week to see how they can improve their road clearing system.

McLean City Secretary Stella Lee said City Council members decided that emergency ambulance and fire routes took top priority in street clearing. Then come the Main Street business area and the school area.

"And we'll keep the area around the nursing home clear for emergency vehicles," Lee said.

Lee explained that city road crews will blade the ice and snow to the side of all city streets.

"Then we will try to get people's driveways open at the street," she said.

In other business at their regular meeting Tuesday, McLean council members accepted a bid of $1,205 from Johnny Day of McLean for a tractor, backhoe and front end loader. Day was the highest of four bidders for the unit.

City officials also agreed to spend $775 to put a cab on their maintainer.

Groom
GROOM — School trustees gave Superintendent Rex Peoples a positive evaluation and hired him for another school year at their regular meeting this week.

School Secretary Joyce Hutsell confirmed that the contracts of Peoples, Principal Kenneth Sweat and herself were renewed for another year. The administrators will be paid the same salaries.

Hutsell said trustees announced results of their annual superintendent's evaluation at the meeting and gave Peoples a "complimentary evaluation."

Trustees agreed to continue levying a property tax on recreational vehicles and automobiles. Hutsell said the tax will be the same as the residential property tax, 93 cents per $100 valuation.

Trustees also approved an update of their Texas Association of School Boards Policy manual, which includes a policy for handling students and school employees with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome and other communicable diseases.

Another state policy trustees approved was to move the annual school election from April to May so that it would not interfere with the March 8 presidential primary.

Miami
MIAMI — County employees going to Pampa will get mileage compensation according to a policy approved by Roberts County commissioners.

At their regular meeting this week, commissioners agreed to pay county employees 25 cents per mile if they use their private vehicles for trips outside Miami. The previous travel policy provided mileage compensation only to trips beyond 25 miles. Roberts County Judge J.T. Webb said the policy eliminated compensation for trips to Canadian and Pampa.

Employees of the Roberts County Sheriff's office are already compensated for mileage.

In other business, commissioners appointed the following people to the employee salary grievance committee: Ricky McDowell, Leslie Moore, Gerald Anderson, Charles Clark, Ina Suehs, Richard Smith, Jo Etta Morris, JoAnn Wheeler and Debbie Lide.

They approved the following dates for county holidays: Memorial Day, May 30; July 4; Labor Day, Sept. 5; Election Day, Nov. 8; Thanksgiving, Nov. 24 and 25; Christmas, Dec. 26, and New Year's Day, Jan. 2, 1988.

Wheeler
WHEELER — Wheeler County Commissioners has renewed its annual law enforcement contract with the City of Wheeler.

Under the contract, the Sheriff's Office will provide 24-hour dispatching and law enforcement for the city, at a fee of $3,468 per month.

Commissioners agreed to close the courthouse for the following days: Election Days, March 8 and Nov. 8; Memorial Day, May 30; July 4; Labor Day, Sept. 5; Veterans Day, Nov. 11; Thanksgiving, Nov. 24 and 25; Christmas, Dec. 23 and 26.

The ups and downs of Pampa

Contrary to popular thought, elevators are not all the same. Just as no two snowflakes are alike, the metallic boxes that get us up and down, to where we're going and from where we've been, are each unique.

While the city of Pampa does not boast an overabundance of towering skyscrapers, it does have its handful of elevators — eight to be exact. And none are alike.

Sitting down to write this, I recall critics saying that a full-length column couldn't be written on the idiosyncrasies of each elevator in town.

But let it be known that after you read this, you will know which elevators in Pampa are the best. And which need improvement.

The Most Unique
Without a doubt, this honor goes to the elevator in the Gray County Courthouse.

Located in a cubby-hole called the jailer's office, the courthouse lift is battery operated and is used mainly to transport prisoners and jail visitors.

It also shares the honor of being the oldest elevator in town. Having been in the courthouse 58 years, it has occupied the building longer than Sheriff Rufe Jordan himself.

"They said to me, 'Sheriff that won't last you a year,'" Jordan said. "But I wouldn't give it up for a brand new one."

Despite its ugly lime green coloring, the elevator is most unique because it has no interior door. When jailer Mike Lane takes visitors for a ride, you see passing bricks go by quickly, which does tend to make one sort of dizzy.

On a scale of 1-5, the courthouse elevator receives a 4½ Elevator Hands (1 1/2 x 2 1/2 x 1/2), because no elevator is perfect.

The Most Sterile
It should come as no surprise that the cleanest elevator in town is housed at Coronado Hospital.

With walls set in ivory tones and close-cropped gray carpeting, this public lift is spotless. Linda Haynes herself would be hard pressed to find any dirt on the very floor of this elevator. Its appearance gives the impression that it is swept after each transport.

What else is unique about this elevator is that the phone-box inside the elevator actually has a working telephone with a real person answering on the other end.

One disgruntling aspect of the hospital lift, though, is an annoying bell that sounds when you have reached the floor you have signaled. The only other problem is that the elevator has both front and back doors. And it never fails, if you are standing at the front door waiting for it to open, the back one will open instead.

Bonus points, however, for braille floor buttons.

The Designer Elevator
City hall has the most prestigious looking lift, what with its soft pastel colors and carpeted front-back doors.

However, two demerits are bestowed upon this elevator for, first, the soft-dinging sound the lift makes for no apparent reason. Secondly, the elevator comes complete with an emergency phone-box, but, alas, there's no phone inside.

Again, bonus points for floor buttons in braille.

The Most Deceptive
Entering the elevators in the Hughes Building, one gets the impression that they are preparing to embark upon a classic elevator ride.

Marble walls adorn the hallways outside the elevators, which flank an old-fashioned mail shaft, just like the good ol' days.

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

But when you get inside, the elevator ranks as one of the most visually unappealing in town.

Tile floors. Puke yellow interior doors. Wood grain paneling for walls.

The floor buttons are straight out of the '50s. Those black ones you have to push with excessive force before they get the hint.

And, for the life of me, I was never able to figure out what the purpose of the "Coffee Shop Service" button was on the innerface of the exterior wall of the south elevator.

The lift also jerks upon starting and stopping and takes awhile to reach different floors.

Also, demerit points for when a fellow rider termed the elevator "an old chariot."

The "Just Another Elevator" Elevator
Nothing special, the elevator in the Combs-Worley Building downtown, which has also been around since 1930, is just a John Doe elevator. Or make that an Otis Doe elevator. It gets the job done.

The one confusing thing about this lift is the "door-open, door-close" buttons are marked "DO-DC."

The "1968 Flower Child" Elevator
In the Coronado Inn, the elevator was obviously built to accommodate those who believe we are still living in the '60s.

The psychedelic wall carpet is not a real good idea for people who have just left the Biarritz Club.

For one reason or another, the lights can be turned off. I guess that's for people who enjoy elevator rides in complete darkness.

The Flower Child elevator also comes complete with a hard-to-read alarm button.

The "Holy Elevator"
At Pampa's First Baptist Church, this elevator has walls made of glass, so riders can look out over the church's inside playground for kids.

Extra points for braille buttons but, again, there is a phone-box with no phone.

Overall, elaborate and beautiful, but unnecessary.

The Elevator With a Purpose
The newly renovated senior citizen's apartment, the Schneider Hotel, features a useful lift for the elderly.

Although there are no braille buttons, the elevator has a large LED readout to tell travelers which floor they are on.

Given the circumstances, and the need for an elevator in the facility, the best ride in town.

Next time you feed your face.

think about your heart.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Afghanistan's fight should be ours, too

Last month marked the eight genocidal anniversary of the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan. Despite the words of peace Comrade Glasnost (dictator Mikhail Gorbachev) cooed in Washington at the summit this month, the Red Army's brutal occupation likely will continue.

The Afghan freedom fighters, the mujahedeen, aren't giving up their holy crusade to expel the Red Army from their once-free land. For the mujahedeen this past year has been especially encouraging. American-supplied Stinger anti-aircraft missiles have downed, according to some reports, about one war Soviet warplane a day. This has cleared the way for mujahedeen ground offensives, including one currently under way at the eastern border town of Khost.

