Animal-rights activists protest pageant's furs

EL PASO (AP) — Actor Alan Thicke says he has made a peace of sorts with animal-rights activists who plan to picket tonight's Miss USA pageant to protest the awarding of furs to the winner.

The controversy over the mink coat and jacket overshadowed the last-minute pageant preparations, as the 51 contestants spent Monday rehearsing for the nationally televised competition.

Thicke, the co-host of the pageant, said Monday that he and protest organizer Bob Young agree that fur trapping is cruel to animals, but disagree on whether fur farming is cruel.

Thicke also has invited Young to appear on Animal Crack-Ups, a children's show that Thicke hosts. Thicke ends each show with the words: "Here's hoping you'll be kind to animals."

Young, who is director of the Las Cruces, N.M., chapter of Sangre de Cristo Animal Rights, has said Thicke is hypocritical for hosting the pageant because it awards furs and Thicke describes himself as an animal lover.

Thicke was named the contest's host after 21-year Miss USA veteran Bob Barker quit over the awarding of a mink coat and mink jacket worth a total of $15,000.

Though Thicke and Young seemed to have cooled their war of words, others are heating it up. Both sides of the issue have sent envoys to El Paso to argue their side of the controversy.

George Clements, director of the 7,000-member Association for the Protection of Fur Bearing Animals, flew down from Vancouver, Canada, and held a news conference to demonstrate several leg traps used to catch wild mink, fox, beaver and other animals. He showed a brief videotape showing animals caught in leg traps.

"I believe if any of the young ladies entering this contest could see these traps... I don't think any of them would wear a fur coat again," he said.

The fur industry prefers to dismiss animal-rights activists as extremists and vandals. Clements said.

Reagan flies to NATO summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan headed for Europe today to assure the NATO allies they will not be left defenseless. He pledged that America will keep troops in Europe "as long as Europeans want them to stay."

Reagan, as he left the White House for a two-day NATO summit in Belgium, said the session comes at a historic moment for both East and West.

"For four decades, the combination of a strong common defense and pursuit of dialogue with the East has been a winning formula for NATO," Reagan said. "It is a combination that can lead us to a future of peace, freedom and prosperity for generations to come."

A throng of teen-age participants in the White House Conference on a Drug-Free America, brought to the diplomatic entrance to give Reagan a sendoff, sang "God Bless America" as the president emerged.

Reagan attempted to calm allied fears that the U.S.-Soviet treaty banning medium-range nuclear missiles portends an American abandonment of its long time commitment to the European democracies.

"That historic agreement was possible because the alliance's steadfast political and military resolve backed up our negotiations with the Soviets," Reagan said.

The NATO allies are also concerned that the force of 326,000 U.S. troops stationed in Europe might be cut due to the U.S. economic budget crunch.

"My Atlantic colleagues and I will rededicate ourselves to maintaining the deterrent that has protected our freedom and prosperity for almost 40 years," Reagan said. "I will repeat to my colleagues my strong conviction that American troops will remain in Europe, under any administration, so long as Europeans want them to stay."

As the first full-scale North Atlantic Treaty Organization summit since 1982, the meeting has been touted as a chance for the 16-nation alliance to evaluate its goals and accentuate its solidarity.

And as Reagan prepares for another expected round of spring summitry with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the allies must cope with the Soviet public relations campaign that paints Moscow's leader as a champion of peace and arms control.

Reagan will not be seen in action; for the most part he will appear only in brief photo opportunities. The NATO meetings among the heads of state or government Wednesday and Thursday will be private and closed to reporters. Reagan is slated to deliver closing remarks on Thursday.

On Monday, Reagan previewed his slant on the summit in an address to the annual convention of the American Legion.

He promised to forge ahead with attempts to cut superpower strategic arsenals in half and to seek a ban on chemical weapons. But he also pledged that negotiations to reduce Warsaw Pact conventional forces will receive equal weight.

Reagan talks to legion

"The serious imbalance of conventional forces in Europe must be addressed as an equally high priority," Reagan said. "Warsaw Pact tanks and artillery far outnumber our own. Ours are positioned for defense, theirs for an offensive attack."

Shultz claims peace initiative still alive

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz turned today to King Hussein of Jordan to back the U.S. drive for Mideast peace talks.

"He's a key, in my opinion," Shultz said. "He has immense standing and a person who's been here a long time. Through all of these issues, up and down, he's a man of experience and judgment."

Talking to reporters on his flight from the Middle East, Shultz hinted he was inclined to return to the region after a NATO summit meeting in Brussels Wednesday and Thursday.

"Nobody has signed up to our proposal, but everybody wants us to keep working, so we will keep working," Shultz said in a departure statement in Israel.

"We will continue our efforts," he said. After arriving at London's Heathrow Airport, he met Hussein at a private residence owned by the king in central London.

Shultz also was to see Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe before flying to Brussels later today.

In Jerusalem, diplomatic sources, demanding anonymity, said Shultz had told Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir he would return after the NATO summit if Hussein gave at least qualified support to the U.S. proposal.

Nearly six months after the still-unsolved shooting death of a 37-year-old Pampa man, local officials are launching a renewed investigation — with or without the FBI.

Pampa Police Chief Robert Eberz said a task force made up of investigators from the Police Department and district attorney's office will begin looking at local angles in the death of Edward Allan Patterson, 533 N. Doyle St., after receiving "inconclusive" information from the FBI.

The decision followed a Friday meeting attended by Eberz, Lt. Roy Denman, Assistant District Attorney Harold Comer and other personnel.

Patterson was found shot to death Sept. 2 inside his trailer home. His Enron company truck was located hours later in Monahan driven by Patterson's 16-year-old stepson Mike, leading police to suspect the teen-ager in the death.

But Eberz said initial FBI reports show inconclusive evidence linking the youth to the death. Police had sent hair, blood and ballistic samples to the agency's central laboratory in Virginia.

"We're not going to do much with the FBI lab report," Eberz said Monday. "I don't believe that the (report) is going to give us anything."

The local investigation will involve police Detective Terry Cox and district attorney's office investigator Michael Hartsock. It will continue to focus on the youth as the primary suspect in the death.

Eberz said the initial local investigation will consist largely of interviews with those who may have information about the shooting.

Lt. Roy Denman, who heads the department's criminal investigation division, said Monday he remains hopeful that the case can be solved, but hinted that the probe won't be easy.

anonymity said Jordanian officials had surprised Shultz by hardening their insistence on holding an international conference and by abandoning previous support for a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation.

Shamir has opposed a U.N.-sponsored conference attended by the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council: the United States, Soviet Union, Britain, France and China. He has argued such a forum would be biased against the Jewish state.

The joint delegation was a key element of U.S.-sponsored peacemaking efforts because it got around Israeli refusal to talking with Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, speaking to children in the resort city of Eilat, suggested that King Hussein sought a PLO role in selecting a negotiating team.

"Hussein says he wants the PLO without Arafat. Let's go along with him on this formula... PLO, yes, Arafat, no," Peres said in remarks aired on Israel's army radio.

His remarks were initially interpreted as a change in position, but Peres aides said there had been a "misunderstanding."

Peres' spokesman Uri Savir issued a clarification, stressing Peres is against talks with the PLO and was referring to Hussein's position.

State senate race attracts three Democrats in primary

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Staff Writer

Three candidates will vie for the Democratic nomination in the 31st Senatorial District Tuesday, March 8, including former state representative and district judge Bryan Poff, former Texas Aeronautics Commission chairman Mel Phillips and Amarillo teacher Nancy Garms.

The Democratic winner will face the Republican victor in next fall's general elections.

All three of the candidates view the state's woeful economy as the main issue in the race. They all possess suggestions for bringing the state back to the economic status it once held in the Seventies.

"We're spending too much money with too many people," Phillips noted as a main reason for the state's budget problems. "Number one, we don't need a state income tax. We're going to have to consolidate state agencies and make government more efficient."

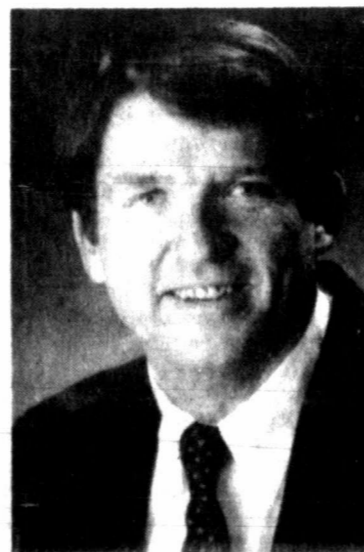

Poff believes that at the root of Texas' economic problems are the state's farm and oil industries. The West Texas State University instructor believes that family farm debt refinancing and new capital gains for diversifying the crop base will be a key in improving state finances.

"We need to keep more stripper wells," Poff said. "Take the taxes off those stripper wells and keep them in production another year. My concept would be to get a stripper-well tax exemption."

From Garms: "Our biggest challenge is to keep the forward thrust that we started three or four years ago."

Garms also listed House Bill 72,

the controversial education bill passed in 1986, as playing a major role in the state's economic success.

"Eighteen percent of Texas' revenues in any biennium can be moved," she said. "Eighteen percent that hasn't been designated by other legislation. Without a tax increase, I think we can meet the challenge of HB 72 adequately."

Poff agreed on the importance of the education bill, but noted that HB 72 has problems. One of the bill's main problems, according to Poff, is the way the state has mandated to the school districts the way the districts will spend money.

"That's not a really fair way to spend money if it's not your money. If the state's going to mandate (how the school districts will spend money), then the state needs to come up with the money. Districts are losing some of their local control."

Phillips listed "quality education for all of our children" as one of the primary reasons for his running for senate.

On the subject of state lotteries, Garms did not actively voice support or opposition, but did point out that a study done in 1986 by the LBJ School of Public Affairs showed that 78 percent of the people surveyed were in favor of a lottery. "Apparently, though," she observed, "there was no one in Austin to lobby for the lottery."

Poff says his first impulse would be to vote against it. But if the people in the district wanted it, fine. I won't let my personal interests override that."

Phillips was more direct in his feelings concerning a state lottery: "I don't think the government should be in the business of encouraging people to take million-to-one shots on gambling." In other words, he's opposed to a state lottery.

All the candidates agree that an income tax for the state is neither needed or desired by the people.

"The state of Texas has always been thought of as an entrepreneur, risk-taking type of state," Poff said. "A state tax thwarts that."

