It's another March blizzard

By DEE DEE LARAMORE and PAUL PINKHAM Staff Writers

Just when spring appeared to be right around the corner, Old Man Winter returned with a vengeance Wednesday. A wicked winter storm left heavy snowfalls recorded throughout the Panhandle. Pampa led the area with 14 inches reported.

Surrounding communities, with equal or almost as much snow, included Lefors, Miami, Canadian, White Deer, Skellytown and Groom. Panhandle reported 4 inches and Shamrock 2 inches. Borger, Dumas and Higgins all reported approximately 8 to 9 inches.

Darrell Seahorn reported 14 inches in Pampa, a water equivalent of 1.41 inches, and a total precipitation for the past 24 hours of 1.91 inches. Three-foot drifts caused by 45 mile-per-hour wind gusts stranded vehicles and made travel inside the city difficult to impossible in some places. Overnight low temperature was 23 degrees.

The storm left motorists stranded throughout the area.

In Pampa, police Lt. Ken Hall said abandoned vehicles were strewn about town. He said 23rd Avenue was completely blocked this morning, and several cars were left near the apartment buildings on West Somerville Street and on 18th Avenue near Austin School.

Hall said the Fire Department had several trucks stranded and Rural/Metro Paramedics had a vehicle stranded at the Lakeside Apartments behind the Pampa Mall on North Hobart Street.

"Anybody who's got a smaller car is going to high-center," Hall said.

Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Ken Kieth said several vehicles were reported stuck on Price Road between Perry Lefors Airport and the little red schoolhouse in Roberts County. They included two United Parcel Service trucks near the historic schoolhouse, according to reports from the Roberts County Sheriff's office.

U.S. Highway 60 and Texas Highway 70 were in "very bad" shape this morning, Kieth said. "They're passable, and that's about it," he said.

Kieth said most of the problems reported in Gray County were along Interstate Highway 40 between McLean and Alanreed. Numerous stranded motorists were reported in McLean and Groom.

At the Texas Motel in McLean, motel manager Kerry Anderson said stranded motorists were "camped out" in the adjoining restaurant waiting for rooms to come vacant. Some were truck drivers, but most were just motorists passing through, Anderson said.

"We filled up yesterday about 4 o'clock," he said.

Though two inches of snow or less was originally predicted for Wednesday, the northeast Texas Panhandle found itself caught in a "comma effect" that blanketed the area with from eight to 14 inches of snow.

In addition, winds gusts topping 45 miles per hour heaped the snow into drifts averaging three feet high, causing hazardous to almost impossible driving conditions and stranding motorists all along the area's major highways.

Chuck Hodgkinson of the National Weather Service in Amarillo explained the unexpected blizzard: "Remember that low pressure system to the south of us? Well it moved east up into Oklahoma and we got backdoored by it," he said.

Hodgkinson said "backdoored" means that the system's tail circled around over the northeast Texas Panhandle, looking like a comma. Inside this comma, he said, the warm moist air moved up over the cold air from the front that entered this area Tuesday. The caprock gave the cold air lift that caused the excessive precipitation, he said.

Jerry Bergtorff, Department of Public Safety information officer, reported that no roads were closed at press time Thursday. However, U.S. 87 north of Amarillo had been closed on and off through the night as vehicles were stranded in drifts and trucks jack-knifed, blocking traffic.

"Roads are snow-packed and icy and very hazardous," Berg-

Area races have only 5 contested posts

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Staff Writer

While not exactly ho-hum, Super Tuesday in the four counties surrounding Pampa may prove to be fairly uneventful with only five contested races in the area primaries.

Wheeler County is seeing the most action with contested races for the Democratic candidate for county attorney, sheriff and Precinct 1 commissioner positions.

Incumbent Wheeler County Attorney Kent Sims of Wheeler will defend his position against current 31st District Attorney Guy Hardin, who has announced he will not seek re-election as district attorney. The winner of the primary will face Republican Jim Fling of Shamrock in the general election this fall.

Four Democratic candidates are vying against Sheriff Lonnie Miller for Wheeler County sheriff. Miller runs against Joel Finsterwald, a Wheeler city employee; Randy Bond, Shamrock police officer; Carl Carter, a welder from rural Mobeetie; and rancher Jimmy Adams of Wheeler. No Republicans are running for the sheriff's position.

Precinct 3 Commissioner Cloyce Hanner has announced his retirement, leaving four hopefuls vying for his position. Democratic candidates are Brian Close, W.H. Riley and Teddy R. Pole, all of rural Shamrock, and Dan Macina of Heald.

Uncontested races in the Wheeler County primaries include Jerry Bob Jernigan of Shamrock, incumbent Precinct 3 constable; Joe Montgomery of Wheeler, Precinct 1 constable; incumbent Elmer Ray Harrison of Wheeler, Precinct 1 commissioner; and incumbent Jerry Dan Hefley of Wheeler, county tax assessor/collector.

In Carson County, Connie Reed, county sheriff, defends his post against three others, including two of his own deputies. Democratic candidates, in addition to Reed, are Terry Timmons of Panhandle, Carson County deputy; Charles Flemings, Panhandle police chief, and Jerry Gaines of Groom, Carson County deputy. Democratic primary winner will run against Republican candidate Tam Terry, White Deer city marshal, in the fall.

Running unopposed in Carson County will be Ed Hinshaw, county attorney; C.L. Sterling, tax assessor/collector; John L. Forbes, district judge; and David M. McCoy, county attorney. All are running on the Democratic ticket.

Republican Kenneth Osborne of Canadian will defend his place as Precinct 1 commissioner in Hemphill County from two Democratic candidates - dirt contractor Don Boyd Williams and pumper Joe Schaefer, both of Canadian.

Carson County's uncontested races include Leonard Powlledge, Democratic candidate, and Pat Walker, Republican candidate, for Precinct 3 commissioner - both are of rural Canadian; Bill Bowen, Hemphill County sheriff; Gladene Woodside, tax assessor/collector; Charles Kessie, county attorney, and Ed Culver, constable.

Roberts County will see incumbent Precinct 1 Commissioner William Clark challenged by well serviceman Rudolph Rankin, both of rural Miami, in the Democratic primary.

Uncontested races include Democratic incumbents Sheriff Lando Brown and Carol Billingsley, tax assessor/collector, both of Miami. Republican Don Morrison, who is recovering from a recent automobile accident, is unopposed in his bid to hold his position as Precinct 3 commissioner.

Three Democrats want Boulter's U.S. representative job

By JIMMY PATTERSON Staff Writer

A state senator, a farmer and a lawyer are all hoping to grab the Democratic nomination for 13th District U.S. House of Representatives in next week's Super Tuesday primary.

Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, is vacating his representative post to run for U.S. senator in Texas.

Sen. Bill Sarpalius, considered in many circles to be the frontrunner because of his political experience, claims the political road for him began at the age of 12, "when he was taken from his troubled home in Houston and placed at Cal Farley's Boys Ranch."

It was there that Sarpalius "developed a deep respect for agriculture." Later in life, he moved on to become district office manager for then House Speaker Billy Clayton, D-Fort Worth. He was first elected to the state Senate in 1980, and won re-election in 1982 and 1984.

Vernon's Ed Lehman, a farmer, is a former U.S. Air Force fighter pilot and is at present the principal co-owner of a John Deere dealership. Having gained numerous endorsements, he most recently garnered the backing of the Texas Farm Bureau.

Randy Hollums, the third candidate, is a former USAF Captain and has served during the past 12 years as district attorney for the 110th Judicial District.

Several key issues face the 13th District in the upcoming legislative session. Each candidate has his own ideas of solving problems such as the nation's budget deficit, arms control and economic issues.

Sarpalius said he will work to bring programs beneficial to his district, as he pointed out he has done as a state senator.

"This area is heavily dependent on the oil and gas industry," Sarpalius said. "My job has been to bring big projects to my district. I'll do the same thing on the federal level."

"The main issue of the whole 1988 campaign," Lehman feels, "is jobs. That's a big word that covers a multitude of issues. Hurting jobs is deficit spending, and the deficit has been brought on by the lack of fair trade. That means you can sell in our country if we can sell in yours. No beef in Japan ... no Toyotas in Amarillo."

Hollums, meanwhile, feels that a flexible oil import fee is a part of overall energy sub-sufficiency efforts key to the economy.

On items pertaining to defense, the three candidates all expressed degrees of support for President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI, or Star Wars) but feel spending limitations need to be instigated.

"I support Star Wars," Sarpalius said, "but not the government throwing a lot of money at a defense program."

"I think we need a little more emphasis on deterrence rather than defense," Lehman said. "Defense is what brings on the possibility of war. Who can come up with the biggest guns. SDI has to be kept in place. But we do not have to pour $100-billion into it."

"I basically favor reduction in arms," Hollums said, "if it can be done in a verified manner. The present treaty makes considerations for that, apparently." Sarpalius sees the need to prioritize present programs as a way of reducing the monstrous federal budget deficit.

"We don't need to create new programs," Sarpalius said. "We need to prioritize our programs. We can consolidate some agencies to reduce the cost. There are ways we can go into the budgets of agencies to cut waste. That way you're not cutting jobs."

From Lehman, who feels the nation's productivity would aid in helping reduce the size of the deficit: "We've got to eliminate the cheap food and cheap oil. It's harmful to our district's chances. We've got to get productivity back up."

"We don't need a tax rate increase. Our income is so low it has hurt the revenue of the government. We need an income tax based on the amount of money you make."

Hollums said, "We have to slow down our procurement efforts in defense and other programs and keep spending within our income. That will take several years to accomplish."

Hollums cited other examples of unnecessary spending, including the Nixon Library being built and funded by the government. "I'm not trying to single that out," Hollums said, "but there are some programs that aren't of immediate public necessity. I don't mean to imply that by doing this we'll solve the budget deficit."

The winner of the Democratic race for 13th District congressman will proceed to meet one of six announced Republicans in November's general election.

Mixed weather plagues Texas

By The Associated Press

At least four people died as a wild mix of weather, featuring everything from a tornado to snow to flash flooding, engulfed most of Texas.

Three fatalities were in a traffic accident on a snow-slickened highway in the Texas Panhandle. Three residents of New Mexico died in the accident north of Dalhart.

The other fatality occurred near Hart. (See local story.)

Several inches of snow fell on the Panhandle, thunderstorms drenched East Texas, triggering some flash flooding and a tornado ripped the roofs off of some mobile homes at Galveston.

Some of the hottest temperatures in the nation were recorded in South Texas.

Authorities at Galveston said a tornado touched down on the tiny Galveston Bay town of San Leo about 3:15 p.m. Wednesday, tearing roofs off some mobile homes. About 45 customers temporarily lost electrical service when the tornado downed power lines. They were reconnected later in the day, said Houston Lighting & Power Co. spokesman Geri Koenigsberg.

John Jamison, a forecaster for the National Weather Service in Galveston, said no other tornadoes had been reported but said thunderstorm activity could resume today.

The storm caused weather-related accidents throughout the Panhandle, authorities said.

"All of our units are tied up, and we have a backlog. It's the same way with the police department. We can't even get to them," DPS spokesman Jerry Burgtorf said.

"It's horrible," a Lipscomb County sheriff's spokesman said. "It's snowing and there's less than a quarter-mile of visibility."

In Midland, temperatures reached a high of 75 Wednesday then fell to 45 degrees by 7 p.m. Meanwhile, readings in south-west Texas climbed to the middle 80s near Del Rio and Presidio.

Heavy rains were reported further south in the Panhandle and in North, Central and East Texas.

