SIDON, Lebanon (AP) - PLO guerrillas encircled a house where two kidnapped Scandinavian U.N. relief workers were believed held by Palestinian gunmen and threatened to use force to free the hostages

Anwar Madi, Sidon Palestine Liberation Organization commander, said Sunday that PLO chief Yasser Arafat had ordered the release of the abducted U.N. Relief and Works Agency employees

"We shall try to gain their freedom with peaceful means. But if this proves ineffective, we shall resort to other means," Madi told reporters in this southern port. "We expect they will be free in 48 hours.

Sources close to Madi said Jan Stening, 44, of Sweden, and William Jorgensen, 58, of Norway, were being held in a house near the Ein el-Hilweh Palestinian refugee camp.

"We have clear orders from Arafat to storm the hideout if the captors fail to free the two captives peacefully," said one source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Stening and Jorgensen were traveling from their base in the southern port of Tyre to Beirut on Friday when their car was intercepted and they were abducted by masked gunmen on Sidon's southern outskirts.

They were the first Scandinavians to be abducted in Lebanon. An agency communique released Saturday said the captors were Palestinians "acting individually without a political motive.

An Arab agency staff member said the kidnappings were related to the dismissal of six Palestinian employees in connection with the uncovering of the theft of agency fuel and medical supplies in Sidon and Tyre.

However, the relief agency, which helps Palestinian refugees in Lebanon, released a statement calling that explanation "inaccurate.

Madi said the kidnappers were "suspicious, unruly elements who do not belong to any organized Palestinian group. They are in a location that is geographically under our control.'

Arafat's mainstream Fatah guerrilla faction of the PLO and the relief agency's security apparatus set up a "joint operations room" at Ein el-Hilweh to oversee the release operation, Madi said.

Members of the joint team later met for three hours Sunday with representatives of various Palestinian guerrilla factions at the home of Mustafa Saad, a leftist Lebanese whose predominantly Sunni Moslem militia has controlled Sidon since the 1975 outbreak of the civil war

Sweden's non-resident ambassador to Lebanon, Ingmar Stjernberg, arrived in Sidon from East Berlin to help in efforts to release the two captives.

Asked if he approves the use of force to liberate the captives, he said: "We have stressed that we would like to see a peaceful solution.'

Twenty-two other foreigners are missing. Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, is the longest held hostage. He was abducted March 16, 1985.

Giorgio Giacomelli, commissioner general of the relief agency, threatened to close the agency's operations in Sidon as a result of the abduction.

The agency cares for 280,000 Palestinian refugees in 12 camps in Lebanon.

Campaign winds up in Iowa caucuses

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) -The 1988 presidential contenders, hoping for an Iowa victory that would propel them from the pack - campaigned through the state today in advance of precinct caucuses that are the first significant step toward the Republican and Democratic nominations.

Gary Hart was up early to thank his supporters against the backdrop of polling which showed him slipping badly into the back of the Democrats' seven-man field. Late polling indicated Richard Gephardt, Paul Simon and Michael Dukakis had the best chances among the Democrats tonight.

Bob Dole, the Republican frontrunner in Iowa, and Democratic long shot Jesse Jackson both planned to work late ---- greeting people as they arrived at two of tonight's 2,487 caucus meetings. Vice President George Bush, in the unaccustomed role of underdog to Dole, was planning to leave Iowa for New Hampshire, site of next week's first presidential primary.

crashes, 21 reported dead

MUELHEIM, West Germany (AP) - A commuter airliner with 21 people aboard crashed during a storm today, and witnesses told police it was on fire before it smashed into the ground. There were no reports of survivors.

"There was a fireball in the air," a police official said, describing eyewitness reports of the crash 10 miles north of Duesseldorf.

It was West Germany's worst plane crash in 17 years, according to the federal Aviation Administration in Braunschweig. In September 1971, 21 people died when an airliner went down near Hamburg

A police spokesman said wreckage was scattered over a wide area.

Federal flight authorities in Frankfurt said the plane was on a flight from Hanover to Duesseldorf airport when it crashed about seven miles short of its destination.

Snow and rain squalls with gusty winds were moving through the region at the time of the crash, officials said.

A spokesman for federal flight control authorities in Frankfurt, Hans-Ulrich Ohl, said the plane crashed at 7:57 a.m. local time.

He said the plane, a twin-engine turboprop FA-4 Metroliner, belonged to the Nuremberg Flight Service. The spokesman said 19 passengers and a crew of two were on board at the time of the crash. "The aircraft just disappeared from our radar screens without warning," the spokesman said.

He said the plane did not crash in a residential area. "As far as I know, there were no injuries on the ground," the spokesman said.

A Nuremberg Flight Service official said the flight crew had not reported any difficulties before the crash.

"This leads us to believe that what occurred was a completely unforeseen circumstances," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

MEXICO CITY (AP) - A strong earthquake shook Mexico City today, causing downtown buildings to sway and creak. There were no immediate reports of injuries or damage.

The 7:52 a.m. temblor lasted for at least 30 seconds, with an intensity of 6.0 on the Richter scale, the National University of Mexico's Tacubaya Seismological Institute reported

The institute said the quake's epicenter was located about 100 miles off the coast of southern Guerrero state, in the Pacific Ocean.

Red Cross and police said they had no immediate reports of casualties or property damage.

Many Mexico City residents, who were riding buses or the subway, or driving to work in the morning rush hour, said they did not feel the quake.

MOBEETIE - Mobeetie High School students will have the opportunity to join in a unique competition that resembles the popular board game Trivial Pursuit ¹⁰. And if they prove astute enough, they could win a scholarship and study trip to Washington, D.C. later this year.

Citizen Bee Competion is, "like Trivial Pursuit ® but it uses facts about American history, the Constitution, geography, current events and Americana," ex-plained Debbie Finsterwald, history and social studies teacher at Mobeetie High.

Citizen Bee is an academic competition that focuses on social studies and progresses through school, regional and state events. Finalists compete for the national title and college scholarships ranging from $3,000 to $10,000. Three Mobeetie students will advance to regional competition. Top regional winners then advance to the state finals on April 16.

Finsterwald said six of the 24 Mobeetie High students have signed up for the competition. Three will be chosen after a written exam taken from the study book, "Close Up USA," to be given Monday. These three will then memorize facts from the 12 chapters in preparation for the regional event.

The regional and state bees will be strictly oral competitions. The national bee combines both written and oral competition.

'We've tried to approach this as a game," Finsterwald said. She explained that she and her students have taken a Trivial Pursuit ® board and exchanged the questions and categories from the study book for those that go with the game. "They're going to learn so much and have fun, too," she said.

After a long year of being wooed by candidates, Iowans were meeting tonight in schools, firehouses and living rooms.

Candidates in both parties were putting a lid on their rhetoric and keeping an eve on the weather.

Snow was expected over much of the state by caucus time. A severe storm was generally seen as helping former TV evangelist Pat Robertson, whose supporters were expected to brave any conditions to cast votes for him in the GOP race.

The caucuses in 2,487 precincts were the first step toward choosing 52 Democratic and 37 Republican national convention delegates.

But delegates weren't the big prize in Iowa. What the candidates were seeking was momentum going into New Hampshire, although that state's primary voters have a history of rejecting Iowa choices

The final week of the Republican campaign was dominated by squabbling between Dole, of Kansas, and Vice President George Bush. And Rep. Jack Kemp of New York accused Robertson supporters of distorting his record on pornography and abortion

The debate was calmer among the Democrats, where Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts appeared most likely to succeed.

Bush planned to await the Iowa results in New Hampshire, whose primary on Feb. 16 is the next big test. It also is a state where polls show he has stronger support.

Dole held a 14-point lead over Bush in Iowa, according to a Des Moines Sunday Register poll. He planned to fly to New Hampshire on Tuesday.

Also awaiting the caucus results in Iowa were Robertson, Kemp and former Gov. Pete du Pont of Delaware. The sixth GOP contender, former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., stopped campaigning in Iowa months ago and is concentrating on New Hampshire.

The survey released Sunday gave Dole the backing of 37 percent of likely Republican caucusgoers; Bush had 23 percent, Robertson 13 percent, Kemp 11, du Pont 7 and Haig 1.

Reagan: Business should aid government in drug battle

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — President Reagan asserted today that businesses should join the federal government's battle against drugs and seek out workers who abuse illegal substances.

Reagan, in an address prepared for delivery to an anti-drug seminar at Duke University, used the Pentagon's drug-testing program as an example for the civilian work force.

"I've heard critics say employers have no business looking for drug abuse in the work place. But when you pin the critics down, too often they seem to be among the handful who still believe that drug abuse is a victimless crime," Reagan said.

The drug user is a victim. His employer is a victim. His fellow employees are victims. The family that depends on his wages are victims. And America, which is only as strong and as competitive as all of us together, Amrica is the victim," Reagan claimed

'It would be hard to find any crime with more victims than drug abuse," Reagan said.

Shakespeare at Lovett Library

By BOB HART Pampa City Manager

Many people feel Shakespeare is the man who wrote plays that are hard to read and harder to understand.

To give Pampans an opportunity to learn more about Shakespeare and to understand the timeless quality of his works is the goal of the "Shakespeare in February'' program at Lovett Memorial Library.

A special exhibit, organized by the Texas Humanities Resource Center, will be on display in the library for the entire month of February

The exhibit highlights the major aspects of the Renaissance world and Shakespeare's life. Of special interest is the reference to religious turmoil of the times and the publication of the King James version of the Bible.

On Tuesday, Oct. 6, 1987 between 2 and 2:15 p.m., a baby was burned to death inside the residence at 607 E. Gordon. It has been determined by investigators that the fire was an arson. Anyone having information re-

Reagan praised those companies that have taken steps to seek out the drug abuser, saying that such persons were grateful for the help they received once they were discovered.

"When it's all over, and drug users look back on the wreckage of their careers and their lives ... they wish someone had discovered their habit earlier and given them help," Reagan said.

"You are showing how compassion and cam-paigns for a drug-free work place go hand-inhand," Reagan said.

A study last year by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce showed that in 1983, only 3 percent of Fortune 500 companies were administering drug testing of some kind. By 1986, that had skyrocketed to one-third of those companies.

Reagan also praised the Pentagon's effort at ending drug abuse.