Since the media have so little covered this war — due both to ignorance and cowardice — it's important to put it in perspective. Behind the Lines newsletter, a superb news source based in Peshawar, Pakistan, by the Khyber Pass to Afghanistan, reports: "Afghanistan has lost a greater proportion of its population since the Soviet invasion than the Soviets lost in World War II, according to a recent survey of refugee families launched by Gallup Pakistan."

"The survey of the Pakistan-based affiliate of the well-known pollsters covered 1,300 of the more than 2.1 million registered and unregistered Afghan families in Pakistan."

"Approximately 1.5 million Afghans have been killed or permanently incapacitated since the war began, according to Dr. Jjaz Gilani, chairman of the group."

"That represents 9 percent of the original Afghan population, or one-in-11 killed." If America had suffered a similar slaughter, 22 million Americans would be casualties.

Behind the Lines editor S.J. Mastly reports, "In Peshawar alone, say local psychiatrists, more than 10,000 refugees are known victims of torture, either at the hands of the Soviets or the Kabul (puppet Communist) regime. The Afghans are not prepared to compromise or forget."

Unfortunately, notes Mastly, "The U.S. government seems to be groping toward a compromise. It has sworn not to capitalize politically on a Soviet withdrawal and to stop arming the resistance when a withdrawal begins. On the other hand, there have been ominous hints that the U.S. might end up backing some kind of coalition of the resistance and the current regime."

The Soviets in Afghanistan are following the same strategy they have used everywhere else in their 70-year history of conquest. They always probe for Western soft spots, then plunge in. They retreat only after meeting a rock-solid wall of resistance.

Note how Gorbachev and the Kremlin are now blabbing about a 12-month withdrawal of their forces and are dropping hints of a "compromise" to eight months, during which time U.S. aid would be cut off to the mujahedeen. That offer is an obvious probe for soft tissue; if the U.S. appeasers buy it, we will have effectively cashiered the Afghans.

But if we say to Moscow, "No deal. Since your invasion took four days, your withdrawal should be even shorter," then the Kremlin may calculate that it is time to cut losses and leave. The key, for us, is to make sure we don't sell out the Afghans. In the end, their battle is ours.

Why Johnny needs more math

WASHINGTON — Logarithms? Trigonometric functions? Dostoevsky? Has Bill Bennett lost his mind? Is he seriously proposing that American high school students be required — not just encouraged, but required — to study this stuff?

The secretary of education is dead serious and he has not lost his mind at all. In a year-end statement describing a hypothetical "James Madison High School," Bennett recently returned to a theme he has harped on for the past four years. He is convinced that every high school student — not just the gifted, college-bound students, but every student from the ninth through the 12th grade — should be exposed to a tough and demanding core curriculum. His recommendations make great good sense.

Nearly five years have passed since the National Commission on Excellence in Education brought forth its stunning report, A Nation at Risk. That report documented and denounced the "rising tide of mediocrity" that had overwhelmed public education. It fired up the boilers in many state legislatures, and here and there the report produced real improvements.

Then the steam leaked out. Most of the states have significantly improved teacher salaries; a few have opted for systems of merit pay. But only 13 percent of the school districts have instituted minimum competency tests for teachers. None has extended the school year, and only three states — Florida, Louisiana and Pennsylvania — have mandated the kind of required courses that Bennett recommends.

When will the people and the state legislatures wake up? Public education in America is in serious trouble. The taxpayers are supporting 17,000 high schools with an enrollment of 12 million teen-agers, and with some notable exceptions these young people are being short-changed. They are not getting the education that will equip them for the competitive world of the 21st century.

Maybe Bennett's statement will inspire state legislators to mandate reforms. In Bennett's ideal "James Madison High School," students would be required to take four years of English, three years each of social studies, math and science, two years each of a foreign language and physical education, and a half-year each of art and music.

At every step along the way, students would be required to write papers. They would read serious books and plays. They would get a solid grounding in history and government. They would be expected to master algebra and trigonometry, and they would have an opportunity to study calculus.

The schedule would leave abundant room, especially in the senior year, for electives — for band, typing, computer operations, driver education and the like. Bennett emphatically challenges the notion that he is promoting elitism. He finds the charge insulting to poor blacks and Hispanics who may be culturally disadvantaged. Of course they can learn, he says, and he cites examples to prove it.

At New York City's A. Philip Randolph High School, half of the 1,500 black and Hispanic students come from poor families, but they are thriving on a core curriculum even tougher than Bennett's ideal.

In Los Angeles, the James A. Garfield High School serves 3,500 students in the East Los Angeles barrio, 90 percent of whom are disadvantaged. Seventy percent of Garfield's students go on to higher education; the school's greatest pride is its excellence in mathematics.

Bennett makes the same point that the Commission on Excellence in Education made in 1983. Our planet shrinks. Our teen-agers will be competing as adults with their opposite numbers around the world.

Does he ask too much in the area of mathematics? In an international competition in 1982, our best high school mathematicians finished dead last. Is it unreasonable to require two years of a foreign language? In France, students must take six years of one foreign language and four years of another.

We want our students to take from high school, Bennett says, "a shared body of knowledge and skills, a common language of ideas, a common moral and intellectual discipline." Our graduates should know math and science, history and literature. "We want them to think for themselves, to respond to important questions, to solve problems, to pursue an argument, to defend a point of view, to understand its opposite and to weigh alternatives."

This is what education is all about — the development of those "habits of mind and traits of character" that our society prizes. To the extent that our high schools are failing to inculcate those values, they are failing the children, and failing the country as well.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Jan. 15, the 15th day of 1988. There are 351 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Jan. 15, 1929, civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was born in Atlanta.

On this date:
In 1559, England's Queen Elizabeth I was crowned in Westminster Abbey.

In 1777, the people of New Connecticut declared their independence. The tiny republic later became the state of Vermont.

In 1870, the Democratic party was represented as a donkey for the first time in a cartoon by Thomas Nast in Harper's Weekly.

In 1919, pianist and statesman Ignace Paderewski became the first premier of the newly created republic of Poland.

In 1943, work was completed on the Pentagon, headquarters of the U.S. Department of Defense.

In 1967, the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League defeated the Kansas City Chiefs of the American Football League 35-10 in the first Super Bowl.

Silver Lake welcomes geese

Walking distance from downtown Rochester, Minn., is a lovely lake called "Silver Lake." Because the adjacent local power company constantly discharges warm water, Silver Lake never freezes over entirely.

There is always enough open water to provide a year 'round home for thousands of Canada geese.

Geese, which normally would migrate semi-annually between Canada and the gulf, have discovered that they are always welcome at Silver Lake, that they can live comfortably on gleanings from nearby farm fields and from the handouts of homefolks and tourists who come to marvel at the sight.

What a sight it is! The lake is miles around, and yet blanketed with these handsome visitors, so thick in places you can scarcely see the water between.

You can stop your car in the midst of the huge flock onshore, mingle with and feed them — and marvel at the magnificence of some 30,000 of these stately creatures in this one warm-water oasis.

If you arrive in Rochester by air, it's out of your way to go past Silver Lake — but most everybody does.

I am aware that wild geese in many states are considered a problem. Some, in parks, golf courses and picnic areas, have been unceremoniously evicted when their droppings became objectionable.

In New Jersey, Connecticut and southern New York some farmers blame them for pulling winter wheat. Urbanites consider them noisome and unsanitary. Hunting season has been expanded.

Their fierce protectiveness of nest and goslings does sometimes lead to nipped fingers and legs.

Even in Rochester, their vast numbers frequently slow or stop area traffic as they waddle across roadways.

And they foul some lakeside lawns.

And yet these strong, handsome birds with the characteristic white chin strap get the "right of way" wherever they go in Rochester, Minn.

And the cries of a majestic flock in formation flight overhead is music on the autumn wind.

And whenever the local Post-Bulletin invites the local folks to vote on whether the geese are a liability or an asset, the vote is always overwhelming — in favor of the geese.

No vandalism? No surreptitious or vicious killing of the birds? Not here. Not in Rochester. The city's flag features flying geese.

It has to do with the traditionally hospitable character of the people of this medical mecca. For Rochester is also the home of the Mayo Clinic, where couples of all ages come to relearn how to hold hands. And the city has learned to welcome all visitors with a gentle embrace.

