Margie Gray's top vote-getter in local races

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

Gray County's incumbent tax assessor/collector says she's looking forward to a general election race after winning a whopping 84.8 percent of the Democratic primary vote Tuesday.

Meanwhile, two Democratic candidates for Precinct 1 county commissioner will have to wait until April 12 to see which one will carry their party's torch in November.

Tax Assessor/Collector Margie Gray was the top Gray County Democratic vote-getter in Tuesday's primary election, collecting 2,315 votes to 416 for her opponent, former Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard. Gray won handily in all 14 voting precincts and said she was both thankful and humbled by the final tally.

"I have gone on the aspect of Gray for Gray County, and Gray County has shown Margie Gray how they feel," she said Tuesday night. "I think this election has shown (Gray County wants) experience, dedication and commitment.

Gray was outdistanced in total votes only by U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter of Amarillo, a Republican candidate for U.S. Senate, who got 2,621 votes in Gray County.

Gray now faces Republican Jan Lyle in the Nov. 8 general election. Lyle gathered 2,066 votes in her unopposed primary.

Also able to look onward to November is Democrat O.H. Price, running for Precinct 3 county commissioner. Price, who lost the Democratic primary four years ago to then-incumbent Jim McCracken, garnered 64 percent of the vote in his two-way race with former Roberts County Commissioner Sam Condo, picking up 297 votes to Condo's 167. He will face Republican incumbent Gerald Wright in November.

Price

Wright received 220 votes in an unopposed primary bid. Price attributed his win to hard work and said he plans continued contact with Precinct 3 voters between now and November. The precinct includes southwest Pampa and southwest Gray County, including the Grandview area. Price won all three voting precincts.

runoff he will meet Dick Hale, who received 25.9 percent. Herman Law picked up 24.5 percent in the three-man race.

Final tally was: McAnelly, 481; Hale, 251; and Law, 237. Candidates must receive more than 50 percent to win without a runoff.

McAnelly said today he won't seek a recount. He said he plans to try to get out and meet voters between now and the runoff.

Hale, who joked that he lost 10 pounds traveling door-to-door during the campaign, praised his two opponents for running a "nice, clean race." He said he, too, plans to continue meeting vo-

McAnelly won all four voting precincts in Precinct 1, which covers northwest Pampa and northeast Gray County, including Lefors and the Laketon area.

The runoff winner will face Republican Joe Wheeley, who received 801 votes in an unopposed

All told, more than 5,800 voters turned out Tuesday.

Republicans counted 2,950 voters, even though no local GOP races were contested. Unopposed Precinct 1 constable candidate Jerry Holland received 755 votes. Holland faces incumbent Jerry Dean Williams of Lefors, who garnered 733 votes in the uncontested Democratic primary.

Results of uncontested races in the Democratic primary, where 2,872 voters showed up, are: Harold Comer, candidate for district attorney, 2,221 votes.

■ Bob McPherson, incumbent county attorney, 2,116 votes. ■ Rufe Jordan, incumbent sheriff, 2,172 votes.

Herman Kieth, incumbent Precinct 2 constable, 352 votes. Jim McDonald, incumbent Precinct 4 constable, 631 votes

Gray picks hometown candidate

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

Gray County Democrats picked a hometown candidate to represent them in the race for 84th District state representative. while area Republicans chose to try to send a fellow Pampan back to Washington as Congressman.

Democrat Warren Chisum and Republican Bob Price, both of Pampa, were among the big winners in Tuesday's primary elections in Gray County as Chisum won outright and Price apparently secured a spot in April 12's Republican runoff runoff election. Chisum clobbered his sole opponent in the Democratic primary, Patton Springs school Superintendent J.J. Barlow of Afton, by picking up 2,239 votes in Gray County to Barlow's 361. Chisum was projected the winner in the 84th District race to succeed Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa.

On the Republican side, former state Rep. Tom Christian of Claude was projected the winner over Ralls farmer Gary Ivey. Christian picked up 1,830 votes in

Houston council riled over pay hikes for aides

HOUSTON (AP) - Several City Council members are upset with Mayor Kathy Whitmire for granting $10,000 a year promotions for two of her top aides after earlier promising to abolish staff pay

The two promotions became effective three days after Whitmire won shaky council approval for a reorganization of her office after promising she wouldn't use it to give staffers pay raises, council members said Tuesday.

Whitmire has claimed the promotions were unrelated to the reorganization, and were due to the departures of two aides who previously held the jobs.

"Our options were to hire someone from the outside to fill those positions or to promote experienced employees from within, and that's the option we chose, just as many of our departments do," she said.

"Right now, the only time anybody is ever able to get more money in any department, including mine, is when someone leaves and there's a vacancy at a higher level, and then someone is able to be promoted into it," she said.

Some council members were unconvinced. "The mayor was clearly untruthful when she told council members the reorganization would not result in any pay raises for her employees," said Council Member Dale Gorczynski. "I'm glad I voted against it."

Council Member Jim Greenwood felt much the same way. 'The larger issues involve an $11 million budget shortfall that she (Whitmire) was well aware of and is still well aware of at a time when positions were being filled at these large increases in sal-ary," he said. "My recollection is her disclosure (on the deficit) came only afer we read about it in the paper.

One of the two people promoted, Joanne Adams, defended the mayor's action.

Bentsen wins; Boulter in runoff

AUSTIN (AP) — A staple of campaign rhetoric for one of Texas' U.S. Senate seats is even truer today: Lloyd Bentsen is the man to beat.

But the stalwart three-term Democrat, who crushed a token opponent Tuesday to win renomination, says he doesn't care who wins the runoff necessary to untangle the GOP candidate

"I'll campaign all-out anyway, regardless — always do," said the 66-year-old Bentsen, who is chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee and is favored to beat any Republican nominee. With nearly all the precincts reporting from Tuesday's Democratic primary, Bentsen won 84.9 percent or the vote to San Antonio college professor Joe Sullivan's 15.1 percent. Sullivan got 21.8 percent when he trifled with Bentsen in 1982 Meanwhile in the Republican primary, with most of the precincts reporting, Houston businessman Wes Gilbreath advanced to an April 12 runoff against U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter by securing 36.6 percent to Boulter's 30 percent of the vote.

Georgetown industrialist Edwin "Ned" Snead, 58, was fourth at 14.8 percent.

Because no GOP candidate got more than 50 percent of the primary vote, the top two will square off in the April 12 runoff.

Although officials in both parties said it would take a scandal or Republican presidential landslide to shake Bentsen's grip on his office. Gilbreath and Boulter said they consider him susceptible to attack.

"If I thought he was unbeatable, I wouldn't be running. I think he's very beatable," said Boulter, 44, who was persuaded to enter the race by national GOP officials in a move that upset some Texas Republicans who fear they could lose his congressional seat.

Gilbreath, 59, agreed: "I didn't enter this race to get beat by Mr. Bentsen. I entered this race to beat Mr. Bentsen.

Boulter has the political advantage of running two previous congressional races, but Gilbreath, in his first bid for elected office, has the advantage of money

Gilbreath used billboard ads and had the only television advertising in the primary. He said he

Milton Fox, 61, at 18.6 percent. favors a limit on campaign spending, although he spent about $500,000, mostly his personal funds, on the primary.

