Panama's president removed

The legislature removed the president from office early today, saying he had promoted U.S. interference in domestic affairs by ordering Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega to step down as military

The Cabinet immediately named a new chief of state, Education Minister Manuel Solis Palma, who was sworn in before dawn by the president of the National Assembly.

President Eric Arturo Delvalle had announced Noriega's removal Thursday, but the military challenged it and the man named as new Defense Forces chief refused to take the job

Noriega, indicted in the United States on drug trafficking charges, is widely regarded as the real power behind the civilian government in Panama, headquarters for U.S. military operations in Latin America. The U.S. Southern Command has 10,000 troops and 20,000 dependents in Panama.

Noriega, who has said he is innocent of all charges, controls Panama's military and police. He did not comment publicly on Delvalle's removal or the president's order that he step down.

The White House, which called for Noriega's resignation after his indictments in Florida on Feb. 5, had supported Delvalle's

After Delvalle's removal, White House spokesman Bob Hall said there would be no White House comment until later this morning

Delvalle and Vice President Roderick Esquivel were removed from office in a 10-minute emergency legislative session that began at 12 a.m. CST today.

Opposition lawmakers were not present for the unanimous vote by the 38 members of the 67seat assembly in attendance. The National Democratic Union, which backs the military, holds 45 seats in the assembly. The Democratic Alliance Opposition has the rest.

Delvalle called his dismissal "something legally despicable that only fulfills a formality in the mind of those who want to grasp power at any cost.

'They will not receive acceptance from any country that takes pride in being democratic. I continue to feel that I am president of of the republic," Delvalle said from his house, where 30 to 40 supporters surrounded him.

Delvalle said he had dismissed his entire 12-member Cabinet, appointing Kaiser Bazan. Panamanian ambassador to the United States, as the new foreign minister Bazan is a manager of Delvalle-owned Channel 5 television station which the army closed Thursday along with the opposition La Prensa newspaper.

Streets where opposition demonstrators have gathered frequently since June to call for Noriega's ouster were virtually deserted late Thursday into early

Hale points to fat that can be trimmed.

Beef is back! Leaner, trimmer and healthier!

By LARRY HOLLIS Managing Editor

Beef is back, and it's even better for you.

That was the message given to those who attended Thursday's Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce luncheon, held on Beef Appreciation Day in Pampa.

'A lot of people say beef is back and it's not just me saying that," said Dr. Dan Hale, Texas Agriculture Extension Service meat specialist from Texas A&N University

Dr. Hale said there had been much medical evidence in past years that had indicated beef was a nutritional problem for many people because of the high cholesterol connected with beef

But in the past several years, the beef industry has responded to the need expressed by customers wanting less fat and trimmer. leaner beef, he said, adding that the industry is now consumeroriented and more concerned with a positive image for beef.

After medical studies had evidenced that the fat on beef created high cholesterol levels and was unsound for people tending to coronary and artery diseases, the beef industry realized it needed to come up with a leaner product, Hale said.

Even dog food companies have developed leaner meats for the pets, Hale said, adding that if that's good for the pets, it ought to be good for people.

Consequently, beef packers have begun taking the fat off their products. "Basically, people don't want the fat," he said.

Taking off the fat reduces the calories and lowers the cholesterol content, giving the red beef more nutritional value without the additional cholesterol.

'Beef can be a heart-healthy product ... (that) can be included in your diet, if you take the fat off," Hale stated.

Some fat must be in the meat for marbling, tenderness and even flavor, he explained. But the overall fat level can be reduced readily by trimming the fat off and serving the lean meat, he

Hale said chicken is often touted as a good protein substitute for beef. But surveys show that 60 percent of the chicken consumed in America is fried, with the cooking oils adding a lot of extra fats and calories that threaten safe cholesterol levels in the body

"It's OK to eat lean, red meat again," Hale said the latest studies indicate. Beef products are even reappearing in weight-loss meals.

"Beef is a lot trimmer than it was in the past," he said.

Retailers have demanded less fat in the meat they purchase for consumers. Responding to that demand, meat packers are now cutting off the fat before shipping their products, and more cuts of meat are being packaged individually before being shipped to retailers, he said.

Transport 'copter crash in pasture kills 10 men

CHICO (AP) - An Army helicopter nosedived into a cow pasture and skidded about 75 feet before it broke apart in a sheet of fire, killing 10 men and seriously burning eight others, authorities and witnesses said.

Two soldiers leaped about 35 feet to the ground from the burning twin-rotor CH-47D Chinook before it crashed about 50 miles from Fort Worth on Thursday, said state Department of Public Safety Sgt. Robert Rankin. One of the soldiers died.

The other soldier said that a fire had broken out at the back of the helicopter based at Fort Sill, Okla., and that those aboard had tried to move to the front to get away from the flames, Rankin

Residents raced to the scene. pulling casualties away from the raging grass fire sparked by the

"Some of them were just sitting there screaming," said 17-yearold Dale Christopher, a Chico High School student who was among the first on the scene. "And they kept asking us 'Help us. Help us.' And then we'd say 'Help is on the way.' That's all we could do for them.

A three-person team of investigators from the Army Safety Center at Fort Rucker, Ala., was investigating the crash today.

The Chinook CH-47D has a history of problems and the Army grounded its entire fleet of 63 of the big transport helicopters for 11/2 months in 1985 after an accident in Honduras injured eight soldiers

Witnesses said the helicopter was tilted forward at a 45-degree angle, puffing smoke and descending rapidly when it crashed about 3:29 p.m., slicing through a

Investigators walk by crash site at Chico.

"All of a sudden a little thin streak of smoke came out of it and there was a small explosion on the right side underneath it," said Joe Haworth, who was working at a nearby plant. "Then it put out a little more smoke and it flew straight for a ways, then parts went to coming out of it.

The craft skidded about 75 feet before breaking apart in a sheet of fire, said Wendell Berry Sr., 53, who watched the accident from his home a half-mile away.

Berry cut the seat belt away from a crewman strapped to the remains of the cockpit.

There was only one guy still in the helicopter who was either the pilot or the co-pilot, and he was conscious," Berry said. "He was so conscious that when I cut his seatbelt he said, 'That feels better - thanks.

Jack Souther, 54, used a small fire extinguisher from his pickup truck to douse burning bodies. "The only thing I could do was put the fires out on the bodies. I went from body to body trying to put them out," he said.

The copter, carrying 13 passengers and five crew members, was returning to Fort Sill from Fort Hood in central Texas, Fort Sill spokesman Rick Brink said. He said the passengers probably were from Fort Hood, but officials could identify only two early

Of the 10 dead, six died at the scene, one died in Parkland Hospital in Dallas, one died in Bridgeport Hospital and another died early today at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio Another soldier was found dead at the crash site after dark Thursday.

Farmer, rancher contending for state representative post

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

Controlling taxes and boosting the state's economy are two issues of concern in the Republican primary race between Gary Ivey and Tom Christian for the 84th District state representative position March 8

Ivey, a Ralls farmer, and Christian, a rancher from Claude, agree that instituting a state income tax is not the way to bolster Texas' sagging economy.

"A state income tax would be one of the biggest impediments to revitalizing our economy," Ivey commented

That would just be messing up the climate for future business, Christian said. "Besides, no one's undertaxed now.

"The first thing we have to work on is keeping taxes down," Ivey said. "We've got to keep state spending in hand in order to keep taxes down. I can't believe there's not a considerable amount of waste in a $39 billion budget." As a farmer making a living in a slow agricultural economy Ivey said he, as well as all farmers, is "pretty experienced" at cutting back. "I don't think the state has a right to do less than its citizens," he said.

Christian proposes a unique solution to solving the state's economic problems - taking the raw materials already produced in the state and following through by processing and preparing these items for consumer use.

"We've got cattle and grains and produce that we're sending out of state. We're not finishing the process. I think we should develop these industries," he said.

In addition, Christian said he feels this area particularly is not developing its potential to attract tourists. "We have a lot of unique, historical sites in this area. We have cowboys and Indians and we have not developed them," he said. "This would bring in new money; we're not swapping money from one place to another.

Christian himself has shown the potential for bringing tourism to the area through a commercial hunting camp and Cowboy Morning Breakfast at his Figure 3 Ranch near Claude.

'There's probably not a miracle cure (for the economy), but these are two things we can work on pretty quickly," he said. Neither candidate sees a state lottery as an effective way to raise money. Christian said he would "probably not" support a state lottery. "I don't believe this area would stand for one," he said

"I'm not sure that's an answer," Ivey said. "It's like robbing Peter to pay Paul. I'm not sure you can gamble your way into prosperity."

