Wal-Mart gives funds to aid economic development locally

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

Pampa gave a "textbook case in economic development" with its handling of the November Hoechst Celanese disaster, a Southwestern Public Service official said.

Addressing the Tuesday luncheon meeting of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, SPS Economic Development Director Jon Krebs of Amarillo discussed a combined effort for a regional economic development program and Pampa's role in it.

In a special related presentation, Pampa Wal-Mart Manager Fred Woods delivered a check from Wal-Mart International for $5,000 to the Pampa chamber, saying the money is to be "earmarked specifically for the economic development of Pampa." Before presenting the check, Woods said that before a community can progress in economic development areas, it needs to go out and actively recruit business and industry prospects. "And that takes money," he said.

Accompanied by regional Wal-Mart Manager Mike Duncan, Woods said the company was showing its interest in and commitment to Pampa.

During his speech, Krebs congratulated Pampa on the public support citizens provided in the wake of the Celanese plant explosion, culminating with the announcement that Hoechst Celanese Chemical Co. would rebuild its plant west of Pampa.

That support presented "a textbook case in economic development" in showing communities how to keep local industries, even after a major disaster, Krebs said. But he also encouraged Pampa to continue its pursuits to attract other industries and businesses to the city.

"For goodness sake, let them know how you came across" in the Celanese incident, he advised chamber members and guests. "Tell the world and let them know how Pampa takes care" of its local industry, Krebs said.

Though the incident and subsequent support concentrated on Hoechst Celanese, Krebs said it could easily have occurred "with any other Pampa plant" facing a disaster on such a major scale.

Such community support and backing of a local industry shows that "Pampa is not just a community, but an extraordinary one." See ECONOMIC, Page 2

Desk & Derrick to have seminar on new truck safety regulations

Guest speaker for the Jan. 26 meeting of the Desk and Derrick Club of Pampa will be Craig Wilkinson, rate auditor/supervisor from the Lubbock District of the Texas Railroad Commission.

The meeting will be held Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Pampa Country Club.

Wilkinson, who has been with the RRC for 8 years, will present a short seminar on Senate Bill 595, House Bill 908, the Texas Motor Carrier Act enforcement, commercial vehicle registration information and the Motor Carrier Safety Act.

He will discuss the latest information regarding changes in the trucking regulations and truck safety rules due to have gone into force this year. But after numerous complaints from truckers and state legislators, the state Public Safety Commission last week decided to postpone enforcement for nearly two years for in-state motor carriers until Sept. 1, 1989.

The Department of Public Safety was to have begun implementing enforcement of the new rules on Jan. 1, with 54 officers hired to enforce the regulations.

DPS Assistant Director Joe Milner last week said the safety commission thought it best to postpone the new regulations because it felt the trucking industry was not fully informed of the changes.

The new regulations have come under attack from farmers, small businessmen and small company truckers who felt they would face excessively stringent rules, be forced to hire extra drivers or even be forced out of business.

Members said guests are encouraged to attend the meeting.

Late last year the Railroad Commission had modified some of the requirements affecting farm vehicles and small carriers.

Legislators have indicated they probably will re-evaluate the rules in their next regular session beginning in January 1989.

Wilkinson is a 1974 graduate of Texas Tech University and holds a bachelor of science degree in education. Before his association with the commission, he was a teacher and coach with the Lubbock Independent School District.

Reservations for the Desk and Derrick meeting may be made by calling Glynda Martin at 665-2341 or, after 5 p.m., Terresa Snow at 669-6079.

Members said guests are encouraged to attend the meeting.

Storms bring tornadoes, plane crashes killing 27

By The Associated Press

A huge storm system pushed into the Great Lakes today after unleashing a swarm of tornadoes that killed five people in the South, led to the crashes of at least six planes and stranded hundreds of motorists in the Plains in snowdrifts up to 14 feet high.

At least 27 deaths have been blamed on bad weather this week, including 10 people killed in five plane crashes blamed on fog in Arkansas, California, Illinois, Missouri and Texas.

A commuter plane carrying 17 people crashed in a mountainous area near Durango, Colo. Tuesday night, killing eight and forcing survivors, including one carrying a small child, to wade through waist-deep snow to summon help.

The nine survivors of Tuesday night's crash were transported to Mercy Medical Center at Durango for treatment of injuries that ranged from lacerations, frostbite and hypothermia to head and internal injuries, hospital spokeswoman Jane Brown said today.

Two, including the 4-year-old girl, were treated and released, five were in good condition, one was in serious condition and one was critically injured, the spokeswoman said.

Rescuers were led to the twin-engine, turboprop's wreckage by the footprints of seven survivors, who walked from one-half to three-quarters of a mile through snow measuring up to 4 feet before reaching the nearest road, authorities said.

Two others were extricated from the wreckage after snow tractors and a bulldozer were used to cut a trail through the scrub oak and brush along the rolling hills and hummocks.

"Access is difficult," La Plata Sheriff Bill Gardner said. "It took us over an hour to even get personnel to them."

Brown said one survivor told her the crash was "like landing on a pillow in that the snow was so deep."

"One gentleman commented that both wings were ripped off the plane and he managed to escape through a hole in the fuselage," she said.

Brown said the hospital was withholding the identities of the victims pending notification of relatives.

The plane was carrying 15 passengers and two crew members to Durango from Denver when it went down at 7:30 p.m., 10 miles east of Durango in light snowfall, said Bruce Hicks, a spokesman for Continental Airlines in Houston.

The craft is owned by Colorado Springs-based Trans Colorado, which leases planes and crew to Rocky Mountain Airways, a Continental subsidiary that flies under the name of Continental Express.

"The plane has sustained substantial damage, but it is structurally intact," said Sheriff's Sgt. Dan Bender.

Survivor Peter Schauer, a consultant from Missouri, walked about half an hour from the wreckage to a house just off highway U.S. 160.

Calls for help were made from the house, said its owner, Thelma Tate.

"He said it (the plane) was too low. He's sure the plane was functioning well," Tate said.

"(The pilot) tipped the wing and caught a tree with that tipped wing and it twirled the plane around and it just nosed into the hill," she said. "Of

Parties draw places for ballots

A Republican presidential candidate who asked too late that his name be withdrawn from the Texas ballot and a virtually unheard-of Democrat will top primary ballots March 8 following drawings last week.

Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont will head the list of Republican candidates for president on the Gray County ballot. Vice President George Bush will be the sixth and final candidate listed.

For the Democrats, where 11 candidates are seeking the presidency but only seven are given any chance of winning, David E. Duke of Louisiana will top the list. Duke, who claims to be head of the National Association for the Advancement of White People, is a former Ku Klux Klan official.

Tennessee Sen. Al Gore will be on the bottom of the list.

In the race for U.S. senator,

Congressman Beau Boulter of Amarillo heads the list of four Republicans, followed by Milton Fox, Wes Gilbreath and Ned Snead. Democratic incumbent Lloyd Bentsen will be followed by challenger Joe Sullivan on the Democratic ballot.

Six GOP candidates in the race to succeed Boulter are led on the ballot by Amarillo evangelist Alan Pickering. Rancher Ed Lehman of Vernon heads the three-man Democratic list.

On the ballot for state senator, Republican Teel Bivins heads his party's list, followed by Ron Slover. Both are of Amarillo.

Nancy Garms of Amarillo is atop the Democratic list, followed by H. Bryan Poff and Mel Phillips, both of Canyon.

Gary Ivey of Ralls and Tom Christian of Claude will appear in that order in the GOP race for state representative. Pampa Chamber of Commerce President Warren Chisum leads the Democrats, followed by school Superintendent J.J. Barlow Jr. of Afton.

In local contested races, all on the Democratic side, Sam Condo will appear first on the ballot for Precinct 3 county commissioner, followed by O.H. Price; Rex McAnelly will lead off the Precinct 1 county commissioner ballot, followed by Dick L. Hale and Herman Law; and incumbent Tax Assessor-Collector Margie Gray will top the list in her race against former Gray County Chief Appraiser Charles Buzard.

Gray County Republicans will have one contested precinct chairmanship in Precinct 11, where Vijay Murgai and Michael Wilson Jr. are squaring off.

Absentee voting begins Feb. 17. Voters have until Feb. 7 to register.

Weather watch

With winds blowing freezing temperatures across the Pampa region Tuesday, these Wilson Elementary School students found warmth inside the building while waiting for their rides home. Cold weather and brisk winds continued today, but a slow warming trend will bring higher temperatures by the weekend.

Climbing prices, falling dollar push inflation rates higher

WASHINGTON (AP)—Consumer prices, climbing at their fastest pace in six years, rose 4.4 percent in 1987, the government said today. At fault were rebounding energy costs, higher prices for services and the plunge in the value of the dollar.

Worse yet, last year's inflation was four times the 1.1 percent rate posted for 1986.

Still, the gain in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index was considered moderate by most economists and fell far below the double-digit inflation rates that ushered in the 1980s.

One piece of good news: Retail prices ended the year on a modest note, up just 0.1 percent in December, the smallest monthly gain since July 1986. The index, based on a hypothetical selection of goods and services, had risen 0.3 percent in November and 0.4 percent in October.

While the rate for 1986, the lowest in more than two decades, had been paced by the collapse in world oil prices, much of the 1987 increase reflected the partial rebound in energy costs.

Those prices rose 8.2 percent in 1987, regaining a portion of their 19.7 percent 1986 loss.

In December, energy costs fell 1.1 percent, including a 2.2 percent decline for gasoline, a 1.5 percent fall for heating oil and a 0.2 percent drop for natural gas and electricity.

For the year, gasoline prices were up 18.6 percent; heating oil costs gained 12.9 percent; natural gas and electricity charges were up 0.3 percent.

Food and beverage costs were up 3.5 percent for all of 1987. In December, they rose 0.5 percent, led by a record 72.4 percent in lettuce prices. Over the last two months, lettuce prices have doubled because of disease and bad weather in California and Arizona.

Minus the volatile food and energy categories, consumer prices rose 3.5 percent in 1987. This category was up 0.1 percent in December.

Overall, consumer prices last year showed the highest rate of inflation since 1981, when it was 8.9 percent.

With the exception of last year's surprisingly low pace, inflation has ranged from 3.8 percent to 4.0 percent since 1981.

The companion Producer Price Index, released last week, showed that wholesale prices rose a more modest 2.2 percent in 1987.

The producer index is lower because it reflects only prices received by U.S. manufacturers and farmers for their products and does not include two of the fastest-rising categories in the CPI — services and imported goods.

The consumer index does include both services, like medical costs, and imported goods, reflected in categories such as apparel and new automobiles.

Service prices as a whole rose 4.6 percent in 1987, including a 5.8 percent rise in medical care and a 4.0 percent rise in entertainment costs. Medical care costs were up 0.4 percent in December and entertainment costs 0.3 percent.

Fire report

The Pampa Fire Department reported no fire runs in the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

Barricaded polygamists fire more shots at police in Utah

MARION, Utah (AP)—A barricaded clan of polygamists opened fire at police floodlights early today for the third time in 14 hours, as officers surrounded the mountain compound for a fifth day, authorities said.

No one was injured and police did not return fire.

Six to eight rounds were fired about 6 a.m. today from the log house on the group's homestead, officials said. About 30 rounds of gunfire greeted police as they turned on floodlights late Tuesday, and officers said they crawled 15 to 20 yards through snow to safety.

"We could hear the bullets pass us, I'd say about five feet above my head," said Tom Wittman of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms office in Salt Lake City.

Six to 10 shots were fired Tuesday afternoon as police brought in the lights and low-flying aircraft to step up pressure on the clan, authorities said. No lights were hit.