"I don't think it was exhorbitant for a statewide race. We were prepared to spend more money," he said.

Boulter took a dig at Gilbreath's massive advertising campaign: "I'm challenging him to come out from behind the billboards and saying let's go around and talk to the voters of Texas.

Tom Bruno, Gilbreath's campaign consultant, said Gilbreath expects to spend $6 million to $8 million on the general election if he wins the runoff. Boulter, who estimated that he raised about $130,000 for the primary, said a general election race would cost about $5 million Bentsen said he did not know how much he spent on the primary and couldn't estimate how much he would spend on the general election race. But he noted that recent races have cost $10 million, and that he spent between $5 million and $6 million on his last race. The GOP candidates charged in the primary that Bentsen often does not vote like a Texan. They cited votes on taxes and spending, and his vote against Robert Bork for the U.S. Supreme Court. But Bentsen said he plans to

Jet trainer crashes near Laredo

LAREDO (AP) — Two Marine aviators were treated for minor injuries after parachuting to safety from a burning jet trainer that crashed into brush country about 30 miles southeast of Laredo

The plane's only two occupants were identified as Marine Capt. John Peters, instructor pilot, and Marine 1st Lt. Robert Pair, student pilot. Both are assigned to training squadron Vt-22 at Kingsville, said station spokesman John Caffey

They were airlifted by a Coast Guard helicopter to Kingsville Naval Air Station, their home base, for treatment, Caffey said. Officials at the station declined to provide further information on the injuries.

After the two ejected, the plane went out of control and crashed on the Ninfa Martinez Ranch, about 14 miles north of the village of Escobas, a Department of Public Safety spokesman said.

Caffey said the crash site has been marked off to preserve evidence for a naval investigative board. He said the plane was not

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Space: a market out of this world

Ronald Reagan's new agenda for the American space program contains good and bad points — much like the rest of his efforts as president. He has the vision to leap to the stars, but seldom the ability to cut loose all the ropes tying him to the ground.

First, the good parts. Reagan advances a Commercial Space Initiative that would advance the privatization of space further than ever. It will prod the government into buying commercial space products and services; and will liberalize laws restricting private space shots. NASA, along with the departments of commerce and transportation, will evaluate bids for private space services previously done by the government itself.

Private industry will build, launch and manage a small space station. NASA fought tenaciously over this orbiting bit of turf, insisting on the primacy of its own space station. But two things tipped the balance against NASA. First, NASA's own huge, impractical space station won't be ready until the end of the 1990s, if then, while the private station should be ready by 1993.

And now the worry is the huge lead the Soviets have in launching and manning space stations. Since NASA, itself a socialist enterprise, has botched this critical competition with the socialist Soviet effort, it is time America's incomparable forces of capitalist production and invention were unleashed.

Unfortunately — and this is the bad part of Reagan's program — his new agenda also includes a continuation of many other old NASA boundoggles. The wasteful, inept space-shuttle program is continued, even though private investors have offered to buy it out. More moon shots are called for, with no real justification. Having once explored the moon at extravagent expense, why do so again?

Even more absurd is the plan to land a man on Mars. Some day it will happen, of course, as will further moon explorations. But why not wait until echnological advances make suc cheaper and commercially profitable? Indeed, wasting money on such huge programs now may actually postpone the permanent exploration, and possible colonization, of our solar system.

The problem with Reagan's catch-all space program is that the nation has only limited space exploration resources, public and private. We can do some programs on Reagan's agenda, but not all. The best way to judge when a particular program is worthwhile is not when some government bureaucrat dreams of interstellar glory, but when a businessman takes a reasonable, calculated risk on the investment of his scarce money and resources.

On balance, Reagan's program boosts private efforts enough so that, when NASA's public projects fail, the final step of complete privatization can be taken. This one small step for private space exploration is one giant leap for mankind.

Robertson wasn't born again

Republicans long ago scheduled their presidential primary for March 5, they scarcely would have foreseen the significance of their act. For three of the GOP candidates - George Bush, Pat Robertson and Jack Kemp — Saturday was

The fourth man in the Republican race, Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, was not so critically positioned. He expected to do well but his expectations were modest. For the others, South Carolina was a different matter.

This was a "must win" for Vice President Bush. He had an excellent organization over most of the state; he had the active support of the state's popular governor, Carroll Campbell Jr. He has kept his vigorous campaign on a high level, free of snipping and innuendo.

South Carolinians are a genteel people; they have a feeling for good manners, and Bush has been on his best behavior. He had but one substantive mark against him: He is "wrong," at least in the mill-town view, in his opposition to the pending Textile and Apparel Act.

Robertson, the former Christian broadcaster, metaphorically had bet his whole stack of chips on South Carolina. He still has plenty of money in the bank, and no one doubted that he will do well in other Southern states on Super Tuesday. March 8, but a resounding defeat on Saturday greatly diminished his standing. The State's poll had him in third place. If this was the best he could do in South Carolina, Robertson is done

This should have been Robertson country. On paper, at least, he should have been running neck and neck with Bush. Over the past seven months, 37,500 new voters had registered, and it was widely believed that the bulk of them are Robertson's God-fearing people. Robertson is "right" on the textile bill, a measure designed to limit textile imports to a growth of 1 percent a year. He spent a bundle on TV commercials that identify his candidacy with old-fashioned vir-

All the same, a number of reporters and editors who were here for the annual meeting of the South Carolina Press Association felt that Robertson's invisible army was less potent than it had been cracked up to be. In caucus states, such as Iowa, an army can steal a march, but this is a primary state. Any eligible voter could vote Republican on Saturday. Robertson would have had to turn out more than the fundamental-

He did not get all of that. An old story is told here in the Bible Belt about the encyclopedia salesman who couldn't sell his books. At every doorstep he ran into the same cinder-block objection: If a thing is worth reading, it's in the Bible; if it's not in the Bible, it's not worth

That attitude, if it ever existed, has doubtful validity today. Fundamentalists read the papers and watch TV. They are aware that over the past month Robertson has acquired a reputation as a loose cannon rolling wildly around the deck. He speculated that the Soviets had kept missiles in Cuba. He boasted that his correspondents in the Middle East knew where the TWA hijackers were hiding in 1985.

He insinuated that Bush had somehow contrived to break the story of Jimmy Swaggart's transgressions in Louisiana in order to embarrass the Robertson campaign. Robertson offered not one scintilla of proof for any of these remarkable statements.

Born-again Christians were not born yesterday. They know a flapjaw when they see one, and Robertson has not been impressive lately.

A poor finish in South Carolina just about finished Jack Kemp. The Buffalo congressman is running low on money. Like Robertson, he is "right" on the textile bill; he is working doggedly, and he ought to be kindling conservative fires. Somehow the fire keeps going out.

In his talk to the South Carolina editors and reporters, he dwelled once more on monetary policy. Eyes glazed over.