A truck carrying liquid oxygen overturned during heavy thunderstorms on an Interstate 35W in Fort Worth, prompting the evacuation of at least 50 people in a nearby church. The accident backed up traffic for several hours.

About 3 inches of rain fell in Athens about 60 miles southeast of Dallas, making roads impassable. Houston received about 1 1/4 inches of rain, the NWS said.

Absentee voting to close Friday

Absentee voting for Tuesday's primary election ends at 5 p.m. Friday in the Gray County Clerk's office.

County Clerk Wanda Carter said turnout in both parties has been heavy so far, with close to 100 requested ballots still out in the mail. The county clerk's office was closed today due to the weather so up-to-date figures couldn't be obtained.

The clerk's office will be open from 8:30 a.m. until noon and from 1 to 5 p.m. Friday for the final day of absentee voting.

Voters will decide their party's candidates in local, state and national races.

State probes poor 'quota'

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials of Hermann Hospital said they would be happy to meet with members of the Texas Attorney General's office to discuss the hospital's provision for medical treatment for poor people.

The offer by Ralph S. O'Connor, board chairman of The Hermann Trust, came after Assistant Attorney General John Vasquez disclosed the office was examining a so-called quota system at Hermann for the admission of poor patients.

"We are aware that there is a system for controlling the amount of money that is expended for indigent patients, and we're examining how that system is set up," said Vasquez, head of the charitable trusts division.

"We understand that physicians have had difficulty admitting patients who were in need of medical care because their quotas had been met."

O'Connor said the hospital spent $17 million last year for treatment of indigent patients and has budgeted another $17 million in charity care this year.

Blizzard

torff reported.

Four traffic fatalities Wednesday have been attributed to accidents caused by weather conditions, he added. Three New Mexico women were killed when a Suburban collided with a tractor-trailer rig driven by an Amarillo man at 10:45 a.m. Wednesday morning on U.S. 87, 11.7 miles north of Dalhart, Bergtorff said.

Dead at the scene were Mary Longwill, 36, of Sedan, N.M.; Laura Bates, 63, Clayton, N.M.; and Willie Roberts, 67, of Clayton. The truck driver, Jimmy Porter of Amarillo, suffered minor injuries but refused treatment at the scene, according to DPS reports.

A fourth fatality occurred when two automobiles met head-on on icy, snow-packed Texas 168 near Hart at 6:50 p.m. Wednesday, Bergtorff said. Donald J. Reed, 28, of Amarillo was dead at the scene 1.9 miles south of Hart. His wife, Sheri Reed, 24, was taken to Central Plains Hospital of Plainview in serious condition.

Driver of the second vehicle, Jose Torres of Hart, and a passenger, Lulu Marquez, were also hospitalized. Torres is listed in fair condition and Marquez in serious condition.

All were wearing safety belts at the time of the accident, the trooper said. Visibility at the time of the accident was from 0 to 100 feet, he added.

No serious accidents had been reported in the Pampa area at press time; however, numerous accidents have kept law enforcement officers busy digging out stranded motorists and trying to keep traffic moving at least at a snail's pace.

Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed said he and his men have been working throughout the night digging people out of snow drifts, "and we're back at it this morning."

"We've cleared most of the roads, but underneath there is three to four inches of ice making them slick and hazardous," he said.

Stranded motorists traveling along Interstate-40 filled both motels in Groom and have overflowed into the First Baptist Church there.

Mrs. John Freund of Moline, Ill., was one of those who spent the night in the church. "We were on our way to Arizona," she said. After her husband checked both motels, they were told that the First Baptist Church was offering its sanctuary, coffee and blankets to stranded travelers.

"There's probably about 50 people here. Some are 20 miles from home and they couldn't get home," Mrs. Freund said. "Some were going to Amarillo. Some are families with children, some are older people. They're from Minnesota and Michigan and from the east and the mid-west. They're sleeping in all the rooms."

"One young man, in his 30s, was traveling alone. He said since he didn't have to pay for a motel room, he would buy some food. So he went out and bought all this food, ham, cheese, bread and potato chips, so we all made sandwiches," Mrs. Freund said.

Other travelers tried to repay the good Samaritan, she said, but he refused their offers, telling them to make a donation to the church instead.

McLean Justice of the Peace R.C. Parker reported I-40 near McLean is open, though traffic is moving slowly due to the ice and snow and several trucks that have jack-knifed on the highway.

Wheeler County Deputy Rick Walden said roads are clear, but icy and slick near Wheeler. "We had a few wrecks, people sliding and getting stuck in drifts, last night, but it's been pretty quiet today."

Miami and White Deer residents report heavy snow and drifts, though official snowfall reports were unavailable. Schools in both communities were closed because of the snow.

No mail is to be delivered in Pampa today. Pampa schools are closed as are the schools in Mobeetie and Grandview-Hopkins. Lefors schools opened an hour late. Many businesses are closed or opening late. Various clubs, churches and day care centers have been cancelled today.

Meals on Wheels delivered meals to shut-ins and the elderly today with the help of volunteers driving four-wheel drive vehicles. Clarendon College - Pampa Center day classes were closed today. Many county and district offices were closed or late opening today. City offices remained open in spite of the weather. Only Hoechst Celanese critical services worked today, while IRI International day crews stayed home.

A 70 percent chance of more snow is forecast today, Hodgkinson said. "We should get from one to three more inches. The south-west Panhandle is covered and it's moving this way."

But take heart: "We expect to be in the mid-60s by Monday," he said.

Gore discounts poor showing in Texas polls

LUBBOCK (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Albert Gore discounted polls showing him trailing in the Super Tuesday primary race in Texas, saying his campaign will garner the undecided vote.

"Clearly the undecided vote is breaking toward the Gore campaign. I think the facts suggest that the Gore campaign is the one with the momentum," Gore said Wednesday at a speech in Lubbock.

Two newspaper polls published Wednesday showed Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis ahead in the Democratic presidential race, while Vice President George Bush leads the GOP delegation.

Voter tracking, conducted Saturday through Monday, for the Houston Chronicle and The Dallas Morning

News shows 31 percent of likely Democratic primary voters are undecided, while Dukakis has the support of 23 percent, The Rev. Jesse Jackson 14 percent, Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt 13 percent and Gore 11 percent. Only Jackson's supporters are firmly committed.

Gore said he still believes in his "Southern strategy" of concentrating on Southern states holding primaries on March 8.

The Tennessee senator said he wanted to put the White House back on the side of working men and women, charging the Reagan administration, and Bush, cater to the rich and powerful.

"I care about how something's going to affect the woman behind the typewriter," he said. "It's time to put men and women in the oil patch back to work and have the rigs in Libya and Iran slow down for a change."

Meanwhile, in Austin another Democratic candidate, Jackson, got the endorsement of Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

"I am here today not merely to endorse a presidential contender but to make a statement of conscience, to stand as a matter of principle with one who has stood consistently for the needs of the many against the greed of the few," Hightower said.

Jackson called Hightower's endorsement "an historic moment" for his campaign and said it marks "a revival of the soul of the populist movement" in the United States.

Hightower said he knows, and likes, the other Democratic candidates. He said his Jackson endorsement wasn't a rejection of the others.

In Lubbock, Gore received the endorsement of Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, an influential state legislator.

Gore picked up the endorsement at a fund-raising dinner that followed a speech at Texas Tech in which he claimed the Reagan administration has left oil-producing states to fend for themselves.

"When we see a Republican administration that seems to believe that Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas are just sort of on their own and that they need to pull themselves up by their bootstraps, I don't believe that," he said. "I believe it's a national problem, I believe it's a national security problem ... I believe it's a problem for the states most affected."

A Gallup poll shows Gephardt leading Gore in Texas by six percentage points.

Published in the Houston Post and Dallas Times Herald, the poll showed Dukakis is favored by 24 percent of the 483 likely Democratic voters who were polled between last Friday and Sunday.

Dukakis was followed by Jackson with 19 percent, Gephardt with 17 percent, Gore and Hart each with 11 percent and Simon with 2 percent. Sixteen percent were undecided.

Dukakis was to make a swing through Texas today, starting in East Texas, making his way through Corpus Christi and moving on to West Texas.

On the Republican side, the Gallup poll showed Bush ahead with 59 percent, followed by Dole with 20 percent, Robertson, 12 percent, and Kemp with 4 percent.

Records show suspect had been in a mental institution

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A former mental patient armed with two six-shooters opened fire near the Alamo, randomly shooting four people before being gunned down by lawmen, authorities said.

The most seriously injured victim, Deborah Reyes, 29, who was shot in the chest and stomach, was in critical condition at Brooke Army Medical Center late Wednesday, said hospital spokesman Sgt. William Banks.

Marvin Duncan, 55, who was shot in the left thigh by authorities, was charged with six counts of attempted capital murder and his bond was set at $1.5 million, police spokesman Sgt. Paul Buske said.

Witnesses said the shooting resembled something from a movie.

"All hell broke loose," said Todd Tarble, 20, who was waiting for a bus about three blocks from the Alamo when the shooting began.

"He had two guns in his hands. I've never seen anything like that. The guy was acting like John Wayne. This guy was crazy."

The three other victims were not injured seriously, officials said.

Duncan was in good condition at Medical Center Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Inez Eisazadeh.

Duncan had taken a taxicab to downtown about 9 a.m. Wednesday and about three blocks from the Alamo, he pulled out two .357-caliber Magnum revolvers and began shooting, authorities said.

Taxi driver Frank Esquivel, 42, said the man had not said a word during the four-mile ride.

"There was no conversation. I have no idea what set him off," said Esquivel, who leaped from the cab after the shooting began.

"I don't even know if I put the cab in park," Esquivel said. "I'm just glad I'm alive."

Police Chief William O. Gibson said Duncan had been arrested numerous times since 1973 on a variety of charges including assaults and an attempted murder charge.

Court records indicate Duncan was placed in Rusk State Hospital for the mentally or criminally insane in October 1980 after being found incompetent to stand trial on an attempted murder charge.

He was released in March 1981 to stand trial, but Bexar County prosecutors later dismissed the charge in favor of a civil commitment to the San Antonio State Hospital. The records did not indicate Duncan's status at the state hospital.

"As to why the suspect began shooting, we don't know why, with the exception that he wanted to gain some attention," Gibson said.

Homicide Lt. Albert Ortiz said the gunman was methodical in his shooting.

"From the time he was picked up at his residence, throughout the shooting he remained calm and his actions were deliberate, not hurried," Ortiz said.

He said that as the taxi approached a corner about three blocks from the Alamo, the man fired randomly out of the window, got out of the cab and continued shooting.

Ilian Nieves, 17, who was walking on the sidewalk, was struck in the right leg. The gunman then walked to a car and fired on Ms. Reyes, who had opened her car door and was trying to hide from him, Ortiz said. She was struck in the stomach and chest.

A passenger in another car, 16-year-old Toni Longoria, who is seven months pregnant, was shot in the right thigh as she was stepping out of the vehicle, Ortiz said. Alton Watson, 16, of Midland, who was in a third car, suffered a graze to his right ankle, Ortiz said.

As passers-by dived for cover, officer Donald Kawazoe, on his way to work, saw the man and ordered him to stop.

The two exchanged gunfire and the gunman ran, then was confronted by Park Ranger Bennie Burley. They also exchanged gunfire before the gunman was arrested, Gibson said.

Victim's spouse tells of affair

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston businessman testified he ended a romantic affair with his secretary two months before his wife was fatally shot.

