Gething holds 'Super Bowl' balloons.

It's a plane! — no, it's 'Super Bowl' balloons!

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Staff Writer

LAKETON — Tuesday started out as just another day for 60-year-old Gray County Rancher Bill Gething.

But that soon changed. About 9:30 a.m., while feeding cattle on his ranch 30 miles east of Pampa, Gething looked toward the sky and noticed a string of 25 balloons descending upon him and his herd. At first glance, he thought nothing of it.

But then Gething remembered how just prior to last Sunday's Washington-Denver Super Bowl, thousands of balloons were released as part of the opening festivities.

Sure enough, the balloons were red and yellow — team colors of the Super Bowl champion Redskins.

"I was feeding my cattle," Gething said, "and I looked up and they just happened to be coming down."

Gething said the balloon incident is "about the strangest thing that's ever happened to me."

KGRO-KOMX meteorologist Darrell Sehorn said that it is meteorologically possible that the balloons made the trip to the Texas Panhandle before running out of steam.

"For the last several days," Sehorn said, "our upper air flow has been in such a pattern to where it could carry them right across us. Our wind pattern has been from the west-southwest."

Pampa is roughly 1500 miles east-northeast of San Diego, according to Robert Robledo, specialist with the National Weather Service at the Amarillo airport.

Robledo also said that even though such an occurrence is possible, it is unlikely.

"It could happen," he said, "but my experience with helium filled balloons is that they will continue to rise until they burst."

Nevertheless, Gething was impressed enough with the incident that he took several snapshots before re-addressing the matter of hungry cattle.

Gething, a Bronco fan, said he struggled through watching some of the 42-10 Denver loss.

"I kinda quit (watching) about the half," Gething said.

House rejects Reagan's Contra military aid bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — House rejection of President Reagan's request for $36.2 million in new aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels left the president's bitterly debated Central America policy in shambles today.

Despite a lobbying blitz by Reagan, the House rejected further military support for the insurgents by a 219-211 vote Wednesday night. In doing so, it dismissed the president's argument that only the Contras could prevent creation of a communist stronghold in Central America.

House Democrats who handed Reagan the stinging defeat said they would support alternative humanitarian aid for the Contras but would no longer finance warfare in a region that is now seeking peace.

As Contra leader Adolfo Calero looked down glumly from the crowded visitors' gallery, Democrats leaped to their feet and burst into cheers when their victory was assured.

The Senate planned to decide later today whether to take up a similar Reagan aid request, but the House action was legally sufficient to cut off any further assistance past Feb. 29 for the Contra forces seeking to overthrow the leftist Sandinista government in Managua.

The White House expressed disappointment that the House "did not vote to keep pressure on the Sandinistas during the peace process" and said it would begin consultations about the future of the resistance.

Calero said his forces have enough arms to last about two months and enough food for a month. "We will press on with our last breath," he said.

However, he added that the Contras still "look forward to getting aid" from the United States.

Democratic leaders were jubilant. "Today's vote is the end of a chapter," said House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif. "The Contra policy is the past."

Toward the end of 11 hours of emotional floor debate, Speaker Jim Wright of Texas appealed for a "no" vote on Contra aid in favor of support for diplomatic efforts by Central American leaders to arrange their own peace settlement.

"Mr. Reagan did not come to Washington to preside over Central America," Wright said.

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., drew cheers from outgunned conservative GOP partisans when he declared that "the issue of Nicaragua and Central America will not go away."

"If you vote this package down, you better be prepared to bear the consequences, and who among you is smart enough to predict the path (Nicaragua President) Daniel Ortega will take you?"

On the final vote, a dozen Republicans joined 207 Democrats in voting against Contra aid, while 164 Republicans and 47 Democrats backed Reagan's request.

Court strikes down surrogacy contracts

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Operators of surrogacy centers say the state Supreme Court's landmark ruling in the Baby M case won't put them out of business, but opponents hailed it as a major blow to the practice of paying women to bear children.

Politicians, legal scholars and an attorney in the case said Wednesday's decision, which equated surrogacy for profit with illegal baby-selling, shows that state statutes don't apply to the practice.

"It puts the burden back to the legislatures" to regulate it, said

Lori Andrews, a researcher with the American Bar Association. "In the meantime, it continues to leave hundreds of people participating in these arrangements in a legal vacuum."

"If I were running a surrogate-mother agency, I'd find something else to do in a hurry," said Angela R. Holder, a professor of pediatrics law at the Yale University Medical School.

Steven C. Litz, director of Surrogate Mothers Inc. in Indiana, said, "I've always told and still tell my clients that the contracts are probably unenforceable, and the New Jersey Supreme Court's decision confirms that."

"But whether the contracts are enforceable or not just isn't that important because first of all, in 99 percent of the cases everything works fine," he said.

However, Holder said that if other state courts follow the lead of the New Jersey court, the first state supreme court to rule on a broken surrogacy contract, lawyers who arrange such contracts would be unable to obtain malpractice insurance.

The court's 7-0 decision overruled all but the custody decision of a lower court judge in invalidating the $10,000 contract between Mary Beth Whitehead-Gould and William Stern and his wife, Elizabeth.

"This is the sale of a child, or, at the very least, the sale of a mother's right to her child, the only mitigating factor being that one of the purchasers is the father," Chief Justice Robert N. Wilentz wrote in the decision.

The court said the contract "creates, it is based upon, principles that are directly contrary to See COURT, Page 2

Hospital sued for 'patient dumping' case

AUSTIN (AP) — A new law prohibiting "patient dumping" has been called on for the first time with a state lawsuit alleging that Humana Hospital-Clear Lake moved an uninsured patient, who later died, to a public hospital against a doctor's advice.

The lawsuit filed Wednesday said Mary Rourke of Harris County was suffering from a drug overdose when she was admitted to Humana in November 1986. The suit alleged that she later was moved to a public hospital in Houston because she lacked health insurance.

State Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein requested the suit, which was filed against Humana Hospital-Clear Lake, said hospital officials had no immediate comment.

The receiving physician at Ben Taub General Hospital, where Mrs. Rourke was taken, advised against the transfer, the lawsuit said. Ben Taub, which is public, is about 25 miles from Humana, a private hospital.

"While in transit, she suffered respiratory and cardiac arrest. She arrived at Ben Taub Hospital not breathing and with no pulse," the lawsuit said. It said Mrs.

Rourke died two days after the transfer.

Sharon Guzzino, spokeswoman for Humana Hospital-Clear Lake, said hospital officials had no immediate comment.

Officials had not been served notice of the lawsuit by Wednesday afternoon, she said, and a civil suit filed by Mrs. Rourke's family is pending.

Attorney General Jim Mattox's lawsuit is the first filed under provisions in the Hospital Licensing Act to prohibit patient dumping.

Those provisions, which took effect in 1985, were designed to make sure poor patients receive adequate emergency care and aren't transferred from one hospital to another without proper safety measures.

The lawsuit alleges that Humana violated its own transfer policy when it sent Mrs. Rourke to Ben Taub. Licensed hospitals are required to adopt transfer policies that follow state law.

The lawsuit asks for an order that the hospital not transfer patients just because they have no insurance unless certain medical precautions are taken and a physician's approval is given.

Piano man restores old instruments to make good music

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — Carey T. May knows what it takes to make good music — a steady hand, a set of nimble fingers, a patient attitude and an ear for just the right pitch and tone.

However, May's music is not made in a concert hall but in a dusty and vacant car dealership along U.S. 60 in Canadian.

May restores pianos and brings music back to family player pianos, spinets and concert grand pianos.

"I specialize in pianos which cannot be fixed," May said.

Among May's most recent projects:

• An 1899 Meldorf grand piano was found rotting in a vacant Kansas opera house — an old barn with no roof — and was sold at auction for $10.

The black paint on the piano was chipped, and some of the boards were missing completely. The 88 keys were disarranged in a crooked, unplayable row.

May sanded off the black paint and refinished the surface to a natural brown, being careful not to ruin the intricate woodwork around the base. He reset and repainted the keys. He restrung the inside and rebuilt the piano's "action" — the row of felt-tipped hammers which strike the strings. The piano's rebirth took 500 man-hours.

By the time he rebuilt the piano and sent it to a customer in Alva, Okla., May estimated the piano's value at $10,000 to $14,000.

• Canadian High School asked May to restore its school piano, a black 1939 Mason and Hamlin grand that the district has had for nearly 50 years.

"Somebody put a pizza in it," May said. "It's a long story, and the man has since been fired. But I found some pepperoni, cheese, a can of Dr. Pepper."

But, May added, it was not the pizza that damaged the piano.

"It was getting worn out,"

May said. "When a piano is used in public like that, it can get worn out."

May will replace the piano's pin block (tuning block), put in a new action and refinish the outside. He is expected to finish the piano in mid-March.

• May is preparing to restore a rare 9-foot 1898 Chickering & Son's symphony grand piano that once was showcased at Northwestern Oklahoma State University. The Alva college traded it in four years ago for a new model. May will find a buyer as soon as he finishes restoring it.

May said the late piano showman Liberace reportedly played the piano, but he has no proof; performers usually sign their pianos and this one has no such signature.

"With a piano this old in a university setting, no telling what greats played it," May said, striking some chords that filled the old auto showroom with melody. "How many pianos give out a sound like that?"

May checks tone on upright piano.

Famous people played symphonic grand.

Player piano parts await installation.

"It plays in pretty fair condition, but the piano needs rebuilding," May says, adding that he'll have to rebuild the piano's massive gold-plated wooden pin block.

May will also have to recarve the piano's trademark. He is taking pictures from all angles of the mark so that he can rebuild it as closely as possible to the original.

"And somebody got carried away with a can of orange spray paint and got orange on the bass keys," May says, adding that while the paint did not affect the piano's tone, the instrument will have to be restringing.

May also rebuilds other instruments. He found a double bass violin in a plastic bag, "shattered in a zillion pieces." The neck of the bass was broken, the wood was warped and chipped, the metalwork was corroded.

It took May but one week to bring the bass back to life, shaping the curved wood on the sides, obtaining and polishing the metalwork.

The bass is now in a corner at May's piano shop at the Pampa Mall.

