FFA livestock judging show held despite some setbacks

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

A week filled with livestock show activities continued Wednesday with the Future Farmers of America (FFA) Livestock Judging Contest in the Clyde Carruth Pavilion here

Despite several recent disappointments, FFA members resolutely put their efforts into showing their swine, lambs and steers to the best of their ability in

Wednesday evening's show.
In years past, FFA members have been treated to an awards banquet each year, usually held at the conclusion of this week's activities. However, earlier this week FFA sponsor Randy Dunn learned that no one had offered to sponsor this year's banquet.

'The folks that sponsored it decided not to do it this year," Dunn

Dunn also said the $1,000 Frank M. Carter Scholarship would not be awarded this year. This scholarship is awarded to an agricultural student who plans to attend Texas Tech University in Lubbock and major in agriculture, Dunn explained.

Because of the requirements, "we haven't had a strong applicant in a couple of years," said. "We've had some really good students, but the requirements (of the scholarship) didn't fit. They planned to go to Clarendon College or Texas A&M or somewhere else."

Sherri Johnson of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, which handles the administration of the scholarship, said the scholarship will not be awarded this year, but that it will be in 1989.

The scholarship has to have a judging contest and we didn't have one this year," Johnson said. "But we will have one next

However, these setbacks did not keep FFA members from doing their best at last night's events. Following are the results of the Frank M. Carter Memorial Judging Contest

Under an agreement announced Wednesday at the conclusion of a three-day visit by Chinese Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian, the United States will lift a five-month suspension on liberalization of hightech products China is permitted to buy from American companies.

The restriction was imposed in October to protest what the United States said was sale of Chinese Silkworm missiles used by Iran to attack neutral shipping in the Persian Gulf.

During his visit. Wu continued to deny that such sales were ever made directly by China. Without commenting on that assertion, the administration said it was satisfied with what the Chinese are

The items still on the list include computers that can be used for military purposes.

The decision removed an irritant in the relationship. "Clearly they weren't happy about it, but we weren't happy about the Silkworms," said a Reagan administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Wu also assured the United States that China would go along with a United Nations resolution banning all arms sales to Iran, the U.S. official said. According to U.S. estimates, China sold nearly $1 billion worth of arms to Iran in 1987.

Kemp drops presidential bid

By The Associated Press

Republican presidential hopeful Jack Kemp quit the race today, saying "we may have suffered a defeat but our principles have not.'

Gary Hart was ready to drop out for a second time on the Democratic side as the shrinking field of candidates converged on Illinois, scene of the next big campaign test.

Kemp was crushed in the Super Tuesday landslide of Vice President George Bush, who rejoined

"I am folding my tent, but I plan to continue to carry the flag," said Kemp, the New York congressman and former pro football quarterback who had hoped to win the GOP nomination as the conservative heir to President Reagan, whose economic programs have included many of Kemp's ideas.

'I ran for the presidency to ensure that the torch that we lit in 1980 in Detroit — when we nominated Ronald Reagan and revolu-

the campaign trail today after tionized our party - would burn even brighter and light the way into the 1990s," Kemp said in remarks distributed just before he spoke at a news conference. He said both Bush and Sen. Bob Dole have embraced conservative positions.

Meanwhile, sources said today that Hart intends to end his campaign on Friday after failing to generate significant support for his re-run at the nomination.

The sources, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said Hart would not endorse any of the surviving contenders.

caused by illegal substances? Pampans will have the opportunity to have these and other questions about drugs answered at a drug information fair at the Pampa Mall from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Saturday. Pampa Says kNOw to Drugs is sponsoring the event. Independent Retail Pharmacists of Pampa is to host a booth to help people sort through prescriptions, said Linda Haynes, chairman of the professional committee for Pampa Says kNOw Most of us have a shelf full of old prescriptions that we can't decide what to do with. This will give everyone, especially senior citizens, a chance to talk with a professional who can give them good advice on what to throw away and what to keep,'

Dean Copeland, registered pharmacist and coordinator of the event, said people should load their prescription drugs in a sack and bring them to the booth. Pharmacists Tony Frogge and Jim Baker have volunteered to check expiration dates and destroy outdated medications.

Pharmicists will also answer questions about side effects, drug reactions and drug interactions. Pampa Police officer Bryan Hedrick is to be present to supervise the destruction of the drugs. Representatives from area substance abuse units are to have displays at the fair and be available to answer questions, including Care Unit of Canyon; Turning Point and Panhandle Alcoholic Recovery Center, both of Amarillo; and Allen Recovery Center of Plainview. Pampa Police Department representatives are to display drug paraphernalia and two cases of

Other attractions at the fair are to be informational pamphlets from many groups, including Alcoholics Anonymous and Al-Anon, Haynes said. Also, posters done by Pampa elementary students as part of the Pampa Says kNOw to Drugs campaign are to be displayed at the mall Saturday.

Lee Trevino hopes he's better at politics than his golf swing name is going to be an issue in the mean and is going to come up

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Lee Trevino admits he has a popular name, but the insurance executive seeking a congressional seat hopes voters look at the issues because his golf game is not too hot.

Trevino, 42, defeated chiropractor Terry Peters in the Republican primary and will face veteran Democratic Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez for the District 20 congressional seat in the general election in November.

Trevino, whose real name is Loreto, said the nickname 'Lee.' was given to him 16 years ago by a business associate.

He said he doesn't believe his name helped him win the primary Tuesday, particulary because is golf game is 'lousy.

"It's a big joke — Lee Trevino, the golfer. Everybody laughs about it, but it's in good humor," Trevino said Wednesday.

'No one has been critical, nobody has asked, 'Did I change my name?' or 'Was I trying to get in with the name?' I don't think the race," he said.

Trevino, an assistant regional vice president at the United Services Automobile Association, also is a board trustee of the Alamo Community College District. He and his wife Sandra, a high school English teacher, have three children ranging in age from 6 to 17 years old.

Trevino, a native of Pharr, has undergraduate and graduate degrees in political science, but has worked in the insurance industry for 17 years.

He had been a lifelong Democrat until 1980, when he began voting for Republicans.

He said he sought to oppose the 71-year-old Gonzalez because he said the 26-year congressman has attacked military programs that would have helped the area.

Gonzalez has a reputation for blasting his opponents, but Trevino said he would try to stick with the issues instead of rhetoric.

"I've been told that the man is concerns of the '50s and '60s. We have to be concerned with the 90s and beyond," he said. Gonzalez did not return telephone calls to The Associated Press Wednesday. Trevino said his name change came in 1971 when he was being transferred to the Aetna Life and Casualty Co. office in Springfield, Ill. A supervisor called him to welcome him and Trevino said his name was Loreto.

Dallas police cheer success

DALLAS (AP) - Members of the Dallas police force cheered their apparent success in forcing a city election to abolish a citizens review board, but some City Council members say they'll try to avoid a referendum

"That would be something we hope to discuss over the next week or so," councilman Charles Tandy said Wednesday. "It might not be too late."

Tandy, who voted against strengthening the board in January, said the council probably made a mistake in granting the board the power to subpoena witnesses and conduct independent inves-

Monica Smith, president of the Dallas Police Association, said the council had its chance to negotiate.

"We're going to the people. Let it be their choice," she said.

Billionaire H. Ross Perot, who backed the policemen's efforts, called the apparent success of the petition drive "a slam dunk." Perot said he joined police in their attempts to eliminate the citizens review board because officers "should have the same constitutional rights and civil rights as the criminals that the police officers have to deal with." As people approached the polls on Tuesday's Democratic and Republican primaries, off-duty police solicited their signatures on petitions to force a city charter election on two issues - hiring almost 700 more officers to meet a goal of three officers per 1,000 residents, and doing away with the Dallas Citizens Police Review Board. Smith said officers collected "far more" than the 20,000 signatures needed to force the election.

black elected official, called the police association efforts "clearly divisive and polarizing. It was divisive from the start."

The January vote strengthening powers of the review board followed months of complaints by minority leaders that internal affairs and the grand jury weren't doing enough to investigate or punish officers who had killed minority citizens.

The board, appointed by the council, investigates injuries and deaths involving police and citizens and also investigates citizen complaints of police misconduct.

City Council members gave the board power to issue subpoenas, which can be quashed only by a vote of eight of the 11 council members. Before January, the board could only issue subpoenas if a majority of the council approved.

Police contend the board is unnecessary because police under scrutiny already face a grand jury and the department's internal affairs division.

"Under the processes in our city, we ask the police officer to give up his constitutional rights in the review process and we're also asking the police officer to submit to six levels of jeopardy while we ask the criminal to be only subject to one level of jeopardy," Perot said.

"A police officer can be tried six times and it appears that his case can be reopened again and again if any citizen raises a commotion. In this environment, our best people will leave police work. In their own words, who does the city support – the people trying to stop crime or the criminal?" Perot said.

Perot said officers conducted themselves Tuesday with dignity, professionalism and restraint, while some elected officials were "yelling, screaming at them" as citizens came to vote. "It's a sad commentary on civil rights," Perot

"Reaction in the community was overwhelmingly negative to that bullying tactic and produced an additional outpouring of support for these police

Texas battling Florida citrus

BROWNSVILLE (AP) - Texas declined comment on the lawsuit threat to the Texas citrus indusfired a new salvo in its war against Florida citrus by suing U.S. Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng.