The returns from South Carolina dominated political news on Sunday morning, just 48 hours before polls opened in the 20 Super Tuesday states. There always is a tendency to go with a winner. The tendency is not controlling - Dole was a winner in Iowa but not even a close second in New Hampshire - but under the circumstances, a big win by Bush could be of incalculable value to his campaign. If Dole runs an ignominious third, then Dole could be in deep trouble

Positive view from the corporate suite

By BEN WATTENBERG

"Competitiveness" is one of the great issues of the 1988 presidential race. Every candidate is for it; we are told we've got to face up to the threat of foreign competition or the end may be in sight. It is relevant, then, to ask: "How are we doing?"

The old car commercials used to exclaim "Ask the Man Who Owns One." In effect, that is what Business Month magazine (formerly Dun's Review) has done. They commissioned the polling firm of Yankelovich Clancy Shulman to conduct what is probably the most comprehensive survey ever conducted of American chief executive officers. A total of 609 CEOs were interviewed person-toperson for about an hour in their offices, about half before the Oct. 19 crash and half after.

I've examined the poll, and, in fact, wrote an article for Business Month about it. It gives, I think, a fascinating glimpse of the top echelon of corpo-rate America and provides some significant information. The poll shows deep inherent optimism about the future of our businesses, and the good news comes through as tempered and credible, rather than as mere boosterism The executives come back again and again to the "competitiveness" question. In a general open-ended question about potential threats to the U.S. economy, the CEOs list "foreign competition" as public enemy No. 1. If competitiveness is such a problem, why so? The CEOs — 90 percent of them — say American business is too "short-term oriented." Said one CEO, "Everyone is working for the benefit of financial analysts - short term instead of looking ahead." And another: "The Japanese system is long term. They back their people 100 percent; we just pull the rug out when we see temporary losses." One specific remedy suggested by the CEOs is to change the Securities and Exchange Commission regulation that demands quarterly financial reports; biannual or annual reporting, they say, would take off some of the short-term

Have the CEOs done anything about this problem? They maintain they have: 69 percent say they are spending more time on strategic long-term planning, 61 percent more on controlling costs, and 54 percent more time on marketing.

To a remarkable degree, they have also signed onto the "lean and mean" strategy. In the last two years alone 39 percent of the CEOs say they have "down-sized" their companies. (Of the larger corporations in the sample, the figure was 48 percent!) The process is by no means over: Of those CEOs who have down-sized, 50 percent say they will do more of it in the next two

The CEOs, overwhelmingly Republican, nonetheless want government help to encourage competitiveness: 83 percent say the government isn't doing enough to stimulate research, 67 percent want tax incentives. (By contrast, only 16 percent say the government should spend more on social programs.)

Is the drive for American competitiveness working? Will it work? When asked a general quest h - "How would you describe your overall confidence in American business to meet the challenges it faces?" about half (51 percent) offered up a "most confident" rating ("5" or "6" on a 1 to 6 scale). But, far more relevantly, when asked the same question about their own company, 80 percent gave a "most confident" response.

The long-term response - for all business — is also positive. The question: "In the year 2000 will American business be stronger globally?" Answer: 53 percent of the CEOs said yes, 29 percent said no.

Reading the poll results, one gets this general impression: The CEOs think we're in trouble, they know what the trouble is, they're acting to remedy it, they will continue at it, and they believe they will prevail. In short: stress and success. Stock market: take note.

Bush takes all Texas delegates

AUSTIN (AP) — Vice President George Bush says his sweep of Texas' 111 Republican delegates was a "unique political happening." His opposition, awed by the magnitude of the Bush blitz in Texas, agreed.

"He just did some whale of a job all over the South. He was the monster to stop," Richie Martin. Pat Robertson's Texas campaign director, said after Tuesday's primaries. "I honestly thought we could pick up nine delegates. It just didn't happen.'

Richard Collins of Dallas, Texas campaign chairman for Kansas Sen. Robert Dole, said, "George Bush needed to have a big win on Super Tuesday and he's accomplished what he wanted to accomplish. "I'm not surprised," Collins

But Bush, who claims a Houston hotel room as his home for voting purposes, told supporters Tuesday night that his margin of victory "has exceeded my fondest expectations."

Kains says votes reach record high

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas voters turned out in record numbers for the Super Tuesday primaries, with an estimated 2.7 million of the state's 7.9 million registered voters taking part, Secretary of State Jack Rains said today.

"It's very clear Super Tuesday has been super for Texas," Rains

"There is absolutely no doubt that Super Tuesday has focused attention on the primary process. Since 1972, we've had nothing that's approached this," he said.

With most of the vote in, Rains said it was clear that the state was going to beat the previous record turnout of 2.3 million, set in the 1972 primaries.

The GOP voter turnout increased enormously over previous years, he said. The number of Republican voters was 350,000 in 1984 and 550,000 in 1986, Rains said, and "at this point, it's over 850,000, going towards a million."

The number of Democratic voters had decreased steadily from the 1972 high of 2.2 million to 1986, but "this time the Democratic total is back up again. They're at 1.5 million with 84 percent in. I don't know that they'll meet their historic total."

He said his goal is 1 million new voters.

"The thing we've got to focus on is in '72, we had 68.5 percent of those eligible (voting). Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could bump our registration totals up to 8.5 million, and get 50 percent of those or better to the polls, which would mean 4,250,000-plus (voters) in November?" Rains

"I believe that's an achievable goal," he added.

all precincts, the News Election Service reported that Bush had 65 percent. Former television evangelist Robertson had 15 percent. Dole followed with 14 percent, and New York Rep. Jack Kemp had 5 percent.

Former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont and Alexander Haig, who both have withdrawn fromt he race, tallied less than 1 percent

The Bush win was total. He earned 81 delegates, three from each of the 27 congressional districts, by gaining at least 50 percent of the vote in each district. Bush also grabbed 30 at-large delegates for taking more than 50 percent of the statewide vote.

"Texas is George Bush country," said Texas Gov. Bill Clements, a Bush backer. "The vice president has scored a sweeping victory. His showing in Texas and across the Super Tuesday states is impressive, convincing and commanding.

"This is a big — a major — political victory," Bush said.

Clements said Texans "have pointed the way for George Bush as he moves toward the nomination and election as our next pres-

But Robertson, who had hoped to capture at least nine Texas delegates, said in Atlanta that the GOP nomination chase would not end until the Republican National Convention in New Orleans

"I am going to be standing as the champion for the conservative cause. If there is only one candidate besides George Bush in the Republican Party, it will be Pat Robertson," Robertson said. Collins, Dole's state campaign chief, said the Texas and other Super Tuesday wins by Bush do not end the nomination race. "Sure, George Bush has got a leg up, but the party's not over. It may not be settled until the convention. I think we will do in the Midwest" in upcoming primar-

R-Texas, coordinated the effort. "People understand strong leadership in the footsteps of Ronald Reagan and (Bush) is a Texan and we're doggone proud of that," Loeffler said.

Martin said Robertson hoped to win delegates in Dallas, East Texas and the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Robertson had said he expected large numbers of Democrats to cross over and vote in the GOP primary. Robertson described them as "my secret weapon.

Dole's major Texas endorsement came from former Gov. John Connally. Kemp made only a few appearances in the state and never ran very high in the Area residents vote preferences

By DEE DEE LARAMORE and PAUL PINKHAM

Area Republicans followed statewide trends in backing Vice President George Bush's presidential bid, while local Democrats bucked a Texas push toward Massachusetts' Michael Dukakis by picking fellow Southerner Al Gore.