It took May nearly a year to rebuild an antique orchestration. See PIANO, Page 2

The Pampa Police Department reported the following incidents for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 3
Burglary was reported at Bob's Wrecker Service, 900 E. Frederic.
A forged check was reported at Jay's Drive Inn, 924 W. Alcock.
Hope Leigh Fuller, 710 N. Russell, reported burglary at the address.
Barbara Taylor, 1039 Sierra, reported assault at the address.

Arrests

None.

Minor accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported no traffic accidents for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

Clarification

Due to incorrect information provided to The Pampa News, the appraised value of the two lots that make up attorney Rick Harris' property at 216 N. Russell was undervalued Tuesday in an article about the county possibly buying the property. The lots are listed under two different names. Total appraised value is about $34,000. Harris has offered the property to the county for $110,000.

Kentucky man killed near McLean

SHAMROCK — A Kentucky man died in a vehicle rollover Wednesday in southern Wheeler County after he was pinned between the sleeper cabin and cab of a pickup truck driven by his stepson.
Robert E. Roadhouse, 47, of Louisville, was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident, about 11 miles east of McLean on Interstate Highway 40. His stepson, Henry Carl Wirth, 21, also of Louisville, was treated for minor injuries at Shamrock Hospital and released.
Texas Department of Public

Safety troopers from Shamrock, who investigated the accident, said Wirth was westbound on Interstate 40 and lost control of the pickup in fog and sleet shortly after 9 a.m. The truck crossed the center median and rolled onto its top.
Mr. Roadhouse was in the pickup's sleeper cabin at the time of the accident.
Troopers said Wirth was wearing a seatbelt at the time of the accident.
Authorities said Mr. Roadhouse's body was shipped today from Richerson Funeral Home in Shamrock to Howell Funeral Home in Fairdale, Ky., where services are pending.

Survivors in addition to his wife and stepson include a son, Derek Roadhouse of Louisville; a stepdaughter, Mary Wirth of Louisville; another stepson, Charles Wirth of Louisville; two brothers, William and Ralph Roadhouse, both of Louisville; four sisters, Myrtle Jackson of Louisville, Carolyn Arnold of Berryville, Va., Betty Willis of Winchester, Va., and Peggy Alderson of Matteson, Ill.; his mother, Frances Roadhouse of Louisville; and two grandchildren.

Enron truck bursts into flames

A tank on an Enron hot oil truck burst into flames this morning as an operator was attempting to warm water hoses at the Enron Oil Trading and Transportation yard, U.S. Highway 60 and Price Road.
But, Enron officials said today, there were no injuries and no damages other than to a 500-gallon tank and a hose.
According to Enron District Manager Gene Loomis, company operator Darrel Forbes was thawing out water hoses to a hot oil truck at about 8:10 a.m. today at the Enron yard. Loomis said one of the hoses, which had "gas pockets" inside, exploded and caused the 500-gallon tank on the oil truck to explode.

Loomis said that Forbes escaped injury, although he was taken to Coronado Hospital to be examined.
Pampa Pampa Fire Chief J.D. Ray said the Pampa Fire Department responded to the call at about 8:12 a.m. today.
"When we got there, the top of the tank was gone, so there was no further danger from that tank," Ray said. "But there were two butane tanks behind the truck, so we had to cool them down before we could even start to fight the fire. Then we had to cool the tank."

Ray said that after they cooled the tank down, the fire fighters got a fire truck ladder over the top of the tank and used a fog fire nozzle to "sweep the fire out" of the gutted tank.
"It was a complicated situation which needed a lot of water and manpower," Ray said, adding that it took four Pampa Fire Department units and six fire fighters 30 minutes to put out the fire.
Ray said the smoke was visible from across town.

Court

the objectives of our laws."
"It guarantees the separation of a child from its mother; it looks to adoption regardless of suitability; it totally ignores the child; it takes the child from the mother regardless of her wishes and her maternal fitness; and it does all of this, it accomplishes all of its goals, through the use of money," said the court.
The judges did not, however, rule out voluntary surrogacy.
Because the Baby M surrogacy contract is invalid, the court said, the case boiled down to a custody dispute.
The judges upheld Superior Court Judge Harvey R. Sorkow in awarding custody of the girl known in court papers as Baby M to Stern, noting the "doubtful" stability of the Whitehead home during last year's trial.

But they said Mrs. Whitehead-Gould is entitled to see her daughter, and directed a lower-court judge to set guidelines within three months. They also voided the adoption of the baby by Mrs. Stern.
The Sterns' attorney, Gary N. Skoloff, said the couple was surprised by the decision. He also said the ruling tells the New Jersey Legislature, "Now it's your job."
Jeremy Rifkin, a spokesman for The National Coalition Against Surrogacy, said the court has "acknowledged that women's bodies and wombs cannot be commercially rented or leased for nine months."

But Noel Keane, a Dearborn, Mich., attorney who operates the Infertility Center of New York, which arranged the surrogate contract in the case, said, "Unless surrogacy is banned nationwide, there may always be an avenue to do surrogate parenting."
Neither side in the Baby M case plans to appeal the 95-page decision, although a court battle is expected over the extent of visitation.
Mrs. Whitehead-Gould, appearing at a news conference, said tearfully, "I'm glad that the months of uncertainty are over."

Piano

an elaborate mechanical instrument that includes a player piano, an organ, a violin, drums and cymbals. He does not know where or when the piece was built. It was found in an old movie theater and, upon its rebuilding, was sold to a New York resident.
May currently has 19 pianos at his dusty Canadian shop. Most are player pianos or small grand pianos. Two of them are player grand pianos.
A native of the rural area north of Canadian, May said he has always enjoyed the piano. He took lessons from a preacher's wife and played a bass brass horn in the Canadian school band. But he never went to college to study music.
"I loved music, and I've always been mechanically inclined, so I read every book I could about piano restoration and repair," May said.
May set up shop five years ago at the town's vacant Oldsmobile-Chrysler dealership. Highway drivers can see his projects through the old showroom windows.
The travel, the dust and the lack of insulation in his shop has prompted May to move his shop closer to his Piano World store at the Pampa Mall.
Because most of his work is from outside the area, he does not expect the move to change the nature of his business. About 80 percent of May's work is custom work while the rest is for resale.

1899 Meldorf: Before (top) and after.

He has restored pianos for customers as far away as Philadelphia. The Philadelphia piano is one of two 1830s square grand pianos in his shop. These pianos lack the curved playing area of regular grands, but they still have the tilting top. One of the pianos was going to be converted into a desk before May got hold of it.
May said his "competition" — a piano restorer in Dallas — works on more modern pianos while he takes on older pieces.
"A lot of people don't want new pianos, they want Grandma's old piano," May said, adding that the instrument's "sentimental value" will be more than its actual value.
His most expensive work runs up to $8,500.
Although he has employees who cut the wood and do refinishing, May does much of his own work by hand and by ear. He uses a precision vise to set the keys, which, he explained, are arched downward at the sides to keep the players from feeling that they're playing "uphill."

May orders special equipment from about four music supply companies. He orders strings from a company in Germany. A California firm recreates labels for the more than 3,000 brands of pianos in existence.
May tries to get original parts for all parts of the piano — except the keys.
"I will not use ivory," May said. "That would involve using elephants' tusks. And you'd have to get them through the black market."

May said the most common damage to pianos comes with age — the pieces simply get worn out. Changes in temperature and humidity also take their toll. Neglected pianos face another foe, mice that chew at the wood and nest in the instruments.
"I once had to clean 30 gallons of pack-rat nesting out of one piano," May said.
In addition to pack-rat nests and pizza, May has found a variety of treasures and trash in his pianos. In one instrument, he dug out 32 pencils and 250 paper clips.
"I've seen silver certificates, family pictures," he said. "One church pianist said she heard a terrible sound and we found her wedding band in the strings."

Super collider support urged

WASHINGTON (AP)—Supporters of the $4.4 billion "super collider" are urging potential contractors to help lobby a skeptical Congress for the giant scientific instrument.
Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, was among the lawmakers warning that projects like the super collider often end up competing against other scientific investments.
Instead of long-term investments, Congress in recent years "has consistently leaned toward short time-fused funding of big-constituency projects and has underfunded the future," Gramm said Wednesday. "We need your help in making the case that an investment in science is an investment in the future of America."
He noted that President Reagan's budget requests for space activities had been cut three years in a row.

"It is not that Congress cut the president's space budget to reduce the deficit," said Gramm, one of the authors of the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law. "They have cut the president's space budget to spend in other areas that have more defined constituencies."
Gramm's home state is one of seven bidding to be host to the collider, a 53-mile-around tunnel in which counter-rotating beams of protons will be smashed into each other to probe the secrets of matter. The other states are North Carolina, Michigan, Illinois, Arizona, Colorado and Tennessee.
In an appeal similar to Gramm's, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., noted that all senators from North Carolina, Colorado and Tennessee, and one from Michigan, were not sponsoring a bill backed by 20 members to give the Energy Department explicit authorization to build the collider.

"I urge you to do a little bit of lobbying," DeConcini said.

Mobil Oil refinery workers walk out on strike

By The Associated Press

More than 1,800 Mobil Corp. workers in California, Texas and Washington walked out on strike, contending the company wants to dilute the power of the collective bargaining unit, Union officials said.

Hundreds of members of the Oil, Chemical & Atomic Workers International Union in Torrance, Calif., and Ferndale, Wash., launched their job action late Wednesday night, and were joined early today by union members in Beaumont, Texas.

The strike was called because of Mobil's plans to use managers in jobs the union believes are within its jurisdiction, said Bob Wages, vice president of OCAW International in Denver.

"Any time a company wants to run a plant with supervisory employees, it is either trying to bust a union or trying to minimize its importance so it has no power," Wages said.

"We could be out for a long time," said Bo Redmerski, vice president of Local 1-547 in Torrance.

Telephone requests for comment to Mobil's New York headquarters went unanswered early today.

About 450 refinery workers are represented by the union in Torrance. Another 180 went on strike in Ferndale, and 1,200 union members work at the Mobil plant in Beaumont, Texas.

More than a dozen pickets emerged at the Torrance refinery at 10 p.m. Wednesday, complaining that the company was attempting to exclude workers from its contract.