"The gunfire only indicates to us that their threats are real," said Doug Bodrero, deputy state director of public safety.

Teams of officers in vehicles were stationed around the log house on the 2 1/2-acre compound late Tuesday, Bodrero said. "We not only want to make sure that no one comes out, we want to make sure no one goes in," he said.

At least 14 people have been holed up in the house since a Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) Church chapel one-half mile away was bombed early Saturday.

Felony charges in the bombing have been filed against Vickie Singer, 44-year-old widow of polygamist John Singer, who was killed in a confrontation with police nine years ago Monday, and Addam Swapp, 27, who is married to two of Singer's daughters.

John Singer was excommunicated from the Mormon Church for espousing polygamy, which the church abandoned in 1890.

Bodrero said Swapp also is a relative who has acted as a mediator during the siege has denied that.

Bodrero said it was unclear if the shots were aimed at police or the lights. He would not say whether the shots damaged the lights, but they came on after dark.

Vickie Singer said by telephone Saturday that the bombing was "symbolic of what is coming," and vowed there would be other deaths.

A son-in-law of Singer, Roger Bates, who visited the cabin Sunday and Monday nights to mediate, said the clan has vowed to hold out until Singer is "resurrected."

The clan leaders have refused since Saturday to talk with authorities. A televised plea was issued to them Tuesday night to communicate with police.

"If there's one thing we can do to get the message across, it's that they open the phone lines to us and let us work this out person to person," FBI Agent Cal Clegg said in the statement authorities believed would be viewed on the homestead's television.

On Saturday, Mrs. Singer said there were 14 people in the compound. But authorities said Tuesday they believed Swapp's brother, Jonathan, 21, also was inside.

Addam Swapp reportedly has said the bombing was in retaliation for Singer's 1979 death, which the clan blames on the Mormon Church. Singer had defied authorities by keeping his children out of schools, saying they would expose the children to sex, drugs and teaching of racial equality.

United Way to honor volunteers

The annual meeting of the Pampa United Way will be at 11:45 a.m. Friday in the M.K. Brown Meeting Room of the Pampa Community Building, 200 N. Ballard.

"We want each of the United Way agencies to be represented," said President Jack Peoples. "We would like for as many of the board members from each agency to attend also."

Peoples said the annual meeting and awards luncheon "is extremely important," with volunteers to be recognized "for the tremendous job they did for our 1988 campaign."

He encouraged all United Way campaign volunteers also to be present, with drive Chairman Duane Harp being there "to share in the thanks."

Peoples said 36 employee groups will receive awards, inviting representatives of the groups to attend the Friday meeting.

Reservations should be made by 10 a.m. Thursday. Cost is $5 a person.

Those wanting to make reservations must call United Way Executive Administrator Katrina Bigham at 669-1001.

Israeli police jeep injures Palestinian protestor today

JERUSALEM (AP)—A police jeep hit by stones ran over and seriously injured a Palestinian protestor today, then struck a utility pole and overturned, injuring the two policemen inside, police and Israel radio said.

Police said Palestinian children had put up a barricade of burning tires in the Jerusalem Arab suburb of Issawiya and threw stones, hitting the jeep and making its driver lose control.

There was no immediate word on the condition of the injured protestor or policemen.

In northern Israel today, Israeli troops killed three Palestinian guerrillas who infiltrated from Lebanon by cutting a security fence, the military command said.

The Fatah guerrilla faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization claimed responsibility and said several Israelis were wounded in the exchange of gunfire.

The military command said one Israeli soldier was wounded.

In Gaza City in the occupied Gaza Strip, meanwhile, soldiers forced open stores shut in a commercial strike, and Arab doctors and nurses in two hospitals staged a sit-in, demanding entry to refugee camps to treat injured Palestinians.

In Arab east Jerusalem, a commercial strike held strong today.

Israel radio reported today the United States is considering sending a special envoy to Israel to investigate the situation in the territories Israel occupied in the 1967 Middle East War. It did not elaborate.

In Washington on Tuesday, Yossi Beilin, a senior official from the Israeli Foreign Ministry, suggested a U.S. envoy be sent to promote Arab-Israeli peace talks.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Don C. Cofman in Tel Aviv confirmed that Michael Armacost, the undersecretary for political affairs, would visit in about two weeks. But Cofman said the visit was not related to the last six weeks of anti-Israeli protests, in which at least 36 Arabs have been killed by Israeli gunfire.

Soldiers today fired tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse Arab demonstrators in the West Bank town of Ramallah, 16 miles north of Jerusalem, according to the Palestine Press Service. A soldier was slightly injured when a stone struck him, the Arab-run news agency said.

It also reported protests in eight Arab villages near Ramallah. The army said it had no immediate comment.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Tuesday that Israeli soldiers were under orders to use beatings instead of gunfire to try to curb the protests. He also announced that Israel would ban foreign countries and organizations as well as private Israeli groups from shipping food to Palestinian refugee camps.

Economic

community," he stated.

Discussing economic development and its potential for the region, Krebs said "the future of Pampa is very strong," adding that its attitudes expressed during the Celanese case "certainly has shown that."

Krebs said the public support demonstrated three basic principles in implementing economic development programs in a community: a strategy (coordinated efforts to convince Hoechst Celanese to remain in Pampa), existence of good services (the local Community Awareness and Emergency Response program demonstrated that) and a marketing plan (efforts to sell the community to prospects).

SPS, in projects undertaken in late 1986, has decided to take an active role in aiding communities within its service area to move forward with economic development, Krebs explained.

"I have a very paternal feeling toward the towns I and Southwestern Public Service serve," he said.

Through contacts and joint projects with communities in the SPS service area, there has been "a substantial buildup in the local initiatives of communities" to actively organize and undertake economic development programs, both on a regional basis and as individual cities, Krebs said.

The combined effort can benefit both the region and individual communities within it, he explained, with the region binding together toward common goals to improve the current economic situations.

"There's a need for alliances to be formed," he stated. With communities joining together in the Panhandle and South Plains, "we might all help each other" in getting the area out of the present situation it is in.

"There's a rebuilding of the state business climate that needs to be done," Krebs said.

He said that in the early years of this decade, the business climate in the state was good. But through lack of foresight and a complacent attitude, Texas lost a lot of the advantages it had been able to offer businesses, he explained. He cited failures in legislation that would have encouraged more business to come into Texas, an "antiquated tax system" for corporations and high prices for transportation.

Now communities need to keep after the commitment of businesses and industries already located in the state, especially those like Hoechst Celanese and IRI International Inc. that have demonstrated their public commitment and support in Pampa, he said. But new business and industry also must be attracted to the area. Krebs said SPS has committed itself to working actively with communities toward that end.

"Pampa has fine attributes to offer," he said. Combined with those also offered by SPS and other communities in the region, Pampa can work to capitalize on opportunities for better economic development programs, he explained.

SPS has developed a strategic plan to go out and get other companies interested in the region and its communities, including a target study that was presented in an area "economic summit" meeting in Lubbock in March 1987, Krebs noted.

Krebs said SPS and a task force of area community and business leaders have developed a marketing plan that will be sophisticated enough to approach companies and show them how and why the area can benefit them, including information on utility rates, transportation and labor force.

Communities then will be informed of what companies have expressed interest in coming into the region and be invited to implement their programs to attract the companies, he explained.

Krebs encouraged Pampa to build on its base, pick its targets "and go after them."

course, there's a lot of snow and that cushioned it so it didn't catch on fire or anything."

Schauer was one of those taken to Mercy with minor injuries.

Dick Hunt, chief executive officer of Trans Colorado, said he didn't want to comment on the crash and had no further details.

"I don't see anything that can be salvaged — I mean, nothing at all," said Richard Cannon, whose two brothers-in-law were killed when a twister ripped away his house in Fayette County, Tenn. "There might be a few shirts and pants down the hill that we can get up, but that's about it."

The storm system, which caused an estimated $72 million in damage to Southern California and Mexico, packed heavy snow that shut down schools, offices, airports and hundreds of miles of highways in the Plains on Tuesday.

Snow accumulations early today included 20 inches in Mullen, Neb., 16 inches in Goodland, Kan., 11 in North Platte, Neb., and 9 in Minneapolis and Green Bay, Wis.

"The only thing that's moving out here is snowflakes and snowmobiles," said Carrie Rice of Lake Andes, S.D., where more than a foot of new snow fell.

Three tornadoes roared through western Tennessee on Tuesday, killing at least five people, injuring dozens and causing widespread damage. Hardest hit was Fayette County, east of Memphis, where three died.

That tornado followed a 22-mile path as wide as three-quarters of a mile, said Chip Ragon of the county Emergency Management Agency. Up to 40 homes were heavily damaged or destroyed, he said.

Another twister cut a 10-mile swath through northern Alabama, injuring 26 people, including a child who was pinned under a house trailer.

Tornadoes also caused damage and injured at least one person in northern Mississippi, and high winds badly damaged about 30 homes and injured seven in Arkansas.

Drifts 14 feet high were reported near Kimball, Neb., while the Kansas Highway Patrol said the blowing snow closed 250 miles of I-70.

Prison bonds approved; maximum-security site uncertain

AUSTIN (AP) — Although bonds for only one maximum-security prison have been approved by the Texas Bond Review Board, Gov. Bill Clements said he may call a special legislative session to build another one.

"I certainly have that as an option, and I'm thinking about it," Clements said Tuesday, after the bond board approved $153.6 million in bonds for prisons.

The bonds include one 2,250-bed maximum-security prison unit. A legal roadblock put a halt to earlier plans to build two such prisons, one in Amarillo and one in Gatesville.

Gatesville now seems the most likely site for the facility because site preparation has been done there, said Texas prisons director Jim Lynaugh. Under the state's original plan, the Gatesville prison was to be built before the Amarillo prison, he said.

Clements, bond board chairman, added that he would prefer not to call a special session on the matter. He said he and Attorney General Jim Mattox are reviewing other options, including a section of the appropriations bill giving the governor emergency prison authority.

"I fully intend to have that second Michael unit built. ... We have now 50 percent of our inmates that are hardened, violent criminals and we need that additional capacity of the maximum-security unit," Clements said.

Prison board Chairman Charles Terrell said his panel will make a decision on the prison unit's location at a meeting that probably will be scheduled within two weeks.

Terrell and Clements said they will work to see that two maximum-security prisons eventually are built in addition to the Mark Michael maximum-security unit built last year at Palestine.

Amarillo or Gatesville also could get a facility that is different from maximum security, Terrell said.

"We have a commitment to those two cities. ... We will fulfill our commitment to them. We told them they'd have prisons, and they will. It's a matter of time, or a matter of the type of unit," he said.

The bonds only include one maximum-security prison because Mattox said the Legislature only authorized one. Lawmakers authorized bonds for prison construction in one bill and authorized specific projects in another bill, said Tom Pollard, bond board executive director.

Clements said it was unfortunate that there was a conflict in the legislative package that authorized the 10,400 beds but didn't specify a second Michael unit.

The governor said although he believes the state has the authority to build a lesser-security prison, such units are not needed as much as another maximum-security unit.

Terrell, who appealed to the board to find a way for the Texas Department of Corrections to build another maximum-security unit, said the prison board construes the appropriations bill as permissive, disagreeing with Mattox's

Although the board acknowledged the opinion, action must be taken to supply the state with badly needed maximum-security facilities, Terrell told the bond board.

"Due to mistakes made many years ago on priorities in Texas, our state is mired in a crime rate that is simply not acceptable. We have more criminals on our streets than any state in America — 300,000 on probation and over 50,000 on parole," he said.

Terrell recounted the stories of several crime victims, including his wife, who was robbed at gunpoint in their Dallas driveway last spring while their grandson was in the car.