"I don't think the people want it," Garms said, "and we don't need it yet."

From Phillips: "The difference between me and my opponents is that they're opposed to it but they'll do it if they have to. I'm opposed to it and I won't do it

Judge investigated for $100 bond set for suspect in actress assault

EL PASO (AP) — A judge who set bond at $100 for a man accused of attacking actress Tracy Scoggins has been suspended pending an investigation, Chief Municipal Judge Robert Duran said.

Police Lt. J.R. Grijalva said police have received information that Associate Municipal Judge Rodolfo Romero was a longtime friend of Pedro Concepcion Padilla, who was charged with attempted sexual assault in connection with the attack on Scoggins, in El Paso to co-host the Miss USA pageant.

Grijalva would not reveal the source of his information. "But a friend of the two men, who asked that his name not be used, told the El Paso Times that Padilla and Romero have known each other since at least the late 1970s and have played together on basketball and flag-football teams in recreation leagues."

Padilla gave a false name and address when he appeared before Romero and had his bond set.

Romero Monday refused to say whether Padilla is a friend and said he would not comment on any aspect of the case. His phone number is unlisted and he could not be reached by The Associated Press Monday night.

Duran would not comment on the specifics of the investigation, but said if Romero knew Padilla was using a false name and did nothing to stop him, "it would be highly questionable."

"I need to sit down with him and talk to him," Duran said. "I want to find out what happened."

He did not say how long his investigation will take but said Romero "will not be doing night magistrate work for a while."

Padilla could not be reached for comment Monday. His lawyer, Jose Montes, said he could not discuss whether Padilla knew Romero.

Padilla was arrested late Thursday and charged with attempted sexual assault for allegedly attacking Scoggins in an elevator at the Marriott Hotel, 1600 Airway. Scoggins, who will co-host tonight's pageant, said a man got on an elevator with her, tore her clothes and pushed her into the back of the elevator. She fought the man off and he was detained by hotel guests and security before police arrived and arrested him.

Padilla carried no identification and gave police the name Antonio Garcia, Grijalva said. Romero set bond at $100, which Padilla paid in cash and was freed early Friday.

But 120th District Judge Brunson Moore ordered the man arrested and held under $100,000 bond. Sheriff's deputies learned that the man had given a false name and Padilla, 35, turned himself in Saturday morning and was freed that afternoon after the $100,000 bond was posted by Apodaca Bail Bonds.

Police Chief John Scagno Monday ordered the Special Investigations Division to look into the way Padilla's case was handled.

Old Indian burial site discovered

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Jewelry and the remains of two babies believed to be about 3,000 years old were found in a newly discovered Indian burial site, an archaeologist said.

"We are excavating burials that are eroding out of the bank," said Herman Smith, an archaeologist at the Corpus Christi Museum. "We are removing only those burials that have been disturbed by man or natural erosion."

The burial site was discovered Saturday southwest of Oso Creek on what is now the site of the Corpus Christi Botanical Gardens. "It's bizarre," said Smith who is heading the dig. "We haven't even taken the bones out of the mud yet. It's a puzzle as to why this person is buried with more elaborate jewelry than any I've ever seen and why two fetuses and a skull are buried with him."

Smith and about 50 volunteers hope to excavate between eight and 16 graves at the site, which is dotted with heavy mesquite brush and cactus. It is about two blocks from where Smith two years ago found a variety of stone and shell tools and 11 small structures made of dried clay and sticks.

He said he believes the discovered remains are about 3,000 years old because the burial grounds are about the same depth — two feet — as material dated two years ago from across Oso Creek.

The archaeologist said the graves are not that of the Karankawa Indians, who occupied both sides of the creek about 1400 A.D.

at all. It's time for state government to tighten its belt. No state income tax — corporate or personal."

All three candidates also agreed upon the issue of elected judgeships. Their suggestions for electing rather than appointing judges differed, though.

Poff and Phillips were the most outspoken in their opposition of appointed judges while Garms called for a modified version of judicial election.

"Once they are in (office)," Garms said, "they need to be subject to a vote of confidence. If they don't receive that vote of confidence, someone else would run for it."

"I look at the federal (judicial) system," Poff said, "and it scares me to death. I think the answer is to make the races non-partisan and to limit campaign contributions."

Phillips concurred, saying, "I think people have a right to elect people that rule over them. When we have judges that let convicted murderers go free, we ought to have the right to elect them out of office."

Finally, Phillips, Garms and Poff all are in favor of building more prisons to house the state's continually growing criminal population.

"We need to build some more, there's no doubt about it," Poff said. "Personally, I'm in favor of one here (Amarillo) and in Borger both. If it would have been my decision, I'd have put the first one over there (Borger)."

"We have to spend more on prisons because we aren't spending enough on education," Phillips said. "There's too many people in these prisons that can't read or write. Get them to graduate from high school. Make 'em stay in school, that's the long term solution. In the short term, we have to build enough prison cells to keep our citizens safe."

Garms is in line with Phillips pertaining to education being the main problem, saying, "If we can't hold our eighth graders in school then we won't be able to get by with one or two prisons, we'll need five or six." She added, "We need to respect the number of people our juries say need to be incarcerated. We can't turn our back on that. We're going to have to house a few more prisoners until we can interject some education into it."

talk to him," Denman said. Patterson's attorney, Jim Bobo of Odessa, refused to let police question the teen-ager following his arrest in Monahan on Sept. 2. Blood and hair samples were taken after police obtained a court order from Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy.

Police were then forced to release the youth to his mother, a Midland kindergarten teacher, because they had no grounds on which to hold him.

The teen is now believed to be attending a private school in the Dallas area, according to Detective Sgt. Charlie Love.

Preliminary investigation into the case included an autopsy performed on Mr. Patterson's body and background checks on the youth, his family and his acquaintances.

Also discussed at Friday's meeting with Comer was the arson death of 7-month-old Justin Califa a month after the Patterson slaying, but police would release no details of that discussion. The infant died Oct. 6, hours after being pulled from his mother's burning rent house at 607 Gordon Ave.

An Arlington lab found that a flammable substance was on the kitchen floor at the time of the blaze. The infant's mother told arson investigators she had gone briefly to a neighbor's house to use the telephone when the blaze broke out.

Fire Marshal Tom Adams said the investigation is continuing but is "pretty much at a standstill." Statements have been taken from witnesses and others who may have been involved, he said.

Bake sales can't finance schools

DALLAS (AP) — Parochial and private schools looking to boost funding need to move beyond bake sales to the more lucrative fare of corporate donations, officials say.

"The way I see it, we've just had too much Catholic humility in the past," said Michael Brock, director of development for the Catholic Diocese of Dallas. "We need to start bragging on ourselves to gain community support."

At Brock's suggestion, Immaculate Conception Elementary School, which has grown in enrollment from 237 last year to 245, sought out several thousands of dollars in matching grants from PepsiCo Inc. as well as a $34,000 grant from the Meadows Foundation.

"If we're going to be serious about quality education, we need to do better than candy and bake sales," Brock said.

Similar fund-raising projects nationwide are expected to account for 12 percent of all income for the nation's Catholic schools and 7 percent for non-parochial private schools — both up from only 5 percent last year, said Fred H. Brigham Jr., a Catholic official.

Brigham, executive assistant to the president of the National Catholic Education Association, has begun national workshops and seminars on fund raising in light of declining enrollments.

Catholic education officials in the past had relied on church subsidies for 35 percent of their expenses and on the $1,100 tuition for 55 percent, but now find that's not enough.

Last year, for example, 116 of 9,120 parochial schools in the United States either closed or merged, according to NCEA records, and enrollment fell this year by 84,000, to 2.7 million.

Brock last fall left his 10-year job as principal of a Catholic high school in Farmers Branch to teach Dallas school officials how to seek funds from corporations and foundations.

His selling point is the fact that Catholic schools, which educate 10,869 Dallas children annually, are giving students a more complete education, which includes religion and thousands of hours of community service — values they can bring into the business world later on, he said.

Consulting firm indicted week before Super Tuesday

By The Associated Press

A Houston political consulting firm and its vice president were indicted on 64 misdemeanor counts in connection with forgeries found on petitions filed by several Republican presidential candidates for the Super Tuesday ballot.

The indictment against Southern Political Consultants was returned Monday by a Harris County grand jury, said Casey O'Brien, spokesman for the Harris County District Attorney's office.

Meanwhile, Democratic presidential hopefuls Jesse Jackson and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis stumped the state Monday preparing for the March 8 primary.

Ten Texas Democratic congressmen made stops in seven Texas cities Monday on behalf of Rep. Richard Gephardt, calling him the most electable candidate.

"He can carry Texas because he is on our side on trade issues and he is on our side on the oil import fee," U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin, said during a stop in Nederland. "Most of the time we Democrats specialize in glorious ideological defeats. Dick Gephardt will give us a glorious victory."

And Republican Gov. Bill Clements said he likes the idea of Super Tuesday and thinks Vice President George Bush is likely to sweep to victory on the GOP side.

In Houston, the petition indictments named SPC vice president Rocky Mountain, O'Brien said.

SPC was hired by the campaigns of Sen. Robert Dole, former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont and Gen. Alexander Haig to gather 5,000 signatures needed to get their names on the March 8 Texas ballot. Haig and du Pont have since withdrawn.

Numerous forgeries were discovered on their petitions as well as those of New York Rep. Jack Kemp, whose camaign did not use SPC.

Two Houston teen-agers have said Mountain told them to forge signatures on petitions for du Pont.

"About the only thing I can say at this time is that our client is not guilty," said Mountain's attorney, Joe Bailey.

The firm's president, Kevin Burnette, said Mountain and the firm would plead innocent to any charges.

Republican Party Chairman George Strake earlier decided the names of all candidates would remain on the ballot. In Austin, Clements said he thinks Bush will carry the South, as well as Texas.

Clements also said former TV evangelist and GOP candidate Pat Robertson will make a strong showing in the South but won't win.

"I see Pat Robertson cutting into everybody's base, whether it's on the Democratic side or the Republican side," Clements said. "Those supporters are fairly solid. It's narrow support, but it's a deep support. I think that he will make a good showing in the primary."

A public opinion poll published Sunday by The Dallas Morning News and Houston Chronicle showed Robertson with 8 percent support in Texas, third behind Bush and Kansas Sen. Robert Dole.