"Mobil made their offer contingent on ripping jobs out of the collective bargaining agreement," said Steve Sullivan, president of the Los Angeles area local.

Without commenting on the labor dispute itself, Torrance plant manager Wyman D. Robb said late Wednesday that management personnel would keep the plant operating at full capacity.

Marvin Prinsen, president of the 180-member Local 1-590, in Ferndale, said workers joined the strike after talks that had continued through a 10 p.m. deadline collapsed.

In Texas, electrical and clerical workers at Mobil Corp.'s refinery went on strike at 12:01 a.m. today, after union and company representatives failed to reach agreement on staffing of Mobil's new centralized control center.

Prinsen said a main issue in Beaumont and Torrance was an attempt by the company to redesignate stillmen, workers now within union jurisdiction, as console operators, a management position.

He said that move wouldn't affect anyone at the Cherry Point refinery in Ferndale, about 100 miles north of Seattle.

The other sticking point, which affects workers at all three facilities, is a union demand to make it easier for workers to retire. The old contract allows retirement at age 55 or after 20 years on the job at the company's discretion, while the union is seeking a 55-or-15 retirement clause at the worker's option, Prinsen said.

In Texas, union leaders said they were unwilling to let Mobil staff its new centralized control room with supervisory personnel, maintaining the jobs belong to union members.

Wednesday morning, B.H. Blackmon, Mobil refinery's general manager in Beaumont, said the company wouldn't demote or lay off any of its employees at the new control center, or cut their pay.

The Torrance refinery, a 90,000-barrel-a-day plant, also wants to use supervisors to staff its control room. Unresolved local issues are dominating contract negotiations at the 45,000-barrel-a-day Ferndale refinery.

Texas leaders join in show of solidarity for atom smasher

WASHINGTON (AP)—Texas leaders, who have joined in a show of solidarity for the "super collider," say getting the project funded is going to be difficult but the state's delegation is powerful enough to do it.

"We're going to be in a real budget crunch trying to finance this thing, and of all the states that are in the competition, this delegation is without a question the largest and most powerful," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Wednesday.

"And (the Energy Department is) going to know that in this budget crunch it's going to be tough to fund this. But they're going to have the total commitment and dedication of the most powerful delegation in Congress."

Texas is one of seven states bidding to be host to the collider, a 53-mile-around tunnel in which counter-rotating beams of protons will be smashed into each other to probe the secrets of matter. The other states are North Carolina, Michigan, Illinois, Arizona, Colorado and Tennessee.

Texas leaders met on Capitol Hill Wednesday, declaring their unceasing bipartisan support for the $4.4 billion atom smasher.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said that by showing solidarity the delegation and state officials are telling the Energy Department that Texas has the strength to win the tough funding battles ahead.

"The question the Department of Energy has to answer is which congressional delegation do you want to do the heavy lifting in making this site a reality," Gramm said.

"I believe that when you get down to the bottom line, that Texans in the past have proven they have the ability to do the heavy lifting when the objective was an important one for Texas and America," he said.

Gov. Bill Clements said the support shown by the state's leaders is the second most important part of the Texas presentation, behind geographic location.

Joining Clements in standing with the congressional delegation were Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, the mayors of Dallas and Fort Worth and several state and industry leaders from Texas.

Earlier, at a meeting of potential contractors for the $4.4 billion super collider, Gramm joined Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, in warning that no matter how worthy the project, the congressional budget process forces it to compete against other scientific investments.

"Politically we think the project is in good shape," Barton said. "While the president did not mention it in his State of the Union message, in the resource materials that were put out in addition to the State of the Union address did mention the project, in fact highlighted the project."

"Our concern is that because of budgetary considerations the Congress may decide not to look at any new projects this year. Those of you in the business community and the lobbying community who have contacts with legislators can help," Barton said.

No decisions have been made on which companies will get the contracts, but that is expected to happen shortly, according to Barton, who said he has been talking to potential contract winners about how Texas could help them with funds from two super collider bond issues worth $1 billion.

Former state officials tout ties

AUSTIN (AP)—Two former Texas Water Commission officials said in a letter to a business that they'd make good lobbyists because of their ties to the governor's office.

But an aide to Gov. Bill Clements said the claims are "absolute baloney."

In a Jan. 11 letter to the Austin office of Unisys Corp., the two said their contacts in state government could help Unisys fend off competition, expand sales among other state agencies and secure the passage of legislation which could help the company.

Clements' press secretary, Reggie Bashur, disputed the claims.

"Gov. Clements makes decisions based on the public interest and on what is good for the people of Texas," he said.

In the letter, Lee B.M. Biggart, former legislative aide to Clements, and Larry R. Soward, a former employee of the water commission, urged Unisys to hire them as lobbyists.

Biggart said Wednesday there was nothing improper about the letter. He said Unisys' Austin manager Gary Young urged him to write the letter to help him convince his bosses to hire Biggart and Soward as lobbyists.

"I don't see anything that's any different than what goes on all over the state," Biggart said. "I can think of 50 lobbyists in town who represent bus companies and truck companies and everything else. And what are they trying to do? Help their clients get in the door with their stuff and present their case," he told the Dallas Morning News.

Young said he requested a letter from Biggart "to have them tell me where and how they felt they could in fact assist me in my efforts and goals for the corporation." He said the company has not decided whether to hire the two.

He said Unisys has done business with the water commission for more than five years and doesn't need the lawyers' help in meeting people in the administration.

Unisys has sold about $3 million to the water agency over the past several years.

Sen. Bentsen, left, talks to reporters on Capitol Hill Wednesday about Texas's proposed super collider project. With Bentsen are Gov. Clements, seated, and standing from left, Joseph Barton, Martin Frost, Beau Boulter and J.J. Pickle.

Family of four die in house fire

HOLLIDAY (AP)—A family, including two young children, died after fire swept through their house on what would have been the couple's wedding anniversary.

Brad Brock, 26, and his wife Karen, 22, died in the early morning fire Wednesday along with their two children, Donald Brad, 2, and 3-month-old Kasey Lynn.

The remains were sent to a forensic lab in Dallas because it was impossible to identify the bodies, said Justice of the Peace Betty Tanner.

Mrs. Keith Myers, a next-door neighbor who alerted authorities, said her husband broke down the back door to the Brock home, but was unable to enter because of flames.

Mrs. Myers ran around the house, pounding on the walls and calling out to the family.

"Their truck was parked outside so we felt they were inside, but we didn't get any response and there was just no way we could get into that house with the flames leaping out like they were," she said.

The Holliday Volunteer Fire Department was called to the house at about 3:30 a.m., but by the time the first truck arrived at the house, about five minutes later, it was engulfed in flames, said Fire Marshal Randy Lauder milk.

Two firefighters, Randy Jones and John Little, said it was several hours before they could get inside the house.

Mrs. Myers said she got no answer when she first tried to call the fire department and then called the operator, who notified the station.

Neighbors said the couple's third wedding anniversary was Wednesday and they had hired a babysitter Tuesday night and gone out to eat and visit places they had gone to when dating.

Mrs. Billy Neimeyer, a neighbor of the family was outside the burned home Wednesday watching fire investigators work through the rubble of the house.

"They had two beautiful children, a boy about 2 years and a girl only 3 months old. She came over to our home Sunday and we just sat and visited until about 11 p.m. and I got to hold that baby. She was a real mother to them. She didn't work, but just lived for those children," Mrs. Neimeyer told the Wichita Falls Times Record News.

C'mon, give ole Will a chance!

It was summer of 1976, and I was commuting from Pampa to West Texas State University, trying to complete courses toward gaining my bachelor's degree.

I was not overly fond of taking summer class to begin with. And getting up around 6 a.m. to bathe, dress hurriedly and jump into the car for the 70-something mile trip to WT didn't make it any more exciting.

But that summer term I found myself, if not exactly eager, at least looking forward to my second class of the day — a Shakespeare class.

I'd had some exposure to the Old Bard before. In high school English, of course, we had struggled through Julius Caesar, Romeo and Juliet and a couple of others. And I had learned to admire to enjoy the cadences, the images, the poetry, the beauty.

At Texas Tech, again taking English courses, I read a few more Shakespeare plays, and re-read some of the ones I had formerly endured in high school. But to an extent they were still somewhat of an endurance, though sometimes rewarding.

Now, however, it was 1976, and I hadn't been required to read ole Will in eight or nine years. I had managed to read a few other plays, but without class discussion or sharing with others, I hadn't gotten as much out of them.

But then came Dr. Dudt.

Initially she seemed imposing, indicating she wouldn't put up with any foolishness. But then she'd strike out with an unexpected joke, toss out a bit of dry wit, insert a philosophical twist and counter with an interesting historical or mythological tidbit.

She rarely stood at a podium to glare down at us in supercilious stance. Nor did she banter us with pedagogical wordings or befuddle us with esoteric jargonese.

Dr. Dudt made us pull up our chairs in a circle. Then she sat down in the circle with us, crossed her legs and proceeded to make us enjoy Shakespeare.

I can't even remember exactly how she did so, but the classes became a game, with each of us competing to see who enjoyed the plays more. We'd chuckle, laugh, chatter excitedly, stretch forward to make a point, lean back when our remarks were accepted or squirm when we were trying to understand even more.

I do remember one point. With each play we encountered, Dr. Dudt would tell us there was one proper about the letter. He said Unisys' Austin manager Gary Young urged him to write the letter to help him convince his bosses to hire Biggart and Soward as lobbyists.

"I don't see anything that's any different than what goes on all over the state," Biggart said. "I can think of 50 lobbyists in town who represent bus companies and truck companies and everything else. And what are they trying to do? Help their clients get in the door with their stuff and present their case," he told the Dallas Morning News.

Young said he requested a letter from Biggart "to have them tell me where and how they felt they could in fact assist me in my efforts and goals for the corporation." He said the company has not decided whether to hire the two.

line in each that summed up the point or meaning of the play. It became a contest with us to be the first to find that one line.

I had missed on the others, but I finally came up with the line in the last play we read that term, The Tempest. With Dr. Dudt beaming at me, I was as pleased as though I were a young kid being awarded a sucker for having the best drawing in class.