The secretary, Jane Ada Callaway, is charged with capital murder and is accused of masterminding the shooting.

In a pre-trial hearing on Tuesday, Michael Saragusa testified he told his wife in July he had ended the affair. On Sept. 2, Judy Saragusa was shot and killed at the Saragusa's Houston home.

Prosecutors have suggested a "love triangle" may have played a role in the alleged murder-for-hire scheme. Ms. Callaway, 36, served as executive secretary to Saragusa, co-owner of Quality Liquors, a liquor and wine distribution company.

During Tuesday's hearing, Saragusa was asked by defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes about a letter he received Sept. 21.

The letter, purportedly from a private detective in Sealy, described a complex scheme in which Mrs. Saragusa had decided to have her husband killed and tried to implicate Ms. Callaway in the crime. But the plan backfired, the letter says, and Mrs. Saragusa, 39, was killed during a meeting with the hired killer.

Saragusa dismissed the letter as a fake and said he did not believe Ms. Callaway was being set up by his wife.

"I think it was obviously the other way around — that my wife was being set up," he said. "This letter was totally incorrect and was written for the benefit of someone else."

Saragusa said he recognized the letter's handwriting as that of Ms. Callaway's.

It's just another March snowfall

What's the big deal? It's just another snowstorm.

Sure, it's early March, and just Sunday it seemed that spring would arrive early. I noticed some irises and tulips pushing their leaves up from the ground and saw that my lilac and rose bushes were beginning to bud.

But it was February then, and the March lion had yet to roar.

And, of course, it didn't help that early morning weather forecasts Wednesday bore only a passing resemblance to the actuality that existed by the noon hour.

But for those of us who grow up in the Texas Panhandle, that should be no surprise. We learn at any early age that weathermen here can only guess. Sometimes they guess well, sometimes not.

I guess as we get older, we're just more blasé about the weather. Another snow storm? Hmmm, maybe I ought to run to the grocery store in case I get snowed in. Just hope the power stays on so I can watch TV or listen to some music.

When I was a young kid, snow was really fun. My mother would wrap me up, then I would run outside and play, fall down, get wet, run in the house crying, change clothes and then jump back outside. No big deal.

As I got older, there were the snowball fights and the occasional snow forts. Just part of the cold game.

And 1957's March blizzard was a blast. It was great to walk on top of the snowdrifts and look down on rooftops. By then I was 10. So when I slipped off one of the 15-foot drifts and slid down to the melted slush beside a house, I casually strolled home in my sodden clothes, stripped them off, put on a new set of duds and went back outside for more fun in the snow.

As a teen-ager in high school in the mid 1960s, Mike, Neal and I would pile into a car and go out driving around the drag. So it was snowing and school had let out early? Big deal. Even better was to turn the car into the Coronado Center parking lot and slide and make doughnuts. It was still fun, then, though it seemed a little colder than when I was a child.

Sometime after high school, however, the snowstorms ceased to be real fun.

Off Beat By Larry Hollis

Maybe it was having to traipse across the Texas Tech campus through the high winds whipping the snow into my eyes to make it to a class. Or perhaps it was driving home for a holiday weekend in a storm and having the 2½-hour trip (back when the speed limit was 70 mph) stretch into 5 or even 6 hours because of the poor road conditions.

After leaving college, it was having to face the fact that while school may be called off, work rarely was — especially if you had a newspaper to get out.

(It always amazes me that when a hard storm hits, people will leave work and stay at home — but they expect that newspaper to be there.)

(On March 23 last year, over a foot of snow on the ground, winds whipping, the city at a standstill, we actually had people calling the office to ask why their paper wasn't out in the yard!)

So, in my approaching maturing years, snow just ain't that much fun anymore. Still, I have to admit it can still create scenes of beauty, especially when the leaden clouds depart and the sun beams out from the bright blue skies to burst forth in a million sparkles across the snow.

And I, at least, find it kind of pleasant just to look out the window and watch the snow drifting, or whipping past the window, draping the surroundings in a white cover.

But I don't change my clothes to run outside and play in it anymore. I'll leave that to the kids of today who can still find it enjoyable.

I'll just stay inside and stay warm and take an occasional look out the window.

Except, of course, when I have to go to work.

Amnesty applications on increase

EL PASO (AP) — The number of people applying for immigration amnesty here has risen steadily since the end of the holidays, but numbers still are far below last year's estimates, an official says.

The El Paso Legalization Center had 24,819 amnesty applicants as of Feb. 23, said Pedro A. Reyes, the center's deputy chief. Last year, officials predicted that as many as 50,000 people would apply for amnesty in El Paso.

Reyes said he expects the numbers to keep increasing before the May 4 deadline.

"Maybe we won't get 300 per day, but we do expect a strong, steady flow," he said. "We will be kept busy, that's for sure."

The amnesty program allows aliens who have lived illegally in the United States since before Jan. 1, 1982, to apply for temporary residency. After 18 months, they can apply for permanent residency, and they eventually can apply for citizenship.

One reason people might not be applying in the numbers expected is that they might believe their border crossing cards, or "micas," can keep them from being deported.

Mexican citizens who can prove they have jobs in Mexico can obtain the border crossing cards, which allow them to visit the United States for up to 72 hours to visit or shop.

The Legalization Center is open Monday through Saturday, meaning amnesty applicants have 54 working days to apply before the deadline. The Immigration and Naturalization Service, which sponsors the program, is paying for radio and television commercials to inform potential amnesty applicants that time is slipping away.

Officials also plan to insert messages in tortilla packages and use other unusual methods to publicize the amnesty program.

"If people are not coming forward, it might be because of something over which we have no control," Reyes said.

The baby boomers don't need babying

The sleeper issue of this campaign year may well turn out to be subsidized day care. Baby boomers seem to be the constituency most politicians are aiming for, and what better way to attract their votes than a promise of low-cost day care for every tot?

Indeed, in both the House and Senate nearly a third of the members have signed off on Sen. Chris Dodd's pet project: a proposal to spend $2.5 billion subsidizing day care for low- and middle-income families while also establishing federal standards.

Dodd's a Democrat, often designated a liberal; his support for day care comes as no surprise. But what excuse for conservative darling Orrin Hatch? The Utah Republican is proposing an $875 million expenditure that would, along the way, also establish some sort of federal standard for those who would tend the baby boomers' babes.

The push for federal day-care subsidies owes its strength to a couple of trendy misconceptions: that it is no longer possible for families to survive on a single income, and that the private sector is incapable of meeting the demand for totminders. Not so.

Women today may be under social pressure to get out of the house and pursue a career, but they are not necessarily under financial pressure to do so. In 1956, when most women stayed home to mind the kiddies while the men went to the office, the average male head of household with a nonworking wife earned $4,833. Adjusted for three decades of inflation, that is $22,000. But the figures for 1986 show that working men were bringing home an average $25,803 to their nonworking wives.

It might mean forgoing a BMW in favor of a Toyota or — heavens! — a domestic automobile. It might mean living in an older home in Richardson instead of a new one in Irving. But the options are there for those couples who want a parent on hand during their child's pre-school years.

And what of those who pursue the day care option? The general argument seems to be that affordable day care can't be found. But Fortune magazine estimates that privately run day-care centers cost an average of $100 per week while informal arrangements can be had for as little as $50 per week. Not unreasonable for families with a second income, and those estimates do not take into account that many large employers are now offering day-care services as part of their fringe-benefit packages.

Clearly, young couples face some difficult choices when they take on the responsibilities of parenthood. But passing a part of that on to taxpayers shouldn't be an option. It is appealing to think that child care is somehow an entitlement, and politicians who claim that it is are likely to win votes. But that doesn't make it right.

Cable TV needs protections

The Supreme Court has once again declined the opportunity to declare that cable television regulation, as it is practiced throughout the country, is an inexcusable assault on the freedom of the press. It has only put off what is almost certainly inevitable.

Cable TV is the orphan child of the 1st Amendment, forgotten and abused. It stands as a reminder that governments are inherently hostile to the free exchange of ideas, and that they will use every change to suppress it to their own advantage. Those impulses are why the Constitution places what people say and write beyond the reach of state control. But it remains for the Supreme Court to include cable TV in that protection.

Until it does, cable firms will be subject to interference unheard of for newspapers or books. They are generally allowed to operate only if they are granted an exclusive license by a city. They are forced to air certain programs and provide certain services in exchange for this privilege. They are burdened with special taxes: They can be forced out of business if they displease their official patrons.

What this amounts to is a giant extortion racket run by municipal governments. Don't take my word for it. A St. Louis alderman candidly explained his city's cable regulation process: "We're trying to extort a little money out of the cable industry to do business." Then-New York Mayor John Lindsay characterized cable franchises as "urban oil wells" that would make city governments rich.

The case for putting cable behind the 1st Amendment's shield is too strong to be denied. The medium has suffered from its superficial similarity to broadcasting, which, unlike the print media, has always been subject to federal regulation. But the resemblance dissolves upon close inspection. State interference with broadcasting is hard enough to reconcile with the 1st Amendment. The weak excuses used there, however, make no sense for cable.

When the Supreme Court upheld extensive federal regulation of broadcasting in 1969, it based its decision on the physical limits on outlets. It is not physically impossible for every individual in Chicago to simultaneously publish a newspaper — however unlikely it may be in practice. It is impossible, however, for every individual to simultaneously broadcast on the radio, because there are only so many frequencies.

This esoteric insight led the Court to the odd conclusion that "where there are substantially more individuals who want to broadcast than there are frequencies to allocate, it is idle to posit an unbridgeable 1st Amendment right to broadcast comparable to the right of every individual to speak, write or publish."

But there are no physical limits on cable, because it is transmitted by wire. If the crucial difference between newspapers and broadcasting lies in the physical limits on broadcasting outlets, then the Court has little choice but to accord cable the greater protection assured to newspapers.

The court has acknowledged that possibility. In a 1986 case involving Los Angeles' regulation of cable, it said that the activities of cable operators "plainly implicate 1st Amendment interests. ... Cable TV partakes of some of the aspects of speech and the communication of ideas as do the traditional enterprises of newspaper and book publishers, public speakers and pamphleteers."

It declined, however, to decide just how to treat cable. It did likewise this week, when it refused to hear a case involving Palo Alto's cable franchise rules, which require the cable operator to provide "public access" channels, to serve the entire city and to install the most advanced equipment.

The city had asked the court to overturn a federal district court decision that the rules violate the 1st Amendment. Cable firms are more like newspapers than broadcasters, the lower court said, and such regulations would never be tolerated for newspapers. The court said the city would have to make its case to an appeals court first.

Unfortunately for the government of Palo Alto, the appeals court it must apply to is the same one that in 1985 struck down Los Angeles' monopoly franchise system for cable TV. Like most of the judicial decisions on this subject, that one noted that the Supreme Court's decisions on broadcasting regulation don't justify similar interference with cable.

But in the long run the efforts of Palo Alto and other city governments to dictate what cable operators do are probably doomed anyway. The people who enacted the 1st Amendment wanted to prevent government efforts to curtail the flow of ideas and information. Our experience with cable only proves the framers' wisdom.

Jimmy Swaggart's the Boss

I was down in Baton Rouge a few months ago and somebody from the chamber of commerce, upon my request, took me out to see evangelist Jimmy Swaggart's place, which is located a four-iron from the plush new Country Club of Louisiana.

You can't actually set foot on Jimmy's spread, of course. There are guards to keep you out, not to mention a wall around the estate that locals report cost $800,000 to build.