Gorbachev says Soviets want to start Afghan pullout on May 15

MOSCOW (AP) - Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said today the Kremlin has set May 15 as the date to begin pulling its troops out of Afghanistan if U.N.-sponsored talks on the conflict result in a settlement.

Gorbachev said the withdrawal would be completed within 10 months. He said the date for beginning the pullout was based on the assumption that negotiations in Geneva between Afghanistan and Pakistan will result in an agreement no later than March 15.

The Communist Party general secretary spoke in a statement carried by the official Soviet news agency Tass

It was the first mention by the Soviet leader of a specific date for the withdrawal of the estimated 115,000 Soviet troops now in Afghanistan helping the Marxist government battle a Moslem insurgency

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said in Kabul last month that the Soviet Union hoped to end its involvement in Afghanistan this year.

The Kremlin sent troops and military hardware into Afghanistan in December 1979, and presided over the replacement of one Marxist ruler by another. The intervention soured Kremlin relations with many Moslem and Third World countries, and doomed detente between the superpowers.

U.N.-brokered talks between Afghanistan aad Pakistan, which stands in for the guerrillas, have made progress, but have been stuck on developing a timetable for the Soviet withdrawal.

Gorbachev's remarks indicated the Soviets were offering a timetable they hope will bring about a rapid settlement at the negotiations, which resume this month.

"Seeking to facilitate a speedy and successful conclusion of the Geneva talks between Afghanistan and Pakistan, the government of the U.S.S.R. and the Republic of Afghanistan have agreed to set a specific date for beginning the withdrawal of Soviet troops - May 15, 1988 - and to complete their withdrawal within 10 months," Gorbachev said today.

Ex-wife may have saved other family members

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) - A gunman's ex-wife, who wrestled a pistol away from him after he killed three people and just before he turned another revolver on himself, may have saved the lives of 10 people in the home, police say

Police said Thomas Schrader, 33, a former Dallas resident who died Sunday morning of the gunshot wound he inflicted upon himself Saturday night, killed his girlfriend, his father and his older brother before his ex-wife, Kathy Schrader, managed to get a gun away from him.

Killed were Schrader's father, William Schrader, 66; his brother, Steven Schrader, 38; and his girlfriend, Celine Catalan, 29, of Mesquite, Texas.

Autopsies were being performed today on the four bodies.

Officer Michael J. McCormick of the Hot Springs Police Department said Sunday that police think Schrader, who they believe was being treated for mental problems, was trying to shoot everyone in the house.

Family and friends were gathered at the home of William and Betty Schrader, where Thomas Schrader had lived for about a year, for the couple's wedding anniversary and a birthday party for the daughter of Thomas Schrader and Kathy Schrader.

When the shooting started, McCormick said, six children in the house "locked themselves in a bathroom and other individuals hid in closets." He said Kathy Schrader got a gun from her ex-husband while he was reloading it, at which time he took another gun and shot himself.

"It appears that one of the female members of the family wrestled with the person doing the shooting and enabled the other victims, or the other potential victims, to escape," Detective Gary Miller of the Hot Springs Police said shortly after the shootings.

"I knew this was going to happen," Schrader's ex-wife, Kathy, told a reporter for the Hot Springs Sentinel-Record. "I put my finger on the trigger so he couldn't shoot anymore."

The first officer to arrive at the frame home near the Oaklawn Park horseracing track heard the shot that killed Thomas Schrader, McCormick said.

Garland County Coroner William Mashburn said medications for Thomas Schrader were found at the home which would "indicate behavorial or mental disturbance ... There is an indication that he had been under a psychiatrist's care for some time."

'We haven't determined exactly whether it was a random shooting or if the person doing the shooting had selected specific victims," Miller said. Thomas Schrader's mother said,

"We had had dinner and birthday cake and I was clearing off the table when I heard what sounded like firecrackers."

"There was no discord whatsoever during the entire day," Mashburn said. "This person totally lost control of himself.'

A neighbor and long-time family friend who asked not to be identified said she talked to Betty Schrader shortly after the shooting.

"The oldest brother began walking to the door when Tommy shot him," the neighbor said. "Then he shot his father and girlfriend. I don't know which first. His ex-wife grabbed for his gun and that's when he shot himself in the mouth.

Police said a .357 Magnum revolver and a .22-caliber revolver were used in the shootings, and that a third gun may have been used

The elder Schrader owned a men's clothing store in Hot Springs and his son Steven worked there, McCormick said. McCormick said Thomas Schrader was unemployed.

Grace Mooney, a neighbor, said she noticed a change in Thomas Schrader's behavior about 18 months ago.

"There's been something wrong with Tommy for a while,' she said. "He started staying in his front bedroom with the drapes closed all the time. He never came out."

Schrader had moved back to his parents' house about 16 months ago after failing in a business venture selling aloe vera products in Dallas, family members said.

"I've been living here for 35 years," said Mrs. James Spargo, a neighbor. 'My children grew up with their children. The first time I'd ever met Tommy, he had hit my daughter with a rock. But, he was really very sweet. He was never a problem. I'm heartbroken."

The killings were the third mass slaying involving an Arkansas family in three months.

On Nov. 16, John L. Markle, an economist fired from his job at Stephens Inc., killed his wife and their two children before committing suicide at the family's Little Rock home. Markle was the son of Academy Award-winning actress Mercedes McCambridge.

On Dec. 28, R. Gene Simmons was arrested for the murders of two Russellville people and police, searching his home near Dover, found the bodies of 14 family members Simmons is accused of killing just before Christmas. Simmons has been charged in the cases and is undergoing a psychiatric examination.

Typhoid vaccine to treat used

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — A physician in this Dallas suburb who is using typhoid fever vaccine to treat AIDS patients says the treatment appears to be helping.

But Dr. Terry Pulse said the experimtal treatment is not a cure.

"I consider it research," Pulse said. "It's still new but I'm willing to trailblaze.'

The idea originated 30 years ago as a treatment to halt the growth of some cancer tumors. A patent for the use of the vaccine in AIDS treatment is held by Salvatore Catapano, a New York research technologist.

Pulse, a family practitioner who said he treats about 500 patients with AIDS-related illnesses, said he obtained a license for the drug from Catapano, whose patent allows him to receive a royalty every time the drug is used for treatment of AIDS.

Pulse is treating five AIDS victims with the vaccine

"I studied a week with Catapano before I decided to do it," Pulse told the Austin American-Statesman. "The patent says it is for the remission of AIDS.' But the jury is still out on a cure. Patients also need their doctor's approval before I will give them the typhoid vaccine.

Catapano's use of the vaccine as a treatment for AIDS recently was the subject of an Atlantic Monthly magazine story. It said the 73-year-old researcher is one of several champions of a new and controversial theory that AIDS really is an extreme form of syphillis.

Stephen, the psuedonym of a gay Austin resident who asked to remain anonymous, has had AIDS for 13 months. He began the typhoid vaccine treatments with Pulse in early January.

Kaposi's tumors, rare except in those with damaged immune systems, form on blood capillaries inside and outside the body. They are a principal killer of those with acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"All three of us have seen a change," Stephen said. "I'm not saying we're cured, but it's very encouraging. I have about 300 lesions. Now, some really large ones on my legs are crusting over and shrinking."

Stephen said he also believes the vaccine is stimulating his immune system because he has been having allergic reactions to cedar fever. Cedar pollen normally fills the air in Central Texas in winter months, but without a reasonably healthy immune system, the HOUSTON (AP) — The stabbing death of two elderly sisters has become another chapter of terror for residents of a near north side neighborhood where seven other elderly women also have been slain.

"It was terrible," said Henry Lowery, who lived next door, describing the scene inside the house

"Whoever it was, was looking for something," Lowery said. "They (victims) kept a little money in the house, and that may be

The other woman was found in bed in a back bedroom, and Lowery said her throat appeared to have been slashed.

He said her hands indicated she died while trying to protect herself.

Investigators said both women were found fully clothed, discounting a sexual assault as a possible motive. Robbery was considered a possibility.

Lowery said drawers had been pulled out, closets had been gone through and items were strewn about the house as if someone had been searching for something.

Chavez, at a convention of the Texas UFW on Sunday, said the organization will continue to fight a provision of the new immigration law under which agricultural employers may bring in foreign workers if they can certify a labor shortage.

"There's never been a shortage of farm labor," Chavez said. "There's more workers than jobs, always has been. That's the way agribusiness wants it, to keep more workers than jobs so that they can keep competing with one another so they can keep the wages and the conditions down."

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Chastity McNiel's mother doesn't mind when the three-year-old wants peanut butter and jelly - all mashed up for breakfast. Because of a rare skin disorder, it's one of the few things she can swallow.

Webs of scar tissue cover Chastity's knees with purplish splotches. Her fingers lack fingernails, and her hands have the raw red look of recovering burn wounds.

"You have to handle her very delicately," her mother, Carol McNiel, 28, said recently in their area home.

The slightest tap can trigger rapidly spreading blisters and cause skin to just fall off because of a rare skin disorder.

Chastity is among five children in South Texas with the rare skin disorder, epidermolysis bulosa, which afflicts 50,000 Americans.

Until recent years, it caused death by infection or malnutrition by age 5 or 6. Now, the children live until early adulthood, and families hope for further increases in expected life span.

The disease is triggered by an inherited defect that causes the body to skimp on making anchoring fibrils for the skin. Fibrils are like tough stitches that hold the skin together. Without them, skin falls apart.

"When she was born and they were cleaning her feet, the skin came off," Mrs. McNiel told the San Antonio Light. "In a matter of hours, she was a total sore.

Nutrition also is a major problem because the inner lining of her esophagus, the tube that allows food to go from the mouth to the stomach, also peels away and becomes clogged with scar tissue.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

President speaks in plain language

Commentators have lately noticed some impairment in Ronald Reagan's ratiocinative faculties. Such a decay is not uncommon in a man of 76. But a UCI professor of psychiatry and human behavior says Reagan was, well, losing it as early as 1980.

Working with former graduate assistants Regina Uliana and Ronda Gilbert, Prof. Dr. Louis Gottschalk looked at the 1980 and 1984 debates between Reagan and his opponents, Jimmy Carter and Wal-ter Mondale. According to the report, the shrinks "logged miscues by Reagan and his opponents, such as incomplete sentences, repetition of phrases, and sudden halts in a train of thought.