That kind of pleasure dominated my learning episode with Will that summer. Shakespeare at last had come alive.

Dr. Dudt had taken the time to teach us of Shakespeare's world, and then related his world, his vision, his genius to our own times. She showed us the humor, the characters, the action, the drama, the farce, the contradictions, the hopes.

After her, Shakespeare was real. Though belonging to an earlier time, he's still a man for today. Sure, he may be hard to read at times. So is Faulkner or O'Neill or Singer and Bellow. Certainly he may be hard to understand at times. So it is with the lyrics of Bob Dylan or Bono of U2, or with the humor of Woody Allen, the imagery of Ingmar Bergman.

But once you have the key to what's going on, then the struggle for perception becomes a hard-won pleasure.

It's not much different than the relaxation that comes after a hard game of strenuous racquetball produces a near euphoric feeling, or after long hours of cooking results in a gourmet feast, or after many hours of labor gives a finished product you're proud to display.

All those initially seem hard, frustrating, even painful. But they get easier, more enjoyable, more worthwhile.

You've just got to be willing to put in the effort.

Judge throws out intoxilyzer evidence

HOUSTON (AP)—A county judge says he was shocked to hear testimony that police officers increased readings on a breath test machine by plugging its exhaust hoses.

County Court-At-Law Judge Alfred Leal threw out breath test results used in a driving-while-intoxicated case after hearing testimony concerning the Intoxilyzer machine.

"I'm shocked and somewhat stunned by the testimony about the breath-test program," said Leal, who became the second judge in a week to suppress such tests.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Rent control policy bites at federalism

President Reagan's draft budget is said to include a proposal to deny certain rental housing subsidies to cities that have rent control ordinances in effect. Some administration insiders reportedly are concerned that such a policy would violate the principle of federalism, which implies respect by the central government for local autonomy. Such concerns demonstrate how far we have already drifted from federalism; indeed, they are very close to an inversion of genuine federalist principles.

The original federal principle was that state governments were as sovereign as the national government created by the Constitution, possessing virtually complete independence except in foreign and military affairs. That principle has been vitiated rather aggressively over the last 50 years or so, mainly by central-government programs, mandates, and subsidies that have made state and local governments dependent stragglers of the central government.

Few state and local governments have resisted the trend with much vigor, because central controls almost always are accompanied by big bribes, courtesy of the taxpayers. Federal grants and programs may have strings attached, but they have dollar signs on them too, so who wants to get exercised about federalist principles?

Nothing in the Constitution or in federalist principle dictates that the central government will provide local governments with subsidies to fix up rental housing, which is the grant program the administration is considering denying to cities with rent control. If such a program is constitutional (it's questionable, though few contemporary courts are likely to strike it down), it could be set up with whatever criteria the central government decides to apply.

Cities with rent control, as it happens, are likely to feel more of a "need" for a program to fix up dilapidated rental housing. Rent-control laws that set prices below what the market would set usually result in landlords spending less on maintenance — as well as discouraging builders from constructing new rental units. But if concern about autonomy is sincere, let it be consistent. If cities want to enact so foolish a policy as rent control, let them deal with the results themselves.

Of course, the administration could just scrap the entire $200 million grant program for repairing rental units. We would have more housing available at more reasonable prices — and, incidentally, less homelessness — if policy were based on the sound principles that housing is the responsibility of the private marketplace and none of government's business at all.

Until we progress to such a sensible policy, however, there is nothing wrong with denying federal grants to cities with policies like rent control. A better understanding of federalist principles suggests that while local governments might have the autonomy to enact foolish laws, they should also have the autonomy to live with the results, rather than calling on Washington (i.e., the rest of us) to bail them out when policies go sour.

Special prosecutors needed

Look who's a judicial activist now. Last month a federal appeals court panel dominated by appointees of Ronald Reagan reached out and struck down a carefully drawn law allowing special prosecutors to investigate wrongdoing by the President and his aides.

Conservative theorists tell us that when the Constitution offers no strong guidance, the courts should defer to the judgments of elected officials. They lament the eagerness of judges to decide cases by their own preferences, not the commands of our national charter.

Robert Bork, for example, has complained that "constitutional scholarship today is dominated by the creation of arguments that will encourage judges to thwart democratic choice." This is at war, he says, with the design of the framers, who "provided wide powers to representative assemblies and ruled only a few subjects off limits by the Constitution."

But the opinions by federal appeals court Judge Laurence Silberman, who has been touted by conservatives for the Supreme Court, shows none of this deference. He uses a liberal reading of the Constitution to reach a result agreeable to conservatives.

The 1978 Ethics in Government law was a response to President Nixon's infamous firing of Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, which illustrated the dangers of letting the President control criminal investigations of his own aides. It provides for the appointment of special prosecutors when high administration officials, including the President and the Attorney General, are suspected of crimes.

The logic of this arrangement is sound. It is expecting too much of frail human nature that an ordinary Justice Department lawyer can carry out an investigation or prosecution of his superiors without fear or favor. Who among Edwin Meese's aides could be trusted to make the decision whether Edwin Meese should be prosecuted?

This is not an academic question. Meese was cleared of various offenses by a special prosecutor in 1984. Special prosecutors have handled the cases against former White House aides Michael Deaver, recently convicted of perjury, and Lyn Nofziger, now on trial, and another one is investigating the Iranamok scandal. Without the law, these cases would have been handled by political appointees.

Nothing in the plain language of the Constitution mandates this outcome. The court's excuse is that prosecution is an executive function that can be performed only by officials of the executive branch. The special prosecutor, who is appointed by a judicial body, allegedly overturns this principle.

This is wrong on several counts. The first is historical. The framers were used to a criminal justice system in which most prosecutions were handled by justices of the peace — who were judicial officers — and showed no desire to dismantle it.

The second is practical. As dissenting judge

Ruth Bader Ginsburg noted, the decision to request a special prosecutor belongs to the Attorney General alone — as does the power to remove the person appointed. The dilution of executive power is trivial.

The third is philosophical. The point of the separation of powers was to guarantee that each branch of government would be a check on the others. Congress may pass bad laws, but the President may veto them. The President may sign unconstitutional laws, but the courts may invalidate them. The courts may strike down sound laws, but the executive and legislative branches may amend the Constitution to override them.

The special prosecutor law has a parallel purpose: to make sure the executive branch's power over prosecutions is not used to protect illegal actions by its own members. Congress adopted a principle endorsed by the framers when it enacted the law, contending that "no man can be a prosecutor or judge in his own case."

Silberman made much of the dangers of the special prosecutor, who "has unique incentives to seek an indictment." In fact, special prosecutors have been more inclined to exonerate than indict. Six of the 10 appointed since the law was passed have closed up shop without prosecuting anyone. Does that suggest too much of an incentive to prosecute? Maybe so. But it's the sort of question you'd think a conservative judge would leave to elected representatives.

The appeals court struck down the special prosecutor law even though the Constitution has no language banning such arrangements, even though the framers had no such purpose in mind, and even though the law admirably advances the purposes of the Constitution. This is strict constructionism?

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Feb. 4, the 35th day of 1988. There are 331 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Feb. 4, 1783, Britain declared a formal cessation of hostilities with its former colony, the United States of America.

On this date: In 1789, presidential electors unanimously chose George Washington to be the first chief executive of the United States.

In 1801, John Marshall was sworn in as chief justice of the United States.

In 1861, delegates from six southern states met in Montgomery, Ala., to form the Confederate States of America.

In 1932, New York Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt opened the Winter Olympic Games at Lake Placid.

In 1938, Thornton Wilder's play Our Town opened on Broadway.

In 1941, the United Service Organization, better known as the USO, was founded.

Who's safe for insults now?

A caller had a question: Did Jimmy the Greek get fired because of what he said about black people or what he said about white people?

"Don't you read the papers?" I asked back. "He said black people were bred to have big thighs. CBS couldn't keep a guy around who says things like that."

"I know," said the caller, "but he also said white athletes are lazy. I'm white and I resent that."

I dismissed the caller as racist, and probably a conservative Republican or a Rotarian on top of that.

Upon some later reflection, however, I realized the caller had given birth to an interesting question.

We know from the purges of Snyder, the Los Angeles Dodgers' Al Campanis, and likely that of Gov. Mechem of Arizona that, if you make insulting remarks about black people, you can lose your job.

But Gov. Mechem is also in trouble for remarks he made about the shape of Japanese people's eyes and before that, he insulted gays and women.

So, the question is, who can you insult and get away with it these days?

I once insulted the French and the Spanish

Lewis Grizzard

because they wouldn't help us bomb that idiot Khadafy.

I got angry letters from both French and Spanish people and was called a xenophobic.

I wrote back and said, "I am not a xenophobic. I messed only with girls roughly my own age, except for that time in Tulsa, which wasn't my fault."

Later, I found out xenophobic meant fear of foreigners. I'm not afraid of all foreigners, just idiots like Khadafy.

And speaking of Arabs, I also said once I'd like to see an American hijack an Arab airliner so we could make demands on them for a change.

My first demand I mentioned would be for those people to start wearing clothes that match.

I got a letter from the Anti-Arab Defamation

League after that. Since then, no more camel jokes.

So, Blacks are out as insult targets as are women, of course, and gays and anybody foreign. Anti-Semitism is ugly and vile and every effort should be made to stop it, also.

And who does that leave? The caller who resented Jimmy the Greek saying white athletes were lazy was all wrong because we're it.

Specifically, I am speaking of white Anglo-Saxon Protestant straight males. We are all that is left to shoot at with reckless abandon.

There's a reason for that, of course. We've been on top for a long time and now we have to pay the price, I suppose, by being the fish in the barrel.

Want to insult a white man? How about President Reagan, he's one.

You can use this:

Know what you would get if you crossed James Dean with President Reagan?

A rebel without a clue.

Want another one? Have you heard they're changing the name of the Super Bowl in honor of Jimmy the Greek?

Now it's called The Breeders' Cup.

Wasn't that fun? I must leave you now, however, my xenophobia is acting up and I have to lie down. I just saw a shot of Yasir Arafat on television.