Clements said he likes the Super Tuesday idea because it brings more candidates to the South and forces them to discuss issues important to the region.

"I'm impressed with the amount of time that the various candidates are spending in Texas. I don't think that this level of activity had ever happened before," he said.

"With respect to the petroleum industry, agriculture, education — all of these issues are being ventilated in these discussions and in their campaigning. I think it's surprising the dialogue that's going on between the Texas public and these candidates."

In other political developments Monday:

■ Jackson criticized Houston officials during an early morning walk through a poor, black neighborhood. Campaigning in the city's Fourth Ward, Jackson compared the city's actions there with those of the South African government, which he said is moving blacks from areas it wants to develop for whites.

"The streets aren't being cleaned. This can't be true all over town. The trash has been in those lots for weeks. The people have been abandoned," he said.

■ Dukakis' campaign said he had received the endorsement of 26 of the 66 voting members of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

"This shows strong support among Democratic leaders in Texas for Mike Dukakis," said Railroad Commissioner John Sharp, chairman of the Dukakis Texas campaign.

Jury to get magazine negligence suit

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal court jury today prepared to consider whether relatives of a Texas woman should be awarded millions of dollars from Soldier of Fortune magazine because an ad in the publication led to her death three years ago.

Gary Wayne Black, 18, and Marjorie Einmann, 64, are seeking $22.5 million in the negligence suit against the self-styled "Journal for Professional Adventurers."

Sandra Black, Gary's mother and Mrs. Einmann's daughter, was shot to death Feb. 21, 1985, at her home in Bryan.

Mrs. Black's husband, Robert, is on Texas' death row for paying John Wayne Hearn $10,000 to kill her. Hearn is serving three life terms in Florida for the Black slaying and two others in that state.

Robert Black contacted Hearn through a personal services classified ad Hearn placed in Soldier of Fortune in late 1984.

Hearn's ad appeared in four issues of the magazine, offering services of former Marine and Vietnam veterans and weapons specialists with jungle warfare expertise for "high-risk assignments" in the United States or overseas.

Attorneys for the Boulder, Colo.-based magazine and its parent company, Omega Group, Ltd., do not dispute the ad brought Hearn and Black together, but insist publisher Robert Brown had no way of knowing the ad was for illegal activity.

Magazine witnesses, including Brown, defended the publication as a military journal, saying the classified ads were run to provide employment for Vietnam veterans who had difficulty finding work after returning home from an unpopular war. Such work included bodyguard and security duty or mercenary fighting overseas.

But witnesses for the plaintiffs said ad's reference to "high-risk assignments" implied Hearn and others using similar words in ads were making themselves available for criminal activity.

Brown, in two days of testimony, said he was unaware of news stories that linked his magazine to at least nine crimes and said no one at the magazine was aware of such stories.

"We don't have the capability — nor does any publisher — to investigate every ad," Brown said. "If someone would have called and said somebody had been murdered, you bet your bottom dollar ... I'd have pulled every ad."

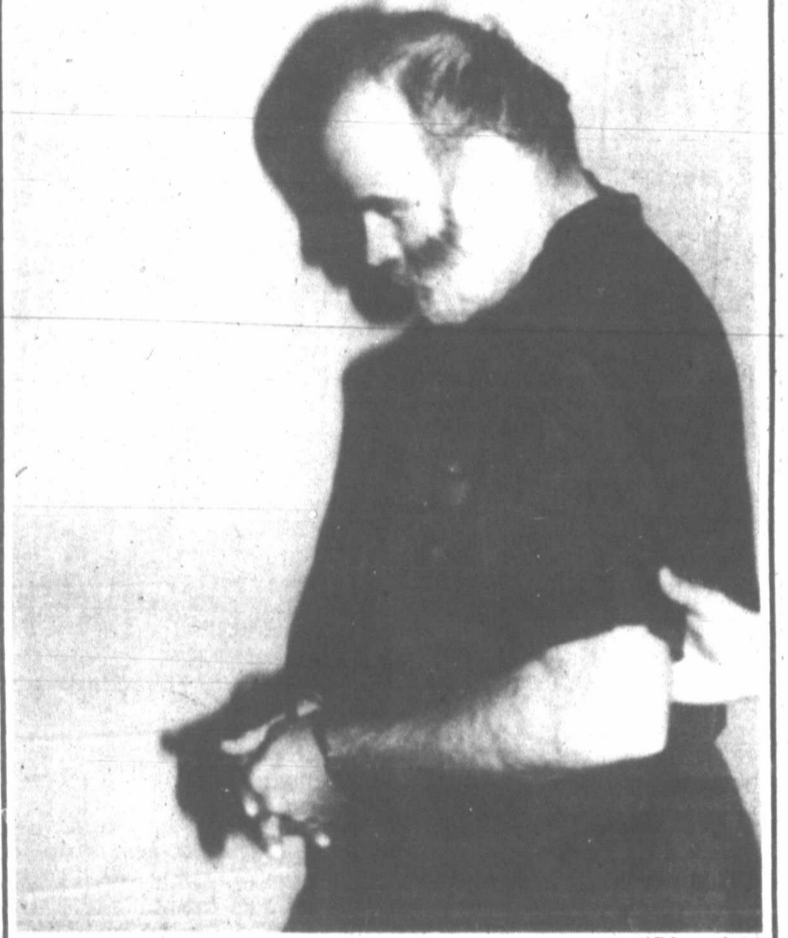

A final witness called by the plaintiffs, however, testified last week that James Graves, Soldier of Fortune's managing editor, knew of at least one criminal act.

A former Harris County district attorney said Graves filed affidavits in a 1982 Houston case in which a man ran an ad that sought experts in poison to kill his wife.

Graves' signatures on affidavits authenticated an ad placed in the magazine by William Chanslor, who was using the alias of John G. Thompson.

Chanslor, a Houston attorney, was convicted in the Houston case at an August 1982 trial. His ads ran in Soldier of Fortune in October, November and December 1981.

To stand trial

R. Gene Simmons, 47, is returned to the Pope County jail at Russellville, Ark., Monday after a psychiatric examination at the State Hospital in Little Rock. Simmons is accused in the murder of 16 people in December, including 14 members of his family.

One dead, two wounded in car lot shootout

HALTOM CITY (AP) — A former employee of a used car lot returned hours after being fired and became involved in a shootout that left one person dead and two hospitalized for treatment for gunshot wounds, authorities say.

The shooting in the Fort Worth suburb began after the man got into an argument with his former boss and the boss' son late Monday, police said.

The former employee, who was shot to death, was not immediately identified. Tarrant County Medical Office investigator J.L. Kirkpatrick said. He said the man died from a gunshot wound in the chest.

Aubrey Stamps, 57, a former Haltom City city councilman and owner of the used car lot, was in serious condition late Monday at Harris Hospital in Fort Worth.

Tommy Stamps, 30, was in critical condition at Harris Hospital with a gunshot wound in the head, hospital spokesman Tom Peck said.

Haltom City Police Lt. R.W. McQueary said the incident began when the former employee returned to the garage and got into an argument first with another employee. The men went to the main office where Stamps and his son confronted the man, who was armed with a pistol.

Several shots were exchanged, witnesses told police. When the shooting stopped, the former employee managed to get into his car and pull into the street where the vehicle jumped a curb, rammed two cars in an automobile repair shop's parking lot and knocked over a natural gas meter.

Bill Kates, owner of a used-car lot across the street from the shooting scene, said he heard two shots, then about five or six more.

"It shocked me, hearing the gunshots," Kates said.

Panel rebukes Kress judge

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge who fined an Amarillo attorney $100 without allowing the attorney to respond to charges has been publicly reprimanded by the State Commission on Judicial Conduct.

Municipal Court Judge Eual Burton of Kress said Monday he learned his lesson but doesn't regret his actions.

The commission said Burton, whose court is in Swisher County, advised the attorney by letter June 15, 1987, that he was fining him $100 for flagrant contempt of court and perjury.

The lawyer was not named in the commission's reprimand, but Burton identified him as Selden Hale III of Amarillo. The commission later confirmed the identification.

Burton, according to the commission, said the attorney had failed to appear or produce his client for a May 26 trial in a case involving alleged failure to yield right of way, no liability insurance and expired registration.

The letter said the alleged perjury concerned the liability insurance.

The commission said on the date scheduled for trial, the attorney's office notified Burton that because of a conflict with another court appearance, the attorney would not be able to attend the trial and the client would produce proof of liability insurance.

By written message of May 27, the attorney purportedly forwarded to Burton proof of liability insurance and said the defendant had been notified that he needed to pay the fine immediately "on the other ticket."

Burton denied ever receiving the proof of liability insurance.

The commission said at no time prior to his June 15 letter to the attorney did he notify him that charges of perjury, failure to appear or contempt was being considered against him, and the attorney was never offered any hearing or other opportunity to respond to the charges.

The commission concluded at a Jan. 22 meeting that Burton had violated the Code of Judicial Conduct by not furnishing the attorney notice and opportunity to be heard.

Commissioners approve museum construction

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas County commissioners have approved a $2.3 million contract to construct an elevator tower and visitors center in the former Texas Schoolbook Depository as part of an exhibit on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

The Dallas County Historical Foundation has worked for 11 years to get the exhibit funded.

"The eyes of the world will be on this project," said Lindalyn Adams, president of historical foundation. "As sad as it is, it is the most important historical site in Dallas."

The foundation will raise an additional $1.5 million more from private sources for additional renovations on the sixth floor of what is now known as the Dallas County Administration Building.

The Warren Commission determined that Lee Harvey Oswald fired a high-powered rifle at Kennedy from the sixth floor of the building where he worked on Nov. 22, 1963.

The contract was approved Monday by a 3-2 vote to award the contract to Thomas J. Hayman Construction Co., which will begin work on the project as early as this week.

The exhibit is to be called "The Sixth Floor" and will be reached via an outside elevator that will carry an estimated 300- to 500-thousand visitors annually to the exhibit without disrupting work at county government offices inside.

Tony Callaway, a partner in the architectural firm of Hendrick Callaway, said construction could be completed by November, but foundation officials say they are unlikely to schedule the exhibit's opening on Nov. 22, the 25th anniversary of Kennedy's assassination.

"We think it would be inappropriate," Adams said.

Apartment complex fire in Lubbock kills four people

LUBBOCK (AP) — Four people died early today when fire erupted in a south Lubbock apartment complex, fire officials say.