Sen. Gore, D-Tennessee, won 29.7 percent of the vote in Gray County and led in each of the four counties surrounding Pampa with the exception of Hemphill County. Gore's 766 votes were followed in Gray County by Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt's 707 votes (27.4 percent) and Gov. Dukakis' 575 votes (22.3 percent).

Gore. Gephardt and Dukakis also were the top three contenders in Wheeler, Roberts and Carson counties. Gore received the most total votes with

1,341, followed by Gephardt's 1,123 votes and Duka-

In Hemphill County, Gephardt led, followed by Dukakis and Gore.

In the Republican primary, Vice President Bush picked up 63.3 percent of the vote in a six-man field in Gray County, easily outdistancing former televangelist Pat Robertson and Kansas Sen. Bob Dole. Bush appeared headed to victory statewide Tuesday as well.

Robertson picked up 555 Gray County votes (19 percent) and Dole received 345 (11.8 percent).

Bush was the clear favorite elsewhere in the Top of Texas, too, with a total of 940 votes in comparison to the 274 ballots cast for Robertson, his closest rival, in the four area counties.

Dole came in a weak third in the surrounding area with 110 votes.

Dukakis, Jackson big winners

AUSTIN (AP) — The beauty contest went to Michael Dukakis in Texas' Democratic presidential primary, but the race within a race — for party delegates was a virtual dead heat between the Massachusetts governor and the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Jackson left Houston this morning with 42 Texas delegates firmly in his flock — the most he has gained in any state so far after a Super Tuesday boost that put him second behind Dukakis among Democratic contenders.

Dukakis took 43 delegates in one of two phases of Democratic delegate selection in the state, as well as winning the popular vote by with 33 percent to Jackson's 24 percent. Nationally, Dukakis has 378 delegates to Jackson's 366.

Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore, who staked his campaign on a Southern strategy that concentrated on the 20-state Super Tuesday race, finished third with 20 percent. Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt had 14 percent.

'I feel very good about it," Jackson said in Houston before leaving for Chicago today. "I think the No. 1 showings are obviously impressive. Here in Texas ... that's a tremendous statement. We certainly ran a more cost-efficient campaign.'

Tom Cosgrove, who coordinated the Texas campaign for Dukakis, called it "was a strong win everywhere" for his candidate. "We won votes across this state.

But in that "other" race — for delegates — Jackson did nearly as well as Dukakis, and his campaign called that a triumph.

"Particularly on the delegate count, that's a far stronger showing than anyone was predicting, even a week ago," said Steve Cobble, Jackson's press

Among other candidates, Gore was headed for an estimated 25 delegates, while Gephardt was positioned to have nine.

Under the complicated Democratic Party system, 119 of the state's 197 delegates were up for grabs in the primary.

Another 64 will be apportioned based on support the candidates received during precinct caucuses held Tuesday night, but results of those contests weren't immediately known, party officials

The final 14 delegate spots are reserved for party officials. Dukakis and Jackson each had two supporters among those officials who have stated a preference.

The Dukakis campaign won high marks for its organization, and Cosgrove predicted that would be reflected when the caucus results were known.

"We think we're going to win at least 50 percent of the delegates," Cosgrove said. "It's the grassroots support of Michael Dukakis that's going to win delegates

But Jackson's campaign wasn't impressed. Cobble noted that Dukakis, Gore and Gephardt each reportedly spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on finalweek advertising blitzes, while he said Jackson spent between $10,000 and $20,000. "It shows that Jesse was able to survive a very strong media onslaught and he came out of it very well." Cobble said.

'Our message is winning We're the poorest campaign with the richest message," Jackson told his election night rally in Gore's operatives maintained that third place was OK.

"I think, given the way we've been projected for the past several weeks, it shows tremendous momentum on Gore's part," said Tom Jurkovich, the senator's Texas campaign director.

Dukakis, who ran some Spanish-language ads in his bid to carry the Hispanic vote, appealed to a wide range of Texans, his campaign said.

Cosgrove noted that the threeterm governor was able to talk about his record on the economic revitalization dubbed "the Massachusetts miracle.

"This is the only candidate in the in the race that's got economic experience. He's the only candidate that's balanced budgets, cut taxes and created jobs," Cosgrove said.

Jackson reactivated the campaign organization he developed in his 1984 presidential bid, and he sought to broaden his message to appeal to more voters.

NEW YORK (AP) — By day, St. Agnes Boys Catholic High School is where nearly 300 teen-agers are educated. Hours later, it's a nocturnal haven for hundreds of homeless in an unusual timeshare concept.

Many of the boys at St. Agnes, run by the Marist Brothers, come from some of the city's tougher areas - Harlem, Hell's Kitchen, the Lower East Side.

They gulp down their lunches in the school cafeteria, taking advantage of the time allotted afterward to play a quick game of basketball in the gym.

AUSTIN (AP) - "So sweet, fantastic," shouted elated Texas Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez after it was apparent his lead over challenger Art Vega for the Democratic nomination was safe.

Gonzalez, celebrating at a downtown cafe, was joined by former state Sen. Lloyd Doggett of Austin and Justice William Kilgarlin as Democratic winners in contested primaries.

Justice Ted Robertson, who trailed most of Tuesday night, eased ahead of Dallas lawyer John Humphreys with 99 percent of the precincts reporting in the Democratic race for chief justice and was an apparent winner with 595,699 votes to 572,292 for Humphreys.

The winner will take on Chief Justice Tom Phillips, a Republican appointed to the court by GOP Gov. Bill Clements, in the November general election. Phillips had no opponent in the primary.

Former Democratic congressman Jack Hightower was unopposed and will be matched in November against another Clements appointee,

With five of the nine justices on the Supreme Court up for election this year, it will be the first time since Reconstruction that a majority of the court will be voted on.

Dallas appeals judge Charles Ben Howell had no Republican opposition for Gonzalez's seat and automatically advanced to the general election.

'In a contested GOP race, Houston appeals judge Paul Murphy defeated Dallas lawyer George Barbary for a shot at Doggett, who lost a U.S. Senate

"I think in November ... the voting public will have a very clear choice," Murphy said of his upcoming race with Doggett.

Murphy said he is disturbed that candidates with no judicial experience appear to make the court a training ground for judges.

The other contested Republican race was headed for an April runoff, with Dallas appeals judge Nathan Hecht leading two other candidates. Houston attorney Ronald Block was running second over Houston appeals judge D. Camille Dunn. The winner will face Kilgarlin.

'Four down, one to go," said Gonzalez, whose primary victory over San Antonio lawyer Vega was his fourth in two years.

Doggett led State District Judge Marsha Anthony of Houston 931,975 votes to 377,457, with 99 percent of the precincts reporting. His percentage lead was 71.2 to 28.8.

Murphy led Barbary 373,881 to 163,258, or 69.6 percent to 30.4, with 84 percent of the GOP precincts reporting.

Kilgarlin was ahead of State District Judge Carol Haberman of San Antonio 667,730 to 518,783, or 56.3 percent to 43.7 percent, also with 99 percent of the precincts reporting.