Prof. Dr. Gottschalk said, "The results of our analysis indicate that ... Reagan had significantly higher levels of cognitive impairment than former President Jimmy Carter or former Vice President Walter Mondale.

Harumph! (That's an incomplete sentence the shrinks' metholodogy would flag as an indication of our own declining mental faculties.)

It is true that Reagan has declined abilities lately. One indication is that he has reneged on his 1980 pledge to abolish the worthless Department of Education, which funnels your hard-earned tax dollars to UCI so it can bankroll prehensile studies like that of Prof. Dr. Gottschalk.

But even so, the shrinks' methodology is preposterous. How can you distill a man's words into a digital code? And why is it that, in the estimation even of Reagan's opponents, the 1984 campaigns confirmed his reputation as the Great Communica- while Jimmy and Fritz were roundly retor garded as jabbering bores?

Prof. Dr. Gottschalk said, "Presidents and other government officials usually operate in controlled situations, so their verbal messages are fairly well structured. Television debates, on the other hand, open them to closer scrutiny and require them to perform extemporaneously, so it is an opportunity to objectively assess how their intellectual capacity reacts to stress."

Politicians don't enjoy media

WASHINGTON — Humbly, and with great diffidence, as becomes all of us inkstained wretches of the press, let me revive a maxim of politics that I formed as a young editor nearly 40 years ago: Every politician benefits by bashing the press

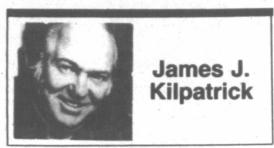

Accordingly, it has to be said that George Bush came out the winner in his Monday night slugging match with Dan Rather of CBS. Three weeks from now, all that will be remembered of the incident is that Bush stood up to "that bastard" and refused to be intimidated by an anchorman. Few persons will recall what the fight was about.

For the record, the fight was about what Bush knew of the Iran-Contra affair and what he had to say about the operation at the time. That transcendent issue is of overwhelming importance to precisely 22 people in the whole United States. Nineteen of them are Dan Rather liberals in the media; the other three are professional Reagan-haters with time hanging heavy on their hands.

Rather came off badly. The interview had been billed as a "political profile," and Bush had every reason to believe that he would have a chance to strut his stuff on a variety of issues. His bellicose host was interested in the transcendant issue only.

Instead of giving up when it became clear that Bush was a dry hole, Rather kept drilling. He was, as he said, "persistent," but beyond a certain point a persistent reporter becomes an arrogant bully. Nobody loves a bully.

Sad to say, that is the role in which the press often is perceived. It isn't fair that we who are so lovable should be so widely unloved, but who ever said life is fair? I myself am well known to spoke to the Republican National Convention of can do better.

be a pussycat, incapable of saying an unkind word about anyone, but if you will believe it, I once was attacked in the Virginia General Assembly twice on the same day.

I had referred editorially to the delegate from York County as a nincompoop, or some such term of affection, and I had suggested that the senator from Elk Garden was an ignoramus, and for some reason they both took offense. Both statesmen rose to the floor on points of personal privilege, They were orators of considerable talent; they had capacious lungs and a highly receptive audience, and back home their constituents ate it up.

So it goes. From time to time in the history of American journalism, editors hae come along who were truly loved. I doubt that any Kansas politician ever made a nickel by attacking William Allen White of Emporia. My predecessor at the Richmond News Leader was Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman. He stood atop an Olympus of respect while Virginia politicos scrambled about the slopes of contumely down below.

Yet the general rule almost always applies. I was in the Cow Palace of San Francisco on that memorable day when Dwight Eisenhower have their job to do. We have ours. And all of us 1964. When he criticized moderate Republicans. for fomenting factionalism, the crowd cheered loudly. Then he said: "But let us particularly scorn the divisive efforts of those outside our family, including sensation-seeking columnists and commentators, because, my friends, I assure you that these are people who couldn't care less about the good of the party." The hall responded with a terrifying roar. So must the lions have greeted the Christians in the Colosseum of Rome. We huddled in the press gallery and feared for our lives.

Spiro Agnew, vice president under Nixon, contrived his own downfall, but when he denounced the press as a bunch of nattering nabobs out to run the country, his popularity soared. John F. Kennedy made points by heaving the New York Herald Tribune out of the White House. Harry Truman won the hearts of his countrymen by threatening bodily harm to a music critic who unkindly reviewed daughter Margaret's recital.

At least in the South, and I expect it is true everywhere, politicians have thrived by bashing the press. In North Carolina, when reason and virtue failed, it was the immemorial custom to assail The Raleigh News & Observer. In Georgia, a whole generation of yahoo politicians grew up to attack Ralph Magill of the Atlanta Constitution. George Wallace of Alabama never missed a chance to denounce them lyin' Montgomery papers. We are fair game.

George Bush's macho performance will help him dispel the wimp image that has haunted him. Perhaps Rather's pugnacity will remind the rest of us to mind our manners. The pols

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Feb. 8, the 39th day of 1988. There are 327 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Feb. 8, 1587, Mary, Queen of Scots was beheaded at Fotheringhay Castle in England after she was implicated in a plot to murder her cousin, Queen Elizabeth

On this date:

In 1693, a charter was granted for the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va.

In 1837, for the only time in history, the U.S. Senate chose the vice president of the United States. Richard Mentor Johnson was selected after no candidate received a majority of electoral votes.

In 1904, the Russo-Japanese War began as Japan besieged Port Arthur in Manchuria.

In 1910, the Boy Scouts of America was incorporated. In 1915, D.W. Griffith's film,

The Birth of a Nation, premiered

Hogwash. (Another incomplete sentence! The editorialist's mental faculties decline further!)

It's true that debates are a better gauge of a pol's language than stilted official speeches. But the real conclusion is different from that to which Prof. Dr. Gottschalk comes.

Reagan won the 1980 and 1984 debates and elections because he spoke plain sense to the American people. Simple phrases. Common words. Plain stuff. Broken sentences. So what? That's how normal people speak. And Reagan made good use of repetition, an old rhetorical device and not at all a sign of senility, with his famous line to Jimmy: "There you go again.

In contrast, Carter and Mondale spoke more in the highfalutin' lingo our professors and other philosophasters love. Jimmy and Fritz's sonorous sophistries racked up large election victories in the troughs of academe. But the plain people like Reagan's plain speech, and placed him in the Oval Office.

Alas, Reagan's acts have not lived up to his feisty rhetoric. But give the man his due.

Only Bush's opponents care

This is about news. It is not about Dan Rather. He has made plain his partisan position. This is about those who seek to camouflage their bias with a fig leaf of "objectivity.

Once, Civil War Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman was asked by a fellow general, James McPherson, "Sherman, why is it that our Ohio papers, especially those of Cincinnati, continue their abuse of Grant and you and me - all of us natives of Ohio? Surely we are doing our very best."

Gen. Sherman replied, "I don't know, except that it is easier for editors and reporters to fight battles in their safe offices in the North rather than among the rocks, ravines and rivers of the South.

"In peace," Gen. Sherman wrote, "the press is generally hostile to whomsoever is prominent and positive. Let any man rise above the common level and the cry goes forth, crucify him! Crucify him!

'Nonetheless, I honestly believe the people of the United States to be a thinking people and that the future of our beloved land is safe in the custody of its good, industrious citizens.

Those words were written in 1891, almost a hundred years ago.

What this reaffirms is that there is nothing new about media criticism and the resentment of those it criticizes

What's different now — with the centralization of mass media in Manhattan, with so much influence in the hands of so few — is that we are likely to become a "media democracy.

That is not what our founders intended, and I apply CPR to a dead issue. don't think that's what most Americans want.

I also believe, with Gen. Sherman, that the American majority has a gut instinct about things, is as likely to be turned off as to be turned on by what some commentator thinks it should think

Before the 1980 elections our nation's political reporters were almost unanimously opposed to President Reagan. The voters felt differently twice

the White House

Let's examine the present brouhaha:

When our government contemplated trading arms to Iran, was Vice President George Bush present?

What, if any, advice did Bush give the President about the Iran-Contra deal?

Was it arms for hostages or was it an overture to moderate elements in Tehran?

This was the focus of Dan Rather's questioning

This is the focus of most of those who are campaigning against Bush. Gary Hart promises to "pound away at ths subject" from now until Election Day!

No one seems to realize they are seeking to

It was an abortive effort to free hostages. We did try something, and it didn't work. As for the timing and nuances of the negotiation, the American public could not care less. If this is all Bush's opponents have going for them, they don't have enough.

California says 'enough' to big growth

By ROBERT WALTERS

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (NEA) -When city officials here recently surveyed residents about their community concerns, the need for orderly and restrained growth ranked far ahead of budget problems, fears about crime and other issues.

In her acceptance speech, the new mayor of nearby Palm Desert, Jean Benson, cited "controlled and quality growth" as one of her top goals. In neighboring Desert Hot Springs, the city council has lifted its ninemonth moratorium constructions of multi-family residences but has adopted a new plan that sharply limits the future locations of apartment

Uncontrolled growth long has been a matter of widespread concern in Northern California, especially in the San Francisco Bay area. But here in the Coachella Valley and in the Los Angeles basin, about 100 miles to the west, as well as elsewhere in Southern California, unfettered growth has been an inviolate concept - until recently.

Now, Southern Californians who earlier dismissed their neighbors to the north as environmental zealots if not eco-freaks have belatedly recognized the perils of unrestrained expansion and have moved decisively to deal with the problem.

Los Angeles, which congratulated itself when it passed Chicago to become the nation's second most populous city, now finds itself burdened with overflowing sewers, overcrowded schools and overpriced housing.

The turning point for the city came in the November 1986 election, when 71 percent of the voters endorsed a ballot proposition that cut in half the allowable density of future commercial and industrial construction on 85 percent of all municipal land.

Similarly drastic action is being taken in suburbs throughout the region. Residents of San Gabriel just voted by a margin of almost 5-1 to impose a year-long moratorium on all commercial and multi-family residential development.