I've seen bigger spreads than Jimmy Swaggart's. I was at Peter the Great's palace outside Leningrad once.

But Jimmy hasn't done badly to come in second to a czar. Swaggart has his own college and it's located in Baton Rouge, too. It already takes up more acreage than nearby LSU and continues to expand.

How does Jimmy Swaggart make enough money to afford a modern-day palace, to have an expanding college, to have a wall that costs more than a lot of people make in a lifetime?

You know the answer to that question if you have caught Rev. Jimmy on the television. His cousins Jerry Lee Lewis and Mickey Gilley went to country music and made their fortunes.

Lewis Grizzard

Jimmy went to thumping the Bible.

He can hold that open Bible towards the sky with one hand, pull the microphone close to his mouth with the other, shout a little, cry a little, yell "Hallelujah," a little, and even dance a little and set your soul to soaring.

"I'm washed in the blood," Jimmy will scream.

"I'm Christ-lovin', Bible-believin', heaven-go-in'," he can bellow in that half-crying voice of his and the multitudes will come to their feet and grab for their checkbooks.

Nobody — not Falwell, not Robert Schuller, not even Ernest Angsley — can do it like Jimmy Swaggart.

And so the millions who watch him, love him, believe him, and for whatever their reason, send in the cash by the bushel loads because that's something else Jimmy can do better than any of the rest of them. Beg for money.

"I'm pleadin' with you tonight," the raspy voice, ever so close to breaking, entreats. "We're losin' $75,000 a day. I've got to have ten million before May 1st before this ministry is lost."

And he gets it.

Jim Bakker didn't survive his fall from grace. He was caught messing in the wrong pew and couldn't slide under the door and regain his hold on those who sent in the cash to him.

But I'm not sure Swaggart, who's now accused of his own dalliances, won't figure out a way to wiggle his way out of his troubles.

And as much as I would like to see all these heaven-hustlers out of business, I've got to admit I'd miss Brother Jimmy if he were gone.

He's the hardest working man in the religion business. He is great theater. He's the Boss.

God may talk to Oral Roberts and move hurricanes around Pat Robertson, but I'll bet he tapes Jimmy Swaggart.

Candidates face slantsmanship in news

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Faithful readers of this column may remember that last September I called to your attention one Richard M. Cohen, who at the time was senior producer of foreign news for the CBS Evening News. What made Cohen worth a column was the frankness with which, in an article he wrote for the op-ed page of the New York Times, he described how he and other TV news executives slant their news coverage to support their political biases.

The only thing new in all this was Cohen's eagerness to run off at the mouth about it. Most people in his position insist, with a straight face, that their "news" coverage is completely bias-free. Cohen disdained such tactics. Speaking of CBS TV's coverage of events in South Africa before the government there put its foot down, he bragged that "The American consciousness about South Africa ... was formed and maintained by the constant television images of brutal repression in many forms: the image of the padded, faceless policeman, club raised; the image of a black youth with fear covering every inch of his face as he throws a rock."

Citing one particularly juicy sequence, he exulted in the power of his medium: "Those pictures were broadcast that night on the CBS Evening News and were seen by millions of Americans. By the next morning they were all over European television. They are called tight shots. The camera moves in close. ... If a picture is worth a thousand words, television can do what column inch after column inch of newspaper copy cannot. Television can raise the consciousness of a nation."

Of course, Cohen was talking about coverage of events in South Africa, and sympathy for the plight of that nation's blacks undoubtedly excused, in the eyes of many readers, Cohen's obvious abuse of his journalistic position to make political propaganda.

But evidently Cohen's success in "forming and maintaining" the "American consciousness" on the subject of South Africa struck his superiors at CBS as just what the doctor ordered for this year's American presidential campaign. For Cohen has now been named "politics producer" for CBS television, and those of you who look to that network for your political news had better get ready to have your consciousness "formed and maintained" by an expert.

As usual, Cohen makes no secret of his intentions. As he explained to a reporter recently, "We're going to try and impose our agenda on the coverage by dealing with issues and subjects that we choose to deal with, instead of parroting the candidates."

Exactly what Cohen's agenda is, he didn't say; no doubt we'll all find out in due course. But it plainly will be very different from that of the candidates, who after all are merely running for president and have no business telling the American people what's on their minds. Instead, they will be forced to address the issues that Cohen deems important, presumable on pain of some very disagreeable "tight shots" and other television tricks if they refuse or (worse yet) give the wrong answers.

Does that sort of chutzpah annoy you as much as it annoys me? Imagine this character Cohen, who wouldn't be recognized by a soul if he made a cameo appearance on his own television network, boasting about how he brainwashes the American people — and how he intends to pick, moreover, the subjects on which they will be brainwashed!

He'd better be careful. Cohen was the strategist behind Dan Rafter's recent disastrous attempt to ambush George Bush.

Old, new mingle at surprising Grammys; Michael shut out

NEW YORK (AP)—Irish rockers U2 led the new wave and a Brill Building songwriting team represented the old guard with two awards each at a surprising 30th Annual Grammy Awards, where Michael Jackson was shut out and Paul Simon won again for "Graceland."

"We don't see this as a peak for U2," lead singer Bono said Wednesday night after the socially conscious band copped its awards for "The Joshua Tree," its 12-million selling album. "It's just a beginning."

Simon, who won album of the year in 1987 for his South African project "Graceland," surprisingly captured record of the year honors in 1988 for the title cut, which featured backing vocals by the Everly Brothers.

But Little Richard stole the show at Radio City Music Hall by announcing, not once but three times, that he had captured the Grammy for best new artist. Richard, in a gold suit and sunglasses, finally broke down and declared one-time "Soul Train" dancer Jody Watley the winner.

"I have never received nothing — y'all never gave me no Grammys, and I've been singing for years," the manic voice of "Tutti-Frutti" and "Lucille" proclaimed. "I am the architect of rock 'n' roll!"

Veteran songwriting team Barry Mann and Cynthia Weil, joined by co-writer James Horner, won song of the year and best song written for a motion picture or television with their syrupy ballad "Somewhere Out There," a tune performed by two mice in the animated movie "An American Tail."

The three-hour show featured an electrifying live performance by Jackson. Jackson, who captured eight Grammys for his "Thriller" album in 1984, received no awards for his follow-up, "Bad," despite four nominations.

The Los Angeles-based band Los Lobos, whose version of "La Bamba" was a bigger hit than the original adaptation of the Mexican folk tune by the late Ritchie Valens, came away with nothing despite four nominations.

And folk singer Suzanne Vega, with three nominations for her poignant song "Luka" about a battered child, also went home empty-handed.

Bruce Springsteen won his second Grammy, best rock vocal performance, for his "Tunnel of Love" album but was not around to accept the award. The same was true of Simon and of Sting, who topped Jackson and Springsteen for best pop vocal performance on his "Bring on the Night" LP.

Aretha Franklin, the Grammy-winningest woman of all time, added two more to her 12 with best female R&B performance and best R&B performance by a duo or group — her "I Knew You Were Waiting (For Me)" duet with George Michael.

One of Aretha's proteges, Whitney Houston, took best female pop vocalist for her effervescent single "I Wanna Dance With Somebody" from her "Whitney" album. Narada Michael Walden won the producer's Grammy for his work on Houston's second album.

Jackson's "Bad" won just a single award: best engineered non-classical album, with Bruce Swedien and Humberto Gatica receiving the Grammys.

The Grammys' two all-time leaders added to their impressive totals. Sir Georg Solti, conductor of the Chicago Symphony, won his 26th Grammy, for his recording of Beethoven's 9th Symphony.

And Pianist Vladimir Horowitz, who had 20 Grammys entering the ceremonies, won two for best classical instrumental performance and best classical album for "Horowitz in Moscow." He also received the President's Special Merit Award from the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences, which sponsors the Grammys.

Soprano Kathleen Battle, who starred on four of the five operas nominated for Grammys, ended up winning two — for the Vienna Philharmonic recording of Richard Strauss' "Ariadne auf Naxos" and for her solo album, "Salzburg Recital."

Ladysmith Black Mambazo, the South African vocal group featured on the "Graceland" album, won a Grammy for best traditional folk recording for "Shaka Zulu." Simon produced it.

Frank Zappa's "Jazz from Hell" beat his son, Dweezil, and Springsteen for best rock instrumental — Zappa's first-ever Grammy. "Trio" by Dolly Parton, Emmylou Harris and Linda Ronstadt won as best country vocal duo or group performance.

The show, televised by CBS, saluted recordings released between Oct. 1, 1986, and Sept. 30, 1987.

The Irish rock group U2 accepts applause during Wednesday night's Grammy Awards ceremony where they were honored with album of the year for The Joshua Tree.

Reagan, Congress on collision course over civil rights bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's vow to veto a sweeping civil rights bill puts him on a collision course with Congress, which has overwhelmingly endorsed the landmark measure expanding protections against discrimination.

Groups ranging from the U.S. Catholic Conference to the National Women's Law Center hailed the 315-98 vote Wednesday by which the House sent the Civil Rights Restoration Act on its way to the White House.

"It was a tremendous bipartisan victory for civil rights," said Ralph Neas, executive director of the 200-group Leadership Conference on Civil Rights. Republicans opposed the measure by a slight margin, but just four of the majority Democrats voted against it.

The bill, which some veteran lawmakers likened to the great civil rights statutes passed in the 1960s and 1970s, requires entire colleges, school systems, government agencies and private entities to comply with anti-discrimination laws if any program or activity within them receives federal money. Congress has been struggling with the bill since 1984, when a Supreme Court decision limited the reach of laws protecting women, minorities, the elderly and the disabled to the specific program or activity receiving federal aid.

In letters to House Republicans, Reagan said the bill "dramatically expands the scope of federal jurisdiction over state and local governments and the private sector" and "poses a particular threat to religious liberty."

Both chambers passed the civil rights measure by the two-thirds majority needed to override a presidential veto. Neas said he is confident the margins will hold if Reagan goes through with the veto.

The 6-3 Supreme Court decision came in a case brought by Grove City (Pa.) College. The ruling said only the student aid office was subject to the Title IX statute barring sex discrimination in education because student financial assistance was the only aid flowing into the college. The result has been what one lawmaker called "an avalanche of discrimination nationwide" — hundreds of cases restricted or dropped, and investigators preoccupied with tracking federal dollars instead of determining if discrimination has occurred.

Opponents of the restoration act said it would have far-reaching and unintended consequences on churches, businesses and individuals.

FDA restricts aspirin ad claims

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — The nation's aspirin makers have agreed to refrain from advertising claims that their product can prevent a first heart attack, after being challenged by the Food and Drug Administration.

Summoned by a letter that reminded them of the FDA's regulatory power, the drug manufacturers met for more than an hour on Wednesday with FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young, who then announced the agreement at a news conference.

Young said the agency was concerned that aspirin ads citing a recent medical journal study could be misleading.

"The manufacturers agreed to exercise voluntary restraint and refrain from further promotion of the study results until the facts of the study are known and the necessary analyses were completed and appropriate physician labeling made available," Young announced in a formal statement.

Though he called the action "voluntary," Young said later on public television's "MacNeil-Leher News Hour" that if the manufacturers "go and make a misbranded claim then we could take action. ... The extreme action is to call the product misbranded and seize it."

The commissioner insisted that the meeting was not called in response to advertising already run, saying he was "so busy" that he never read, listened or watched advertising.

Young said the meeting was prompted by publicity surrounding an aspirin study published Jan. 28 in the New England Journal of Medicine.