Dear hearts and gentle people, thank you for taking care of "our geese."

Too late to speak well of nuke missiles

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

The year 1988 is clearly going to witness an enormous amount of debate on the subject of reducing or eliminating various categories of nuclear missiles.

The INF treaty, eliminating intermediate-range (or "theater") nuclear missiles, has already been signed, and the Senate debate on ratification lies ahead. About the time ratification finally occurs, President Reagan will fly off to Moscow for another summit with Secretary Gorbachev, and out of that will emerge at least the outlines of a further agreement ("START" for short), reducing intercontinental nuclear missiles by 50 percent.

Obviously, what one thinks of either of these agreements depends, in large part, on what one thinks of nuclear missiles in general. Are they devices of a new and especially terrible kind, or simply another useful weapon?

For more than 40 years, one of the highest propaganda priorities of the left (and for this purpose I am including in the term everyone from the worst cynic in the Kremlin to the mildest liberal on the editorial board of the New York Times) has been to promote the former view. The promoters have not always had the same motive: The Kremlin has intended to frighten its enemies into avoiding (or not using) such weapons, while preserving its own freedom to do so; liberals in the West have fatuously hoped to intimidate both Washington and Moscow, in the interests of "disarmament."

What matters, however, is that the campaign has been spectacularly successful. We can set aside, for the moment, such borderline cases as tactical nuclear weapons — artillery shells and the like. But the unique awfulness of nuclear missiles is now, and has been for decades, the mutually agreed perception of the entire human race.

To be sure, as long as there was no apparent alternative to deterrence through mutual assured destruction, it was possible to hold at bay liberal and leftist pressures on the West and maintain a defensive arsenal of nuclear missiles to match the Soviet array.

But two things have now happened that radically change this state of affairs. First, technology has made it possible to deploy defensive satellites that can render a first strike with nuclear missiles unacceptably risky for an aggressor. As one might expect, such a defense naturally impresses any thoughtful person, trained to consider nuclear missiles the last word in awfulness, as a vast improvement over mutual assured destruction. (It also cuts the ground out from under those who had been using the dreadfulness of nuclear missiles as a useful prod toward mutual, or even unilateral, disarmament.)

Second, the Soviet Union has reversed its traditional strategy, which was based on deployment of ever more powerful missiles, and is now willing to negotiate the elimination of some categories of missiles altogether, and the substantial reduction of others. This, too, understandably strikes the human race as very much a step in the right direction.

It is simply too late for Western strategists such as Henry Kissinger to dash forward now and try to say a kind word for nuclear missiles per se. That battle was lost, gentlemen, decades ago. If you wanted to preserve that option on any basis save sheer necessity, you ought to have been countering the left-liberal horror propaganda year by year with rational arguments (and they existed) in favor of nuclear missiles.

But you blew it, and the necessity ended; and now the human race is turning to space defenses against missiles, and treaties to reduce their number. Both tendencies will prove irresistible in the long run. Ronald Reagan understands this, and that is why he has placed himself at the forefront of both trends. You would do well to follow his example, and stop trying to argue the case for nuclear missiles.

Bork resigning as judge to take on his critics

WASHINGTON (AP)—The bitter debate surrounding Robert H. Bork's rejected nomination for the Supreme Court is about to ignite again, as he takes off his judicial robe to free himself of any restraints against attacking his critics.

The White House announced Thursday that President Reagan had reluctantly accepted Bork's decision to step down from the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia after six years, effective Feb. 5.

Bork said that as a sitting judge, he could not respond to what had become "an essentially unanswered campaign of misinformation and political slogans" about his nomination.

"If, as a judge, I cannot speak out against this attempt to alter the traditional nature of the courts, I think it important to place myself where I can," he said in a letter to Reagan.

He said "constraints of propriety and seamliness limit the topics a federal judge may address and the public positions he may advocate." He said he wanted to "to speak, write and teach about law and other issues of public policy more extensively and more freely than is possible in my present position."

Bork's nomination was rejected by the Senate on a 58-42 vote Oct. 23. He insisted on forcing a vote, even though defeat was already certain.

Bork's critics argued that he was an extremist who would turn back the clock on civil rights and civil liberties. His supporters said he was a brilliant jurist and an advocate of reasonable judicial restraint.

"The unprecedented political attack upon you which resulted in the regrettable Senate action was a tragedy for our country," Reagan wrote in a letter accepting the resignation.

Speaking to reporters outside his home Thursday afternoon, Bork said he was "very grateful to the president for his letter to me." And, he said, "There is a lot of misunderstanding of the role of courts in this country and I intend to engage in the debate about what the role of courts is."

A hero of headline conservatives, Bork was Reagan's first choice to succeed retiring Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. When Bork was defeated, Reagan turned to federal appeals judge Douglas H. Ginsburg, only to have him withdraw after it was disclosed that he had smoked marijuana in the past.

Reagan's third candidate is federal appeals judge Anthony M. Kennedy. He is expected to win Senate confirmation by a wide margin after Congress returns to work later this month.

The 60-year-old Bork, a longtime faculty member at Yale Law School, first came to national attention in the 1973 "Saturday Night Massacre" during the Watergate scandal.

As U.S. solicitor general, he agreed to then-President Richard Nixon's demand that he fire special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox. The action fell to Bork after Attorney General Elliot Richardson resigned rather than comply with Nixon's order and Deputy Attorney General William French Smith was fired.

A taste of Bork's thinking about his rejection by the Senate was revealed in a story in the Chicago Tribune on Dec. 4 about a closed-door speech he gave to the Law Club of the City of Chicago in which he said his opponents had lied to foil his nomination.

Bork was quoted as accusing his opponents of fighting his nomination with a political campaign that "set record lows in mendacity, brutality and vulgarity."

U.S. not satisfied with Japanese construction offer; talks ahead

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Japanese proposal to open its public works programs to American bids falls short of Reagan administration demands, and the United States will consider retaliation if negotiations fail, U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter says.

Yeutter said Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, on his first visit to the United States since taking office two months ago, appears to want to resolve the issue. Yet the plan "is a bit vague in terms of which public works programs are going to be opened up," Yeutter said.

The proposal calls for U.S. builders to penetrate the multibillion-dollar Japanese construction market by forging joint ventures with Japanese companies. Takeshita's government also plans to increase public works spending by 20 percent, presumably fattening whatever share U.S. companies might win.

"Our preliminary judgment is that the proposal does not meet our needs and that we're going to have some tough, hard negotiations ahead," Yeutter said in a National Public Radio interview Thursday. "We certainly are a ways apart and we'll have to make our own judgment whether retaliatory action will be needed to achieve that objective."

Takeshita planned to leave today for Toronto, Canada.

Yeutter's evaluation of the Japanese offer was in contrast to the vague but hopeful terms President Reagan used to describe the plan after meeting with Takeshita for three hours Wednesday.

The trade representative's comments differed even more radically with those of a U.S. official who said Tuesday the construction contract problem was heading for resolution during Takeshita's visit. The official had briefed reporters only on condition of anonymity.

Members of Congress also questioned whether Japan would take additional actions to back Takeshita's pledges to stabilize financial markets, pay more for defense and donate more to needy countries.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said after a 40-minute meeting with Takeshita, "New efforts must be made to correct the imbalance of trade between our two nations."

Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., a leading advocate of tough measures to trim the $60 billion annual trade deficit with Japan said of Takeshita, "I think he sees the problem."

"But the situation is that prime ministers in the past have made representations to our administration... but nothing has really come of it," Danforth said.

Resistance to letting U.S. goods into Japan is so entrenched in that nation's economic system that "it takes more than a statement by a prime minister," Danforth said.

Officials of both sides had billed Takeshita's visit as a chance for him to get acquainted with Reagan and perhaps establish the kind of close relationship his predecessor, Yasuhiro Nakasone, was said to have had with Reagan over the past five years.

With that apparently in mind, the president and his wife, Nancy, issued an unscheduled invitation to Takeshita and his wife, Naoko, to have tea Thursday afternoon in the Reagan's private living quarters. The White House said the event would help the two couples get to know each other better.