Ivey said it sounds good to think about what you would do if you won a multi-million dollar lottery. "But you don't solve problems in a dream world," he said. "You solve problems by hard work and integrity.

Christian's background includes all levels of public education as a parent, a teacher, a school board member and West Texas State University regent. He says this experience will be valuable in determining educational policies for the state.

Christian said he would like to see technical education broadened in public schools. He also want to keep House Bill 72, "but a lot of it needs to be worked on," he said. "It has one major flaw: I don't think you can mandate anything from Austin and cause an improvement. (HB 72) gave the state more control than really deserves," he said. "HB 72 has been criticized and it's been heralded as the salvation of education," Ivey commented. "It has a lot of good points, but one thing that hasn't been done: the teachers should have been heard in the decisionmaking process.

"They should at least get to speak before the decision makers," he added. "They're like sending the front line troops in without bullets.

Citing lack of information, both candidates were hesitant to take a firm stand on reform in the state's judicial system.

'There's some real flaws in the judicial system, like the Supreme Court getting money from people who have cases pending," Christian said. "I feel judges should not be associated politically. They should be independent of a political party." Christian also said he would like to see a limit on contributions to judges running for

"I would have to look at more data," Ivey said. "I know we have problems and we have to address them." Ivey said state lawmakers should look at the Supreme Court problems, at the backlog in the judicial system and at tort reform.

Clements: Distribution, not amount, school finance issue

AUSTIN (AP) — Increasing state funding for public schools shouldn't be a main concern of a task force looking for ways to satisfy a court order, says Gov. Bill Clements.

"The question you must answer is not whether the state can pump more money into education. The question is whether the money now spent for education can be used more efficiently," Clements told the Select Committee on Education at a Thursday meeting.

State District Judge Harley Clark of Austin ruled last year that the school finance system is unconstitutional because it discriminates against students in districts that have low property wealth.

Public education programs are funded through local property taxes and money from the state and federal government.

The state is appealing Clark's decision to the 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin.

The education committee, which includes citizens and lawmakers, met for the first time Wednesday. It was created to examine the school system, including finances, and report to the 1989

Among the preliminary options discussed for resolving the constitutional issue is consolidation of school districts, but Clements said that would be

"The people of Texas are very proud of the fact that they have independent school districts, and this idea that we're going to have some great big consolidation and we're going to centralize control in Austin is nonsense, in my opinion. The people of Texas are not going to stand for that," he said.

"Texans do not want their schools operated or controlled by the judiciary, or by a centralized state government control in Austin, and certainly not a federal control in Washington," Clements

The 28-year-old student remained at large Thursday, while the three men were recovering in two Houston hospitals, police said.

The suspect began shooting after he was taken into custody Thursday morning in connection with a disturbance in a college dormitory, police said. During a scuffle as he was being handcuffed, the suspect grabbed an officer's .357-caliber gun.

"I struggled with him and eventually I went to the ground," said University of Houston-Downtown officer Jim Durbin, 32, shot in the arm. He was listed in good condition Thursday at Ben Taub Hospital.

"I started to get up and he was leaving and he turned and pointed the gun at me and said he was going to kill all of us, and I dropped back down on the floor, and expected the shot," Durbin said. "When I looked up he was running off."

Also injured in the attack was UH-Downtown Police Chief Joe Norwood, 55, who received a gunshot wound to the head; and Juan Perez, a member of a cleaning crew hired by the university, who was shot in the chest. Both were listed in serious but stable condition Thursday night at Hermann Hos-

Dapper bandit strikes two Arlington banks

ARLINGTON (AP) — The so-called "Dapper Bandit," complete with disguise of sunglasses, wig

In one robbery Thursday, he disarmed an offduty officer and escaped with the officer's pistol, police said.

Thursday's robberies, which occurred four hours and two miles apart, increased his total to 24 since 1978, authorities say. He had been idle since striking a bank in east Dallas last September.

In addition to the usual sunglasses, wig and fake mustache, the bandit has been known to wear bandages on his face to add to the disguise. He has been photographed numerous times by bank cameras and a reward has failed to generate significant leads, police say.

Police recovered getaway cars used in each robbery. Both had been stolen in nearby Irving, Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson said..

Bank about 10:10 a.m., Anderson said.

"We had an off-duty uniformed officer there working security," he said. "He was approached by the suspect, who pulled a gun and ordered him to drop his weapon.

After picking up officer Eddie Bell's pistol, the bandit, wearing a gray suit and maroon tie, leaped over the tellers' counter and began scooping up money from cash trays, Anderson said.

Bell slipped out the door and told passers-by to call police. He then ran back toward the door and saw the bandit jump into a black 1987 Buick fourdoor sedan, Anderson said.

In the second robbery, at 2:10 p.m. at Landmark Bank, the robber pulled a pistol from a leather briefcase, walked around the tellers' counter and took money from both tellers' drawers, Anderson said. He fled out the back door and drove away in a maroon Ford Mustang. The car was recovered nearby, he said.

A progress report on 2-year-olds

Some months ago, the Two Family, as you may remember, invaded the body of our 18-month-old daughter Jennifer. That family arrived a bit early for us, thereby driving the Patterson family to the brink of insanity.

Here it is seven months later, and daughter Jennifer is into the terrible twos full force. For the most part, I must admit the Twos have been dormant for awhile, but like before, they have occasionally made themselves known. Like Tuesday for instance, when, instead of eating a peanut butter and jelly sandwich, Jennifer smeared it all over her face. She looked like a van Gogh painting come to life. A PB & J facial. Or every evening at 6:30 sharp, when the Wheel of Fortune theme music comes on, Jennifer routinely says hello and goodbye to Vanna White, which shows you just how far reaching Vanna's popularity has become. If our 2-year-old daughter how to say, "Bye-bye daddy," there's a definite problem beginning to surface here. And Jennifer has quite a fixation with the term "No." Correct that — "No!!" with not one, but two knows who Vanna White is, but doesn't know yet exclamation points following close behind. We have tried upon countless occasions to teach her not to say "no," but thus far have met only with

"No, daddy!!" she will whine.
"Jennifer, don't say 'no!!" "I will plead.

"No, daddy!!" she follows.

Two-years-old, and already, a mind of her own. And here's yet another example of how the liberation movement has affected even the youngest of our young: When Jennifer has made a mess of her diaper, she doesn't squirm around and cry, hoping that someone will change her. When Jennifer messes-up her diaper, she walks into her bedroom, picks up a clean diaper, traipses back into the family room and says, "Poo-poo, change Off Beat

So much has she a mind of her own that she demands to be changed at the moment the mess becomes a reality

We have attempted to potty-train her, but, again, she will not have anything to do with it. Seems when we first began this tedious toilet training it was in the middle of winter and, yes, even baby toilet seats get cold to the point of excruciating

We like to consider that Jennifer's sitting on a cold toilet seat is her first brush with the harsh, cruel world. Jennifer also likes to laugh - as if she were punishing us - when she makes a little noise and proceeds to fumigate the room with a less than aromatic scent. (Those of you who have had 2-yearolds know what I'm getting at.) And you tell me, why do 2-year-olds have to be introduced to coloring books so early in life? It is ridiculous and without any sense at all. She doesn't need a coloring book. The living room walls have worked just fine. For those of you with newborns ... beware. The road ahead is a treacherous one filled with a few little surprises. It is easy to be impatient. But try to remember that patience is something that needs to be exercised to the fullest. Because as I understand it, impatience will really come into play during those wonderful teen-age years.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Contras can turn to the people now

What now for the Contras? The House of Representatives has deep-sixed President Reagan's call for more aid to the Nicaraguan democratic resistance — the Contras. What next?

First off, the Contras should realize that they made a mistake in trusting the US government. They assumed that, just as France helped America win her independence from the British Empire, so America would help Nicaragua win her independence from the Soviet Empire. The flaw in the assumption was to trust the U.S. government rather than the American people.

Now the Contras can turn to their true supporters: individual Americans. There are many modern-day Lafayettes ready to help the Contras in their struggle for freedom. With the proper campaign, the Contras should easily be able to raise the $36 million in aid, including $3.6 million in lethal aid, that Congress refused to grant them.

That's about one-third of what will be spent on the 1988 presidential primaries alone, not to mention the general election. Certainly, many Americans will consider aiding the cause of freedom in our hemisphere more vital than supporting the same old cast of political charlatans back home.