With 84 percent of the GOP precincts reporting. Hecht had 223,472 votes to 180,756 for Block and 159,751 for Dunn. Their percentages, respectively, were 39.6, 32.1 and 28.6.

Republicans Ed Emmett and P.S. "Sam" Ervin will meet in an April 12 runoff to decide who will face incumbent James E. Nugent in the battle for a full six-year term on the Railroad Commission. Nugent easily overwhelmed his challengers to avoid a runoff in Tuesday's balloting.

In nearly complete returns today, Emmett led a field of four Republicans with about 32 percent of the vote. Ervin finished second with approximately 31 percent.

"I'm going to expose him for the fraud he is," Emmett said of Ervin, whom he accuses of legally changing his name to "Sam" to confuse voters with the late Sam Ervin, a former North Carolina senator who gained fame as the chief of the Watergate investigation panel.

Meanwhile, in the remainder of the Republican field, Ralph E. Hoelscher, 44, a San Angelo-area farmer and rancher, finished third with about 26 percent, while Houston energy consultant Dale W. Steffes, 54, earned about 11 percent.

In the Democratic contest, the 65-year-old Nugent easily outdistanced two oppponents by gathering about 61 percent of the votes. Midland petroleum consultant and gas company president Jerry J. said today. The collision of the U-H 60 Blackhawk helicopters occurred about 9:45 p.m. CST Tuesday, 6 miles west southwest of Fort Campbell Army Air Field, said Maj. Randy Schoel, Fort Campbell public information officer. The Blackhawk is the military's newest helicopter, but has been plagued by design flaws.

Last summer, officials said that about 40 people had been killed in crashes of the helicopter since 1978

Schoel said the crash occurred during a "routine night mission," and that all aboard were killed He said initial indications were that 17 were aboard.

Maj. Randy Morger, a Pentagon spokesman, said 15 servicemen were aboard.

The helicopters were flying at 92 mph when they collided at 800 feet, crashed in a partly wooded training area and burned, spewing wreckage over an area of 330 to 550 yards, Schoel said.

"One aircraft is located in the trees. Oee aircraft is right on the edge of a clearing," Schoel said. 'We are still looking throughout the area to see if they can locate any other bodies.

Two other Blackhawk helicopters on the mission landed safely and were not involved in the accident, he said.

The servicemen were from the Army's 2nd batallion, 502nd infantry and the copters were from the B and C companies, 101st aviation regiment, 5th batallion, said Morger miles north of Nashville, Tenn., would not be released until notification of relatives, said Capt. Anthony Lascano, another Campbell spokesman.

A team of investigators from the Army Safety Center at Fort Rucker, Ala., was to arrive this morning, he said.

The Army's fleet of 820 UH-60s was grounded twice in May 1987, once for inspection and once because of design flaws. The entire fleet also was grounded in April 1985 and March 1986 after fatal crashes.

In 1985, the Army identified a defect in the main rotor assembly and ordered it corrected.

Army Undersecretary James R. Ambrose said in November that he had confidence in the Blackhawk. Noting news reports that radio and microwave towers on the ground can interfere with the aircraft's electronic control systems, he said he had not found any significant safety hazard.

The Blackhawk is designed primarily to rescue combat air crew members. It normally is operated with a crew of three and can carry 11 combat-equipped soldiers. It is made by Sikorsky Aircraft, a division of United Technologies based in Stratford. Conn., and powered by two turboshaft engines.

City Commission OKs plan for army air field museu

By LARRY HOLLIS Managing Editor

Pampa city commissioners gave approval to the initial site plans for the proposed Pampa Army Air Field museum during their regular meeting Tuesday

City Manager Bob Hart said the city staff has indicated they 'have no problems'' with the site plans. He also noted that the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board had viewed the plans and had no problems with them.

The site plans were presented by the Pampa Army Air Field Reunion Association, which last year had gained commission approval for development of the museum at Memorial Park, tentative upon submission and approval of development plans.

The plans were first submitted to the commission two weeks ago, but the commission deferred approval then to allow further study and consultations with the city staff and Parks Board. A letter to the PAAFRA from Mayor David McDaniel indicates that the commission approval is made on the association's representation that all architectural fees and expenses will be paid by the association. The cost of the project will be handled by the association without any expense to the city other than preparing and entering into an acceptable lease for the site.

The commission also reserves the right to review detailed plans prior to the commencing of the construction. Lease agreements will be negotiated later.

A letter to the commission from PAAFRA Executive Secretary Nina Spoonemore says the development of Memorial Park "is progressing in a good and positive manner.

Spoonemore notes that the association is developing contribution plans, with a preliminary budget adopted and the site plan prepared.

The plan calls for renovation of the former Pump Station No. 1 on the park and construction of an enclosed gallery or rotunda to house a B-25 bomber and other displays

Also included in the plans is a proposed monument serving as a memorial to all Gray County veterans, a project being developed by the local Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #1657. The monument would be located on the north end of the triangular park, near the intersection of Ward and Hobart streets.

The VFW has undertaken fundraising efforts for the erection of the monument, with an estimated cost of $20,000

In other business, commissioners approved on first reading an ordinance that would prohibit parking of vehicles near the city's solid waste collection receptacles between the hours of 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through

Hart said the Traffic Commission had recommended the limited parking hours because of problems encountered by city sanitation trucks trying to pick up trash from the containers located in residential areas where there are no alleys. Vehicles would be prohibited from parking within 15 feet of the trash recepta-

The original proposed ordinance included Saturday hours in the parking prohibition but was amended by the commission to eliminate Saturday from the res-

Commissioners also adopted a resolution in honor of Texas Public Schools Week in Pampa. The resolution encourages parents and taxpayers to visit public schools this week, to take an active interest in the school system and to form partnerships with the local schools.

In other matters, the commission presented certificates of appreciation for service on on advisory boards and commissions to Nolan McKean, Planning and Zoning Commission; Joel Derrington, W.A. Morgan and Duane Harp, Parks and Recreation Advisory Board; and Howard Graham, Lovett Memorial Library Board

Commissioners also: · adopted on final reading an ordinance requiring bonds and permits for peddlers;

· awarded a bid of $69,778 to Culberson-Stowers Inc. of Pampa for the purchase of six trucks; and approved on first reading an ordinance approving a rate decrease which may be charged by Southwestern Public Service Co.

Radioactive waste disposal agency chief speaks on Texas' need for disposal site

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

If Texas doesn't become prepared by 1993, it could find itself with thousands of cubic feet of low-level radioactive waste on its hands and no place to put the stuff.

This is the situation faced by the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority, the state's smallest agency with the longest name, said Tom Blackburn, director of the 11-member group. Blackburn was guest speaker at a recent meeting of Las Pampas Garden Club in the Lovett Library

Today, he said, only three disposal sites for this type waste are operating in the United States - one each in South Carolina, Washington and Nevada. New federal laws require each state to have their own disposal sites operating by Jan. 1, 1993, Blackburn said.

On top of this, the volume of such waste in this state is expected to increase almost 300 percent in the near future when the four nuclear power plants at South Texas and Comanche Peak begin operating, he added.