Amarillo was tapped as the site for the prison Nov. 9.

Governor intervenes in ad agency selection

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican Gov. Bill Clements intervened in selecting an advertising agency for the lucrative Texas tourism account, jeopardizing the chances of a previously favored firm that has Democratic ties, an aide has confirmed.

An aide to Clements said Tuesday that the governor's intervention had nothing to do with politics.

GSD&M was the consensus choice of a Texas Department of Commerce selection committee that heard presentations last month from five agencies vying for an estimated $8 million-a-year contract.

"All I know is that we pitched against everybody, and it seemed like from what everybody told me that we were the unanimous selection," said Roy Spence, president of the Austin firm.

Bill Lauderback, the commerce department's executive director, said the four members of the selection committee agreed that one company stood out after they heard the five firms' presentations on Dec. 8.

"I think it is fair to say that the general opinion was that this firm made the best oral presentation," Lauderback said. "There was a consensus of opinion."

He declined to identify the committee's choice, but sources told the Dallas Morning News it was GSD&M, which handled political advertising for Democrat Mark White's successful 1982 campaign that unseated Clements as governor.

The agency also did advertising for Walter Mondale's presidential campaign in 1984 and has worked for State Treasurer Ann Richards and Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, both Democrats.

McCann-Erickson of New York likely will be chosen when the commerce department board makes its decision public on Jan. 28, the sources said.

Lauderback and fellow selection committee member Ed Vetter, who is commerce department board chairman, told Clements of the panel's consensus on Dec. 14. GSD&M, McCann-Erickson and Neal Spelce Communications, the company that now has the state's tourism account, repeated their presentations before the governor at his Capitol office.

Town that once spurned singer, welcomes her home as a hero

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Janis Joplin, who fled this Gulf Coast city in her youth to become a wailing symbol of 1960s rock 'n' roll, finally became a hometown hero on what would have been her 45th birthday.

"Happy Birthday, Janis!" said Port Arthur Mayor Malcolm Clark to thunderous applause from a crowd gathered Tuesday night. "This is truly the start of something big."

About 4,000 people packed into the Port Arthur Civic Center for the dedication of a Janis Joplin Memorial.

Ms. Joplin died on Oct. 4, 1970 at age 27 in Hollywood, Calif., of what a coroner ruled was a drug overdose.

She once joked that she had no friends in her hometown, and the memorial was the first time the city has recognized its most prominent citizen.

Port Arthur, with a population of about 58,000, is primarily an oil and refining center on the Gulf of Mexico. Like other areas of Texas, its economy has been adversely affected by the recent drop in oil prices.

The life and times of the rock 'n' roll and blues singer will become part of the Southeast Texas Musical Heritage Exhibit, which also will include tributes to other East Texas musicians such as Johnny and Edgar Winter.

"This could turn into, for Port Arthur, what Elvis Presley did for Memphis," said Edith Huber, director of the Port Arthur Convention and Visitors Bureau.

The memorial was the idea of Port Arthur businessman John Palmer, who was one of Ms. Joplin's classmates at Thomas Jefferson High School, where Ms. Joplin graduated in 1960.

Palmer paid for the sculpture of Ms. Joplin that is the centerpiece of the memorial.

"Janis was unique, determined to do whatever was needed to succeed in her chosen profession," said the late singer's sister, Laura Joplin Pelley, 39. "Even when she was number one, she had to knock herself out to stay on top."

Ms. Pelley now lives in Houston, and the singer's brother, Mike, 35, lives in Tucson, Ariz.

"There is still a part of me that wishes I could be home baking a cake, talking to her on her birthday," said Ms. Pelley. "Thank you so much. We love you, Port Arthur."

Among the items of Ms. Joplin's life that will be on display in the exhibition are her Bible, two signed high-school yearbooks, one of her gold records, jewelry and a 5-foot-tall Christmas decoration she painted at age 16.

Copies of newspaper and magazine articles about her will also be on display, as well as record jackets from many of her albums and a 1957 program for a concert by a choir and girls' glee club she attended.

A painting of Jesus she painted as a teenager also is included, along with a series of posters she made in the ninth grade depicting a Wizard of Oz book.

Ms. Joplin's parents moved to Arizona after her death, where her father later died. Her mother was not able to attend the event because of ill health.

Testimony continues in bomb hoax trial

LUBBOCK (AP) — Testimony was scheduled to be completed today in an aggravated robbery trial in which the victim was sent to rob a bank wearing a bomb-type device.

Testimony began Tuesday in the trial of Rodger Noel Corfield, 21, of San Angelo, accused of the March 30 holdup attempt, in which the bomb turned out to be a fake. Corfield also was indicted for aggravated kidnapping, aggravated assault and attempted theft over $20,000.

Joyce Allene Heald, 61, of Lubbock Tuesday identified Corfield as the man who entered her home at gunpoint, robbed her, strapped what he said was a bomb around her and drove her to the Bank of the West.

Former bank vice president Mike Phelps testified in state district court that Mrs. Heald said the bank must hand over $40,000 or the bomb would detonate.

Defense attorneys contend that Corfield was only part of an extortion conspiracy involving Mrs. Heald's grandson, David Kingston, and another man, Wayland Ray Martin.

No charges were ever filed against Kingston, and a Lubbock County grand jury earlier declined to indict Martin.

Corfield faces five to 99 years or life in prison and a maximum $10,000 fine if convicted. He is eligible for probation because he has no prior felony convictions.

DOE's super collider list to include Texas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas has a good chance to beat out six other states in the race for the lucrative "super collider," says Sen. Phil Gramm.

The finalists — Texas, Illinois, North Carolina, Tennessee, Arizona, Michigan and Colorado — were previously chosen by a scientific panel as being the best overall sites for the atom smasher.

"So we have now come down to seven," Gramm, R-Texas, said Tuesday. "We're expecting official site visits probably in the early spring. I will be setting up a meeting with the entire Texas delegation to propose a visit with DOE Secretary (John) Herrington to reconfirm our commitment to the project."

"Each of the seven are being considered at an equal footing from a technological standpoint," Gramm said. "But we are down to consideration based on economics rather than technical factors."

"I feel we have some clear advantages," he said. "No. 1, a cost advantage. No. 2, the people of Texas and the Legislature ... have agreed to put up a billion dollars in seed money. No other state has matched that."

And then there is the political factor, the Texas senator said.

"The DOE wants this project built and one of the strong points of putting it in Texas is we are unified behind it," he said, implying the political clout of Texans in Washington will serve the state well.

New York, which also was recommended as a candidate state by the National Academy of Sciences and the National Academy of Engineering last month, was not on the list announced Tuesday.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo earlier this month asked the DOE to drop consideration of the site as a location for the $4.4 billion atom smasher because of opposition from local residents.

Bids received on new McClellan Creek bridge

AMARILLO — Plano Bridge and Culvert of Fort Worth is the apparent low bidder on a project to remove and replace McClellan Creek Bridge on Texas Highway 273, about 6 miles north of McLean.

Plano's bid was the lowest of five received on the project by the Texas Highway and Public Transportation Commission in Austin. The commission is expected to formally award the contract next week.

The McClellan Creek Bridge, built in 1948, has a roadway width of 26 feet. The replacement structure will have a roadway width of 40 feet.

The contract calls for removing and replacing the bridge, minor widening of roadway approaches and updating metal beam guard fences to present standards.

Jerry L. Raines of Pampa will be the Highway Department resident engineer directly supervising the project. Raines said he expects the work to take about nine months to complete.

In other projects, a Plainview contractor, High Plains Pavers, is the apparent low bidder to seal coat 286.4 miles of southern Texas Panhandle highways next summer, including Gray County stretches.

High Plains' $1.498 million bid was the lowest of six recently submitted on the entire project to the Austin commission.

The contract calls for seal coating:

- U.S. 60 from near the east city limit of Pampa northeast to the Roberts County line;
- I-40 from 0.6 of a mile west of McClellan Road east to the Donley County line;
- State 273 from Loop 555 at McLean north, west and north to the North Fork of the Red River;
- Spur 398 from State 273 north of Lefors to State 273 south of Lefors;
- Farm-to-Market Road 3143 from the end of the brick pavement in McLean south and east to the Donley County line;
- FM 2391 from the Roberts County line southeast to State 152; and
- FM 282 from State 152 north to the Roberts County line.

The contract is expected to be awarded by the highway commission when it meets again later this month.

Seal coat work on Texas Panhandle highways is planned to be started and completed during the summer. A seal coat — a placement of asphalt and rock — preserves and protects the riding surface of a highway and extends its useful life.

Henry L. "Lou" Gallegly of Dalhart will be the highway department's resident engineer who will directly supervise the work.

Maybe someday we'll overcome

My family has always been threatened by Martin Luther King and the civil rights movement.

Oh, we were all of upstanding Illinois Yankee stock. Unlike those hicks down south, we never objected to black people using "our" restrooms or water fountains. We didn't mind when "colored" kids came to school with us, as long as they weren't bused in. And we never mistreated our maid, Leonelle, who would come loyally every Tuesday or Wednesday in her crisp white work dress.

But when they began marching in Selma, Ala., and they began chanting at the Lincoln Memorial, and they began rioting in Watts, we began to worry.

Perhaps most threatening was that song they kept singing:

We shall overcome.
We shall overcome.
We shall overcome, someday.

Such a militant-sounding song. What were they planning to do to us? Maybe there was some merit to J. Edgar Hoover's investigation into alleged communist connections in the civil rights movement. Khrushchev was right when he said "we will bury you."

Now, 20 years later, the paranoia seems so silly. Mom grew out of it. My brothers grew out of it. Most of the country grew out of it.

And, having been only 9-years-old at the time of the King assassination, I grew out of it. I even dated a black guy when I was in college. I'm open-minded.

But now, 20 years later, the refrain We shall overcome haunts us in another way. It's not society that must be overcome. It's our attitudes. It's my attitude.

My "liberal" attitude smacked me right in the face recently when I had to leave the house for a week.

Off Beat

By Cathy Spaulding

I was getting my house and key ready for my house sitter, when I noticed my new next-door neighbors fixing something in their back yard.

My new next-door neighbors are members of a minority.

Despite my better intentions, I began to worry. "You don't think they saw me or that they know I'm going on vacation," I worried to myself. I double-checked my locks and windows to make sure they were secure against "theft."

Who am I fooling? I feel like a hypocrite even writing this.

Martin Luther King's "dream" will not come true through social upheaval. It will not come true with a holiday alone.

It will come true when that gut feeling of fear and apprehension about other races, other nationalities and other classes is replaced with acceptance, with tolerance, with love.

All our self-righteous clamoring for "civil rights" is meaningless until we are sure we have eliminated our own private prejudices.

When we have this total change of attitude, then we shall overcome.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Cheer up, Ron — it's not that bad!

In these latter days of its tenure at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., sometimes the Reagan administration is hard to fathom. Even when things are running in its favor, it still hopes for the worst. Other presidential administrations overstate economic predictions, installing Rosy Scenario as top White House economic forecaster: Ronald Reagan hires Rodney Dangerfield. Ron don't get no respect, and he don't want none.

Recently the administration revised downward its predictions for the American economy in 1988. In August it had said the economy would spurt upward at a 3.5 percent rate. Now it says it will stagger up only 2.4 percent. That is also a sharp decline from the 4.3 percent rate the economy rose from July to September this year and probably down from the current October-to-December quarter.

Why the new pessimism? The White House has fallen victim to the sour predictions that followed the Oct. 19 stock-market crash. Top Oval Office economic adviser Beryl Sprinkel has cited the crash's "negative impact." But this is silly. The market is but one indicator. Almost every other indicator has continued heading upward. In November, the month after the crash, industrial output, new home building and even consumer spending kept rising, as unemployment remained steady and inflation stayed under control.