President Reagan couldn't extract the aid from Congress. But now he can do something better: He can directly plead to the American people for the Contras' cause. He can use his bully pulpit to point out the increased repression that the Sandinista Communist junta, following the congressional vote, can be expected to impose on the Nicaraguan people. He can even try to make contributions to the Contras tax exempt.

Reagan will have a lot of rhetorical ammunition to use. The few minor concessions to human rights that the Soviet-backed Sandinistas have made in recent weeks, to help influence the congressional vote, should quickly be reversed. You can count on the Sandinistas to follow the Leninist principle of striking always when the forces of democracy are weak and in disarray.

Expect Comandante Daniel Ortega to travel to Moscow for his new marching orders. The flow of Soviet arms to the Sandinistas, and through them to El Salvador and points north, will increase

The defeat of Contra aid in Congress might be the foundation for a new tactic for victory. Nicaraguans pining for freedom can still hope that, though the US government has abandoned them, the American people have not.

Sexual orientation vs. conduc

WASHINGTON - At the age of 13, Perry Watkins acknowledged his homosexuality. Six years later, in 1967, he applied for enlistment in the U.S. Army. He confronted a direct question: "Do you have homosexual tendencies?" He answered "Yes." Nevertheless he was accepted; he rose through the ranks to become a respected sergeant. Now the Army wants him

The Watkins case provides a classic example, as old as Antigone and Creon, of the conflict between the rights of an individual and the powers of the state. Recently the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals grappled with the issue and came down 2-1 on the side of the individual. Watkins must be permitted to re-enlist unless the Army can show reasons for rejecting him that do not involve his sexual orientation.

The 9th Circuit's decision raises something of a landmark. By extension, the ruling could have a significant impact not only upon the armed services, but also upon many areas of public and private life. In effect the court held that being homosexual, for constitutional purposes, is like being black. Absent some "compelling" state purpose, discrimination against homosexuals, merely because of their sexual orientation, cannot be permitted.

In his 60-page opinion, Circuit Judge William A. Norris drew what he called a "critical distinction" between sexual orientation and sexual conduct. The same kind of distinction is familiar in First Amendment law. It is one thing to advocate the overthrow of government; it is quite another thing to hurl a bomb.

In the case at hand, the evidence established unequivocally that Watkins has been an exemplary soldier. He scored a perfect 85 on his most recent evaluation; an Army review board found 'no evidence suggesting that his behavior has had a degrading effect upon unit performance, morale or discipline, or upon his own job performance." His commanding officer described him as "one of our most respected and trusted

Nevertheless, under a regulation adopted by the Army in 1981, the Army ordered him discharged, not subject to re-enlistment. Other branches of the service have substantially the same regulations. In 1980 the same 9th Circuit upheld the Navy's discharge of three homosexuals. The unanimous opinion in that case was written by Judge Anthony Kennedy — the same Judge Kennedy who now joins the U.S. Supreme Court.

The 1980 case, Beller v. Middendorf, involved different facts and it arose under different constitutional provisions. The three plaintiffs in the Beller case had admitted homosexual acts; they contended that by summarily discharging them, the Navy had deprived them of their constitutional "liberty" without due process of law. By contrast, the Watkins case involves only sexual orientation, and Watkins contends that he was denied equal protection of the law.

The government's view is that the armed services are special. The Constitution gives Congress power "to make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces." As the Supreme Court many times has said, that power is entitled to unusual deference. Two years ago the high court reiterated that doctrine in a case involving a Jewish doctor in the Air Force. He asserted a First Amendment right to wear a yarmulke on duty. The court rejected his appeal: The military's power to enforce a uniform dress code superseded Captain Goldman's right to the free exercise of his religion.

In the Watkins case, the Army defended its regulation against homosexuals as one of compelling importance. Many straight soldiers despise homesexuals; their presence in a barracks creates - or could create - tensions that undermine discipline and morale; their admitted orientation clearly implies a desire for sexual gratification through sodomy. The 9th Circuit brushed these contentions aside. Some of these same arguments once were used to justify the segregation of blacks. A vague "desire" to engage in sodomy is not enough. It is only the criminal act that could justify dismissal from the armed services.

By declaring homosexuals to be a "suspect class" in terms of constitutional doctrine, the 9th Circuit opens a wide door. In times past. blacks, aliens, and religious and ethnic minorities have been so classed. Laws relating to them must pass "strict scrutiny." The effect of the Watkins decision, if upheld on appeal, could be far-reaching.

Notice that Sergeant Watkins did not contend for some constitutional right of privacy to engage in sodomy. The Supreme Court has ruled flatly that there is no such right. He contended only that homosexuals, as a class, are subjected to invidious discrimination because of an immutable characteristic, like skin color, that is irrelevant in constitutional law. On the contrary, the newsperson's position is one of leadership. His readers are his "voters."

Perhaps they deserve to know if he has investments that might subvert his objectivity. Perhaps he sometimes drinks too much, they are not encouraged to shoot people because they don't like them or just for the fun of it or because the chief might get a kick out of it. Journalists carry guns, too.'

Fortunately, Main Street America has a sixth sense that tends to neutralize the left-leaning politics of news reporters who would be newsmakers. Can anyone seriously imagine that many if any media elite voted for Reagan though the American majority did - twice?

du Pont can find some beef in rhetoric

By ROBERT WALTERS

MANCHESTER, N.H. (NEA) -Former Delaware Gov. Pierre S. (Pete) du Pont IV promotes himself as the purveyor of "damn right ideas," but that obviously didn't impress the middle-aged woman examining stuffed animals at a store here.

She scowled as du Pont, his family and a claque of his placard-bearing, slogan-chanting young supporters appeared for a rally at the Mall of New Hampshire a few days before the state's presidential primary.

An aspirant for the Republican presidential nomination, du Pont attracted a respectable crowd of several hundred people to listen to a speech in which he appealed for support of his "tough-minded principles and strong vision."

But hundreds of others clearly viewed the campaign rally as an in-trusion on their Saturday shopping. The mildly curious stopped to listen for a minute or two while the thoroughly disdainful tried to ignore the candidate's presence.

It's unfortunate they didn't pay closer attention because throughout the past several years du Pont has been making an important contribution to the nation's political dialogue.

Like the other presidential aspirants in both parties, he has his share of liabilities — a patronizing manner that often is the hallmark of children of privileged families, a penchant for absolutist positions and unrealistic solutions to complex problems, and a suspicious political record that has undulated through the years from liberal to conservative.

His lackluster performance in the early voting for the GOP presidential nominee suggests that he will not be the party's candidate. But in an era when too many presidential aspirants try to "sell the sizzle, not the steak," he has produced a measure of substance unmatched by most of his

Specifically, du Pont has based his campaign not on atmospherics, theatrics or cosmetics but on a collection of provocative approaches to the na-tion's problems. Among them:

• Eliminating agriculture's curious status as the nation's most socialized industry by phasing out the $23 billion in farm subsidies paid annually by the federal government.

"The sad truth is that our present agricultural policies simply do not work," says du Pont, suggesting that "the farmer (should) compete in the marketplace like every other businessman in America."

 Replacing an incoherent welfare system that in many cases involves paying able-bodied people to do nothing" with a program "that would substitute work for welfare and dignity for despair" by providing private and public jobs for the poor.

 Supplying educational vouchers to all parents, so they could select the public or private school they believe is best for their children — an approach that would force mediocre public schools to either improve or

Requiring random drug testing of high school students, with those who fail stripped of their driver's licenses for several years.

• Supplementing — and relieving the pressure upon — Social Security by providing dollar-for-dollar income tax credits for the contributions workers make to personally funded retirement accounts.

Some of du Pont's approaches are too strident or impolitic. Mandatory drug testing of teenagers, for example, could provoke violent rebellions in the nation's high schools. Similarly, the five-year schedule for eliminating farm subsidies is unrealistically short. Like other politicians, du Pont presumably understands, however, that his proposals are subject to modification and revision.

Most notable about du Pont's thoughtful efforts has been his enthusiasm for initiating debate on sensitive but important issues. Unfortunately, few of his rivals have availed themselves of the opportunity to advance the dialogue.

dministration wants flexibility on stopping

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration has made "no secret deals" on Afghanistan and will arm guerrillas there "until that support is no longer needed" to gain permanent withdrawal of Soviet troops, a senior official told Congress.

"We will not abandon the Afghan resistance," Robert Peck, deputy assistant seceretary of state, said Thursday in testimony before the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs.