In Orange and San Diego counties, where the population has soared in recent decades, residents of San Clemente, Oceanside, Carlsbad and other communities have voted to sharply reduce the number of new homes that can be built annually

Meanwhile, controls on growth are being implemented at an accelerating pace in Northern California, where residents long ago learned that prosperity driven by development can carry a prohibitively high price tag.

San Francisco's voters have approved the country's strictest growth control measures, restraining development both downtown and in the city's neighborhoods.

The restrictive new building curbs have been criticized by architects, urban planners and business leaders who argue that they could seriously harm the city's economy.

The controversial regulations prohibit construction of any new building that would cast a shadow on any city park or public square for more than an hour after sunrise or before sunset.

It addition, they establish a 475,000square-foot annual ceiling on new office construction in the city and ban any future building that would increase neighborhood traffic or alter neighborhood character

In Alameda, Sonoma, Solano, Santa Cruz and other counties near San Francisco, more than two-thirds of the growth-restriction measures submitted to the voters in the past decade were approved.

Residents of Walnut Creek, Concord, Sausalito, Hayward, Corte Madera, Tiburon and other Northern California communities have voted in recent years to impose development moratoria, limit high-rise construction, preserve open space and otherwise restrict growth.

San Francisco may have overreacted somewhat to the threat of uncontrolled expansion, but a consensus has emerged in trend-setting California that controls are necessary to preserve a reasonable quality of life.

Toxic waste: Reduce it, don't just move it

WASHINGTON (AP) - While American industry and government have been simply moving toxic waste problems from one place to another, Europe has been reducing the threat at its source, researchers say, Europeans have been "reconceiving the hazardous waste challenge as one of chemical engineering rather than one of dirt moving," say Bruce W. Piasecki and Gary A. Davis.

The wastes in question are not ordinary garbage, but the poisonous chemicals and metals produced by industry.

Though European waste handling approaches differ, they all feature greater government involvement in regulating industrial processes, Davis and Piasecki say in a new book: "America's Future in Toxic Waste Management: Lessons from Europe."

The authors briefed congressional staffs last week on their conclusions, which were distilled from four years of study

They say that because of a scarcity of land and high dependence on groundwater for drinking, European countries were skeptical of landfills far earlier than U.S. authorities.

It was not until 1984 that Congress moved to restrict landfill waste disposal in the United States. Those restrictions still are being put into place by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Piasecki and Davis contrast this slow-moving approach to steps taken by Europeans.

The West German state of Hesse, for example, recently forced a chemical plant discharging hydrochloric acid into the Main River to institute an acid recovery process.

The authors devoted particular attention to contrasting approaches used in West Germany. In Hesse and sister state Bavaria, government-owned or joint government-industry companies have a legal monopoly on the handling of hazardous waste.

In comparison, companies in North Rhine-Westphalia are under no obligation to use the waste management company established by the regional environmental protection organization. As a result, a North Rhine-Westphalia hazardous waste incinerator has been a "near failure" that needs heavy subsidies to keep going, the authors say.

Sweden and Finland are following Denmark with government companies to handle hazardous waste, the book says. A French goverment agency, meanwhile, makes grants to private waste companies.

Public entities have taken large ownership positions in waste handling facilities in Austria and the Netherlands.

For the United States, the book advocates creation of "waste public utilities" on the model of electric and gas utilities, with monopoly territories and rates that guarantee a reasonable return on investment. Tightening landfill regulations will "create a market for alternatives," the authors note.

Arizona is building a state-sponsored, privately operated plant, but without the guaranteed monopoly that a public utility has, they say.

Other recommendations include greater use of mobile treatment facilities, including mobile incinerators, without the need for a new permit at each site. "This is the wave of the future," Davis said.

The EPA spends only about $1 million a year on programs to reduce the generation of industrial waste, while France and the Netherlands have made 'source reduction" a key part of economic policy, the authors report.

Despite considerable advantages, however, the European systems are far from fool-proof, the authors say. West German officials report, for example, the existence of "a lucrative waste traffic to East Germany and other countries.

Post buyer says ailing tabloid 'close to the edge'

NEW YORK (AP) - A realestate developer who's agreed to purchase the New York Post from media mogul Rupert Murdoch says the daily is "close to the edge," and workers will have to take large cuts to keep it afloat.

"It is clear that both management and labor will have to make compromises," Peter S. Kalikow said Sunday in a statement announcing the sale. "We will also have to reach an unprecedented level of cooperation between these two group's to ensure that the New York Post continues to run.

Kalikow, 44, will pay $37 mil-lion for the tabloid and its assets, including valuable waterfront property it occupies in lower Manhattan, said Post spokesman Howard J. Rubenstein.

The sale depends, however, on obtaining significant reductions from the 1,200 employees, Kalikow and Murdoch said.

Kalikow is president of H.J. Kalikow & Co., a real-estate concern, and owns about a dozen buildings in Manhattan. His fortune is estimated at $500 million. He has no previous publishing experience

Murdoch bought the Post in 1976 for about $31 million. The paper soon acquired a reputation for racy headlines. But it never attracted enough advertising to become profitable and its estimated daily circulation has fallen from 960,000 to 500,000.

Acting governor of Arizona prepares to take charge

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - Acting Gov. Rose Mofford moved to smooth her succession of Gov. Evan Mecham by consulting former Arizona governors, and two acts of vandalism against the impeached chief executive added to his woes

Investigators believe the son of an employee of Mecham's auto dealership fired a shotgun at the Republican governor's suburban Glendale home early Sunday and, hours later, went on a destructive rampage through Mecham Pontiac.

Mecham's impeachment, spoke with Mecham by telephone on Sunday and planned to meet today with four former Arizona governors: Paul Fannin, Raul Castro, Jack Williams and Sam Goddard.

Once she receives official notification of Mecham's impeachment, she plans to meet with the governor to discuss the transition, Ms. Mofford said.

Mrs. Mofford said she talked with Mecham only briefly, and that he had not received official notification either.

Noriega: Poindexter told him U.S. planned invasion of Nicaragua

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States had planned more than two years ago to invade Nicaragua, and had sought Panama's cooperation for the assault, says embattled Panamanian leader Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Noriega, appearing on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" program Sunday, said former National Security Adviser John Poindexter told Panamanian officials of the planned U.S. invasion

Noriega, who faces U.S. drug trafficking charges, also said Poindexter told him the United States wanted to use Panama as a training ground for Contra rebels trying to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

In another development, The Washington Times reported in today's editions that the Reagan administration currently is largely uninformed about events in Panama because of an intelligence agreement with the Panamanian strongman.

Noriega told "60 Minutes" that Poindexter told him in a Dec. 17, 1985, meeting that the United States wanted Panama's cooperation in the invasion.

'They were going to invade Nicaragua, and the only reason they hadn't done it was because Panama was in the way, and that all they wanted was Panama to get out of the way and allow them to continue with their plans," he said, speaking through a translator.

Capt. Moises Cortizo, a Panamanian West Point gradupart in the invasion.

Noriega, interviewed Thursday in his office, said he turned down both the invasion and training proposals.

Noriega mentioned the meeting with Poindexter in a speech Friday in Panama City. He said then that Poindexter had asked for unspecified cooperation in Central America, and that when he refused Poindexter told him to 'expect the consequences.'

"60 Minutes" said the National Security Council had no comment on the allegations.

White House spokesman Mark Weinberg told The Associated Press that there would be no comment on Noriega's remarks.

Noriega also said he believed his indictment on drug charges stems from his opposition to changes in the Panama Canal agreement, which calls for the removal of U.S. troops from the Canal Zone by the year 2000.

Frank Rubino, one of three Miami attorneys retained by Noriega, said Sunday at a news conference in Miami that there was little chance the Panamanian leader would travel to Miami to face the drug trafficking charges

The Panamanian constitution prohibits extradition of its nationals.

According to the Washington Times report, the CIA obtained permission to use Panama for a regional listening post in exchange for allowing Noriega to appoint his own military liaisons with the U.S. spy agency.

pany, News America, were to meet today with union leaders to offer a cost-cutting proposal. The unions, which recently agreed to concessions, are being asked to renegotiate.

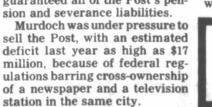

Kalikow called the Post, founded in 1801 by Alexander Hamilton, an "irreplaceable resource" for the city and said he is willing to "take very considerable financial risk" to keep it afloat.

But he said "we also need to recognize that this newspaper is close to the edge.

In a statement, Murdoch said he is selling the Post "with very much regret and because I believe it is best both for the future of the newspaper and for the security of our work force and their families."

Murdoch said that Kalikow has guaranteed all of the Post's pension and severance liabilities.

Vernon B. Jordan, 21, was arrested soon after. Police said he likely acted alone during the alleged attacks and "was not politically motivated in any way," said Glendale police Lt. Mike Christy.

"We don't know if he was drinking or has been on drugs, but we can say only that he is not always lucid," Christy said.

Mecham, 63, reached by telephone, said he and his wife, Florence, heard the shotgun blast just after midnight. He said Mrs. Mecham went outside to check but saw nothing.

Mecham said he couldn't imagine a motive for the vandalism. "This world has turned so crazy, I don't know why anyone does anything," he said.

In the destruction at Mecham Pontiac, 22 cars and three buildings were damaged, said Glendale police spokesman Marshall Downen. Most of the damage was broken glass, he said.

The House today was to consider as many as 20 specific charges against Mecham, who was impeached Friday on a 46-14 House vote. The Senate plans to organize itself as an impeachment court Thursday, said Majority Leader Bob Usdane.

Mrs. Mofford might address the Legislature on Tuesday, said spokeswoman Athia Hardt.

Mecham's Senate trial on the impeachment articles is expected to begin Feb. 22. Mecham also faces a recall election May 17 and a criminal trial in early April on charges of illegally concealing a $350,000 campaign loan, one of three accusations that led to his impeachment.

The impeachment articles break down the three main allegations against Mecham: that he concealed the $350,000 loan, misused $80,000 from the governor's protocol fund by loaning it to his auto dealership and tried to thwart an investigation of an alleged death threat by a state official.

Mecham, who has been in office slightly more than a year, also has come under fire for rescinding the state's Martin Luther King holiday and for comments that have offended blacks, homosexuals, Jews, women and Japanese.