And look more closely at the Wall Street data. True, the market has plunged 700 points from its stratospheric heights in August. But the day the administration's gloomy prediction was announced, the stock market finished at 2003.98 — up 5.7 percent since Jan. 1 of 1987. Stock markets boom and bust, but the key is the general trend, not the gyrations. The White House is panicking like a yuppie MBA reading his first ticker-tape.

The new, gloomy predictions show just how far the Reagan administration, to its own detriment, has departed from its original supply-side principles. "Supply-side" economics has been derided much in recent years, but its basic principles remain valid. Simply stated, supply siders say that government taxes and controls tie down businesses, forcing them to cut back the goods they "supply" to the economy. In contrast, tax cuts and deregulation unleash such companies, allowing them to "supply" more goods to the economy.

So what things will hurt supply in 1988? The recent tax increase was bad, as will be the new Social Security tax hike that came Jan. 1. But that date also brings the final tax cut of the 1986 tax reform. The good and the bad should cancel each other out.

Moreover, protectionist fever has receded a bit. Unemployment should keep going down. Inflation should remain under control. And the record economic boom we've enjoyed for more than the past five years remains as a rock-solid foundation. The administration's first 1988 prediction, for a 3.5 percent growth rate, seems more sensible than the new pessimism.

Cheer up, Ron. Drink some reinforced egg nog. Things are going to be better this year than your overly sober advisers think.

One speech he remembers

WASHINGTON — Newsmen who cover politics are gluttons for oratorical punishment. Fate has condemned us to listen to speeches by the thousands — speeches in the House, speeches in the Senate, speeches in state legislative halls, speeches on the campaign trail. Over the past 47 years, by rough calculation, I have listened to 50,000 speeches, and I have forgotten 49,999 of them.

One speech I remember. It was the greatest speech I ever heard. I thought of it the other day in reading that Charles Malik had died on Dec. 28 in Beirut. He had served as Lebanon's ambassador to the United States in the mid-'50s, and later he had served as president of the U.N. General Assembly. On the afternoon of June 11, 1960, he came to Williamsburg, Va., to deliver an address.

Let me set the stage. Imagine, if you will, a small legislative chamber, richly paneled in dark wood, the walls lined with hard benches. This is the faithfully reproduced hall in which the Virginia House of Burgesses sat in Colonial times. The room smells faintly of candlewax and furniture polish. This afternoon the only light comes from shafts of sunshine streaming through the round windows high above the speaker's dais. An audience of business and professional guests has come from Richmond for ceremonies marking Virginia's Declaration of Rights of 1776.

Malik is introduced as the principal speaker. He is short, swarthy, a mathematician, physicist, philosopher, diplomat. The benches are uncomfortable and his topic sounds unpromising. He is to ask us, "Will the future redeem the past?" We are prepared for the inattentive wiggles. Then he begins, softly, in a voice that plays on the strings of a cello, and the hall is suddenly rapt.

He is concerned with this moment in history, which consists of "a life-and-death struggle between international communism and the rest of the world, especially the Western world, and in the Western world especially the United States of America." He ranges himself wholly on the side of the West, "despite its many imperfections, mistakes, failures and sins."

Since the war's end, the West has done many good things. Malik acknowledges the Marshall Plan, the Atlantic Alliance, the Truman Doctrine, the integration of Germany and Japan into the Western bloc. These are solid achievements, and yet: "We must face on the debit side a series of depressing facts."

Malik now launches into a series of rhetorical questions. Communism started from zero 43 years earlier and now rigidly controls one-third of mankind: "Was this phenomenal development inevitable?" Communism has claimed the 600 million people of China: "Was this development inevitable?" The Korean War had ended in a draw: "Was this outcome inevitable?"

Southeast Asia had witnessed an advance of communism and a retreat of freedom: "Was this advance and retreat inevitable?" Communists had become active and influential in Africa and Asia; they had intensified their activity in the United States: "Was this penetration inevitable?"

The questions had the impact of sledgehammers. One by one he pounded them home — 21 shattering inquiries in all. Then he made his point: "Either you believe that these things were inevitable, or you believe that they could not have been helped. And if you believe they could not have been helped, Marxian communism will have already won your soul." In this event, the future never will redeem the past, "and we will only pass from one fiasco to another."

Now his voice was soaring. The West could have acted to prevent the communist gains: "If only people rose to the occasion, if only they were not overwhelmed by their softness and apathy, if only they overcame their greed, if only they were morally strong, if only they were not selfish and narrow, if only they were not petty and spiteful and stupid, if only they were big, if only they knew what was at stake, if only they were not hypocritical, if only they trampled underfoot the wide and easy way!"

It was a tremendous speech. I beg forgiveness for compressing it. Malik ended by suggesting what the West must do to reverse the trend. He pleaded for unity among the allies, for deeper understanding of Africa and Asia, for a real concern for the rest of the world. He had memorized every word of his hour-long address. We were too stunned to applaud. We stumbled into the June sunshine like men who had been mesmerized. Now Malik is dead at 81, but that speech in Williamsburg lives on.

Drugs cost business money

Did you read Norman Jaspas's most recent research paper in Business Planning Quarterly published by the National Association of Accountants?

Jaspas, a management engineer with enough credentials to make his point a very sharp point, says that one in four workers in the United States uses drugs on the job.

From the executive suite on the production line, he says drugs are "as easy to come by as paper clips."

As bootleggers of old used to deliver their rotgut right to your door, dealers in drugs are delivering their junk right to your desk.

Why? Jaspas says cocaine enhances a male executive's feeling of masculinity; makes him feel more dynamic and efficient.

Yet, he says one-third of the coke users are women.

And their average habit costs $450 a week. Now where are they going to get that kind of money? By dealing or by stealing.

Separate federal government-sponsored studies affirm that drug-related problems are costing American industry some $30 billion a year. Norman Lovig, who specializes in undercover business investigations, says, "The users have to pay for their drugs some way and, since supervision is so lax, it's only natural that they steal from their employers."

Most businesses do not like to acknowledge this problem. It is embarrassing and potentially damaging for a bank or savings institution to admit that its employees steal. But they do. Indeed, banks are especially vulnerable.

Trucking companies also. "Dock handlers and truckers are like mavericks living on the edge of society," says Lovig. "Thus cartage theft has become like auto theft — an accepted thing. Insurance companies just pay out and then raise the premiums."

Some Chicago businesses are overwhelmed by the problem. When honest supervisors, intimidated, quit — then the pushers run the place.

Then follows increased thievery, reduced productivity, workmen's compensation claims because of "high" workers who get hurt — and absenteeism.

Until the company just can't make a go of it anymore.

So many Chicago businesses are moving out of Chicago — leaving the city, some moving to other states — to try to escape the problems relating to drugs.

About 25 percent of America's larger corporations now engage in drug screening as part of the hiring process. As many as 20 percent of all applicants for jobs with these companies are eliminated. One company turns down 50 percent of all applicants because they have a history of drug use or "symptoms."

Yet, despite their best screening efforts, inevitably some users are hired, inevitably to become pushers or thieves, and the cycle feeds on itself.

Message of 1987; the West is winning

By BEN WATTENBERG

How will the history books see 1987? The range is very wide. Thus, on the down side, it is not impossible that the stock market crash of Oct. 19 will prove to be the precursor of a major global depression. On the up side, I offer a happier thought. It might be that 1987 was the year that the central struggle of the 20th century began moving clearly toward resolution. Generically, that struggle is between freedom and totalitarianism. Specifically, it is between the United States and the Western free nations on one side and the Soviet Union on the other.

Resolved how? With freedom and America and the West winning.

What happened in 1987? There was that summit conference. The story on it took two tracks. There was the agreement to eliminate intermediate-range nuclear missiles. And there was the news about Mikhail Gorbachev wowing the media and the public with his charisma. But, one might ask, why did Gorbachev decide to sign the deal? What brought him to America to flash his charisma? Answer: He was here because the usually pusillanimous Western European nations — with heavy American encouragement — had decided to deploy missiles to match Soviet missiles. That was something the Soviets had not thought would happen. Gain for the West.

Gorbachev and Reagan are now negotiating for a 50 percent cut in the big strategic missiles. One should recall that the genesis of the idea of "deep cuts" is a Western initiative, and from the hawk side of the spectrum at that. Why are the Soviets so interested? Because they are afraid of Star Wars and want to trade the deep cuts for blocking or delaying the development of Star Wars. Gain for the West.

There is talk that Gorbachev wants to get out of Afghanistan after eight years of Soviet-perpetrated genocide. We shall see. But if so, why? Because he is a nice guy? I think not. The Soviets are getting their butts kicked by Afghan freedom fighters using an increased flow of American arms, particularly Stingers, which are knocking down Soviet helicopter gunships. Gain for the West. In Angola, a not dissimilar story: The pro-Western forces of Jonas Savimbi control a good piece of the country and are growing stronger despite massive Soviet aid to the Marxist government. Gain for the West.

Nicaragua is an interesting case. Over the years we keep hearing that the democratic resistance — the contras — are about to go out of business. The Congress wouldn't fund them, they couldn't get their act together, they had no public support, the Arias peace plan would undercut them. Yet, here it is 1988, the contras are still being supplied, they have just won a big military battle, and Marxist Nicaragua has given new and deeper meaning to the phrase "economic basket case." Gain for the West.

Then there is the Soviet Union itself. For many decades Westerners have said that in an economic sense, that dog can't hunt. Too little freedom, too much centralization. Now, Gorbachev has a single Russian word for the same thought: "perestroika," that is "restructuring." One should not misread Gorbachev. He's not soft on capitalism or democracy. He's a hardheaded Leninist. Ldo not believe he has given up expansionist plans. All he knows is his dog ain't hunting. Gain for the West.

Other indices: The year-end report from Freedom House shows that once again more countries are categorized as "politically free" this year and fewer as "politically unfree." Gain for the West. And in the meantime, the precepts of free-market democratic capitalism seem to be spreading to the strangest places: Communist China, Eastern Europe, Third World Africa, Gain for the West.

Could it be that the West is winning? Could that be the big message of 1987?

Public supports legalized abortion, poll says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The public is firmly committed to keeping abortion legal, but many state legislatures are trying to restrict access to the procedure, according to survey results released today.

A poll commissioned by the National Abortion Rights Action League found that 56 percent of the electorate support "keeping it legal for women to be able to have abortions when they decide to have one."

The poll was conducted last month by Democratic consultant Harrison Hickman. It also found that 77 percent of voters agree that "abortion is a private issue between a woman, her family and her doctor. The government should not be involved."

NARAL released the Hickman poll and its own survey of state legislative activities regarding abortion to mark the 15th anniversary of Roe v. Wade, the Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion. The anniversary is Friday.

The public opinion poll results mirror surveys taken since 1972.

But "reproductive liberty is in jeopardy in numerous states because state legislatures are not responsive to public opinion on this issue," NARAL said.

"Many hostile and intransigent state legislatures have continued to deny that their female citizens ought to be permitted to control their fertility."

The group said state handling of abortion ranges from Oregon and Washington, which "allow maximum exercise of reproductive rights," to Minnesota, Missouri and Pennsylvania, "which constantly test the limits of allowable regulation."

Twenty-five states and the District of Columbia have laws more restrictive than those allowed by the Supreme Court, most of them at least partially enjoined and some declared unconstitutional by state attorney generals, the group said.

Thirty-five states require parental involvement in a minor's access to abortion and only 14 states pay for unrestricted abortions for Medicaid patients — six of them under court order.