Westerners seeking vice president spot

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Nobody, not even Vice President Bush, has the Republican presidential nomination wrapped up yet, but some far-sighted Western politicians are already giving a little preliminary thought to the second spot on the ticket.

This is probably all to the good because the way vice presidential candidates have been picked in the past is not exactly an advertisement for the American political system.

Back in the days before there were so many primaries, when conventions were traditionally "brokered" by the leaders of powerful factions, the exhausted candidate who had finally won the top spot would call together a handful of advisers and allies as bleary-eyed as he. In the gray dawn of the morning following his nomination, in some hotel room foul with stale cigarette smoke and littered with paper cups containing cold dregs of coffee, some lucky bystander would be chosen to stand, for four years, "a heart-beat away from the presidency."

More recently, now that primaries often enable some candidate to wrap up the presidential nomination months before the convention even opens, the winner has plenty of time to make his choice. Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale both seized the opportunity to turn the process into a sort of cattle show, in which various alleged possibilities were invited in to be quizzed. That did not, however, eliminate the danger of a major blunder — as Mondale demonstrated by picking Geraldine Ferraro without checking her background more extensively.

Besides, some early thinking about the vice presidency is particularly appropriate this year in the case of the Western Republican Caucus, a group of conservatives from every Western state save Texas and California who first banded together in 1976 and have exercised considerable influence ever since.

As it happens, all six of the candidates for the Republican presidential nomination hail from east of the 100th meridian — the longitude at which, in the opinion of many Westerners, the West really begins. And yet every Republican ticket since the end of World War II, save one, has had a Westerner on it — and that one (Ford and Dole, 1976) lost. Carrying the Western states is absolutely essential if the GOP ticket is to have any hope of victory.

"I think the message comes through very clear," says Blake Hall, the Idaho Republican chairman who is also head of the Western Republican state chairmen's association. "If the Republican candidate for president is serious about having Western Republicans excited about the ticket, it is clearly in his best interest to have a Westerner as the vice presidential nominee."

But which Westerner would fill the bill? In private talks among members of the Western Republican Caucus in recent months, names that have been mentioned include Sens. William Armstrong (Col.), Pete Domenici (N.M.), Orrin Hatch (Utah) and James McClure (Idaho), Interior Secretary Donald Hodel (who hails from Oregon), California Gov. George Deukmejian and former Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada. But discussions are continuing among Western Republican leaders, and additional names may be added to this list. The plan is to circulate it to those presidential candidates remaining in the race after Super Tuesday (March 8).

Whoever the Republican presidential nominee may be, he is not likely to disregard that list. The dynamics of the election, as indicated above, almost dictate the presence of a Westerner on the Republican ticket.

If Bush wins the presidential nomination, there will be considerable pressure on him to make Jack Kemp, or just possibly Jeane Kirkpatrick, his running-mate. Both are highly regarded by conservative Republicans, who will have a powerful claim on Bush's consideration. But Kemp is from New York and Kirkpatrick from Maryland, both Atlantic coast states. By choosing a Westerner who is equally well regarded by conservatives, Bush (or any other non-Western presidential nominee) can have his cake and eat it too.

Newest Supreme Court justice will have pivotal vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anthony M. Kennedy will join the Supreme Court in two weeks and is likely to play a pivotal role in deciding crucial issues confronting the sharply divided justices.

The 51-year-old federal appeals court judge, unanimously confirmed by the Senate on Wednesday, will not have to wait long for his baptismal fire.

He is scheduled to be sworn in Feb. 18 at the court building. Five days later he will participate with the other eight justices in hearing arguments on a highly controversial subject — whether private clubs may be forced to admit women and racial minorities.

Kennedy, criticized during his Senate confirmation hearings for his own past membership in such clubs, has not tipped his hand on how he views the case or such frequently recurring issues as abortion regulation, affirmative action and church-state relations.

But there is little doubt that his vote often will prove decisive this term and in the years ahead.

Kennedy will fill a vacancy created seven months ago by the retirement of Justice Lewis F. Powell, a moderate conservative and often a swing vote in closely watched cases.

The absence of a ninth justice for more than half of the court's 1987-88 terms has caused important deadlocks.

For example, the court split 4-4 in December on whether a state may require some teen-agers seeking abortions to wait 24 hours after telling their parents or a judge about their decision before having the operations.

By the same vote last month, the justices divided over an affirmative action plan designed to promote more blacks and Hispanics in New York City's police department.

Also, court sources say the justices have delayed action on at least a dozen cases until the vacancy is filled.

For example, the justices have yet to act on an appeal involving mandatory drug testing for some federal employees, a case they first discussed in private before the term began in October.

Union leaders are challenging the power of the U.S. Customs Service to require urine samples for those seeking drug enforcement jobs. If the court agrees to hear their appeal, it would set the stage for a major ruling on drug testing for public employees.

In a case involving church-state relations, the court announced in December it will consider killing a lawsuit that seeks to strip the Roman Catholic Church of its tax-exempt status because of the church's anti-abortion lobbying.

Kennedy will take his seat on the court in time to hear arguments in that case and participate in a ruling expected to be announced by July.

Kennedy's confirmation by a 97-0 vote in the Senate climaxed a bitter struggle that began when President Reagan named Robert H. Bork last July to succeed Powell.

Opponents branded Bork a right-wing extremist and he was rejected by the Senate. Reagan's second choice, Douglas H. Ginsburg, withdrew after admitting he smoked marijuana while a law school professor.

Reagan unquestionably has placed his imprint on the high court. Besides Kennedy, he has appointed Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia and promoted William H. Rehnquist to chief justice.

But the question remains whether the president will succeed in forging a conservative consensus on crucial issues that Bork's nomination was intended to guarantee.

He has been reluctant to expand legal protections for women, racial minorities and homosexuals. But his tone has been moderate and there is ample evidence of a man willing to approach difficult issues with an open mind.

Religious broadcasters set new ethical, reporting requirements

WASHINGTON (AP) — Religious broadcasters soon will be issuing their own equivalent of a Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval in a bid to restore credibility to an industry shaken by the PTL scandal.

The National Religious Broadcasters voted 324-6 on Wednesday to make compliance with a new financial and fund-raising code of ethics a requirement for membership in the group and use of its seal of accreditation.

The plan is in large part a response to the PTL scandal, which forced Jim Bakker to resign as head of the ministry that supported an extravagant lifestyle for him and his wife, Tammy Faye.

Ben Armstrong, executive director of the religious broadcasters' group, said the ethics code is intended to reassure donors who support broadcast ministries.

"We feel this will cause people to realize that we have nothing to hide and that we are fully disclosing finances and eliminating possible family control of boards and showing to the public we have open books and open policy," Armstrong said.

The association has 1,350 members that produce about three-quarters of all religious programming in the United States.

To be certified, members will have to submit independent audits each year disclosing all sources of income and every expenditure. The requirements are less stringent for smaller ministries.

The ministries also must make all the information, except for salaries, available to the public.

Members also must have a board with at least five directors, the majority of whom are not related to the ministry's executives and not on the ministry staff. Smaller ministries are exempt from the requirement, Armstrong said.

The code requires members to keep fund-raising materials for a year and submit samples upon request to the association's Ethics and Financial Integrity Commission, which administers policy on ethics and financial responsibility.

The commission will draft guidelines that will be used to evaluate ministries for accreditation, including reasonable salary levels, said NRB spokeswoman Audrey Langdon. The basis of the guidelines will be the Internal Revenue Service's requirements for tax exemption and the traditional practices of most ministries, she said.

Lawmaker: Mecham's testimony 'very damaging'

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gov. Evan Mecham's admission that he may have told an official not to cooperate in an investigation of an alleged death threat moves the governor closer to impeachment, a legislative leader says.

The Republican governor, who spent 5½ hours testifying Wednesday before a House impeachment committee, contended that committee Chairman Jim Skelly was "reaching" in questioning whether Mecham has obstructed justice.

"I don't think I've broken any law" or obstructed justice, Mecham said. "Mr. Skelly, your case is weak. ... I have said the truth today. Every word I have said has been true."

The panel is investigating a $350,000 campaign loan, and allegations that Mecham diverted $80,000 in state funds to his auto dealership, and tried to block investigation of an alleged death threat against a former aide.

Skelly, a Republican, said he considered Mecham's testimony "very damaging," and the House could decide by the end of the week whether to impeach Mecham.

The first-term governor also faces a May 17 recall election and a March 9 criminal trial on felony charges of concealing the $350,000 loan. He was expected to conclude his testimony today. No other witnesses are scheduled.

Skelly said he did not know if there were enough votes to impeach Mecham but added, "I suspect if there's no great refutation of the testimony we've gotten thus far, that the votes are there."

It takes 31 votes to impeach in the 60-member House and 20 votes to convict in the 30-member Senate.

"I think the votes are here," Republican Rep. Jim Hartdegen said after hearing Mecham testify. "Thirty-five plus."

A three-part approach would allow lawmakers from districts where voters are divided to split their votes and say they sided with the governor on some issues while opposing him on others. "A lot of us would like to be able to split our votes, and I'm one of them," said Rep. Bill English.

Diplomat: Defeat of Contra aid could help peace process

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP)—A top-ranking Nicaraguan diplomat said the defeat of President Reagan's request for more Contra aid could help the Sandinista government carry out the Central American peace plan.

But a Contra rebel leader said the defeat of the aid package in the U.S. House of Representatives would lead the leftist Sandinistas to demand the Contras surrender when the two sides meet for cease-fire talks next week.

Interior Minister Tomas Borge said before the vote Wednesday night that the government would not comment until today on the vote to reject the $36.2 million aid package, which included $3.2 million in military funding.

Nicaraguan Ambassador Carlos Tunnerman, speaking by telephone from Washington with the government's Radio Sandino, said Wednesday night that the 219-211 House vote could contribute to peace.

"We hope that based on this vote we can move ahead with the Central American peace plan, end the war and fulfill in all good faith what the peace plan includes," Tunnerman said.

Signed last summer by Nicaragua, El Salvador, Guatemala, Costa Rica and Honduras, the plan calls, among other things, for cease-fires, greater democracy and the end to outside aid for insurgencies in the region.

