Reagan faces problems despite NATO praise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan won high praise as a superpower peacemaker during his parley with NATO leaders, but he faces a knotty array of problems on the home front.

A basket of touchy issues demands attention, ranging from Secretary of State George P. Shultz's Middle East drawn-out peace mission to administration efforts to pressure Panama's strongman, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, to step down.

And in Congress, Reagan administration officials insist the president intends to press ahead with his campaign to aid the Contras following the defeat of the House Democrats' humanitarian aid proposal.

At the White House today, however, Reagan was assured of a romantic homecoming as first lady Nancy Reagan planned to decorate the residence with greeting cards to commemorate the couple's 36th wedding anniversary.

Reagan is skipping his regular trip to Camp David and will have a quiet anniversary dinner and relaxing weekend with Mrs. Reagan, said her spokeswoman, Elaine Crispin.

"He'll be zonked," Mrs. Crispin said. "They'll just have some quiet time together." The president had spoken throughout the summit with a hoarse voice and coughed repeatedly due to allergies.

"He hasn't felt very well," Reagan's chief of staff Howard Baker told reporters as Air Force One jettied home.

At the two-day North Atlantic Treaty Organization meeting that ended Thursday in Brussels, Reagan and the 15 other leaders finessed disagreements over nuclear policy and pledged to keep the pact's arsenal of short-range nuclear weapons up-to-date.

The NATO leaders gave "full support" for Reagan's attempts to seek a 50 percent cut in strategic nuclear weapons as he heads toward a planned Moscow summit this spring. And they praised his role in negotiating the December U.S.-Soviet treaty banning medium-range nuclear weapons from European soil.

The alliance also backed a demand that the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact make deep cuts in the conventional weapons and armies NATO fears could be used to launch a surprise attack on Western Europe.

The president gets a daily briefing on Shultz's negotiations in the Middle East. The secretary returns Saturday.

Reagan dispatched Shultz on a second round of talks aimed at breathing new life into the peace process and curbing violence in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Baker said there were "no new surprises"

Missing some money? State Treasury may be keeping it

It could be like finding a pot of gold, or even a little sack of gold. Approximately $60 million of unclaimed funds are sitting in the Texas Treasury waiting for their rightful owners to come forward.

You could be one of them.

On Sunday, March 6, newspapers across Texas will publish a list of 75,000 Texans who have lost or forgotten money in accounts ranging from checking and savings accounts to oil royalties and corporate stocks.

Persons who find their name on the list may reclaim their property, which equals at least $50, by calling the State Treasury toll free at 1-800-321-2274 or by writing to the State Treasury at P.O. Box 12608, Capitol Station, Austin, 78711.

"There is no set time limit for making a claim," said State Treasurer Ann Richards. "Money turned over to the State Treasury can be claimed at any time in the future by original owners or their heirs."

"Please be patient if you are calling on the toll-free number, especially in the first few weeks after March 6 when the telephone lines are kept busy. You can be assured that if you have money coming to you, you will get it."

A similar list published by the Treasury in 1987 reunited about $50 million with owners. The Unclaimed Money Fund list was first published when Treasurer Richards took office in 1983. Since then, the State Treasury has returned 84 percent of all money ever returned since the law took effect 26 years ago.

Under her administration, the State Treasury has also substantially increased efforts to collect dormant accounts. Total collections since 1983 equal $162.2 million, or 79 percent of all unclaimed funds ever collected by the state of Texas.

"The amount of money that we collect is important," Richards said, "because in the past, accounts which were not turned over to the Treasury for safekeeping were often lost. Now, at least, the accounts are proected at no charge by the Treasury."

A complete list is being published statewide Sunday in 16 newspapers, including the Amarillo Globe-Times, and is the largest such list printed in the United States. It is also available at public libraries and county offices. In addition, a list of Pampa area names is included with this article.

Under state law, checking and savings accounts, mineral royalties, insurance payments, safe deposit boxes, utility deposits and such are turned over to the state if accounts are inactive for at least three years. The state may use the funds for general state services and for education, but the owners or their heirs may file a claim at any time in the future for the money held by the state.

Following are the Unclaimed Money Fund names from Pampa and the surrounding area.

melt under increasing temperatures that should reach into the 60s by Sunday. Ron and Billy are the sons of Ronald DeWitt of Pampa.

Second snow fails to arrive

From Staff and Wire Reports

After digging out from a blizzard that dumped up to 14-inches of snow on the northeast Panhandle, area residents were happy to find that the 1 to 3 additional inches of snow predicted Thursday never materialized.

Late Thursday warmer temperatures in the mid-30s began melting snow, causing new problems with flooding streets. Early morning travelers today had to contend with glaze ice resulting from last night's temperatures dipping into the teens.

Melting snow will continue today spurred by sunny skies and temperatures in the low 40s. Warm southwest and westerly winds ranging from 5 to 20 mph should speed the melting process, as well. Elsewhere in the state, cool, dry air spread across Texas as a ridge of high pressure at the surface and another aloft combined for dry out the air over the state.

The only precipitation in the state early today was in the form of scattered light showers along the coastal plains between Corpus Christi and Galveston.

That was quite a contrast to Thursday when snow was falling across the Panhandle.

Authorities warned that Panhandle roads and highways were snow-packed and icy early today.

Forecasts called for mostly cloudy skies across extreme South Texas through tonight with some scattered light showers along the coast.

The rest of the state will have clear to partly cloudy skies with a slight warming trend through Saturday.

Lows tonight will be in the upper 20s in the Panhandle and in the 30s over the rest of West Texas, the 30s and 40s in North Texas and in the 30s in the Hill Country and in the 40s and 50s over the rest of South Texas.

Highs Saturday will be in the 50s and 60s over most of West Texas except in Southwest Texas where readings will be in the 70s, in the 50s and 60s across North Texas and in the 70s in South Texas.

Skies were clearing over the northern two-thirds of the state today although skies are partly to mostly cloudy over the rest of the state.

Six Republicans seek to replace Boulter in Washington

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

When U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter decided not to seek a third term in Congress, candidates hoping to replace him came out of the woodwork.

Boulter, R-Amarillo, is running for the U.S. Senate. Six of the nine men hoping to be the 13th District's next Congressman are Republicans. They are competing in a race that almost certainly will require a runoff election April 12.

Jim Brandon, Bob Price, Chip Staniswalis, Alan Pickering, Larry Milner and Ron Buffum all are gunning for the spot. Whoever emerges from the pack will face the winner of a three-way Democratic battle between state Sen. Bill Sarpaluis, Vernon rancher Ed Lehman and Floydada prosecutor Randy Hollums.

Buffum, 42, an independent oil and gas operator and Wichita Falls city councilman, said he decided to run after realizing that citizens are quick to criticize elected officials but often reluctant to stand up for what they believe in, "which in my case is the oil and gas industry."

If elected, he pledges to hold town meetings throughout the district.

Buffum opposes an oil import fee, saying it would hurt agriculture and industry. He said he favors a national energy policy consisting of tax incentives for drilling and exploration, removal of the windfall profits tax and restoration of the 27½ percent depletion allowance.

Without a policy, he said,

"we're like a ship without a rudder."

A key part of any energy policy, Buffum said, is to educate citizens as to how important the domestic industry is to the nation's economic well-being and national security.

"If the American citizen realizes how grave this situation is, we'll have more support from non-energy-producing states," Buffum said.

Erasing the national debt, Buffum said, is a long-term problem that must involve revitalizing the economy. He called for removal of trade barriers and a program to increase the educational level of the workforce so that it can better compete in a "highly technological world."

Buffum also links tort reform to economic revitalization, saying the threat of lawsuits has made people afraid to take chances.

Buffum supports aid to the Contras, saying he wants peace negotiations to continue in Central America, but "we as Americans have a commitment to those who are striving for democracy."

He also favors continuing research on the Strategic Defense Initiative, commonly known as Star Wars.

Milner, 50, is former Amarillo Chamber of Commerce executive and former vice president of public relations for Southwestern Public Service. He said he decided to run because his experience in business and economic development will be helpful.

Milner has said jobs are the key issue in the race and has outlined a five-point jobs program he says will create jobs in the Panhandle.

He said he favors tax incentives and deregulation of natural gas to help the ailing energy industry. He also called for a research and development program to enhance discovery.

Milner said he would oppose an oil import fee unless someone in the future could prove to him it is necessary for national security.

"That would be the very last thing on my list," he said. "I'm philosophically a free-trader."

In agriculture, Milner said the 1990 farm program should be more market-oriented and contain transitional price supports.

Milner said economic growth is the key to fighting the national debt. He said cost-cutting alone won't do enough.

"I'm in favor of a strong growth policy where we do everything we can to make an industry more competitive," he said.

Milner said aid to the Contras is needed so that those negotiating with the Sandinista regime will negotiate from a position of strength.

"The more pressure that we could apply to the Sandinistas, the more (likely) they'd be to negotiate," he said.

Milner also favors development and deployment of SDI. He said it has the potential to bring numerous jobs to the Panhandle because of the Pantex plant near Amarillo. The nation as a whole also will benefit from technology learned from SDI, much like it did with the space program. Mil-

Last few days may get 'a little dicey,' Dukakis says

LUBBOCK (AP) — Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis says the last few days to Super Tuesday may get "a little dicey" because of desperation tactics by Democratic rival Richard Gephardt.

The Massachusetts governor was to court Democrats here in West Texas today before heading for Denver, Cheyenne and Seattle.

He concentrated much of his fire throughout a two-day, 1,200-mile swing through Texas on Gephardt, the Missouri congressman who has runs ads accusing Dukakis of favoring tax increases and knowing nothing about agriculture.

Dukakis has responded in kind with ads suggesting Gephardt has voted to protect the interests of big banks and corporations from which he has collected political action committee money.

After a meeting with community organizers at a church hall in Houston Thursday night, Dukakis told reporters, "I think the next three, four days may be somewhat difficult, only because things may start getting a little dicey between now and Tuesday. ... I think some people are getting desperate."

Asked if he meant Gephardt, Dukakis said, "The record is clear. He's running negative ads right now."

"The folks that attack are usually those that are behind," he said.

To Gephardt's charge that Dukakis has accepted campaign money from businesses that have major dealings with the state of Massachusetts, the governor replied, "I don't know what he's talking about. I have over 65,000 individual contributors to my campaign."

Dukakis, who refuses to accept money from PACs, said he has never taken contributions from state lobbyists, or more than $100 from a state employee.

"What is clear is that the PAC system is a very bad system. ... It's time it ended," said Dukakis, who blamed Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, a Republican presidential hopeful, and his GOP colleagues for filibustering a bill to curb PACs.

"If I'm president of the United States, the first bill I will send to the Congress is the Boren-Byrd bill," he vowed.