NATO allies end meeting, vow to defend the West

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The NATO allies vowed today to defend the West with both conventional and nuclear forces, and President Reagan declared that "we're strong, we're united, we're prosperous and we're free."

The first NATO summit in six years ended with a communique expressing the alliance's determination to "prevent any kind of war or intimidation." Reagan followed up with a tribute to NATO's 40 years of peacekeeping.

"The North Atlantic Alliance is the most successful in history," the president said. He said the medium-range nuclear weapons treaty signed by the United States and the Soviet Union last December was "a direct result" of alliance unity.

"It goes without saying that our allies support this treaty and every leader solidly reaffirmed its value," Reagan said. "I reiterated the strong bipartisan support that exists for the alliance in the United States."

"We cannot and will not put our peace and freedom and that of our children and their children at risk," he said. "We will never trade that credibility (of deterrent) at the negotiating table and we will not give it away through neglect."

Reagan, making probably his farewell appearance before a high-ranking NATO gathering, proclaimed: "The state of the alliance is excellent. We're strong, we're united, we're prosperous and we're free."

Following Reagan's four-minute statement before reporters, Secretary of State George P. Shultz hailed the two-day summit. "Here was freedom on display," he said. "It was a very moving experience."

The secretary seemed fatigued from his recent Middle East peacemaking tour, and was leaving immediately for another round of talks with Arab and Israeli leaders on Reagan's orders.

NATO Secretary General Lord Carrington said the summit "gives me some satisfaction" because of the 16 alliance leaders' good will and harmony as they charted future policy.

The final communique said alliance strategy must be "based upon an appropriate mix of adequate and effective nuclear and conventional forces," and that NATO's remaining short-range nuclear weapons must be improved "where necessary."

The communique avoided the term "modernization" of short-range missiles because of the opposition of West Germany, where most of the weapons are based.

Carrington said the allies were concerned that some people might think "modernization" might signal introduction of new, more destructive weapons. "Modernization actually means weapons that are more accurate and possibly less destructive," he said.

The allied leaders expressed solid support for Reagan's efforts to negotiate sharp reductions in U.S. and Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles, and renewed their endorsement of the December agreement between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to ban ground-launched, medium-range missiles in Europe.

Carrington said he was heartened that Gorbachev has recognized the East-West imbalance in European conventional forces that favors the Eastern bloc and "is willing to do something about them."

The allied leaders reaffirmed their determination to defend the West "for the foreseeable future" under a strategy of deterring a Soviet attack with nuclear weapons.

They said a key goal of the alliance was to seek to "gradually overcome the unnatural division of the European continent."

While noting "encouraging signs of change" in the policies of the Soviet Union and some of its East European allies, the 16 leaders of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization cautiously referred to suggestions of fundamental reforms in the Soviet system.

"We look beyond pronouncements for tangible and lasting policy changes addressing directly the issues dividing East and West," the communique said.

"However, we have to date witnessed no relaxation of the military effort pursued for years by the Soviet Union. The Soviet Union persists in deploying far greater military forces than are required for its defense."

The allied leaders said this "constitutes a fundamental source of tension between East and West."

With this in mind, the leaders vowed to maintain both conventional and nuclear forces, and to improve the latter as needed.

The medium-range nuclear ban signed by Reagan and Gorbachev sparked concerns in West Germany, where most of NATO's short-range nuclear arms are based, that it will become a prime target for nuclear attack.

Officials said West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl reiterated his view that those missiles, with a range of less than 300 miles, must be modernized in tandem with East-West talks aimed at reducing conventional military forces.

But Reagan and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher refused, however, to yield on a 1983 NATO pledge to upgrade its nuclear deterrent.

The NATO communique sought to avoid the modernization issue by stating simply that nuclear arms will be "kept up-to-date where necessary."

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — West German hostage Ralph Rudolf Schray was freed by his pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem kidnappers in Beirut before dawn today and whisked to the Syrian capital of Damascus, officials said.

In a statement issued in Bonn, the West German Foreign Ministry confirmed Schray's release, saying Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher thanked the Syrian government for its efforts.

"Schray is now in Damascus and will soon be handed over to the German Embassy there," the statement said. "He is in good physical condition."

A military source at the Syrian command in Beirut, speaking on condition of anonymity, earlier told The Associated Press that Schray was driven to Damascus, 56 miles east of Beirut, under heavy Syrian escort.

Schray, a Lebanese-born West German, was kidnapped Jan. 27 in Moslem west Beirut. A Shiite faction called the Holy Warriors of Freedom on Wednesday made the first claim of responsibility for the abduction of the 30-year-old industrial engineer.

The group, which also has claimed responsibility for the kidnappings of two other West Germans in Beirut in January 1987, is believed to be headed by a brother of two Lebanese Shiite Moslems who are being held in West Germany on terrorism and kidnapping charges.

Texas woman has packed her home with Mickey memorabilia

By RICK RIGGINS
Palestine Herald-Press

PALESTINE (AP) — Joni Roberts got depressed one day 10 years ago. Then she saw Mickey Mouse and couldn't help but smile.

She now has more than 1,000 Mickey Mouse items in her house, including scales, watches, dolls, sheets, toothbrushes and just about everything else imaginable. Her clothes collection is also extensive, taking in every type of outerwear and underwear.

"Have you ever seen a Mickey Mouse that's not smiling?" she said. "That's why I like him. He's something else. Doesn't he make you smile?"

Her husband, Jimmy, has picked up Mickey Mouse items from Florida to California and every state in between on trips for his oil field company. He plays to his wife's passion by checking every town he stops in to search for another of her favorite Disney darlings.

"He buys them, but he doesn't want me to know what they cost," she said.

Since Mickey Mouse items are collectibles, she said, every purchase is an investment with guaranteed increasing value.

Walt Disney Productions ended in 1986 and became Walt Disney Co. Mrs. Roberts said all Disney Productions pieces are worth keeping since they are no longer made.

"A piece that sold five years ago for $5 is now worth $15," she said. "Stocks go up and down, but Mickey Mouse keeps going up. You're not blowing the money because it's an investment. I think everybody should collect something."

Her husband has amassed hundreds of Coca-Cola articles, mostly antiques, in just two months of collecting.

This year is Mickey Mouse's 60th anniversary. Mrs. Roberts has a ceramic collector's piece from Mickey's debut in 1928 in "Steamboat Willie."

Some of her other favorite Mickey Mouse articles include a gold ring, several Engersall timepieces, a talking scale with a pull-up nose measuring tape and the telephone that she uses every day.

One bedroom of the home is jammed with Mickey mementos. Her three young grandchildren call it "Grandma's playroom."

For friends and relatives, gift-giving usually means additions to the collection.

"They know that if they just give me something with Mickey on it, I'm happy," she said. "I guess I've got the 'I wants'."

Mrs. Roberts said she has learned to have a keen eye for the little guy. A lot of times finding antique pieces means going to out-of-the-way places. Wherever they travel, a visit to the nearest antique or junk shop is a must.

"My husband and I will go to a junk shop that will have a thousand things in it, and I'll see the Mickey Mouse right away. I don't care what's in a room, I can spot a Mickey Mouse."

A couple of months ago she was in an old Western Auto store in Minden, La. Her eye caught a Hasbro talking Mickey Mouse doll behind some items on a top shelf. The doll was more than 25 years old and still in the wrapper, and the clerk sold the doll for the marked price of $7.95. Mrs. Roberts said the doll is worth more than $200.

Her clothing collection includes hats, walking shorts, house shoes, underwear, swim suits, exercise suits, jackets and lots of sweatshirts and T-shirts. She sometimes tries to buy Mickey paraphernalia from people she meets, and once purchased the shirt off a man's back.

But some of the best times are when children are intrigued by her Mickey Mouse clothes.

Of course, Mrs. Roberts is a member of the Mickey Mouse Fan Club, but her loyalty does not extend to Minnie Mouse. "That would be funny if a woman collected Minnies," she said.

For a Disney collector, a trip to Disneyland or Disney World would seem like a visit to dreamland. But Mrs. Roberts said she would rather stay away from the temptation.

"They've got too much stuff," she said. "I don't want to go because I know I'd come back broke."

Roberts poses with some of the Mickey Mouse collection she has in her Palestine home. (AP Laserphoto)

Customers keep sewing machine humming for nearly four decades

By CAROL RUST
Beaumont Enterprise

BEAUMONT (AP) — Golden Hardy calls her customers one of three things: baby or darlin' or child. And then again, she may call them all three. It comes to her as naturally as the knack for clothes alterations that has kept her sewing machine humming in tiny shops on Pearl Street since 1950.

"I don't know if it's because I'm good or I'm cheap or what my customers just keep on coming back," Ms. Golden says with a gleeful laugh that seems to end all her sentences. "For two years — two long years — I've been trying to retire, but my customers won't let me."

A yellowed poster in the glass door of her store tells customers when they can expect to find Ms. Golden inside, leaning over a sewing machine she bought for $100 in 1955 and has had ever since.

"It's been a good friend, this machine," Ms. Golden says. "We go back a long ways."

Ms. Golden can say the same about most of her customers, whom she says are mostly people who work downtown and take their clothes to her on their lunch breaks.

She quit fooling with women's clothes years ago, although that's what she started out making and she still makes everything she wears when she has time. Her little shop, scarcely larger than a spacious walk-in closet, isn't big enough to accommodate women's formals and the ensuing ironing that goes with them.

And besides, she's got her hands full just with men's alterations. They hang from a pipe that stretches across the door to a stairway that leads up to the second floor, which Ms. Golden has no use for.

"If a customer comes inside and I'm upstairs," she explains, "then I'll have to turn around and come back down, and how can I get anything done going up and down the stairs all day?"

She has the same attitude about a business telephone, and that's why she doesn't have one. "If I had a phone, people would be calling up to chat, and I don't have time to chat."

But chat she will if someone drops by, if they don't mind talking to Ms. Golden while she sews. She sets a quota each day of clothes to be altered and customers to be fitted, and she doesn't have a moment to waste.

She started in the tailoring business after she served in the military during World War II and "Uncle Sam gave me money to go to school." She selected a tailoring school.

Although she speaks wistfully of retiring and claims the constant stream of customers "is — killing — me," Ms. Golden likes working with her hands.

Army buddies offer aid to refugees in Honduras

By JOE VARGO
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — They say they want to ease the plight of their fellow man — even if it's only by a little bit.

That's why Austin house painter Harold Olmsted and his old Army buddy, Jack Davis, are collecting shoes, clothing, kitchen utensils and fishing gear for the Miskito Indians of Central America.

The pair has formed the Miskito Aid Program, a relief organization that so far has collected goods from individuals and from 22 Veterans of Foreign War posts throughout Central Texas.

"We're interested only in humanitarian aid," said Olmsted, 46, a South Austin house painter who served a year in Vietnam, where part of his job was to guard Gen. William Westmoreland, commander of U.S. ground forces. "The Miskitos are people who need our help."

The Miskitos are native to the Atlantic coast of Nicaragua and Honduras, and for years have moved freely across the border.

Since the outbreak of hostilities in Nicaragua a decade ago, thousands have been forced to flee their homes and relocate in refugee camps in Honduras. Many have been fighting the Sandanista government of Nicaragua for several years, although they are not tied to the U.S.-backed Contras.

Recently, high-level peace talks have begun between Miskito leaders and Sandinista representatives.

Olmsted and Davis say they aren't picking sides in the conflict.

"We want to help them re-establish their self-esteem," said Olmsted, a member of VFW Post 4443 in Bee Caves. "I would like to see a broader base of understanding develop between our people and the Miskitos. I'd like to see schoolchildren of Nicaragua and Honduras write letters to schoolchildren in Texas and the United States."