Earlier, in a speech and question-answer session with reporters at the National Press Club, Takeshita outlined the economic and defense steps Japan is taking.

They include increased contributions to the maintenance of U.S. forces in Japan and to Japan's own defenses, the expenditure of $30 billion to help indebted nations, actions to stabilize the ratio between the dollar and the yen and budgetary measures designed to increase Japan's consumption of foreign goods.

Game show's biggest winner is held without bail in fraud case

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The biggest winner in the history of TV's "Password" game show was arrested after he was spotted on the air by Alaska bank officials who wanted him in a $25,000 credit card scam, authorities said.

"The guy's a real flim-flam artist... who perpetrates frauds all over the country," said Ron Williams, assistant to the agent in charge of the Los Angeles Secret Service office.

Kerry Ketchum, 36, was arrested Thursday when he went to the Los Angeles office of Mark Goodson Productions to pick up a check for $58,000 he won in four appearances on "Password," which aired last week and earlier this week.

Williams said the Secret Service was alerted after employees of the Anchorage, Alaska, bank saw Ketchum using the alias Patrick Quinn on the NBC television show. Williams said he didn't know the bank's name.

"He got false applications and then he got credit cards under the name Patrick Quinn and then the bills came back to the bank unpaid. They did a little research and determined somebody was using the bank and then they saw the guy on TV," he said.

Two Secret Service agents were waiting for Ketchum when he arrived at the production company, said "Password" producer Robert Sherman.

"He noticed what we think were the dark suits and ties of the Secret Service guys and smelled something federal about them and just took off as fast as he could," said the show's producer, Robert Sherman.

The agents pursued and found him standing atop a toilet in a men's room.

After his arrest, "he acknowledged who he was and acknowledges he perpetrated the credit card fraud in Anchorage," Williams said.

Ketchum, who lived most recently in nearby San Bernardino, was held without bail today while the FBI, Secret Service and Indiana State Police pursued a variety of fraud charges against him, officials said.

Day of reckoning for Central American peace plan

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Nicaragua's Sandinista government bore the brunt of blame for ongoing hostilities in Central America on the eve of a five-nation summit to tally the achievements of a regional peace plan.

Today's meeting, in the San Jose suburb of Alajuela, was seen as a time of reckoning not only for the plan but for the future of U.S. policy in Central America and the fate of Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

In Washington, critics and supporters agreed that further U.S. aid to the Contras depended largely on actions taken by the presidents of Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala, El Salvador and Costa Rica, who signed the peace plan last Aug. 7.

President Reagan has vowed to seek $270 million more in Contra military aid, with a congressional vote expected the first week in February.

Reagan has put off asking for the money since last fall, largely at the request of Democratic congressional leaders who asked him to give the peace plan time to work.

In news conferences Thursday, presidents Oscar Arias of Costa Rica, Jose Napoleon Duarte of El Salvador, and Jose Azcona Hoyo of Honduras — all firm allies of the United States — either directly or indirectly accused Nicaragua of being the peace plan's spoiler.

Presidents Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua and Vinicio Cerezo of Guatemala were scheduled to arrive in San Jose today.

Arias, winner of the 1987 Nobel Peace Prize for devising and promoting the plan, said only the Central Americans are to blame for the plan's failure.

"If there is anyone to blame, it is some of us, the Central American governments," Arias said. "There hasn't been the political will to comply. There has always been an excuse."

Asked specifically about Reagan's plan to seek more Contra aid, he replied:

"If Nicaragua had complied with the accord, I don't think that would be an issue in the United States. Nobody would be thinking about more aid to the Contras."

El Salvador's president echoed that theme.

"What happens if the United States approves aid to the Contras?" Duarte said. "Will that give an excuse to Nicaragua not to comply with the peace accord?"

"I say let's put the question in reverse," Duarte added. "If Nicaragua complies, then the United States will have no excuse to supply an insurgency in Nicaragua, because then we will have a democratic Nicaragua."

Azcona said Honduras has "fulfilled 95 percent of the promises" it made under the accord, while in Nicaragua "there has been no cease-fire, no amnesty, no reconciliation of the Nicaraguan family."

The plan was intended to end the civil wars in Nicaragua and El Salvador and a small but lingering leftist insurgency in Guatemala, while bringing greater democracy to the five signatory nations.

Specifically, it called for cease-fires and general amnesties, concrete steps toward greater democracy, an end to outside aid to insurgents and a halt to the use of any country's territory as a launching pad for attacks against a neighbor.

Compliance has varied from country to country, but none of the three warring nations has achieved a cease-fire, and critics contend that human rights abuses still abound in every nation except Costa Rica.

Iran raids Norwegian tanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iranian gunboats attacked and set ablaze a Norwegian tanker in the Persian Gulf today after Iraq claimed its warplanes raided two vessels off the Iranian coast, maritime salvage executives said.

The vessel, identified as the Igloo Espoo, was loaded with Saudi Arabian petroleum products and was attacked in the Strait of Hormuz, the narrow entryway at the southern gulf, said the sources.

Salvage tugboats were rushing to help the stricken tanker, an indication it was ablaze, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity. They did not have details on damage to the tanker, a liquefied petroleum gas carrier.

Earlier, the official Iraqi News Agency said Iraqi warplanes "scored accurate and effective hits" on two "large naval targets," a usual reference to oil tankers. There was no independent confirmation of the attacks.

The report, monitored in Nicaragua, said one ship was struck at 9:20 p.m. Thursday and another at 5 a.m. today.

On Thursday, Iran conducted its first shipping strike of the year, apparently in retaliation for Iraqi raids earlier this week on Iranian oil traffic.

An Iranian warship radioed "happy voyage" to a Dutch-owned tanker, then blasted it for an hour with machine guns, cannon and rocket-propelled grenades.

Soviets present new START proposals

GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union today submitted new proposals for cutting the superpowers' intercontinental nuclear forces, a U.S. spokesman said.

Citing confidentiality rules, spokesman Terry Shroeder declined to elaborate on the proposals but said that they "will be studied carefully as are all of their proposals."

He said the meeting at the Soviet mission, the second since the talks resumed Thursday after a 7½-week break, featured a "substantive exchange." It lasted an hour and 40 minutes.

The two sides are working to conclude a draft treaty on reducing their strategic arms arsenals by 50 percent in time for a superpower summit expected to take place in Moscow by this summer.

LITTLE FRIEND

Any mother can tell about a child's love for her doll, and the world of PRETEND that they live in. They confide in the doll, reprimand them, and care for them.

The church is a real and true friend. The church may be counted on in times of need, in times of trouble, and in times of sorrow. The church also wants to share in your times of joy.

"A friend loveth at all times."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: One thing I ask of the Lord, this is what I seek: that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to gaze upon the beauty of the Lord and to seek him in his temple. (Psalm 27:4 NIV)

On Sunday mornings, I slip into the balcony of my church for a few moments of prayer before Sunday school.

While I'm sequestered, I'm usually joined in the big, empty sanctuary by an 84-year-old friend who comes in through a side door of the ground floor.

When her family moved to Pampa in 1913, the church was a small frame building which also served as a school. Her parents raised their children in church, and in 1916, my friend accepted Christ as her Savior and became a member of the church.

Although arthritis has now taken a toll on her and walking is difficult and painful, she continues to faithfully gather with her fellow believers for worship. In her own words, "The church has always been of great importance to me. I can't remember a time when it was not."

For 71 years she has joyfully exercised her freedom to worship and serve her Lord in the church of her choice. My friend's faithfulness has become an inspiration to me and a pointer in the Light direction.

In this day of easy mobility and frequent job turnovers, not many of us Christians will experience the pleasure of bonding so permanently with one church. Vicissitudes may move us geographically, but every church composed of believers is universally the adored bride of the same loving Bridegroom, the Living Lord.

Though we may be strangers where we tread, we have access to the refuge of a welcoming church home and family. And predominating and enveloping the warm fellowship of it all is Jesus Christ, robed in glory, cherished and cherishing.