Texas offers the biggest prize, 183 delegates, and Dukakis was headed back to San Antonio Saturday night after stops in Spokane and Little Rock, Ark.

He picked up endorsements Thursday from Washington Gov. Booth Gardner and Sen. Brock Adams.

Dukakis also won the backing of the 95,000-member Texas State Teachers Association, which withdrew its earlier endorsement of Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, who is sitting out the South's primaries.

Dukakis charged Gephardt's retaliatory trade legislation could provoke a global trade war and harm U.S.-Mexican relations.

Before largely Hispanic audiences at airport rallies in the border towns of Harlingen and Laredo, Dukakis related how Gephardt asked him in a recent debate if he was running for "president of Mexico."

"I said, 'Dick, if I'm president of the United States, I'm going to pay attention to our relationship with Mexico and I'm going to make sure that our proposals do not wreck the economy of Mexico,'" Dukakis said to cheers.

"We're going to work with our neighbors in Mexico as partners to create opportunity on both sides of the border."

In Houston, Dukakis stood with his wife, Kitty, before a two-story Lone Star flag draped against the glass elevators in the atrium of the Hyatt-Regency Hotel. He told 600 supporters, "I don't have to tell you how important 'Super Martes' is."

Jury finds magazine negligent for ad

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for Soldier of Fortune magazine promised to appeal a federal court jury's $9.4 million award to the family of a Texas woman slain three years ago by a gunman hired through a magazine classified ad.

After 12 hours of deliberations over three days, the jury Thursday awarded $1.5 million to Gary Wayne Black, 18, and $400,000 to his grandmother, Marjorie Eimann, 64. The two also were awarded $7.5 million in punitive damages. They had asked for a total of $22.5 million, including $20 million in punitive damages.

Sandra Black, Gary's mother and Mrs. Eimann's daughter, was shot to death Feb. 21, 1985, at her home in Bryan, about 90 miles northwest of Houston.

Mrs. Black's husband, Robert, is on Texas' death row for paying John Wayne Hearn $10,000 to kill her. Hearn is serving three life terms in Florida for the Black slaying and two others in that state.

Robert Black contacted Hearn through a personal services classified ad Hearn placed in late 1984 in Soldier of Fortune, the self-styled "Journal for Professional Adventurers."

"We're sending out a warning or message to other publishers that ads placed in a certain context can be a very dangerous message and publishers as such should be responsible," Herman Castex, the jury foreman, said.

"This fight goes three rounds like a lot of First Amendment cases," Larry Thompson, the magazine's attorney said. "We lost the first round but put your money on us in the next two rounds. It's a different arena in the 5th Circuit (Court of Appeals). You've got the emotions and prejudice out of the case and you can concentrate on the First Amendment."

U.S. District Judge David Hittner, in a pretrial decision that cited federal case law, ruled the Boulder, Colo.-based magazine and its parent company, Omega Group Ltd., could not enjoy full First Amendment protection because of the commercial nature of the ad.

"This will have no effect on the legitimate press," Ron Franklin, the attorney for the plaintiffs said. "Soldier of Fortune knew in fact that it was advertising for contract killers and that offers no First Amendment protection."

Publishing and legal experts, however, were not as certain.

"When magazine publishers advertising people hear a big verdict based on this kind of ad, they may be more concerned than necessary to accept controversial advertising," Slade Metcalf, chairman of legal affairs for the New York-based Magazine Publishers Association, said.

"These kinds of cases really open the door," David Protes, associate professor of journalism at Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism, said. "There's very little case law on media negligence. There are almost no precedents."

But Vincent Blasi, a law professor at Columbia University, said commercial advertising has been given a middle-ground protection in the federal courts.

"When you get to the level of proposing a transaction, then I think it doesn't provide First Amendment protection," Blasi said.

Attorneys said it could take 18 months before the case reaches the federal appeals court in New Orleans.

Robert K. Brown, publisher of magazine, said the damages would have no effect on the future of his publication, which sells about 150,000 copies a month.

"This means every publisher is going to have to read every ad and look into the minds of those placing the ad," Brown said. "Please understand this was a terrible tragedy, a terrible crime. We have a great deal of empathy for them but we didn't do it. I did not know and my staff did not know."

Hearn's ad appeared in four issues of Soldier of Fortune. It read: "Ex marines. '67-69 Nam vets. Ex-DI, weapons specialist — jungle warfare. Pilot. ME. High-risk assignments. U.S. or overseas." It also provided a telephone number.

Attorneys and witnesses for the plaintiffs said the reference to "high-risk assignments" meant the Hearn was willing to do illegal activity. They also pointed to other classified ads in the magazine which offered services interpreted to include guns-for-hire.

Hittner limited evidence in the case to September 1984, when Hearn's ad first appeared. Six deaths later tied to the ads in the magazine were unknown to the jurors, Franklin said. Also unknown to them was the fact the magazine halted the ads when it learned of the slayings, Thompson said.

Soldier of Fortune witnesses defended the publication as a legitimate military journal and described the ads as providing employment for Vietnam veterans as bodyguards and security workers or mercenary fighting overseas.

SWAT team kills man after armed standoff

GALVESTON (AP) — Police fatally shot a man after a five-hour standoff, following a shooting that was believed to have been prompted by an argument over rent payments, authorities said.

After tear gas failed to move Billy C. Lynn, 58, from his home Thursday afternoon, Galveston Special Weapons and Tactics police approached, fatally wounding Lynn when he pointed a rifle at them, police said.

Police were called to the home after 19-year-old Lance Garner was wounded by gunfire. Garner's family rented a home from Lynn, who lived alone in a garage apartment behind the house.

On Thursday morning, Garner's father had gone to give Lynn a rent payment, police said. "The man who lived in the front (Garner's father) was trying to pay his rent, but the fellow (Lynn) didn't want to take the rent," Capt. J.B. Rice said.

According to Garner's 18-year-old sister Nadine, her father paid the rent Thursday morning and then about two hours later she heard two shots followed by her brother screaming from the backyard. "Oh God, he shot me."

The Special Weapons and Tactics team was called out. When their attempts to convince him to give himself up failed, police fired four canisters of tear gas into Lynn's home.

He still refused to come out, and "eventually the decision came down to go in," Rice said.

Notes from a long year gone by

The past year proved to be a delight for people who spend their time writing newspaper columns. Throughout the country, public figures made fools of themselves in amazing numbers.

Politicians, televangelists and others seemed to be waiting in the line marked "Stupid."

Some of my favorite topics of the last year include:

✓ Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker. They were fun at the time, and columnists nationwide claimed that when they sat down to write about the exiled PTLsters, the column virtually wrote itself. They were easy to make fun of.

But what they did, quite honestly, was sickening. It's not the way they shafted people by conveniently misappropriating their donations, or the drug problems Tammy Faye had, or any of the other multitude of allegations that surfaced.

What was sickening was the way they let down the people that trusted so much in them. To spiritually lead as many people as they did, only to stick them in the end, was the worst form of religious injustice possible.

✓ Gary Hart. Hart's affair with Donna Rice and his pulling out of the political race, only to later re-enter, ranked second in terms of the biggest farce of the year.

Hart's decision to again seek the presidency was simply a matter of self-indulgence and egotism. He thought the voters had forgiven him and that he still had a chance to be king of the country.

Sorry, Gary, but your poll standings have proven you wrong again.

✓ And on the subject of politics, here's a story that shows you just how far some candidates will go:

A candidate running for statewide office recently tried his best to seek the endorsement of The Pampa News. He was told that since The News is a Libertarian run newspaper, it took a neutral stance in matters political and would endorse no one.

Not satisfied, he tried again two days after the denial to again get the paper's backing.

When his efforts failed again, he proceeded to hang his campaign sign on a utility pole directly across the street from the news office. That way, it is the first thing editorial staffers see when they arrive at work in the morning, and the last thing they look at as they leave for the day. It was a nice try, proving how important endorsements are.

✓ The weather was always a hot topic to write on in the Panhandle. Blizzards here, tornadoes there. Living here has taught me to always have a blanket at the foot of the bed — even in July.

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

✓ When a tornado struck a mobile home park on Pampa's western edge in July, the Red Cross was summoned to offer assistance.

Pampa's finest proceeded to issue a ticket to a Red Cross vehicle that positioned itself in a "no-parking zone."

Aside from the continually woeful conditions of city streets, this was perhaps the most unintentionally humorous incident of the past year.

✓ Another issue that enable columnists to write with ease was the story of Jessica McClure. For 58 1/2 hours last October, Jessica was entombed in an underground well.

The spirit and courage shown by not only her, but also by the townspeople of Midland, Texas, brought a tear to even the eyes of the toughest, "I-never-cry kinds of guys," me included.

It is with that in mind that I am proud to say that my family and I have been given the opportunity to move to Midland to further pursue our career interests. We see it as a chance that we can not afford to pass by.

From what I know of both Pampa and Midland, the two towns have a lot in common.

Both have spunk. Both are filled with survivors and those striving to survive. Both have people who care about the needs of others.

Pampa had its own Jessica McClure. It was called Celanese.

After last year's explosion, the more fortunate townspeople — those not directly affected by the explosion — hurried to rally behind people who weren't as fortunate — those who lost either their loved ones or their jobs.

The selflessness of those people who helped, as well as the gutsiness of those who needed the help, proves that Pampa is a survivor and that it is top-heavy with good people.

FCC makes good decision for once

The Federal Communications Commission has asked the broadcast radio industry to do something it has grown unaccustomed to over the decades: Let the marketplace, not a government agency, decide which version of a new technology is preferable. Since broadcasting has been regulated so heavily over the years, some broadcasters don't quite know what to make of this freedom and responsibility. We suspect they'll manage somehow.

The debate over what technology should be used to broadcast AM radio stations in stereo has raged for almost a decade. The practice in the past would have been for the FCC to look into the matter, decide which technology would be best (with a better-than-average chance of being right, since the agency does have some competent engineers and technicians), and issue a decree. Broadcasters have become so accustomed to this method that many believe that AM stereo cannot fulfill its growth potential until the FCC decrees a single standard.

Five years ago, when AM stereo was introduced, five competing systems were available. Market forces have done their job of shaking out the weak sisters, and the number of effective competitors is down to two. The best approach is to let the two continue to offer their services. Perhaps there's room in the market for both of them; perhaps one system will emerge with market dominance. There's no technical or economic reason for the FCC to intervene and impose a decision.

A similar process has occurred in the video cassette recording business. Although most manufacturers went with the VHS format, Sony stuck with Beta. The marketplace has spoken for VHS, at least to the extent that Sony recently decided to start making VHS machines while still turning out some in the Beta format. Some Beta enthusiasts believe the marketplace was wrong in this instance; the nice thing is that they're able to express their preference with their purchasing decisions without imposing their preferences on those who think differently. No government intervention was either necessary or advisable at any stage of the process.