Peck also welcomed a statement by resistance leaders that they would agree to an interim government consisting of some Afghans currently in Kabul, possibly non-Communist members of the Kremlin's client govern-

Peck denied charges by some resistance leaders and conservative members of Congress that the administration has agreed to a deal that would cut off aid at the beginning of a Soviet withdrawal, possibly allowing the Red Army or the Afghan regime to slaughter the insurgents.

A proposed U.N. agreement to end the Afghan war contains provisions the administration understands would bar the Kremlin from arming its clients in Kabul or waging offensive operations against the guerrillas, Peck said.

Continued military aid or offensive operations by the Soviets in Afghanistan would violate provisions of the U.N.sponsored accord guaranteeing "noninterference and non-intervention," he

Soviet officials have said they expect

U.S. aid to end 60 days after an agreement is signed, but have not said when they would stop aiding Kabul.

"It is a matter on which we are not completely satisfied, and we intend to pressure them," Peck said.

But the administration would oppose any congressional resolution calling for the president to continue military aid to the guerrillas until the departure of the last of the estimated 120,000 Soviet soldiers from Afghanistan, Peck said. Rep. David Dreier, R-Calif., and Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, are preparing such resolutions, congressional aides said.

"The president wishes not to have his hands tied," Peck said. "We will continue our assistance to the Afghan resistance until that support is no longer needed. But the question of when to cut off aid is one that should be left to the president.'

Peck denied that administration officials agreed in December 1985, without President Reagan's knowledge, to abide by the U.N. agreement before final details were worked out.

"There have been no secret deals," Peck said. "No deals at all."

The United Nations-sponsored talks. in which Pakistan is representing the guerrillas and the Kabul regime is representing the Soviets, are to resume next Wednesday. Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has said that if the talks produce an accord, Soviet troops will start leaving by May 15 and be gone within 10 months.

Pakistani officials, who originally demanded Soviet withdrawal over three months, now say eight months is acceptable, but they want the parties to agree on the formation of an interim government.

Soviet negotiators have accused Pakistan of introducing new demands at the last minute, a charge echoed by Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, subcommittee chairman.

"It may not be possible to fashion such a government, in which case it would be a tragedy if, as a consequence of such a condition, we ended up without an interim government but with the continued presence of Soviet forces in Afghanistan," said Solarz, D-N.Y.

The Pakistani demand is neither unreasonable nor likely to prevent a Soviet withdrawal, and may be discussed — if not resolved — in negotiations seperate from the U.N. talks in Geneva,

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater was hit with a barrage of questions at his regular press briefing Thursday about what the president meant on several subjects during his nationally televised news conference the night before.

Fitzwater avoided saying that Reagan had misspoken on any subject. But he played down Reagan's comment that outsiders were stirring up trouble in Israeli-occupied territories, and he also said an apparent contradiction with Secretary of State George Shultz on Iran arms sales was a matter of "interpretation.'

Reagan had been asked at the news conference about violence in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, and the beatings and shootings of Palestinians by Israeli forces

Shultz meets with Israeli leaders, protests called

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz today held the first round of talks with Israeli leaders on a new U.S. plan for Middle East peace, a day after Israeli soldiers killed two young Palestinians and wounded 13 others.

Shultz had breakfast with President Chaim Herzog, then met separately with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and his political rival, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres.

Shultz arrived in Jerusalem Thursday on a fiveday Middle East mission to present the United States' plan for ending 11 weeks of violence in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Police forces patrolling Jerusalem's streets were doubled in anticipation of massive Palestinian protests against Shultz's presence.

Shamir told reporters after his two-hour meeting with Shultz that the men had shared "a very friendly and thorough discussion about many subjects concerning the situation in the area, the aspirations of us all for getting peace."

Outside, about 1,000 right-wing Israelis demonstrated, carrying placards reading: "The land of Israel is not for sale," and "Shultz don't weaken your only friend in the Middle East."

Dozens of police patrolled on horseback and foot. Shamir said he and Peres would talk again during Shultz's stay in the region and said: "I hope by the end we will have some positive outcomes."

It is widely known that Shamir rejects key elements of the American plan — believed to be essentially an exchange of land for peace with the Arabs
— while Peres supports it in principle.

A U.S. official said some Palestinians had accepted invitations to meet Shultz tonight despite a ban from the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said 15 Arab moderates were invited and a few accepted. He declined to say how many or identify those invited.

In a leaflet distributed in the West Bank and Gaza, Palestinian organizers called for "a day of popular demonstrations" today.

The PLO, which demands a Palestinian state and does not recognize Israel, accuses the Reagan administration of having a pro-Israel bias. President Reagan said Wednesday that Shultz would consider talking with the PLO elsewhere in the region.

On Thursday, a general strike paralized the West Bank and Gaza Strip, with shops and schools closed, streets deserted and few Palestinians leaving for jobs in Israel.

Soldiers shot and killed two Arabs and wounded 13 in scattered clashes Thursday, hospital officials and Arab sources said. The army confirmed one death and said five Arabs were wounded. Since the wave of anti-occupation unrest began

Dec. 8, Israelis have killed at least 65 Arabs, according to U.N. figures.

Upon arriving Thursday, Shultz urged Israel to agree to talks with the Arabs

Members of right wing Israeli parties demonstrate against Shultz's peace initiative outside the Prime Minister's office as a mounted policeman passes.

Waldheim won't speak at the Nazi annexation of Austria anniversary

Trollingers Phillip's 66 1405 N. Hobart Saturday, February 27 12 Noon-6:00 p.m.

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — President Kurt Waldheim said he considered quitting but rejected the idea, adding that he dropped plans to speak at a ceremony marking the 50th anniversary of Nazi Germany's forcible annexation of Austria.

In an hourlong interview on Austrian television late Thursday, Waldheim said he had a "clear conscience" and repeatedly insisted he did nothing wrong despite the furor over his involvement in the German army under Adolf Hitler.

Asked whether the decision to cancel the speech had been "painful," Waldheim responded:
"It wasn't very painful since I will be present at the ceremony. "I thought that with this decision, which was my own initiative I might add, I would contribute to the orderly carrying out of the solemn ceremony," Waldheim told the two Austrian reporters conducting the interview.

The 69-year-old Waldheim said he will address the nation in a televised broadcast on March 10, the eve of the ceremony marking the "Anschluss," when Austria was absorbed into the German Reich in 1938. Austria was liberated by the Allies in the spring of Waldheim opponents had promised to take to the streets in demonstrations if the president went ahead with the talk on March 11 in the Hofburg Palace.

Numerous leading Austrian politicians said a Waldheim speech was not the way to lead the country into reflecting on its Nazi past.

There have been calls for Waldheim's resignation since March 1986, when Austrian and U.S. media and the World Jewish Congress reported that he served as a lieutenant with the German army in the occupied Balkans during World War II.

Classified ad not protected by first amendment, judge says

HOUSTON (AP) - A Soldier of Fortune magazine ad, subject of a negligence suit that seeks millions of dollars in damages, does not fall under First Amendment protection because the ad represents a commercial form of speech, a federal judge

U.S. District Judge David Hittner issued the written opinion Thursday, elaborating on a pretrial decision that refused to dismiss the $22.5 million suit filed against the magazine by the family of a Texas woman slain in 1985.

In an eight-page decision, Hittner cited several federal rulings that allowed negligence suits where commercial speech was the issue, Hittner

"This court's decision is not intended to place upon every publisher an undue burden of investigation into the nature of every advertisement submitted for publication," he said. "It is intended only to permit a cause of action for negligence."

According to the judge, the magazine acknowledges the ad fell into the realm of commercial speech and to allow dismissal of the suit under First Amendment grounds "would afford to commercial speech a broader protection than that given core speech.

Gary Black, 18, and Marjorie Einmann, 64, are suing the self-styled "Journal for Professional Adventurers" for running a classified ad that led to the killing of Sandra Black, Gary Black's mother and Mrs. Einmann's daughter.

Robert Black is on Texas' death row for paying John Wayne Hearn $10,000 to kill his wife at her Bryan home in February 1985. Hearn is serving three life terms in Florida for the Black slaying and two others in that state.

Hearn's ad appeared in four issues of the magazine in late 1984, offering services of former Marine and Vietnam veterans and weapons specialists with jungle warfare expertise for "highrisk assignments" in the United States or over-

Attorneys for the magazine do not dispute the ad brought Hearn and Black together, but insist Soldier of Fortune publisher Robert Brown had no way of knowing the ad was for illegal activity. Brown has testified he would have halted the classified ads for personal services if he had known they were linked to crimes.