The victims were identified by Lubbock police as Stacey Owens, 19, Kenneth Daves, 18, Larry Daves, 17, and one-year-old Tonia Daves.

Fire officials said they have not determined the cause of the early morning fire at the Lorelei Apartments. The fire was reported at 3:05 a.m. by a Lubbock police officer who was on patrol in the area.

About 24 firemen battled the blaze for about 90 minutes before extinguishing it.

No damage estimate was immediately available.

Former missionary remembered at memorial service in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — More than 2,000 people attended a memorial service for slain Officer Gary D. McCarthy, honoring him as a policeman and as a missionary.

Hundreds of police officers, some weeping and others with their badges taped in black, filled the Eagle's Nest Cathedral Monday to honor McCarthy, a former missionary who joined the force 14 months ago.

"He left the foreign mission field but he found another mission field," said the Rev. Clyde Box, pastor of Brook Hollow Baptist Church in DeSoto where McCarthy, a husband and father of two children, attended church.

McCarthy was off duty Friday when he was gunned down trying to stop a robbery attempt at the grocery store where he worked part time. He was the third Dallas policeman killed in six weeks.

McCarthy's funeral will be held today in his hometown of Amarillo.

Police were holding three men in connection with McCarthy's death, but the district attorney's office said none was charged by Monday afternoon. The three were arrested on capital murder warrants.

One of them, Vincent Edward Cooks, 23, was paroled Aug. 4, 1987, from the Texas Department of Corrections less than a year after he began serving a five-year sentence for aggravated assault of a police officer.

Cooks had originally been charged with attempted capital murder after apparently shooting at an off-duty police officer outside the Cartoons Club in Houston.

Houston Police Sgt. V.W. West said Cooks pleaded no contest to the reduced aggravated assault charge and began serving his sentence in December 1986.

Cooks was arrested Sunday at a Houston apartment where he tried to escape from a second-story window, said Dallas Police Lt. Ron Waldrop.

Another man arrested in the case, 23-year-old Tony Ray Harvey of Houston, was paroled from the TDC on Jan. 18 after serving 18 months of a six-year sentence for aggravated robbery and the unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, police said.

"This is rather indicative of how the criminal justice system is working," said Capt. John Holt.

The third man, Tracy Dewayne Stallworth, 27, of Irving, has no prior convictions.

Police would release few details in the case. Harvey was being held Monday on $500,000 bond at Lew Sterrett Justice Center, while Stallworth's bond was set at $100,200. Cooks was being held at Lew Sterrett but bond had not been set Monday night, a jail spokeswoman said.

McCarthy died at Parkland Memorial Hospital Friday evening after the shootout at Brancato's Warehouse market in West Dallas. McCarthy, wearing street clothes, was escorting the grocery store manager from a bank visit when a man jumped out of a car to rob the manager, police said.

After being shot three times, once in the heart, McCarthy returned fire at the attacker and two others in a car before they sped away.

McCarthy's death was the seventh in six shootings involving police this year. In addition to the three dead police officers, four civilians have been killed by police this year.

Two officers — John Glenn Chase and James A. Joe — were killed last month.

Chase, a white officer, was killed Jan. 23 by a mentally ill, homeless black man who had wrestled the officer's gun away on a downtown street as a bus-stop crowd watched. Police said some witnesses encouraged the assailant.

Political controls hurting Nicaragua

While much attention in the United States was focused on a vote in Congress about providing money to a US government-approved opposition movement, a demonstration provided a rare insight into the misery that collectivist ideology bolstered by political power has inflicted on the people of Nicaragua. An estimated 15,000 workers demonstrated in Managua to demand the abolition of an agency that sets salaries.

"We don't want weapons, we want food!" they chanted, and "State bureaucracy, enough already!" They know what's wrong in Nicaragua. Ambitious and ruthless leaders have too much power concentrated in their hands. Bolstered by an ideology that justifies repression as being in the interests of the working class, they have institutionalized misery and poverty. The demonstrations were followed by anti-draft demonstrations in Masaya, with mothers and sisters of teen-age draft evaders clashing with police and government-organized demonstrators. Besides protesting conscription, demonstrators complained about the lack of economic opportunity in today's Nicaragua.

The average salary for a skilled worker in Nicaragua is 800,000 cordobas a month, or about $38 at the official exchange rate. Agriculture is collectivized, meaning that agricultural products are in chronically short supply. Rice, beans, sugar, soap, cooking oil and other basic goods are rationed; Nicaraguans stand in long lines to get what little is available. When the regime's official supermarkets are empty, some goods may still be available at open-air markets, at ten times the controlled prices. Water and gasoline are rationed, and electricity is often cut off for five hours a day.

Sandinista apologists may claim that all these hardships are the result of the ongoing war with the US-backed Contras. Cynics may want to believe that such poverty is endemic to Latin American culture. In reality, such chronic shortages are the inevitable result of too much political control. The pervasiveness of that control is partially symbolized by the National System of Job Organization and Salaries, which sets wages and other conditions of employment.

Just as political control perverts the labor market, it perverts every sector of the economy. Not even the most competent and well-intentioned economic planner can know enough to coordinate by command every sector of a modern economy, and the Sandinista regime does not boast a surplus of such paragons of wisdom, virtue and technical competence. By trying to run everything, the regime produces shortages, confusion, frustration and human misery.

It's unlikely that the Contras have the cure, which is easy to recommend and almost impossible for any political regime to implement. That is simply for the regime to relinquish the reins of economic control and to abolish the institutions through which that control is exercised, permitting free play to the energy and initiative of the people. That simple path to prosperity is seldom taken, however, for it also means relinquishing political control.

Kemp has lost conservatives

On the day after the Iowa caucuses, a New Hampshire news program aired a series of videotape clips, showing each of the presidential candidates explaining why he had won. Now the American electoral process is ingenious, but it has not found a way to produce 12 winners in one election. After the New Hampshire primary, that unhappy fact became clear to some candidates.

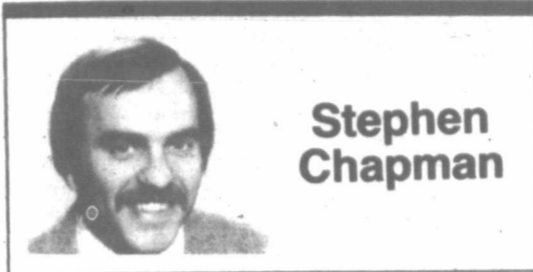

Jack Kemp, however, wasn't among them. In Iowa, he came in fourth, with 11 percent of the vote. In the wake of that humiliation, his New Hampshire chairman, Charles Douglas, said the New Hampshire primary would be "very important. A close third is good enough. If we're 10 or 15 points back, that would be different." Kemp finished a distant third, 16 percentage points behind Bob Dole.

Yet the congressman claimed victory. "There's the contest for the establishment wing of the Republican party, and there is a contest for the conservative wing," Kemp told his supporters. "We won the contest for the conservative wing."

He means he beat Pat Robertson and Pete du Pont, not an eye-popping feat. The difference from Iowa was not that Kemp did much better but that Robertson did much worse. The "establishment" candidates, meanwhile, polled 67 percent of the vote in a conservative state. If a candidate can capture the right wing with 13 percent of the vote, it may not be terribly valuable.

Worse for Kemp, the next major event, Super Tuesday, takes place mostly in the South, Robertson's home field. His best hope—a quick knockout by Dole that would drive Bush voters to Kemp—has been dashed.

How did this happen? Kemp is an articulate conservative with a clear message and an established name. The puzzle is why the man who once looked like Ronald Reagan's heir has floundered in the contest to succeed him.

Some of the reasons are beyond Kemp's control. Bush undercut his appeal by his own proximity to Reagan. Despite his previous record, Bush now looks to many Republicans like a reasonable facsimile of the President. "Only the true believers don't accept him," says Geoffrey Garin, a Democratic pollster.

From the start, Kemp hasn't been able to count on the true believers. Many conservatives concerned about social issues—school prayer, abortion, gay rights—gravitated to Robertson. Others, envisioning bold changes in economic policy, lined up with du Pont. Not much was left for Kemp.

But the candidate is also to blame. Reagan's most potent theme throughout his career has been the libertarian one: his portrayal of government as the enemy of freedom and prosperity. That theme is absent from this campaign.

Bush wants to improve education; Dole talks about "compassionate conservatism"; Robertson stresses Washington's role in restoring traditional values. Everyone proposes that the government do more. No one dares suggest that it do less. Kemp may be the worst offender. He and Paul Simon could save money by sharing a speechwriter.

You doubt? Asked about the homeless by a New Hampshire voter before the primary, Kemp said, "No one should go without shelter, medical help, drug and alcohol rehabilitation or job training." Central America? "I'd try to construct a Marshall Plan for Latin America." Gramm-Rudman? "I voted against Gramm-Rudman because I didn't want to cut defense, raise taxes, cut veterans' programs or programs for the poor."

On the stump, he misses no chance to warn the elderly that Bush and Dole want to throw them out in the snow. Kemp professes horror that his opponents supported a temporary freeze in Social Security cost-of-living allowances. He doesn't mention his own vote to raise the retirement age for Social Security, which is the financial and moral equivalent of a cut in benefits.

Kemp's sole gesture toward spending restraint is his endorsement of a line-item veto. But asked what programs he would cut, he listed just three: the ban on aid to the Contras, the Kennedy-Hollings measure to force Rupert Murdoch to sell some of his media holdings and Sen. Daniel Inouye's infamous appropriation for a Jewish school in France. Only the last would reduce spending. In a trillion-dollar budget, Kemp can find just $8 million to eliminate.

His press secretary, John Buckley, calls Bob Dole the "tax collector for the welfare state." Kemp, unfortunately, differs only on collecting the taxes—not on preserving the welfare state.

His campaign has been surprising for two things: He has gone out of his way to avoid making a villain of government, and he has gotten nowhere with the voters. Could it be there's a connection?

Dukakis learns Southernness

Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis was still enjoying his victory in the New Hampshire Democratic presidential primary when an aide called him into a Super Tuesday strategy session.

Super Tuesday, March 8, will see 20 states hold presidential contests. Fourteen of these states are in the Deep South.

"Mike," began one of his aides, "do you know much about the Deep South?"

"No," the New Englander replied, "but I did see To Kill a Mockingbird twice. I was very impressed with Robert Duvall's Boo Radley."