The suit, filed Wednesday in U.S. district court in Brownsville, accuses Lyng of violating federal law when the U.S. Department of Agriculture ended a 31/2 year quarantine on shipments of fresh Florida citrus to Texas and other citrus-producing areas.

Texas wants to keep the Florida fruit out because of a fear of bacterial citrus canker, officials said. Canker prompted the ban on Florida citrus after an outbreak of the disease in some areas there in August 1984.

U.S. Ditrict Judge Filemon Vela denied Texas' request for an emergency stay of a USDA rule that on Feb. 11 ended the Florida citrus ban.

Underground newspaper surfaces again at WTSU rally

Dr. Hunter Ingalls, former art/history professor, addresses rally crowd.

CANYON (AP) — Speakers at an outdoor rally urged West Texas State University students to be concerned about academic freedom even if they don't support faculty members who have criticized school administrators.

The Rest of the Prairie, an underground newspaper critical of the WTSU administration and the subject of a libel suit, surfaced again at the rally Wednesday as about 300 students, faculty and former faculty members attended a rally to support open communication.

Students and Faculty United for Open Communication and Academic Freedom, a campus group that mobilized to support Dr. Gary Byrd and Dr. Mary Gill, faculty publishers of the underground newspaper, sponsored the rally to spark student involve-

"I think it is very important that the faculty - and students should have a place to express their views without fear," graduate student Paula Simpson, a member of the group, said of the underground publication.

Jim Brown, attorney for fired head football coach Bill Kelly, began the rally with a brief speech, saying students don't have to agree with those critical of the school's administration to be concerned about academic freedom.

Brown, who also represents SAFE, Students, Alumni and Faculty for Education at WTSU, urged members of the campus community to be aware of the issues at stake in the controversy.

"What has been at issue is the right to defend what you believe and the right to say that which you believe," Brown said. "For those of you who think I'm being dramatic, I encourage you to talk to some of the ex-faculty who have dared to disagree with the powers that be on this campus."

SAFE, an anonymous organization, and The Rest of the Prairie are being sued for libel by university president Dr. Ed D.

The suit, filed Feb. 18, alleges the underground newspaper and SAFE placed him in a false light and have resulted in harassment and intimidation including anonymous telephone calls and comment Wednesday night, his wife said.

Byrd and Gill revealed their involvement as publishers of the underground newspaper last month and asked the court to impose sanctions on Roach and his attorney, George Whittenburg, for filing the suit, including court costs and attorneys' fees.

Dr. Don Envick, former WTSU professor and ex-Faculty Senate president, told the cheering crowd his participation in the rally was to "represent the growing number of ex-faculty" from WT.

"I came here to hear the bells of academic freedom ring. Do you hear them ringing?" he asked. "Our hearts are not only with you, but so are our checkbooks.

Many in the crowd of supporters sported buttons and carried signs critical of Roach and T. Boone Pickens Jr., chairman of WT's board of regents.

Gill said she was glad to see student support for academic freedom and free speech.

The settlement, believed to be the largest of a defense contracting fraud case to date, grew out of findings by Pentagon auditors of numerous accounting and inventory irregularities at the Fort Worth company, the sources said Wednesday night.

A Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the settlement is to be announced Friday by federal prosecutors in

Under the settlement, prosecutors have agreed to drop any potential criminal or civil charges in the case, and Bell Helicopter will not acknowledge any wrongdoing, according to the

One Pentagon source said there had never been any evidence of intentional fraud on the part of the company

'This was an accounting problem," he said.

However, during the investigation, there were allegations that Bell Helicopter officials shredded documents, altered computer entries and covered up evidence of deliberate overbillings to the government.

'We have a deal, but it's not done quite yet. The Army and Bell Helicopter do expect to sign a settlement on Friday, though,' a Pentagon source said.

In Fort Worth, U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins said he could not comment on the case.

'I'm just unable to count any chickens before they hatch," Collins told The Associated Press when he was telephoned Wednesday night at his home.

Asked about a possible Friday announcement, Collins added, "Not only can I not count unhatched chickens, I can't even admit there are any eggs.'

Officials at the Justice Department in Washington also declined

The source said most of the overcharges came as a result of an accounting problem that dealt with the handling of contracts worth billions of dollars prior to

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that the $90 million settlement covers most of the $107 million in overcharges that the Defense Contract Audit Agency had identified at Bell Helicopter between the years 1982 and 1986.

The largest part of the settlement, about $46 million, involves alleged violations of so-called 'savings clause contracts' that the Army required attached to Bell Helicopter contracts to limit overcharges by the company in

While the savings clauses limited profit rates to between 12 percent and 13 percent, Bell Helicopter was actually receiving substantially more than that, the Post reported

Bell Helicopter is a wholly owned subsidiary of Textron Inc., a conglomerate based in Providence, R.I. In fiscal 1986, the parent company ranked as the Pentagon's 14th largest contractor. with $1.6 billion in defense work.

Bell Helicopter holds contracts from the Army for such major helicopter programs as the AH-1 Cobra attack helicopter, the UH-1 Iroquois utility helicopter and the OH-58D Kiowa light helicopter.

But Republican Gov. Bill Clements seemed pleased that the liberal wing of the Democratic Party prevailed in Texas on Tuesday

"I thought it worked beautifully," Clements said sarcastically. Meanwhile, Vice President George Bush, Clements' candidate for president, swept the GOP primary, capturing all 111 Texas delegates Former state Sen. John Traeger, who is credited for making Super Tuesday happen across the South, acknowledged that the Democrats who did well in Texas would have difficulty beating Bush here in November.

"I would say if I had to handicap it, with my house and lot and wife on it, right now I'd have to say Bush would appear to have the edge. But I certainly wouldn't concede it to him," Traeger said.

Like Edwards, Traeger denied the Democrats' goal was to use Super Tuesday to help a conservative candidate. The goal, he said, was participation and it appeared to work.

Controversy surrounds lien law against elderly

ABILENE (AP) — State human services board members support delaying a new law that officials say is designed to help recover nursing home costs but has been misunderstood as working to force people from their homes.

The law lets the Texas Department of Human Services recover medical assistance payments through enforcement of liens or claims against estates of Medicaid recipients after they die. Some officials said Wednesday the legislation has been misunderstood.

The issue, hotly contested around Texas, was the source of a television ad that attacked State Sen. Grant Jones for supporting the legislation

Texas Board of Human Services members, scheduled to meet in Abilene today, said they would favor a delay in adoption of rules for implementing the law until the issue is reviewed by the state Attorney General's office.

Jones, D-Temple, was handily defeated Tuesday by Sweetwater attorney Temple Dickson, who used the ad in his campaign. The ad was utilized in at least one other Texas campaign.

"I have not seen the commercials, but from what I heard, I think the issue has been structured and cast wrong," said J. Livingston Kosberg, chairman of the human services board, which governs the DHS.

'There is no legislative intent or requirement that people give up or sell their homes to receive nursing home care," Human Services Commissioner Marlin Johnston said in a written statement released by the board.

'The notion that we would kick a spouse or dependent or disabled child out of their home is not only mistaken, it's absurd," he said.

Dickson's ad, which Jones blamed largely for his defeat, depicts an elderly woman - played by an actress - sitting on the porch of her home and saying Jones gave people a choice between getting Medicaid or losing their homes.

Rob Mosbacher, a board member, said an attempt to use the issue, and "scaring elderly people to death" for political gain, was "a gross, gross distortion of the process.

'It's highly unfortunate and it doesn't do much to inspire confidence in public officials of this state to use this small provision of a huge bill, to twist it to suggest that these folks' homes are going to be taken away from them," he said. "It's fundamentally incor-

Kosberg termed the legislation appropriate, noting it had not been sought by the state agency. The law, part of an omnibus sunset bill continuing operation of the DHS in the last legislative session, was inserted by members of the Sunset Commission staff.

'We see within the framework of many of our Medicaid programs instances where there are recipients who in fact have children or heirs who are quite affluent," he said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Some speech less free than others?

And then when the U.S. Supreme Court hands down a unanimous decision, you might figure it was a cut-anddried case. Not so with the decision upholding Hustler magazine's disgusting parody of the Rev. Jerry Falwell. While the court seemed to grant almost absolute protection to speech that is intended as satire, it left blurred the line that distinguishes fact from fiction, parody from portrayal.

At issue was a 1983 takeoff of a well-known liquor advertisement in which famous people describe the "first time" they tasted the product. In Hustler's version Falwell was depicted as having sex with his mother in an outhouse. Outraged, the televangelist and founder of the Moral Majority sued publisher Larry Flynt for $45 million for libel, invasion of privacy and infliction of emotional distress.

A lower court had no trouble discerning that the parody was fiction. Thus Falwell did not have a case for libel, which is defined as a defamatory, false statement of fact. But it awarded him $200,000 for emotional distress. It took the Supreme Court to rule that awards for emotional distress require defendants to prove factual falsehood, the standard for libel. What about parody so skillfully crafted that it leads the reader to believe it could be true? The fiction of the Hustler parody, as in most cartoons, seemed obvious. But some of the best satire is subtle. Will it require a label in order to qualify for legal protection? The court

That's what makes the whole area of libel law so troubling. The court consistently has ruled that free speech, the First Amendment notwithstanding, is not absolute. The concept of libel, as its most general, is any publication of falsehood that is injurious to another. It is rooted in the ancient legal concept that a man's reputation is an extension of himself. An injury to reputation was regarded as an injury to the person.