Downen said the younger Jordan was charged with three counts of burglary and one count each of criminal trespass, criminal damage and reckless endangerment

SHOOTING PAINS FOR EXAMPLE: If you're a victim of sciatica, you 简 know what "shooting pains" are 97 all about. The sometimes excrutiating pain of sciatica frequently affects the hip, thigh and back of the leg. The ankle and foot are sometimes affected, too. But that's not where the problem is. The sciatic nerve, the largest nerve in the body, extends from the lower spine to the back of the thigh and knee. Then it divides. One nerve goes down the front of Dr. Louis Haydon the lower leg, and other goes It's the inflammation of the sciatic nerve that causes the pain. This can be triggered by an irritated nerve root. What causes the irritation? The cause may be traced to a misalignment of the spinal column that's putting abnormal pressure on the roots of the sciatic nerves as they pass between the vertebrae. Merlin Rose Through x-rays and other procedures the doctor of chiropractic can locate the misaligned vertebrae. Using a gentle adjustment, he can align it properly again to help eliminate the cause and the pain.

World critical' of Waldheim Panel report called 'very VIENNA, Austria (AP) - The international commission probing Kurt Waldheim's alleged links to Nazi war crimes has drawn up a lengthy report that is highly critical of the Austrian president, the panel's chief said.

'The report is very critical," Swiss historian Hans Rudolf Kurz, the panel's chairman, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Sunday.

Government sources, contacted by the AP, also said the report would be strongly critical of the former U.N. secretary-general.

"These things are never especially pleasant," Kurz said, when asked about the meeting he scheduled with Wal-

Funeral of Arab teen turns into violent protest

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli soldiers beat to death a 15-yearold Palestinian in the Gaza Strip and his burial today turned into a violent protest in which troops shot and wounded four Arabs, U.N. and Arab reports said.

The Palestine Press Service said a second Palestinian died after he was shot in the head today near the West Bank city of Nablus. The Arab-run agency said the circumstances of the shooting were not clear. The army said it was investigating.

The army also confirmed that an Arab teen-ager had died but said it was investigating the circumstances. Army radio said the military spoke with army units in Gaza and found no evidence the Arab had been beaten by soldiers.

On Sunday, three Palestinians were killed in one of the bloodiest days in two months of violence that have occurred in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Fighting broke out in the West Bank after rumors spread that Jewish settlers were planning attacks on Palestinians there.

Forty-eight Palestinians have been killed by Israelis since violence broke out in the occupied lands Dec. 8, according to U.N. count. The two deaths today were not included in that total.

In Gaza today, the body of 15year-old Iyad Mohammed Aql was found with a beaten head near his home in the Bureij refugee camp, said a senior United Nations official in Gaza City, an Arab reporter there and the Arab dheim today to review the panel's conclusions

Allegations about Waldheim's role in Adolf Hitler's army have effectively led to his exclusion from the United States, and prompted bitter criticism from Jewish groups and others at home and abroad

Waldheim, 69, has consistently denied allegations that surfaced in 1986 that he was involved in Nazi atrocities while serving as an officer in the Balkans during World War II. He apparently had hoped the six-member panel would absolve him after starting its research last September.

Waldheim has said he will not consider the commission's conclusions binding, but the panel is not expected to de-liver a final judgment on whether the president should stay in office.

The commission report came despite continued uncertainty over the purported discovery of a telegram incriminating Waldheim in the deportation of civilians in Yugoslavia.

Yugoslavia placed Waldheim on a list of suspected war criminals and asked for his extradition from Austria in 1947, but it never pursued the extradition request and never publicly explained why.

A document published Feb. 1 by West Germany's Der Spiegel news magazine purports to show that Waldheim ordered the deportation of more than 4,000 civilians to two prison camps outside Belgrade in 1942.

However, the original of the document has not been found, and the Yugoslav historian who says he discovered it failed to produce the paper during a program Sunday night on Belgrade television.

Kurz told the AP he gave details of the report Sunday to Deputy Chancellor Alois Mock, whose conservative People's Party strongly backs Waldheim. Mock then held talks with Socialist Chancellor Franz Vranitzky.

In its early editions today, the Kronen Zeitung tabloid said the government was seeking to "bring an end to the Waldheim case with decorum." The paper, a Waldheim supporter, did not specify what steps, if any, were in the works. The document is to be made public

Tuesday. The commission members come from the United States, Israel, Britain and West Gemany, in addition to the Swiss and Belgian members.

U.S. Justice Department officials have criticized the commission's work and expressed doubt the report will contain all the evidence available on Waldheim's activities as a soldier in Hitler's army during the war.

Waldheim has steadfastly denied any wrongdoing since his Balkans service was first disclosed in 1986.

Top opposition leader steps down suddenly

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - In a surprise announcement, Kim Young-sam said today he was resigning as president of the main opposition party to help reunite the opposition and atone for his defeat in the presidential election.

Kim, head of the Reunification Democratic Party, told reporters he hoped his resignation would restore Koreans' faith in the opposition.

He said the opposition must reunite if it wants to avoid a shattering defeat in upcoming legislative elections.

"For a speedy reunification of the opposition bloc, I declare my resignation as the president of the RPD," he told a news conference.

"I hope my decision today will serve to inspire new hope and courage in the people who are in despair," he added.

The 60-year-old Kim Youngsam has been a major figure in Korean politics since the 1960s. He helped lead opposition against the authoritarian rule of the late President Park Chung-hee and President Chun Doo-hwan.

There had been no earlier indication that Kim would resign and the decision came as a surprise to his party. Shocked senior party officials pleaded with Kim to reverse his decision at the press conference and later at his home.

Kim told the news conference he had to step down as head of the opposition party because internal divisions threatened to destroy the opposition.

The Reunification Democratic

Party said senior Vice President Kim Myung-yoon was appointed acting president. But there was no indication of who might succeed Kim Young-sam since the party has no other prominent leaders.

Kim Young-sam apologized to party leaders for not telling them in advance about his decision. He said he would remain in the party as a member

Kim and rival opposition leader Kim Dae-jung were defeated by governing party candidate Roh Tae-woo in the Dec. 16 presidential election after the two Kims split the opposition vote. Roh won with 36.6 percent of the vote, while Kim Young-sam had 28 percent and Kim Dae-jung 27 percent.

Both Kims were strongly criticized by supporters for splitting the opposition and ensuring a government victory.

Opposition charges that the government used massive fraud to win were rejected by most Koreans, who instead blamed the two Kims

Kim Dae-jung and his supporters broke away from the Reunification Democratic Party to form the Party for Peace and Democracy and Kim Dae-jung ran for president after he and Kim Young-sam failed to agree on a single candidacy.

Both leaders have been fighting to retain their positions since the election defeat. Kim Youngsam's resignation was a surprise because his party reaffirmed his leadership last month and he vowed to continue in politics.

Aql's cousin, 18-year-old Abdulla Ali Aql, also was beaten and suffered two broken arms, said the U.N. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Aql was buried today and the ceremony turned into a demonstration that spread to the neighboring Nuseirat refugee camp, the reporter said.

Four Arabs were wounded by gunfire, including a 10-year-old boy shot in the right thigh and a 17-year-old shot in the chest, according to officials at Ahli Arab Hospital in Gaza City. A fifth Palestinian was shot in both legs in a separate protest in Gaza City, said officials at Shifa Hospital there.

Israeli soldiers raided a neighborhood in Gaza's Jabaliya refugee camp at midnight and beat Palestinian youths, the U.N. official said. Twenty were taken in U.N. ambulances to Gaza hospitals, he said.

In Jerusalem, police spokesman Rafi Levy said two Israeli school children were slightly injured today when Arab protesters hurled stones at them while they were touring the Old City walls. In a separate incident, police fired tear gas to disperse stone-throwing Arabs outside the walled Old City, Levy said.

On Sunday Israeli soldiers shot and killed three Palestinians, the army said, and Arab news reports said 25 Arabs were wounded in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

The army said only seven were wounded.

Carlucci reminded the gathering Sunday that the alliance agreed in 1983 to modernize its short-range nuclear forces. He also stressed his opposition to any moves to eliminate all nuclear weapons from Europe.

"Our task is to carry out the agreed program to modernize these systems and to increase their survivability," Carlucci said near the end of the two-day annual meeting of Western military experts and politicians.

The alliance "cannot neglect the nuclear systems deployed in Europe" now that the United States and Soviet Union are scrapping their land-based intermediate-range nuclear missiles worldwide, he added.

Without intermediate-range missiles, many West Germans reason. Soviet territory would not be threatened in the event of a nuclear battle in Europe. Shortrange missiles have a maximum reach of 300 miles

Kohl's center-right coalition waged a bitter uphill battle to deploy the intermediate-range missiles, and opposition leader Hans-Jochen Vogel says he is against modernizing short-range nuclear weapons.

The chancellor has urged NATO to hasten negotiations with the Warsaw Pact on reducing short-range arsenals. He says any modernization of NATO

Carlucci said he does not favor giving a higher priority to negotiations on short-range nuclear weapons systems. If such negotiations were "done out of sequence," NATO troops in Europe could be left unprotected, he said.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization has made negotiations on reducing conventional forces and long-range nuclear weapons its top disarmament priorities.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., also urged Sunday that NATO go ahead with its modernization plans for shortrange forces.

In 1886, a Chinese peachblow porcelain vase was sold for $18,000, one of those record prices that have long been inspirations to antique collectors.

This vase, the color of "crushed strawberries," became the center of a controversy. Many newspaper reporters considered it ugly, and the buyer denied owning it, keeping it locked away in a vault for 50 years before exhibiting it to the public.

The publicity generated great interest in the name "peachblow." Cosmetics, colored glass and other products were marketed under the name.

A glass factory in Wheeling, W.Va. - Hobbs, Brockunier & Company — made glass replicas of the famous vase and its stand. The vase was of opal glass with a layer of colored glass that turned a shaded yellow to red when reheated. The piece sold well, and the color was later used for other items, including realistic-looking fruit

Collectors can still be confused by the name "peachblow" because other glass factories made pieces using that name, but of different colors it that the tops of many old writing desks slant like the keyboard of a computer while 20th-century desks have flat tops?