"Excellent," the aide said. "Do you also know campaigning in the South will be much different than in New England?"

"In what way?" Governor Dukakis asked.

"Well, I don't know much about the Deep South, either," the aide answered, "but I've heard a lot of these people don't wear shoes and walk around babbling such things as 'sho-nuff' and 'bless yo' heart.'"

"How quaint," said the governor.

"That's not all," the aide went on. "They have some very strange customs with which you are not going to be familiar."

"Could you be more specific, old boy?"

"They eat strange foods. While you are hunting for voters in the South, you are likely to be offered some native dishes such as grits."

Lewis Grizzard

"Grits have always puzzled me," said the candidate. "Is it 'Grits are?' or 'Grits is?'"

"Am' sir," answered the aide. "It's 'Grits am.'"

"I'll be able to handle that," said Dukakis. "I'll simply say, 'These grits sho-nuff am good.'"

"Perfect," said the aide. "We've also got to do something about your appearance. Southerners don't dress like we do."

"They don't?"

"No, we'll have to get you a cap with the name of a chewing tobacco company or a heavy machinery manufacturer on the front."

"If we could also find you a shirt with your name sewn over the left pocket, that would be good too. And there's one other thing."

"What's that?" asked Dukakis.

"It's your name. We think we can really make some headway against Gore if we can introduce you as 'Mike (Bubba) Dukakis.'"

"That's fine."

"We also expect you to be able to converse with Southerners on topics that are most important to them."

"The trade imbalance?"

"No. College football and country music. You must learn to say, 'How 'bout them Dawgs.'"

"Dahgs?"

"No. Watch my mouth. It's 'daawgs' as in 'haawgs' and 'fraawgs.'"

"Haahgs," said the New England politician.

"Don't worry about it, we'll try again later," said the aide.

"Just remember when you're talking to a Southerner occasionally to throw in names like Merle Haggard, George Jones and Bear Bryant and you'll be OK."

"Well, bless yo' daahg, Bubba," said the governor. "I think I've got it."

"Should we celebrate, sir?" asked the aide.

"Of course. A Courvoisier with a little branch water for me," laughed the governor, feeling more Southern by the minute.

There's a new '80s style McCarthyism

By SARAH OVERSTREET

The story sort of got lost in the shuffle.

If it hadn't broken in the middle of Campaign '88, it might have captured more attention. More of us would have been scared of it than of some of the candidates trying to become president of the United States.

It might have dominated front pages in a less anecdotal time. A decade ago, it certainly would have. In the post-Nixon, post-Watergate, post-Vietnam, era, we were much more sensitive to being hounded and put into files for expressing our constitutional rights. The wounds were new and hadn't yet formed protective scars.

Ten years ago, the press would have spluttered indignant blazes at the FBI's five-year probe of opponents of President Reagan's Central American policies. The FBI photographed demonstrators at rallies, recorded their license plates, showed up at their jobs flashing badges and asking questions about them. In the '70s, such tactics—recently discovered through documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act—would have rained fire on the FBI's heads.

But this is 1988. Criticism of a president's policies isn't as much of a right, I guess, as it was when the president had just proven himself a sneak and a liar.

Just goes to show you how complacent we can become when our rights aren't being violated in Technicolor. In the '60s and early '70s, press coverage continued to hammer home the message that McCarthyism wasn't dead, just taking a breather. Anyone who was considered "anti-American" (read "anti-presidential-policy") was doggedly recorded and impugned. It was excess, impossible to ignore.

Yet give us a decade of relative freedom of expression—and a presidential election—and we get pretty ho-hum. So, the FBI's been stopping in at the work place, asking questions.

We've got bigger fish to fry.

The majority of Americans living today went through times when anyone who dared disagree with government policies risked showing up in FBI paperwork as a "dangerous dissident." We all knew horror stories of friends, colleagues and relatives whose names surfaced in FBI files for merely being at activities deemed "suspect" by the government, or even for associating with someone on the "suspect" list. Most times, they could only speculate as to how these investigations affected their jobs and community standings. Sometimes, they knew definitively how their lives were adversely affected by being the target of these investigations.

Recent victims of this particular investigation—those opposing U.S. policy in Central America—have included members of the U.S. Catholic Conference and a teachers' union. Imagine a visit from your friendly local FBI agent at the school superintendent's office.

Recently, students I had taught in the '70s have been active in demonstrations on a university campus. Some of their teachers, including me, taught them that responsible, non-violent dissent was their privilege. They need not fear, because those who abused these rights had been exposed and brought low. Last year, one of the brightest of the group, a student getting a master's degree, told me that he believed in what he was doing, but was ashamed to admit he worried about how his activism would affect future employment.

In light of the recent FBI probe, I wonder how many of these young people's names are listed in FBI files waiting to explode in their faces. What about these children who, we promised, were guaranteed their constitutional right of expression?

What do we tell them now?

Penalties planned for Panama merely symbolic

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's imposition of economic sanctions on Panama for alleged drug running is merely symbolic because the penalties prescribed under U.S. law already have been applied against the country, according to U.S. officials.

The formal application of the drug trafficking sanctions law, expected today, will have little effect on Panama, a senior U.S. official said Monday.

Under a 1986 law, Reagan is required to take punitive measures against countries found not to cooperate in curbing drug smuggling to the United States.

Countries which are "decertified" are subject to the penalties.

Today was the deadline for the announcement of Reagan's findings. Mexico also is a major source of illicit drugs but officials said that country was found by Reagan to be cooperating in drug enforcement efforts and therefore not subject to punitive action. Colombia — another major drug producing nation — also will not face sanctions, according to CBS News and Washington Post reports.

The U.S. officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the law specifies that offending countries are not entitled to U.S. economic or military aid nor to U.S. support for their loan requests in international lending institutions.

They noted that U.S. aid to Panama was suspended in 1987 as part of a general deterioration in relations with the Central American nation's military strongman, Manuel Antonio Noriega, who has been indicted on drug smuggling charges by two Florida grand juries.

In addition, the United States has not backed Panamanian loan requests in international banks because the country is behind in its repayments on earlier loans, the officials said.

However, the officials said other types of sanctions are possible. They said government lawyers are reviewing Panama's continuing eligibility in a U.S. tariff preference system for Third World countries and in the Caribbean Basin Initiative, which is aimed at improving access of products of the region to U.S. markets.

The pending administration announcement on Panama's lack of cooperation in drug enforcement carried heavy political overtones, given the dramatic developments over the past few days.

The administration has refused to extend recognition to the new Panamanian government which took office following the ouster last Friday of President Eric Arturo Delvalle.

Delvalle was deposed by Noriega's allies in the National Assembly after the president tried to fire the defense chief. The Reagan administration continues to look on Delvalle as Panama's constitutional president.

Testimony to begin in Mechem impeachment trial in Phoenix

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Despite "first-day jitters," the Senate strongly rejected efforts to dismiss impeachment charges against Evan Mechem, and one long-time supporter of the governor said conviction was almost certain.

During the second day of Mechem's impeachment trial today, prosecution and defense attorneys planned to make opening statements on the first allegation against the Republican governor — that he tried to thwart an investigation of an alleged death threat by a state official.

Also, the Arizona Supreme Court was expected to rule today on a defense claim that the impeachment trial, the first of a U.S. governor in 59 years, should be delayed until after Mechem's March 22 criminal trial on charges of concealing a $350,000 campaign loan.

The high court last week refused to grant a temporary delay, and Mechem said he planned to take the issue to federal court if necessary.

Senate President Carl Kunasek, a Republican, said "it was the first-day jitters for everyone" in the impeachment trial's opening day Monday.

"It crosses everybody's mind — the importance to do justice to the governor and the state," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Urdane, also a Republican. "It's a large burden and we take it seriously."

Senators refused to dismiss the 23 articles of impeachment against Mechem, whose attorney, Jerris Leonard, entered an innocent plea on his behalf.

"This man hasn't dipped his hands into public funds. He hasn't ripped off the treasury. He hasn't committed high crimes in office," Leonard argued in asking for dismissal of the impeachment charges.

But prosecutor Paul Eckstein argued that Mechem's conduct was "grossly offensive to the people of this state," and that the impeachment articles "cry out for conviction."

On 11 separate motions, the largest number of the 29 senators voting for dismissal was seven. Several senators said the vote should not be considered an indication that Mechem is likely to be convicted, saying they want to hear the evidence first.

However, Sen. Jeff Hill, a Republican who has strongly backed Mechem, said the governor's conviction was virtually a foregone conclusion. "I think that it's not likely that he's going to prevail," he said.

If convicted by the Senate, Mechem would be removed from office and could be permanently barred from holding elective office in Arizona.

The first-term governor did not appear before the Senate on Monday, but told reporters at his Glendale office he is confident he will be acquitted.

"If the decision is made on the evidence I expect to get 29 votes," he said. There are 30 senators but one is absent due to illness. A two-thirds vote is required for a conviction.

"Mr. French would like to hang me at high noon from whatever cottonwood there is," Mechem said, referring to the lead prosecutor, William P. French. "It's not the object of what's good for the state of Arizona. It's the object of a lynch mob."