In addition, the group said, four states — Idaho, Illinois, Louisiana and South Dakota — have laws saying abortion will become illegal if Roe v. Wade is overturned; the laws would take effect automatically. Another eight states have enacted statements of intent to protect fetal life to the maximum extent allowed by law.

The group said those 12 states would likely act quickly if the Supreme Court gave states more control over abortion. At the other extreme, NARAL said, Alaska, Hawaii, Oregon, Vermont and Washington have pro-choice majorities in their legislatures and would likely protect reproductive options.

NARAL said the addition of conservative Judge Anthony Kennedy to the Supreme Court, expected later this year, probably means states will have more regulatory power over abortion. Given enough constitutional leeway, at least half the legislatures would significantly restrict or deny access to legal abortion, the group said.

The Hickman poll found that 60 percent of voters reject the suggestion that "abortion is such an important moral issue that the government has to play a role" and 63 percent oppose passage of a constitutional amendment that would make abortion illegal.

About three-quarters agree that "since nobody knows for sure when life begins, people should follow their own moral convictions and religious teachings on the abortion issue."

The Hickman poll was based on telephone interviews Dec. 13-17 with 1,202 registered voters across the country. Results had a margin of error of 2.8 percentage points.

Court rejects bid to block North probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Tuesday rejected an attempt by Lt. Col. Oliver North to block an investigation into his role in the Iran-Contra affair by independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh.

The court, without comment, left intact a ruling that Attorney General Edwin Meese III properly authorized Walsh to conduct the probe.

North, fired as a National Security Council aide after the diversion of funds from Iranian arms sales to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels was revealed, is a target of a grand jury investigation conducted by Walsh.

Walsh was given dual authority to carry out the probe.

He was appointed by a special three-judge court under the Ethics in Government Act, a federal law enacted in the aftermath of the Watergate scandal to permit independent investigation of high-ranking government officials.

Because the constitutionality of that law is under attack by North and others, Meese also separately authorized Walsh to carry out his investigation by delegating the attorney general's law enforcement powers to the independent counsel.

North attacked both sources of Walsh's authority. The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected the twin challenge last Aug. 20.

The appeals court upheld Meese's authority to delegate power to Walsh, and ruled it was premature to decide North's challenge to the Ethics in Government Act.

The constitutionality of the Ethics in Government Act is being challenged in a separate case pending before a federal appeals court in Washington.

In other cases: —The court left intact the perjury conviction of Walter L. Nixon, a federal trial judge from Mississippi. Federal prosecutors now may seek a start to his five-year prison sentence.

—The court refused to dismiss a lawsuit charging that singer-songwriter Lionel Richie infringed on another composer's copyright in his 1983 hit "Stuck on You."

—The court agreed to decide whether states may bar the sponsors of ballot initiatives from paying the people who collect petition signatures.

—The court asked the Reagan administration for its views on an important affirmative action issue — the power of local governments to require participation in public works projects of businesses owned by women and minorities.

Reagan stressing importance of choice for educational excellence

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan begins the final year of his presidency today with an appearance at a high school that uses the kind of "magnet" programs he favors as an alternative to forced busing.

Accompanied by Education Secretary William J. Bennett, Reagan planned to speak at a forum on educational standards at Suitland High School in a Maryland suburb near Washington.

Maryland Gov. William Donald Schaefer, a Democrat, planned to join Reagan and Bennett at the Prince George's County school, which enrolls 2,085 students. Reagan was expected to stress the argument that educational excellence depends on giving families more choice among academic institutions.

Suitland High School, which is 89 percent black, has been plagued for years by racial tension, poor test scores and other problems.

"It was a school having difficult times. It's turned around," said Leslye Arshnt, a White House deputy press secretary.

With 103,000 students, the Prince George's system is the 16th largest public school district in the country. Education spending per pupil totaled $3,090 in the 1985-86 school year, compared with a national average of $3,752.

Beginning in 1985, the county instituted "magnet" programs, such as specialized college preparatory and performing arts programs.

Magnet programs, open to students across the county, are designed to improve racial integration without increasing mandatory busing by providing an incentive for white students to attend predominantly black schools.

Since 1985, there has been a steady increase at Suitland in test scores in citizenship, writing, reading and math.

The Education Department also credits John A. Murphy, the Prince George's County school superintendent, as being a major factor in improving Suitland and other schools.

While giving school principals more autonomy, he has warned them they could lose their jobs if test scores do not document academic progress.

Reagan's appearance will help set the stage for educational themes he will outline in his State of the Union address next week.

On Tuesday, Reagan spoke to the administration's top-level political appointees in an annual cheerleading session known as the "Executive Forum."

Reagan said that during his administration's final year, "we're not going to be on the defensive, shoring up problems and answering our critics. We are moving forward, and I have no doubt that when we look back, 1988 will be a year of great accomplishment toward our goals."

He said there is much more for the administration to do, such as placing his Supreme Court nominee Anthony Kennedy on the high court and winning ratification of the U.S.-Soviet treaty that bans intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Reagan reaffirmed his support for the Nicaraguan rebels battling the leftist Sandinistas.

U.S.-Japan trade figure upsets dollar

By The Associated Press

The declining dollar helped keep U.S. industry busier than it has been in nearly eight years last month, but it still was not low enough to keep Japan's edge in trade with the United States from growing.

The trade report, issued in Tokyo, stunned the dollar on world currency markets, while stocks and bonds also suffered moderately.

In Tokyo, where the trading day begins, the dollar closed at 128.90 Japanese yen, down from 130.50 late Monday. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 129.15 yen, and in New York, it traded at 128.675 yen, down from 129.60 late Monday.

The markets paid little attention to a Federal Reserve report saying domestic factories, mines and utilities operated at 82.1 percent of capacity in December, up 0.1 percentage point from November.

The gain resulted in part from the falling dollar, which has helped U.S. industry sell more products abroad by making their prices cheaper.

In all of 1987, the operating rate climbed 2.4 percentage points and stood at its highest point since March 1980, when U.S. industry was producing at 83.7 percent of capacity, the Fed said.

In 1985, the Reagan administration began a campaign to force the value of the dollar lower in an effort to help sell American products overseas.

Economists said the effort finally began to show benefits last year, reflected in the 2.4 percentage point rise in the operating rate.

Still, the gains were not enough to turn around Japan's growing trade surplus with this country last month.

In Tokyo, Finance Ministry officials said Japan's surplus in trade with the United States climbed to $4.9 billion in December from $4.2 billion in November and $4.7 billion a year earlier.

Celebrate National Pizza Week, Jan. 17-23

Americans have experimented with all kinds of pizza variations, like corn bread and apple dessert pizza.

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

World War II GI's who served in the Mediterranean knew a good thing when they ate it. As a result, today pizza lovers in the United States spend an estimated $15 billion a year for this favorite fast food.

According to the pizza industry, Americans eat 1 billion tons of pizza a year — that's 100 million slices per month. If you order a pizza, you're making nutritionists happy, since "the works" represents the four basic food groups: the crust from the bread and cereals group; olives, green peppers and mushrooms from the vegetable group; cheese from the dairy group; and pepperoni or sausage from the meat and poultry group. Together in one slice, they supply nearly half of the recommended daily allowances for a full-grown man.

One slice of pizza clocks in at about 350 calories, depending upon toppings. Pizza can, though, be high in fat and sodium.

Creative chefs in very expensive restaurants offer pizzas with some toppings that would probably make the Mediterranean originators blush: sun-dried tomatoes, goat cheese, pesto sauce, raw tuna and wasabi (Japanese green mustard), red herring, pineapple, squid and coconut. Some even toss on a few slices of rattlesnake and crocodile for $22 a pie.

More demure pizza eaters can help celebrate National Pizza Week, Jan. 17 to 23, by munching their favorite slice of pepperoni, cheese and tomato. For the adventurous, here are two different pizzas to sample.

CORN BREAD PIZZA

- 2 8½-ounce packages corn muffin mix
- 1 jar beef and onion spaghetti sauce
- ½ medium green pepper, cut in strips
- ½ medium red pepper, cut in strips
- 1 can (about 2 ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 1/3 cup Parmesan cheese, grated

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Prepare muffin mix according to package directions. Spread muffin mix evenly in a greased 14-inch pizza pan. Spread sauce over muffin mix to within 1 inch of the edge. Top with green and red peppers and mushrooms.

Bake 20 minutes, then sprinkle with cheese. Bake 5 minutes more, or until crust is lightly browned. Let stand 5 minutes before cutting. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 10 servings.

APPLE PIZZA

- 2 tablespoons flour
- ½ cup brown sugar
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 7½-ounce can refrigerator biscuits
- 1 cup grated mild Cheddar cheese
- 2 apples, peeled and cored
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a small bowl, mix flour, sugar and cinnamon; set aside. Press biscuits into flat circles on waxed paper and put on lightly greased cookie sheet. Sprinkle grated cheese on biscuits. Top with sliced apples and sprinkle with brown sugar mixture.

Dot each biscuit with butter and bake for 20 to 30 minutes. Let cool slightly before eating. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 10 miniature pizzas.

Three-in-one pizza offers variety

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

There's no end to creative ideas for pizza toppings. If you're trying to please several with a homemade pizza, make one with personality. This pizza is prepared in three sections, each featuring its own selection of vegetables and cheese.

PIZZA TRIO WITH VEGETABLES AND CHEESE

- 1 16-ounce package hot roll mix
- 1¼ cups hot tap water

- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil, divided
- 1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese

- ½ cup chopped fresh tomatoes
- 1 teaspoon basil
- 3 cloves garlic, minced, divided

- 1 cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese
- ½ cup grated zucchini
- 1 teaspoon oregano

- ¾ cup grated Parmesan cheese
- ¼ cup chopped parsley
- 1 tablespoon grated

- lemon peel
- 6 red and green bell pepper rings

In large bowl, stir together hot roll mix and its package of yeast. Stir in water and oil to moisten. Knead on lightly floured surface about 5 minutes until smooth. Pinch off and reserve about ¼ of the dough.

Grease 14-inch pizza pan; line with remaining dough, stretching gently to fit. Prick generously with a fork. Roll reserved piece of dough into three 7-inch ropes. Place over pizza to make 3 equal sections. Brush with additional oil. Cover with towel; let rest 15 minutes.

Meanwhile, prepare fillings. Combine mozzarella cheese with tomatoes, basil and 1/3 of the garlic. Combine Jack cheese with zucchini, oregano and another third of garlic. Combine Parmesan cheese with parsley, lemon peel, pepper rings and the remaining garlic.

Sprinkle each cheese mixture over a section of the pizza. Bake in preheated 425-degree oven about 20 minutes, until crust is well browned and cheeses are melted. This kitchen-tested recipe makes one 14-inch pizza.

Section pizza is filled with three varieties of cheese and vegetables to please different tastes.

Aggies create pizza loaves

"Aggies, Moms and Apple Pie" is a cookbook of recipes contributed by members of the Federation of Texas A&M University Mothers' Clubs around the state.

The cookbook focuses on the needs of families with college students, and of the students themselves.

Here is the Aggies' contribution that would be suitable for National Pizza Week, Jan. 17-23.