A. Writing desks in earlier centuries were used by writers who used quill pens and ink. The best way to write with a guill is to keep the pen as close to horizontal as possible, which helps to control the ink flow. When the metal nib (penpoint) became popular, and then the fountain pen and ballpoint pen, a flat surface was just as satisfactory a writing surface as a slanted one.

Q. I just found a necklace in my grandmother's house. It is made from United States Liberty Head dimes dated from 1903 to 1910. Grandmother lived in Arizona for many years and had some old Indian jewelry. Could this also have been worn by the Indians?

A. It was not uncommon for Indians to wear chains or pins made of real American coins. Laws about defacing money were different in the early 1900s, and dimes and half-dollars were popular as necklace parts. The money, being made of silver, was easily converted to cash when it was

Solution to hairy dilemma raises eyebrows

DEAR ABBY: I am outraged at your answer to "Bearded in Bos ton," the 27-year-old man who paid for his own education and is doing well on his own. He had been living away from his family (out of state) for the last five years, and when he returned with a beard, his father told him that if he wanted to come home again, he'd have to shave off his beard.

"Bearded" said he liked the beard and all his friends thought it looked great; then he asked you: "If I shave it off, what will I tell my friends?" Your reply: "Tell your friends your father refused to let you come home unless you shaved your beard."

Air Jordan bullies West

By PHYLLIS MENSING AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — This one was for the hometown kid and the old man.

Michael Jordan, buoyed by his home fans, scored 40 points and was selected Most Valuable Player as the East defeated the West 138-133 Sunday in the NBA All-Star game.

With 52 seconds left, the fans began chanting, "Jabbar, Jabbar," and 40-year-old Kareem Abdul-Jabbar came back into the game and hit a sky hook to become the all-time leading All-Star scorer with 247 points in 17 appearances.

Jordan, 24, was making only his third All-Star appearance. Although he had scored only 18 total points in his two previous games, there was no doubt that this was Michael Jordan weekend at Chicago Stadium.

"Our guys wanted to get him the ball as much as possible," said Philadelphia's Charles Barkley, one of Jordan's teammates on the East squad.

After winning his second consecutive slam-dunk title a day earlier, Jordan connected on 17 of 23 shots from the field and was the unanimous choice for MVP. His 40 points were just two short of Wilt Chamberlain's All-Star Game record of 42, set in 1962. By giving him the ball, he said, "the players were paying me a home-court tribute.

"It made me proud to play in front of the home fans, and in front of my family, fiance and friends," Jordan said.

Magic Johnson finished with 17 points and 19 assists for the West. Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins, who lost to Jordan on the final jam in Saturday's slam-dunk competition, added 29 points for the East, which now leads the All-Star series 25-13. But Wilkins had no hard feelings about playing second fiddle two days in a row.

"Michael and I have been close friends," Wilkins said. "He's a great player and it's a great city for him. Naturally, the attention is going to be on him. I was just having fun."

Jordan scored 18 points and Wilkins 13 as the East built a 60-54 lead at halftime. The West pulled to within 78-75 with 5:52 left in the third quarter on a layup by Xavier McDaniel, but Wilkins scored twice and Larry Bird once to put the East ahead 84-75.

Jordan sat out eight minutes over the last two periods with foul trouble, but the East still managed to stretch its advantage to 15 points, sparked by Wilkins and Danny Ainge, whose three 3-point baskets tied a record set by Isiah Thomas in 1985. Jordan came back to score 16 points in the final 5:50 to put the game away.

Karl Malone led the West with 22 points, Akeem Olajuwon had 21 and Lafayette Lever 17. Johnson's 19 assists were three short of the record 22 he set in 1984.

Bird remained king of the longdistance shootout, capturing his third consecutive title Saturday by outdueling Seattle's Dale Ellis 17-15. He scored only six points in Sunday's game, but said his East teammates played well.

In Saturday's Legends Classic, former Boston center Dave Cowens hit a layup in suddendeath overtime to give the East Legends a 47-45 victory.

Jabbar, who finished with 10 points, said he wasn't thinking about joining the old-timers.

"I can't watch the Legends game," he said. "Half the people in the Legends game are younger than I am.

Irving college snaps loss skid

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — After snapping a record 86-game losing streak, the University Dallas Crusaders now are hoping to add some more numbers to the win column before the end of the season.

The small Catholic school deafeated John Brown 76-68 on Saturday night, snapping a winless streak that nearly spanned three seasons and was the longest ever for a four-year college. Moments after Coach Barry Davis was doused with ice water and the basketball nets were cut down, the celebration began in earnest.

Davis, his players and students gathered on the campus at Irving, and spent the postgame hours congratulating each other when they heard their accomplishment broadcast nationwide.

"They ran a little blurb on ESPN saying congratulations," Davis said. "At that point, the place went crazy."

Davis said he was especially happy for senior captain Steve Prud'homme, who scored 20 points against John Brown.

"He was so excited, so bubbly," Davis said.

Prud'homme said he refused to acknowledge the end of the losing streak until there were two seconds left in the game. "A team that loses this many finds ways to lose games," he said.

Davis, who played college basketball at St. Lawrence, has been the Crusaders' coach since the team was organized in 1985.

The 1,200-student college has high academic standards and doesn't offer athletic scholarships, and Davis said he has had to build his team from "glorified YMCA stars."

"It's been a teaching process," he said. "I've had to go over fundamentals that most kids would have learned in seventh grade."

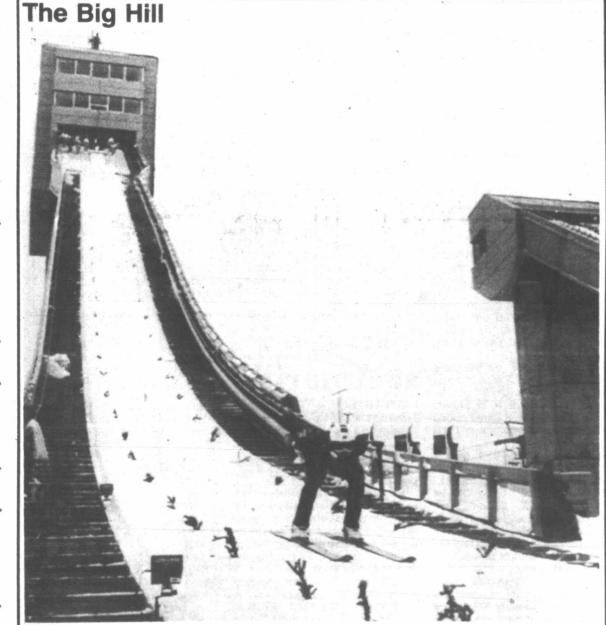

Without scholarships, it's difficult to recruit, Davis said.

"I either have to recruit poor kids who are smart and can get financial assistance or pretty wealthy kids who are smart and usually they can go wherever they want," he said. "I've lost kids to the most podunk towns you can imagine."

The NAIA-Division III independent often plays schools that offer athletic scholarships.

But for now Davis is concentrating on Monday's opponent, LeTourneau College. He said he thinks the Crusaders, 1-23 this season, have a chance to win four of their final six games.

"I heard some people say in the cafeteria now that we won, we won't be as notorious," sophomore Jon Whatley said.

Chinook winds pose threat

By JOHN NELSON AP Sports Writer

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — From microbes to manure spreaders, high technology and innovation are insuring the Calgary Winter Games against warm weather.

Organizers are unfazed, even though temperatures are expected to rise again in the final few days before the Games begin Saturday.

Computerized snow-making machines have spewed out tons of snow, its flakes made larger and fluffier through the use of a yeastlike bacteria.

Alpine ski trails are covered with the stuff, as are crosscountry and biathlon courses, where officials used tractors and manure spreaders to transport the snow into the back country.

"We tried everything to get the snow out on the course," said venue chairman John Rule of the Canmore Nordic Centre. "Some of the vehicles couldn't get up the hills, others damaged the course.

"Finally, we settled on oldfashioned farm tractors and manure spreaders," he said.

Venue officers at McMahon Stadium, site of the opening ceremonies, trucked in tons of white sand to spread on the stadium floor, just in case snow cover was insufficient for the aesthetic eye of television.

Officials at Canada Olympic Park have a refrigeration system that will maintain ice on the bobsled and luge run even if air temperatures rise to 70 degrees.

While warm Chinook winds occasionally blow in off the Canadian Rockies, warming temperatures by as much as 20-30 degrees in less than an hour, the weather has been fairly favorable since January. Temperatures Sunday were in the mid-teens, although the Canadian weather service predicted temperatures near 40 by Thursday, just two days before the opening ceremonies.

"We're in real good shape — Chinook or no Chinook," Rule said.

IOC to punish boycotters

By LARRY SIDDONS AP Sports Writer

CALGARY, Alberta — The International Olympic Committee has decided to punish nations that boycott the Summer Games with a financial slap on the wrist.

As it wrapped up a two-day meeting Sunday, the IOC's executive board adopted a resolution under which boycotters would lose their share of TV revenues as funneled through Olympic Solidarity, one of the committee's financial arms.

Although TV revenues for the Games in Seoul this year come to some $400 million, the per nation share once it reaches Solidarity coffers is only about $6,000, according to IOC figures.

Still, the action — prompted by a boycott of Seoul by North Korea and some of its allies — marked the first time the IOC had imposed a direct penalty on nations boycotting for political reasons.

"There is no anger in this action," IOC spokeswoman Michele Verdier said. "The only feeling the IOC can have is to regret that some athletes do not have the chance to participate in the Games."

The resolution says the IOC's 167-member national Olympic committees have the "moral obligation" to send athletes to the Games, although the NOC's retain the right to reject an invitation.

"This involves a lot of nuances," Verdier said. "It is not meant to penalize countries who withdraw for financial reasons, for instance. It will be studied case by case."

Verdier said this was aimed primarily at Summer Games boycotters. She said Ireland and Senegal, which withdrew teams from Calgary at the last minute because of technical reasons, would not be punished.

Earlier Sunday, a top South Korean Olympic official said organizers of the Seoul Games would concentrate on preparations for the 161 nations set to attend and let the IOC deal with the problem of North Korea's involvement.

Pitching again a problem for Rangers |Longhorns pound alumni

By KIRK BOHLS Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP) — The last time Pete Incaviglia laid eyes on Steve Howe, the lefthanded pitcher for the Texas Rangers appeared to have dropped 15 pounds and been in the best shape of his career. "He looked fantastic," Incaviglia said.