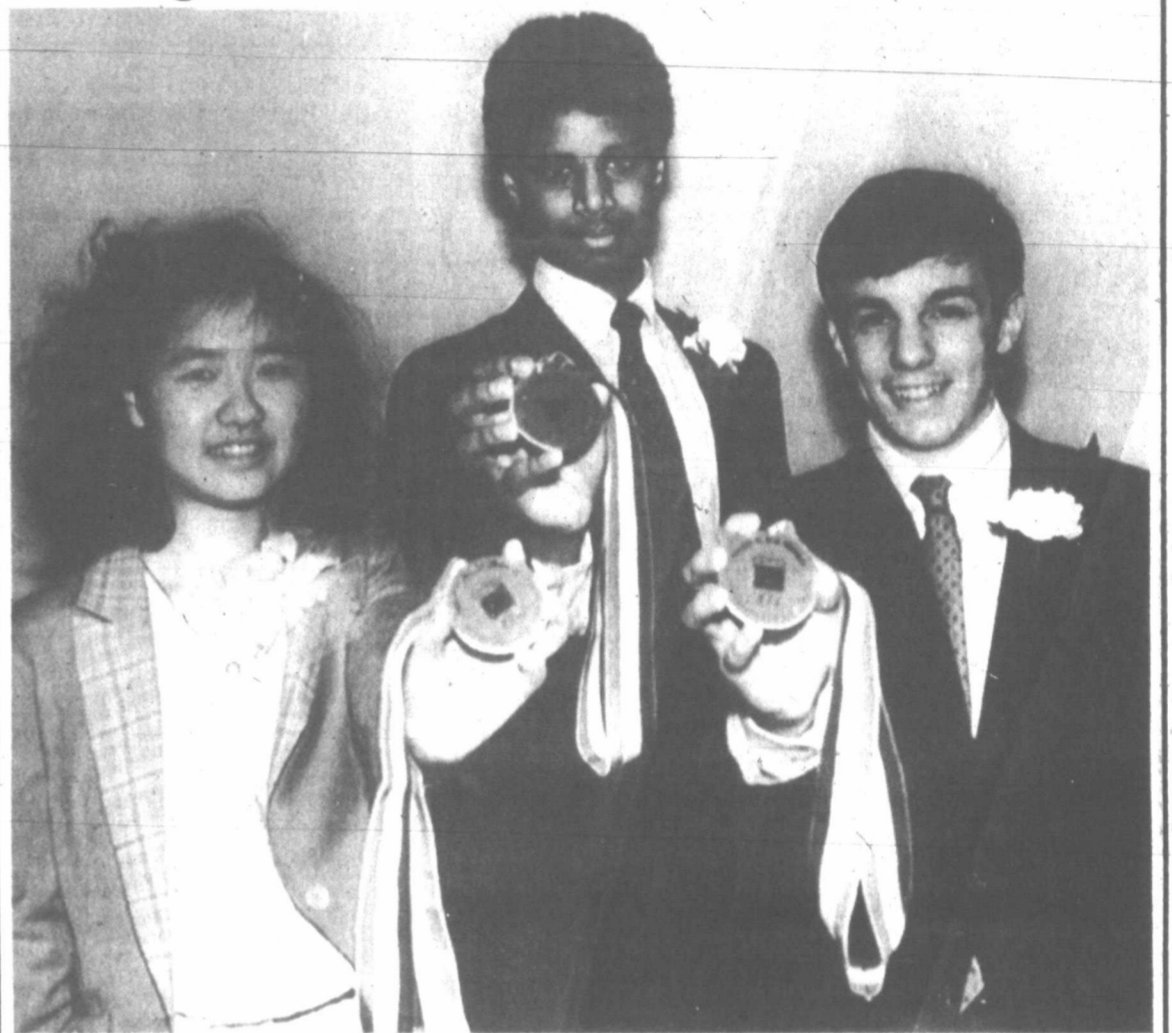

Mechem was accused by the House of concealing the $350,000 campaign loan, misusing $80,000 from the governor's protocol fund by loaning it to his auto dealership and trying to thwart a probe of the alleged death threat by the state prison construction chief against a former top Mechem aide.

Lee Watkins, who has since resigned, has denied making a threat against Donna Carlson, who later testified before the state grand jury on the $350,000 loan.

Mechem, 63, who won election in a three-way race after five tries, is accused of high crimes, misdemeanors, and malfeasance in office.

He has repeatedly denied wrongdoing and insisted he will survive both trials and a May 17 recall election and return to the office he gave up to acting Gov. Rose Mofford, a Democrat, when he was impeached by the House on Feb. 5.

Leading index down in January

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief economic forecasting gauge dropped a sharp 0.6 percent in January, but an upward revision for December eased fears of an imminent recession, the Commerce Department said today.

The department reported a month ago that the index had declined 0.2 percent in December after falling in October and November.

Three consecutive monthly declines in the index is the traditional, but not infallible, signal of an impending recession.

In today's report, however, the December calculation was revised to show an increase of 0.3 percent.

Since it was created in 1948, the index has correctly forecast every recession the country has had with declines for at least three consecutive months. Thus, the revision to December was taken by economists as a heartening sign that the country is unlikely to suffer a downturn this year.

The index has taken on added significance since Oct. 19, when stock prices plunged a record 508 points, eclipsing the 1929 market crash, which preceded the Great Depression.

Since October's steep decline, however, a number of business barometers have shown strength, including continued declines in the unemployment rate. Even the stock market has rallied in recent weeks, climbing more than 48 points on Monday to close at its highest level since the October collapse.

Economists are looking for the economy to slow in the first half of 1988, but they now believe that the sluggish growth will not worsen into a recession.

The National Association of Business Economists said Monday that while more than half of its members responding to a November survey believed the country would suffer a recession this year, that figure had now dropped to about one-fourth.

The 0.6 percent January decline was led by a big increase in new claims for unemployment benefits, which averaged 351,000 a week in January, up 12.5 percent from the December level. Since January, however, the weekly unemployment claims figures have been falling, further easing recession fears.

In all, five of the nine available indicators showed weakness during January. After unemployment claims, the negative factors were a drop in building permits, a decline in manufacturers' orders for consumer goods, changes in raw materials prices and a drop in business delivery times.

Four indicators showed strength during the month, with a rise in stock prices making the biggest gain. Other positive forces were the growth of the money supply, increases in the length of the average workweek and a rise in orders for plant and equipment.

The various changes left the index at 190.2 percent of its 1967 base of 100.

Capitol mice foil cat, startle ambassador

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cat came to stay but the Capitol mice played anyway — around an ambassador's feet.

House Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., has a mouse problem.

He shares it with other members of the Democratic leadership who occupy offices in the oldest part of the Capitol, the part that survived after the British burned the building in 1814.

The mice call it home but House leaders and their staffs call it disturbing.

So traps were set and baited with cheese.

The mice ignored them.

Then Foley called in reinforcements.

He brought his cat to work, a feline with a proven reputation as a champion mouser.

The cat moved in with the Foleys a dozen years ago while they were on vacation in the Caribbean.

Since the cat had chosen them, and not they the cat, they gave the animal an appropriate name — "Roger the Lodger."

Roger was brought in to lodge for awhile in Foley's office suite on the first floor of the Capitol. Expectations ran high for Roger. But the results were poor.

Roger the Lodger bagged no mice.

The mouser's failure was underscored on Monday during a meeting in an adjoining office.

Bonior was conferring over coffee with Jan Kinast, the Polish ambassador to the United States.

Suddenly a mouse darted out from behind a small chest.

It ran across the carpet and disappeared under the conference table, literally at the startled ambassador's feet.

Anti-Noriega general strike fails to halt nation

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A general strike protesting the regime of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega failed to halt transportation and most commerce in the capital, but organizers predicted it would gather momentum.

An apparent lack of faith in the effectiveness of mass action conspired against the strike's success on Monday, which was payday for many workers.

The strike appeared to be somewhat more effective in industry.

The government said the strike — called to demand Noriega's ouster as head of Panama's 15,000-strong Defense Forces — had been a failure.

"There's fear," said a middle-aged bank employee as he got off a bus Monday. "We lack unity to confront these people, who have all the arms."

"The people don't have means to resist," said a woman, a domestic employee, who was walking with him. Like all those asked, they spoke on condition of anonymity for fear of reprisal.

The pro-government newspaper Critica carried a banner headline Monday saying, "A Store Closed Is A Store Seized." Strike leaders said the government made that threat to many businessmen.

Carlos Gonzalez de la Lastra, a businessman and strike organizer, claimed the action had shut down 95 percent of manufacturing and construction in the capital and seriously damaged the financial industry.

Speaking to reporters Monday night, he said five of Panama City's roughly 120 banks had closed and there were slowdowns at banks that remained open, resulting in a 40 percent loss of business.

Gonzalez predicted additional closures and greater employee absenteeism today. Banking is a pillar of Panama's economy, which is largely based on service industries.

Gonzalez also said a first-ever work slowdown began Monday at the canal, a claim denied by the Panama Canal Commission, which operates the waterway through which about 40 ships pass on an average day.

He predicted the slowdown would widen today.

The strike was called Friday hours after Noriega orchestrated the ouster of President Eric Arturo Delvalle and made former Education Minister Manuel Solis Palma the country's new chief of state.

A day earlier, Delvalle ordered Noriega to step down in light of the general's federal indictment in Florida last month on charges of trafficking in Colombian cocaine.

Delvalle, who the Reagan administration continues to recognize as president, escaped house arrest Friday night and went into hiding in Panama. He is a leading proponent of using economic pressure to force Noriega from power.

Solis Palma denied that the strike had been at all successful.

"Look around you," he told reporters Monday afternoon. "More than 60 percent of the country is operating."

A majority of businesses were open in the commercial district that caters primarily to middle- and lower-class shoppers. In the banking district and other areas where fancier shops and cater to tourists and wealthier Panamanians, most businessmen kept their doors closed.

Gonzalez said the strike would continue at least through Wednesday.

It was the sixth general strike called by the opposition National Civic Crusade since last June, when it began its campaign to oust Noriega after the general's former second-in-command went public with charges Noriega was involved in election fraud, corruption and political assassination.

Only one of the previous strikes, in August, was successful.

Document shows Waldheim knew of plan to deport Greeks to camps

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — While serving in the German army, Kurt Waldheim forwarded a request for the mass deportation of Greek civilians to labor camps in 1943, according to a key Nazi document.

The authenticity of the document, found in the U.S. National Archives and made public Monday, was confirmed by U.S. Justice Department spokesman John Russell. He said it was among the crucial documents on which the government based its decision to place Waldheim, now Austria's president and formerly U.N. secretary-general, on a list barring him from entering the United States.

Under the Nuremberg Charter adopted at the end of the war, deportation of civilians is both a war crime and a crime against humanity. When the U.S. Justice Department barred Waldheim from the United States, it said he had "assisted or otherwise participated" in "mass deportation of civilians."

Waldheim has repeatedly declared he is innocent of any war crimes.

The document is a message between German army officers in the Balkans in World War II and indicates the information was received by radio by Waldheim, who signed its transcription and forwarded it on Aug. 15, 1943.

Waldheim at that time was a lieutenant serving as deputy operations officer of the German General Staff attached to the 11th Italian Army in Athens.

The communication from a German army field officer was addressed to his headquarters and said there is "hope of success only if all male civilians are seized and deported" in the area in northern Greece where his division was operating. It also said "cleansing operations are deemed necessary."

Nazi "cleansing operations" often meant the destruction of towns and deportation or execution of their inhabitants.