A major advantage of the FCC's decision not to impose a single standard for AM stereo is that it leaves the field open to new technology. Somebody might just come up with a new way of broadcasting in stereo that is better or less expensive than either of the methods now in existence, or present technologies will be refined substantially. Instead of an innovator having to go the FCC to beg that the old standard be scrapped and a new one imposed, he will simply have to go to the marketplace. The fact that the field is not tightly controlled makes it more likely that innovation will take place.

The FCC made a good decision. If broadcasters act like competitive businessmen instead of wards of the state, the conversion to AM stereo is likely to happen quickly.

Good news for honey bees

WASHINGTON — On the matter of subsidies to honey producers, there is good news and bad news. The bad news is that these subsidies are continuing. The good news is that costs of this program are dropping. By the end of March, the government's stock of surplus honey will be gone.

If a textbook were being written on how our government drifted into the fiscal mess it's in, at least a chapter could well be devoted to the honey program. The chapter would remind us how very difficult it is to get rid of a federal entitlement once a program has become entrenched.

The story goes back to World War II and its shortage of sugar. It seemed a good idea at the time to encourage production of honey as an alternative sweetener. Beekeepers set busily to work, and before long honey was flowing like milk. Economic causes produce economic effects: The price dropped, and the producers felt the sting.

Political pressures mounted. In 1949 Congress wrote into the farm bill a price support for honey that was based at first on a parity plan. In time this gave way to a specific price: Producers could obtain government loans at 65 cents a pound, about 10 or 15 cents above the world price. The loans naturally went into default; the government took over the collateral honey, and by 1985 the taxpayers owned 108 million pounds of the stuff.

Total costs of the program were in the neighborhood of $100 million a year. The Department of Agriculture, by law, could not sell the stuff; the honey had to be stored, processed and given away, and all this added 15 cents per pound to the bill.

James J. Kilpatrick

To get to the good news: In 1985 Congress began to back off. The support price edged down to 64 cents in 1986, then to 61 cents at the end of last year. For 1988 the loan rate will fall again to about 59 cents. It will come down by 5 percent a year through 1990. Of greater significance, Congress provided a complicated buyback option, similar to programs for cotton and rice, and this seems to be working remarkably well.

In 1985 roughly 98 percent of the honey under loan was forfeited. Since then the forfeiture rate has dropped to 17 percent. Total program costs are falling to $40 million a year. Stockpiles in mid-February were down to 3 million pounds. By the end of March not a drop will remain. (It is not exactly relevant, but rice inventories also will disappear in March, and stocks of cheese and non-fat dry milk will dry up in May. The Department of Agriculture must be doing something right.)

Note further good news: U.S. exports of honey are increasing, and imports of honey — mostly from China, Canada, Mexico and Argentina — are diminishing. Imports have dropped from 138 million pounds in 1985 to an estimated 58 million pounds in 1987. Our exports are at the highest levels since 1973.

A touch of bad news: In the omnibus budget act that landed on the president's desk in December, Congress removed a $250,000 cap on loans to individual producers. This means that the big boys will be back in clover. About 200,000 persons are identified as beekeepers, but only 3,000 of them maintain 300 or more colonies. Among the 3,000 are the "Big Ten" who produce from 12 percent to 15 percent of the total crop.

For the Big Ten, honey subsidies have been big business. In 1984, A.H. Myer & Sons of South Dakota obtained payments of $912,000; Richard Adee of South Dakota claimed $838,000; Knoefler of North Dakota got $712,000. Major producers strongly protested a system that made them subject to two caps, one on loan limits, the other on payment limits. No other agricultural producers were subject to such a restraint. Congress yielded in December, and lifted the cap on loans. For the Big Ten it's a sweet proposition.

This is the long and short of it: Nearly 40 years after honey subsidies came into being, the costly program goes on. No rational economic, political or social justification supports the continuance. The payments benefit barely 3,000 commercial producers. The supply of bees for agricultural pollination is not in danger. Honey produced in the United States is of high quality; there is a demonstrated world market for it.

Nevertheless, like so many other federal programs, this one has a political immortality of its own. In a trillion-dollar budget, marked by a $150 billion deficit, a mere $40 million scarcely is visible. We seem to hear that often on Capitol Hill. Among the special interests, that's what they all say.

U.S. car industry improving

Britain's first major industrial strike in years, a walkout by more than 32,000 Ford workers, has not been primarily about money.

It is an emotional dispute over that car maker's push to impose more Japanese-style practices on reluctant employees.

A Ford spokesman says, "Our primary goal has been to improve efficiency and productivity to fight off foreign competitors."

The Commission on Industrial Productivity at Massachusetts Institute of Technology recently examined state-side American industries and why they have been losing out to foreign competition.

The MIT group, 18 scientists, engineers, political scientists and economists, sought to determine the causes of American weakness in productivity.

They blamed: Excessive attention to activities and investments that are profitable in the short run. For example, while Americans invented the transistor radio, color television and the video cassette recorder, American businesses quickly lost interest in producing them and lost those markets to Japan.

In the machine tool industry American businesses tried to backlog orders instead of more aggressively delivering products on time. Japanese, with quicker delivery, captured much of that market.

The MIT group blamed American car makers for competing while failing to cooperate Japanese car makers, with designers and production engineers working together, bring new cars to market faster.

From what these theoreticians are concluding, the U.S. automobile industry is a dinosaur — too cumbersome to compete worldwide.

Don't you believe it! I spent days at the Chicago Auto Show in February, the biggest in the world and the biggest ever here.

For the first time in decades, homefolks came away from this show walking tall. It is a vintage year for American car makers. Just wait until you see the new crop! What's new and what's next is on target.

Something needs to be explained — especially since the MIT think-tank neglected to consider it.

When you drive a car hard enough and long enough it falls apart, demands to be replaced.

While the restoration and preservation of old cars is a hobby with some of us, it is an expensive hobby.

It's the same with car factories. After 68 years a car factory gets tired, worn out, can no longer compete.

Our steel industry was not overwhelmed by overseas steel-makers; it decayed away.

Our car makers are not going to let that happen.

Our nation's automotive industry is building the new facilities that can compete and the new cars that will compete.

And our country's auto workers are proving that they are as good as anybody's; for that matter, a little better!

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, March 4, the 64th day of 1988. There are 302 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On March 4, 1789, the Constitution of the United States went into effect as the first Federal Congress met in New York. However, the lawmakers had to adjourn for the lack of a quorum.

On this date: In 1681, England's King Charles II granted a charter to William Penn for an area of land that later became Pennsylvania. In 1791, Vermont became the 14th state.

In 1829, an unruly crowd mobbed the White House during the inaugural reception for President Andrew Jackson.

In 1837, the Illinois state legislature granted a city charter to Chicago.

In 1861, the Confederacy adopted the "Stars and Bars" flag design.

In 1902, the American Automobile Association was founded in Chicago.

In 1917, Republican Jeannette Rankin of Montana took her seat as a member of Congress, the first woman to be elected to the House of Representatives.

Some other 'truths' about South Africa

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Every so often the strain of maintaining and propagating a totally false view of the situation in South Africa becomes too much for the New York Times. No doubt, if questioned, its editors would insist that the grotesque caricature of that country that is adumbrated week by week in its news columns and on its editorial page — the familiar picture of a rabidly racist white minority regime holding down a far larger black majority by brute force and intending to do so in perpetuity — is "subjectively true"; i.e., that it conforms to the larger and more enduring realities of life in South Africa, however much it may depart from strict objectivity in regard to details.

But the Times, like Antaeus in Greek mythology, who drew his strength from the earth and had to make contact with it anew from time to time for that purpose, cannot disregard objective reality altogether. And recently its current correspondent in South Africa, John F. Burns, delivered himself (on the op-ed page, to be sure) of a series of statements on the situation there so accurate, and so wildly at variance with the version of events usually served up by the Times, that I am taking the liberty of quoting selected passages for your delectation. You may have seen similar statements of my own in this space, but you assuredly haven't seen them in the Times.

Thus, Burns declares flatly that "By common consent, (President P.W.) Botha has gone further toward dismantling the social and economic aspects of apartheid than most critics of the ruling National Party thought possible." By whose consent? The Times's editors? You could have fooled me.

But Burns goes on: "Major pillars of the racial system, such as the 'influx control' laws that denied blacks the right to move freely around the country, have been scrapped, or at least substantially eased.... Representatives of the Indian and mixed-race communities, known here as 'col-oreds', have (been given) their own chambers in Parliament, and the government has invited black leaders to join a 'national council' to discuss broader political rights."

If all that is true (and it is — along with much more), why, do you suppose, has Congress cracked down so mercilessly through economic sanctions enacted over a Reagan veto, on the Botha government?

It isn't an easy question to answer. Sometimes I have speculated that the liberals are actually trying to make South Africa's blacks suffer a bit (since sanctions hit them hardest), in an effort to induce a mood of rebellion that could then be used to "liberate" them. Sometimes I have suspected that South Africa's critics are privately dismayed at the progress the Botha administration is making on the desegregation front, and want to "destabilize" the situation before it changes beyond recognition for the better.

But most of the time I manage to remember that the attitude of American liberals toward South Africa has, in fact, almost nothing to do with that country. It is a purely American phenomenon, serving strictly domestic purposes.

South Africa's problems provide, for one thing, just about the cheapest moral high available to an American liberal. For the price of a trip to Washington, he can actually get arrested for demonstrating in front of the South African Embassy, then be released by the cooperative municipal authorities without any penalty whatever. Without even leaving campus, a handful of students can erect a mini-slum in some inconvenient spot and call it a sample of living conditions in Soweto.

That such antics may result in the unemployment of real blacks in cities and towns far away, where there is no unemployment compensation, doesn't even occur to them. And if it did, they probably wouldn't care. No pain, no gain, right?

Nation

Report says Reagan underestimates national deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's fiscal 1989 budget would leave a federal deficit of $165 billion, $35 billion higher than the White House says, the Congressional Budget Office reported today.

Most of the difference results from the administration's more optimistic view of the economy, said James Blum, acting director of the non-partisan agency, in testimony prepared for delivery before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"CBO foresees less rapid real growth, higher inflation and higher interest rates," said Blum, who defended his agency's prognosis as in line with private forecasts.

The congressional agency also sees federal programs, including entitlement programs, as costing more than the administration predicts in its $1.1 trillion plan, he said.

"The administration's budget would cut the projected deficits only modestly," said Blum. Fiscal 1989 red ink would be $12 billion higher, or $177 billion, if the president's proposals or other deficit reduction were not enacted, he said.