Tunnerman said the vote means "the House of Representatives gives recognition, a vote of support to the Central American peace plan, a negotiated alternative, the alternative of finding a solution through peaceful and civilized means."

He also said it reflected the majority opinion in the United States.

"The North American people in polls and fasting in front of the Capitol steps and in other ways have shown a majority are against aid to the Contras," the ambassador said. He called the vote "a personal triumph" for House Speaker Jim Wright and for the Democratic Party.

Contra leader Alfonso Robelo, in a telephone interview with The Associated Press from his home in San Jose, Costa Rica, said the vote will weaken the rebels' negotiating position in cease-fire talks, scheduled for next week in Guatemala.

"The cease-fire is supposed to be a means to set the conditions so there will be democracy in Nicaragua," he said.

"Obviously, now that the Sandinistas know of our weakness, they will be ready to settle only for a total defeat, for a surrender of our troops."

Robelo is one of six directors of the Contra umbrella organization known as the Nicaraguan Resistance.

"Now we feel that the burden is on the shoulders of Speaker Jim Wright and the 219 representatives that voted against us," Robelo said. "They believed the dictator Ortega, so it is they, who without military pressure, have to make a communist dictator change from that to a democratic leader."

"I think it is going to take a lot of effort, and if they ever accomplish that miracle, I will be more than willing to admit that I was wrong and be very, very happy at that outcome," Robelo said.

"But obviously it is very hard to believe that such a thing can really happen and they have to understand that now the ball is in their court and the responsibility is on their shoulders," he said.

Asked if the Contras could survive for long without further aid, Robelo replied: "There are fighters, units inside Nicaragua, that can survive, but obviously the amount of fighting, the degree of military pressure, is going to decrease drastically, especially after Feb. 29," when current aid runs out.

Contra fighters have been heavily resupplied in recent months, and military observers say reserves and the money that remains "in the pipeline" could keep the rebels going for a year even without new aid.

Arab killed in occupied lands

NABLUS, Occupied West Bank (AP)—Israeli troops killed one Palestinian and wounded at least six, and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said curfews would remain in effect in the occupied territories until the violent protests end.

In another development Wednesday, Palestinians staged violent protests in the West Bank city of Tulkarem after Moslem preachers announced through loudspeakers that Israeli vigilantes were rampaging through the town.

The death on Wednesday brought to 43 the confirmed number of Palestinians killed by Israeli gunfire since rioting began in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. The violence began Dec. 8 when rumors spread that a car accident had killed four Palestinians and was planned to avenge the slaying of an Israeli.

Nablus and its surroundings, home to about 120,000 Palestinians, looked like a ghost town, under curfew Wednesday for a fourth consecutive day.

Glass fragments from broken signs littered the winding, deserted streets of the Arab bazaar, patrolled by troops who said they were sleeping in an abandoned movie theater. Nablus is 40 miles north of Jerusalem.

Rabin, who toured the area Wednesday, said he will continue to use curfews to prevent Arab rioting in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Asked how long the curfew in Nablus would go on, he replied: "As long as it is required."

The army, Israeli media reported, hoped that a quiet Nablus would mean a quiet West Bank. But on Wednesday, troops were engaged in fresh clashes with Palestinian rioters throughout the territory.

In Tulkarem, Moslem preachers used loudspeakers in their mosques to announce that Israeli settlers had gone on a rampage through the city, 15 miles northeast of Tel Aviv, the army command said. The command said it had no reports to substantiate the preachers' claim and put Tulkarem under curfew.

An Israeli officer shot and killed a 26-year-old Arab who attacked him in Tulkarem, the command said. No identification or details were provided.

The domestic Itim news agency reported that hundreds of Palestinians barricaded themselves in Tulkarem's mosques.

Union member, two former union leaders are charged in hotel fire

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP)—A Teamsters Union member and two former union leaders were arrested and charged with murder in connection with the Dupont Plaza Hotel fire that killed nearly 100 people in 1986.

Another man, Hector Escudero Aponte, 36, who admitted to setting the blaze, was allowed to plead guilty to lesser charges in exchange for testifying against the three, said San Juan District Attorney Ismael Betancourt.

Escudero Aponte made the deal with prosecutors just before he was to go on trial Wednesday on 97 charges of first-degree murder and one charge each of arson and conspiracy.

Instead, he pleaded guilty to charges of second-degree murder, arson and conspiracy and was sentenced to concurrent terms totaling 30 years.

The union denied Wednesday its leadership had been involved in the fire, which came during a labor dispute at the hotel.

"I have always said no official of the Teamsters has participated in this," Secretary-Treasurer Jose E. Cadiz told a news conference. "This union is innocent of what happened at the Dupont Plaza."

The fire on New Year's Eve 1986 at the beachfront Dupont Plaza killed 97 people and injured more than 140 others.

It was the second-deadliest fire in U.S. history. The worst blaze was in 1946 at the Winecoff Hotel in Atlanta, which left 119 people dead.

Puerto Rico's Justice Department identified the three men arrested Wednesday as Manuel de Jesus Santiago Rios, vice president of Teamsters Local 901 at the time of the fire and on leave from his job as a waiter; Luis M.

Muniz Marquez, former union steward and butcher at the Dupont Plaza, and Luis Elias Vega Rios, a former utility employee.

Each was charged with 97 counts of first-degree murder and one count each of arson, conspiracy and damage. De Jesus Santiago Rios and Muniz Marquez were also charged with one count of perjury.

Betancourt told the court the three helped "instigate" the fire but gave no details. He said the fire might not have taken place without their "intellectual presence."

Bridal offerings for 1988 are updates of traditional designs

By JOAN LEBOW
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Fashion

It's no surprise to learn that down the aisle in 1988 will come romantic wedding gowns that are long and white, lacy and beaded, ruffled and bowed. But this season has its own subtle yet distinctive details — including new colors and deep "V" backs — that will appeal to brides' modern fashion sense.

Moreover, top bridal designers each add their own point of view to "traditional" wedding dresses. Their design signatures are as personal and varied as their backgrounds.

Frank Masandrea began his bridal-design career in the 1960s. While still a student at the Fashion Institute of Technology, he worked part time for the display department at Lord & Taylor in New York City. After showing his free-lance designs to the bridal buyer, who commissioned him to do an exclusive collection for the store, his career was launched.

In 1984, Masandrea teamed up with businessman Paul Diamond. Masandrea's dramatic and lavish pure silk for the Diamond Collection mix ceremonial formality with fashion-smart, and sometimes sexy, details.

Masandrea says, "For spring, the dresses are very romantic. There are some poufy ball gowns, bustles, crinolines and tiers of fabric. It's just like what's happening to ready-to-wear."

Masandrea is also showing lots of revealing wedding dresses. "Brides no longer want high necklines; they want something off-the-shoulder and bare," he says. This year, he adds, there is less lace on many gowns, and beads and lace are both more strategically placed. Finally, he stresses the importance of color.

Each year, designers introduce one or two pale pink gowns for the rare bride who eschews white. But in 1988, many designers are showing peach, pale blue, mint and especially pink gowns. Most provide an underlayer of color with an overlay of white tissue taffeta for a frosted effect.

A master of that technique is Priscilla C. Kidder, president of Priscilla of Boston. Kidder and her husband opened The Bride's Shop on Boston's prestigious Newbury Street in 1945. Kidder got national renown for designing the wedding gowns of Tricia and Julie Nixon and coordinating their White House weddings.

While some Priscilla gowns are ornate, most are characterized by an elegant simplicity. Kidder helped popularize raw, slubbed silk as a wedding gown fabric and uses it in her frosted pink dresses, which are just a blush beyond white. Ivory and white are far and away the most popular hues, and sweeping ballgown shapes are the favorite silhouettes (always worn with a petticoat). But Kidder also likes a shade she calls "French vanilla" — a not-quite-as-classic alternative to the basics.

"The bridal business has become all-seasons," Kidder says. "We use all types of fabrics year round." She notes that higher-priced silks are prevalent in designer gowns today, while rayon and polyester were once more important.

"There is a trend toward sheers like organdies or beautiful tulle on dresses," she continues. "The girls want to float down the aisle." There is less beading on the newest gowns, she says, because "the bride want to call attention to her face, not her clothes."

As for short skirts, the veteran bridal designer will have none of it. "I tried it in the '60s and didn't sell a dress, so I'm not going to do it this time. It's fine for cocktail parties and dancing, but not for a bride."

More adventurous brides will be inclined to seek out the unique gowns of Tokoyo's fashion rebel Yumi Katsura. Katsura has been selling to American stores since 1981. Her gowns embody some basic bridal guidelines — they are elaborate, long and white — then they break all the rules.

Trained in the theater and the art of costume design, Katsura later studied fashion in Paris. She returned to Tokyo, and in 1963 presented the first Western-style bridal show in Japan, where brides have traditionally worn only kimonos.

Katsura was exposed to white, lacy gowns as a fashion student in France. Yet her own designs are far less sweet and demure than those of her counterparts in the United States and Europe.

The designer favors sensuously close-to-the-body silhouettes with detachable trains; ruffles, ruching and Fortuny-style pleats; and unabashed bare backs and plunging necklines. Some of her fabrics are hand-painted. "Today's bride is highly individualistic, sexy, adventurous and self-assured," she says.

This year Katsura has merged some Asian and Western influences, designing with kimono-like sleeves and shapes.

In Japan, Katsura is a national television star, as well as a renowned designer, and her flair for drama is always apparent. Her bridal-house headquarters in Tokyo is a giant rococo-style building that resembles a wedding cake. But she has a traditional side, too: Katsura has written four books published in Japan on weddings and wedding etiquette, earning her the nickname, "Emily Post of Tokyo."

Clockwise from top left: Silk-satin gown with slightly draped torso of hand-beaded re-embroidered Alencon lace, Marie Antoinette draped skirt and cathedral train, trimmed with bows and silk roses (dress, about $2,190; headpiece, about $350) by Frank Masandrea for the Diamond Collection; bow-patterned lace tea-length dress with back-fasten bolero jacket ($880) and matching cloche with spray of tulle ($180) from Priscilla; asymmetrical-hip peplum with high-necked bodice of sequined and beaded lace and cathedral-length train (dress, about $1,550; headpiece, about $450) by Frank Masandrea for the Diamond Collection; and Yumi Katsura's one-shoulder ruffled wedding sheath with coat ($2,280 for both).