"He looked fantastic," Incaviglia said. "He'd be the last guy in the world you'd ever think would have a problem like that."

Starting pitcher Bobby Witt worked out with Howe the first day of the club's recent three-day winter conditioning session at Arlington Stadium and smiled at the thought of Howe saving games for him this season. In stints with three teams, including the Rangers, Howe had saved 60 games and won 29 more.

"We were really counting on him," Witt said during a recent visit to Austin with other members of the American League club.

"I think he and Mitch Williams could have been the best one-two combination of all time out of the bullpen. Unfortunately, things didn't work out."

As a result, Howe won't be with the Rangers when they report to Port Charlotte, Fla., Feb. 20. Because the former cocaine addict drank a couple of beers, thus failing to adhere to an after-care program for substance abuse, Howe was waived by the Rangers last month and cost himself $1 million over two years.

His departure will leave a gaping hole in a Rangers bullpen that is in dire need of a proven left-hander to take some of the burden off the left-handed Williams, who appeared in 85 games last year in just his second major-league season. Without Howe, Texas may have to look to converted starter Paul Kilgus or Double-A pitcher Ken Rogers.

Last season, Texas relievers had a 4.04 earned run average and converted just 27 of 59 save opportunities.

As much as the Rangers were relying on Howe, they nevertheless think they can contend for the American League West crown despite finishing in last place in 1987 for the third time in four seasons.

Texas set or tied 46 individual and team batting records and was the only team in the majors not to be shut out at home. Yet, the Rangers never reached higher than third place — for all of three days — and lost 17 games in the ninth inning or later.

Much of the blame for that fell on a pitching staff whose 4.63 ERA was the second highest in club history and whose 760 walks were the sixth most in major league history.

"We're always going to have a lot of walks," Rangers catcher Geno Petralli said. "We have a bunch of power pitchers who'll have control problems. The main thing the Rangers are doing are having these winter sessions to see what they're up against. Last year, pitchers came to spring training and they were caught short."

Witt was among them. The 23-year-old former All-American from Oklahoma, arriving at camp with tendonitis in his right shoulder, missed a month of the season on the disabled list before limping in with an 8-10 record and 4.91 ERA.

During this off-season, he has worked under a program designed by noted orthopedic surgeon Frank Jobe and has lifted light weights every other day to correct an impingement in his biceps tendon and is throwing three times a week.

"I just want to stay healthy where I can go through the whole season," said Witt, who in two years has struck out 334 batters in 300 2-3 innings.

"I had a tough time just getting the ball to the plate last year, but I've had a total turnaround."

The Rangers could use one themselves. With some pitching stability and an improvement defensively, Bobby Valentine's club could challenge if it has an offensive output similar to the last two years.

In Larry Parrish, Pete O'Brien, Steve Buechele, Oddibe McDowell, Scott Fletcher and Incaviglia, Texas has a solid blend of power and speed. Many of the seven rookies off the 1986 team fell off their firstyear statistics.

That was true for Incaviglia, although he actually raised his batting average 21 points to .271. Despite missing 23 games with torn ankle ligaments and a dislocated finger, he still managed to hit 27 homers with 80 RBI.

The former Oklahoma State star said he is aiming for 40 homers and 120 RBI

AUSTIN (AP) — What would possess 5,000 baseball fans to sit out in 38-degree weather through a nine-inning game that doesn't even count?

University of Texas baseball.

For the fifth straight year, the Longhorn-Alumni game drew players and fans from all over the country.

The Longhorns defeated alumni for the second straight year by the identical score of 9-5.

However, Sunday's game lacked the good-natured pranks between the two sqauds that had been a trademark of the game. No tackling the umpire, no stealing bases on foul balls.

It was due to either the freezing cold or to the fact that this is one of the Longhorn's youngest teams in recent years and players are still fighting for positions, players said.

"It's always serious to us," said senior centerfielder Brian Cisarik, who is not in any danger of losing his spot. "We really can't mess around that much, that's up to the older guys." Cisarik set a Texas school record for hitting last season with a .429 average.

"The game itself is not important, "Gustafson said before this year's game. "But the occassion is."

The game has gained popularity in recent years because of the emergance of several ex-Longhorns, none bigger than two-time Cy Young Award winner Roger Clemens, easily the most soughtafter player by young autograph seekers.

After Clemens won his first award in 1986, 8,000 people jammed Disch-Falk Field last year to watch him pitch an inning.

He only threw one inning again this year and was mobbed by fans after the game and had to seek shelter in the Texas locker room while Coach Cliff Gustafson gave his team some post-game advice. Both squads scored a run in the first inning and the game was tied 3-3 in the top of the third before the Longhorns crossed the plate four times in the bottom of the inning to grab the lead for good 7-3.

Montana explains loss

AFC, ho-hum, defeats NFC in Pro Bowl

By KEN PETERS AP Sports Writer

HONOLULU - Joe Montana had an explanation for the fact that the defenses dominated the Pro Bowl, as they often do.

When you have so little time together, trying to do things on offense is much more unnatural than on defense," he said.

Montana, the San Francisco 49ers' quarterback and the NFC starter Sunday, provided an example of how difficult it is to get offensive timing down in just five days of practice.

He threw two interceptions and gave up a safety as the AFC beat the NFC 15-6.

Each team had five turnovers. The AFC gave away four fumbles and one interception; the NFC was victimized for four interceptions and one lost fumble

The game's only touchdown came on a 1-yard rollout by Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly in the second quarter.

"I think the defense in this situation will tend to look better because the offense isn't as complicated as usual, but I'm not sure," said Kelly, making his first NFL All-Star appearance.

'Hopefully this will be a yearly event for me, so I can find out."

"The game was not a real shootout for the offenses," said Marty Schottenheimer of the Cleveland Browns, coach of the winning AFC squad for the second straight year.

"It's difficult to put together an offense in just a few days," said Jerry Burns of the Minnesota Vikings, the NFC coach. "Our pass protection was poor and the timing of our passing and running game was poor.

NFC offensive guard Dennis Harrah of the Los Angeles Rams, who has announced his retirement, said the turnovers may have been due to the fact that the game was rougher than the five previous Pro Bowl games he had played in.

'It was the hardest-hitting Pro Bowl I've been in," said Harrah, who got in a fight early in the game with AFC nose tackle Bill Maas of Kansas City

Dean Biasucci of the Indianapolis Colts kicked two field goals for the AFC, and Morten Andersen of the New Orleans Saints provided all the NFC scoring with two field goals.

The other AFC points came when Montana stepped out of his own end zone under a heavy pass rush in the fourth quarter.

All-Stars to meet Tuesday

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Hockey Writer

ST. LOUIS - Denis Potvin will always remember his first NHL All-Star Game. He hopes to make his last one memorable, too.

'If I wanted to create the perfect scenario, then I would win the Most Valuable Player award," said the New York Islanders' veteran defenseman, who has announced that this will be his last season.

More realistically, Potvin is just hoping to play a solid game for his Wales Conference team that meets the Campbell Conference in Tuesday night's 39th NHL All-Star Game at The Arena.

"I'll probably be pretty nervous because I want to do well," Potvin said. "Just like coming into this year. I had thought about whether I could be a strong contributor on the Islanders, which is what I want to be. I don't want to be a player that is just hanging on."

This is Potvin's 15th NHL season and his ninth trip to the All-Star Game, tying him with Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky for most All-Star appearances among those present at this year's affair.

PHILADELPHIA - The Philadelphia 76ers fired Matt Guokas as head coach and replaced him with assistant Jim Lynam, the NBA club announced today.

Lynam, who inherits a struggling team with a 20-23 record, will take over Tuesday night when the team plays the Atlanta Hawks.

Guokas could not be reached for comment after the 76ers disclosed early today they were holding a press conference to make a major announcement. A woman answering the telephone at Guokas' home told The Associated Press he was asleep and not taking calls. She would not comment.

well-called, and I said words that I guess warranted a technical,' Richardson said. "I do want it known that I thought Texas deserved to win the game.'

It was a big week for the Longhorns, who defeated A&M and Baylor besides Arkansas.

We are developing a much better inside game, and that's the difference," Texas coach Bob Weltlich said.

Center Jose Nassar, a Brazilian, had 14 points, and forward Alvin Heggs came off the bench with 19.

"I thought we could come back like we've done before, but we got within one point (and) then fell apart," Richardson said.

SMU's fate in the regular league race could be decided this week. The Mustangs are at Baylor Wednesday night and travel to Arkansas on Saturday for a regionally televised showdown with the Hogs. Arkansas overcame a 22-point deficit to defeat the Mustangs in Dallas in January

"They have a good ballclub, and they're going to be in the NCAA Tournament for sure. A&M coach Shelby Metcalf said. SMU coach Dave Bliss said Arkansas is still in the driver's seat.

"They have more firepower than anybody in the conference," he said.

Maybe. After all, the Owls did beat Rutgers 84-53

That's the kind of week college basketball had. Not only did 13 members of the Associated Press Top Twenty lose one or more games, but the University of Dallas. ended the nation's longest losing streak by a four-year college at 86 games Saturday by defeating John Brown University 76-68

Arizona and Duke recovered to post victories on Sunday while No. 11 Michigan and No. 20 St. John's at least lost to higherranked teams.

"At this point, I don't give a lick about the No. 1 thing," said Arizona Coach Lute Olson, whose 21-2 team lost at Stanford but bounced back to win at California 74-62.

Other Top Twenty losers this weekend included Michigan (to No. 6 Purdue 91-87 Sunday), No. 14 Georgetown (to Connecticut 66-59), No. 15 Vanderbilt (to LSU 94-79), No. 16 Iowa State (to Oklahoma State 80-78 in overtime), No. 17 Illinois (to Indiana 75-74), No. 19 Florida (to Auburn 58-57) and No. 20 St. John's (to No. 12 Syracuse 79-62).

Elsewhere Saturday, No. 7 Oklahoma outgunned Missouri 120-101, No. 10 Kentucky trounced Mississippi State 83-59, No. 13 Iowa whipped Michigan State 101-72 and No. 18 Bradley beat Drake 85-67 while No. 8 North Carolins and No. 9 Pitt had the weekend off.