Religion Roundup

TORONTO (AP) — Calling AIDS divine punishment misrepresents God's character, according to 130 Christian ethicists, theologians, health care professionals and community workers who met to discuss the subject. The consultation, sponsored by the U.S. National Council of Churches, the World Council of Churches and the Canadian Council of Churches, declared:

"We believe that attempts to link the AIDS crisis with the wrath of God are irresponsible, seriously harmful and misrepresent the character of God. God calls us as a people, a whole people, and no one is expendable."

CHICAGO (AP) — The Union of American Hebrew Congregations says it is "deeply troubled by the increasing fanaticism of Israel's Orthodox and ultra-Orthodox political parties."

A resolution of the Reforming wing of Judaism also criticized "willingness of some leading (Israeli) secular politicians to accommodate this trend," including commitments by the Likud Party to amend Israel's law of return to admit only Orthodox-approved converts.

The 1.3 million-member union, declaring American Jews have a duty to speak out on issues affecting Israel, urged that its government "pursue all avenues to peace" directly or with international participation.

NANJING, China (AP) — Christian representatives from nine countries attended the recent dedication here of Amity Press, the first and only plant in China giving priority to printing Bibles and other religious literature.

Employing 140 people, the plant has a capacity to turn out 500,000 Bibles a year.

It is a project of Amity Foundation, a social service organization founded in 1985, and to which Christian groups around the world donated $6 million through the United Bible Societies to purchase plant equipment.

During the Chinese "cultural revolution" of 1966-76, possession of a Bible was a crime, but since then the government has been more tolerant of religion. Since 1981, 2.9 million Bibles have been printed in China.

"The Bible is an important book for all of humanity," Bishop K.H. Ting, president of the China Christian Council, said at the dedication. "We are most happy that today in China the intellectual world is increasingly giving the Bible the attention it deserves."

First Presbyterian gets new minister

John Judson's pastorate of First Presbyterian Church in Pampa started out with a bang.

Dr. Judson, 32, preached his candidating sermon the morning after the Celanese blast.

The congregation must have liked the way he handled the tragedy during that church service. He became its pastor Jan. 1.

Judson said the explosion didn't affect his morning sermon too much, but had an impact on his pastoral prayers that morning.

"My hope was that my prayers were centered around what effect that explosion had on the lives of people in this congregation and this community," Judson said.

Judson was named First Presbyterian's pastor after a year-long search to succeed the Rev. Joe L. Turner, who moved to Odessa last January. The Rev. Robert Graham of Dickinson and the Rev. Darrell Cory, who grew up in the church, have filled the church's pulpit in the interim. Bill Hallerberg chaired the 10-member search committee.

Most recently, Judson was associate pastor at Covenant

Presbyterian Church in San Antonio. He served there for 2½ years.

Judson graduated from Trinity University in San Antonio with a double major in business and economics. It was while serving in the Peace Corps in the Philippines that Judson first felt his calling into the ministry.

"I had my personal conversion experience in a small, missionary Baptist church," he recalled.

After leaving the Peace Corps, Judson returned to Houston and worked as a contract draftsman for several years. He said he felt God nudging him toward a career in the ministry.

Judson graduated from Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Va.

He said he accepted the call to Pampa because he felt God leading him to the Pampa church. He said areas he feels strong in are areas the church needed.

Judson said moving from San Antonio to a smaller community has been a good experience so far. He said he and his wife Cindy have found Pampans to be helpful and friendly.

The couple has two children: Andy, 4, and Katie, 7 months.

"You feel like you're a part of the town even though you haven't been here very long," Judson said. "I love the people. Everything that I've had to do here has been wonderful. They treat you like you're a real person instead of thousands they happen to see."

"It's a town that feels safe. It feels comfortable."

Judson said his major goals at First Presbyterian are strengthening the church's Christian education program for both adults and children and increasing involvement in mission outreach locally and worldwide. He said he wants to get members of the congregation, both youth and adults, involved in the mission program.

Accuracy deemed important in Biblical scenes for kids

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Remember, from childhood, those colored scenes of the bearded Moses leading his people through the desert, the muscular Samson breaking those pagan temple pillars, the boy David facing the giant?

These are among the pictorial biblical dramas portrayed in lesson materials for youngsters in church classes, and they leave mental images that sometimes remain key clues to the content.

But they've sometimes also been a bit wrong. That's what staffers in the art department of the Southern Baptist Sunday School board in Nashville, Tenn., have discovered in their efforts to make those pictures historically and biblically accurate.

Stepping up that endeavor in the last six years, art personnel have expanded their research, visiting museums in London, Berlin and across the United States, and also making trips to biblical sites in the Holy Land.

The artists and designers have accumulated a collection of more than 1,900 photos and slides, as guides to ensure accuracy in their representations.

They call it the "million-dollar file," but art department director Jerry Ross puts its worth at more than that.

But it's a big, complicated job, still going on. "We realized after it took three years to complete research for six Bible stories that this was a long-term project," Ross says.

Since the Sunday School Board is the main publishing arm of the 14.6 million-member denomination, putting out about 600 million pieces of literature annually, its art department has a pivotal role in the illustrations.

Ross says some of the research leads "to images different from those we grew up with," such as a full-length white robe.

"People have taken the concept of the risen Christ in a flowing white robe and applied that to his whole life," Ross says.

However, he says that research, and the dusty soil of the Holy Land, indicate that Jesus did not wear a robe that dragged the ground.

Other details, such as his traditionally shown shoulder-length hair, also don't square with research, he says, noting this sometimes produces a struggle over whether to adhere to familiar tradition or the findings.

However, Bill Latta, supervisor of the youth-adult curriculum design section, says, "We don't just draw what we think. We rely on what the research shows."

Credibility is a key factor, he says. "The art needs to be consistent with the biblical text and historical facts."

For example, he cites one previous teaching picture with a Roman battering ram in an Old Testament setting, long before Roman times.

"Few people would notice that, but we need to be as accurate and consistent as possible," he says.

They break disease cycle in Honduras

By DOREEN HOWARD
Seguin Gazette-Enterprise

SEGUIN (AP) — Armed with less than $7,000, but with a wealth of donated equipment, medicine and talent, 42 volunteers sponsored by St. Andrew's Episcopal Church of Seguin spent part of June in tropical mountains near the equator breaking a cycle of disease that has plagued people there for centuries.

Two separate groups of volunteers, each spending a week, constructed a medical clinic from an existing brick building, treated over 2,000 animals for parasites and ministered to the bodies of more than 2,000 natives in Siguatepeque, Honduras.

They carried with them a dentist's chair (in pieces), two centrifuges, two microscopes, surgical packs, drugs, sanitation supplies, veterinary pharmaceuticals, 500 pairs of eyeglasses and even lightbulbs in 80 duffel bags. To save money, each traveler used his two-piece, 100-pound baggage limit on the airplane to transport the gear.

Honduras is the second poorest country in the western hemisphere — a country with more than a 70 percent unemployment rate, a low literacy rate and little public sanitation.

According to Dr. Henry Moore, a Seguin physician and leader of the medical mission, treatment of their community's animals was a key part of the mission. The Hondurans are able to provide food for themselves, he said, but are often robbed of nutrition by intestinal parasites passed to humans from their domestic animals.

The Texans structured their assault on disease in two stages. The first crew of 14 traveled on June 6 to San Juan Apostol, the Episcopal mission in Siguatepeque, a town of 20,000 about 60 miles from the Honduran capital, Tegucigalpa.

Within a week, a construction team rewired the mission's parish hall, which was to be used as the medical clinic, erected a 12-foot by 12-foot safe room for a pharmacy and equipment storage and partitioned five treatment areas.

Seguin veterinarian Dr. Bill Campaigne and several technicians treated over 2,000 animals in the first step of breaking the disease cycle.

On the first day, the mission yard was crammed with people and their pets and domestic animals. There were chickens, pigs, goats, cattle, ducks, geese, dogs, cats, rabbits, monkeys, parrots and even a raccoon.

"We had bull fights in the street," Lynn Campaigne, volunteer and wife of the veterinarian, recalled. "Our crew suffered terrible rope burns on their hands trying to restrain the animals."

In the beginning, large animals were roped and tied to a fence for restraint, so they could be wormed and inoculated. However, the bulls and oxen began to pull down the fence.