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Woman wants piano back 36 years later

DEAR ABBY: Here's a shocker for you. Thirty-six years ago, when my husband and I were newlyweds, the mother of a friend gave us her piano. She was about to move in with her daughter who had a baby grand, and since nobody in her family wanted her big old upright, we took it gladly.

I played the piano and my husband was the choir director at our church, and we didn't have a piano, so we were thrilled with this gift.

The woman who gave us this piano has long passed away, but yesterday we had a telephone call from someone who claimed to be her relative. She told my husband that someone in the family wanted that piano. She gave us her phone number and asked us to call her and tell her when they could pick it up.

Abby, that piano was given to us because the owner didn't want it and didn't know what else to do with it. After 36 years she expects us to just hand it over! We don't even know these people. What should we do? Please answer soon before they pull up in front of our house with a van!

ANGRY AND IN DOUBT

DEAR ANGRY: The caller is out of tune. Call her and tell her that the piano was a gift — not a loan — and if she or other family members have a problem accepting that fact, they should check with the original owner's daughter who was your friend at the time.

No one can come to your home and demand that you hand over anything — unless it's an item that was purchased and not paid for. And if the movers show up and demand the piano, play them a chorus of "You Can't Take That Away From Me." And call the police, if necessary.

DEAR ABBY: I saw the enclosed in a Sunday tabloid:

"A man looks at a portrait on the wall and says, 'Brothers and sisters I have none, but this man's father is my father's son.' At whose portrait is he looking? I was told this little gem more than 50 years ago and am still puzzled as to the answer. — Harold W. Longua, Livingston, N.J.

"The answer: The man is looking at a portrait of his son."

Abby, is this answer right? I think it should have been: "He is looking at a portrait of himself."

Who is right?
EDWARD E. SULLIVAN,
DAYTONA BEACH, FLA.

DEAR MR. SULLIVAN: The tabloid is. To make the riddle more understandable, substitute names from your own family.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HAPPY HUNTER IN WISCONSIN: "The creatures that want to live a life of their own we call wild. If wild, then no matter how harmless, we treat them as outlaws, and those of us who are especially well brought up shoot them for fun." (Clarence Day)

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Someone who doesn't always operate in the open might try to put some obstacles in your path today. This person's tactics will be similar to one he/she has tried before. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Matchmaker, an instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Think for yourself today, especially where critical career decisions are required. What is good for an associate might be to your advantage.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Instead of taking something you want serviced back to people you've had problems with previously, try to find someone more reliable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) When socializing with friends today, don't resurrect old issues that led to disagreements in the past, especially the ones that were never completely resolved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A failure to tolerate your mate's point of view regarding a vital family matter about which he/she feels strongly will invite friction in your household today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Unless you have something kind to say about a co-worker today, it's best to keep your thoughts to yourself. He/she may not be too fond of you either.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This is one of those days where you might not be as careful with your possessions as you should be, and some type of loss is possible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your attitude and example will have a definite effect upon your family today. If you're cranky and short-tempered, expect the same from them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Someone with whom you'll be dealing today may arouse your ire. If this happens, keep it to yourself and smolder in silence rather than letting him/her know.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't let a disagreement with a close friend over something material jeopardize the relationship today. Take the short end of the deal if necessary.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your image will suffer today if you are too self-serving in your arrangements with others. Look out for your interests, but don't do so to anyone else's detriment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Unless you have constructive counsel, keep your comments to yourself today regarding something that does not involve you directly, but does affect a sensitive pal.

XV Winter Olympics most visible

By Murray Olderman

CALGARY, Alberta (NEA) — The XVth Winter Olympiad will be the most visible frolic ever on snow and ice.

For 16 days, from the opening ceremonies in McMahon Stadium on Saturday, Feb. 13, through the closing ceremonies in the Olympic Saddle-dome on Sunday, Feb. 28, television cameras will be trained on the games in Calgary.

The world's best skaters, skiers and jumpers will compete for medals in eight different winter sports — biathlon, bobsled, figure skating, ice hockey, luge, Alpine skiing, Nordic skiing and speedskating. There will also be demonstration sports such as curling, ice dancing and free-style skiing.

Images of the action will be beamed live into millions of TV sets across America for a total of 97.5 hours, 53 of them in prime time. In addition, the telecasts will also reach from North America to the other four continents embraced in the interlocking five-ring symbol of the Olympics.

These Winter Games are three days longer than any previously held since the Olympic movement was enlarged to include cold-weather competition at Chamonix, France, in 1924. And they include three weekends.

For this, the American Broadcasting Co. was willing to ante up $309 million and become the primary financial supporter of the Games for the host city of Calgary, which rises starkly out of the Canadian prairie 60 miles east of the Rocky Mountains.

There is a Wild West flavor to these Winter Olympics. Calgary was a frontier outpost little more than a century ago when the Mounties established a police unit at the confluence of the Bow and Elbow rivers. It bustled briskly from the Gay '90s through the Roaring '20s before settling down as the premier petroleum center in Canada. Now Calgary is an energetic city of 600,000 people, with such trappings of culture as its own symphony.

But there's still a spirit of raw adventure, captured each summer by the famous Calgary Stampede, a glorified rodeo that attracts a million people. And progress can be seen in the clusters of oil-stimulated, glass-enclosed skyscrapers that have transformed its skyline into a northern version of Dallas. Calgary has been called Canada's "Prairie Manhattan." But it is also an agricultural center (grain and beef) for the vast farmland of the western provinces. And it is the tourist gateway to the nearby Canadian Rockies.

The University of Calgary serves as a hub for the Olympics. Its dormitories have been expanded to become the main village for the international athletes. McMahon Stadium, where the flame will be lit, is adjacent to the campus. It is the home of the Calgary Stampede of the Canadian Football League.

Right on campus is the new, enclosed speedskating oval the length of two football fields, signaling the first time speedskating events have been held indoors. Elsewhere, the Olympic Saddle-dome will accommodate the extensive hockey competition, figure skating and the closing ceremonies. The Saddle-dome, which seats 19,000, is the home of the Calgary Flames of the National Hockey League.

Another venue, the Olympic Park was built on a bluff on the western edge of town, within sight of the Trans-Canada Highway. The park encompasses two ski jumping hills and joint runs for the bobsled and luge races.

The symbol of the XVth Winter Olympiad is a snowflake designed from five sets of double C's — a little C for Calgary, a big C for Canada. The official mascots for the Games are a couple of doll bears, Howdy and Hidy, the latter the first female mascot ever designated.

The Winter Games often have created instant U.S. heroes — starting with Irving Jaffee, the speedskating champion who came off the streets of New York in 1932, and coming down to Eric Heiden, the thick-thighed skating sprinter from Wisconsin who electrified Lake Placid in 1980.

The most thrilling moment for America in winter sports was the U.S. hockey team's triumph for the gold medal over the heavily favored Russians eight years ago.

Hogs stay atop SWC standings

SWC roundup

By The Associated Press

Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson says the games are getting tougher, but the Razorbacks can win or share the Southwest Conference basketball title if they continue to win their home games and break even on the road.

Richardson made the comment Wednesday night after the Razorbacks used the scoring of Ron Huery and Mario Credit and a hot streak by Andrew Lang to defeat the Texas Tech Red Raiders, 69-48.

The victory kept Arkansas on top of the conference standings with a 7-1 record and boosted them to 16-3 overall.

In other SWC games Wednesday night, Texas A&M edged Texas Christian, 72-67, Texas took an easy 76-56 from Baylor and Houston trounced Rice, 84-67.

"Every game is getting tougher," Richardson said. "We have to win them all at home. If we split on the road, we have a chance to win the championship or be co-champions."

Richardson also praised the Lang's play. He finished with 11 points and nine rebounds after getting only three points and one rebound in the first half.

"For a 15-minute period, Lang played better than he has all year," said Razorback Coach Nolan Richardson of Lang's second-half performance. "He was an enforcer. I guess he made up his mind to go to work."

Tech was led by Wes Lowe and Todd Duncan with 11 each. "Arkansas kept the pressure on and their defense converted some key baskets," said Gerald Myers, Tech coach.

Darryl McDonald led Texas A&M to a 72-67 victory over Texas Christian with 22 points, 10 rebounds and four steals. Donald Thompson added 16 points and Keron Graves 11 as the Aggies upped their season record to 13-9 and their conference record to 5-3. Rod Jacques had a game-high 25 points and 13 rebounds for the Horned Frogs who dropped to 7-12 overall and 1-7 in the SWC.

Aggies coach Shelby Metcalf said he saw some improvement. "I thought we did better than we've been doing," said Texas A&M coach Shelby Metcalf.

Mistakes caused the loss, TCU coach Moe Iba said. "Our kids played hard, and they played with enthusiasm. But we just made too many mistakes and missed too many layups," Iba said.

Jose Nassar had 18 points as Texas snapped Baylor's three-game winning streak with a 76-56 victory. Travis Mays had 17 points, although both he and Nassar had only two points each in the first half.

The win evened Texas' record at 10-10 on the year and 4-4 in the Southwest Conference. The Bears dropped to 13-8 and 4-4.

Senior guard Michael Williams paced Baylor with 25 points. "I thought Texas played just about as well as we have seen in quite a while. They ran right at us in the second half and put the game away when they had to," said Baylor coach Gene Iba.

"The thing that was pleasing to me is that as a coach you don't have many opportunities where everyone who played contributed," said Texas Coach Bob Weltlich.

Richard Hollis scored 27 points and hit five of his team's nine 3-point baskets to lead Houston to an 84-67 victory over Rice.

Freshman David Willie led the Owls with 15 points but he was held scoreless in the second half until the closing minute.

Pampa Gold routs Borger

Pampa Gold rolled past Borger Red 81-62 in a ninth-grade basketball game played earlier this week.

The Gold team, coached by Clay Richerson, is now 11-2 overall and 5-1 in district play.

Quincy Williams led five players in double-figures for Pampa with 18 points. Jory Farina was right behind with 17 points, followed by Patrick Jackson and Jayvon Williams 15 each. Wayne Cavanaugh added 10 points.

