Congress, president keep a united front

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress and President Reagan are united behind his warning that Iran will "pay a price" if it persists in trying to trade blows with a militarily superior force of American warships and aircraft in the Persian Gulf.

Iran took a licking Monday when it tried to strike back after the United States destroyed two Iranian oil platforms. In the most intense exchanges since Reagan beefed up U.S. firepower in the gulf last summer, American forces sank or damaged four Iranian attack boats Monday and disabled two frigates that fired missiles at U.S. planes.

The initial platform attack had been in retaliation for the mine explosion last week that damaged the USS Samuel B. Roberts and injured 10 crewmen. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said there is "conclusive evidence" that Iran planted the mine that exploded Friday.

"They must know that we will protect our ships, and if they threaten us, they'll pay a price," the president said in a speech to a business audience.

On Capitol Hill, there was bipartisan support for Reagan's action. Moreover, Reagan won applause for consulting with Congress before sending the military into action.

"The mines have been clearly identified as manufactured by the Iranians and sown in the waters by the Iranians," said Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va. "The Iranians were carrying out terrorist acts."

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas told his colleagues: "In my view, now is the time to send only one message to our adversaries: That the United States, the president, the Congress and the people are united and determined to meet our responsibilities and defend our interests in the gulf."

"I hope the ayatollah (Khomeini) gets that message so we can all avoid further bloodshed and violence," Dole said.

Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci said Iran's decision to fight back amounted to "foolhardy behavior."

"I'm not sure that it's explainable in terms of Western logic at this point," Carlucci said at a Pentagon news conference. "I have to only assume that it's some kind of a fanatical reaction or slavish obedience to a contingency plan."

U.S. searches for lost 'copter

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — U.S. Navy warships and helicopters today searched for a missing U.S. helicopter and Iran attacked a neutral ship, setting it afire in the Strait of Hormuz.

Iran claimed it had shot down the helicopter during a sea battle that raged Monday over much of the southern Persian Gulf.

Iran fired land-based Silkworm missiles at U.S. warships during the fighting, in which American forces destroyed two Iranian oil platforms and blasted six Iranian vessels.

After the Silkworm firing, the three-ship convoy led by the USS Jack Williams took evasive action and fired chaff into the air, which confused the Silkworms' radar guidance system and caused the five missiles to miss the convoy in the southern gulf.

Monday's confrontation was the most serious between U.S. and Iranian forces since the U.S. Navy sent its task force to the gulf last year.

Iran continued its raids on neutral shipping today, gulf-based maritime salvage experts reported, attacking a United Arab Emirates tanker in the Strait of Hormuz.

The 12,125-ton Fal-5 was set ablaze but Omani coastguard patrolboats rescued the crew, the salvage experts said. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

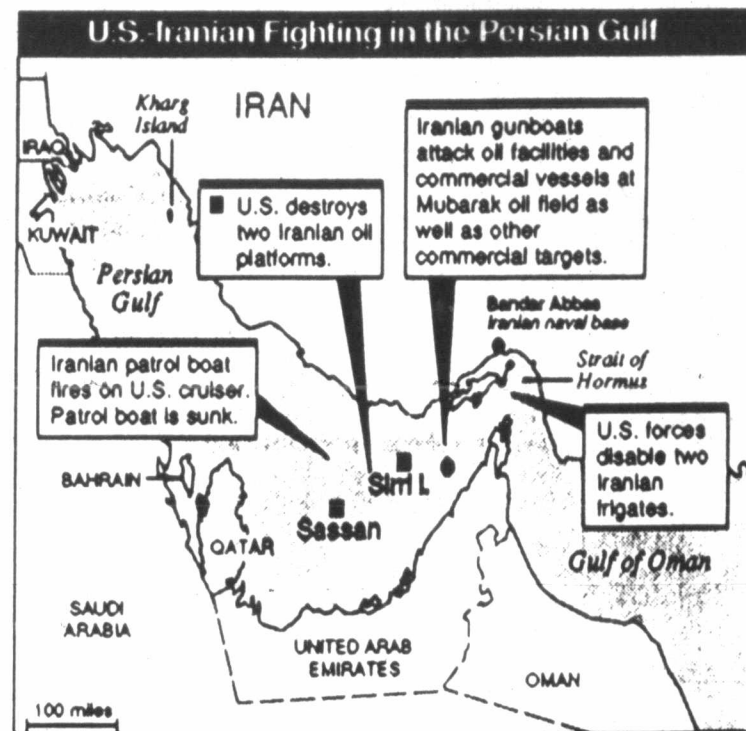

And at least five U.S. warships were seen patrolling the southern gulf, witnesses reported.