Davis, 42, who works in Houston, visited a refugee camp after reading about the plight of the Miskitos a couple of years ago, and has taken the Indians fishing lines, nets and hooks on one trip.

"Many of these people have nothing," said Davis, who owns an office equipment business in Houston. "Every little bit we send them is a big deal, and they have never asked anything from anyone."

More recently, the pair have collected another 3,000 pounds of clothing and several outboard fishing boat motors they hope to send the Miskitos within 60 days.

Olmsted and Davis say they respect the Miskitos, who have lived in Nicaragua and Honduras for hundreds of years. The Miskitos had good relationships with English traders and merchants in colonial times, and their language and culture reflect that influence.

They have had periodic conflicts with various Nicaraguan governments for years, and remain a fiercely independent group.

"We want to provide clothing for their back and shoes for their feet," said Olmsted, whose 11-year-old granddaughter collected about 75 pounds of clothing from her classmates. "We want to let the Miskitos know that there are people who care for them beyond the political realm, who care for them because they are human beings."

The Miskito Aid Program is working in conjunction with the U.N. High Commission on Refugees and World Relief.

Organization seeks POWs' graves

The Texas Panhandle Chapter of the American Ex-Prisoners of War, Inc. is trying to locate the gravesites of all former prisoners of war from all wars.

The chapter is asking anyone who knows the locations of POW graves in the area, as well as any other information about any former prisoners of war, to send the information to Edward Seymour, Chapter Commander, 3726 Fountain Terrace, Amarillo, 79106, or to Special Projects Officers James M. Bloxom, P.O. Box 636, Frankston, Texas 75763.

The POW name, gravesite and any other personal information will be made part of a permanent record and kept in the Prisoner of War Museum at Andersonville, Ga. The museum is maintained by the United States Department of the Interior.

Guitarist to be at schools Friday

Classical guitarist Hansford Johnson will be artist-in-residence Friday at Pampa public schools.

Johnson, by arrangement with Pampa Fine Arts Association, will be at Travis Elementary School from 9:15 to 10:15 a.m., where he will visit music teacher Amy Parnell's fifth-grade students.

He will be at Wilson Elementary from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m., and at Austin Elementary from 12:20 to 1:05.

Johnson will visit Jennifer Scoggins' sixth grade music students at Pampa Middle School from 2:40 to 3:30 p.m.

"Since string instruments are not taught in the Pampa schools, this will be the first opportunity for some of the students to become acquainted with a classical guitar and to experience its versatility," said Betty Hallerberg, musical arts chairman of the PFAA.

Johnson grew up in Amarillo and went to college in North Carolina and Virginia. He met the guitarist Jesus Silva and studied with Silva in Italy as well as the United States. Eventually, Johnson came back to Texas to start a guitar department at Amarillo College.

Johnson and his wife, pianist Janna Mills, will present a free concert at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, March 12 at St. Matthews Episcopal Church, 727 W. Browning. Mills is a former Pampa resident; she studied organ with Jerry Whitten of Pampa and lived in Pampa for several years, where she taught piano and directed the choir at First Presbyterian Church.

When the Johnsons are not performing, they are teaching guitar and piano students and directing music at San Jacinto Methodist Church in Amarillo.

Lady J trunk show at Images

The fashions of Lady J will be featured in a trunk showing Thursday and Friday, March 3-4, at Images in downtown Pampa.

The trunk show will be held during store hours each day, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

"I always dreamed of being a designer, of seeing a piece of fabric transform into a beautiful dress," said Jacqueline Davis, designer of Lady J fashions.

Specializing in silks, wools and cottons, Lady J is sized 2 to 20 and is distinctive in design with attention to detail. Lady J fashions are worn by Miss Texas and Miss New Mexico each year for the Miss America Pageant.

The designer also films a show for public television that airs in 50 states and three countries.

The Lady J success is attributed to the unique marketing style of bringing samples to stores for the customers to try on and then order in different fabrics and colors. This allows the customer to find a style that suits them and then pick the color and fabric wanted.

Davis travels with the collection, meeting customers and learning from them. After being a designer and operating her own company for over three years, she has more enthusiasm and fervor for the garment industry.

"I love what I am doing," she said.

The trunk show is free and open to the public.

JULIE NOLES

Noles wins spelling bee

Julie Noles, a fourth grader from Austin Elementary School, took the local spelling bee championship Tuesday when she correctly spelled deprivation and enemy.

After 19 words, the field of eight contestants had been narrowed to Noles and Joshua Seabourn, a seventh grader at Pampa Middle School. Noles stood the test, spelling the final two words and securing her position as Pampa Spelling Bee champion.

Also participating in the spelling bee were school champions

Joy Bowers, Woodrow Wilson Elementary; Jeff Brown, Travis Elementary; Angie Everson, Lamar Elementary; Marcy Leal, Baker Elementary; Cullen Allen, Horace Mann Elementary; and Ellen Depee, St. Vincent's Elementary.

Noles is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Noles. Seabourn's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Danny Seabourn.

Judges of the event were Herman Vincon and Lynn Wolfe, counselors at Pampa Middle School.

Rotarians to take Easter Seals pledges

Pampa Noon Rotary Club will help Easter Seals during the 1988 Telethon by manning a phone center at City Hall beginning at 8 a.m. Sunday, March 6.

The 17th Easter Seals Telethon will begin March 5 at 10:30 p.m. on KFDA Channel 10 in Amarillo. Gary Amble, meteorologist for Channel 10, and Robert and Robyn Hinkle will host the local segments of the telethon. National segments will come from the Aquarius Theater in Hollywood, with Pat Boone and Mary Frann serving as hosts.

Rotarians throughout the Panhandle area will also be answering pledge phones in their towns during the telethon.

"The Rotary Clubs in the Panhandle have helped Easter Seals from the beginning, and they have been especially supportive this year with the response to our telethon needs. We hope that everyone in Pampa will recognize the work being done by the Rotarians and support Easter Seals with a pledge," said Jelaine Workman, regional director of Easter Seals in Amarillo and Lubbock.

Easter Seals provides direct services to children and adults with disabilities. These services include speech, occupational and physical therapy; transportation; orthopedic equipment purchase and loan; hearing aids; referral and follow-up. The second day camp for disabled children was held last summer for 25 campers.

The pledge center phone number is 665-8481. If it is busy, telethon workers ask callers to try again.

"Help Easter Seals help the disabled children and adults in the Panhandle," Workman said.

Fuss over odors may cause foul relations with neighbors

DEAR ABBY: "Irritated in Tampa" indicated that she lived in an "affluent condominium complex" and was regularly offended by the odor of fish cooked in a neighboring condo. You suggested that she speak to the offending neighbor — or write a pleasant note, with a copy to the president of the homeowners' association.

Good grief! Why did you suggest that she take this petty complaint to the president of the homeowners' association? That is certainly not what I would call the good-neighbor policy. I can't think of a more surefire formula for open warfare! I once received a "note" from my next-door neighbor soon after I moved to a new home. She complained about the way I parked my car. Had she said, "Gee, I wish you'd move your car down about three feet so I can see my flowers," I'd have gladly done so. Instead I received a rude letter that I've kept on my desk for about a year, and every time I come across it, I boil.

Abby, you are right about 99.9 percent of the time, but lawyers send notes with carbon copies — not friends and neighbors.

SEETHING IN CAPISTRANO

DEAR SEETHING: All right, I blew it, but there's no ill wind that doesn't blow some good — a fitting analogy for this fish tale. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Having been in the home-building business for a number of years, I've known that air-sealing doors and windows can do more than "keep out the cold." Weather stripping prevents offensive private odors such as cigarette smoke, cooking meat, fish, onions, garlic, etc. from escaping into shared areas such as hallways and stairwells, thus promoting neighborly peace by avoiding the need for confrontations!

I hope this helps. Sign me... ONE FOR HARMONY

Museum to celebrate Alamo Day

PANHANDLE — The public is invited to help Carson County Square House Museum celebrate Alamo Day by attending a free extravaganza entitled "A Cloud of Witnesses" at 3 p.m. March 6 in the museum auditorium.

The Square House Players, in conjunction with the Panhandle High School drama department, will re-create the fall of the Alamo in a one-hour production.

Slides will depict each hero as he speaks and will be accompanied by battle sound effects as the scenes flash on a screen. Roy Lane and David Edwards will be Travis and the Devil, with a host of other community citizens portraying characters of other famous heroes and Alamo defenders.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In regard to the condo dweller who complained about her neighbor cooking fish frequently, Adele Davis said that most fish is overcooked; when you can smell it, you've already cooked it too long.

Just thought the rest of the world should be let in on this hint.

JEAN M. DAVIS, EUGENE, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: I have a cooking tip for "Irritated in Tampa": Instead of complaining to her neighbor, suggest to the neighbor that she sprinkle a little powdered ginger on the fish while it's cooking, and there won't be any fish smell. Also, if she's frying the fish, tell her to put a few little balls of peanut butter (the size of a pea) in the skillet. Result: No fish odor! Sometimes I call myself "Dear Abby," but my name is...

RUTH B. JONES, BELLFONTE, PA.

***

DEAR ABBY: About fish odors: I should think all "affluent condos" would have a ventilating fan in the kitchen. Perhaps after "Irritated in Tampa" writes to the president of the homeowners' association, she will receive instructions as to where this fan switch is located, and how to turn it on. Also, how about buying a couple of cans of air freshener?

CHARLES IN VANCOUVER

DEAR ABBY: Since when is it against the law to cook fish? Fish is highly recommended by health experts. Eating large amounts of fish that are rich in specific polyunsaturated oils appears to reduce the chances of blood platelet cells sticking together, thereby reducing the chance of heart attack.

Are people who live in "affluent condos" not supposed to cook strong-smelling foods? How about cabbage, mustard and turnip greens, and brussels sprouts?

I hope you hear from plenty of other fish lovers.

Astro-Graph

In the year ahead, there is a chance you might become involved in an interesting arrangement of a speculative nature. It can work out advantageously, provided it is managed wisely and patiently.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Two friends who haven't been getting along too well recently might try to involve you in their disagreement today. Back off and don't take sides. Major changes are ahead for Pisces in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful today that someone to whom you did not give authority to make decisions for you takes it upon him/herself to do so. Direct your own show.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It could prove unwise today to push yourself to your limits, even though you may feel an urgency to finish some neglected task immediately.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A moody, older friend could have a negative effect on your outlook today if you let this person draw you into his/her involvements. Treat this person kindly, but at arm's length.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Proceed cautiously if you have to work out a delicate arrangement with another today. Strive to be fair, but be sure the other party makes as many concessions as you do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Unless you have something complimentary to say about co-workers today, it's best to keep your thoughts to yourself. This is a very touchy area.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) When shopping today, closely scrutinize merchandise that is offered as a big bargain. There may be a hidden reason for its low price.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today, there's a possibility that you might be both a lethargic starter and a poor finisher. Without continuity of purpose, your efforts will count for little.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Usually you're a self-sufficient person, but today, you might put yourself in a position where you'll have to rely on individuals who are not as responsible as you are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) An ally who is usually cooperative may disappoint you today when that which you request is turned down. Later, this person's reasons will be revealed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may not achieve goals you set for yourself today, because you won't be prepared to pay the price that it will take to achieve them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The greatest obstacles with which you'll have to contend today could be your own self-doubts. If you don't think you can succeed, you won't.