The captured Nazi document was made available to The Associated Press by the World Jewish Congress in the original German text, with excerpts in English. Justice Department sources concurred in the translation.

The World Jewish Congress

said Waldheim did not authorize the deportation of the Greeks to labor camps in Germany but that he was aware of the plan.

It also said a deportation order later was countermanded by an Italian commander whom the congress did not identify.

The army document also said the "Jewish Committee" operating in the town of Joannina, Greece, "must be regarded as a center of preparations for a resistance movement."

The World Jewish Congress said that in March, 1944, the Nazis deported 1,860 Jews, virtually the entire Jewish population of Joannina, to the Auschwitz death camp in Poland. The document signed by Waldheim did not seek authorization to deport Jews.

Waldheim, who has rejected calls for his resignation from the presidency, said the report vindicated him.

Settlers want harsh treatment of Arab rioters

JERUSALEM (AP) — Jewish settlers distributed leaflets warning Arabs that rioting in the occupied lands will "bring destruction upon you" and held a protest in Tel Aviv calling for harsh treatment of the rioters.

Earlier Monday, two Palestinians died of gunshot wounds inflicted in clashes with Israeli troops in the occupied West Bank, and two Arabs were wounded by Israeli gunfire in the occupied Gaza Strip.

In another development, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir on Monday said he did not reject the recommendation of some Cabinet members that the occupied lands be closed to media coverage. "If it becomes clear that indeed it may limit the damage, I would be willing to consider it," he said.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz ended his mission in the Middle East on Monday, apparently without the approval of Israel or the Arabs of his plan for talks on Palestinian self-rule and a settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Shamir said the mission did not change his positions, but told Israel Television "I hope we will find a common language." He opposes trading land for peace with the Arabs, the essence of the Shultz proposal.

On Monday, some of the West Bank's 65,000 Jewish settlers urged Israel to deal more harshly with rioting Arabs in the occupied lands.

Working at night to avoid clashes with Arabs, settlers also distributed 3,000 leaflets in Palestinian towns that warn of tough Israeli action against rioters. "The recent rioting... will not bring you any advantage. On the contrary, this will hurt you and even bring destruction upon you," said the leaflets distributed by the nationalist Gush Emunim organization.

"Don't be mistaken enough to think we are turning the other cheek," the leaflets said. "The days when Jewish blood was cheap are long gone, as is the day of the slogan 'Slaughter the Jews.' Don't mistake our intention. We are staying here forever."

Ten seek Miss Top O' Texas title

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Fans' early departures defended

DEAR ABBY: "Seattleite" was upset with people who leave sporting events early. He was concerned that the players' performances would suffer. You agreed, calling this premature departure "demoralizing, insensitive and unsportsmanlike." Hogwash! Abby, don't assume that everyone who attends sporting events is a fan — which is an abbreviation for "fanatic."

I attend sporting events hoping to see top-level athletes perform at their best, buoyed by the competition. It's entertainment. And in many cases, I pay exorbitant prices, and when I am no longer being entertained, I leave.

Also, I doubt very much whether college or professional athletes are "demoralized" when people they've never seen leave the stands early. Athletes at this level play for a variety of reasons, not the least of which is for big money.

So, if you fans want to be fanatical, please do. When I'm present at a lopsided contest, I'll be the first one out the door. You "home teamers" can demonstrate your sensitivity and sportsmanship in the parking lot jam.

ELLENSBURGER

DEAR ELLENSBURGER: You're right, athletes are entertainers, but when an entertainer sees the audience leaving early, while he may not become unglued, it doesn't make him feel any better.

DEAR ABBY: Here's another version of why second lieutenants were called "shavetails": When a soldier made the transition from enlisted man to officer, he had a surplus of plain-style shirts. Officers' shirts had epaulets — little strips of fabric on the shoulders. So rather than scrap the shirts he had, he took them to the tailor shop in the post exchange and had the tailor sew epaulets on the shoulders. And where did the tailor get the extra material to make the epaulets? He just "shaved" it off the tail of the shirt. Hence every second lieutenant who was formerly an enlisted man was known as a "shavetail."

GRANT T. EDMONDS, LITTLETON, COLO.

DEAR GRANT: Your explanation checks out. I wonder where the story about shaving the tails of mules used in the military originated.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for advising "Carolina Churchgoer" to tell her minister privately to please stop asking (in a loud tone): "Where is your husband this morning?"

That reminds me of a minister we once had. Although my husband and I attended church services every Sunday morning, our minister would say, "Why don't you two join our Bible study group on Thursday nights?" Then he would say, "I never see you at Sunday night services — you really should make an effort to attend."

Every time we missed a church picnic, supper, book review or guest lecturer, the minister always asked: "Where were you?"

In addition to every Sunday morning service, we also attended Easter and Christmas services, and figured that was quite enough church for us.

As Paul Harvey would say: "Here's the rest of the story." We finally changed churches, and now a nice young pastor greets us warmly, thanks us for coming, and never tries to lay a guilt trip on us for not attending church more often.

TENNESSEE CHURCHGOERS

DEAR ABBY: After reading your column for more than 30 years, I figure it's time I wrote to you.

You had a letter in your column from someone who sent business cards from a store along with their wedding invitations. Big deal. In our niece's wedding invitation, we received a note which read: "We are registered at the Bank of ( ), Savings Account No. ( )."

Big argument here. I say we should not deposit a nickel. My wife says we have to. We will do whatever you decide is right.

UNCLE AND AUNT

DEAR UNCLE AND AUNT: You are under no obligation to deposit money into a savings account. A wedding gift should be given with love and best wishes — or not at all.

HYPOCRISY

"I've had it with religion! So-called 'Christians' who say one thing and act just the opposite. That's ridiculous!"

I agree. But if we're upset by it all, just imagine how God feels! His own Son, Jesus, was arrested, tried and put to death by the "religious" people of the day.

But before you give up on Christianity, consider this. When Jesus died at the hands of hypocrites, He made our forgiveness possible!

There's More Good News Wednesday, March 2, at 7:30 p.m.

Raiders name Shanahan as new coach

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer

Mike Shanahan

LOS ANGELES — Mike Shanahan knows a lot is expected of him as coach of the Los Angeles Raiders. He says he's ready to meet the challenge.

"My concern is not really with the playoffs because my standards are higher than getting into the playoffs," Shanahan said Monday at a news conference called to introduce him as the Raiders' new head coach. "Our standards are to win world championships."

The Raiders are the only AFC team to win a Super Bowl in the 1980s, having accomplished the feat following the 1980 and 1983 seasons. But the club has missed the playoffs the last two years, going 8-8 and 5-10.

The Raiders' record last year was their poorest since 1962, perhaps prompting Tom Flores to announce his retirement as head coach on Jan. 20 after nine years on the job. His teams were 83-53 in regular-season games.

Flores had succeeded John Madden, whose teams were 103-32-7 in 10 years and won the Super Bowl following the 1976 season.

So it would appear the pressure is on Shanahan, but he didn't sound concerned about that Monday. Rather, he sounded confident.

"It's indeed a great honor and a privilege to be the head coach of the Raiders," he said. "It's always been a goal of mine to be a head coach in the National Football League; to be the head coach of the most successful team in professional sports history makes it that much better.

"It's going to be a privilege to me to keep up the tradition of a Tom Flores, a John Madden, and an Al Davis, that kind of tradition and the championships that were won here. I know these goals can be achieved."

In introducing Shanahan, Davis, the Raiders' owner, said, "As I went into his character, as I went into his background, I found no flaw. His record speaks for itself. His vast amount of experience for a young man is unequalled by many."

Shanahan, who said he signed a three-year contract with the Raiders, has been an assistant coach under Dan Reeves at Denver the last four years and the offensive coordinator for the Broncos the last three.

The Broncos, who have been bitter rivals with the Raiders in recent years, won the AFC West championship the last two seasons and advanced to the Super Bowl. Meanwhile, Los Angeles finished well down in the standings.

Now Shanahan will try to change all that.

"I take a look at a team's defense. I really thought the Raiders were one of the best-coached defenses in the National Football League. We felt in Denver that the one thing we had to do to be successful was beat the Raiders. Offensively, I haven't really studied them."

"Obviously, my expertise is in the offensive area. I plan to contribute in a lot of areas."

The Raiders have had quarterback problems in recent years, with veterans Marc Wilson and Jim Plunkett.

PHS swimmers qualify for Region I meet

Several Pampa High swimmers have qualified for the Region 1 Tournament after their performances last weekend at the district meet in Lubbock.

In the girls' division, Pampa came in second in the team standings with 70 points. Amarillo High won both girls' and boys' divisions.

Individually for Pampa, Richelle Hill won the 500 freestyle event and finished second in the 200 intermediate.

Also coming in first for Pampa was the 400 freestyle relay team of Michelle Scott, Jennifer Hinkle, Pam Morrow and Richelle Hill.

Betsy Chambers was third in the 200 freestyle and fourth in the 100 backstroke. Scott was second in both the 50 freestyle and 100 freestyle.

Hinkle finished fourth in the 50 freestyle and third in the 100 freestyle. Sara Depee was fifth in the 500 freestyle.

Morrow was second in the 100 butterfly and third in the 100 breaststroke.

The 200 medley relay team finished fourth.

In the boys' division, Pampa was fifth with 19 points.

Mitch Haynes was third in the 200 freestyle while Zach Pope was fifth in the 200 IM and one meter diving.

Neil Turner was fifth in the 50 freestyle and second in the 100 breaststroke.

Pampa's 200 medley relay team was fifth.

The top six finishers in each event advance to the Region I tournament March 12 in Lubbock.

More sports planned for Winter Games

By LARRY SIDONS
AP Sports Writer

CALGARY, Alberta — Olympic officials want to see the Winter Games grow.

"We think the Winter Games can be more important," International Olympic Committee president Juan Antonio Samaranch said Monday.

Sports will be added to the program and bigger cities and regions will replace small resorts as hosts of the Winter Games, Samaranch and IOC member Marc Hodler of Switzerland said.

But that doesn't mean the IOC will try to slip a third party into what Hodler called "the forced marriage between ice sports and snow sports." And Samaranch raised the possibility of stricter controls over marginal competitors entering events such as bobsled and luge.

At a news conference the day after the close of what Samaranch termed "the best Winter Olympics ever," the IOC chief said one of the three demonstration sports in Calgary would be added to the medal-sport list for the 1992 Winter Games in Albertville, France.