Hittner, responding Thursday to other points raised by defense attorneys prior to trial, also said the question of whether it was reasonable for Hearn's ad to appear in Soldier of Fortune was for the jury to decide.

Magazine attorneys contended in their pre-trial motion for dismissal that Brown had no duty to care for the plaintiffs in the case.

Hittner, however, said that while there was "a general duty to act as a reasonable person would act," the jury should decide whether the magazine

On a third point, the judge refused to dismiss the suit on the grounds Soldier of Fortune could not foresee the likelihood that Hearn's criminal conduct would take place, saying that question also should be determined by the jury.

Brown, the publisher and founder of the Boulder. Colo.-based magazine, was expected to return to the stand today as the trial completed a second week. Brown last week was called as an adverse witness for the plaintiffs and his attorneys reserved cross-examination until later.

But William Guthrie, now a free-lance writer living in Idaho, said the ads continued because Brown wanted them."Certain kinds of classified ads appeared to trivialize the magazine," Guthrie said. "If Soldier of Fortune was trying to look like a legitimate military news magazine, to have ads for brass knuckles and so forth seemed inappropriate.

Five injured when gunman shoots in retirement home

ARLINGTON (AP) - About 16 people gathered for a board meeting at a retirement home scrambled for cover when a former resident walked into the room and started shooting, authorities said.

The 79-year-old man, who apparently was disgruntled about being evicted, opened fire with a rifle Thursday, wounding four residents and sending a fifth into cardiac arrest, said Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson.

Four people suffered minor gunshot wounds in the shooting at the Masonic Home for the Aged, he said

A fifth person, Willie Joe Wright, 67, suffered a heart attack and was in critical condition at Arlington Memorial Hospital late Thursday, hospital officials said.

The man surrendered peacefully shortly after the shooting, Anderson said.

"Apparently, they had a board meeting and one former resident, who was apparently disgruntled, walked into the board room and started shooting" at the 15 to 16 people gathered there, Anderson said

Officials at the man's current residence, the Arlington Villa retirement home, said they were shocked to hear of the shooting.

"He is a good resident, very congenial and sociable," said Arlington Villa administrator Gennie Pace.

Ms. Pace said the man had been admitted Dec. 1, 1987, to the Arlington Villa. The man was being held late Thursday on investigative charges of attempted murder at Arlington City Jail, said Arlington police Officer Bob Westbrook. Anderson said the suspect had lived at the Masonic home for three years, but was evicted in September 1987 for breaking After the shooting, the suspect vent to a kitchen area Injured in the shooting were Frank Smith, 77, who was treated and released from Arlington Memorial Hospital; Eldon Brooks, 54, John Thompson, 49. and Dorothy Heath, 67, all of whom were in fair condition early Friday.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: But because of his great love for us, God, who is rich in mercy, made us alive with Christ even when we were dead in transgressions - it is by grace you have been saved. (Ephesians 2:4-5 NIV)

Not being a winter person, I usually rouse from my cold weather state of torpidity only to look for early signs of spring.

Usually the earliest sign I find is the green tips of daffodil leaf blades pressing through the packed, frigid earth of my flower bed. Soon the bed is a stand of the narrow, graceful leaves. Buds appear on sturdy stems promising a profusion of golden coronas.

The promise is realized by daffodils belonging to other people all over town; but, for some reason which remains a mystery to me, mine rarely manage to blossom.

Late last winter, I eagerly watched my one daffodil which appeared to have a healthy bud that was likely to survive and bloom. But winter had other ideas, and the sky opened and forgot to close. The resulting snowfall banked a 6foot drift across the front of my house, burying the struggling little plant under a crushing weight of white.

Days later, the drift absorbed into the soil and revealed a bent and muddied but fully-flowered daffodil!

Freed from the weight of the snow, the remarkable, yellowcrowned plant gradually lifted its face out of the mud and stretched in the sunshine.

Many people procrastinate accepting Jesus as Savior because they don't consider themselves "good enough."

I had a friend who said, "I can't be a Christian until I quit smoking; I refuse to be a hypocrite." Such people are resistant because they feel a genuine responsibility to save themselves, yet they subconsciously realize they are powerless to do so.

Nowhere does the Bible say people possess the spiritual authority to scrub our souls clean to make ourselves presentable to the Lord. On the contrary, Christ alone bore the full burden for our sins, took all our punishment and rinsed away our spiritual grime.

Because God loves us, Jesus suffered our soul sickness. Because He loves us, God watches us and hears our cries when we're still buried under the crushing weight of our own misdeeds.

Because He loves us, He graces us with forgiveness and eternal life though we are yet imperfect. Because He loves us, He gives us power to gradually shed our sinful burdens and lift our faces out of the mud. Because He loves us, He warms and nourishes us with Sonshine.

Just because God loves us! (If you are seeking salvation, read John 3 of the New Testament. If you are in need of spiritual counseling, contact a clergyman of your choice.) ° 1988 Charlotte Barbaree

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Stronger morals and education are the best prevention against AIDS, the state's Roman Catholic bishops say in a personal letter.

The letter rejects the use of condoms or other forms of "safe sex" to prevent the deadly disease, and reaffirms the church's ban on extramarital sex, abortion, the use of contraceptives and masturbation.

The bishops deplore what they call the "dehumanizing effects of prostitution, pornography and adult entertainment centers based on sexual exploitation" and discourages "recreational

AUSTIN (AP) — People who think ministers work only one day a week should talk to Connie Morrison, an Episcopalian seminarian and part-time chaplain at Seton Medical Center.

She recalled a typical night on the job, when she saw nine people scheduled for surgery, counseled a man threatening suicide, and comforted the family of a man who died in intensive care.

"You better believe you have to be strong," said Ms. Morrison, 49. "But you can show emotion. A family or patient may need to reach out to your humanity. Sometimes it's unwise to be stoic"

Ms. Morrison, a divorced mother from Columbia, Mo., wasn't always so secure in her ministry. "I fought them all a long time," she said. "I kept saying. 'No.' God kept saying 'Yes.' God won."

Austin is home to two major seminaries attended by people like Ms. Morrison with a commitment toward God, church and humanity. The Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Southwest includes 78 students taught by 10 full-time faculty. The Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary includes 15 full-time faculty teaching 256 students.

Although the Austin seminaries, both a few blocks north of the University of Texas, consider their main business to be the preparation of ministers, they also ready students for careers in Hispanic, education, lay and social service ministries. Both seminaries train pastors for several Protestant denominations.

Each school is a microcosm of the greater church. And each institution acts as a spiritual pathfinder and focus for the communities they serve.

The seminaries, which often share faculty and resources, have developed a friendly rivalry. For the last seven years, the institutions have competed in the Polity Bowl, a touch-football grudge match between two fierce God squads.

Students at Episcopal Theogical Seminary gather for services.

"I wouldn't call it a holy crusade, but the number of people who leave with signs of martyrdom increases each year," said the Rev. Bill Hedrick, vice president for development at the Presbyterian seminary. In the 1987 bowl, the Presbyterians edged the Episcopalians 16-14.

The Very Rev. Durstan McDonald is dean of the Episcopal seminary, one of 12 in the country serving the American Episcopal Church, part of the International Anglican Communion.

McDonald presides over a mature, if somewhat impecunious, student body. More than two-thirds of the seminarians receive financial aid to help cover the $5,000 annual tuition. There are twice as many married as single students, whose average age is 37. Many are starting a second career.

One of the biggest changes McDonald has seen in the last 25 years has been the increasing number of women entering the ministry. The seminary is 47 percent female. "Women raised questions about leadership styles," he said. "Priests were once top-down managers, not team leaders. The reverse is now true."

The seminary looks for leadership qualities in both genders, which means recluses need not apply. "There are few monastic or withdrawn types," he said. "Seminarians are every bit as down-to-earth as most professionals."

Dwight Helt, a senior from Oklahoma, wouldn't have agreed with McDonald three years ago. "When I first got here, I thought the Episcopal Church was in trouble," he said. "The seminarians were all geeks. Then I got less confident in myself and started seeing others as real people. I began to see their diversity as a plus."

William Bennett, provost since 1984, believes there are aspects of seminary life that distinguish it from most varieties of graduate study, such as daily chapel, retreats and meditative "quiet days."