Eighty percent of the state's low-level radioactive waste comes from hospital right now, he said, particularly the universities' teaching hospitals. The largest single amount of waste comes from M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston, he said

Radiation therapy for cancer is the major generator for low-level radioactive waste. Everything that comes iff contact with the Cobalt-60 used in radiation therapy must be disposed of, he explained, including gloves, paper products, sheets, clothing and more. All are placed in 55-gallon drums and transported to one of two brokers in Houston.

When enough waste is collected, a shipment is transported to one of the three disposal sites by truck. Blackburn said that right now it costs about $400 per barrel to dispose of the waste; this money is going to the state with the disposal site either through taxes or to the company handling the disposal.

Preparing for the 1993 deadline, the state of Texas has already chosen the site for disposing of its low-level radioactive waste on stateowned land about 35 miles east of El Paso, near the small community of Fort Hancock.

Fort Hancock has a population of about 450, and 50 of them are mad at us for being out there," Blackburn said. One of those is Scot Wilke, who, Blackburn said, "is not only opposed to us being out there, he's opposed to people being in West Texas.

The 350-acre site chosen is desert land with creosote, mesquite and burro grass growing on it, he said. "There are six people in a 10kilometer radius." two of whom are Scott Wilke and his wife, he said.

As an incentive to the community, the disposal facility will purchases all supplies and equipment locally, if available, providing $2to $3 million income annually. Local residents will be given first consideration to to fill the more than 100 construction jobs and 33 operations positions, adding an estimated payroll of $750,000. Salaries will range from $15,000 to $50,000 a year.

Ten percent of all disposal fees will be set aside as grants for the local communities, adding an additional $500,000 to $750,000 to the

In an effort to please the community, Blackburn said, the disposal facility has promised to reclaim 65,000 acres of the stateowned land for a range and wildlife management program. Funds will also be provided for extensive archaeological studies of the 2,000-year-old Indian pictographs found near Environmental tests and health surveys of local inhabitants are already underway, Blackburn said, to form a base line for future monitoring for possible effects from the disposal site.

"When you try and site a waste facility, you have to bend over backwards to get people to accept it," Blackburn explained. "There's still a lot of hostility, but they're either wearing down or beginning to accept it. The further you go from the site, the more hostility you face," he said, adding the majority of opposition has come from El Paso and San Antonio

By the time the waste facility begins operating, he said, the state will have spent $35 million into developing the disposal site. After it goes into operation, it will be selfsupporting, he added.

Waste will be disposed of in large concrete blocks with two- to three-foot thick walls. These blocks will be buried and covered with layers of rocks, sand, clay, plastic and more clay. Placement of all dangerous materials will be by remote control, Blackburn said, and workers will be closely monitored for any possible exposure to radiation.

'Though it says 'low-level', that may be misleading," he said. "While it may be lowlevel, some of it is very high-level in intensity. Some is very, very dangerous.

Low-level radioactive waste has a half-life 350 years, unlike high-level radioactive waste which has a half-life of several thousand to several hundred thousand years, Blackburn explained. The more dangerous waste will be buried in a special, deeper trench, he added.

'Nothing is ever safe enough,'' Blackburn said. "You just have to draw a line somewhere and say, 'This is safe enough.' The only way you can treat radioactive waste to make it safe is time, by the natural decay process."

which handles child sexual and physical abuse cases. If the abuser is a member of the child's family, the DHS may ask that the abuser leave the home, at least for a time. Or, if the child is determined to be in a life-threatening situation, a judge may issue a court order allowing DHS to take custody of the child temporarily.

"We only do these investigations if the perpetrator is a caretaker for the child. If it's a stranger we don't, or if it's a sibling we don't. Law enforcement agencies would handle these," said a representative of the DHS office in Pampa. The office must investigate each report of child abuse received, and reports average two per week at the local office, with as many as five or six during from their families is temporary care with a relative. If this is not possible, the child may stay in a foster home, therapeutic home (for children with special physical needs), group home or residential treatment center (for children who are disturbed mentally and emotionally), depending on the child's needs.

"We try to keep them as close to the family as possible, depending on the situation," said the DHS representative. The DHS' optimum goal is to reunite the family if possible.

Tralee Crisis Center provides temporary shelter and counseling for women and children who are victims of domestic violence and sexual assault. The center operates a 24-hour hotline for these victims. The hotline number is 669-1788; the regular office number is 669-1131. The statewide toll-free number of the Texas Department of Human Resources hotline for reporting child abuse is 1-800-252-5400.

bused kids' parents need help

DEAR ABBY: This concerns your reply to "Worried Grandma," whose teen-aged unwed daughter had left her baby alone. You were right to suggest that the child should be removed from the young mother's care. It would be a kindness for all concerned.

Abby, please tell your readers that there is help for parents who are having difficulty caring for their children. Child protective service agencies exist in every state, but, unfortunately, many who could use our help do not call us out of fear that their children will be taken away. Neighbors and relatives, as well, often allow a child to continue to suffer or to remain at risk for the same reason.

In most cases, children are neglected or abused because of a problem in the home that is correctable, such as a young, inexperienced parent who shows poor judgment, or a family under financial stress with no friends or relatives nearby to help. Punishing people does not make them better parents. We look for the source of the problem and provide a wide variety of services to correct it, including counseling, parenting education, respite day care and many others. Only in drastic cases do we immediately seek custody of children, and even then we try to you live in an adobe?"

thinking lustful thoughts is as great a sin as actually committing the sin." She signed herself, "Afraid to Fantasize.

Abby, the point that some religions try to make about sexuality in marriage is not that it is fulfilled by perfect people who are lustless. Rather, the point is that two fallible people with enough mutual forgiveness and humor can discover enough grace from God to be lovingly sexual with each other for a lifetime. Certainly, fantasy as well as lust will be present, and, hopefully, be handled creatively for the oneness of the couple. Instead of demanding an instant answer from Matthew 5, I would encourage the lady to talk with her ordained minister about the spirit and the letter of Scriptures' moral injunction, and talk with her sex therapist as well as a marriage counselor. And she might even talk to her husband

Recipes sought for chicken cooking contest

The entry period has officially opened for the 38th National Chicken Cooking Contest, and the search is on for the next $10,000 chicken recipe According to the National Broiler Council, contest sponsor, anyone may enter a recipe in the competition. The only required ingredient is chicken - whole or any part or parts. Deadline for entries is Oct. 15.

A new national chicken cooking champion will be chosen at the Cook-Off on May 25, 1989, in Hershey, Pa. Fifty-one finalists - one from each state and the District of Columbia will be selected to receive expense-paid trips to the national Cook-Off, where they will compete for a total of $20,000 in prizes.

A panel of well-known food experts will select the winners. Recipes are judged on taste, appearance, simplicity and appeal.

Entry blanks are available at various locations but are not required. Those who enter should write their name, address and telephone number on the front of each recipe submitted and mail before Oct. 15 to: Chicken Contest, Box 28158 Central Station, Washington, DC 20005.

The chicken cooking contest is one of the nation's oldest food competitions, dating back to 1949. Top prize in the last Cook-Off went to the Connecticut finalist who won $10,000 for Chicken Avocado Melt, a creative dish made with boned chicken breasts

Sports Bradley captures Missouri Valley title

By The Associated Press When you lead the nation in scoring, you can feel invincible about your game. Hersey Hawkins does

When your team is peaking heading into the NCAA tournament, you can feel just as unbeatable. Hersey Hawkins does.