As late as 18th century England, only imputation of a crime or social disease or casting aspersions on professional competence constituted defamation, the published version of which is libel. Since then, howev er, courts have traveled a tortuous route to arrive at the conclusion that some forms of speech are less free

Public figures have to prove more than negligence in order to win libel judgments; private figures need not. And now the court rules draw a distinction between satire, which is absolutely free, and seriousness, which is not

Free speech should mean just that. Free speech. In the marketplace of ideas and public opinion, truth almost always will win out. And, of course, even as he was pursuing damages through the court, the Rev. Falwell was seeking private redress for his emotional distress. He mailed thousands of copies of the Hustler parody to his supporters along with a fund-raising appeal. He netted $800,000, four times the amount he had been awarded by the lower court.

Fed plays around with money

The Federal Reserve Board, which has more. control then Congress or the White House over the nation's economice fortunes, has given an important signal about its future course. It is an inadvertent reminder that the Fed's powers are exceeded only by its limitations

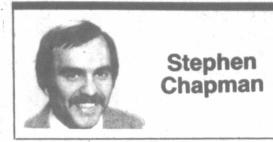

Vice Chairman Manuel Johnson said in a speech before the Cato Institute that the Fed plans to use several indicators, including exchange rates and commodity prices, to gauge the economy's prospects. This may sound innocuous, but it reflects a public switch in policy, with potentially large consequences

The Fed has a tough job. As guardian of the nation's money supply, it is supposed to pre-serve the value of that money, which means suppressing inflation. But, since money is the lifeblood of commerce, the Fed is also expected to supply enough to keep the economy fit.

Theses goals aren't opposed. Inflation breeds stagnation; stable prices promote growth. But in the short run, policymakers may be able to advance one goal only at the expense of the other. Halting inflation may require starving the economy of cash, with results like the 1981-82

So the Fed faces competing demands — for long-terms health, for short-terms remedies, for price stability, for brisk growth. Balancing all these is hard enough. But the Fed has to do the job with clumsy tools, and frequently can't know until it's too late whether its actions have done what it wants.

Policies that are meant to restrain inflation may turn out later to have worsened it. The economy's important symptoms, like inflation, unemployment and total economic output, reflect not what the Fed is doing now but what it did months or years ago. In making policy today, the Fed needs instruments whose long-term effects can be predicted.

For years, it relied on interest rates. When they rose, the Fed assumed the supply of credit was inadequate and provided more. If interest rates fell too much, it did the opposite.

But in the 1970s, that policy failed. Fearing inflation, lenders demanded higher interest rates. The Fed, believing that rising rates meant too little credit, poured money into the banking system. But that only spurred inflation fears, sending rates still higher. By the time the Fed had learned its lesson, inflation and interest rates were at record levels.

So in 1979, Paul Volcker announced that the Fed would ignore interest rates and monitor the money supply itself. This had been urged for years by monetarist economists, who had demonstrated that changes in the money supply invariably affected the economy. An increase would eventually produce inflation; a decrease would cause a recession. Steady money growth would avoid either.

Unfortunately, the decision to focus on the money supply occurred just when the money supply became harder to measure. High interest rates and bank deregulation made a hash of the old formulas. Monetarists, noting rapid increases in the money supply in 1982 and 1983, warned of imminent inflation, which never occurred. In 1984 they forecast a recession that Volcker quietly discarded the money supply measures whenever he thought they were misleading, an impulse that served the economy well: But the Fed stuck to its formal policy, and Alan Greenspan's appointment to replace him suggested that now the formal policy would match the real one.

But Johnson's speech implies that Greenspan will put even less weight on the money supply. His point was that if the monetary measures indicate excessive tightness, whereas commodity prices, exchange rates and certain interest rates indicate fears of inflation, the Fed won't necessarily change its policy

But while the money supply figures can be misleading, these other signals may be even worse. Brown University economist William Poole, formerly on the Council of Economic Advisers, notes that groundless inflation worries could push up commodity prices and drive down the dollar, forcing the Fed into unnecessary stringency and the economy into a reces-

True, these indicators generally parallel real events in the economy - you can hardly have inflation without a rising gold price - but not precisely and often only in the long run. For the short run, they have serious defects

Obviously, the Fed can't crack out money at a fixed rate, oblivious to evidence that it is wrecking the economy. But these other indicators are no foolproof guide either. The economy is too vast and complex to be managed with any preci-

What the Fed's latest declaration betrays is not our growing understanding of the economy but our persistent ignorance. If this new approach works, it will owe less to skill than to

Let's keep speed at 55 mph

I don't think it was such a good idea to raise the speed limit on stretches of interstate and rural areas to 65

The reason is when people get behind the wheel of a car, they immediately develop a criminal mind. Most of us won't steal, kill, deal in drugs or make a tape of a movie we rented, which would get us on the FBI most wanted list. But when we get into our cars, we might as well be Bonnie or Clyde.

In the first place, I'd guess 90 percent of the nation's drivers speed, which is against the law. If the speed limit signs say "55," hardly anybody goes 55. We figure we've got a cushion there someplace and if we push it up to, say, 65, the cops aren't going to bother us. So we drive 65. When we're really feeling our wild oats, we go up to 70.

Others, of course, go even faster if they have one of those machines that makes chirping noises when there is police radar around. They call these things "fuzzbusters." You can go 120 if you want to if you own one of those things. When the chirping starts, you simply

There are all sorts of other ways people can break the law when they drive.

Throw in those who still drink and drive, and we've got a nation full of people who make driving terribly risky to your well-being as well as to you sanity

And now, we go and make driving even more of a crap shoot by raising the speed limit to 65 on rural interstates

Nobody will go 65, of course. They'll go 75 and 80 through the boonies and we'll soon get the automobile death rate back up there where it memo's phrasing Meese exonerated by

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

A casual newspaper reader or TV viewer could be forgiven for assuming that the "Meese scandal" currently being flogged by the media must be something new. It is, however, the same old "Meese scandal" they were all yelling about a month ago, the only difference being that Attorney General Edwin Meese's lawyer has now managed to get the key document in the controversy released for public inspection.

It is clear, in retrospect, that Meese's critics were better off before it was released. I had a set-to on the subject, back then, with Michael Kinsley and Joe Rauh on CNN's "Crossfire." These two gladiators - roughly speaking, the end products of liberalism in their respective generations loudly insisted that the as-yet-unreleased document proposed a bribe of Israel's Labor Party. Meese (their went) should therefore theory promptly have instituted a civil suit or criminal action against the authorof the document under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, and by failing to do so had laid himself open to a charge of misfeasance.

If you think it caused Kinsley and Rauh any embarrassment to have to rely on a document they hadn't seen, however, you have underestimated this pair. They cheerfully admitted they hadn't seen it, but yelled lustily for Meese's resignation and indictment anyway.

What, in fact, does the now-released document say? It is a memorandum to Meese from E. Robert Wallach, a lawyer and friend of his who was lobbying for a pipeline to carry Iraqi oil safely out of the Middle East. (This was, on its merits, a highly desirable project, which unfortunately never came to fruition.)

Since no Arab pipeline in the Middle East would last a week unless the Israelis consented to its existence, Israel's advance approval of the project was essential. To secure this, it had been arranged that Israel itself should be one of the pipeline's benefi-ciaries. In briefing Meese, therefore,

Wallach stressed the report of Bruce Rappaport, a strong supporter of the Israeli Labor Party, who had a personal stake in the project as one of the contractors on it.

"He," Wallach's memo to Meese stated, "confirmed the arrangement with (Israeli Prime Minister Shimon) Peres to the effect that Israel will receive somewhere between $65-$70 million a year for 10 years out of the conclusion of the project. What was also indicated to me, and which would be denied everywhere, is that a portion of those funds will go directly to

Other parts of the memorandum make it clear that Wallach shares Rappaport's enthusiasm for the Labor Party and considers its ascendancy in Israeli politics to be to America's advantage, so his pleasure at the thought of the Labor Party benefiting from the pipeline project is understandable. But nowhere does Wallach say or imply that any American entity or individual is going to make any such payment. On the contrary, he specifically asserts that it is "Israel" that "will receive" the money. If "a portion of those funds" was then to go directly to Labor," the diversion was evidently going to be a strictly internal Israeli affair.

Alternatively, Meese's lawyer suggests with considerable plausibility that the funds in question were to come, perfectly legally, from Rappa-port's own substantial profits, when the pipeline was completed.

But whichever version one prefers, it is simply preposterous to suggest that Wallach's words put Meese on notice that anybody was about to engage in a violation of the U.S. Foreign Corrupt Practices Act. And even if it had, the act specifies that the decision to institute a civil suit is one that the attorney general "may" make "in his discretion." In this particular situation, involving our closest Middle Eastern ally, discretion might well have pointed in precisely the opposite

Carlson testifies about threat.

Former top aide contradicts Mecham's claim about alleged death threat report PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The first defense Defense lawyer Fred Craft argued that witness in Gov. Evan Mecham's impeachment trial contradicted the governor's claim that an alleged death threat should not have been reported to the state police.