"This seminary is in part a commuter campus," said Bennett, who helps the dean administer the $2 million annual budget. "Relatively few traditions have been established in its 35-year history. But community is considered an important part of the education."

Sophia Boettcher, a Lutheran transfer student, enjoys the sense of community. "Oh, we party. We drink wine, laugh and share one another's problems. We met at Scholz Garten as well as in chapel."

Ms. Boettcher, who was reared in Harlem, plans to work in the Hispanic ministry.

The seminary reflects the fact that the Anglican Church worldwide is no longer predominantly Anglo. The Center for Hispanic Ministries helps Southwestern churches minister more effectively to changing populations. The Lutheran Wartburg Seminary in Iowa also sends students to the Austin seminary to participate in its Hispanic Studies Program. Most seminarians, however, are white: The school is 82 percent Anglo, 12 percent Hispanic and 6 percent other minorities.

The Rev. Juan Jimenez serves as vicar at San Francisco de Asis, a bilingual Episcopal mission, and is an advisor at the Episcopal Amnesty Center and Centro Buen Samaritano in South Austin. Technically a seminarian, he was ordained early because of the need for bilingual ministers.

Jimenez, 42, came to the United States from Cuba after the 1961 revolution. "It was a new experience for me when I came to Austin to serve the poor," he said. "I hadn't experienced poverty firsthand. Some of our parishioners live in cars. But the poor play an important part in God's economy."

Seminary administrators say they are producing shepherds in quantity. But it wasn't always so. Thirty years ago, faculty emphasized research more than pastoral studies, to the occasional displeasure of parishes.

The Rev. Chuck Huffman, a seminary alumnus, recalls the troubled 1960s, when the seminary nearly went bankrupt and his class consisted on only three graduating seniors.

"Theology was in turmoil," said Huffman, rector at St. Matthews in Austin. There were several "death of God" theologians in residence, including Paul Van Buren, author of the controversial "Secular Meaning of the Gospel."

"It was also a time of charismatic, lay and liturgical renewal," he said. "When local parishes were exposed to what the theologians were saying and learned the seminary was producing scholars, not priests, they felt like the place had gone to hell. Financial support dried up."

The Rev. Frank Sugeno, professor of church history, has taught at the seminary since 1964. "The emphasis now is on Christian formation: on how religious tradition can form lifestyles and provide intellectual tools for living a Christian life."

To see how a church service was meant to be conducted, visit a seminary chapel. The minister or minister-to-be almost always preaches to a full and attentive house. The congregation prays with conviction. Best of all, everybody knows the hymns by heart.

That's the way it was at the Presbyterian seminary chapel on a recent morning. Senior seminarian Mickey McCandless conducted the service. He led a prayer of confession appropriate for future ministers. "We have loved our buildings more than our brothers and sisters. We have been more concerned with budgets than justice and peace."

The Rev. Andy Dearman, who teaches Old Testament studies, acknowledged that ministers sometimes get more caught up with church than Christ. "Seminary teaches that buildings and budgets are only a means to a greater end — the formation of a Christian community."

John and Clare Hirling were lawyers in Houston when the came to the seminary looking for a new place in life. The Rev. Jack Stotts, president of the 85-yearold Presbyterian institution, one of 10 in the United States, says they are not unusual.

"Many feel like what they have been doing hasn't made much of a difference in people's lives," he said. "They feel like God has other plans for them."

At an average entry age of 31, the Presbyterian seminarians are younger than their Episcopalian counterparts. Their interests are similarly universal.

"We try to give students ways of dealing with the world's problems, whether it's AIDS or the ozone layer," Stotts said. "They take classes in human sexuality and seminars on social justice."

and seminars on social justice."
But the current generation of seminarians is more concerned with social services than social change, Stotts said, more interested in setting up food pantries and shelters for the homeless than in lobbying the Legisla-

"We spend the first year at seminary mad," said Ann Rosewall, a senior and native of Chicago. "We wonder what we're doing here, what difference the classes make and when we are actually going to get to help people."

"The faculty's job is to get the students to unpack their belief system like a suitcase," said the Rev. Cynthia Campbell, associate professor of theology and ministry. "They lay it out on the bed and decide what they want to keep."

The student profile has changed over the years from mostly single males to a group that is now 40 percent female, 47 percent married. Of the 256 students, 32 are minorities.

Baptists to scrutinize employee beliefs

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Southern Baptist Home Missions Board, in a move it said was not part of its customary hiring practice, had its president question a prospective employee about his beliefs in front of board members

A key question, put by the new board president, the Rev. Larry L. Lewis, was whether the interviewee believed the Bible is "truth without any mixture of

After responding that he did, and answering various other questions, the applicant, Richard Reasoner from Kansas City, Mo., was hired as director of counseling services at board offices in Atlanta Ga

Atlanta, Ga.

The interrogation signaled a pattern of closer examination of employee views, particularly about the Bible, as newly mandated in the 14.6 million-member denomination, the country's largest Protestant body.

Its convention last month in St.

Louis directed such scrutiny after a fundamentalist wing defeated moderates and won its ninth straight annual victory, solidifying that bloc's control of the denomination.

The achievement culminated a nine-year drive, begun in 1979, in which strategists projected that timetable for gaining control of denominational operations, through accumulating presidential appointments.

With fundamentalists now attaining majorities of trustees for most of the denomination's 24 agencies and institutions through presidential appointive powers, the re-elected president, the Rev. Adrian Rogers of Memphis,

"I'm not swaggering over the fact that we've won and others have lost. I'm grateful our denomination is standing fast in the storm."

The convention, in adopting a peace committee's report, told seminaries and other agencies to choose staffs who believe the Bible is without error "in all realms of reality" and "all fields of knowledge."

As examples, the report said this means believing that Adam an Eve were real persons, that all biblically described miracles were actual events, that the Bible is historically accurate, that as it says, Moses wrote its first five Insistence on such literalistic approaches differs from the old-line Baptist principle that each believer interprets the Bible as each understands it — a heritage called "the crown jewel of Baptists."

Moderate leaders contend the newly prescribed views amount to "creedalism" — imposing a creed of beliefs — something Baptists historically have shunned under their motto, "No creed but the Bible."

After the peace committee was authorized to monitor compliance with the new criteria for the next two to three years, one moderate member, the Rev. Winfred Moore of Amarillo, Texas, resigned in protest.

Rogers, who as president wields apportive powers greater than that of any U.S. church fi-

Taxes: An ever-changing, ever-confusing business

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If it didn't hurt so much, you might be able to step back and appreciate what critics are citing as a monumental example of man's folly - the tax system.

But for most people it probably does hurt too much to look, since they are involved deeply, intricately, confusingly, often desperately and frequently bizarrely.

Consider: It is entirely possible, says Professor Robert Doyle, for a taxpayer to be actively rather than passively involved in a real estate matter that, by official definition, is a passive

A few days ago the Internal Revenue Service tried to explain the riddle, but it is difficult to believe it succeeded in doing much more than adding to the confusion of those who seek to understand.

Such anomalies aren't uncommon. The latest tax law, for instance is said to be fairer and simpler. It is neither, says Doyle, who helps train chartered financial analysts at the American College in Bryn Mawr, Pa. Americans have been "mugged," he says.

Doyle's comment is one of an almost infinite list of criticisms by an almost endless number of

Among the criticisms:

-Many members of Congress didn't even understand what they had done in passing the latest tax bill, having bothered to read only a small part of it.

-There has been almost no "tax policy" in recent years. In the span between 1964 and 1984, Congress enacted 16 major tax bills and dozens of lesser bills.

Example: The Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 promised corporate tax reductions averaging $51 billion in the years 1987 to 1989. But by 1986, says the Tax Foundation, this reduction had become a $20 billion-a-year in-

-Under the latest tax laws, individuals are responsible for adjusting their withholding statements in order to avoid underwithholding. In 1987, millions didn't. The Internal Revenue Service forgave most of them.

Sale of stolen cars brisk in Paraguay

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) -Pssst! Interested in a late-model car at 33 percent to 50 percent off the regular list price? Then come to Paraguay, stolen car haven.

Only 26 percent of the 140,000 cars in this landlocked nation have been bought legally, according to the latest statistics kept by the Chamber of Automobile and Motorcycle Distributors.

Of the remainder, Brazilian diplomats claim at least 60,000 are stolen from their country and whisked into Paraguay past border guards who seem uninterested in the legal status of incoming cars.

Observers say the stolen car phenomenon first began in 1978 when economy car models such as Brazilian-made Volkswagens were sneaked into the country and sold at below-market prices to Paraguayans who could not afford a regularly priced imported car.