No. 1 Arizona 74, California 62 Anthony Cook, a 6-foot-9 junior, scored a season-high 19 points and grabbed 12 rebounds for Arizona, which outrebounded Cal 40unbeaten record) off our back, ment," he said.

Michael Charles and Reginald Turner each scored 24 points and Barry Bearden added 23 as Alabama-Birmingham, 13-10, played what Coach Gene Bartow called "the best basketball game UAB has ever played."

Michael Smith led BYU with 21 points. No. 4 Duke 70, Notre Dame 61

North Carolina St. 77, No. 4 Duke 74

Duke, which lost to N.C. State on Saturday, defeated Notre Dame on Sunday as Quin Snyder came off the bench to ignite a second-half rally.

On Saturday, Vinny Del Negro scored eight points in the final three minutes to rally N.C. State from an 11-point halftime deficit and into a three-way tie with Duke and idle North Carolina for the Atlantic Coast Conference lead.

No. 5 Temple 84, Rutgers 53 Mike Vreeswyk scored 21 points as 18-1 Temple opened a 31-10 lead and handed Rutgers its 13th straight defeat. All five Temple starters scored in double figures.

No. 6 Purdue 91, No. 11 Michigan

87 Todd Mitchell scored 23 points and Troy Lewis scored 14 of his 20 points in the second half as the 19-2 Boilermakers snapped Michigan's 12-game home winning streak and took over sole possession of first place in the Big Ten. Michigan's Gary Grant led all scorers with 32 points.

> AMARILLO — The Pampa High girls' swim team placed third with 147 points in the Amarillo Invitational Meet held last week at the Maverick Club.

> Amarillo High compiled 260 points to win the meet title.

Pampa's Richelle Hill won both the 200 individual medley and the 500 freestyle and was a member of the first-place 400 freestyle relay team, which also consisted of Jennifer Hinkle, Pam Morrow and Michelle Scott.

'The kids did an outstanding job. Some of the girls didn't swim their times, but they still had enough points to get third," said Pampa coach Norma Young.

In the boys' division, the Harvesters finished fifth with 91 points.

"The boys especially had a fine meet," Young said. "Four boys compiled all our points."

Amarillo High also won the boys' division, finishing with 254 points.

felt ignored by indoor track promoters, his time may have come.

The Dallas Morning News' Indoor Games Saturday night was the second best indoors by an American. His last warmup throw measured 73-10, giving promise of even better things to come from the 6-foot-4, 280pounder.

George Woods holds the American indoor ecord of 72-3, set in 1974.

As a freshman two years ago, Barnes was credited with a 71-9½ outdoor throw. Barnes dropped out of Texas A&M University last year after getting an ulcer and suffering several injuries. He'll attend Blinn Junior College this spring, but he's living in College Station and working with Bob Parker, the Aggies' coach.

"I needed a big one in competititon to prove that I'm back," he said. "I had surgery on my hand last summer. I gained a lot of weight, up to 315 pounds, and I needed to lose some. It made it tough on my joints, and they gave out on me.

"I also had an ulcer. I just never got out of the blocks last year.

However, Barnes, of Charlotte, W. Va., said he may not compete again until April, 'because I've been ignored.'

Should Barnes continue to improve, he will be one of the contenders for the U.S. Olympic team in Seoul, South Korea.

There could be another big surprise on the U.S. team, Cletus Clark. Clark of Denton, Texas, former Southwest Conference champion, upset a tired world champion Greg Foster in the 55-meter hurdles.

Clark, who never had defeated Foster in a finals event, clocked 7.13 seconds to 7.14 for the defending champion. Foster easily won the event at the Millrose Games on Friday night in 7.07.

Clark was ecstatic in his first finals victory over Foster.

"It shows me that all the hard work I've been doing has finally paid off," said Clark, a former star at the University of Houston. "I've been doing a lot of spring work at school with Carl Lewis. I've been working with the sprinters, and it helped."

Foster said he was "dog-tired" after the flight from New York City Saturday .

Tax tampering is a congressional pastime

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — A review of federal tax changes during the past two decades reveals an amazing inconsistency and indecisiveness, with changes being made almost every year.

While the net result might be a tendency for one change to offset another, the cost would seem to be almost incalculable when measured in terms of confusion and the inability of taxpayers to implement long-term plans.

In the 22-year span between 1964 and 1986, Congress enacted 16 major tax bills and dozens of lesser bills. It used almost every conceivable form of change: amending, rescinding, revoking, reimposing and reconciling.

A study by the private, not-forprofit Tax Foundation suggests a pattern of two equally matched football teams moving up and decreases and increases without any apparent consistency from a federal tax policy viewpoint." Ironically, that inconsistency has spawned a huge service industry catering to corporations and individuals and including laywers, accountants, tax preparers, publishers, consultants, investment advisory firms and others.

Whether that industry contributes to the well-being of the country, or instead is a huge drain on its resources, is the subject of constant debate.

There is little dispute, however, that inconsistency in taxes has over the years distorted investment patterns, channeling funds into tax-advantaged areas, including housing, oil drilling and cattle feeding.

Though it has lacked consistency in terms of long-term tax policy, Congress has however been consistent in attaching politically

Bribery case stirs call for city inquiry

FORT WORTH (AP) — City council members will be asked to approve an independent investigation of the city's water department following allegations of bribery mismanagement and falsified documents by supervisors and workers.

Authorities said Wesley Glen Hulce, 33, and Joe Espinosa, 50, were charged with bribery, a second-degree felony. Accused of asking a private contractor for about $6,000, they were released Friday from the Tarrant County Jail without bond.

Hulce told investigators before his arrest that supervisors and others in the Fort Worth Water Department behaved questionably, ranging from taking free turkeys at Christmas to adding a $1,200 charge to a construction job so a contractor wouldn't have to pay for a pipe that was put in the wrong place.

Tarrant County district attorney's officials told City Attorney Wade Adkins and other city officials of the allegations before making the arrests.

The district attorney's investigation isn't continuing because Hulce's complaints don't appear to include felony offenses, said Alan Levy, chief of the criminal division of the district attorney's office.

"You're talking about a massive amount of effort for something, that on its face, appears to be a series of misdemeanors at most, if they're even crimes," Levy told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "At this point, there is not enough material for us to conduct any further investigations."

So councilman Russell Lancaster said he will request, during a City Council meeting Tuesday, that an independent auditor investigate events leading to the arrest of the two former water department inspectors.

"I think it is important the City Council be informed of all questions of improprieties and take action," Lancaster said. "Let's not sweep this matter under the rug."

Lancaster said he also wants an examination of of accusations contained in a deposition by one of the arrested inspectors. City Manager Doug Harman said he thinks the district attorney should be responsible for any investigation into criminal wrongdoing.

"If it's a matter of a charge of criminal behavior, the district attorney is the person to (do the investigating)," Harman said. "If it's a matter of procedure and systems, we will be pursuing those."

Richard Sawey, director of the water department, said the city will look into allegations of misconduct by his employees.

"I said we will look at everything and that means everything," Sawey said. "I'm interested in everything. Even if it is from Mr. Hulce."

In a a four-page statement to investigators, Hulce accused one supervisor of being drunk on the job and others of accepting improper Christmas gifts. Others were accused of taking hunting trips with contractors, having a personal car serviced at a construction company and of working as an estimator for a private company while on city business.

down a gridiron, each offsetting the other's thrusts.

In 1981, for example, the Economic Recovery Tax Act promised corporate tax reductions averaging $51 billion in 1987 to 1989. But by 1986 other tax acts parlayed this reduction into an increase of $20 billion a year.

In the final analysis, the foundation researchers state, 43 percent of the total tax reductions granted by ERTA for the 1986-1990 period have thus far been eroded by subsequent tax acts.

"What the federal government giveth, the federal government taketh away," said the foundation report, noting that the two largest tax revenue reductions, in 1964 and 1981, were followed by offsetting increases in 1968 and 1982.

It comments that "the history of major tax legislation since 1964 represents a seesaw of revenue acceptable labels to its handiwork, choosing such terms as reform, reduction, simplification and equity. Still, reviewing the web of changes, taxpayers might wonder whether any of these goals was achieved. More discernible is Congress' seemingly frantic effort to deal with revenue shortfalls without antagonizing too many groups.

Now, the inability of tax policy to keep pace with spending may pose even more difficult choices for Congress, since it faces the dilemma of reducing deficits while trying to encourage economic growth.

That challenge, the foundation suggests, produces a situation in which "continued tinkering with the tax system as illustrated by the pattern since 1964 seems inevitable."

Court allowing students of law school to take bar exam

McALLEN (AP) — Some of the uncertainty is over for at least the first two classes of the struggling, unaccredited Reynaldo G. Garza School of Law in Edinburg.

Texas Supreme Court Justice William Kilgarlin said Sunday the high court has decided to allow the school's 1988 and 1989 graduating classes to take the state bar exam, even though the school is not accredited by the American Bar Association.

Kilgarlin visited the state's only law school south of San Antonio last month with three other justices.

State law requires students to be from a school accredited by the ABA before taking the exam, but the Supreme Court can waive the ABA accreditation requirement.

Shortly after the justices visited, the full court voted to allow the accreditation waiver for 1988 and 1989.

The school was founded in 1984, but its inability to affiliate with a university has hindered its efforts to obtain ABA accreditation.

Some of the law school's students are plaintiffs in a lawsuit filed last year against the state higher education system, alleging South Texas has been shortchanged in the funding of colleges and universities.

Kilgarlin said the justices were impressed with the school's students, but added it needs help.

"I think the law school needs more local support," Kilgarlin said in an interview Sunday. "They certainly need more funding. Ideally, that funding ought to come from the Legislature. The Legislature ought to just be willing to take the law school and put it within the state university system."

The justices pointed out a shortage of book shelves at the school's library and the books stacked on the floor as an example of the Garza school's financial woes.

"What the law school has to do now has not so much with the court, because all the court has the right to do is approve who takes the bar examination," Kilgarlin said. "What the law school has got to do is get accreditation from the American Bar Association, because only in that way will in the long run the law school survive,"

The special court panel consisting of Justices Kilgarlin, C.L. Ray and Ted Robertson visited the school, along with Justice Raul Gonzalez, a native of the lower Rio Grande Valley.