Richard Burke, Mecham's former chief of staff, told the state Senate Wednesday he considered it routine for the governor's bodyguards to have reported the alleged threat to their superiors at the Department of Public

During House impeachment hearings in January, Mecham insisted that the report to DPS superiors violated an unwritten rule against disclosing things that happen in the governor's office.

Mecham, a 63-year-old first-term Republican, is accused of trying to thwart an investigation of the alleged death threat by thenstate prison construction chief Lee Watkins against a former Mecham aide, Donna

The prosecution rested its case Wednesday on that allegation, the first of three major charges against Mecham.

"No man is above the law," prosecutor Paul Eckstein said in his closing argument. "The evidence that has been put before you cries out ... for a conviction.

prosecutors had not proven Mecham tried to obstruct an investigation because "nobody told the governor that there was indeed an attorney general's investigation that he could possibly obstruct.

Burke testified that he did not recall Mecham being told the matter involved an actual death threat or that it involved the possible tampering of a grand jury witness. "I just remember 'threat,' " he said, but added, "To me, serious threat generally means a crime." Burke is a former law school dean and federal prosecutor who came out of retirement last November to serve as Mecham's chief of staff Mecham, who ran an auto dealership before he was elected governor in a three-way race, has contended he handled the matter properly by having Watkins' boss, then-Department of Administration Director Max Hawkins, investigate.

When DPS Lt. Beau Johnson reported the alleged threat to his superiors, Mecham had him transferred from the governor's security

The House impeachment articles charged that the transfer was a violation of state personnel law, but several senators argued that the governor had the right to decide who would be his bodyguards. The Senate voted 17-12 Wednesday to drop the count involving Johnson's transfer.

Carlson testified before the Senate on Wednesday that she was upset when she was told by DPS Director Ralph Milstead that Watkins had said that if she didn't keep her mouth shut about the $350,000 loan she might 'go on a long boat ride.' At the time of the alleged threat on Nov. 12, Carlson was about to testify before the state grand jury.

The House also charged Mecham with concealing a $350,000 campaign loan and misusing $80,000 from the governor's protocol fund by loaning it to his auto dealership.

A two-thirds vote of the 30-member Senate is required to convict Mecham.

The governor faces an April 21 criminal trial on charges of hiding the $350,000 loan, and a May 17 recall election.

Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Michael Ryan said Wednesday he was "reluctantly" granting a prosecution motion to delay the criminal trial, which had been scheduled to start March 22. The judge said more time was needed to decide pretrial motions and gather a large pool of potential jurors.

Federal grand jury indicts top Haitian officer in drug charge

MIAMI (AP) — A top Haitian army officer reportedly indicted with his ex-wife and brother on drug charges was the second Caribbean military leader in four weeks to be accused here of helping cocaine smugglers.

A federal grand jury Wednesday indicted Col. Jean-Claude Paul, commander of the largest unit in Haiti's 6,000-man army; Paul's brother Antonio; and exwife Merielle Delinois, sources close to the case said on condition of anonymity.

A witness has said the colonel allowed cocaine smugglers to land at his ranch.

U.S. Magistrate William C. Turnoff ordered the indictment sealed immediately, but federal authorities were expected to unseal it today.

There was no comment Wednesday from the colonel or Haiti's government.

Paul heads the feared 700-man Dessalines Battalion in the capital of Port-au-Prince. Soldiers in the battalion ruthlessly suppressed anti-government demonstrations last year and were accused of protecting gunmen who disrupted Haiti's November presidential elections, killing 34

Paul was considered close to the military-dominated junta that ruled Haiti from early 1986 until a military-supported civilian president took office Feb. 7.

On Feb. 5, Panamanian strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega was indicted in Miami and Tampa on charges he accepted $4.6 million in protection money from Colombian cocaine dealers, laundered money, supplied drug laboratories and shielded drug kingpins.

The investigation of Paul has been widely reported for weeks. Haitian army officials and the government-controlled media have defended him against reports of his involvement in cocaine trafficking.

Asked during a recent interview about reports of drug smuggling by the army, President Leslie Manigat said, "I can't base my judgment on rumors.'

All interviews with army officials must be cleared through army chief of staff Gen. Carl Nicolas, who refused a written request from The Associated Press to speak with Paul.

The junta replaced dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier in February 1986, when he fled to exile in rule. Paul seldom appeared in public When he did, it often was to serve as bodyguard for two junta members, Lt. Gen. Henri Nam-

During the junta's two-year

phy, the junta president and now military chief, and Brig. Gen. Williams Regala, now defense minister. Paul also appeared on the stage during Manigat's inauguration at which the president pledged to stop drug trafficking. The colonel was among the military guards who escorted Manigat back to the presidential palace after the inauguration.

One of the witnesses in the case was Miami businessman Osvaldo Quintana, 35, who told a news conference last month that the colonel helped him smuggle cocaine into the United States in December 1986.

'We flew (the shipment) out of his own personal ranch in Haiti' about 90 miles outside Port-au-Prince, said Quintana, who has testified for the government in drug trials.

Quintana has said Haitian military officials routinely aided drug flights from Colombia, allowing them to land and be serviced before proceeding to the Bahamas to drop their loads. Delinois was arrested in Miami on drug charges last March, but skipped bond and is believed to be hiding in Haiti, according to the U.S. Drug Enforcement Adminis-

DEA affidavits filed in the Delinois case said Quintana met with Paul and his brother Antonio at the ranch, and watched while a plane carrying 220 pounds of HOUSTON (AP) — While George Bush basked in Super Tuesday afterglow, some Texas acquaintances recalled the Bush of earlier days.

"I've seen very little change over the years," said Ross G. Baker, who has known Bush since 1941. "To those of us that know him, the idea of his being a wimp is ridiculous.

Bush is scheduled to leave today for Chicago, where he will begin campaigning in the Illinois primary. Bush spent most of Wednesday relaxing, while aides huddled to plan strategy.

On Tuesday night, Bush swept most of the GOP primaries and caucuses held in 20 states, dealing a heavy blow to other Republican presidental hopefuls. He netted all of Texas' 111 GOP national convention delegates along the Bush emphasized his Northeastern ties during the New Hampshire primary, leading to critical commentary and political-cartoon jabs about where he really calls home. Garry Trudeau's Doonesbury cartoons have had a field day with Bush, portraying him as an invisible, wimpy voice.

After serving as a Navy pilot and completing his college education, Bush moved to Midland in 1948. In 1953, he cofounded an off-shore drilling company with J. Hugh Liedtke, now chairman of Houstonbased Pennzoil Co.

"No wimp goes out to the end of the world, which at that time was Midland, Texas, and starts his own company," said Barney White, spokesman for what has become Houstonbased oil-industry Zapata Corp. "He took a lot of chances.

In Midland, Bush became active in the Republican Party, and continued his involvement in party affairs after moving to Houston in 1959. He became Harris County Republican Party chairman in 1963.

"I felt we were all pioneers, and you just did what you had to do. We didn't have an old cadre of elected incumbent Republicans," said W. Russell Pryor, now 61, who lost the county party chairmanship to Bush. "It wasn't surprising that George would jump in."

In 1966, Bush was elected to the U.S. House, defeating former Harris County District Attorney Frank Briscoe.

"The issue was who could best represent the area, which was conservative. Voting was along party lines," said Briscoe, a Democrat. "Of course, he was seen as very ambi-

Police continue search for suspects in slaying

DALLAS (AP) — Police say they believe two men shot, stabbed and beat to death four people in three small towns, but they are at a loss for any possible motives for the rampage. "By all indications, it was overkill," said Cooke County Sheriff John Aston, where the first of the men's four victims, a 23-year-old woman, was found in her Gainesville mobile home, along with a bloody hatchet

A gun was taken from her home, said Aston, who described the murder as cold-blooded. "These people were there the whole time she was bleeding to death," he said. "There are indications there had been a struggle. She was hit in the head." Her infant son was in the home but was not harmed. Another victim, an elderly Collin County man, was shot in the back of the head, his son was shot in the face and the fourth victim was shot three times and then dumped by the side of an Arkansas road after he gave two men a ride, authorities said. Authorities in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas interviewed witnesses Wednesday as they tried to identify the two suspects, described as white and 17 to 20 years old. We do not have a motive at all," Aston said.

Wednesday, authorities ruled out any connection between the killings and a Monday morning bank robbery in Seminole, Okla.

Officials said they hope to compile an artist's sketch based on the recollections of a girlfriend of one of the victims.

Authorities said it appeared two men killed Deana Andrews Woodard, 23, in her mobile home near Gainesville as she cared for her 1-year-old son about midmorning Monday. The woman was hit in the head, apparently with an axe, and her throat was slit as she struggled with her attackers, officials said.

Ms. Woodard's son was found unharmed in her mobile home. Aston said a bloody hatchet found near Ms. Woodard's body was being analyzed for fingerprints. As of Wednesday night, officials

More prominent Panamanians desert

WASHINGTON (AP) - As the Reagan administration contemplates new sanctions against Panama, the desertion of two prominent Panamanians indicates growing discontent with the rule of military strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Santiago Torrijos, nephew of former Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos, abandoned his post as consul general in Los Angeles and flew to Washington to join forces with allies of ousted President Eric Arturo Delvalle. He accused Noriega's government of plunging Panama into a political crisis.