Will Hacker, a member of the Pampa Green 9th grade team who suffered a broken leg during a game last week, is out of the hospital now, reported Richerson.

"He hasn't gone back to school yet, but he's improving," Richerson said.

Pampa Gold hosts Borger White at 8 p.m. Monday in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Sophomores lose to Canyon In a sophomore game Tuesday night, Pampa was defeated by Canyon 65-48.

Cornelius Landers and Heath Parker led Pampa with 11 points each.

8th graders remain unbeaten

Pampa Red 8th graders clobbered Borger Red 71-33 earlier this week to run their perfect record to 13-0 with three games remaining.

Phil Sexton was high scorer for Pampa Red with 19 points. Paul Brown, Randy Nichols and Jason Levi had 10 points each.

In a 7th grade game, Pampa Red fell to Borger Red 32-26. Troy Reaves was top scorer for Pampa with 12 points, followed by Chad Giles, Will Winborne and Chester Jackson with 4 points each.

Pampa Red 7th grade has an 8-4 record.

Monday, Pampa 7th and 8th graders will host Borger with the games starting at 4:30 p.m. in the middle school gym.

Harvesters travel to Frenship

Both Pampa boys' and girls' basketball teams are in action Friday night at Frenship.

The Harvesters hope to keep their hopes alive for a playoff spot while the Lady Harvesters are just hoping to match last season's most ever wins for a Pampa girls' basketball team.

Both games will be broadcast over KGRO-radio (1230 AM) in Pampa, starting at 6:30 p.m.

Pampa boys are currently tied for third place with Borger in the district race.

The Lady Harvesters are 16-11 overall and must win their last three games to match last season's 19-win season.

Father Time took a vacation during Super Bowl

Baseball anyone? Spring training begins later this month and the season officially kicks off April 4 at 1:05 p.m. when St. Louis visits Cincinnati, traditional site of the first pitch each year.

The Texas Rangers open the season at home April 4 against Cleveland. Texas' first road trip begins April 12 in Detroit.

Houston's Astros also open on home turf, April 5 against San Diego. The 'Stros first road game is April 8 against Cincinnati.

Some final comments on the Super Bowl...

To give you an idea how ridiculously long the XXII edition was, the 2:00 warning in the second quarter was whistled in at 7:04. The second quarter ended at 7:19.

Here are the lengths of each quarter:

 First: 59 minutes, 14 seconds (5:18 p.m.-6:17:14 p.m.)
 Second: 1:01:14 (6:17:46-7:19:30).
 Halftime: 26:30 (7:21:00-7:47:30).
 Third: 42:00 (7:49:00-8:31:00).
 Fourth: 29:56 (8:33:14-9:04:10).
 Actual game time was 3:17:10. Much too long.
 Could've been worse, though.

What could not have been much worse, however, was the score, a 32 point margin of victory for Washington.

In the last five years, the margins of victory have been the widest in the 22 year history of the bowl. Broken down, five years at a time, here's the way it has shaped up:

From 1984-88 (Super Bowl XVIII-XXII): Winners outscored

By Jimmy Patterson

losers 203-65 for an average victory of 41-13 per game, or 28 points.

From 1979-83 (SB XIII-XVII): Winners 146, Losers 98; average of 29-20 per contest.

From 1969-73 (SB III-VII): Winners 93, Losers 37; average margin of victory 19-7 through the five games.

Incidentally, Green Bay started off the Super Bowl series with two rather convincing victories, including a 35-10 win over Kansas City in 1967's Super Bowl I and a 33-14 triumph over Oakland in SB II.

Senior Staff Writer Paul Pinkham wishes it widely known that he was the only member of the weekly Pick 'Em Poll to correctly predict Washington to win the Super Bowl. OK, we'll give him just that one moment of glory.

Is it just me, or do you, too, think that McDonalds timed the introduction of their new Cheddar Melt sandwich to coincide with the Super Bowl? Little doubt in my mind.

Deadline is Feb. 11 for teams wishing to register themselves for the Canadian YMCA's Adult Basketball League.

The league will be divided into two divisions: Open, and 35 and over.

Individual trophies will be awarded to winners in both divisions.

Registration fee is $200 per team. More information can be obtained by calling the Canadian YMCA.

This week's area basketball Top 5 sees little change. Current rankings, teams, records and last week's ranking...

Six Lefors students competed Saturday in the Berger Hoop Shoot sponsored by the Elks Lodge. Jerimey Howard, 9, center front, won first place in the 8-9 age bracket. Also competing were, from left, Mark Tucker, 11; Ginger Hannon, 11; Tommy Cox, 11; Shila McMullen, 10; and Jennifer Williams, 9. Jerimey and Jennifer competed in the 8-9 age bracket; Tommy and Shila were in the 10-11 bracket; and Ginger and Mark, because of their birthdates, were in the 12-13 bracket.

Pampa All-Stars place third at Foran tourney

The Pampa All-Stars won four of five games to finish third in the eighth annual Jim Foran Basketball Tournament held last weekend.

A dozen teams were entered in the tournament. The All-Stars won their first two games before losing to eventual tournament champion Amarillo Bellview 34-31.

The All-Stars bounced back to defeat Amarillo Ridgecrest 42-18 and Dimmitt 48-26 in the final two games.

Shelby Landers and Tony Cavalier of the local all-stars were named to the all-tournament team. Other team members were Dwain Nickelberry, Clarence Reed, Greg Moore, C.C. Wallace, Chris Gilbert, Devin King, Tyler Kendall, Chad Dunnam, Greg McDaniel, Hank Gindorf, Ronnie Smith, David Potter and Tim McGavitt. Pampa coaches were Wayne Barkley, Jack Gindorf and Ace Acevedo. Jamin Young of the Amarillo Bellview team was named the tournament's most valuable player.

Swimmers fifth at Midland meet

Pampa High girls finished fifth in the recent Midland Invitational Swim Meet.

Richelle Hill and Pam Morrow placed in two events for the Lady Harvesters. Hill was third in both the 200 freestyle and 500 freestyle. Morrow was fourth in the 100 butterfly and fifth in the 100 breaststroke.

Jennifer Hinkle placed sixth for Pampa in the 50 freestyle while Michelle Scott was fourth in the 100 freestyle and Betsy Chambers was third in the 100 backstroke.

Pampa's 400 freestyle relay team finished second.

Midland High won the meet title. Amarillo High was second.

In the boys' division, Pampa finished in 12th place.

San Angelo Central was the winning team.

Boone, Crockett event to be held March 17-20

DFW Airport — Many of the world's noted hunters and conservationists will gather at the Hyatt Regency DFW hotel on March 17-20 as the Dallas Safari Club holds its annual convention and salutes the Boone & Crockett Club on the famed organization's 100th birthday.

The Dallas Safari Club (DSC) is a non-profit organization formed to "promote good fellowship among those who love the outdoors and to help preserve these activities for future generations." The organization has given financial support to a host of conservation projects, including the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's Project WILD, Operation Game Thief and its television series, "Made in Texas." It also has contributed to efforts by the department and private organizations to restore the desert bighorn sheep to its former West Texas range.

DSC officials said this year's convention and exposition will celebrate the 100-year history of Boone & Crockett, which was founded by President T. Roosevelt.

Auction to ads

John Connally on the importance of saving.

Former Texas Gov. John Connally's advertisement for a savings and loan that has started appearing in Texas. Connally, who last month auctioned off his possessions of a lifetime to help pay creditors after he declared bankruptcy, is now urging Texans to save in a series of advertisements on TV and full page newspaper advertisements.

Chemical reaction forces evacuation of plane

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A toxic chemical stored improperly aboard an American Airlines jet heated up the floor and spread fumes through the cabin, injuring at least 12 people, officials said.

The 119 passengers and six crew members on the Dallas-to-Nashville flight evacuated the MD-80 jet by emergency chutes upon landing Wednesday, said American spokeswoman Susan Robbins.

Twelve people were treated at Donelson Hospital for smoke inhalation, and four were admitted, two in serious condition, said Gloria Keel, a hospital spokeswoman.

"The cause of the problem was a toxic chemical that was improperly labeled in the cargo hold. It was labeled as laundry equipment and it turned out it was a chemical that should not have been on the plane," Ms. Robbins said.

She said the substance, stored in a cardboard container weighing 104 pounds, underwent a chemical reaction.

"It wasn't a fire, but it caused a pungent odor and feelings of heat. It caused the floor of the cabin to get warm, and the flight attendants noticed it as they were coming in for a landing," Ms. Robbins said.

However, Capt. Harry White of the Metro Nashville Fire Department said there was a small fire that burned some cardboard containers in the cargo hold and caused some structural damage to the plane.

White said he did not know if the fire was caused by the chemical reaction.

"It was in a contained area and likely consumed all the oxygen, so there were probably not the orange flames you'd typically associate with a fire," he said.

The fire was extinguished by the Metro Nashville Airport Authority's firefighting team, White said.

Passengers also said there was smoke in the cabin. Firefighters had to chop a hole in the plane floor to douse the chemical with water.

Ms. Robbins would not identify the chemical and said she did not know the extent of its danger.

The airline, the National Transportation Safety Board and the Federal Aviation Administration are investigating how the chemical got in the hold, and will talk with those who shipped it and those to whom it was addressed, she said.

"It's a restricted article, it was not supposed to be on the airplane. The container was sent from Austin, Texas, to Nashville," she said.

Metro Nashville firemen had to chop a hole in the plane floor to douse the chemical with water and cool it off.

Ms. Keel said Nelma and Charles Alexander, both age 35, both of Ft. Campbell, Ky., were both in serious, but stable condition and were admitted to Donelson Hospital. She said Michael Jackson, 28, of LaVergne, and John Duncan, 40, of Old Hickory, were both in good condition. Airport spokesman Fred Tucker said Jackson and Duncan are airport firefighters.

Man falls into icy Red River

DENISON (AP) — A man jumped about 50 feet into the icy Red River to escape from an oncoming car and then clung to a railroad bridge for two hours before he was rescued.

Nalton Sensat's clothes almost froze Wednesday in the 24-degree weather as the 20-year-old waited for rescuers.