The House and Senate budget committees will soon begin drafting their versions of the government's spending program. However, they are not expected to do more deficit cutting this year than the president proposed, since his plan was crafted under the guidelines of a budget agreement he reached last fall with congressional leaders.

The CBO estimates that the economy will grow 1.8 percent in calendar 1988 and 2.6 percent in 1989, compared with White House growth predictions of 2.4 percent and 3.5 percent. The CBO also sees consumer prices rising more quickly, with higher interest rates and higher unemployment.

Lower growth cuts into tax revenue projections, while higher interest rates force the government to pay more to finance its programs.

The Gramm-Rudman law calls for slashing the deficit to $136 billion in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 as an interim step toward a balanced budget by fiscal 1993. It also mandates automatic, broad-based spending cuts if Congress and the president don't approve legislation to come within $10 billion of the target.

The CBO's projections show those targets being missed by a large margin. But the congressional agency's figures carry little legal weight, since official Gramm-Rudman estimates are done by the White House alone. A revised version of Gramm-Rudman approved last year left the CBO in only an advisory capacity.

The CBO's latest revised projections show deficits higher than the administration estimates from this year straight through fiscal 1993. The White House predicts only $23 billion in red ink remaining by then, while CBO estimates an annual deficit still in excess of $100 billion.

Long-range economic estimates can vary widely. But the CBO and the White House deficit estimates also show a wide gap in the current fiscal year, which is nearly half over.

The White House predicts $147 billion in red ink for fiscal 1988, which ends Sept. 30.

Young AIDS victim called an inspiration

WASHINGTON (AP) — They sat side by side beneath bright television lights in a huge government hearing room, a vivacious student council president and her newfound friend with AIDS.

The White House commission listened intently as Ryan White and Jill Stewart told their stories Thursday.

"I came face to face with death at 13 years old," said Ryan.

"No one realizes how much he has done for us," said Jill. "He helps us put life in perspective in so many ways."

It was three years ago when doctors discovered Ryan had AIDS — a victim of contaminated blood products used to treat his hemophilia — and gave him six months to live.

But the Indiana youngster, now 16 and planning for an advertising career, or maybe architecture, refused to accept that. He told the presidential AIDS commission that he decided "to live a normal life, to go to school, be with my friends and enjoy day-to-day activities."

"I'm a normal, happy teen-ager again," he continued.

He's on AZT now, a drug that helps prolong the lives of people with AIDS, but does not cure the fatal disease.

"I have a learner's permit, I attend sports functions and dances. I made the honor roll just recently, with two As and two Bs. ... I believe in myself as I look forward to graduating ... in 1991."

But it wasn't that way until Ryan moved to Cicero, Ind., last summer — three doors up from Jill — and enrolled at Hamilton Heights High School in nearby Arcadia.

In Kokomo, another Indiana town, things had not been so good.

"Because of the lack of education on AIDS, discrimination, fear, panic and lies surrounded me," he told the commission.

"I was labeled a troublemaker, my mom an unfit mother and I was not welcome anywhere. People would get up and leave so they would not have to sit anywhere near me. Even at church, people would not shake my hand."

As word of his plight spread around the country, Ryan started making new friends — but mostly from far away places.

"Mayor (Edward) Koch of New York was the first public figure to give me support," he said. "I met some of the greatest, like Elton John, Greg Logannis, Max Headroom, Alyssa Milano — my teen idol — Lyndon King and Charlie Sheen. All of these plus many more became my friends, but I had very few friends at school."

"I tried to ignore the injustice, because I knew the people were wrong. My family and I held no hatred for those people because we realized they were victims of their own ignorance. We had great faith that, with patience, understanding, and education, that my family and I could be helpful in changing their minds and attitudes around."

Yet, finally, they decided to move.

The people in Cicero and Arcadia had heard of Ryan and they prepared themselves for him.

Jill, who aspires to study human genetics next year in college, or maybe law, told about how the 600 students at her school "had witnessed Ryan's pain in his former community" and how they determined "there was no reason for Ryan to go through that pain again."

She told how school officials worked with the student council and parents to educate the community about AIDS.

U.S. policy in limbo following up-down votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has killed its Democratic leadership's proposal for a package of "humanitarian" aid for the Nicaraguan Contras, leaving the vacillating U.S. policy toward Central America once again in limbo and the rebels without support.

The lawmakers voted 216-208

Thursday to reject the Democrats' $30.5 million proposal that would have provided four months' worth of food, clothing and medical supplies to the rebels and created a new $14 million program to aid children who are victims of the Nicaraguan civil war.

Forty-five Democrats, mostly liberals who oppose any aid to the Contras, joined with Republicans, who thought the aid proposal too weak, to deal it a fatal blow. Only five of 176 GOP members present voted for the measure on the final ballot.

It was a particular setback for House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, who had sought to keep the Contras in place in Nicaragua to pressure the leftist Sandinista government into concessions as part of a regional peace process. Democrats had hoped, too, that their milder aid package would relieve pressure to give the rebels more weapons later this year.

But the surprise outcome also appeared to dim any administration hopes of speedy action to keep supplies flowing to the rebels, who by some accounts are in dire need of food and other non-lethal materiel. Previous U.S. aid, and the authority to deliver it by airdrops inside Nicaragua, expired Tuesday.

Wright, D-Texas, said the vote may prove "a somewhat pyrrhic victory" for Republicans, adding that he had no immediate plans to revive a Contra aid plan.

"We have thus far done our best," Wright said. "It was as good an effort as could be made. I don't know how you would find a better consensus among those who have a sincere effort to help the peace process."

U.S. productivity improvement halved in '87

By The Associated Press

The nation's productivity rose just 0.9 percent last year, only slightly more than earlier estimates and the lowest since the last recession, the government says.

In other economic news Thursday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slipped 7.80 points to 2,063.49, the dollar was mixed in foreign exchange and bond prices barely budged in lethargic trading.

Productivity among non-farm businesses that are responsible for three-fourths of the nation's economic activity rose at an annual rate of 0.3 percent in the fourth quarter, the Labor Department said. That contrasted with a 0.2 percent deterioration reported in preliminary figures last month.

Productivity is a measure of the amount of labor required to produce goods and services.

The revisions raised the productivity improvement for the entire year from 0.8 percent to 0.9 percent.

Abortion funding guidelines ruled unconstitutional

BOSTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has suspended new regulations that would have cut off federal funds to family planning clinics which offer abortions or abortion counseling, after a judge ruled the guidelines were unconstitutional.

"Abortion referral and abortion counseling are constitutionally protected speech under the First Amendment," said U.S. District Judge Walter J. Skinner, issuing a permanent injunction Thursday against enforcement of the regulations.

"Denying an otherwise eligible organization a grant because it provides abortion counseling or referral, even with non-federal funds, constitutes an impermissible penalty for the exercise of a constitutionally protected right," he said.

"The regulations are specifically designed to suppress speech, and particularly directed at the suppression of one viewpoint," Skinner said. "As a result, they run directly contrary to the dictates of the First Amendment."

He said the regulations also were contrary to the intent of Congress when it established the Family Planning Program under Title X of the Public Health Service Act of 1970.

Skinner ruled the guidelines would cause irreparable harm to women who receive services from the clinics and violate a woman's right to privacy and to choose to have an abortion.

Explosive laden car found near Shultz's Jerusalem hotel

JERUSALEM (AP) — Soldiers set up checkpoints on main roads in the occupied West Bank today and turned back foreign and Israeli journalists seeking to enter major towns before noon prayers on the Moslem Sabbath. Rioting has ritually followed the prayers in the last few weeks of Palestinian unrest in the occupied lands. In Jerusalem, police found a car packed with explosives about 300 yards from Secretary of State George P. Shultz's hotel. The car bomb, which a police officer discovered by chance at an intersection, was safely dismantled. Shultz, who returned Thursday to resume his Middle East peace mission, met today with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, but his second effort appeared inconclusive. Shultz called the talks "positive and constructive." He was to fly to Syria and Egypt for consultations before returning to Washington Saturday. Shamir and Peres are bitter rivals in the coalition government. The foreign minister has expressed support for the Shultz plan but Shamir has not. Associated Press correspondent Mary Sedor was stopped on the outskirts of the West Bank town of Ramallah, eight miles north of Jerusalem. "Ramallah is a closed military area. The only people allowed inside are the people who live here," said an Israeli soldier, one of six manning a checkpoint behind a spiked barrier. "We are asking everyone where they live and if they live here, they can go in. All outsiders, including the press, cannot enter," the soldier said. Photographer Eli Hershkowitz said an army roadblock was also stopping journalists at Gush Etzion, on the road from Jerusalem to Hebron. He said some journalists used back roads to evade the checkpoints and reached Hebron, where rumors circulated that a demonstration was planned after noon prayers today, the Moslem Sabbath.

The U.S. Embassy confirmed that the car bomb found in Jerusalem was not along a route Shultz was to travel today. It was not clear when the bomb was to have gone off. Police said it had a detonating mechanism, but did not elaborate. Brig. Gen. Ephraim Lapid, the army's spokesman in Tel Aviv, denied the West Bank and Gaza Strip had been placed off limits to journalists. "There is no total closure," Lapid said in a telephone interview.

French plane crash kills all 21 aboard

PARIS (AP) — A twin-engine commuter plane crashed this morning 25 miles from Paris, killing all 21 people aboard, civil aviation authorities said.

The Fairchild 227 turboprop, owned by the small aviation company, TAT, apparently hit high-tension wires as it went down in Pamfou, near Melun and about 25 miles southwest of Paris, police said.

Civil aviation authorities said the plane was carrying 18 passengers, including a baby, and a crew of three.

Police officials in Melun earlier said there were 19 passengers and three crewmembers and described the plane as a Fokker 27, which is very similar to a Fairchild 227.

The plane, on a flight from Nancy in eastern France to Paris, crashed occurred shortly before 8 a.m., police said.

The cause of the accident was not immediately known. Officials noted there was snow in the region and weather conditions were generally not good.

A trainee flight attendant, Helene Guillou, said in Nancy that she missed the flight because she overslept.

Republicans

ner said. "I think that it is a very major opportunity for this congressional district," he said. "We need to be prepared to take advantage of that technological transfer."

Pickering, 34, is an Amarillo Church of Christ minister. He said he is running for "traditional family values" because of what he sees as a "crisis in leadership."

"We need strong, moral leadership, leadership with integrity and, at the same time, competent leadership," Pickering said. "We need to remind people that this is one nation under God."

Pickering said the oil and gas industry has been hurt by government regulation and needs an environment of free trade to thrive. Achievement has been taxed, he said.