His uncle was a widely esteemed figure in Panama for negotiating with President Jimmy Carter the treaty that will revert the Panama Canal to Panama at the end of 1999

Panamanian Ambassador Juan B. Sosa, who supports De-Ivalle, said Wednesday that Santiago Torrijos' decision to break with Noriega will have a major impact on Panama because of the close identification of the Torrijos family with Panama's Defense Forces. Torrijos is believed to be the first member of the Torrijos family to break ranks with Noriega.

Omar Torrijos dominated Panama's political life from 1968 until his death in a plane crash in 1981. In a typewritten statement made public Wednesday night, his nephew said a "political, financial, moral and social crisis" exists in Panama and must be resolved.

He said that a "small politicalmilitary circle" has betrayed the pledge of Omar Torrijos to return Panama to constitutional rule.

Responding to claims being made by Noriega, White House chief of staff Howard Baker denied Wednesday that the United States is planning an invasion of Panama, saying American troops there are merely holding regularly scheduled training exercises

Jorge Abadia, Panama's foreign minister, this week accused the United States of conducting 'the prelude of an armed invasion" by staging military exercises along the Panama Canal.

Meanwhile, the Panamanian Embassy made public a copy of a letter by Panama's Ambassador to Mexico, Emilia Arosemena Vallarino, in which she announced her resignation because she was "in disagreement with political events" in her country. She had served in Mexico for 18 years and was dean of the diplomatic corps there.

At issue are the circumstances under which Panama's new government took power two weeks ago. Delvalle attempted to fire

Also being considered are measures that would have the effect of making some Panamanian products less competitive in U.S. markets. State Department figures show that Panama's U.S. exports totaled $342 million last

The officials said Panama may lose its right to participate in the Caribbean Basin Initiative, under which some products are Noriega but was fired himself hours later.

The Reagan administration. along with a number of Panamanian diplomats and consular officers, has refused to recognize the successor government, regarding Delvalle as the constitutional authority. He has remained in hiding for almost two weeks.

Today, high-level meetings were scheduled at which administration officials were considering a series of economic sanctions against Panama.

U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said that it is almost certain that the United States will withhold a $6.5 million payment due to Panama on March 15 for canal-related operations

Israeli troops wound 3 Arabs

JERUSALEM (AP) — Soldiers shot and wounded three Palestinians today in a pre-dawn riot in the West Bank town of Hebron that Arab reports said began when Jewish settlers smashed windshields of Arab-owned cars.

Jewish settlers said they awoke to Arab rioters shouting "God is great" and "Slaughter the Jews." Fearing the Arabs wanted to attack their homes, some settlers said they rushed into the streets and fired warning shots.

"They (the Arabs) ran down near the synagogue. They wanted to enter Jewish homes," Rabbi Moshe Levinger of Hebron told The Associated Press. "They carried stones. We responded by throwing stones and firing in the air. It was a two-hour fight."

Levinger, who has lived in Hebron for nine years, is one of the founders of the 40-family Beit Hadassah settlement, one of two Jewish enclaves in the predominantly Arab city of 50,000. Levinger claimed 500 Arabs were involved in the rioting and came to within about 100 yards of Jewish homes, which he said were defended by 50 male set-

"If we hadn't stopped them, they would have gotten to the synagogue. There would have been a slaughter, a slaughter of Jews, men, women and children, if they hadn't been stopped by us," Levinger said.

jackers threatened to blow up an Aeroflot jet and kill passengers unless they were flown to London, but authorities stormed the plane and at least six people died in a shootout, Soviet media reported

Three passengers, a flight attendant and at least two of the hijackers were reported killed as a result of Tuesday's hijacking, the second of a Soviet domestic flight in 11/2 years.

The official Tass news agency reported the hijacking attempt the day after it occurred, but an account in today's editions of the Sovietskaya Rossiya daily and reports broadcast by state-run Radio Moscow gave more de-

U.S. Embassy spokesman Richard Gilbert said today that the embassy had inquired and been told no Americans were aboard.

The Tupolev-154 jetliner, on a scheduled flight from the Siberian city of Irkutsk to Leningrad, was hijacked after a fueling stop in the Ural Mountains city of Kurgan, Sovietskaya Rossiya said.

The jet, which can carry up to 168 passengers, took off from Kurgan at 1:08 p.m., the paper said. Shortly before 3 p.m., when the plane was nearing Leningrad's Pulkovo airport, a person aboard demanded that senior flight attendant Tamara Zharkaya take a note to the cockpit:

The note said: "We demand the plane along with the passengers," the newspaper said.

"After landing, the crew entered into negotiations with the bandits, asking them to give up their criminal intentions and not to endanger passengers' lives,' the newspaper said.

With every passing minute. they became more aggressive, and started to behave like hooligans in the cabin. The armed bandits threatened to kill passengers. Several hours of negotiations had no result.

"Under these conditions, the only decision that could be taken was to render the criminals harmless," said Sovietskaya Rossiya, indicating the plane had been stormed Radio Moscow said: "In the shooting aboard the plane, most of the hijackers were killed, and the others were captured. They are to be tried in court.

Tass said a stewardess and three passengers were also killed. The media accounts said there were wounded, but did not say how many.

The last airline hijacking attempt reported in the Soviet Union was on Sept. 20, 1986, in the Ural Mountains city of Ufa.

Media reports said those hijackers were armed members of the internal security forces, and that five people, including two of the hijackers, were killed when authorities stormed the plane.

Animal league finds homes for orphaned dogs and cats

EDITOR'S NOTE - When it comes to finding homes for orphaned pets, the North Shore Animal League is big league indeed. A combination of operational savvy, a gift for fund raising, and large doses of affection for its charges enable the League to place more than 40,000 cats and dogs each year, including animals regularly rescued from the pound

PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y. (AP) - Mehitabel, a calico cat, arrived by taxi from New York City with a $100 bill around her neck. The note asked the North Shore Animal League to find her a good home.

The anonymous owner knew that this non-profit organization, totally supported by voluntary contributions, never destroys an animal.

Others do not arrive in such style. They are simply tied outside in the cold of night.

No note, no donation, just a trusting dog waiting for an owner's return, a return that will never happen. That final pat, if there was one, was goodbye.

And if that's not enough to handle, North Shore has five vans that daily go to dog pounds to rescue animals on "death row."

The League spends $60,000 a year in pound fees alone gathering the doomed. Some of them, anyway

What sets the North Shore Animal League apart from other equally noble operations throughout the country is sheer volume. Its directors say it places more animals in homes than any other shelter in the world. Consider these statistics: ■ It placed more than 43,000 animals in 1987, although it can only kennel 400 animals at a time, with another 100 in its foster home system.

An animal's average stay at the League is less than three days. ■ The kennel operation runs a $3.5 million deficit each year, but its creative fund raising and direct mail campaigns pull in $5 million. ■ The League spends half a million dollars a year placing ads and mails out over 30 million pleadings to potential donors each vear. ■ It is open 12 hours a day, seven days a week.

■ The average contribution by adopters is $17.

Despite the good work, the League's animal-loving staff is quick to point out that their effort scarcely makes a dent in the slaughter of unwanted pets in this

The American Humane Society, based in Denver, estimates that about 20 million unwanted dogs and cats are put to death each year.

The League works hard to educate people to neuter their pets and its credo is that there is no such thing as an unadoptable animal. It's their job to match the right animal with the right person. They matched a deaf dog with a deaf woman who was not only able to teach it tricks by hand signals, she also taught it to bark, just as she had been taught to talk

While the great majority of their animals are perfectly healthy, the League has managed to place three-legged dogs, a 12year-old Newfoundland, a giant Pyrennees that couldn't walk and a cat with a bladder problem.

"When an animal has been here for a while, the associates ask me to help. If I can get its picture in the paper or call it 'Pet of the Week,' that usually works," says Betty Rosenzweig, the director of adoptions who has worked at the shelter for nearly 20 years.

She's also a born saleswoman as she roams the compound, with praise for this dog or that cat.

"We are all salesmen in a sense, except that our commission is the satisfaction that up to 300 dogs and cats are adopted on some days," says Michael Arms, director of operations.

Some big hound and shepherd mixes, All-Americans as the League calls the non-breed, have been waiting five or six months.

But, the League knows eventually someone will fall for one of these big mongrels.

Some breeds, like Yorkshire terriers and poodles, move so fast they often never see the inside of a cage. Ditto purebred Persian and Siamese cats.

Alan Cooper, 24-year-old graduate student in psychology and currently kennel manager, says that when he walked in the League five years ago, it was the best thing he ever did.

He has seen cruelty and animal abuse, but also nobility he never expected.

"One man came in one day and asked for the ugliest dog we had. He wanted to adopt it and he did," recalls Cooper. "Actually, was a 5-or 6-year-old terrier mix and it was so ugly, it was almost cute." Another asked for the dog that had been there the longest. Another requested the fattest cat. A blind man specified he wanted the dog with the most beautiful eyes.

When Cooper began here, he drove one of the vans that rescue doomed dogs from the pounds. Workers on that duty usually burn out quickly, he said.

'They're told they can only bring 10 dogs back and the pound might have 40 dogs that are going to be put to sleep. It's awful to make that choice," he says. "They usually bring back 14 instead of 10, but they know there is no room for all 40.