YUMMY PIZZA LOAVES

- 1 large loaf French bread, split lengthwise
- Butter or margarine, softened, to spread on both halves
- 1 pound ground chuck
- Garlic powder, seasoned salt and red pepper to taste
- 1 small carton (8 ounces) sour cream

- 1 jar (14 ounces) pizza sauce
- ½ cup chopped onion (green onions preferred)
- 1 large green pepper, chopped

- 1 small can (2¼ ounces) sliced ripe olives, drained
- 1 small can (4 ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
- Chopped jalapeno pepper (optional)

- 2/3 cup grated sharp cheddar cheese
- 2/3 cup grated (or equivalent slices) mozzarella cheese

Slice French bread lengthwise; spread with butter or margarine on each half. Brown chuck; add garlic powder, seasoned salt and red pepper. Drain off fat and mix in sour cream. Spread a layer of pizza sauce on one side of bread; add meat mixture. Drizzle with more pizza sauce. Add onion, green pepper, olives, mushrooms and jalapeno (if desired). Top with cheddar and mozzarella cheeses. Add a layer of pizza sauce on other half and put loaf together on large piece of foil. Cover loosely for baking at 350° until cheese melts — 20 to 30 minutes. For a crisper loaf, uncover during last 5 minutes of baking. Cut into slices. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

As the mother of two Aggie football players, I know better than to pretend that this would feed 6 to 8 hungry athletes! But it's delicious, filling and much cheaper than buying pizza. Add a large salad, and get out your electric knife for easy slicing. Also good cold, so these loaves could go tailgating.

Beef, onion top deep dish pizza

This recipe is from the Martha White Kitchens.

DEEP DISH PIZZA

- 1 pound ground beef
- ½ cup chopped onion
- 1 can (12 ounces) tomato paste
- 1 and 1/3 cups water
- 2 teaspoons oregano leaves
- 1½ teaspoons garlic salt
- 1 package (6½ ounces) pizza crust mix

- 6 slices (9 ounces) mozzarella cheese
- ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Preheat oven to 400°F. Brown ground beef and onion in large skillet; drain. Stir in tomato paste, water, oregano leaves and garlic salt; simmer 15 minutes. Grease a 13x9x2-inch baking dish. Prepare pizza crust dough according to package directions.

Press dough into bottom and half-way up sides of prepared baking dish. Line bottom of crust with 3 slices mozzarella cheese. Pour half of sauce mixture onto cheese. Top with remaining sauce mixture. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Bake 20-25 minutes or until bubbly. Let cool 10 minutes. Makes 6-8 servings. * For a thicker, chewier crust, use an 8-ounce package deep pan pizza crust mix.

Add vegetables to turnovers for pizza

There are lots of ways to get together with family and friends. But no matter how the time is spent, the event usually involves food.

Whether the kids are having their friends over or the gang is tailgating, Vegetable Pizza Turnovers will score points with everyone.

VEGETABLE PIZZA TURNOVERS

- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- ½ cup chopped onion
- ½ cup chopped green peppers
- ½ cup unpeeled diced zucchini
- 1 can (14½ ounces) whole tomatoes, drained and chopped, reserving juice
- 1 clove garlic, mashed

- ¼ teaspoon oregano leaves
- ¼ teaspoon basil leaves
- 1 package (8 ounces) deep pan pizza crust mix
- 1 cup (4 ounces) grated mozzarella cheese
- 1 egg white

Coat a large skillet with oil. Sauté onion and green pepper until tender; add zucchini and continue to cook for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Stir in tomatoes, garlic, oregano, basil and 2 tablespoons reserved juice from tomatoes. Cover and simmer 5 minutes; uncover and cook 15 minutes or until thickened. Preheat oven to 425°F. Grease a large cookie sheet. Prepare pizza crust according to package directions. Divide dough into 4 equal parts; pat each part into a 6-inch circle. Spoon ¼ of vegetable mixture onto each circle; sprinkle with 2 tablespoons cheese. Fold each circle in half; crimp and roll edges tightly together. Brush with egg white. Bake 12 to 15 minutes or until golden brown. Cool a few minutes before serving. Makes 4 turnovers.

● Using a deep pan pizza crust mix adds extra ease and a little crunch to this unusual version of pizza.

● These turnovers are low in fat, as only a small amount of oil and cheese are used.

● Other fresh vegetables, such as mushrooms and eggplant, may be substituted for those in the recipe.

● If using fresh basil and oregano, double the required amount. This recipe is from the Martha White Kitchens.

Make mini-pizzas in less than 10 minutes

This recipe is from the Beef Board and Meat Board Test Kitchens' booklet, "Beef is a Microwave Favorite."

FRANKFURTER PIZZAS

- Preparation time: 5 minutes
- Cooking time: 1 minute
- 2 beef frankfurters

- 1 English muffin, split and toasted
- 1 tablespoon pizza sauce
- 1 slice (1 ounce) mozzarella cheese, cut in half
- ¼ teaspoon dried oregano leaves

Place muffin halves on paper plate; spread cut sides with equal amount of pizza sauce. Carefully make 5 cuts into frankfurters ¼ inch apart and almost through. Arrange frankfurter in a circle on each muffin half. Cover with a half slice of cheese. Sprinkle with oregano. Microwave at HIGH 1 minute. Makes 2 pizzas, 289 calories per pizza. No change in timing for full-size ovens.

Aid requests up 40 percent for December at Good Sam

The Hoechst Celanese explosion, along with cold weather and snow, have combined to push requests for aid up 40 percent from November to December 1987 at Good Samaritan Christian Services, Inc., 309 N. Ward, according to the interfaith mission's executive director, Bill Ragsdale.

Food and clothing requests in December were each up 40 percent, and utility aid requests were up 73 percent, Ragsdale wrote in the mission's monthly newsletter. Rent, transportation and medical requests were also up by 40 percent or more, he reported.

Total expenses for December were up 114 percent over November expenses. Medical bills were not paid until early January, meaning that monetary figures for the end of December are not representing total costs, Ragsdale explained.

Utility aid money spent was up 166 percent in December from November. "Requests for utility aid have continued high in early January, with 32 paid in a four-day period," Ragsdale wrote.

However, total requests for aid and total money paid for aid were both down for the year 1987 from 1986. 1987 income was up $13,300 over 1986 income. The Hoechst Celanese disaster fund accounted for $7,500 of the increase. A sharp increase in money spent in late 1987 was also related to the plant explosions. 1987 expenses were $2,095 below 1986 expenses. Utility aid costs for 1987 were the lowest since 1983.

Number of families visiting during the mission's first year, 1983, were 1,386. There were 3,186 families seeking help in 1986 and 3,060 in 1987. Of those seeking aid, 1,218 were assisted in 1983, 2,914 in 1986 and 2,807 in 1987.

Number of individuals receiving aid in 1983 was 4,065; in 1986 there were 9,669 individuals assisted and 9,308 in 1987.

Of families assisted in 1983, 889 received food; clothing, 430; rent, 20; utilities, 176; transportation, 48; lodging, 61; medical, 59; and other, 80. In 1986, food was given to 2,250 families; clothing, 699; rent, 30; utilities, 478; transportation, 215; lodging, 35; medical, 153; and other, 109. 1987 figures show food distributed to 2,159 families; clothing, 829; rent, 28; utilities, 418; transportation, 157; lodging, 38; medical, 163; and other, 158.

Expenses for food totaled $1,100.97 in 1983; $6,202.98 in 1986; and $5,083.23 in 1987. A total of $685.80 was paid for clothing in 1983; $1,229.06 in 1986; and $1,118.94 in 1987. Rent accounted for $1,610 in 1983; $1,203.34 in 1986; and $545 in 1987.

Utilities paid totaled $8,428.25 in 1983; $23,893.91 in 1986; and $22,055.09 in 1987. Transportation amounted to $1,580.25 in 1983; $2,339.32 in 1986; and $1,818.38 in 1987. Lodging expenses for 1983 were $1,210.29; $488.78 in 1986; and $637.40 in 1987.

Medical bills for 1983 were $833.02. In 1986 they totaled $2,490.87 and in 1987, $2,673.42. Administrative expenses for 1983 were $8,705.33; in 1986 they were $4,216.11 and in 1987, $4,663.89.

The balance for Jan. 1, 1986 was $16,942.09; on Jan. 1, 1987 it was $8,421.87.

Income for 1983 was $38,746.47. Income for 1986 was $3,544.15; in 1987 it was $45,851.63.

Total expenses for 1983 were $24,153.91; for 1986, $42,064.37; and for 1987, $39,969.85.

The board of directors of Good Samaritan will consider approving a grant offered to the interfaith mission by the Amarillo Area Foundation at its 7:30 p.m. meeting Thursday, Jan. 21.

Board members will also make plans to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the mission, which opened Feb. 14, 1983.

Of 300 families seeking aid in December, 288 were helped, with 222 receiving food; clothing, 101; rent, nine; utilities, 45; transportation, 20; lodging, four; medical, 20; and other, 16. A total of 933 individuals received aid in December.

Of the 12 families not helped, "most problems were excessive utility bills," Ragsdale reported. The number of families not assisted was a decrease from 13 in November. Some of those not helped on the first visit were aided during a later visit.

There were 273 Gray County families seeking aid, 21 newcomers, three living outside Gray County but within 25 miles of Pampa and three transients.

Two were referred to Good Sam by churches, 30 by friends, seven by news, seven by other organizations or agencies and 254 were returning families.

There were three emergency after-hours calls. Out-of-pocket expenses for December totaled $4,352.51, compared to $2,026.05 for November. Of the total, food accounted for $681; rent, $395; utilities, $2,541; transportation, $59.50; and administrative costs, $675.77.

Donation

Sister's sexual practices cause pain to her sibling

DEAR ABBY: I just found out that my younger sister (in her 20s) is practicing sadomasochism. I know very little about the subject, and I am worried. Are people who are into S and M considered normal? My sister has a whip and assorted paraphernalia. Is there any real danger in this kind of thing? I don't want her to hurt herself. And how widespread is it?

WORRIED IN CALIFORNIA

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR WORRIED: I asked my consultant, Dr. Judd Marmor, past president of the Academy of Psychoanalysis and past president of the American Psychiatric Association. Dr. Marmor said:

"S and M fantasies are very extensive in our culture, judging from the widespread popularity of S and M pornographic literature and films. A fairly large number of men and women practice S and M in private and within groups or clubs, yet carry on apparently normal lives otherwise.

"S and M cannot be considered normal behavior, however, because the need to inflict or suffer pain in the course of sexual relations is an obvious neurotic corruption of something that ought to be a tender and loving exchange. In addition, there is always the danger of actual physical injury occurring — sometimes with serious consequences.

"Unfortunately, many of these individuals neither want nor seek psychotherapy, but if they could be persuaded to try to understand the reason for their deviant need, they could be helped to modify or overcome it — which would be to their long-term advantage."

DEAR ABBY: In answer to "Still in Love at 78" — the woman who loves to have her husband along to help her grocery-shop: It's all fine and dandy to have a 24-hour relationship, but what are you going to do when one of the couple dies?

A casual friend lost her husband after 46 years of marriage. She was lost — and still is, six years later.

She has no club to go to, no special interests, no hobbies, no close women friends — in fact, she's a very boring person to be around. All she does is moan about her loss and watch TV.

I've tried to help her by suggesting she do volunteer work or take some courses, but she says it wouldn't help. She just sits.

R.M.C., CALIFORNIA

DEAR R.M.C.: I have often urged men to learn how to cook, keep house, sew, do the laundry, marketing and all the chores their wives routinely do. And I have urged women to learn how to drive and maintain an automobile, become conversant with banking, insurance, mortgage payments, investments and all those things their husbands handle — for the obvious reason that although they start out together, they rarely finish together.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the woman who complained about a dentist chatting with an assistant or someone else while working on a patient: Dentists and other medical professionals will often intentionally converse with their staff while they're working on a patient. In areas of high stress, a patient can have a panic attack if left in the silence of an intimidating office and staff, only to hear the whine of high-speed instruments and feel the drowning sensation of the water spray, as the dentist drills away.

The technique of verbal distraction is practiced with patients of all ages. Granted, the dentist should not carry on loud, extended conversations with persons in another room, but a quiet conversation with a person nearby — or a chairside assistant — is usually considered minor mental relief, if not entertainment, for a patient lying on his back for 30 minutes or more staring at an acoustical tile ceiling.