Paraguay, a nation of 3.7 million with few resources in the mid-section of South America, does not produce any vehicles on its own so most cars are Brazilian-made or manufactured in Argentina. But a word of warning: The stolen car craze has grown to such proportions that some unscrupulous car salesmen will sell a car without papers only to steal it back again within days.

"A friend once bought a brand new car without documents and immediately took it to a garage to change all the locks," said a Spanish diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity.

'The guy in the garage took one look at the car and said, 'Lady, I'll change the locks for you but I just think2I've changed the locks on this same car three times in the past week,' " the diplomat

In a move to control the influx of illegal cars and recover lost revenue from auto imports, the Paraguayan government passed two measures called the whitewash law" in 1980 and in

The laws allowed those driving cars without papers to pay a moderate fee to "nationalize" the vehicle, thus acquiring documents required to reclaim the auto if it was stolen in Paraguay.

The catch was if the owner of a nationalized" car tried to return to Brazil or Argentina, he ran the risk of losing the vehicle to border officials who keep a master list of stolen cars.

But instead of regulating the situation, the law produced an increase in the trafficking of stolen

"People don't care if they have a car that is nationalized and has no documents because they never leave Paraguay," said a salesman at the Motorauto dealership. Dubbed "Mau," or bad in Portuguese, stolen cars cost about a third to half the price of a car legally imported to Paraguay.

For instance, a 1986 Brazilian mid-size sedan called the Santana is priced at $3,200 because it has no documents - hence is likely stolen — while the same car with papers is offered in town for "Lamentably, there are no exact figures but I believe 75 percent of the cars in Paraguay are 'mau,' " said Victor Servin of the Chamber of Automobile and Motorcycle Distributors.

While enforcement up to now has been notoriously relaxed about stolen cars, Servin said government officials have begun cooperating with their counterparts in neighboring countries to curb the problem.

So far, Brazilian insurance companies have managed to recover 150 of the 60,000 stolen cars they claim are in Paraguay.

"There are people who say, Why are you coming to me to repossess my car when everybody in Paraguay has a stolen car,' said Julio Cesar Martinessi, who represents 43 insurance companies in Brazil.

State teacher organization opens lesson plan contest

AUSTIN — The Texas Federation of Teachers (TFT) will award five $500 prizes to teachers who submit winning entries in TFT's second annual "Outstanding Lesson Plan" contest.

One prize will be awarded in each of the following categories: grades K-3, grades 4-6, grades 7-9, grades 10-12 and special, including special education and vocational education.

"Texas teachers have many brilliant ways of communicating their subject matter to their students," said TFT President John Cole. "We're pleased to be able to honor some of those techniques and provide a forum through which teachers can share their expertise with one another.'

The lesson plans, which will be judged by a committee of practicing classroom teachers, will be added to TFT's lesson plan catalogue. The catalogue will be made available to any teacher who

To be eligible for consideration, entries must be submitted to the TFT office by April 15. Winners will be announced in June. Entries should be sent to: TFT Lesson Plan Contest, P.O. Box 776, Austin,

Knowledge gives teen-agers power to make right choices

DEAR ABBY: As medical professionals who have worked with children for more than 24 years, we truly appreciate current, informative material presented in a nonjudgmental fashion with a dash of humor, and seasoned thoroughly with honesty, love, warmth and concern for our children of today.

AMARILLO (AP) - An assistant coach at West Texas State University says allegations made by the school against fired head football coach Bill Kelly aren't entirely accurate.

A statement released Wednesday by WTSU alleged that Kelly, fired Jan. 29, withheld information about circumstances surrounding the death of a football player during a drill in March

The school also said players and coaches alleged that Kelly altered the practice drill and yelled obscenities Curtis Johnson after he collapsed. Johnson was pronounced dead the following

In its statement, the university said assistant coach Butch Boegler gave WTSU Athletic Director Bruce Grimes previously undisclosed information about circumstances surrounding

"He did run over and yell something like, 'Get up! God damn it, get up!'" he said. "And when players went to help him, he did say, 'Leave him alone.' But in no way was Bill Kelly responsible for Curtis Johnson dying on the football field.

"Those just aren't the kind of words Coach Kelly would use," said senior Damon Hogan, on the Buffs' 1986-87 football team. 'And I've seen him at his maddest."

Kelly also denies cursing the player, said his attorney

'Coach Kelly adamantly denies the remarks that they (WTSU) say he made," said Jim Bob Brown. "I can't imagine who they're quoting and where they're getting the statements they're making.

CALGARY, Alberta - Debi Thomas spoke diplomatically, but the judges' scoring sparked thunderous boos from the Winter Olympics crowd and the pungent comment, "It stinks," from her

The judges flipped for Katerina Witt's Broadway boogie-woogie blue feathers, soft shoe and "Hello, Dolly" - and scored her much higher on artistic merit after giving Thomas the edge on technical merit.

Thomas performed as precisely as a surgeon, a profession she hopes to pursue. Witt showed the pizzazz of the actress she wants to

The numbers added up to a slight lead by Thomas, of San Jose, Calif., over the world champion Witt of East Germany going into the free skating program Saturday night, with Liz Manley of Canada in third.

Any of them can win the gold. None of them wants to rile pletely. "Of course, I hoped to have higher marks," Thomas allowed after she received a 5.6, four 5.7s and four 5.8s for artistic merit. Witt got one 5.8 and the rest 5.9s.

The partisan, American flagwaving crowd of 19,000 was more vocal in its disapproval and Thomas' coach, Alex McGowan, was flat angry. In a departure from decorum, McGowan held his nose to show he thought the judging was a little smelly.

"It hurts me when I see her skating so well and she's dropped in artistic marks when they raise Katarina," he said later. "Katarina did skate well - I have no problem there — but I'm a little concerned it may happen again in the long program. No matter how well Debi skates, she will be dropped in the long."

The judges indeed appear to have drawn the lines between Thomas and Witt, but that could work to Thomas' advantage in the free skate.

Witt raises her hands in triumph.

WHITE DEER - The Kelton Lions flirted with disaster Thursday night and disaster

It took an overtime period, but when it was over, the Lions pped by the Adrian Matadors 84-81 in 1A area action. The Lions move now to subregional action and will play the winner of tonight's Paducah-Nazareth game next Monday or Tuesday.

With two seconds left in regulation play, and Kelton trailing 75-73, Adrian's Chris Rohrbach fouled Andy Singleton. Singleton, who had already made all four of his prior fourth quarter free throws, nailed both ends of the one-onone to tie the game at 75 and send it into OT In the extra frame, post Brett Buckingham was 2-of-2 from both the field and the line to account for 6 of the Lions' overtime points.

After Chad Caddel's free throw, the Lions took an 84-81 lead with 6 seconds remaining. The only thing Adrian could do was try for a three-pointer, something they had not done with any consistency all night, hitting only 5-of-16.

Jason Blankenship, who had connected on 4-of-7 threepointers, shot the ball from long range with just 2 seconds left, but the attempt failed and the Lions stumbled away with

Had it not been for the closeexpectedly tough game Adrian played, the big story of the night would have been Chad Caddel. Because of Kelton's come-from-behind, overtime victory, Caddel's spectacular effort had to take second billing.

Caddel finished the night with 38 points, which is only part of the story. He had 15 points at the end of the first quarter, 21 at halftime and 32 of his 38 by the end of the third quarter.

Had Caddel not gotten into foul trouble, forcing him on the bench for much of the fourth quarter, he would easily have finished the game with well over 40. Caddel's high total was largely a result of his precision from three-point range. After hitting 3-of-4 in the first quarter, he ended the night shooting 4-of-8 from that dis-

"Chad's had better games,"

Kelton Coach Dave Johnson said, noting one 39-point game earlier in the season. "Brett (Buckingham) played well considering he was hobbled. and Andy hit 'em when we had to have 'em.'

Johnson was disappointed in his team's defensive letdown in the fourth quarter nute span that saw the Matadors rise from a five-point deficit to a short lived two-point lead before Singleton's last second free throws.

"We didn't play any de-fense," Johnson said. "I knew they had good outside shooters, but I didn't know they were that good. They shot our lights out.

Adrian ends the year at 16-13: Kelton is now 22-5.

U.S. hockey team takes seventh place

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) -The U.S. hockey team went out of the Winter Olympics as it went in, shooting it up at the Stampede

Playing the typical, highscoring game that has been an American trademark in this tournament, the United States beat Switzerland 8-4 on Thursday to salvage seventh place.