The North Shore Animal League is truly a national organization. Contributions and animals come in from many parts of the country, and because of the League's reputation, people often adopt their pets here while on vacation.

The not-so-secret ingredients behind its success are Alex and Babette Lewyt, a well-to-do couple who came to Port Washington to retire in the late '60s.

Lewyt made his fortune as an inventor, with 200 patents to his credit, including the Lewyt Vacuum Cleaner. Babette Lewyt took one look at the old North Shore League, a down-at-theheels operation that was about to go under, and set out to transform

"Both of them would work here from dawn to dusk, cleaning out cages, and doing everyting that needed to be done," says Rosenzweig. "He took out the first ad in the New York Times under the adoption columns, advertising a free golden retriever and some other purebreds. The ad cleared out the shelter."

In business since 1944, the physical plant is not much to look at - a gerrymandered hodgepodge of rooms with cages stacked atop each other. It's on a side street in a Long Island bedroom community some 20 miles from Manhattan

The original building was donated by a San Francisco woman. One individual left the League

The League has strict guidelines. One out of five potential adopters are turned down. It is no coincidence that the man working the parking lot is an off-duty policeman. Punches have been thrown when someone was re-

Besides precautions, there is a 'dowry," including a leash, collar, ID tag, starting food, a training book and a 30-day health insurance policy.

But they also check references right there on the spot, making one area resemble a bookie operation. On occasion, they make on-site follow-up calls. This accounts for a return rate of only 6 percent.

Arms, partial to Newfoundlands, worried when his favorite was adopted by a Queens couple.

He drove by the house and found the dog chained outside on cement with the new owners at work. An 8-foot cyclone fence enclosed the area.

Arms telephoned the pair, fibbing about a faulty blood test, and asked the couple to bring the dog in for further checking. Then he snatched the Newfie back and delivered a lecture to the highly displeased couple.

Arms can be a tough guy when it comes to rescuing dogs. When he worked for the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in the Bronx, he was stabbed by three men who were betting on how long a wounded dog would live. They objected to Arms' interference with the outThe League also backs their orphans. For $15 you can bring your dog back for obedience training for as long as it needs it. Such training can cost as much as $50 an hour elsewhere. The League will also neuter your animal for a token fee - $30 for a female, $20 for a male. 'And if you can't afford that, it gets even cheaper," says Arms. "Free."

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) -For a brief moment, President Reagan was transported back in time - hurling a pigskin to a wide receiver at a sentimental celebration of Notre Dame's Knute Rockne and his own days as a Hollywood star.

"The Gipper" returned to the Notre Dame campus Wednesday to pay tribute to the late football legend and dedicate a 22-cent stamp issued in honor of the coach's 100th birthday.

It was a nostalgic trip into the past for Ronald Reagan, the onetime actor, sports announcer and college football player who clearly reveled in the crowd's friendly applause.

The Notre Dame gathering of students and faculty — including many wearing Roman collars -roared approval as they were treated to clips from Reagan's 1940 film portrayal of Notre Dame football star George Gipp in Knute Rockne: All American.

The film showed the freshfaced Reagan, playing Gipp, as he playfully kicked footballs high above the playing field while Pat O'Brien, playing Rockne, persuades him to join the team.

Another clip showed O'Brien, as Rockne, giving a pep talk to his players at halftime of a 1928 game against Army, with both sides scoreless. Gipp had died eight years earlier, but the coach tells his charges that on his deathbed the young athlete said,

"Some time when the team is up against it and the breaks are beating the boys, tell them to go out there with all they got and win just one for the Gipper.

Army went ahead in the third quarter, 6-0, but Notre Dame went on to win the game, 12-6. Army was one yard from the tying touchdown as time ran out. Reagan's supporters adopted the "Win one" phrase during his presidency to help garner support for his programs. And the nickname "the Gipper" has since

At the end of his speech, the filled-to-capacity crowd was silent as Reagan tried to repeat the lines from Gipp's deathbed scene. Few, however, noticed that Reagan flubbed the line and instead of saying "Gipper," actually pronounced it "Gippet," since his listeners erupted in a joyful cheer at the sentimental moment.

Handed a football, Reagan hurled it towards members of the Notre Dame football team seated strategically near the podium.

Aiming at one young man who held his arms high, Reagan heaved the pigskin - directly, it turned out, at Heisman trophy winner Tim Brown. Again, the crowd roared approval. Reagan had told his audience that the role of Gipp "was a young actor's dream" but that playing in a film about Rockne "was more than that" to him.

"I know that, to many of you thing important about us as a people and a nation," the 77-year-old president said.

EL PASO (AP) — The attorney for a man accused of trying to sexually assault Tracy Scoggins claims Scoggins invited his client to her room, a statement the actress dismissed as absurd.

Scoggins said Tuesday that lawyer Jose Montes Jr.'s statements have served only to victimize her again.

Montes said Tuesday that Miss Scoggins met his client, Pedro Concepcion Padilla, in traffic on Interstate 10 Feb. 25 and invited him to her room at the Marriott.

Scoggins, who was in El Paso as co-host of the Miss USA pageant, told police that Padilla jumped into the hotel elevator about 11 p.m. Feb. 25 and ripped her evening gown. She said her assailant pushed her into the back of the elevator, but she fought him off.

Hotel guests and security detained Padilla until El Paso police arrived to arrest him. Padilla gave police and a municipal judge a false name and Scoggins described the attack at a news conference the day after, and a first-person account with her byline is in the latest edition of the National Enquirer.

"Tracy Scoggins has turned some very serious charges into a very cheap publicity stunt in a desperate attempt to benefit her sagging career," Montes said.

Scoggins, in a statement released Tuesday by her publicist, said: "The allegations made by Mr. Padilla's attorney are so blatantly absurd they should not be dignified by comment. But I do want to say, though, that it's a pity a woman has to be a victim twice.'

Rape victims face long-term trauma

Editor's Note: This is the fifth hospital and meet them there. in a series concerning sexual assault appearing this week in The Pampa News. March 6-12 has been declared Sexual Assault Awareness Week by Texas Gov. Bill Clements.

The trauma of rape doesn't end when the rapist leaves. The victim still must face physical examinations, questions from police officers and a stressful legal process, in addition to the psychological effects of a physical violation.

There were seven reports of forcible rape handled by Pampa Police Department in 1987, down 53 percent from the 15 reported in 1986. Seven rapes were also reported for each of the years 1985

Sex offenses, another category of offense listed by the police department, increased from nine in 1986 to 10 in 1987.

Of the seven rapes reported last year, 29 percent have been cleared by the police. The remaining 71 percent remain un-

It is important that a rape victim preserve evidence of the crime until after the police arrive at the scene of the rape and after the victim has been examined at the hospital. No matter how uncomfortable the victim may feel, and no matter how strong the urge to change clothes, take a shower or otherwise alter his or her physical state, it is important that the victim change nothing until after examination, according to Pampa Police Chief Robert

'Rape is very technical. Don't clean up or change clothes. Just wait for the police and for a hospital exam. Leave the scene as is, also, until police see it," Eberz

The reason for this is to preserve evidence that may help prove who the rapist was. Evidence, once destroyed, cannot be put back.

What happens once a victim calls and reports a rape? If the victim calls the police, police officers will arrive at the scene along with ambulance personnel who will preserve samples and take the victim to the hospital for further examination.

'The first responsibility of the police department is immediate care for the victim. This is not necessarily our first action. A lot

Then we talk to the girl to find out the facts and circumstances." Eberz said.

"Lots of times the girl doesn't want to file charges. If they say, Yes, we do want to press charges,' we work with the doctor for samples, and go back and do investigative work at the scene, taking clothes samples and other samples that could identify the rapist. We also get a statement from any witnesses," Eberz said.

Once at the hospital, the victim must undergo a thorough examination to retrieve as much evidence of the rape as possible.

'All rape victims are brought in for examination. Usually the police accompany them, unless they come straight here, and then we notify police," said Cathy Land, supervisor of the emergency room at Coronado Hospital.

Only a nurse and doctor are allowed in the room until after the examination, unless the victim asks for a Tralee Crisis Center representative or an especially close friend

Included in the hospital examination are a pelvic exam, specimens taken of pubic hair, head combing, nail clippings in case the victim had scratched the assailant and a check for anal penetration, Land said. Blood samples are also taken to determine if the victim has contracted venereal disease such as gonorrhea. If the test shows a disease has been transmitted, medical care is given to combat the dis-

All clothing worn at the time of the rape is taken to be searched for samples and other evidence. The police or hospital personnel notify Tralee Crisis Center that they have a rape victim, or if the victim asks for a close friend, the friend will be notified. However, no calls to the crisis center or friends will be made if the victim objects to the calls.

The victim will also be interviewed by police.

The youngest rape victim treated at Coronado Hospital in the eight years Land has been employed there was 8 years old, she said, and the oldest was in her 70s. No men or boys have been brought in as rape victims during that time, she said.

The nurse and doctor who attended the victim at the hospital will be called as witnesses at the trial if the case goes to court. Their testimony usually is concerned mainly with procedures taken during the hospital ex-

Samples and other evidence of the rape are sent to a laboratory for analysis and comparison. Some rapes are more difficult to prove than others, Eberz said. "It's very difficult to prove rape if they're both living in the same house. If he beats her, it's an assault case, not rape. I'm not saying rape hasn't occurred, but it's very difficult to prove unless they are separated, not living together," he said

"In most of the rapes we encounter, the victim knows the assailant. Very few rapes occur where the rapist hasn't had some sort of contact with the girl prior to that," he added.