As for the crown costing $600 — an old saying comes to mind: Dentistry isn't expensive — neglect is!

Queen Victoria of England, left, wears drop pearl earrings in an 1838 portrait when she was 19, while Queen Elizabeth II, right, wears a pair of drop pearl earrings in 1954 which Queen Victoria bequeathed to the Crown. These are among the illustrations in "The Queen's Jewels," by author Leslie Field, who believes she may know more about the Royal Family's jewels than anyone.

American author pens book on jewels of British royalty

By JOAN BRUNSKILL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — American-born author Leslie Field probably knows more about the Royal Family's jewels than anyone else. That includes Queen Elizabeth II, inheritor of the right to wear the matchless collections that include pearls worn by Queen Elizabeth I four centuries ago.

After working for seven years on her book, "The Queen's Jewels: The Personal Collection of Elizabeth II" (Harry N. Abrams Inc., $29.95), Field hopes she's become the world's greatest living authority on the subject.

For an author it's an enviable field that dances with dazzling subheadings such as Queen Mary's True Lover's Knot Brooch, the King George III Fringe Tiara and Queen Victoria's Golden Jubilee Necklace, to say nothing of the Imperial State Crown, the Sceptre and the Orb.

When she began the project, Field expected to find a basic system, a catalog or inventory on which she would draw. To her astonishment she found no such thing. She had to compile as complete a record as she believes has ever been made by combining research from many sources — personal memories and records of the Royal Family — with the full cooperation of Buckingham Palace, where she did much of her work. She also used newspaper libraries, photo files, bills, receipts and published matter.

"I think 65 percent of the information I dug out to put in the book was new to the queen," she said in an interview. "I was actually able to tell her majesty where the tiara she'd worn on her wedding day came from... It turned out to be one of the most ancient and interesting in the collection, made in 1832."

Field was born in New York and began her career at Vogue magazine before becoming fashion editor of Glamour. She moved to London in 1971, became fashion editor of The Sunday Times and then was named first female editor of the venerable Tatler magazine.

She originated the idea of doing the book in 1980. One of the main reasons the queen gave her consent to the proposal she submitted to Buckingham Palace, Field thinks, is that Queen Elizabeth approved of the author's view of the jewels "as a repository of the continuity of the monarchy," with each piece part of a centuries-old heritage.

The book, divided into chapters dealing with diamonds, emeralds, pearls, and so forth, leaves its listings with much personal detail.

It is illustrated with specially made color photographs, archive photographs and reproductions of paintings and drawings showing different generations of royal women wearing the same magnificent pieces from a personal collection that now numbers, according to Field, 282 pieces.

It concerned Field that the scattered knowledge of the jewels and their history meant a loss to the royal family of personal history. However, she's pleased that her original research files will now be kept in the archives at Windsor Palace, and says it's her hope that she's somehow managed to save something for posterity.

Borger shocks Pampa 55-51 Broncos respect 'Skins secondary

Harvesters suffer third league loss

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

BORGER — The Pampa Harvesters found out Tuesday night that a Bulldogs' bite is much worse than its bark, especially when chasing after a longtime rival.

Borger entered last night's District 1-4A battle with a 9-11 overall record and trying to end a recent slump. Pampa went into the game sitting in second place in the league standings and bidding for a playoff spot. But like the old saying goes, you can throw the records away when these two teams meet.

Borger's Danny Loftis and Steve Ford combined for 41 points, lifting the Bulldogs to a 55-51 win over the Harvesters.

After a tightly-played first half with the score deadlocked at 24-all at intermission, the Bulldogs came roaring out to outscore the Harvesters 18-6 in the third quarter.

"It was one of the most disappointing games I've been apart of since I've been here," said Pampa coach Robert Hale. "We just didn't do anything we worked on."

The 6-0 Loftis scored 10 of his game-high 21 points in the third quarter on a variety of shots while the Bulldogs' second and third efforts on the boards paid off throughout the game. Borger won the battle of the boards 34-26, including an 11-2 advantage in that run-away third quarter.

Down a dozen points (42-30) going into the fourth period, the Harvesters battled back and cut the lead to 7 (44-37) on Jason Farmer's short jumper with six minutes to go. However, Borger used the foul line to stay ahead as Loftis and Danny Hunnicutt each canned a pair of foul shots to make it 48-39 at the 4:05 mark.

With a minute to go and trailing 55-46, the Harvesters made a last-gasp rally. Dustin Miller tipped in a missed shot and the Harvesters got the ball right back under their own basket after a 5-second violation on the Bulldogs. Jimmy Massick's 3-pointer was off the mark, but Farmer followed to cut the gap to 55-50.

With 24 seconds remaining, the Harvesters still had some life left after Hunnicutt missed a foul shot. Miller controlled the rebound and teammate Derek Ryan was fouled driving to the basket. As it turned out, Ryan scored the final point for either team, hitting one of two foul shots with 13 ticks on the clock.

After Borger's Ford missed at the foul line, the Harvesters had one last shot, but Ryan Teague failed to connect on a 3-point try as the buzzer sounded.

Farmer was Pampa's top scorer with 14 points, followed by Miller's 13 markers.

Ford, Borger's 6-1 post, powered his way inside for 20 points and hit the boards hard.

Mark Wood was Pampa's other double-figure scorer with 11 points. Others scoring for the Harvesters were Billy Wortham with 4, Ryan, Massick and David Doke, 3 points each.

The Harvesters, losers of their last two games, are now 5-3 in district play and 14-9 overall. Borger evens its district mark at 4-4.

Pampa travels to Lubbock Estacado for more district action Friday night. Gametime is 8 p.m.

DENVER — Broncos wide receiver Mark Jackson has a vivid memory of an incident during the most recent Washington-Denver game, late in the 1986 season.

Jackson, not exactly a slouch in the speed department, recalls dashing after a long John Elway pass, straining to get to the slightly overthrown ball — and seeing Redskins cornerback Darrell Green overtake him.

"I peeked over my right shoulder, and Green ran right by me," Jackson said. "I thought, 'Holy smokes, he's not human.' It was pretty awesome."

"We have a lot of respect for their defensive backs. They're all very fast."

To listen to Broncos Coach Dan Reeves, you'd have to think there is an abundance of awesomeness on the Redskins' roster.

At midweek, Reeves and his staff still were preparing their game plan against the Redskins in Super Bowl XXII, but Reeves was able to make some observations about Washington based on that 1986 game — won by Denver 31-30 — and some recent film.

"The one thing that stands out about the Redskins is they're very well coached," Reeves said.

"If I could vote year in and year out for a guy doing a great job, it would be (Washington Coach) Joe Gibbs. He's won over 70 percent of his games playing in a tough division. Richie Petitbon does a great job with their defense, too."

"They're pretty much the same team we faced last year. The main difference is they've gone with Doug Williams at quarterback instead of (Jay) Schroeder. Williams doesn't move around as much. He stays in the pocket and waits until the last minute to throw."

"They have a huge offensive line, some big strong runners, and Kelvin Bryant out of the backfield is a good receiver. (Injured wide receiver) Art Monk should be ready, and that will help them. To get into the championship game without him is a tribute to (Ricky) Sanders and (Gary) Clark."

Like Denver, the Redskins will use a multitude of offensive formations. "And with two weeks to prepare, they'll probably come out with a few more we haven't seen before," Reeves said.

The Redskins' defense poses one particular problem for the Broncos, according to Reeves.

"We don't play that many four-man line teams, and we'll have to be ready for that," he said.

Peete prepares for comeback

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — At age 44, Calvin Peete begins a comeback attempt this week in the $1-million Bob Hope Classic.

"I'm looking forward to it. I'm excited about it. I'm ready to get back to playing golf," said Peete, who was among 128 players ready to tee off today for the first of five rounds in the 90-hole event.

A shoulder problem put Peete on the sidelines much of last year. He entered 20 tournaments and made money in only 12.

One of golf's more accomplished performers the six previous seasons, Peete finished in the top 10 only once last year and had a career-low finish of 140th on the money list.

"Last year was a bummer, a washout. I just want to put it out of my mind, not think about it," said Peete, who led the PGA Tour with 11 victories between 1982 and 1986.

"I just couldn't play last year. My shoulder wouldn't let me. From about the middle of the year on, I didn't play much at all. I probably could have, but I might have damaged the shoulder again."

"Finally, I just decided to write off the year, rest the shoulder and try to come back this year."

"I'm glad I did. I might be kind of rusty starting out, but I have a good attitude. I'm eager to play again. I'm ready."

"It'll be interesting to see how it develops."

The 128 pros will play one round on each of four desert courses, each day with a different set of amateur partners, before the field is cut for the pros-only finish at Indian Wells Country Club on Sunday.

Among the players opening their seasons this week are Fuzzy Zoeller, Craig Stadler, Hale Irwin, Hal Sutton, Andy Bean, Ray Floyd and Bruce Lietzke.

Edberg advances to Aussie Open semis

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP)

Defending champion Stefan Edberg outlasted Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union to advance tonight to the semifinals of the $1.9-million Australian Open tennis tournament.

Edberg, a 21 year-old Swede aiming to win the title for the third straight year, defeated Chesnokov 4-6, 7-6, 6-4, 6-4 to earn a semifinal meeting with his friend and countryman Mats Wilander.

Two-time champion Wilander, the third seed, earlier in the evening defeated his sixth-seeded compatriot Anders Jarryd 7-6, 6-2, 6-3 in a two-hour, 41-minute quarterfinal battle.

Second-seeded Edberg had fortune on his side against Chesnokov. He was given a fortunate overrule from French umpire Bruno Rebeuh at 5-5 when he appeared to have hit a forehand wide.

He won the replayed point, took the tiebreaker and gradually fought his way into control of the encounter.

Chesnokov hit a succession of superb passing shots in the first two sets and it took Edberg more than an hour to get his serve-and-volley game working.

"I'm not playing my best tennis, but at least I was fighting hard," Edberg said.

The other men's semifinal will be between top-seeded Ivan Lendl and Wimbledon champion Pat Cash. Neither has lost a set in the tournament.

The men's semifinals are scheduled for Friday.

Wilander, 23, a model of consistency in the difficult swirling winds, won the Australian Open title in 1983 and 1984. He is seeking the fifth Grand Slam title of his career, also having won the French Open twice.

Jarryd provided stiff competition throughout the first set.

Borger edges Lady Harvesters 59-58

BORGER — Pampa's Lady Harvesters, hampered by a shooting drought from both the floor and foul line, were edged by Borger 59-58 Tuesday night in a girls' District 1-4A basketball tilt.

Pampa led at halftime 26-25, but Borger — sparked by the 3-point shooting of Selena West — rallied her team to victory in the second half.

Pampa still led 42-37 after three quarters despite a pair of 3-pointers by West, but her two long-range bombs early in the fourth quarter gave Borger a 46-42 lead.

Pampa never regained the lead but Yolanda Brown knotted the score twice on turnaround jumpers down the stretch before Borger pulled away on a basket and two foul shots by Stephanie Mahan and a charity toss by Muriel Brown.

The Lady Harvesters missed three of five foul shots in the final minute and Borger had its revenge for an earlier loss.

Brown poured in 36 points, but the Lady Harvesters were hurt by inconsistent outside shooting.

"Borger was sagging in on Yolanda and we just couldn't hit our open shots," said Pampa coach Albert Nichols. "We weren't hitting our foul shots either and you can't do that and expect to win."

The Lady Harvesters had plenty of chances from the foul line, but downed only 15 of 28 tries. Borger was 13 of 21.

West led Borger with 12 points, all on 3-point shots.