Hawkins, Bradley's sharpshooter, scored 29 points Tuesday night as the 12th-ranked Braves beat archrival Illinois State 83-59. That gave Bradley the Missouri Valley tournament championship after winning the regular season title. The Braves, 26-4, also avenged their only home loss this season, to the Redbirds in the opening conference game.

'We were determined to win this game, against our biggest rival," Hawkins said. "We dedicated the game to the seniors on the team. We wanted it bad." They got it with a 9-0 start and a

DENTON (AP) — The odds favor North Texas State coach Jimmy Gales today as his topseeded Eagles enter the eight annual Southland Conference Post-Season tournament, but he isn't betting on an easy win. Gales says he doesn't put much weight on the fact that his team will play at home against McNeese State in an 8 p.m. CST semifinal game, or that the Eagles have defeated the Cowboys twice this year. "Our wins weren't easy at either place," said Gales, whose Eagles are on a ninegame winning streak. "McNeese is one of those teams that is just starting to gel. They can be dangerous. They've won their last three games. They are going to be hard to beat.

Gales knows that McNeese State, the seventh-place finisher in the SLC regular season, is playing better now than at any other time during the year.

Prior to the NTSU-McNeese game, the other semifinal matchup between No. 2 seed Northeast Louisiana and No. 8 Texas-Arlington will be held at

While the Cowboys may be the league's most improved team, the Eagles are armed with the SLC's top scorer in senior forward Tony Worrell (20.0 points per game) and the No. 1 rebounder in freshman forward Ronnie Morgan.

It is the 6-7, 240-pound Morgan, who tops the league with his 9.9 rebounding mark and is scoring at a 15.1 clip, that has caught the attention of McNeese's first-year head coach Steve Welch.

up the win. He allowed just three hits while striking FRENSHIP - Kerry Brown and Troy Owens led a balanced offensive attack as Pampa opened the District 1-4A season with a 10-4 win over Frenship Tuesday afternoon. The Harvesters are now 4-0 overall while renchin dropped to 0-9 Although Harvester coach Rod Porter was pleased with the win, he wasn't all that happy with the team's play. "We walked on the field and were flat," Porter said. "I don't know if it was the long bus ride or if it was because we were playing a weak team. Frenship is one of the weaker teams in the district and I think we dropped to their level of play. Brown led Pampa at the plate with three hits while Owens knocked in three runs with a pair of hits. James Bybee and Torrey Gardner had two hits each while Brandon McDonald had one.

"We did do a good job of spreading out our hits," Porter said. "We only struck out twice. I was real pleased with that."

Bybee worked 41/2 innings on the mound to pick out six to improve his record to 2-0. Owens pitched 1 and two-thirds innings, striking out four and not allowing a run. James Ward finished up, striking out one and giving up one run in the final inning.

"The only negative thing about our pitching is that we gave up nine walks. We played pretty good defense (only one error) for them not to score more runs." Porter said. The Harvesters are entered in the Dumas Tournament and will meet the host team at 5:30 p.m. Thursday in first-round action. The doubleelimination tournament ends Saturday "Owens will probably start for us, but he probably won't go more than a couple of innings," Porter said. "We'll try and work in some of our younger pitchers.

Texas' Stanley shooting for catcher's job

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ AP Sports Writer

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. -Mike Stanley no longer worries about bringing his first baseman's glove to the Texas Rangers spring training camp or fitting into a modern-day Joe Ferguson mold as a catcher.

Stanley arrived in Florida this spring with only his catcher's mitt and a resolve to become the Rangers's full-time catcher.

A year ago, Stanley had to be prepared to play first base, the outfield and catch. He also was tutored by Ferguson, a former Los Angeles Dodger catcher.

"When I was working with Fergy, we weren't really working with my abilities," Stanley said. "Fergy really had some great ideas but they were geared to a player of his nature and abili-

Ferguson, no longer with the Rangers, blew away baserunners with his bazooka-arm and expected his protege to do likewise. It didn't work.

"He (Ferguson) had a powerful arm and I have an average arm Stanley said. "I have to do different things to get my velocity

Stanley's throw to second base did little to frighten baserunners last season

He threw out only five of 79 opposing baserunners in 61 games and allowed 18 passed balls Still, Manager Bobby Valentine saw enough promise to trade Don Slaught, the only Rangers catcher with major league experience, and gamble on Stanley. Stanley believes off-season work on mechanics will help improve his average this season. "My big thing is getting my footwork to work to my benefit,' Stanley said. "I'm happy that right now I'm able to become Mike Stanley.

"It's just like every hitter has a different style. You can't make everybody be one kind of a hitting

"What worked for Fergy didn't necessarily work for me.

Valentine made a project of Stanley and personally took charge of his development.

"I stayed on in Dallas for about one month after the season and we worked two solid weeks on throwing," Stanley said. "We filmed it, reviewed it and looked at other catchers and studied them

"I took all those new habits home with me (to Fort Lauderdale, Fla.).I'm trying to do the same things now.

Stanley was called up to the Rangers from Class AAA June 2 and solidified his position by hitting .324 for the month. He finished with a .273 average with 37 runs batted in and six home

Stanley is glad that he's finally found a home with the Rangers behind the plate after spot roles in the outfield and at first base.

"I was always the kid they stuck behind the plate," Stanley says. "That's where I want to be because you're involved in every pitch and every out.

"The outfield is a little boring to me. You have too much time to think. You could think about your last at bat too much.

"As a catcher, you have to divert your attention to the next hitter and the next situation. I like

Has television played role in upsets?

WITH THE PRIMARIES OVER, you've got to think about something..

It's a shame that baseball, which forgives drug users time and time again, allows alcoholics to represent it's major league teams, even accepts gun wavers, can't find in it's heart a bit of forgiveness for having his picture taken with a known gambler he was introduced to by Frank Sinatra and vote Leo Durocher his rightful place in Cooperstown's Baseball Hall of Fame.