'Rape is very traumatic to the victim, especially when the police get involved. Sometimes they don't want to go through a trial," Eberz said.

"I'll bet we've had at least three times as many date rapes, or 21 for the year, that are never reported, as reported rapes. None of the rapes reported last year were date rapes," he said.

The reason for scarce reports of date rape may be that the "girl is afraid of reprisals and embarrassment. They have to get over their embarrassment and stand up for their rights," Eberz said.

In child sexual assault cases. the police officers' primary responsibility is to an injured child. If the abuse is suspected but no immediate danger to the child is evident, the Texas Department of Human Services is notified. Police officers do not take a child from parents' custody unless "it's a very touchy situation, if it's an extreme case" in which the child's life is in imminent danger, Eberz said.

Husbands will be taken into custody if their wives choose to press rape charges against them. If the wife declines to press charges in a domestic violence situation, the police officers responding to the call will offer counseling as an alternative. Pampa Police Deparment also has free literature available concerning rape.

Once a rape case goes to trial, the victim should be prepared to testify and answer questions concerning the crime.

"You have to have a strong will and be determined to see the guy put away. Lots of girls lose their determination and stop proceedings. This lets the guy back onto the street to do it again," said Detective Gary Boydston, juvenile officer of Pampa Police Depart-

The victim may be asked to take a polygraph test. They may also be asked to help create a composite drawing of their assailant.

Tralee Crisis Center will provide a victim advocate who accompanies the victim to court. Linda Stevenson is coordinator of the Victim Advocacy and Outreach programs at Tralee. In addition to providing moral support at the hospital and in court, Stevenson and other volunteers, along with a professional counselor, provide counseling for rape

"We have never refused counseling to anybody. They can come back anytime. They need to want the counseling. Some think they can get through it by themselves, but later down the line it will still bother them," Stevenson

"Of all the rape victims I've counseled, I've had two married women. That's real hard on the husband. We will counsel the husband if they want it," she said.

The period between the rape and the completion of the trial can be as short as a few months or as long as "a couple of" years, Boydston said. More often than not, the process is long, he said.

We have to be patient and do it right, or we'll lose," he said. 'The prosecution rate has been good, once we get that far.

DEAR ABBY: Well, another Christmas has passed, and with it remains the hurt of receiving no acknowledgment from a few friends and relatives for gifts carefully selected, wrapped and given with

The biggest disappointment was from our daughter and her family. My husband and I provided a vacation for the four of them at a cost of several thousand dollars, and we did not even receive a note of thanks. We did, however, hear that they thoroughly enjoyed the maximum amount of security?

Our children were always taught to say "thank you" for any gift, large or small. Our two sons always graciously remember us with prompt thank-you's.

When our will is read, I hope my daughter will realize that the trip she and her family took in 1987 was her "inheritance"!

And to the others who failed to send a simple thank-you, you have had your last fruitcake BITTERSWEET PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Failing to acknowledge a gift of any kind may be rude, thoughtless and inexcusable, but it is not unforgivable. If the American Cancer Society would start a special fund for these billboards, I will be the first to contribute.

Top-ranked Temple and No. 2 Purdue are headed for the same place, the NCAA Tournament, on different paths.

The Owls won their 15th consecutive game, beating Rhode Island 68-63 Wednesday night for the Atlantic 10 Conference tournament championship. The victory assured Temple, 29-1, a top seeding in one of the four NCAA regionals.

Purdue, which also seemed headed for a top seeding, stumbled at Ohio State, falling 71-60. The defeat won't cost the Boilermakers an NCAA bid, which was secured earlier by clinching the Big Ten title, but could affect where Purdue is placed in the

In the only other game involving ranked teams, No. 19 Illinois beat 10th-ranked Michigan 85-74 in Temple won its third Atlantic 10 tournament in four years as Mark Macon scored 25 points and Howie Evans restarted the offense after Rhode Island rallied for a 51-50 lead.

The key to this team is that they know how to win," Coach Don Chaney said. "We are a good team, but I think we can be better if our team stays in its element.

That element is based on Evans dishing the ball to Macon, the freshman star, and sharpshooter Mike Vreeswyk, who scored 17 points against the Rams, 26-6.

'A good cake has all the elements in it," Chaney said. "Momma don't have the shortening, the cake falls. What is our necessary element? Howard Evans. Howie sets the table and the rest of the players just come and eat.'

Rhode Island also hopes to feast at the NCAA

"We outrebounded Temple 39-30 and that's an unbelievable stat," Rams Coach Tom Penders said. "That helped keep us in the game. We played the No. 1 team in the country with an awful lot of heart and scratched back into it.

Ohio State scratched past Purdue behind hot free throw shooting late in the game and a 12-point second half by Jerry Francis. That left Boilermakers Coach Gene Keady scratching his head.

'After the game I wrote 'Finish the job' on the board. That's a question that was not answered, Buckeyes Coach Gary Williams said Purdue might have had a letdown after locking up the league title against Michigan last weekend.

"The toughest thing in the Big Ten is the game after a tough, physical game. It's hard to play well in that situation," he said.

As for the chance of Ohio State, 16-11, receiving an NCAA bid, Williams said, "The NCAA selection committee has a tough job. It'll be the greatest thing in the world if we make it, but I won't be disappointed if we don't."

Tournaments

A bench-clearing scuffle at the end of the first half marred Fairleigh Dickinson's 94-84 victory over Long Island in the semifinals of the ECAC Metro. Four separate altercations broke out, including two involving FDU's Charlie Roberts. Officials, coaches and security personnel needed four minutes to restore order.

When the teams returned for the second half, the officials levied three technicals against each team. Roberts sank six free throws for Fairleigh Dickinson, 22-6, and Glenn Daniels did the same for Long

ECAC Metro Commissioner Chris Monasch visited both locker rooms and told players that any more fights would result in immediate ejections and suspensions for the tournament's title game on

That game will match FDU against Monmouth, which beat St. Francis, N.Y., 61-48.

In the Western Athletic Conference, Reggie Cross scored 27 points and Chris Gaines added 23 as Hawaii defeated Air Force 84-76.

UIL tournament tips off today

AUSTIN (AP) - Two undefeated teams begin their quest for the Class A state schoolboy basketball title in today's opening session of the three-day tournament.

The opening game pairs Livingston Big Sandy, 36-0, and Ladonia Fannindel, 33-1. Today's other Class A semifinal matched Paducah, 31-0, and Graford 34-2. Defending champion Paducah is led by 6-foot-7 Will Flemons, who averages 23.9 point a game. Semifinals also were set for today in Class 3A and 4A. Sweeny, 25-6 and defending 3A champ, plays Dimmitt, 30-5. In the other semifinal Wills Point, 27-6, plays

Corpus Christi West Oso, 33-2. The evening's 4A semifinals match San Antonio Alamo Heights, 31-3, and Wichita Falls Hirschi, 24-8, and Port Arthur Lincoln, 27-4 and looking for a fourth state title, versus Lancaster, 28-2. Semifinals in 2A and 5A are set for Friday. In 2A, Archer City, 32-3, plays Haskell, 29-5, and Liberty Hill, 29-8, faces Troup, 31-

The 5A tournament features undefeated and top-ranked San Antonio East Central, which has averaged 103.5 points in its 34 wins. Tony Terrell, a 5-foot-9 senior, averages 34.8 points a game. The Hornets play Houston Sam Houston, 28-5, in the semi-

Red Sox look for mound improvement

By The Associated Press

Despite the presence of Roger Clemens, the Boston Red Sox pitching staff last season could have been described as "Arms and the Man.'

Clemens won his second straight Cy Young Award but the rest of the Boston staff, with the possible exception of 15-game winner Bruce Hurst, was just a bunch of arms.

No pitching staff in baseball allowed more than the 1,584 hits surrendered by the Red Sox and only the hapless Baltimore Orioles and Cleveland Indians had higher staff ERAs than Boston's 4.77

Obviously, there is plenty of room for improvement — and so far it's there

"The pitching has been very encouraging. Sellers threw the ball very well, and so did Lynch,' Manager John McNamara said Wednesday after Jeff Sellers, Ed Lynch and three young pitchers combined for a four-hitter as the Red Sox edged the Chicago White Sox 2-1. Boston pitchers have allowed only 13 runs this spring for a sparkling 2.72 ERA.

The unbeaten Los Angeles Dodgers made it six in a row by edging the Cincinnati Reds 6-5. Dave Anderson's RBI single capped a two-run rally in the eighth. The New York Mets pounded out 19 hits and trounced the Baltimore Orioles 11-6 for their first exhibition victory.

The world champion Minnesota Twins split their squad. One group nipped the Kansas City Royals 6-5 when Sal Butera drew a bases-loaded walk off Luis Aguino in the bottom of the ninth.

The other Twins beat the Detroit Tigers 10-7 as Kent Hrbek drove in three runs. Cardinals 3, Blue Jays 1

Mike Laga's 11th-inning single following an error by Toronto shortstop Kelly Gruber on a potential inning-ending double play grounder snapped a 1-1 tie. Athletics 7, Giants 5

Oakland's Mark McGwire hit a pair of home runs, including a tape-measure blast over the center-field fence, a towering drive that cleared the 30-foot-high fence 430 feet from home plate.