Deregulation and tax incentives are the first step in reviving the industry, Pickering said, followed by a program to find new uses for existing products and new energy-related products.

He opposes an import fee, calling it a "band-aid approach."

Pickering has proposed a "quality of spending act" designed to reduce the federal deficit by putting a taxpayers' price tag on every piece of legislation and letting people know how that money would be spent. He also supports privatizing some branches of government as recommended by the Grace Commission.

Pickering said he favors SDI because of the military and technological advantages it would give the nation.

"It's based upon a more moral principle vis-a-vis MAD — Mutually Assured Destruction," Pickering said.

He also supports aid to the Contras, calling the Nicaraguan civil war a fight against the spread of communism. "(Nicaraguan President) Ortega's goal is to dominate Central America," Pickering said.

Staniswalis, 39, a state representative from Amarillo and a real estate agent, is running on a principal of reducing the size of government. He said he would open a Congressional office in Pampa — the district's third-largest city — if elected.

Staniswalis called for a national energy policy that includes incentives for exploration, repeal of the windfall profits tax, deregulation of gas "from the wellhead to the burner," expansion of depletion allowances and opening of more public lands for lease. He opposes an import fee.

"An oil import fee would more an ailing industry entirely in the wrong direction," he said. "What is needed is less government regulation, not more."

Staniswalis called on strengthening and reinforcing the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget-cutting measures. He said he has a difficult time justifying extra spending on defense and social programs "when the budget and the economy have to be our No. 1 priority."

"The only solution to the spending problem is to cut the funding," he said.

Staniswalis called for continued research on SDI, which he said means mutually assured survival instead of destruction.

He supports aid to the Contras, saying "any friend of freedom did not vote against that funding."

Former U.S. Rep. Price, 60, is a Pampa area rancher who points to his eight years of experience in Congress and the fact that he worked with Vice President George Bush and Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, the two GOP presidential frontrunners.

He said he decided to run because "I didn't think my career in Congress was over" and because the oil and gas industry has been hurt by government policies.

"If it had been a few individuals, we would have said poor management," he said. "I was caught in it personally, just like everybody else."

Price supports a list of tax incentives to help the ailing industry, including the 27½ percent depletion allowance and tax advantages for exploration and investment. Although he supports repeal of the windfall profits tax, he said it isn't a solution because it doesn't take effect until oil reaches $18 a barrel.

He said he supports an oil import fee but, with only 11 producing states, realizes it is politically unfeasible.

One way of reducing the deficit, Price said, is reducing foreign "handouts." He said allies should help bear more of the cost of NATO defenses and U.S. protection in the Persian Gulf and southeast Asia.

"If you're going broke, you don't help your friends any more than you have to," he said.

Price called for across the board budget cuts except in the areas of Social Security, education and the space program. He also opposes a line-item veto for the president.

"While we may have all the confidence in the world in President Reagan, we're transferring that power to all the presidents from now on," he said of the measure. "I think it's the first step to a dictatorship or a step in that direction."

Price said he supports aid to the Contras because, without it, America faces the possibility of defending its own borders against communism.

"It's like a cancer," he said. "We'd better nip it in the bud."

He also supports SDI.

Brandon, 61, an Amarillo accountant and lawyer, said he's running because he can be a good "salesman" for Texas interests.

"You don't go up there to vote; you go up there to sell," he said. "Good statesmanship will sell in this country. I don't need the job, but I'm interested in the course of this country, and I don't like what I see."

Brandon supports a $3 oil import fee to head off the nation's growing dependence on foreign oil and spur production and exploration. He chides his critics who oppose the fee, noting that Boulter and both U.S. senators from Texas support it.

"You've got to make it a national problem, which it is," he said. "It's no longer in our control. We're already paying a tremendous price for this economic wasteland."

He added that a long-term solution to the problem is finding alternatives to oil and gas.

Brandon said he supports the Grace Commission's privatization efforts and cutting waste out of the budget. People need to have more money left over to spend, not to pay taxes, he said. "Waste just runs me insane," he said. He added that U.S. allies should start sharing military costs.

Brandon supports Contra aid because "anybody willing to fight communism deserves our help."

"Why should we wait until they own the Rio Grande?" he asked.

He also supports SDI, saying the Russians can't get it first or America is through.

"Whether we like it or not, we've got to live in a nuclear age," he said.

FIRST STEP

Baby's first step is always an exciting occasion. Fathers often argue about whose child walked earliest because the first step is a landmark of growth. There are other first steps that must be made in life, sooner or later, if one is truly to grow to maturity. The spiritual step is one of them. Sometimes the first step spiritually is made very late in life—when this happens to a person he is always sad about the years that have been wasted without knowing God, but thanks be to Him, it is never too late to be accepted by Him. If your first step is still to come, make it now—Go to Church this very week.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: But grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and forever! Amen. (2 Peter 3:18 NIV)

My husband is a child at heart. With the exception of financial limits, his imagination knows no bounds when it comes to his toys and games.

Through the years, he has played with ham radios, CB radios, photography equipment, computers, various sporting equipment, guitars, violins and harmonicas. He's had a go at archery, golf, tennis, racketball and jogging.

We have a Fibber Magee's closet full of various athletic equipment and extensive collections of flat tennis balls and billed caps for his every sporting occasion.

We have a large chest-of-drawers that I call his toy box: it is jam packed with photographic equipment, as is his closet floor and shelves. A guitar and a violin gather dust in a corner behind a door. Cabinet doors and table covers hide stacks of photography and computer magazines.

I must admit my husband has at least partially mastered all his games except those musical in nature, in which instance he is handicapped by a tin ear rather than any lack of enthusiasm.

And his athletic endeavors have been curtailed substantially the past couple of years by a heart condition.

However, his passion for photography and computers rages on.

When he first began his photography/computer phase, he knew little about either subject. But, when an activity so catches his fancy, he pursues the subject exhaustively.

He reads books and books and more books. He talks endlessly with others who share his interest. He corners and quizzes experts mercilessly.

As a result, he has become a fine photographer and our resident computer expert; and his continuing pursuit of relevant knowledge is surpassed only by his pleasure.

Most of us step into a life with Christ with little knowledge of Him other than the exciting welling of His presence within us. In the beginning, Christianity is an untried concept and Jesus is a newcomer, and we may feel fragile and bewildered.

However, we don't embark on a growth spurt without assistance. We have a limitless access to the Bible, God's own instruction manual.

We have the freedom to worship and study in the church of our choice. We have an abundance of Christian churches from which to choose that are staffed by knowledgeable servants of God and that offer a vast variety of study courses. We have a wealth of fellow believers with whom to share ideas and ideals.

Most importantly, we have a prayer hotline to God and assurance of His loving support as we strive for soul enrichment and righteous proficiency.

And as we study and absorb, our spiritual growth will be surpassed only by our pure joy!

Religion Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has declined to reconsider a lower court decision that parents don't have a right to substitute home teaching for school-required textbooks that offend parental religious sensibilities.

The high court let stand a federal Court of Appeals ruling that the Hawkins County, Tenn., school board was not obligated to provide alternative reading arrangements for pupils whose parents objected to various textbooks.

A district court had ordered school officials to excuse students for home instruction from the controversial reading assignments, but the appeals court said the state is not obliged to shelter children "from exposure to some ideas they find offensive."

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A noted church growth specialist says the "prognosis for the Sunday school in America is not good," with enrollment falling from 40.5 million in 1970 to 26.6 million in 1986.

Win Arn, head of the Institute for American Church Growth, says that in 1970, only 10 percent of the adult population said they received no religious training as a child, while in 1986, the proportion had climbed to 27 percent.

'Walk Through Bible' seminar scheduled at First Methodist

Auditorium floors turned into "maps." People sitting or standing near "Bible lands and waters."

Vibrant teaching punctuated with hand movements and laughter. Group recitations increasing in fervor and length as the one-day Saturday seminar moves rapidly on.

The First United Methodist Church will sponsor "A Walk Through the Bible" Old Testament seminar from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, March 19, at the church. Registration information can be obtained by calling 669-7411.

The seminar is an education ministry with an objective of bringing people all over the world to a new excitement about the Word of God.

"A Walk Through the Bible" has attracted even those who don't read the scriptures. The seminars are in demand and being taught all over the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Singapore, Spain, England, the Philippines and the Caribbean islands.

The WTB not only creates and utilizes the above fun atmosphere. It gives people an overview of the flow of God's Word never before experienced, seminar instructors claim.

Even seminary graduates find the chronology, events and people of the Old Testament falling into place in a new easy-to-understand and easy-to-remember pattern, they say.

In the words of a pastor whose church has hosted WTB seminars: "The uniqueness of the program seems to lie in its organized simplicity. It accomplished for me in one day what seven years of Bible college and seminary overlooked; it gave me skeletons on which I can 'flesh out' the details."

Saints and Sinners

George Plagenz

Let's bring back church suppers

The church in the valley by the wildwood and the little brown church in the dale are beginning to look pretty good again to a lot of us.

Suddenly we have become disenchanted with the glitzy, sometimes sleazy, electronic church and the big names (and big salaries) of its theatrical stars.

As the Rev. Herbert W. Chilstrom, the new presiding bishop of the recently created Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, said after his election, "Many folks are going to be looking again at the church around the corner."

We'll be attending church suppers once more and Mother will be baking for the cake sale and church will be like it was in the old days when you and I were young, Maggie.

What made us turn our backs on the church by the side of the road with its unsophisticated gospel message? In its place, we built crystal palaces and brought in TV cameras to intrude upon our private devotions.

At Rex Humbard's Cathedral of Tomorrow near Akron, Ohio, there was a part in every service where the minister quietly asked the members of the congregation to "bow your heads and close your eyes," while those with some personal need in their lives could raise their hands to receive a special prayer, unnoticed by their neighbors in the pews.

Little did they suspect that during this sacred time the TV cameras would be focused on them so that everybody in TV land would know who they were.

Church became a media event. Even humble church editors caught the new spirit. They began referring to themselves by the grander-sounding title of religion editor. I may have been the sole remaining church editor in the country.

I continued to print on each Saturday's church page a list of church suppers, complete with mouth-watering menus: "Roast beef with pan gravy, mashed potatoes, creamed green beans, crisp garden salad, homemade rolls and butter, apple pie and hot coffee."

I remembered from my days as a newscaster in Boston, when I would deliver the produce market report each noon, that people like to hear words like eggs, green peppers, sweet corn, watermelon and green beans. I figured we all like to read about tempting meals, too.

I have always been a church-supper man. Years ago, whenever anybody came in from out of town and wanted to know of a good place to eat, I would always try to find out where there was a church supper going on and send him there.

The service at a church supper is the best in the world. The waitresses can't do enough for you. Your coffee cup is never empty. When you go back for a second helping, that is the nicest compliment you can pay.