It was obvious that some kind of chute would have to be constructed. By mid-afternoon the Seguin carpenters built one. Treatment was a little less chaotic after that.

Along with ridding the animals of parasites, the veterinary team gave the people instruction on general sanitation, advising them against the practice of keeping animals in the house.

"The people were very eager to learn," Dr. Campaigne said.

Among the crowds bringing their animals to the clinic was a 6-year-old albino girl, born without pigmentation in her skin, eyes and hair. As she stood in the sun with her family, the child's face was contorted in an effort to keep the sun out of her sensitive eyes.

Mike Perry of San Marcos and Ollie Booker of Seguin decided that the child needed sunglasses. When the dark lenses were put over her eyes, the little girl's face relaxed, and she smiled.

The second group of 28 doctors, dentists, a pharmacist, nurses, lab technicians and others treated the people a week later.

Although the trip was sponsored by an Episcopal parish in Seguin, the Texas volunteers came from a broader area. Dr. Forrest Kroschel, a dentist, came from Hallettsville, from another parish within the same convocation as the Seguin Episcopalians. Dr. Michael Rotman, a cardiologist, came from Austin. Air Force Maj. Pat Sannet, a tropical medicine expert, came from the School of Aviation Medicine at Brooks Air Force Base in San Antonio. Others came from Gonzales.

After the second day of seeing Honduran patients, the Texas medical team stopped counting heads. The numbers were overwhelming. On the third day, the clinic ran out of aspirin and antacids. Other drugs and vitamins had to be rationed.

More than 500 patients a day came to the mission clinic. Long lines of people snaked along the compound's wooden fence, down the road towards Siguatepeque.

Street vendors set up their carts in the dirt street taking advantage of the crowds. Bananas hung in huge clumps from poles. Fried meats and snow cones were for sale.

In the 2,000-plus cases treated

June 15-19, problems ranged from a 12-day-old baby born with her bladder outside of the body to a woman in her early 30s with Kaposi's sarcoma, an indication of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, AIDS.

The doctors saw numerous skin diseases, infections of every sort and arthritis. All the patients were treated for parasites. Many of the problems could be prevented with a public sanitation program, according to Moore and Dr. LeRoy Rice, a Seguin obstetrician and gynecologist.

"Homes of the poor are lean-tos with metal roofs, dirt floors, an open fireplace in the middle and no plumbing," Rice said.

The Seguin volunteers say they plan to return to Siguatepeque.

First Things First.

Priorities. What's really important? Possessions? Prestige? Playthings? Think about it. You'll soon realize that the truly important things in life aren't material. Love. Joy. Peace. These are priorities in God's kingdom. Don't waste your time chasing after things that won't make you happy. Take Jesus' advice, put First Things First. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all of these things shall be added unto you." Matt. 6:33

Nebraska youth to get bone marrow transplant today

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — When Mark Gudgel was told two years ago that he had leukemia, the Nebraska youngster tried to ignore it.

Even while people in his hometown of Bayard and nearby Scottsbluff and Gering raised $31,000 to help offset his medical costs, Mark remained silent and shied away from the attention.

"Every time the words 'bone marrow transplant' were mentioned he would hide his eyes, turn away," said Mark's father, Jack Gudgel.

Today, Mark, 12, will receive healthy bone marrow from his 18-year-old brother, Sean, in a three-hour procedure at Wilford Hall Air Force Medical Center, where doctors are using a different procedure to treat leukemia victims.

"He's just had a mental block to tune it out and now that he's in that room he's had to face it and he's having a hard time dealing with it," his father said.

Gudgel, a retired Army sergeant, said the family chose Wilford Hall because physicians use chemical chemotherapy instead of total body radiation in their bone marrow transplant treatment.

Mark has been receiving chemotherapy treatments the past week in preparation for the transplant. Sean's bone marrow will be extracted today, filtered and later given to Mark intravenously, said Dr. Mary Daly, Mark's physician.

Because of the strength of the chemotherapy and its side effects, Mark was unable to speak to reporters earlier in the week and only nodded when his father asked him questions.

"He's been very cooperative and it's hard to see him feel sick because he is a sweet boy," Ms. Daly said about her patient. "He has a close-knit family and they have been very supportive of him."

Sean Gudgel said the family has pulled together during Mark's illness.

"The most painful part is it being him instead of me. I don't like to see that," Sean said.

After news of Mark's deteriorating condition was publicized in late October, people in the Nebraska Panhandle raised $31,000 to help offset the family's $120,000 medical costs.

The family's insurance is expected to pay about 75 percent of the treatment.

Gudgel, a salesman at an implement dealer's gift shop, said the community effort surprised him.

"It's an agriculture community and they had a big failed crop this year," Gudgel said. "Yet, apparently, they thought someone was suffering more than them and they chipped in."

Gudgel said the family will not use all of the money raised for Mark.

Texas leads the way in tornado deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas topped the list in tornado deaths in 1987, accounting for more than half of the nation's total from a single storm that obliterated the small community of Saragosa.

Tornado deaths jumped to 59 in the United States last year, almost quadruple the toll of 1986, but still below the long-term average of 90 fatalities, the National Weather Service reported Thursday.

Texas suffered the most from tornadoes last year with 42 fatalities.

Boosting that total were 30 deaths in the storm that struck Saragosa in West Texas on May 22. Many of those victims were attending a preschool graduation ceremony at the community center.

About 120 people were injured in the storm and the town is still struggling to rebuild amid continuing questions over what happened to some of the donations that flowed in from around the nation.

In mid-November, 11 East Texans died when a series of tornadoes smashed into towns ranging from Cherokee County's Jacksonville in the north all the way down to the Gulf Coast.

Telephone hideaway is decorative roll-top box

By BOB SAWYER

They've improved our telephones over the past decade, but they still haven't made one that will screen out junk calls.

I'd like a telephone that would detect junk calls and emit a signal that would vaporize the system whence the call was made.

I'd call it a Rambo-phone. In the meanwhile, I keep my telephone hidden inside a handsome roll-top cabinet. The hideaway measures 15x15x13 inches, and includes a lower shelf the perfect size for a fat phone book.

The sliding door opens along the entire front and most of the top, so there is easy access to the telephone. This is a terrific first roll-top project — you'll be surprised at how easy it is.

For more information than provided below, we offer detailed plans. They include full-size patterns, a materials list, illustrated step-by-step instructions, plus woodworking tips.

Another handy storage project is our 4x3x2-foot country style pine deacon's bench. It features easy assembly, heart-shaped cut-outs and a hinged seat that opens to reveal a roomy chest.

To order the plans, specify Project No. 562 for the telephone hideaway; or No. 521 for the deacon's bench. Send $4.95 for either plan, or order both for only $8.90 and save a dollar.

Mail to: The Woodwright, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000. Include $2.95 for a catalog.

To build the hideaway, purchase wide 1/2-inch stock. Very wide parts can be made by splicing together narrower boards.

The roll-top is made by gluing slats to canvas. It slides along grooves cut into the hideaway sides. Each slat measures 3/4x14 1/4 inches, and is rounded along the two top long edges.

You can round off and cut the slats in the same operation: Cut a 14x14 1/4-inch board. Round off the two edges along one 14 1/4-inch end, and then cut a 1/2-inch-wide slat from that end.

Round off the newly cut edges of the board and cut another 3/4-inch-wide slat. Cut a total of 27 slats in this manner. Clamp the slats, with rounded edges down, in a temporary frame. Glue a 10x19 1/2-inch-canvas over the backs.

Cut from the remaining 3/4-inch stock: two sides, each 13 x 14 1/4 inches; top, 4x15 1/4; back, 13x13 1/4; two shelves, 9x14 1/4; front, 2x13 1/4; and handle, 1/2x13 1/2.

Each side piece is rounded off at the top front corner and grooved to accommodate the door and the two shelves. The groove for the door is 1/2 inch wide by 1/4 inch deep.

It starts at the bottom, 1/2 inch from the front, and follows the general outline of the side piece up the front, across the top (about 1 inch below the top edge), down the back (1 inch from the back edge), and along the bottom (1/2 inch above the lower edge).