Yankees 10. Rangers 3

Newly acquired veteran Jose Cruz hit the Yankees' first home run of the exhibition season and Mike Pagliarulo added a two-run

Phillies 4, Pirates 3 Darren Daulton's two-run triple keyed Philadelphia's four-run fourth inning against rookie Stan Fansler

Astros 4, Expos 1 Rafael Ramirez sparked a tworun sixth inning with a runscoring triple as Houston snap-

Pampa High golfers tee off in district play next week

The opening round of district golf for both the Pampa High boys and girls teams is scheduled for next Thursday at Lubbock.

Coach Frank McCullough said Canyon and Borger are favored in the boys division while Hereford and Borger should be the top teams on the girls

"Both our boys and girls are young this year, but the competition is going to be good for them. It's going to make them better," McCullough said. 'The weather has been a road block for us. We just haven't been able to practice that much.

The seven district rounds will be played at three neutral sites this year instead of on the opponent's home course. Besides Lubbock, the other district sites are at Plainview and Amarillo Southwest.

Both Pampa teams competed in a tournament last weekend at Andrews. Pampa finished sixth in the girls' division and eighth in the boys' division.

'We didn't do as good as I expected, but we will get better," McCullough said. Results are listed below:

Johnson's clutch performance

rallies Celtics past Spurs

By L.D. STRATE Sports Editor

Had the playoff road been a little smoother and not blocked by legal entanglements, the Canadian boys' basketball team might be in Austin right now getting ready for the state tournament. However, after the Wildcats' season-ending loss to Haskell 60-54 in the Region 1-2A semifinal last weekend, coach Robert Lee didn't want to dwell on the negatives and what might have been

"I have no regrets about this season. We were picked to finish third in the district, so we did pretty good," Lee said. "The kids did good. I'm real proud of them.

Lee did say the Wildcats probably weren't mentally prepared to play Haskell after their playoff game against Hale Center was halted at halftime by a temporary restraining order given to Shal-

"I don't want to say anything against Haskell because they have a good ballclub, but we just didn't have a chance to work out for them," Lee said. "We had to go right into the game without much of a game plan.'

After leading 30-20 at halftime against Hale Center, the game — which was being played at Canyon March 2—was called off by a state district judge in Lubbock. Shallowater earlier was ruled by the UIL of having used an ineligible player in its 63-60 19 district victory over Hale Center. The game was forfeited to Hale Center, but Shallowater requested the restraining order for the Canadian-Hale Center game so an appeal could be made.

As it turned out, the Travis County district court ruled against Shallowater and Canadian had to make the long trek to Big Spring to finish the second half against Hale Center.

'We found out the decision about 4:15 p.m. Friday and we had to be on the court at 7 p.m. that night," Lee said. "The whole town was buzzing about the thing (the restraining order) and there was a lot of turmoil the kids had to deal with, but they handled it real well."

The Wildcats went on to defeat Hale Center 66-57 and advance against Haskell.

Mets' Strawberry strikes out at teammates, manager By BEN WALKER AP Baseball Writer

MIAMI — The New York Mets need Darryl Strawberry's big bat in the lineup but want him to keep his big mouth shut

There are too many distractions as it is," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said Wednesday. "But that's life in the Big Apple. Strawberry created another storm of controversy this week by criticizing Johnson and several teammates, blaming them for the team's failure last season. He claimed catcher Gary Carter and first baseman Keith Hernandez "quit" during the pennant race and that Johnson cost the club games.

Wally Backman and Len Dykstra were also the targets of uncomplimentary remarks by Straw-

Strawberry's attack appeared in a story about him in the April edition of Esquire mangazine. An advance copy of the magazine showed up in the Mets clubhouse on Tuesday and set off a shouting match between Strawberry and Dykstra. The Mets met for 20 minutes behind closed doors

Wednesday morning at their spring training camp in Port St. Lucie, Fla., before driving four hours to Miami for an exhibition game against Baltimore. Strawberry, who said Tuesday that his views were misrepresented, offered no comment Wednesday. 'It's over" is all Strawberry said. The Mets, beset by injuries and off-the-field squabbles last season when they failed to repeat as World Series champions, seemed anxious to forget A-48 this latest incident. But they did not appear ready to forgive Strawberry. "I don't think anybody likes to have derogatory things said about them," Johnson said. "But I don't want to drag this out and make it any bigger than it Of Johnson, Strawberry said, "I always wonder how many games this team would have won if Whitey was managing." Asked playfully how well cate of Convenience and Ne-Whitey Herzog manager of the St. Louis Cardinals would have done with the Mets last year, Johnson said, "Whitey would have won 120 games.

This season, the Mets came to camp healthy and ready to overtake the Cardinals in the National League East. They have been made the favorites, and had hoped to avoid just the kind of confrontation Strawberry sparked.

The Mets, however, have seen this before from Strawberry. For all his talent, he is prone to saying things and doing things that come back to haunt him, prompting some teaenominational Church of the Lord Jesus Christ in Houston. "They say, 'Don't give Foreman began hitting them again in the ring when he knocked out Steve Zouski in the fourth round at Sacramento, Calif., on March 9, 1987, just eight days shy of 10 years after his 12-round decision loss to Jimmy Young.

He has won seven fights in his comeback. Fight No. 8 will be against Dwight Muhammad Qawi, a former light heavyweight and cruiserweight champion, on March 18 at Las Vegas, Nev.

It was after the loss to Young that Foreman retired from boxing and became an evangelist.

'I donated property to the church,' said Foreman, whose purse for his upset title loss to Muhammad Ali in 1974 was $5 million. "I did not go into religion to make money.

He did return to boxing to make money, he said, to maintain the George Foreman Youth and Community Center near Houston. "My goal now is to start George Foreman Youth and Community Center No. 2 in the inner city.

As an evangelist, he accepts money for speaking engagements, but he does not solicit money at these functions. A man once passed a plate, pleading to the audience to help Foreman and his youth center. Foreman suddenly felt like a begger, he recalled, "so I made a commitment never to beg again for money when I can work for it."

North Texas advances to finals

DENTON (AP) - Senior forward Tony Worrell had 16 points to help North Texas State to an 82-61 victory over McNeese State in the semifinals of the Southland Conference Post-Season Tournament. North Texas, 16-12, faces Northeast Louisiana, 21-

Association members predicted they gathered enough signatures to force a city charter election, a campaign that minority leaders assailed as dividing the city along racial lines

The association is seeking to abolish a citizen's review board that would hear complaints against police.

Off-duty police officers circulated petitions at polling places Tuesday, seeking the 20,000 signatures required to force an elec-

"Our count is still rather incomplete, but we believe we exceeded our needs." DPA President Monica Smith said. She said it would take several days to verify names.

Police left one polling place after what they described as a confrontation with Mayor Pro Tem Diane Ragsdale.

Ragsdale, the city's top black elected official, said the encounter was not a confrontation.

On Monday, a coalition of black business, community, church and elected leaders tried to stop the petition circulations, but a Justice Department spokeswoman said federal officials could not block the campaign as long as officers stay at least 100 feet from polling sites.

Black leaders have denounced the DPA's campaign to abolish the review board, which would hear complaints against police.

Ragsdale has been one of the department's most outspoken critics, and helped bring a congressional subcommittee to the city last year for a hearing on its use of deadly force and hiring practices.

During signature collection Tuesday, Smith said that at one polling place, "we had to leave because Diane Ragsdale and some of her cohorts started to create problems, so we just decided to leave because it was not

"That's not true," said Rags-

"Ms. Ragsdale started an argument, trying to convince people not to sign the petitions, and rather than getting it to escalate, we pulled out," said Smith. "You are not going to win an argument with her. ... We did not feel we wanted to be in a position to argue with a city councilwoman.

Ragsdale said she did not start an argument.

"This gentleman wanted to know from me what to do. He wanted to know about the issue because, you know, many of them actually, some of our citizens, seniors — really don't know.

'They do not realize what they are doing," she said. "They attempted to circumvent their policy makers."

Smith said signatures were collected at polling places citywide by about 1,400 off-duty officers, 200 to 300 firefighters and their families.

car theft ring halted ternational

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Police say they have cracked an international auto theft ring suspected of stealing numerous expensive cars and selling them to Mexican police and narcotics dealers.

Police Capt. Jimmy Kopeck, head of the property crimes task force, said that four Laredo men were arrested Monday in San Antonio after a tip from Texas Department of Public Safety

"He was going to Mexico and selling them to some Mexican police, government officials and dope dealers," Kopeck said about one of the suspects. "We have intelligence information that you can go across and see them (Mexican police) driving our stolen

The four men were arrested after police followed them to an apartment complex and three $46,000 were recovered.

placed in the Bexar County Jail in lieu of $75,000 bond each were Jose Maldonado, 31; Jose Perez, 29; Gustavo Gallo, 32; and Juan Danes-Rojas, 31. Maldonado was released after posting bond.

"It appears as if they'd come here and steal them and stash them and let them cool off for a while and then take them back,' Kopeck said. "This was specialorder theft. They reportedly would steal whatever there's an order for."

The auto theft task force includes state, county and city offi-