And a church basement or parish hall where a supper is being served can be the friendliest place on God's earth — friendlier, oftentimes, than the church itself.

Should you ever find yourself all alone and lonely in a strange city, hie you to a church supper. If you are looking for a place to live, the person next to you will know somebody who knows where there is a good apartment — even though everyone else has told you there isn't a thing available in the city.

Peter's home town uncovered

By PAUL HIRSCHHORN
Associated Press Writer

ET TELL, Israeli-Annexed Golan Heights (AP) — Archaeologists say they have settled a centuries-old debate over the location of Bethsaida, a fishing village where the apostle Peter was born and where Jesus was said to have worked miracles.

"There is no doubt now that this is Bethsaida," said archaeologist Rami Arav, who headed the excavation of the site last April.

A complete kitchen from the time of Jesus with many of its vessels intact plus boxes of pottery have been unearthed at Et Tell, one of two sites long believed by scholars to be the biblical city.

Arav said in an interview that the second site, pinpointed by biblical experts in the mid-19th century, was a nearby ruin called El-Araj, on the shores of the Sea of Galilee.

"To end the debate once and for all, we conducted test digs at the two sites to see if we could find a layer from the time when Jesus lived. The shafts yielded the layer we sought only at Et Tell," Arav said.

Rocky terrain and clashes that culminated in Israel seizing the Golan Heights from Syria in 1967 have long made theories about the location of Bethsaida hard to prove.

Even today access is difficult. Et Tell, a small mound just north of where the Jordan River empties into the Sea of Galilee, is situated among abandoned Syrian bunkers and exploded 52mm mortar shells in an area that until recently was suspected of being a mine field.

Bethsaida was the site where Jesus was said to have restored a blind man's sight (Mark 8:22) and healed Peter's mother of a fever (Matthew 8:14).

He also began his famous walk on water from the shores of Bethsaida (Mark 6:45), and chose a site nearby to multiply two fish and five loaves of bread into enough food to feed 5,000 followers (Luke 9:10).

Bethsaida, which means house of fishing in Aramaic, the language Jesus spoke, was also the birthplace of Peter, his brother Andrew and the apostle Phillip (John 1:44).

"Bethsaida was extremely important," said Arav, of the Golan Research Institute in Katzrin, eight miles (12 kilometers) north of Et Tell.

"It is the third-most frequently mentioned place in the New Testament, cited in the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. Only Jerusalem and Capernaum are mentioned more often," he said.

Because it was also a popular spot of early Christian pilgrimage, scholars were able to estimate its position as early as 1860, said the Rev. Virgil Pixner, a Roman Catholic priest and an expert on early Christian culture.

Et Tell fell inside territory that was initially a no man's land between French-controlled Syria and British-controlled Palestine and later was used by Syria as an army post for lobbing shells into Israel.

When Israeli soldiers captured the Golan Heights in the 1967 Middle East war, Pixner followed close behind, searching the abandoned Syrian fortifications for clues to the location of Bethsaida.

He said archaeologists discovered four periods of settlement at Et Tell. The first two date to the early Canaanite period, from 3100 B.C. to 2850 B.C., the third to the Israelite occupation in 1000 B.C. and the final to Jesus' time, from around 100 B.C. until 67 A.D.

Denomination in state of shock

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A lively Pentecostal denomination, shattered by the successive shaming of its two most dazzling TV evangelists, this week was in a state of trauma.

Some of its leaders were questioning the propriety of television preaching itself.

"There's a great deal of sadness, shock and grief over the whole situation," said Juleen Turnage, communications officer for the Assemblies of God, based in Springfield, Mo.

"We're back in the shades of 1987," she added, referring to when the sexual lapses struck in the case of ex-TV star Jim Bakker, and now had hit fiery TV preacher Jimmy Swaggart.

"It's a tremendous shock, so totally out of character with what he preached," said the Rev. Robert Spence, president of the denomination's Evangelical College.

"It's going to have a very, very serious effect on those ministries that are still on television. The element of suspicion of it is going to become even more acute."

Some think that may be a good idea. Clinical psychologist Larry Bass, a denominational member, says there is "something corrupting about the power" of dominating huge crowds.

"There's a kind of narcissistic evil that attracts people to that kind of work, all the self-aggrandizement it gives them. TV gives it even larger magnitude."

He suggests local congregations should teach people to be more critical in viewing TV preachers and particularly to guard against these dangerous tendencies.

"Putting anyone up on a pedestal, or believing they're virtually the voice of God."

"Ministers who put down other religions and people and who are extremely judgmental about the faults of others."

He said Swaggart seemed to fit these categories, almost mesmerizing crowds with his sizzling, emotional fervor and his blistering attacks on other religions and on other people's sexual flaws.

"Nobody has all the answers, and for anyone to act as if they do is a big danger sign," Bass said. Noting that Swaggart sometimes said anyone who disagreed with him was wrong, Bass added: "Anyone who sets himself up with that kind of authority, that he's always absolutely correct, is a dangerous thing, and hardly to be trusted."

However, he said "it's unfortunately true" that the typical kind of followers Swaggart attracts "are the most gullible."

Religion Professor Stanley M. Burgess, an Assemblies scholar of Southwestern Missouri State University in Springfield, said the fall of such high-powered evangelists as Swaggart serves this clear warning:

"We must be careful not to label as gold everything that glitters."

Such celebrated preachers "still have feet of clay," Burgess said. "People have to show greater discernment about them, recognizing that we're not dealing with God here but humans who can fall."

Even in the scandals, he said, "I would hope people will not drool over it, but learn from it, and look for a silver lining."

The book closed on many tax deductions

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are legitimate disputes over the validity of some itemized deductions claimed by taxpayers, but the book is closed on many others. They simply are not deductible.

These fall into the category of being clearly non-deductible:

- Fees your bank charges your checking account, even if the account earns taxable interest.
- Fines and penalties, including those paid to the Internal Revenue Service.
- Political contributions. But you still may check off a $1 designation ($2 if married and filing a joint return) for the presidential election campaign fund; it won't reduce your refund.
- Lawyers' fees for personal services, such as preparing a will or representing you in a divorce.
- Expenses of earning tax-exempt interest.
- Excise taxes, including those on gasoline, alcohol and tobacco.
- Health-club expenses when your goal is general health improvement.
- Commuting costs.
- Funeral expenses.
- Job-related expenses that would have been reimbursed by your employer except for your failure to file a claim.
- Hobby losses that exceed income from that hobby. The new law raises the threshold for determining what is a hobby; in most endeavors, the IRS now assumes you are running a business, not a hobby, if you turned a profit in three of the most recent five years.
- Interest on a mortgage on somebody else's home.
- Interest on a loan to buy single-premium life insurance.
- Misplaced personal property. But prove your loss and you may qualify for a limited casualty deduction.
- Loss on the sale of a personal asset, such as jewelry, unless it was bought as an investment.
- Special assessments for improvements, such as paving, that raise the value of your property.
- Work uniforms if they are suitable for general wear.
- Home repairs, but these expenses may be added to the cost basis in your home to reduce taxes when you eventually sell.
- Club memberships or self-improvement seminars where the goal is establishing a reputation or boosting personal prestige.
- Fees for drivers' licenses and automobile registration (unless the fee is based on the value of the vehicle).

On the other hand, there are a lot of deductions that usually are safe from challenge—if you have the proof. Some may be subject to the new 2 percent floor under miscellaneous deductions. These usually are deductible:

- State and local income, real-property and personal-property taxes.
- Payments to charities in excess of the value of goods or services purchased. For example, if you pay $10 for a box of Girl Scout cookies, all in excess of $1.75 or $2 is deductible. Also, driving to and from charity work, at 12 cents a mile or actual gas or oil expenses, plus parking and tolls.
- 65 percent of the interest the IRS charged you for a late tax payment.
- Employment-related education expenses required by law or by your employer, so long as the schooling does not prepare you for a new career.
- Medical examinations required by your employer.
- Union dues and dues to professional organizations.

- Subscriptions to job-related publications.
- Some job-search expenses, including preparation of a resume, unless you are looking to move into a different trade.
- Tax publications and fees for preparing your return.
- Safe-deposit box to hold securities and other investments.
- Certain expenses of maintaining an office in your home—but this one often is difficult to prove. As a starting point, an employee may claim a deduction only if the office is maintained for the convenience of the employer. In any case, the room must be used regularly and exclusively as a principal place of business or for meeting customers or clients. See IRS Publication 587 for details.

- Losses of bank deposits by typical savers, subject to general rules reducing the loss by $100 and by 10 percent of adjusted gross income.
- Under the same rules, non-business property losses resulting from "fire, storm, shipwreck or other casualty or theft." The new law says you must file any insurance claim before taking the deduction.
- A variety of special medical procedures, depending on specific circumstances.

Planters versatile enough for indoor, outdoor use

By BOB SAWYER

It's one of Murphy's Laws: The longer you keep something without using it, the sooner you'll need it after throwing it away. This should be our family motto.

For instance, our old fern stand: it supported literally hundreds of delicate ferns through their short lives and lingering deaths, until my wife gave up fern cultivation "forever."

But the fern stand lived on, in the breezeway, utility room, garage and attic. Finally it found the charity truck.

Now my wife has decided to give the ferns "just one more chance." And she can't believe we were so shortsighted as to give away that nice stand.

Time for new planters. The collection I came up with is very easy to build from inexpensive materials, and looks good indoors or out. It includes short and long planter boxes, a coffee-table planter and, of course, a fern stand.

The basic design is a simple box made of plywood or waferwood, with exterior trim of ordinary lath strips, which are used for plasterwork. Lath is very cheap. One bundle was enough for all of the planters, and it cost less than $10.

If you'd like step-by-step instructions, you can order our detailed plans. Also available are plans for a combination plant stand and coffee table made of easy-to-use PVC pipe.

To order plans for the planters, specify Project No. 318; or for the PVC stand, No. 1906. Send $4.95 for either plan, or save a dollar and receive both for only $8.90.

Mail to: The Woodwright, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000. If you'd like our catalog, include $2.95.

The fern stand is the easiest of the planters. The one I built is nearly 2 feet tall and about 12 inches square. In addition to the lath strips for the trim, it requires only a 3-foot square of 1/2-inch exterior plywood or waferwood.

Cut from plywood or waferwood: two sides, each 10x23 1/2 inches; two ends, each 9x23 1/2 inches; one bottom, 9x9 inches; and four support strips, each 1x7 inches.

Glue and nail together the sides and ends to form a 10-inch-square box (outside dimensions), 23 1/2 inches tall. Nail a support strip to the inside surface of each box wall, about 8 inches down from the top. Place the bottom inside the box, resting on the supports.