Iran said several people were killed or injured in the attack on the two oil platforms but gave no further details.

No American casualties were reported in Monday's fighting. However, Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci said in Washington the Navy was searching for a Cobra attack helicopter with two crewmen that had not returned to a cruiser.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, said Monday night that Iranian warships "in a heroic clash with the aggressor American helicopters in the Persian Gulf shot down one of them Monday afternoon."

Two groups of U.S. Navy warships struck the Iranian oil platforms Sassan and Sirri-D, 100 miles apart in the southern gulf, on Monday morning. Crews on the platforms were given advance warning to evacuate the platforms, which have been used as bases for speedboat attacks on neutral shipping.

One platform was destroyed by naval gunfire and the other by explosives placed on it, according to statements in Washington.

The Iranian news agency said U.S. warships attacked the Sassan platform first, then hit the Nasr platform off nearby Sirri Island.

Iranian gunboats then went on a rampage in the southern gulf.

Carlucci said a Navy helicopter was fired upon during the raid on the platforms but not hit. Iranians shot at a press helicopter carrying an NBC-TV crew and Associated Press photographer Norbert Schiller, but missed.

Schiller said the "Iranians fired at least half a dozen .50-caliber rounds and small-arms fire" at the helicopter.

Pentagon officials said the Iranian frigate Sabalan fired on an A-6 and the plane attacked, hitting the ship with a laser-guided bomb.

Iranian frigate IS Sabalan is one of two ships disabled by American forces Monday.

Commission to discuss Hobart and golf course

Pampa city commissioners will be meeting in special session at 6 p.m. today to discuss the widening of Hobart Street and the donation of land for development of a public golf course.

Prior to the special called session, commissioners will meet in a work session at 4 p.m. to discuss matters regarding the State Highway Department's proposal for widening Hobart from 60 to 82 feet.

The proposal has met with opposition from merchants and property owners on Hobart because of the state's request that angle parking be eliminated.

Approval of a resolution permitting the widening project was deferred from last Tuesday's regular meeting to allow the commission further study on whether some angle parking can be retained.

Merchants have claimed the elimination of angle parking from in front of their businesses would create economic hardships on them because of the costs of building off-street parking and the loss of customers from fewer parking places and traffic obstacles during the project work.

In the special session, the commission will consider acceptance of approximately 200 acres of land north of the city for the golf course development. The item also was deferred from last week since legal matters had not been cleared up with the property owner.

In related matters, commissioners also will consider appointment of an advisory committee to assist in securing donations and coordinating volunteer labor for construction of the golf course.

In another item on the special meeting agenda, the commission will consider on final reading an ordinance establishing school zones.

Arms treaty remains elusive

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — American and Soviet negotiators trying to wrap up a new arms control treaty by the end of May have identified 1,200 differences in their drafts of the accord to slash long-range nuclear weapons by 30 to 50 percent.

Roughly half of the disputed items are technical and could be resolved if major verification problems are worked out, Reagan administration officials said Monday.

But the others have proved intractable so far, involving the detection and counting of elusive mobile and cruise missiles carried on planes and warships, said the officials, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz leaves today for talks in Moscow to try to close the gap. But the officials acknowledged that hopes were fading for the treaty to be ready for signing at the May 28-June 2 summit meeting in the Soviet capital.

"There's always hope," an official said. But he said there has been virtually no progress in resolving differences between the two sides since Shultz met in Washington last month with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

The official blamed a lack of cooperation on the Soviet side. "I'm not one for bashing the Soviets," the official said in an interview. "But they're not exactly following through on the problems. And look at the calendar."

Shultz is flying to Helsinki and will go on to Moscow on Thursday for three days of talks with Shevardnadze and a session with General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev. He will also make stops in Kiev and Tbilisi, the capitals of the Ukraine and Soviet Georgia.

Shultz will brief officials of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Brussels on Monday and then return home.

The monthly meetings are in preparation for President Reagan's visit to Moscow for talks with Gorbachev May 29-June 2. Reagan would like to crown his fourth and probably final superpower summit meeting with a treaty to reduce long-range bombers, missiles and submarines by 30 to 50 percent.

But a senior U.S. official, briefing reporters under rules of anonymity, said four drafts prepared by American and Soviet negotiators had 1,200 distinct items of disagreement bracketed.