Coach buries hatchet

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Dave Peterson says he bears no scars from being the most second-guessed person at the Winter Olympics.

The pucks have been dropped and so have the hatchets. It's time to relax.

"My future's right here in my kitchen," he said Wednesday from his southwest Minneapolis home. "I'm retired again and I'm not very nervous about it."

Peterson coached the U.S. Olympic hockey team in Calgary's Olympics until last Thursday, when his team unceremoniously defeated Switzerland for seventh place. Five days earlier, Peterson's club lost to West Germany and was eliminated from medal competition.

During the last few weeks, Peterson sparred daily with the international and U.S. news media, especially the print media. He steadfastly protected his players from what he felt was a dishonest, knowledgeable and lazy corps of writers.

He now says his team might have come away with a medal if it had better goaltenders than Mike Richter and Chris Terreri, but he never said anything of the kind during the Olympic tournament.

He most often came under fire for an offensive system that could have the gold medalist Soviet Union reeling one minute but create deadly defensive mismatches the next.

Peterson, 57, a retired high school business teacher and coach, sometimes got short with reporters at postgame news conferences and after practices.

He'd complain about what sports writers were writing but would then say he didn't care what they wrote because he didn't read newspapers. Asked about this curious combination, he said he knew bad things were being written "by the tone of the questions."

The ongoing battle between Peterson and "you people" — as Peterson called the media — deflected some of the attention away from his team, which defeated Switzerland, Norway and Austria but lost to the Soviet Union, West Germany and Czechoslovakia.

He said he came out of the Olympics feeling "great" and said he would have changed only one thing, if possible.

"I probably would look for more experienced goalkeeping, but I don't know where it would have come from. There really wasn't much available," said Peterson, a former goalie who coached U.S. goaltenders at the 1984 Games. "That's not a knock on Richter and Terreri. They just don't have the experience. We played very well as a team, but I don't think our goalkeepers performed on a par with the top goalies on other teams."

"There's an obvious answer to why we had problems defensively and it wasn't our defenses not getting back or our forwards not helping out. Our goalkeepers simply didn't give us the big games we needed from them."

"But I wasn't going to say anything bad about them. That's just what the media wanted me to do, but I wasn't going to do it."

Peterson rarely did what the media wanted. He was gruff. He was curt. At times, he was rude. And he was ripped for it, from sea to shining sea — and beyond.

The international press depicted him as the classic "ugly American."

"It never bugged me what they said about me," Peterson said. "It bothered the media that they couldn't jab me because I had no job to protect or to go back to. I'm just a retired schoolteacher."

Mustangs clinch tie for SWC crown

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The hard part is over for Southern Methodist and the Mustangs could earn their first outright Southwest Conference basketball title since 1967 tonight while watching television.

If Arkansas loses to Houston then the crown goes to the Mustangs. If the Razorbacks win then they have to do it again Sunday in Lubbock to tie SMU for the title.

Then SWC officials would draw names out of hat to determine the top seed in the Post-Season Classic next week.

SMU won its first championship in 26 years Wednesday night with an 87-54 victory over Texas Christian.

In other Southwest Conference games Wednesday night, Texas defeated Texas A&M, 64-58, and Baylor blasted Texas Tech, 91-49.

SMU Coach Dave Bliss got a wet suit out of the victory in a post-game celebration but didn't mind.

"There's nothing I've wanted more for my team than for them to be Southwest Conference champions," said SMU Coach Dave Bliss. "There's a lot of things neat about being on national tv and being in the NCAA playoffs but winning the title is something that happens over a hard two month period."

Somebody knew something. A 40-foot banner with "SWC Champions" on it was lowered from the ceiling after the game.

Carlton McKinney scored 20 points and Todd Alexander added 16 to pace the Mustangs.

SMU now owns a 23-6 overall record. They are 12-4 in SWC play.

Arkansas and SMU split in their head-to-head meetings. If the Razorbacks win the remainder of their games, they would have an equal record with SMU in games against the rest of the conference.

"We know Arkansas has a couple of tough games," Bliss said. "I'm just happy that we did our work. Arkansas is a very tough team and capable of tying us."

SMU, which barely defeated TCU 51-48 in Fort Worth, overwhelmed the Horned Frogs with a fullcourt press to post a 48-30 halftime lead.

TCU went 6:05 without a point to start the second half as the Mustangs ran away.

"They just blew us away," said TCU Coach Moe Iba. "We didn't execute and get back on defense. SMU is certainly a deserving champion."

It was SMU's largest victory over TCU since the Ponies beat the Frogs 96-60 in 1974.

John Lewis scored 21 points to lead TCU while Todd Willis added 14. TCU is 9-17 and 3-12.

"This is what it's all about," McKinney said. "This is what we worked for—to be champions."

McKinney added "We'll be watching on TV tonight. Go Coogs."

Super-sub Alvin Heggs came off the Texas bench to score 17 points and lead the Longhorns past the Texas A&M Aggies 64-58.

Heggs, a junior transfer who is Texas' second-leading scorer, hit 11 of his game-high total in the second half and was 7-of-10 from the field. He played despite a badly sprained ankle that has kept him out of practice all week.

Sophomore guard Travis Mays followed Heggs with 14, including 10 in the first half.

Donald Thompson and former Longhorn Doug Dennis paced the Aggies with 16 points each. Texas A&M's leading scorer Daryl McDonald was held to 12.

Texas, which has won eight of its last nine, improves to 16-11 on the season and 10-5 in front of the biggest SWC crowd of the year of 9,933.

Canadian faced with uncertainty

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

The Canadian Wildcats will travel to Big Spring Friday to compete in the Class 2A Regional Basketball Tournament. Who they will play, whether they will play and even whether they can get there is still up in the air.

A hearing has been set for 9 a.m. Friday morning in Austin to either allow the Class 2A regional tournament to proceed or be postponed.

A temporary restraining order, issued to just after the start of Tuesday night's Canadian-Hale Center game, stems from an eligibility question of a Shallowater basketball player.

Whether the boy's family properly established residency in the Shallowater school district after having moved from Lubbock in Oct. 1986 is the root of the problem.

Shallowater officials contend the boy, David Shires, Jr., is a legal resident. After Hale Center lost a bi-district game to Shallowater, Hale Center officials said no, Shires wasn't a resident of the district.

A protest was then filed by Hale Center against Shallowater. The University Interscholastic League ruled in favor of Hale Center. The 237th district court judge in Lubbock overturned the UIL's decision, and the court order blocking Tuesday's game was delivered three minutes after the tipoff of the Canadian-Hale Center game.

Depending on who the Austin judge rules in favor of Friday morning, the opposing school will have the right of appeal, which would appear likely at this time.

"Assuming that the judge makes a decision, Canadian will play in Big Spring Friday night at 7 o'clock," UIL Assistant to the Director Dr. Bill Stamps said Thursday morning.

"They will either play Shallowater a full game, or Hale Center a half game."

Tuesday's game against Hale Center was called at halftime with Canadian leading 30-20.

"Assuming the judge does not rule, all bets are off," Stamps said.

In other words, Canadian could conceivably make the trip to Big Spring and not be able to play because of the legal entanglement. The UIL has informed all teams involved in the regional tournament to be in Big Spring ready to play.

"They could just go down there and have nice trip," Stamps said.

Canadian head basketball coach Robert Lee and Athletic Director Paul Wilson were both unavailable for comment Thursday morning and neither were able to return phone calls, according to Joyce Cross a secretary at the high school.

"The only thing we know different," Cross said, "is that we will be playing at 7 o'clock Friday night and 9 o'clock Saturday morning (if they win Friday night's game)."

Three other regional qualifiers, Haskell, Morton and Coleman, will also be in Big Spring awaiting the decision.

Several other matters present possible problems which could affect the tournament, which has already been shortened to one day:

■ The possibility of a counter suit by Canadian. According to Dr. Stamps, that appears unlikely, although, he said, anything is possible.

"I don't think they will, but that's always a possibility," Stamps said. "I think the school itself will not. The outcome is not pleasant to contemplate. If (the tournament) is delayed long enough, it may never be played."

Stamps said any parent with a student on the team can file a suit if a judge decides the suit would be valid.

■ One of the two greatest threats hindering the tournament's proceeding as planned is an appeal by either Shallowater or Hale Center.

"Either or any of the three schools involved (Hale Center, Shallowater or Canadian) can file an appeal," Stamps said. "The tendency, though, is that they don't have much time. Say the judge finally makes a ruling at 4 o'clock Friday. With the game scheduled to start at 7 o'clock, an appeal after 7 doesn't carry a great deal of weight."

■ The other matter that has become a factor is the weather.

With 14 inches of snow on the ground in Pampa and an unofficial total of 10-15 inches in Canadian, travel is a major concern. Roads throughout the Panhandle are icy, slick and hazardous and the outlook does not appear any better through Friday afternoon.

With a 70 percent chance of 1-3 additional inches of snow expected today, a 30 percent chance of more snowfall tonight and temperatures expected to rise to only the mid 40s Friday, safe travel is nearly impossible.

"That's an issue you'll have to judge at the time," Stamps said. "If Canadian can't get there, I don't think a penalty can be extracted because they can't get to the site. I've never known the UIL to penalize someone because of an act of God."

"We're just playing this thing moment by moment."

Pampa High grid schedule released

The Pampa Harvesters kick off the 1988 football season against Canyon, but it won't be a District 1-4A game.

Canyon was dropped into Class 3A in the recent UIL realignment of schools. Randall County, the new Canyon high school, will take the Eagles' place in District 1-4A.

Pampa's first district game is Sept. 16 at Dumas.

The '88 Harvester schedule is as follows:

- Sept.
- 2 - Canyon, home; 9 - Amarillo High, away; 16 - Dumas, away; 23 - Lubbock Estacado, home; 30 - Hereford, away.
- Oct.
- 7 - Open; 14 - Levelland, home; 22 - Lubbock Dunbar, away; 28 - Randall County, home.
- Nov.
- 4 - Friendship, home; 11 - Borger, home.

Pampa girl golfers seventh at Odessa

The Pampa High girls' golf team finished seventh in a recent tournament held at Odessa.

"This was the first varsity tournament of any caliber for these girls and I felt like they did an outstanding job," said Pampa coach Frank McCullough.

Kristi King led Pampa with a 205 (100-105), followed by Kristen Largin 211 (101-110), Martha Nichols 229 (108-121), Stephanie Stout 234 (116-118), and Laura Eberz 248 (122-126).

With the exception of Pampa and Snyder, all the teams entered in the 15-team tournament were 5A schools.

"We didn't do as good as we could have by any means, but other teams did much worse," McCullough said. "We've got three sophomores, one junior and one senior on the team and this tournament was a good experience for them."

Girls' state tourney tips off today

AUSTIN (AP) — Three teams with perfect records are among 20 semifinalists at the girls' state basketball tournament, which scheduled a Class A contest between Byers and Larue LaPoyner as its opener today.

Champions in five divisions will be determined Saturday.

Unbeaten teams at the tournament this year include North Mesquite, 35-0 in 5A, and two 3A schools — Ingleside, 34-0, and Hardin-Jefferson, 33-0.

North Mesquite, led by 6-foot post Teresa McMillan, will play

Clear Creek on Friday. Clear Creek, 31-2, lost to North Mesquite 70-51 in regular season.

Ingleside was matched against Brownfield, 28-8, in the first 3A semifinal game today, while Hardin-Jefferson and Brownsboro, 31-4, played the second game.