Did you ask yourself why Texas, with the No. 1 University Interscholastic League program in the nation and more high schools than any other state, can't produce top collegiate quality basketball players at a level with it's football crop? NBA scouting director Marty Blake lists the top 12 high school cagers in the country, and not a one is from Texas. Last season Bay City's LaBradford Smith made the list because he had enough courage and family support to say no to football coaches who wanted him in a short-term program. Now, Baylor University is all excited about builling a new athletic facility which will seat only 10,000 for basketball in a major Division I conference. Even little old Arkansas State University in Jonesboro is opening up one seating 11,000 (and Baylor will play there). Why are all the television communicators and sportswriters trying to solve the problem of ights in college basketball? Isn't that still the responsibility of coaches, athletic directors, conference commissioners, and institution presidents, where the buck really stops. A group of Rio Grande Valley businessmen are raising funds to finance three years of a Division III football program at Pan-American University in Edinburg. The school has long been noted for prowess in baseball, tennis, golf and basketball, but like UT-San Antonio, has wisely stayed away from the budgetbusting football program. However, the non-scholarship program of Div, III is a plan that deserves a lot of attention from other state schools who have found themselves unable to finance well-rounded athletic programs in order to sustain football. It is quite probable that many state schools would give strong consideration to forming non-scholarship grid conferences such as the successful efforts in Ohio and Wisconsin. The question for Pan-Am is, who would the Broncs play? One has to wonder if television's demands haven't played a role in the numerous upsets in college basketball this season. The weird starting times, ranging anywhere from mid-morning to midnight to accomodate network television, coupled with back-to-back games at distant locations on successive days has to raise havoc with an athlete's body chemistry, to say nothing of academic standing. More about recent outbreak of fights during basketball games. 'We've got the world's greatest athletes, and we've got them cramped on a little court and they're banging. There's nothing you can do about it," says Wyoming coach Benny Dees. In a recent game between Philadelphia crosstown rivals St. Josephs and LaSalle, the cheerleaders from the two schools went at it. And the wives of Seattle SuperSoncs' starters Dale Ellis and Alton Lister recently fought outside the Sonics locker room after a vicory over the Lakers. With the pressure that great in the "it's only a game" sport, it's easy to understand how UT-Arlington's Jerry Stone and Stephen F. Austin's Harry Miller, who has won more than 500 college games and a National Championship, had to be relieved of duties in midseason because of the pressure, even in Texas. But then, as columnist Joe Dean points out, it's hard to believe but pro basketball is bigger in the Lone Star State than pro football. The most difficult ticket to get in Dallas isn't for the Cowboys, but for the Maver-

Corporate sponsorships for Bowl Games has dropped a level to conference basketball tournaments, such as the Pepsi Missouri Valley Conference affair which ended last night in Peoria. What if Northwest Airlines sponsored the SWC event this weekend in Dallas, the Northwest Southwest Conference Tournament? Or the A&P grocery chain sponsor the Atlantic and Pacific Coast Athletic Associations event? Or Proctor and Gamble sponsor the White Cloud Big Sky Conference tourney

It was good to see the Canyon school board vote to institute seven-period days next term. Education is what the taxpayers built the facilities for, and that has to be done in the classroom with competent faculty. The 1987 survey released by the US Department of Education shows throwing money at education is not the answer. In the five years (1982 to 1987) that teachers' pay in Texas jumped from an average of $17,580 to $24,588, and spending per student increased from $2,229 to $3,298, the SAT scored fell from 16th best in the nation to 17th. The drop-out rate fell from ninth worst in the nation to No. 8. The added 55 minutes of classroom a day is obviously necessary.

In that regard, the North Carolina HS Athletic Association has asked the state Board of Education to approve tougher academic standards for athletic eligibility. Students would have to pass five courses instead of the current

U.S. planning Anti-Noriega protests take to Panama City streets action against Noriega's rule

WASHINGTON (AP) - Panama's military regime could find itself subject to "a whole panoply" of economic sanctions by the end of this week, including the withholding of $6.5 million this month for use of the Panama Canal, U.S. officials say.

Final decisions on the sanctions are expected at an interagency meeting scheduled Thursday, said the officials, who insisted on anonymity. A formal announcement is likely either Thursday or Friday, they added.

The economic punishment is intended to aggravate an already acute cash shortage in that country and pressure military strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega out

The officials spoke late Tuesday, the same day that the House Foreign Affairs Committee urged president Reagan to consider economic sanctions against Panama's military regime.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in response to the House committee vote that the administration would not take such action lightly.

'The threat's still out there," Fitzwater said. "The situation is changing rapidly and we're still monitoring it. But we don't want to act precipitously.

The administration has called for Noriega's ouster since he was indicted on federal drug trafficking charges in Florida last month and for a return to civilian rule under President Eric Arturo De-

Another sanction being considered is the withdrawal of Panamanian participation in a system of trade preferences accorded to most Third World countries, the officials said. This would make Panamanian products more expensive in U.S.

Another possibility, they said. is Panama's exclusion from the Caribbean Basin Initiative under which some Panamanian products can be exported to the United States without duties.

Also being considered is suspension of Alaskan oil shipments through a trans-Panamanian

On March 15, the United States is due to pay the $6.5 million monthly installment to the Panama Canal Commission on the $75 million to $80 million paid out each year under the canal terrorists," Barria added, referring to the Noriega regime. PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP)

- Riot police fired birdshot and tear gas to disperse demonstrators who blocked streets with hundreds of trash fires to protest the country's military rule and its tottering economy.

The demonstrations Tuesday were the largest since President Eric Arturo Delvalle was deposed Feb. 26, just hours after he tried to fire Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega Noriega, chief of Panama's 15,000-member Defense Forces, is considered the real power behind the country's civilian government.

Reporters saw at least eight protesters captured, beaten with rubber truncheons and fists and driven away in military vehicles.

A photographer for the Mexico City newspaper Excelsior was slightly injured by birdshot fired by police.

The National Civic Crusade, which has organized demonstrations calling for Noriega's ouster since last June, said at least 23 people were detained. By late Tuesday, all but two had been released.

"It was another black day for Panama," said Aurelio Barria, president of the Panama Chamber of Commerce, Industry and Agriculture. "When the people of Panama go into the streets, they get repressed," he told reporters Tuesday night

Corpus Christi fires manager

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) - The Corpus Christi City Council has fired City Manager Craig McDowell seven months after giving him a unanimous vote of confidence.

McDowell was fired Tuesday following a two-hour closed meeting of the City Council.

Councilwoman Mary Rhodes said the council voted to promote assistant city manager Juan Garza to permanent city manager.

"I respect that decision as the city manager and I wish them well and support for Juan in his new position," McDowell said Tuesday.

Rhodes said McDowell, who had been city manager for 20 months, was dismissed on a 6-to-3

Rhodes said the council also lost faith in McDowell's ability to handle the Corpus Christi budget. capital late Tuesday night, but demonstrators had dispersed.

Barria is a director of the Crusade, a broad coalition of business, professional, labor, student and political organizations opposed to Noriega.

Small groups of protesters erected barricades across hundreds of streets in the central and eastern parts of the city Tuesday afternoon, snarling traffic and forcing many businesses to shut down early.

Riot police were out in force, but they could not keep up with the hundreds of demonstrators, many of whom stepped out of their homes and shops to hurl plastic bags of garbage into the streets then quickly ran back in-

Other protesters, mostly roving bands of youths, set fire to piles of debris and built barricades of burning tires, dry palm fronds, wooden signs, boulders and anything else they could lug into the streets.

Some tried to throw rocks at police but could not reach their targets. When police appeared, groups ran a few blocks then set up another barricade.

The stench of burning garbage and the acrid smell of tear gas wafted over large parts of the city as the demonstrtions, and the government's attempts to halt them, continued into the evening.

Smouldering rubbish still lit-

The protests came on the seventh day of a bank shutdown that has crippled commerce. Most businesses were not accepting checks or credit cards, only Depositors began a run on Panamanian-owned and- operated banks the day Delvalle was dismissed.

The 12 locally owned banks closed March 1 during a nationwide general strike called by Noriega's opponents. The banks opened briefly but the government ordered them shut again.

In Miami, a U.S. district judge froze Panamanian assets in banks there after a suit was filed Tuesday to prevent Noriega's government from withdrawing