Cut 23 1/2-inch lengths of lath and nail them vertically to the outside of the box, on both sides and ends, spacing them evenly and overlapping at the corners.

And that's all there is to the fern stand. As you can see, all of the dimensions are easily altered to accommodate any size flower pot. You might also wish to add trim strips to the top edges, flat mitering them to form neat corners.

The other planter boxes I made are just as easy, but I created a latticework effect with the lath trim. Once the box is built, start at the top left corner of one side to attach the latticework.

Place a lath strip kitty-corner against the box side. Mark and flat-miter the ends to fit, and then nail or staple the lath in place. Continue to add strips in this manner, working your way down to the lower right corner, with even spaces between the strips.

An easy way to get even spacing is to use an extra length of lath as a spacer. When you have finished the first layer, add a second layer perpendicular to the first.

Trim all four box sides in this manner. To cover the raw ends of the strips, cut and attach an additional length of lath vertically along each corner. Add a flat frame around the top, if you like. The planter table is made in the same manner, but the latticework is attached below a frame of 1x2 lumber that is attached to the outside of the box. The frame helps support the table top, which is made of lengths of 2x4 and 2x6 lumber aligned edge-to-edge. The table planks are held together by 2x4 braces across the underside.

Home-built planters look good inside and out.

National telephone program links low-income families with service

Texas Panhandle residents living in areas served by Southwestern Bell Telephone may now take advantage of a national program to help make telephone service affordable for low income individuals who do not presently have a phone.

The program, called Link Up America, was recently launched in Texas by the Public Utility Commission (PUC). The program also is sponsored nationally by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC).

Link Up America is designed to help make phone service available to those who cannot afford all the costs. The plan includes:

- ☛ Offsetting up to $30 of installation and connection fees.
- ☛ Providing four months of interest-free deferred payments for the remainder of installation and connection fees. Waiving a service deposit if the customer's credit history is appropriate.

The program does not provide for any other assistance once service has been established under Link Up provisions. The customer will be responsible for all bill payments.

Southwestern Bell Telephone is the initial Texas local phone company to participate, although General Telephone of the Southwest and United Telephone are also scheduled to enter the program this year.

Local telephone companies will recover revenues lost as a result of Link Up participation from a pool of funds provided by long distance telephone companies.

"We have very low basic telephone rates in Texas," said Dennis Thomas, chairman of the Texas PUC. "Current research indicates that the major stumbling block to service for many low income citizens is the high initial cost of installing a telephone. By reducing connection charges, Link Up will enable more of our citizens to afford telephone service."

Qualification for Link Up help is based on income level and/or eligibility for social services assistance programs. In general, an individual or household will qualify if income is below the federal poverty level, and there has been no telephone service at the residence location for at least three months.

For more information on the Link Up America program, call 1-800-832-5465.

Queries often bring results

The 1988 edition of Family Periodicals, compiled by Merle Ganier, 2108 Grace Street, Fort Worth, 76111, is an excellent resource for only $4.75 (plus 34 cents tax).

This listing is alphabetical by surname and includes how often it is printed, the price and name and address of publisher.

Approximately 600 surnames are included, plus the variant spelling. The possibilities are limitless for leads and follow-up material.

Ganier concludes the listing by saying, "Although every effort is made to keep information on these publications up-to-date, it is recommended that a letter of inquiry be sent before subscribing. Inclusion of a publication in this list does not necessarily indicate a recommendation by the compiler. Corrections and additions will be appreciated."

Gena on Genealogy

A bonus to this listing is the list of newspapers that carry genealogical columns. A state-by-state roster with the name of the column and the address provides a source for free queries. Queries are important and can bring results several months or even years after they are printed. Most genealogists share material, and an article in a Texas paper can end up on a desk in Japan. It is important to be as thorough as possible and at the same time keep it brief so that it can be printed.

If you know of other genealogy columns, send the information along with your order for the Family Periodicals to be included in the next edition.

Do you have a query for The Pampa News? Perhaps just a question you would like an answer published. Often many people have the same questions and it is helpful to see an answer in print. Send them to me, Gena Walls, 205 Admiral's Walk, St. Marys, Ga. 31558.

Elect your favorite pig kissers

Area citizens will get a chance to vote for their choice of pig kissers between now and March 10 by making a donation to the American Cancer Society.

The seven Gray County 4-H Clubs are sponsoring a kiss-a-pig contest, with the winners getting to kiss a pig at about 1 p.m. March 12 at Clyde Carruth Livestock Pavilion, just before the opening of the Top of Texas Stock Show auction.

Each 4-H Club has a two-person team composed of a club member and an adult. Containers are to be distributed around town, and persons can vote for their choice of who kisses the pig by depositing a cash donation in the container representing that team. The team collecting the most money gets to kiss a pig at the stock show.

A pizza party will also be awarded to the 4-H club collecting the most money. The funds collected by the 4-H clubs will go to the American Cancer Society.

All donations collected by the 4-H clubs are due in the county Extension office by noon March 10, said Joe VanZandt, county Extension agent.

Youth-adult contestants in the running for the honor of kissing a pig are:

P.L.C. 4-H Club — Joe Vann (adult) and Jade Brown (4-H'er).

Gold Star 4-H Club — Doyle Hunter (adult) and Matt Maul (4-H'er).

4-Clover 4-H Club — Roger McCracken (adult) and Chris Littlefield (4-H'er).

Top O' Texas 4-H Club — Robert Douglas (adult) and Katrina Hart (4-H'er).

Star Pirate 4-H Club — Bill Crockett (adult) and Dennis Williams Jr. (4-H'er).

E.T. 4-H Club — Adrian Hannah (adult) and Laura Williams (4-H'er).

Grandview 4-H Club — Roselle Collingsworth or Donna Lott (adult) and Kevin Collingsworth (4-H'er).

Love bridges 47-year gap between husband and wife

DEAR ABBY: I hope you remember me. My name is Mary Jane McCartney and my husband is Jack. I wrote to you about three years ago when you had a discussion in your column about big age differences between husbands and wives.

When I married Jack 12 years ago, I was 14 and he was 61. My mother nearly had a fit and tried to stop it, but we were very much in love and Jack got a lawyer. It cost him more than $2,000 in legal fees, but he said it was worth every penny.

Abby, when I wrote to you three years ago, I was expecting our first baby. He's now 2 1/2 years old and his name is Andrew Jackson. (We call him Andy.)

Well, I have some more good news for you. I just had a baby girl! We named her Sarah Elizabeth. (Jack calls her Shorty.)

Jack has three sons from a previous marriage and he always wanted a little girl. Now he has one, and he's crazy about her.

So go ahead and tell folks to forget about age — when you're in love, nothing else matters. I am 26 and Jack is 73, and I think we're the happiest married couple alive.

MARY JANE
IN DENISON, TEXAS

DEAR MARY JANE: Congratulutions. May you have many more years of happiness. And if there's any more "good news," let me know.

Dear Abby

widow. My husband was killed in an accident six months ago, and I was left with two children, 7 and 3.

The children and I have gone through many nights of pain and grief, but we realize that life must go on, and so must we. Together we went through counseling and support group meetings.

Recently, I decided that it was time to start dating. It's OK with the children; however, when I mentioned it to my in-laws, they were totally opposed to the idea. They say it is much too soon — I should have more respect for my husband's memory.

Abby, I loved my husband very much. We had a good marriage and I feel that he would want me to be happy. But is it too soon? What is the accepted mourning period in this day and age? I don't want to hurt my in-laws, but don't my feelings count at all?

LIFE MUST GO ON

DEAR LIFE: I agree, life must go on, but grief is so very personal that no one can presume to make rules that will apply to everyone following the death of a beloved spouse.

A widow (or widower) may begin dating whenever she (or he) feels like it. Remember, your in-laws have lost a beloved son, and while their feelings should be considered, the decision should be yours. Good luck and may God bless you and the children.

DEAR ABBY: You have had many letters about how writing to a serviceman brought a happy ending. Here's mine: When I was in the fourth grade, during World War I, our English teacher asked the class to write letters to soldiers who were in the hospital during the flu epidemic.

The soldier who received my letter answered it, saying he would like to hear from me again, so I wrote to him again. In his next letter, he asked for my phone number and said he would call me when he was released from the hospital. Well, he called. He sounded so nice, my mother, who was a young widow, told me I could invite him to dinner! (He was stationed at a camp not too far from where we lived.)

When he came for dinner, he brought me a present, but he never took his eyes off my mother. After that, he spent all his free time with us, and ended up marrying my mother.

So you see, fairy tales do come true. I am now 81 years old and one of your faithful readers.

A NATIVE FLORIDIAN

DEAR FLORIDIAN: Thank you, my friend, for a lovely tale.

Levelland meets Calallen in 4A girls' state finals

AUSTIN (AP) — Calallen gets another chance at the Class 4A title that has eluded them in two past meetings with Levelland in the finals of the University Interscholastic League State Basketball Tournament.

Calallen defeated Pflugerville, 56-43, Thursday night to join Levelland in the finals to be played Saturday.

Levelland advanced to the title game with a 57-33 victory over Wilmer-Hutchins.

Levelland and Calallen have met twice in the state championship in 1983 and 1987, with the Loboettes winning both times.

Levelland, which has been to the tournament six of the past seven years will be trying to secure its third straight championship and fourth overall.

Calallen had trouble shaking feisty Pflugerville for its 30th straight victory.

The Panthers, 27-7, led most of the way in the first half and 25-22 at intermission. However, the Lady Wildcats, now 35-3, outscored them 15-5 in the third quarter to grab a 37-30 lead.

Calallen eventually added to that lead until it was 16.

Stacey Brown led Calallen with 20 points, while Jennifer King hit for 14 for Pflugerville.

Forward Rachel Hess battled underneath to lead the Loboettes with 16 points and 16 rebounds.

Melissa Peay was the only Eagle in double figures with 11.

Levelland trailed only once very early in the game and cruised to a 30-19 halftime lead. The Loboettes' first basket of the fourth quarter put them up 46-26 on the way to their 29th straight win.

Levelland is now 34-1 on the year, while Wilmer-Hutchins ends the year at 28-9.

Undefeated Hardin-Jefferson easily handled Brownsboro Thursday, 82-51, while Brownsfield beat Ingleside 49-40, in the Class 3A semifinals.

Hardin-Jefferson, now 34-0 on the year, will meet Brownsfield in the finals Saturday.

In Class A action, Nazareth destroyed Moulton 70-47 and LaPoyner slipped by Byers 57-50.

At one point in the first quarter,

Hardin-Jefferson steamrolled to a 31-8 advantage en route to a 50-28 halftime lead.

Brownsboro came into the contest riding a 23-game winning streak. The Bearettes finish the season 31-5.