Make the corner curves as gentle as possible and a bit wider, so the door won't hang up. It's best to use a jig, because the grooves must be aligned perfectly between the two side pieces.

Each shelf groove is 1/4 inch deep by 3/4 inch wide by 9 1/2 inches long. Place the lower groove 2 inches above the lower edge, and place the upper groove about 3 inches above the lower one.

To accommodate the phone cord, cut a small notch into the back piece at the lower (13 1/4-inch) edge, close to one end. Drill a 1/2-inch hole through each shelf, about 1 inch from a front corner.

To prepare the top piece, cut or rout a 1/4x1/4-inch rabbet along each end, placing both rabbets on the same side.

Attach the front to the underside of the lower shelf, flush at the front. Glue the shelves into the grooves in the sides.

Insert the back between the sides, flush at the bottom. Attach the top flush at the back, fitting the rabbets over the sides. Secure the joints with screws. Where they will show, countersink and cover them with thin plugs cut from matching stock.

Cut a 1/4x3/4-inch notch from each front corner of the front slat of the door. Keep the small blocks that are cut away.

Shape the handle and attach it to the second slat. Slide the door up into the hideaway. You may have to sand the grooves in place to get the door to slide smoothly.

Open the door all the way. Insert one of the small cut-out blocks into the front end of the door groove in one of the sides, and secure with a small screw. Install the other small block in the groove in the opposite side piece.

Sand and stain the unit as you like. I'm partial to a combination stain and sealer called Danish oil, which doesn't require a glossy polyurethane second coat.

Handsome telephone hideaway is an easy first roll-top project to make in the home workshop.

Tracking a will can lead to more information

Locating a will in White County, Ga. for GREEN B. DODD led to connecting that branch of the DODD family to Texas-Oklahoma descendants and is a perfect example of what can happen when all the resources are utilized in your search.

Census records for 1860 in White County, Ga. list GREEN B. DODD with his wife MARTHA and children JAMES, MARY, HARRIET and JOHN. In 1870, MARY is not shown with the family but another son, NEWTON, age 10, is listed. The 1880 census has MARTHA A. DODD as a widow and head of the household. With her are sons JOHN C. and NEWTON G.

The marriage record for GREEN B. DODD to MARTHA ANN WESTMORELAND, Dec. 21, 1851, was located in Habersham County, Ga. White County was formed from Habersham after the marriage date.

Gena on Genealogy

Gena Walls

Checking in the probate judge's office, a will was located for GREEN B. DODD and proved the death date of Aug. 19, 1879. He is buried in the Cleveland City Cemetery and has a marker. His wife, MARTHA, was named executrix of the will, and although letters of executrixship are listed in the index, none were found on those pages.

Mentioned in the will along with wife MARTHA are sons JAMES, JOHN and NEWTON and a daughter, HARRIET CLARK.

Based on the absence of daughter MARY in the will and no mention of grandchildren, it is safe to assume that MARY died prior to her father. It is not known whether she married or died single.

The next step was to check the land records as the census indicated that GREEN B. DODD owned a farm that was not mortgaged. The deed books had a power of attorney from JAMES R. DODD to mother MARTHA A. DODD, giving her authorization to conduct legal matters regarding the estate of GREEN B.

DODD. The power of attorney was dated April 9, 1883, Coryell County, Texas. That is the first document connecting this family to Texas.

In checking the 1900 census, JAMES R. DODD was located with wife MARY J. in Indian Territory. By 1910, this couple was living in Pontotoc County, Okla., and that census indicated that he had been married one time, that this was MARY J.'s third marriage and that he owned the ranch.

What happened to this couple? What was the first name of Mr. Clark that daughter HARRIET married, probably between 1870 and 1880? What happened to MARTHA, wife of GREEN B. DODD?

Anyone interested in this lineage who would like to share information, please write me: Gena Walls, 205 Admiral's Walk, St. Marys, Ga. 31558.

Woman's ex still haunts parents' house

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I divorced "Marvin" with hard feelings and I do not wish ever to see him again. I recently married a wonderful man who my parents agree is a "real nice guy." However, Marvin still visits my parents, who welcome him with open arms. I can't understand this, as they know how lousy he treated me. When my husband and I are at my parents' home, Marvin drops in knowing perfectly well we are there because our car is out in front.

I finally told my parents it wasn't my place to tell them who they could have in their home, but if I had to worry about bumping into Marvin, I just wouldn't visit them anymore. They just said they couldn't help it if he dropped in. Well, I think they could help it if they wanted to.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Marvin knows I am very uncomfortable, but he insists on coming in when I'm there.

Is there a solution?

TORN DEAR ABBY: Yes. You could ask your parents respectfully — but firmly — to instruct Marvin not to drop in when he sees your car out in front. If, as you say, your parents know how "lousy" he treated you, yet they welcome him with open arms, you have the right to ask them why. And I suggest you do.

DEAR ABBY: I have read in your column so many times about agencies that help adopted children "find" their biological parents, but since I am not adopted, I never gave the subject much thought, until now.

I would like to know my grandfather. My situation may be a little different because I already know who he is and where he is. I have his city, address and phone number. What I actually need is someone to make the initial contact. You see, he doesn't even know I exist, and just surprising him would be kind of tacky. I don't know if his family knows anything about me or not, so I'd hate to just ring his doorbell and say, "Hi, I'm your grandson." By the way, I am a grown man and I don't "need" anything.

KEEP ME ANONYMOUS DEAR ANONYMOUS: You are wise to have decided not to just "ring his doorbell." Break the ice by writing to him. Tell him who you are and express a desire to meet him. Then leave the rest to him.

Harvesters going for first-place deadlock

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

What a difference a season makes!

Last year at this time the Pampa Harvesters were struggling along with a 3-3 district record and their playoff hopes all but finished.

Now look at the Harvesters. Coach Robert Hale's crew is breezing along with a 5-1 District 1-4A mark and a chance to tie for first place in tonight's 8 p.m. shootout with Levelland in McNeely Fieldhouse.

"It's exciting to have the opportunity to be playing for a first-place tie. It's great to know what a team had to do to be able to play for the top spot," Hale said.

The Harvesters have reeled off three straight victories since losing to Hereford 66-53 on Jan. 2. And Hale is hoping that setback to the Whitefaces won't come back to haunt the Harvesters.

"That loss really hurt us because just about every team in the district has beaten Hereford. That's why our game with Dumas was such a gigantic win," Hale said.

Pampa bit the bullet by holding off Dumas for a 37-34 win Tuesday night.

Dumas is in last place with a 1-5 record.

a ball-control offense and position defense.

"We don't want to try and run up and down the floor with them. They're extremely quick, much like Berger was last year," Hale said.

The Harvesters will have a height advantage since the Lobos' tallest starter is 6-1 Kenneth Jackson... who is also their leading scorer in district play, averaging around 17 points per game.

Scott Moore, at 5-11, can also fill the basket. Moore drilled in 22 points in Levelland's 53-44 win over Lubbock Dunbar Friday said. "I'm just real happy with the way we've been playing."

Pampa's production on the other end of the court hasn't been shabby. Dustin Miller, Pampa's 6-4 junior post, is averaging 21 points per game and was the district's leading scorer going into Tuesday night's game with Demons. In overall games, Miller is averaging 17.5 per contest.

Jason Farmer, a 6-2 senior, is another Harvester near the top of the district scoring chart. Farmer is averaging 14.3 ppg in district contests and joins Miller in ball teams will be honored tonight and both players and parents are urged to attend the games.

Fans are also urged to wear their green and gold colors tonight.

In the girls' game, Levelland is the top-ranked team in Class 4A and zipped by the Lady Harvesters 56-39 in their first meeting.

If the Lady Harvesters can't pull off an upset, Coach Albert Nichols feels he can cut into the margin considerably.

"We're going to be ready for them," Nichols said.

The Lady Harvesters are tied with Dumas for third place in the district race after losing to the Demonettes 64-56 Tuesday night. The loss snapped a four-game district win streak for Pampa.

The Lady Harvesters have the misfortune of being in the same district with the top two teams in the state.