The drafts deal with verifying the reductions, disposing of banned weapons, an exchange of information on U.S. and Soviet arsenals and the treaty itself. A fifth and separate draft deals with space-based defenses.

"The longer time goes by without solving these issues, the more unlikely there will be a signing in Moscow," the official said.

The Reagan administration is insisting on a strict verification system. This requires procedures for monitoring what the other side retains in its arsenal.

Shultz also will talk to Shevardnadze and Gorbachev about other subjects including the Iran-Iraq war, the Middle East and human rights.

Touchtone phone service may end for some users

Telephone customers who have touchtone phones but haven't been paying a monthly touchtone fee will lose phone service unless they agree to begin paying the fee.

Southwestern Bell Telephone spokesman Gary Stevens said new equipment recently installed in Pampa is able to locate homes and businesses using tone-operated pushbutton phones. The monthly fee for such service is $1.25.

Stevens said Southwestern Bell is considering a May 1 cutoff date.

Customers now affected by the monthly rate have been notified by telephone or mail, Stevens said, and should call the Southwestern Bell business office toll-free at 951-2922 between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. before Friday.

Stevens said Southwestern Bell won't back-bill the monthly service rate or any installation charge.

Two Pampa natives die in out-of-town incidents

Two men, both natives of Pampa, died in separate incidents over the weekend, one in a shooting in Amarillo and the other in an explosion in Dumas.

Michael West Caughey, 25, of Amarillo, died late Friday in Northwest Texas Hospital from a gunshot wound to the left side of his back, Amarillo police report.

Caughey was shot with a 12-gauge shotgun behind a residence at 828 S. Louisiana St. and later found between in the alley Louisiana and Mississippi streets near San Jacinto Church of Christ, according to police.

A man reportedly called police saying that he had shot a prowler. Police took a 27-year-old man into the station for questioning about the incident and released him.

Monday, the 47th District Attorney's office said a criminal complaint will not be filed against the man questioned about the shooting, but the details of the case will be presented to a Potter County grand jury Thursday morning.

A gas leak is suspected to be the cause of a Sunday morning explosion that killed Carroll Dean "C.D." Clark, 59, and his wife, Virginia, 51, both of Dumas. The house at 714 E. Eighth St. in Dumas was demolished by the explosion at 4:20 a.m. Sunday. Fire officials say they believe a gas leak caused the explosion, but added that it could also have occurred because of a gaseous vapor from a liquid.

Mr. Clark died at the scene and his wife died shortly afterward at Dumas Memorial Hospital.

Firefighters took about 30 to 40 minutes to extinguish the fire. No other houses or buildings were affected by the explosion, and no one else was injured in the blast that woke neighbors.

Mr. Clark was born in Pampa. He was a road and bridge supervisor for Moore County and a U.S. Navy veteran of the Korean Conflict. He was a member of Masonic Lodge #1009 AF&AM.

Mrs. Clark, born at Granit, Okla., moved to Dumas seven years ago from Memphis, Mo. She was a receptionist for a Dumas doctor. The couple were married in 1961 in Las Vegas, Nev.

Services for the couple are to be at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Calvary Baptist Church of Dumas with the Rev. Jake Armstrong, pastor, officiating. Burial will follow at Northlawn Memorial Gardens, Dumas, under the direction of Morrison Funeral Home.

Survivors include one son, David Clark of Fort Worth, and two daughters, Pam Gray of Fulton, Ill., and Kim Randall of Dumas; and two grandchildren; Mrs. Clark's mother, Grace Carnes of Dumas; and her brother, Vernon Carnes of Phoenix, Ariz.

Mr. Clark is also survived by his parents, Bob and Pearl McWhiter of Memphis, Mo.; his brother, Roy Clark of Memphis, Mo.; and his sister, Jacqueline Keighaugh of Edina, Mo.

Graveside services for Mr. Caughey were to be at 2 p.m. today in Llano Cemetery with the Rev. Cecil L. Gray, pastor of South Georgia Church of the Nazarene, officiating. Arrangements were made by School-Gordon Bell Avenue Chapel.

He is survived by a son, James Caughey of Tampa, Fla.; his mother, Sandra Kemp of Amarillo; his father, Avery Caughey of Lefors; three brothers, Terry Bessire, Butch Smith and Corey Griffith, all of Amarillo; a half-brother, Ricky Caughey of Pampa; two sisters, Cathy Norris and Dawn Smith, both of Amarillo; and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Walls of Amarillo.