Class A power Nazareth returns to the tournament at 32-2, with a 24-game winning streak. It has appeared in the tournament 11 times in the past 13 years and has won eight state titles. Nazareth's first-round opponent was Moulton, 33-3.

Departing columnist wishes area teams future success

Several area high school basketball players were named to the All-District 2-1A basketball squad by coaches in the district.

Area teams in 2-1A include Miami, McLean, Groom and Lefors.

On the girls team, receiving honors from McLean were Shandee Rice, Misty Magee and Kim Beaver; From Miami, Alane Dinsmore; Karen Bohr and Erin Eschle represented Groom on the first team and Becky Davis was chosen from Lefors.

Miami's Autumn Walls and Karrie Bailey, Lefors' Kim Moore and Carrie Watson, Groom's Leslie Sweatt and McLean's Darla McAnear and Angie Reynolds were named the team's alternates.

For the boys All-21A team, Shane Bridwell and Brock Thompson from Miami; Sid Brass and Kyle Wood from McLean, Groom's Bruce Thornton, Stoney Crump and Michael Rose and Lefors' Dusty Roberson were named.

On the alternate team were Kevin Mayfield and Jeff West of Lefors and Travis Homer of Groom.

With regard to the baseball season, it is always fun to dream about possible World Series matchups. There are a lot of distinct possibilities for the October Classic, or so say the numerous pre-season magazines that have hit the stands this week.

With Montreal improving to-

Front Row Seat

By Jimmy Patterson

ward the end of the '87 season and Toronto always strong in the AL East, we could have our first All-Canadian series.

San Francisco gave away last year's NL crown. They probably won't this year. Combine that with the vastly improved Oakland A's for the first Bay Bridge World Series.

Of course there's always the possibility — perish the thought — of an All-New York series.

Kansas City is expected to be improved, and with Whitey Herzog at the helm in St. Louis we could have another All-Missouri matchup.

With these interesting matchups, there are certain series that won't happen discounting the possibility of a miracle: No All-IL, All-Chicago or All-Ohio matchup is likely.

How about an All-Texas matchup featuring the Astros and Rangers? With a lot of luck Houston could reach the playoffs. With a lot more luck, Texas could finish in the first division of the AL West. Oddsmakers would have to lay at least 1,000-to-1 odds on the two meeting in the Fall Classic.

The Sporting News Baseball Yearbook likes the Mets and Giants as the divisional favorites in the National League and Toronto and Oakland to finish first in the AL.

The magazine also has Texas finishing fifth in the AL West and the Astros third in the NL West. TSN holds not much hope in last year's World Series competitors repeating, picking Minnesota third and St. Louis second.

Finally, this will be my last sports column for The Pampa News as my family and I have decided to move to the Midland area to pursue further career opportunities.

It is my wish that Pampa and all the area teams experience an unending string of good luck in future endeavors.

Joining the home team

Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis dons a Boston Red Sox uniform during a visit to the team's training camp in Winter Haven, Fla. Wednesday. Dukakis, a candidate for the 1988 Democratic Presidential nomination, is seeking support in the upcoming Florida Presidential primary.

Old problems haunting Mets

By The Associated Press

The New York Mets have a new training camp this season but old problems have followed their move across Florida.

Darryl Strawberry, fined $1,750 for being late twice last season, was 19 minutes late for Wednesday's workout and was fined $100 by Mets Davey Johnson. Strawberry said he had a flat tire.

"I woke up in plenty of time," Strawberry said. "But when I went down to my car at 9 a.m., I had a flat tire. I called a tow truck because I didn't have a spare. By the time I had to wait for them to come, it was late."

Johnson fined Strawberry $500 for oversleeping a workout last March 22 and another $1,000 when he left camp after he found out about the fine. He was fined $250 when he was 22 minutes late for a game against the Chicago Cubs on June 9. He had been late the previous day but was not fined.

"Darryl and I don't have a problem," Johnson said Wednesday. "We get along great. He's had some problems with tardiness in the past. He apologized for being late and said he had some car problems. That's it."

"Of the 48 players in this camp, why does it have to be Darryl?" Johnson asked out loud. "As far as I'm concerned, it's settled. But I wish it hadn't been Darryl."

The Mets named Gary Carter co-captain, joining Keith Hernandez. Several Mets said that Carter felt hurt last year when Hernandez was named captain.

HOT AND COLD

Willie Hernandez of the Detroit Tigers dumped ice water on a sports writer's head, accusing Detroit Free Press columnist Mitch Albom of turning Tigers' fans against him.

Albom was sitting in the clubhouse in Lakeland, Fla., talking with pitcher Frank Tanana when Hernandez, without saying a word, picked up a large container of ice water and poured it over Albom's head.

Hernandez then threw the bucket on the floor and walked away, muttering epithets.

Albom remained seated. "You're a class act, Willie," he said. "I wasn't even talking to you."

Hernandez said later he felt Albom was to blame for way fans at Tiger Stadium boo him. Hernandez claimed Albom called him a cry-baby in a column last year.

"I've talked with Willie about it and I'm going to talk to him again tomorrow," Tigers general manager Bill Lajoie said. "I would doubt it very much that there will be disciplinary action."

BELL CLANGS

George Bell is still angry at the Toronto Blue Jays, who want him to be a designated hitter.

"After the season I had, I come here and have no job. That's hard," Bell said Wednesday after his first workout.

He thinks he can change the mind of Manager Jimmy Williams.

"Spring training is long — we'll see what is going to happen," Bell said.

Bell and Williams met for 15 minutes prior to practice, but neither revealed what was said.

SIGNINGS

Mark McGwire, who set a rookie record with 49 home runs last season, agreed to a one-year contract for $250,000 with the Oakland Athletics. He can earn at least $65,000 more in bonuses. McGwire made the big league minimum, $62,500, his rookie season.

The Mets, in compliance with their own self-imposed deadline for completing roster signings, now have all 39 of their players on the major league roster under contract. The club announced the signings of Len Dykstra ($305,000), Kevin Elster, Randy Myers, Darren Reed, Jose Roman, Mark Carreon and Jack Savage to one-year contracts. Gene Walter and Randy Milligan had their 1987 contracts renewed.

Hangar habitat

Roy and Britt Taylor stand on the patio of their 30,000-square-foot home, a hangar at Meham Field at Fort Worth. After the Taylor's aviation business failed, the hangar became their home out of financial necessity.

Commissioners approve museum construction

DALLAS (AP)—Work could begin this week on a $2.3 million elevator to what is believed to have been the perch from which President John F. Kennedy was shot.

The Dallas County Historical Foundation struggled to fund the exhibit for the past 11 years, and plans to raise another $1.5 million from private sources for additional renovations on the sixth floor of the former Texas Schoolbook Depository. "The eyes of the world will be on this project," said Lindalyn Adams, president of foundation. "As sad as it is, it is the most important historical site in Dallas."

The contract award was approved by a 3-2 vote

Monday by the Dallas County Commission to Thomas J. Hayman Construction Co.

Although the winning bid was lower than five others, it is nearly $300,000 more than the county had planned to spend. Tony Callaway, a partner in the architectural firm of Hendrick Callaway, blamed the overrun on last-minute design changes required to satisfy historical interests and city zoning rules.

The exhibit is to be called "The Sixth Floor" and will be reached via an outside elevator that will carry an estimated 300,000 to 500,000 visitors annually to the exhibit without disrupting work at county government offices inside.

Musical theater has money problems

WALLINGFORD, Conn. (AP) — Whenever Beau Segal peers into the future, what he sees is the past.

It's not that Segal isn't plenty busy booking shows for the Oakdale Musical Theater's upcoming 34th season in the summer of 1988. But the end is drawing near for his theater, and Segal spends time these days thinking about celebrating the occasion with a really big show.

"If I have anything to do with it, I don't want to go out with a bang. I want to go out with a(n) ... explosion," says Segal, 37, the son of Oakdale founder Ben Segal, 68.

Father and son recently sold the theater property in a final effort to rid themselves of more than $1 million in debt over back taxes owed to the town and mortgage payments to the bank.

The sale to a couple of commercial developers includes a two-year lease-back guarantee and options for three annual renewals that could extend the theater's life through the 1992 season.

While the Oakdale's halcyon days are over, it is ironic, Beau Segal says, that 1987 was its most successful season. That's because times are flush, people have lots of spending dough, and the Oakdale finally raised its prices several years ago after a long try at holding the line.

"Oakdale really clung to a low ticket price year after year, and that was one of the things that really flung it on the rocks," Beau Segal says.

But in a business with a low profit margin, even with good times it still would have taken years to get out of tax trouble and square up with creditors, as Beau Segal says, "Everybody got tired of waiting for their money." In a recent interview, he blamed rising costs for Oakdale's financial troubles, including insurance and labor costs but especially talent fees.

The Oakdale, a wooden theater in the round with open sides and outdoor concession stands, used to create its own musical shows in the early days, when there was "nothing here but an alfalfa field," Beau Segal says.

Ben Segal and his cohorts would hire a director and choreographer, auditions would be held in New York, the chorus kids would sign on and everyone would clamber onto the train to Wallingford for a summer in residence.

The last musical booked at the Oakdale was "Woman of the Year" with Barbara Eden in 1984.

Mix of state local issues on ballots

By The Associated Press

The battle for the White House won't be the only thing on the minds of some Super Tuesday voters. In Mississippi, they'll begin choosing a new senator; in Louisiana's 4th District they may elect a new congressman, and in Monroe, N.C., they'll decide whether to legalize sales of mixed drinks.

Of the 20 mostly Southern and border states holding presidential primaries and caucuses March 8, four — Arkansas, Mississippi, Maryland and Texas — are holding their regular state primaries at the same time.

But even in places where the state primary will be held later, officials have slipped statewide or local issues onto the Super Tuesday ballot.

"It's a cost-effective measure and it would tend to draw a larger turnout for both issues," explains Jim Hamilton of the Florida division of elections.

In Mississippi, the retirement of Sen. John C. Stennis after 41 years has sparked a close Democratic primary race between Rep. Wayne Dowdy and Secretary of State Dick Molpus. Ed Cole, state Democratic chairman, says the combination of the presidential and Senate primaries "should ensure a pretty good turnout." Rep. Trent Lott is unopposed for the GOP nomination.

In Maryland and Texas, Democratic Sens. Lloyd Bentsen and Paul Sarbanes faces taken challenges for renomination and will be heavily favored over whichever Republicans win their party's nominations. Texas also has primaries for five of nine seats on its Supreme Court, which has become a political battleground with two justices publicly reprimanded, two others quitting and Republicans hoping to achieve an unprecedented majority.

Arkansas features a heated Democratic primary in the 1st Congressional District, where 10-term Rep. Bill Alexander is challenged by campaign consultant Darrell Glascock, who says the incumbent neglects his district and spends too much time jetting to Central America.

The Texas secretary of state estimated it would have cost $12 million extra to hold separate state and presidential primaries. Bob Fisher of the Arkansas attorney general's office said the two parties would have had to "raise filing fees to an unholy amount" to finance separate primaries.

In Louisiana, voters in the 4th District will select a replacement in the U.S. House for Gov.-elect Buddy Roemer, who takes office on March 14. Roemer asked that the balloting be scheduled for Super Tuesday to cut down on election costs in his financially strapped state.

Nine Democrats and one Republican are competing in the open primary in which a candidate is elected if he receives a majority. Otherwise, the top two finishers compete in a runoff. The field includes former Rep. Claude "Buddy" Leach, who lost to Roemer in 1980 following Leach's acquittal on vote-buying charges.