It was the same place in which the American team finished in the 1984 Games at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, but it seemed more satisfying to Coach Dave Peterson, who was an assistant in 1984

"The team played very well, as well as it's capable of playing,' Peterson said, regarding the overall performance of the Americans, who wound up with a 3-3 record.

"The team's been great," Peterson added. "They were a group of young men who worked their rear ends off. They were great ambassadors for American Peterson's only criticism of his team was a poor third-period performance Sunday against West Germany that resulted in a 4-1 loss and cost the Americans a chance at the medal round.

and only one bad period of hockey," Peterson said. "They acquitted themselves well in this tournament, as far as I'm concerned."

From start to finish, the Americans stuck to their guns - a highpowered offensive style that made things exciting. They wound up outscoring the opposition, 35-31.

Their defense, on the other hand, was almost nonexistent.

The team played a strong forechecking game, that is, aggressive," Peterson said. "It's a calculated risk that you take in a tournament like this.'

The Americans peppered highly regarded Swiss goaltender Olivier Aken with 31 shots Thursday, en route to the second-highest scoring output of their six games. They beat Austria 10-6 on opening

Before Thursday's game, Peterson said he asked his team to play for themselves, for their pride and for their country.

After the game, he "thanked them for a good year.'

The Americans came out Thursday as if they meant to prove something.

After Peter Jaks scored for the Swiss just 19 seconds into the game, the Americans scored five "This team played six games straight goals, two on power

The Americans led 2-1 after one period on goals by Clark Donatelli and Kevin Stevens.

Goals by Scott Young, Lane Mac-Donald and Kevin Miller made it 5-1 after two periods In the third period, Dave Snug-gerud, Corey Millen and Steve Leach scored for the Americans, while Bruno Rogger had two goals and Manuele Celio one for the Swiss. The Swiss had beaten a formidable Finnish team earlier in the tournament and came within an evelash of making the medal round. Despite the loss to the United States, Swiss coach Simon Schenk said, "We've done better than we expected.'

After their final game, the Americans started scattering, some to professional teams, but most of them headed home.

"The Olympics have been the best experience of my life," said MacDonald. "Now there's a letdown. Suddenly, it's over.'

Unheralded sport gains popularity at XV Winter Olympics

HOW TIMES HAVE CHANGED

On Oct. 1, 1960, Southern Mississippi U. defeated West Texas State at Hattiesburg, Miss. Clearing out of the press box at games end, one of the SMU athletic department officials casually inquired: "Do you have black football players?" "Yes," was the response, "we have a walk-on freshman from Amarillo."

Well, that ends our series," said the Mississippian. And he was right. It had begun with the Jan. 1, 1957 Sun Bowl Game and had continued each grid season since. "State law says that we, Louisiana, Alabama and Georgia cannot play against any teams that are racially mixed," he sadly explained. The hiatus ran for eight seasons, before things changed and the schools compéted again in 1969 as NCAA Division I members.

That incident came to mind as I read an article in this week's edition of The Sporting News. A fullpage featured, datelined "Hat-tiesburg, Miss.", related how the SMU Golden Eagles had just became the first institution in the history of major college basketball to have four players score more than 1,200 points apiece for the same school at the same time.

Accompanying the story were pictures of the four seniors-... Casey Fisher, Randolph Keys, Derrek Hamilton and John White...all outstanding black athletes!

THE GREAT INTEREST given the relatively unknown sport of curling by the media covering the Calgary Olympic Winter Games is interesting. Curling is one of the main reasons I wound up in Pampa from my native Wisconsin.

The daily newspaper I was working for in the Badger State was family owned and operated. The owner forbid any sports coverage unless it was about hunting and fishing or CURL-ING, where his interests lay Now, curling is fun, but a difficult spectator sport due to the rink size and playing area layout. Game results and league standings were about the total possible

The written history of the sport is limited. George Ruthven, calSports Forum

led the father of the national game of Scotland (not golf), wrote "Muses Threnodie", the first written record of curling. An early 'stone' weighed 117 pounds, if you can imagine sliding that down the ice. Today they have various weights, from five to 42 pounds. And if the Gordon International Medal pops up in a sports trivia quiz, it is played for annually and is the curling classic in America.

That's all you need to know about curling. But I've often thought some enterprising soul should build a sports facility that has bowling alleys, curling lanes and horse show pitching areas all under one roof. The fluid athletic ability required make the three sports rather similar but with different achievement goals. Leagues built around individual and team play could be conducted year 'round on a triathlete competition for men, women, children and families.

IF YOU CAN HANG AROUND long enough, the good things start to happen. It is good then, to see longtime friend Ed Murphy starting to do well as head basketball coach at Ole Miss. For many years he was the unheralded power behind coaching successes of two head coaches who went on to major successes. Murphy was the recruiter for

Lew Henson at New Mexico State, Henson now one of the senior members of the Big Ten, coaching the Fighting Illini. When Lew took that job, Murphy joined up with Harry Miller at Wichita State, and helped build that Kansas institution into New York University of the Midwest and a major powerhouse, surpassing the efforts of Kansas and Kansas State. It all came about because Murphy had developed a strong friendship with a New York City basketball freak. The man got the nickname "Pieman" because he worked for a pie-maker, delivering the luscious products early each morning along a route of commercial customers. This working hour schedule allowed The Pieman to attend high school basketball games every afternoon and night that some were scheduled. He not only had a good eye for a tasty pie, but was an unusually able evaluator of high school talent. He could look at a young athlete off the NYC playgrounds and forecast how good he would be as a college player. He followed up by checking on the young athlete's character and grades as best he was able.

Then, Murphy would arrive on a recruiting jaunt and use all the Pieman's information to complete his own evaluation and possible recruiting lode. He brought folks like Bob Elmore, Lynbert "Cheese" Johnson, Cal Bruton and Pampa's MIke Edgar to Shockerville. The Syracuse, N.Y. native played for Henson at Hardin-Simmons and while recruiting for him at NMSU brought in such stellar performers as Sam Lacey, Roland Tree" Grant and Jimmy Collins. Prior to that he coached Avoca, Texas H.S. to a 56-14 mark over two seasons.

Moving to Ole Miss from the head job at Delta State, his first recruit came from home, his son Sean, a 6-7 talented sophomore, who wiggled out of an already signed letter-of-intent with Stanford. With some redshirts awaiting action next year, watch for Ole Miss to assume a surprise role as Southeastern Conference contender starting next season, as Ed Murphy (with help from the Pieman) starts getting some of his just desserts.

The Cubs said they would soon begin installing a $5-million state-ofthe-art lighting system.

The completion date is still uncertain, but the project should be completed in four to six months," the Cubs said in a statement read by spokeswoman Doris Acosta after the council

That would mean Davis and his teammates should be making history sometime in July. The Chicago Tribune reported that the first Wrigley night game could be July 18 against the San Francisco Giants.

The Cubs have played for 112 seasons, 72 in Wrigley, without benefit "I just want to play in of night home games, and haven't had a trip to can get my name in the the World Series since

Softball meeting planned March 7

The City of Pampa Parks & Recreation Department will hold its annual organizational meeting for summer league softball at 7 p.m. Monday, March 7 in the city commission room at City Hall.

Coaches or managers are urged to attend this meeting to obtain pertinent information concerning the leagues.

Also, any players who would like to play, but aren't already on a team are welcome to come and organize new teams.

Roster forms, fact sheets and bylaws will be available at the Parks & Recreation Department Office or the data may be picked up at the meeting.

U.S. POSTAL SERVICE OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT...FOR ALL CANDIDATES
PLANNING TO SIGN UP FOR THE CLERKCARRIER EXAM

OUT.

A recent issue of Newsweek magazine noted that the average Postal worker earns $27,500 in salary and benefits. Men and women, regardless of age or experience are eligible to apply. Caurses to help you prepare for the above exams will be offered by Postal Exam Workshops. Instructors Larry Herman and Bill Harold are considered by many to be the most qualified on how to glain employment with the Postal Service. These exams do not test general knowledge. Proper preparation is the key to getting hired, because people are hired for these positions based on their exam score. The easy to learn techniques taught in these courses were designed by Mr. Harold. He is a former Postal employee, the author of 3 Postal Exam Guides, and has repeatedly scored 100% on Postal tests.

GUARANTEE: The time saving and accuracy-increasing methods tought in this course are so powerful that we will enter into a written agreement.