Hijacked hostages fasting

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — The hijackers of a Kuwaiti jumbo jet read the Koran and their 35 hostages fasted during a religious observance that appeared to take precedence over negotiations aimed at ending the 2-week-old hijacking.

This morning contact with the Moslem Shiite hijackers began with a request radioed to the control tower.

"Good morning," said one of the hijackers, speaking clearly in English. "We'd like to have water for the plane, someone to clean the toilets and newspapers: five in Arabic and three in French. We also need one medicine, inter-viaform," a treatment for diarrhea.

A yellow car carried an airport worker to the plane to fill the request.

As the Moslem holy month of Ramadan began on Monday, the hijackers requested copies of the Koran, the Moslem holy book, which were delivered.

During Ramadan, observant Moslems do not eat or drink during daylight hours. At the hijackers' request, a traditional pre-fast meal was delivered to the plane Sunday night for all aboard.

Also Monday, a man identified as a member of Kuwait's royal family spoke from the plane and said he hoped his government yields to the gunmen's demands.

Most of the brief radio message from the man the hijackers said was Fadel Khaled Al-Sabah was impossible to understand, except for the part about their demand that Kuwait free 17 pro-Iranian prisoners convicted in the 1983 attacks on the U.S. and French embassies in the Persian Gulf sheikdom. "I hope that Kuwait releases all the prisoners," the man said, speaking in Arabic in a feeble, halting voice. Kuwait officials insist they will not give in to the hijackers, who have killed two Kuwaiti passengers.

The recorded appeal was the fourth by a passenger since the plane arrived in Algiers on Wednesday.

The appeal and one visit to the plane by an Algerian mediator were the only signs that the negotiating process was in motion on Monday.

The Kuwait Airways flight from Thailand to Kuwait was hijacked April 5 with 112 people aboard and forced to land in Mashhad, Iran, where 57 eventually were released.

On April 8, the jet flew to Larnaca, Cyprus, where two passengers were killed and 13 freed. Since landing in Algiers one passenger has been freed, leaving about 35 hostages aboard, including three members of Kuwait's extensive royal family.

The five to eight hijackers are armed with grenades and guns and have threatened to blow up the plane.

The hijackers' only direct threat in Algeria was that made Saturday when they asked that the plane be refueled so they could "settle our score" with Kuwait in another country, rather than in "friendly Algeria."

Radio conversations on Monday made no reference to refueling the plane or leaving Algeria. Radio Algiers said in an Arabic language news broadcast on Monday that there was "hope that a peaceful solution is still possible" despite no indication that either side would make any concessions.

Customs closes international bridge

EL PASO (AP) — The federal government's drug-interdiction effort has taken a new form with the brief closings of the busiest bridge between El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, for a search of waiting cars by drug-sniffing dogs.

If enough drugs are found to justify it, the tactic could be expanded to other border-crossing points, U.S. Customs spokesman Charles Conroy said Monday.

Customs closed the Bridge of the Americas twice last week, Conroy said. During the first 15-minute closure, on April 11, agents found 40 pounds of marijuana hidden in a car, he said, adding that the second search, last Thursday, turned up no drugs.

"It was a very short-time operation in which all the gates were closed and all the Customs dogs in the area were brought in and every car in the area was searched," Conroy said, adding that the unannounced searches will continue indefinitely.

People crossing into the United States are required to state their citizenship and whether they have anything to declare in what is called a primary search. In a secondary search, a vehicle is inspected more closely in a procedure that can vary from a cursory look into the trunk to the virtual disassembly of a vehicle.

During the two bridge closings, barriers on the U.S. end of the bridge were lowered and Customs officials walked down the lines of cars and conducted primary inspections while the dogs sniffed for drugs, Conroy said.

Officials performed secondary inspections if the dogs indicated they smelled something. The Bridge of the Americas is the busiest of the four international bridges between El Paso and Juarez. On a typical weekday afternoon, the wait to cross the bridge and undergo a Customs inspection is 20 to 30 minutes.

Conroy said the bridge was blocked for about 15 minutes each time, and that every car that was inspected was later allowed to drive past the Customs booths without stopping, keeping delays to a minimum.

However, newspaper Diario de Juarez reported that some cars were delayed by more than an hour.

Conroy said he didn't know how many dogs were involved in the search, but said he believed the number was less than 10.

Hospital turns patients away again

HOUSTON (AP) — Officials at Ben Taub Hospital say the hospital is so crowded that they have asked ambulances to bypass their emergency room and take critically ill patients to nearby Hermann Hospital.