Stephanie Edwards led the balanced Hardin-Jefferson attack with 19 points. Yatisa Basha followed closely with 18.

Cindy Womack had 20 for Brownsboro.

The loss was the first for Ingleside, which came in with a 34-0 mark.

Brownsfield, now 29-8, did not take the lead however until the 4:09 mark of the third quarter on a short Sheryl Swoopes jumper from the right side to make it 33-32.

They increased that lead to 10, 45-35 with 5:10 left in the game.

The Ingleside Lady Mustangs tried to counter their height disadvantage — their tallest player is 5-6 — by shooting from the perimeter.

The Nazareth Swiftettes will vie for their ninth state championship after advancing in the first semifinal game.

With less than two minutes gone in the game, Nazareth, 33-2, already led 10-0.

Dalhart next stop for PHS tracksters

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Reviewing results in last week's Amarillo Invitational, track coach Gary Cornelsen couldn't have been happier with the second-place finish of his Pampa Lady Harvesters.

"It was super job, especially by our freshmen," Cornelsen said. "We've got a lot of new faces and I'm really impressed with the way they performed, despite their inexperience."

Pampa compiled 129 points in the season's first outdoor meet, second only to host Amarillo High's 157.

"We were in it most of the way," Cornelsen said. "It was good way to start. We had some experienced people who decided not to come out for track this year, and we probably would have won it had they been out." The Lady Harvesters finished ahead of Lubbock Coronado, Palo Duro, Borger and Lubbock High as seven freshmen combined for 47 of Pampa's total points.

Among the freshmen Cornelsen was most impressed with were Michelle Whitson, Christa West and Crystal Cook.

"Whitson just had a tremendous day and so did West and Cook," Cornelsen added.

Whitson placed second in the 1600 and third in the 800. Cook was third in the 100 hurdles and West fourth in the 400.

After talking about his talented group of freshmen, Cornelsen couldn't help but sing the praises of senior star Tanya Lidy, the two-time defending Class 4A state champion in the 200-meter dash.

Lidy not only sped to an easy win in the 200 at the Amarillo Invite, she set meet records in the triple jump and long jump.

"Lidy did real well," Cornelsen said. "It looks like it's going to be another outstanding year for her."

In January, Lidy was named the track athlete of the year by the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame.

Mike Shklar, Pampa boys' coach, was also pleased with the way the Harvesters started the season, placing fourth in the Amarillo Invite.

"We weren't in the best of shape going into the meet, but we did a lot better than I thought we would," Shklar added.

The Harvesters had only two weeks of practice prior to the meet, but they still finished ahead of three teams, including district members Borger and Dumas.

"We'll have some more coming out now that basketball is over. We'll be able to add more kids to our field events and sprints," said Shklar.

Michael Shklar had the only first-place medal for Pampa, winning the 110-meter high hurdles in a time of 14.88. Shklar was also second in the 300 IM hurdles and fourth in the pole vault.

Shklar looks for improved performances from several Harvesters, especially hurdlers Brad Abbott and Brad Hinkle, who finished fourth in the 110 high hurdles and 300 IM hurdles respectively.

"Abbott is going to get a lot better once he improves his form. Hinkle will do considerably better as the season goes along," Shklar pointed out.

Terrell Welch came close to placing in the pole vault with a 12-foot jump.

"He did a pretty good job," Shklar added. Derek Vernon was another Harvester who just missed placing in the half-mile.

"Derek had a nice 2:10," Shklar said.

In the JV division, Shklar was impressed with the finish of Logan Hudson, who was fourth in the high jump and sixth in the 110-high hurdles despite competing with a broken hand. Hudson sustained the injury during a swimming accident.

Both Pampa boys and girls will compete in the Dalhart XIT Relays this weekend if the weather permits.

In the boys' division, Pampa competes against Boys Ranch, Friona, Guymon and Dalhart. Borger, Lubbock Estacado, Guymon and Dalhart are the other teams entered in the girls' division.

Prelims begin at 9:30 a.m. and the finals start at 1 p.m.

"We've only had two days of workouts this week due to the weather, but we ought to be pretty fresh."

"We've only had two days of workouts this week due to the weather, but we ought to be pretty fresh."

Cornelsen sees his Lady Harvesters as one of the meet favorites.

"We've got the numbers to put two or three in each event. If it comes down to whoever has the most depth winning it, we should be in pretty good shape," Cornelsen said.

Globetrotters' Meadowlark Lemon will participate in drug awareness program

Former Harlem Globetrotter great Meadowlark Lemon will be in Pampa tonight to participate in the "Pampa Says Know to Drugs" campaign.

Lemon will make two public appearances. He will speak during halftime at the East-West faculty basketball game, which starts at 7 p.m. at McNeely Fieldhouse. Lemon will then to go the Pampa Youth Center following the game where he will compete against Harvester players David Doak and Jason Farmer in a basketball 'shootout.'

Admission to the faculty game is two dollars for adults and one dollar for students. The public is invited to attend the shootout free of charge.

In the faculty game, the East team will consist of teachers from Austin, Wilson and Baker schools while the West team will include teachers from Travis, Mann and Lamar.

Wider lane may be seen in college basketball

ACROSS THE COUNTRY, BASKETBALL, coaches, referees, members of the media, and selected other persons are evaluating rules of the game as they study the annual NCAA Basketball Rules Questionnaire sent by Ed Steitz, editor of the rule book. So, as we fill our form out for immediate return, let's study the yes and no responses.

Six changes were instituted this season and did we like them? The joint mens-women's rule book was satisfactory; the "dribble ended" and "throw in spot" changes were fine; yes, charge the coach with a time out when he incorrectly claims a scorer or timer error, and yes, charge him with a technical when players leave the bench to join a fight. But NO, the two-shot penalty plus possession of the ball has been unsatisfactory, further adding to the already judgemental decisions an official must make, plus turning the final minutes of a game into even a worse free-throw shooting contest.

Have the officials done a better job on the five points of emphasis? No to illegal screening, cleaning up rough post play, the aforementioned intentional foul, and the principle of verticality. As for keeping conversation between officials and coaches to a bare minimum, it was a bummer to start with. The guys in charge of the game have got to communicate with the guys in charge of the teams.

And now the annual list of goodies, the "would you favor the following changes," the area from which the 3-point shot emanated, was opposed in the survey, rammed through by Steitz, much to the overall benefit and excitement of the game.

Adopt the widened free-throw lane, ala Olympic rules? Yes, as players get bigger, more agile, and it also benefits the smaller, quicker athlete and makes the rules more uniform.

Waive free throws in lieu of out-of-bounds throw in? No. It makes it too much like football where a team just runs out the clock. Abolish the aforementioned intentional foul and make teams make free throws and rebound misses, basic to the game.

Permit a player an extra foul, six, as the pros? No thanks. Don't add the incentive for further unpenalized rough play. Let the kids on the bench play more. This is not the pro game, it's still 'amateur', for fun.

On throw-in, five-second count stops on release of ball? Okay. Texas officials have been calling it that way for years, New Mexico officials haven't.

Approve 3' by 5 1/2' rectangular backboard? Good idea. Remove the unneeded bottom foot, reducing finger, hand and head injuries to the 'leapers'.

Stop the clock on all made field goals during last minute of regulation and overtime play. No, just more problems and game delays created by human error and 'home cooking', and developing more animosity between schools and coaches.

Nullify basket if an airborne player charges after the shot? Fine. Goes along with the principle of verticality rule. Team should not benefit from a rule violation.

Award ball at nearest spot to violation if ball enters basket after violation? Fine. Goes along with above rule suggestion.

Grant a timeout only when the ball is dead or when the requesting player is holding the ball? Good idea (providing TV can still have it's times out for commercials so we can enjoy the games on the tube.) This will not allow coaches to call as many times out, helping to give the game back to the players and thus making the coaches coach and prepare their teams during the practice periods, as they should.

Those are the 20 items Steitz has sought opinions on this year. And as we've done annually for a decade now, under 'comments' we add the suggestion that players once again be forced to raise a hand when charged with a foul. It helps to avoid scoring problems for the official scorer, fans who have purchased programs and keep score, and for media members who often don't have the best view of the action or cannot hear the public address above the crowd. Not all high school and college gymnasiums have the scoreboard or PA facilities to properly note the correct players. Self identification by the raised arm will again help.

As stated above, the survey is just that, a seeking of opinion. The rules committee will ultimately determine what changes, if any, major or minor, will be made in the game that has reached the zenith to date of its interest with fans as all surveys show. And it continues to skyrocket upward. The three-pointer helped, and some one of the seemingly insignificant proposals being considered this year, possibly the widened lane, could do as much. We'll give you the survey results when tabulated in a month or so.

Coach wages war with TV network By RICK WARNER AP Sports Writer

While his Georgetown basketball team battles with Big East opponents, John Thompson is waging a verbal war with CBS Sports.

The feud started when CBS commentator Bill Raftery criticized Thompson on the air after a fight broke out near the end of the Georgetown-Pittsburgh game Feb. 20. Raftery said Thompson had to do a better job of controlling his team, which has been involved in a few fights over the years.

"John Thompson's got to do something," said Raftery, a former coach at Seton Hall. "There have been too many of these (fights) where Georgetown has been involved. I don't care how competitive the game, John has to control his team."

Thompson struck back on his weekly Washington television show.

"Who's he to editorialize on how I should control my team?" Thompson said of Raftery. "Here's a guy who's perceived as being an authority. How can that be when he was completely incompetent at the profession that he's now reporting on."

The dispute mushroomed when Brent Musburger, CBS' No. 1 sports personality, defended Raftery during an interview on a New York cable network.

"The question is, why is Georgetown involved so often in these things?" he said. "It goes further now. What about Thompson as a coach of the (1988 U.S.) Olympic basketball team? Do we now have to worry that our Olympic team will get involved in such incidents?"

Musburger also wondered whether Thompson, who is black, would put any white players on the Olympic team.

"Is that a question that can be asked?" Musburger said. "Certainly it is. I mean, take a look at his team down at Georgetown. I think a lot of people wonder about that."

In his latest counterattack, Thompson called Musburger's statements "ignorant" and "dangerous."

Thompson said questions about the black-white ratio on his teams are a "very tactful way of trying to get a quota on the number of blacks on the Olympic team."

"I'd be willing to bet you that nobody ever asked (1984 Olympic coach) Bobby Knight that question," he said.

Thompson said the fact that his Georgetown teams have been predominantly black doesn't mean he is a "biased person."

"I'd be willing to bet you that my life is far more integrated than Brent Musburger's," he said.

Maybe Thompson and Musburger can iron out their differences at the Big East tournament, which CBS will televise March 12-13.