"We never heard from her in our first game against them, but she was hitting nothing but net tonight," Nichols said.

Mahan chipped in 11 points for Borger while Lisa Schaffer and Bobbie Sheppard tossed in 10 points each.

Tacy Stoddard followed Brown in Pampa's scoring attack with 7 points, including her team's only 3-pointer. Shawna Ford and Tara Hamby had 4 points each while Keitha Clark had 3, Melisa Redeemer and Diane Wood, 2 points each.

Borger also edged Pampa in the rebounding department 33-32. Brown was Pampa's top rebounder with 8 rebounds while Redeemer had 5. Both teams had 14 turnovers.

The loss evened Pampa's district record at 5-5. Overall, the Lady Harvesters are 14-9.

"We're still trying for our goal of 20 wins this season, but we just can't seem to get off 14," Nichols said.

Borger improved to 5-5 and 11-10.

"Borger has a scrappy bunch of players. It was a hard-fought game all the way," Nichols said.

The Lady Harvesters travel to Lubbock Friday night to take on Estacado. Gametime is 6:30 p.m.

Tara Hamby eyes the goal.

Tyson a solid favorite

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Boxing Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—Eddie Futch and Ray Arcel, masters at teaching boxing, wish Larry Holmes wouldn't get in the ring with Mike Tyson Friday night.

"I don't feel good about his fight," the 75-year-old Futch, who trained Holmes for 12 title bouts, said in a telephone interview from Las Vegas. "Tyson has the style and strength that could make it hard for Larry to avoid getting badly beaten and possibly hurt."

"At this point in his career, I hate to see him in there, that's all," said the 88-year-old Arcel, who helped Futch train Holmes for a 1982 knockout of Gerry Cooney.

"You don't belong in the ring, not with a 21-year-old guy who can punch," Arcel said by telephone from New York. "Even if he (Holmes) wins, he has to absorb punishment."

Tyson, the unbeaten undisputed heavyweight champion, is an 8-1 favorite to win the scheduled 12-round fight at the Atlantic City Convention Center.

Holmes, the world's premier heavyweight for over seven years, turned 38 on Nov. 3 and hasn't fought since losing a 15-round split decision to Michael Spinks while trying to regain the International Boxing Federation title on April 19, 1986.

"Larry started showing signs of deterioration about three years ago," Futch said. "Tyson is getting better."

"The big question is, has Father Time taken too much away from Larry?" said Arcel, who is retired. "I don't think he can beat Tyson. Tyson is too young, too strong, too determined and he can set a hell of a pace. But Larry is Larry and he does what he thinks he should do."

Holmes, trained by Richie Giachetti, has been working out in seclusion for several weeks at his training center in his hometown of Easton, Pa.

Futch succeeded Giachetti as trainer following Holmes' 15-round unanimous decision victory over Trevor Berbick in defense of the World Boxing Council title.

Groom's Fields (12) guards Lefors' Davis.

Tigerettes hold off Lefors

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

LEFORS — Becky Davis tried hard to get the Lefors Lady Pirates back in the game Tuesday night against the visiting Groom Tigerettes.

Davis scored 12 points in the fourth quarter, but still, the Lady Pirates came up short, losing to Groom 47-35.

The junior post scored 18 of her 20 points in the second half and went a perfect 8-for-8 from the free throw line.

It was the can't miss rebounding of the Tigerettes, though, that proved to be the winning factor in the District 2-1A matchup, as Groom's girls pulled down 36 boards compared with only 16 by the Lady Pirates.

Groom was led by Erin Eschle's 13 points. Karen Bohr and Shannon Fields each scored 10 to help in the win.

As has been the Tigerettes downfall this season, they again flirted with the idea of giving the game away, as turnovers continue to be a problem. Groom chalked up 26 give-aways, including 8 in what looked for awhile like Lefors' comeback-quarter, the fourth.

The Lady Pirates, although connecting on only 27-percent of their floor shots, outscored the Tigerettes 14-11 in the fourth.

The Groom win means the Tigerettes move to 2-2 in district and 8-7 overall; Lefors falls to 1-2 and 6-12.

In boy's action, Groom defeated Lefors 65-40. The Tigers, with an overall record of 8-5, are in sole possession of first place in 2-1A with a 4-0 record; Lefors is now 3-14 and 0-3.

Other Area action

On the boys' courts, Briscoe, with four Broncos — John Shields, Ben Meadows, Shawn Zybach and Chad Morgan — in double figures, defeated Samnorwood 77-73. White Deer fell to Highland Park 82-67. Kelton upended Mobeetie 81-58. Allison lost to Wheeler 53-47 and McLean defeated Miami 47-44.

In girl's action, Briscoe was defeated by Samnorwood 44-39. White Deer fell to Highland Park 55-34. Kelton squashed Mobeetie 80-43. Wheeler defeated Allison 59-28 and McLean defeated Miami 53-49.

GROOM (47) — Kelly Stroupe 4-6 FG, 0-0 FT, 8 points; Karen Bohr 3-12, 4-5, 10; Leslie Sweatt 1-4, 1-2, 3; Erin Eschle 5-16, 3-8, 13; Shannon Fields 4-13, 2-4, 10; Carlene Britton 0-0, 0-1, 0; Jenni English 1-3, 0-0, 2; Katon Meaker 0-2, 1-2, 1. TOT-ALS: 18-58 FG (31-percent); 11-22 FT (50-percent).

LEFORS (35) — Becky Davis 6-17, 8-20; Dana Davis 2-4, 0-0, 4; Carrie Watson 3-14, 1-2, 7; Kim Moore 1-4, 0-2, 2; Jennifer Moore 0-2, 0-0; Karen Lake 0-2, 0-1, 0; Melissa Forsyth 0-1, 2-2, 2. TOT-ALS: 12-44 FG (27-percent); 11-17 FT (65-percent).

GROOM 12 22 36 47
LEFORS 6 11 21 35

3-point goals — none; fouled out — none; Rebounds — Lefors 16, Groom 36; Turnovers — Groom 26, Lefors 22.

'The Greek' went against odds

Sports Forum

By Warren Hasse

FOR SOMEONE ALLERGIC to cigarette smoke, it wasn't the best situation. Seated on my right elbow, chain smoking, sometimes two lit at a time, was Rod Serling. All that nicotine in his system must have been an assist to his ability to construct the way-out tales that had brought him career success...though he knew that same drug addiction was going to eventually kill him.

On my immediate left was a so far empty chair, but when it's scheduled occupant arrived I was certain he, too, would be puffing away. For certainly, Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder would need that same substance to calm his gambler's nerves. The Greek was the main focus of this panel drawn together to inform and motivate about 500 representatives of stations that were members of the world's largest radio network, the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Network President Ed Little had gathered many of the network's top on-the-air network personalities for the occasion, Serling was going to try to convince the station decision-makers to carry his off-the-wall radio mysteries to an extent great enough to assure renewal of his contract. That hope was to go unrealized, but it did give television exposure to launch his television syndicated series. But The Greek was one of the newest and most talked about because of his unusual talent, gambling successfully.

Little called the meeting to order a few minutes late, explaining Snyder was on his way, delayed because his baggage had been lost by the airline. When he did arrive about 5 minutes later he was wearing casual travelling attire...loosehanging tee shirt, sailing pants and sockless shoes, while everyone else was in coat and tie.

This all comes to mind, of course, as the result of last weekend's brouhaha that has apparently cost the now 70-year old showman a 12-year career with CBS-TV Sports. Snyder explained to us that day, as he does in a feature in the current issue of TV Guide, that he gave up gambling in the early 1960s and was using that reputation and experience as a showman, the forerunning of a limited but widely exposed breed. He pointed out that sports gambling existed, legally or illegally, as it had since the Romans bet on chariot races and lion fights. His job was to provide the truest and most complete inside information so those who could not constrain that gambling impulse would have the best chance of protecting their wallet.

As for the statements made last Friday, a study indicates that he wasn't guilty of too much misstatement, unless it was his knowledge of history. And not having been there at the time, I cannot say whether he was right or wrong about that period over a century ago. But judging how I have seen the history I have lived through misconstrued and erroneously recorded by journalists and historians, the truth in today's history books will always be suspect.

But for the rest of his observations that black athletes are generally the biggest and strongest, and that one reason they are so is because white athletes are lazy, that has been a long-accepted theorem around most coaching gatherings. As Snyder said, he was not being derogatory. A study of his statements about the current status of sports is pretty accurate, whether the network, his former associate Brent Musberger, or others associated with the industry want to admit it or not. And you can bet, and no bookie would even take the bet, that nearly everyone who has been involved with or even watched sports hasn't said or thought the same. As has been whispered quietly so many times, that's one of the reasons the Boston Celtics are so popular, they start three white guys...Bird, McHale and Ainge.

But The Greek said these things in public, before a camera, and thought in his own mind he was being complimentary to the black athlete. But as with numbers, words can be twisted into any meaning the insidious listeners (or in the case of this column, the reader) wants. And the person giving their honest opinion is in trouble.

And equally as strange, in that respect, is that CBS-TV, which has continually hid behind the First Amendment's freedom of speech when it attacks our United States government and its leadership, openly states that same freedom of speech does not apply to one of its own media associates in private life! Somewhere, something doesn't quite jibe.

So now, that empty chair sits at Musberger's left elbow.

And, oh yes, Snyder did NOT smoke that day...he probably knew the odds of smoking shortening his life...and mine.

Reagan resuming airdrops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is resuming airdrops of weapons to Nicaragua's Contra rebels, saying that only more military pressure will force the Managua government to live up to its part in a five-nation peace accord.

President Reagan took the step Tuesday after noting that a cease-fire between the rebels and the Sandinista government has failed to materialize. He blamed a lack of good faith on Managua's part.

His spokesman also said the president will ask for a new package of military aid for the rebels next week. A Republican congressional source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the request would be in the range of $40 million to $100 million.

State of emergency lifted in Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The government formally lifted a state of emergency, abolished its system of "people's courts," and released five opposition leaders after interrogating them for several hours.

The leaders were freed Tuesday night after being detained and questioned about meeting last week in Guatemala with the Contras rebels.

The formal lifting of the 6-year-old state of emergency and the abolition of the courts were announced Tuesday by Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto. The state of emergency suspended free speech, free assembly and a free press.

The steps were first announced by President Daniel Ortega at the end of a Central American summit Saturday in Costa Rica. He said at the time they were taken to further Nicaraguan compliance with a Central American peace plan.

But D'Escoto also indicated the steps were taken to persuade Congress to reject a Reagan administration request next month for more aid to the Contras.

Asked if the Sandinistas were trying to influence Congress, he said: "Of course we are. We want to stop the war. The continuation of funding for the Contras means more war, more death, more destruction."

In Washington, President Reagan on Tuesday authorized the CIA to resume airdrops of weapons to Nicaragua's Contra rebels. They were suspended because of the Central American summit in Costa Rica last week.

In Miami, Contra leaders announced Tuesday they are willing to accept Ortega's offer to hold direct talks but said they are wary about his motives.

After Ortega on Tuesday issued the legally-required decree ending the state of emergency and scrapping the court system, a lawyer for James Jordan Denby of Carlinville, Ill., said his client's detention could become illegal within 72 hours because of the abolition of the people's tribunals.

Denby, 58, whose light plane was shot down over Nicaragua, was charged in one of the courts last week with crimes against public security, acts to submit the nation to foreign domination and illegal association. He pleaded innocent.

The government has accused Denby, who owns a farm in Costa Rica, with assisting the Contras in their war against the Sandinistas.

The government did not immediately respond to the claim by Denby's lawyer.

Also Tuesday, Contra rebel leaders began arriving in Costa Rica for a meeting Thursday with Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo.