Last week, Levelland gained the top spot by knocking off Canyon, then ranked No. 1. All-stater Carol Bailey and Treva Morgan had 14 points each to pace the 42-39 win.

The girls' game is scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m.

Gregg accepts SMU job

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS—Southern Methodist's new head football coach says he's eager to resurrect the school's scandal-racked program and has a blunt message to any overzealous boosters who might offer improper aid.

"I'll smack 'em right in the mouth," warned 240-pound Forrest Gregg.

A pay-for-play scandal prompted the NCAA to inflict the "death penalty" on SMU for repeat violations, cancelling the 1987 season. SMU volunteered to skip the 1988 campaign while it cleansed its program.

Gregg, 54, of Birthright, Texas, the captain of the 1955 SMU team, signed a four-year contract on Thursday for an estimated $100,000 a year base salary. SMU has an option for a fifth year.

He was on the fourth year of a five-year contract with the Green Bay Packers. Gregg also was an All-Pro line yarder at Green Bay as a guard under Vince Lombardi.

"I played 15 years and coached 14 years, so I've been in the NFL most of my life," Gregg said. "I always thought that if the opportunity presented itself I'd like to come back to my school."

The move to SMU cost Gregg about $200,000.

"I'm not here to talk salary, I'm here to talk opportunity," Gregg said. "I'm pleased to be here."

He said it is time for SMU to bury its problems, which included the most NCAA football penalties in history.

"We're ready to put the past behind us," Gregg said. "I hope we're in the Cotton Bowl in less than a decade."

Integrity is the most important thing, he said. "We have to restore that to the program."

SMU can sign 15 players to scholarships on Feb. 10. Gregg will have to recruit by telephone as NCAA rules prohibit SMU from visiting recruits until next fall.

Gregg said recruiting for SMU "will be easy. I'll just look 'em right in the eye and tell them to come to SMU and get a great education."

He said he answered SMU's call "to put something back into the game. I've been drafted three times in my life, by the Army, by the Green Bay Packers and now SMU. I answered all three calls."

Colorado Coach Bill McCartney was SMU's first choice but turned the Mustangs down.

Gregg said he wasn't even in the running at the time.

"I was just serving in an advisory capacity," he said. "I was a little shocked when SMU called and said it wanted me."

Gregg received a standing ovation when he was introduced by Athletic Director Doug Single at a press conference Thursday.

"I'll give you about an hour to stop that," Gregg said. "I'm very pleased to be the head football coach at SMU. I'll start to work first thing tomorrow. I'm really pleased to be home."

SMU can hire five assistant coaches. Gregg said he would talk soon with Tim Edwards, head coach of L.D. Bell High School in nearby Hurst, who was among others that SMU considered for the head coaching job. Gregg said he wasn't certain whether any Packer assistants will follow him.

Gregg said he doesn't think the switch from the NFL to college will be a problem.

"Football is football," Gregg said. "The field is the same length and width. Only the hash marks are different."

Gregg said he can't understand alumni paying players.

"I never believed you could motivate anybody with money," he said. "It takes desire to play this game."

He said an athlete choosing SMU will have to think academics first.

FROM THE NOTEPAD: Did the Pampa City Commission note that a newly proposed municipal 18-hole golf course in Amarillo is expected to cost "a little over $2 million, including the clubhouse and maintenance facilities" and with work starting immediately would make the course playable "in the fall of '89"... # Elway, Kosar worlds apart

AFC championship

DENVER (AP) — Alike in terms of their success on the field and their sedate lives away from the game, quarterbacks Bernie Kosar and John Elway are, in the words of Denver Coach Dan Reeves, "as different as night and day" in their style of play.

The styles, however, have meshed perfectly with their teams, and that's one reason the Kosar-led Cleveland Browns and the Elway-led Denver Broncos are playing for the AFC championship on Sunday.

Kosar, the cerebral one, is a precocious 24-year-old who has sparked the Browns to AFC Central titles in each of his three years in the NFL.

At 6-foot-5 and 210 pounds, he appears gawky as he squats behind the center and painfully slow as he drops back to pass. He has no mobility to speak of. But his ability to read defenses and get rid of the ball from varying angles with surprising arm strength more than makes up for it.

"He has a very unorthodox throwing motion, sometimes sidearm, sometimes underarm, but he gets it there," Reeves said. "I've never seen anyone throw it from so many different positions. You think he's going to throw his arm off. To throw the ball the way he does, you have to have a tremendously strong arm. He can really rocket the ball. "He's a magician at getting rid of the ball when you think he's about to be sacked. And he's tremendously accurate, completing about 60 percent of his throws."

Reeves has noticed more maturity in Kosar since the teams met in last year's title game, won by Denver 23-20 in overtime.

Elway is cut from the more traditional mold, a drop-back passer with a classic delivery who also can throw on the run and is a constant threat to scramble. He ranked second on the team in rushing with 304 yards, and he led AFC quarterbacks in rushing for the fourth straight year.

His ability to improvise after avoiding a sack is what sets him apart from his colleagues. The strength of his arm is legendary. "He throws the ball so hard it's difficult not to catch it," Browns Coach Marty Schottenheimer said.

While his talents were clear from the moment he was the first player chosen in the 1983 draft, it took a galvanizing, 98-yard drive against Cleveland in last year's AFC title game to establish Elway as one of the game's best.

"I've been involved in a lot of long drives, but none that meant that much, with that much at stake," Reeves said.

Elway visits with Broncos backfield coach Nick Nicolau.

Williams hopes to make history

NFC championship

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's a bit of condescension when Doug Williams talks of Wade Wilson, the other erstwhile second-string quarterback who will start in Sunday's NFC championship game.

"Wade's been a career backup who's finally gotten his opportunity and made the most of it," says Williams, who for the second time in his nine-year career is a game away from becoming the first black quarterback to start in a Super Bowl. "I've always thought of myself as a starter."

Perhaps, but it's strange set of circumstances that place Williams and Wilson a game away from the Super Bowl, starting ahead of the two quarterbacks who represented the NFC in last year's Pro Bowl, Washington's Jay Schroeder and Minnesota's Tommy Kramer.

Williams has been here before, in 1979, when as a 24-year-old second-year-man he quarterbacked the Tampa Bay Bucs in a 9-0 loss to the Los Angeles Rams.

He's also one of those "whatever happened to..." guys, a man who drifted into the USFL in 1983 after the Bucs wouldn't meet his contract demands.

He didn't play at all from the summer of 1985 — no NFL team seemed interested — until the Redskins signed him as a backup to Schroeder a year ago. And last year, he threw all of one pass — it was incomplete, naturally — as the Redskins reached the NFC title game, losing to the New York Giants, 17-0.

But this year, the 26-year-old Schroeder hurt his shoulder in the opening game against Philadelphia and the 32-year-old Williams came off the bench to lead the Redskins to a 34-24 victory, throwing for 272 yards and two touchdowns. He started for Schroeder in the second game, a 21-20 loss to Atlanta, then went back on the bench.

But three weeks later, Williams was back when Coach Joe Gibbs inserted him in the second quarter and he threw two touchdown passes to lead the Redskins to a 20-13 victory over Detroit. He started the next game, a 30-26 loss to the Rams, then was back on the bench the following week.

He won the job for good, ironically, against the Vikings in the final regular-season game, coming off the bench to throw for 217 yards in the second half as Washington won in overtime. And he started again in last week's 21-17 playoff victory over Chicago, completing 14 of 29 for 207 yards and a touchdown.

Wilson's route has been more traditional, although until this year he was thought of as just another career backup, sort of a northern Don Strock or Jeff Rutledge.

Reds schedule open tryouts

The Cincinnati Reds will hold a tryout camp Saturday, Jan. 30 at the University of Houston baseball field.

The camp is open only to players who have completed their high school eligibility. College players are also prohibited from trying out.

Registration gets under way at 9 a.m. Jan. 30 and the camp will begin as soon as possible, ending when everyone has been fully evaluated.

Players are requested to bring their own uniforms and gloves. The Reds will provide catching gear (except gloves), baseballs, helmets and bats.

The camp will be directed by scouting supervisor Chuck LaMar and Reds' scouts Tony Robello and Larry Barton Jr. All players must pay their own expenses.