"I cannot forecast, but I know the people of the Savoy (the Alpine region around Albertville) are very interested in freestyle skiing," Samaranch said.

The other demonstration sports here were curling and short-track speed skating.

Hodler said a decision on an additional sport for 1992 probably would be made at the IOC's executive board meeting in Stockholm in April.

Suggestions have been made that the IOC might swell the size — and American interest — of the Winter Games by switching indoor sports such as volleyball or basketball to the winter. Samar-anch, however, said that would violate the Olympic Charter, the IOC's bylaws, which limits Winter Games sports to those contested on ice and snow.

"If they played basketball on ice, maybe," he said.

Much attention during the Games focused on athletes such as British ski jumper Eddy Edwards, who flew less than half the distance covered by gold-medalist Matti Nykanen but won the hearts of fans. The Jamaican bobsled team also was on the track but made a public hit by selling T-shirts and sweat-shirts on the street of Calgary to meet expenses.

Hodler, president of both the International Ski Federation and the Association of International Winter Sports Federations, said there were no plans for qualification standards or other restrictions on skiing or ski jumping.

"It's very hard to compare athletes, because snow conditions and track conditions vary around the world," he said.

But Samaranch said that some qualifying criteria may be imposed in bobsled and luge.

"They must be much more strict in making the competition," Samaranch said.

Samaranch and Hodler said weather was the only problem in Calgary. High winds and warm temperatures disrupted the schedule, and Samaranch said the IOC was lucky it had added four days to the Games. He said the 16-day schedule adopted for Calgary was likely to remain in effect for Albertville.

The two officials also said that international sports federations and national Olympic committees would be asked to be more precise in reports on weather conditions at future Olympic bidding cities.

Bradley wins Missouri Valley crown

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — Bradley Coach Stan Albeck looked out at the court, saw Hersey Hawkins warming up early and figured there was "no way" the 14th-ranked Braves would fail to win the Missouri Valley Conference crown.

And they didn't, thanks to Hawkins, who scored 49 points as Bradley beat Southern Illinois 113-102 Monday night to clinch the title.

"Whenever he comes early and shoots, we know he's going to have a good game," Albeck said of Hawkins. "We knew he was going to have a good night, and tonight there was no way he was going to let us lose this game."

But it wasn't easy. Hawkins, the nation's leading collegiate scorer, was forced to outduel SIU's Steve Middleton, who scored 42 points in his final game at Carbondale.

"Middleton is a tremendous basketball player," Albeck said. "If it wasn't for Hawkins, he would probably be the player of the year in the Valley."

Only three games involved Top Twenty teams. In the others, it was No. 7 Pittsburgh 87, Boston College 79, and No. 16 North Carolina State 87, North Carolina-Asheville 76.

Hawkins scored 29 first-half points, pushing Bradley, 12-2 in the conference and 23-4 overall, to a 56-48 halftime lead.

SIU, 6-8 and 12-15, had a 15-8 lead with 15:35 left in the first half, but Bradley came back to lead 20-19 after Luke Jackson hit a turnaround jumper. The Braves extended the lead to 42-27 with seven minutes to play in the half, but SIU closed to within eight points on a Todd Krueger tip-in at the buzzer.

The Salukis came back to make a strong challenge in the second half, but Bradley was equal to the task.

Bradley raced to a 17-point lead in the first three minutes after intermission, but the Salukis scored eight straight points to close within 72-67 with 13 minutes remaining.

SIU tied the game at 76-76 with 11:43 left to play on a Middleton free throw.

The Braves' Jerry Thomas then scored nine straight points as Bradley built the lead to 92-78 with 7:55 remaining.

Hawkins set an SIU Arena scoring record and added 11 rebounds. Jackson added 12 points and 13 rebound for Bradley. Donald Powell came off the bench to score 18 points.

No. 7 Pittsburgh 87, Boston College 79 Charles Smith scored 23 points to become the second-leading scorer in Pitt history. Ironically, Smith had the first 3-point goal of his career.

"The funny thing is he's actually a good three-point shooter," Coach Paul Evans said. "We have some plays designed for that but he doesn't take that many."

Demetreus Gore scored 14 of his 20 points in the second half for Pitt.

Dana Barros led Boston College with 32 points, hitting on 11 of 22 shots and six of 10 three-pointers.

No. 16 N. Carolina St. 87, N.C.-Asheville 76

Chucky Brown scored 25 points and Vinnie Del Negro added 23 to lead the Wolfpack.

North Carolina-Asheville, trailing 52-32 at halftime, closed the gap to 78-70 with 3:20 remaining on the play of William Funderburk and Ricky Chatman, both of whom wound up with 22 points.

But freshman Chris Corchianni hit a pair of free throws and Brown followed with a dunk with 1:30 left to increase the Wolfpack lead to 84-72.

The Bulldogs took their only lead at 22-21 with 9:07 left in the first half on a basket by Funderburk. But Del Negro and Brown sparked a 9-0 spurt that gave the Wolfpack a 30-22 lead with 7:11 left.

Zaragoza captures vacant WBC bantamweight crown

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Daniel Zaragoza of Mexico City dashed the comeback attempt of 36-year-old countryman Carlos Zarate by winning the vacant World Boxing Council super bantamweight title.

Zaragoza stopped Zarate of Tepito, Mexico, in the 10th round of their scheduled 12-round fight Monday night at the Forum.

In a companion fight, Azumah Nelson of Accra, Ghana, won a split, 12-round decision over Azabache Martinez of Guadalajara, Mexico, to claim the vacant WBC super featherweight chamionship.

Zarate, a former WBC bantamweight champion, retired in 1979 after losing his crown to Lupe Pintor, but resumed his career two years ago.

Zaragoza, 29, was the No. 1 contender for the vacant title, while Zarate was ranked No. 2.

"I was expecting Carlos to be more aggressive than he was and not to give me any room to box in," Zaragoza said.

"My manager told me to box, box, box. And the boxing built up a lead which made it easier for me in the later rounds. Carlos seemed to lose his concentration in the ninth round."

Zarate had been 12-1 in his comeback. His only loss came to Jeff Fenech in a WBC super bantamweight title bout in Australia last year. Fenech has moved up to the featherweight division, leaving the super bantamweight title vacant.

Zaragoza improved his record to 33-4. Zarate fell to 59-4.

Zaragoza easily won the first two rounds. The left-hander seemed to confuse Zarate, who had trouble landing solid punches.

Tarpley honored

Dallas Mavericks' forward Roy Tarpley (second from left) is congratulated by teammates before the Mavs-Denver Nuggets game Monday night. Tarpley was named the NBA player of the week after averaging 17.3 points and 16.8 rebounds in four games. Tarpley is known as the "human rebounding machine."

Rangers' Sierra reports to camp

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP)—Texas Rangers' slugger Ruben Sierra has reported to spring training camp but he won't play in any intrasquad games this week or in an exhibition game against St. Louis on Friday, the team said.

"There will be plenty of time for hitting," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine. "Plenty of time for everything. We'll just have to alter his schedule a little, that's all."

"He still probably needs a rest after winter ball."

Sierra, 22, played winter baseball in his home of Puerto Rico for the fourth consecutive year. "He plays all the time. It's crazy. He said he won't play there every year. The one report we got was that he played real hard down there. He ran out ground balls and everything," Valentine said.

Reed eyes challenge to upgrade Nets' program

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, (AP)—Willis Reed did not take the New Jersey Nets head coaching job unaware that the club has problems, lots of problems.

Injuries, lack of leadership, drug problems and three straight losing seasons only highlight the Nets' woes.

But beyond the problems, Willis Reed found something he has been looking for almost 10 years, a return to the NBA head coaching ranks.

"This is going to be a challenge," the 45-year-old Reed said. "But I like coaching. There are only 23 jobs like this in this league and when you get the opportunity for one you have to take it."

The Nets ended a 12-week search for a coach Monday by naming Reed as their third coach this season and giving him the job of turning around a team that has won only 12 of 54 games this season.

The Nets did not disclose the length of Reed's contract, but sources said it was three years.

"I don't know if this is a troubled franchise," said Reed, a Hall of Fame center with the New York Knicks in their heyday in the late 1960s and early 70s. "I think they have problems. However, I don't see them as problems that can't be resolved."

New Jersey is tied with the Los Angeles Clippers for the worst record in the league. The club has lost 240 manpower games due to injuries, and twice in the past three seasons has lost players due to drug problems.

Two years ago, Micheal Ray Richardson was banned from the NBA for violating its drug policy for a third time, and just last week forward Orlando Woolridge, Reed's cousin, admitted he has a drug problem and was suspended while he undergoes rehabilitation.

Reed said his main job will be to evaluate his players the rest of the season.

In taking over, Reed replaces interim coach Bob MacKinnon, who compiled a 10-29 mark after taking over for the fired Dave Wohl in early December. Under Wohl, the club won only two of its first 15 games.

MacKinnon will return to his job as assistant general manager, and Reed said he plans to retain assistant coaches Garry St. Jean and Bob Wenzel for at least the rest of the season.

Reed spoke with the Nets players for about 10 minutes before attending the news conference to officially announce his appointment.

"I think it's good to bring him in now and throw him into the fire," Nets captain Buck Williams said. "This way he can evaluate who can play and who can't. He can get a feel for the players in game situations."

Reed played 10 seasons in the NBA and led the Knicks to league titles in 1969 and 1973. A seven-time All-Star, he was named the Knicks' head coach in 1977 and led to team to the playoffs. He was fired 14 games into the next season after the club went 6-8.

He was a volunteer coach at St. John's for two seasons before becoming the head coach at Creighton for four years, posting a 20-11 record in his final season, 1984-85.

Reed returned to the NBA as an assistant coach with the Atlanta Hawks for two years before going to Sacramento, where he had an escape clause in his contract, allowing him to leave the club to take either an NBA head coaching job or a Division I college post.

"I never doubted I would be back one day as a head coach in this league," Reed said.

Softball meeting scheduled

The City of Pampa Parks and Recreation Department will hold its annual organizational meeting for summer league softball March 7, starting at 7 p.m. in the City Hall's city commission room.

Coaches or managers are urged to attend this meeting to obtain pertinent information concerning the leagues. Also, any players who would like to play, but aren't on a team are welcome to come and organize new teams.

Roster forms, fact sheets and bylaws will be available at the Parks and Recreation Department Office. The information will also be available at the meeting.