It was the second time in the past two weeks that the hospital has had to take the action.

Officials said Monday that 34 very ill patients waited in the emergency room for a free bed in an intensive care unit or an adult ward, and officials decided they could accept no more emergency cases.

The emergency room itself was turned into a mini-intensive care unit, with patients being monitored right there.

The public hospital accepted only children as emergency patients during the overload period that administrator Mike Bullard expected to end early today.

Bullard said that all the adult wards and intensive care units are filled with very ill people who have crowded the hospital for more than a month.

Bullard said he could not explain why the hospital has been so crowded.

On April 6, when he first asked ambulances to bypass the hospital for about 18 hours, cocaine problems appeared to the culprit.

Bullard asked the ambulance service to route all possible heart attack victims to Hermann because Taub's cardiac units were full. Cocaine may play a part in Monday's closing, but Bullard said the major problem seems to be more and sicker patients.

Dr. Kenneth Mattox, director of Ben Taub's emergency center, said the hospital has assumed health care burdens other entities have shucked the past decade.

"As far as I can tell, we are the only hospital of this type that has not done this on a routine basis in the past," Mattox said.

Black teacher threatening legal action though contract renewed

CRANE (AP) — Members of the Crane school board have voted to renew the contract of the only black faculty member at Crane High School.

But Marian Bennett, 34, says she is still considering legal action against some board members despite Monday night's action to renew her contract.

The school board had singled her out for individual review last week when the school automatically renewed all other teaching contracts.

School Board President Charles Barrett called a meeting for Monday to vote on the matter again.

The board voted 5-2 to keep Bennett as a study skills teacher and 4-3 to keep her as a coach, Barrett said. He would not name the board members who voted against Bennett.

Bennett could not be reached Monday night. Her telephone was busy for more than three hours after the meeting, the El Paso Times reported.

Bennett told reporter Vanessa Tatum of KMID-TV in Midland that although it would be hard for her to stay in Crane after recently receiving threatening phone calls, she would fulfill the one-year contract.

She said she was working with an adviser from the Texas State Teachers Association to consider what legal action, if any, to take.

The teacher said her decision to complete the new contract was made in part because of all the support she had received from teachers, parents and students.

More than 100 people from the community of 3,000 about 30 miles south of Odessa showed up at the meeting to support Bennett.

The contract was renewed without discussion by the board, and when members of the audience attempted to question board members, Barrett said discussion of the problem was not on the board's agenda.

But people went to the microphone anyway. Most of those who spoke told the board they would not stand for racial discrimination by the board.

Board member Bill Harkins, who had asked that Bennett's contract be considered individually, refused to answer questions after the meeting.

But when pressed, Harkins told reporters it involved a personal conflict.

Pressed further and asked to clarify that it was a personal rather than professional problem that prompted him to single out Bennett, Harkins said, "I would rather not answer that question."

Bennett told the El Paso Times in a telephone interview Sunday that she received anonymous phone calls Saturday night by a man and two women, who urged her to get out of Crane.

The move to reconsider Bennett's contract was moot because it came after the April 1 deadline mandated by Texas law for ratifying teachers' contracts, Barrett said.

Bennett was recruited by the Crane school district three years ago after her girls' volleyball team at Burges High School won 60 matches in a row and had a string of seven consecutive district championships.

Christopher Sommer, a junior at Southwest Texas State, will receive $600 from the TAPB scholarship fund, said Lumpkin.

The combined $1,250 will be presented in memory of Steve Harmel, news director at KGNC in Amarillo, who died April 1, 1987, of accidental carbon monoxide poisoning.

The TAPB donated $1,000 to the scholarship fund in Harmel's name.

TAPB awards three scholarships

DALLAS (AP) — Students at Sam Houston State University, the University of Texas-San Antonio and Southwest Texas State University will share $2,250 in scholarships awarded by the Texas Associated Press Broadcasters. The AP announced Monday.

Kelly Bostrom, a Sam Houston State junior, will receive $1,000 during the TAPB awards banquet

April 30 in Odessa. The money was donated by KPRC in Houston in memory of reporter Earnest M. Carrathus, who was killed July 7, 1987, when his car was broadsided by a drunken driver fleeing police, said AP Texas Bureau Chief John Lumpkin.

Margaret Polit, a junior at UT-San Antonio, will be awarded $650 during the TAPB convention.

Words fly — not bullets — in latest Alamo battle

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Alamo is best remembered as the site of a historic battle during Texas' war for independence, but now a new fight is being waged for control of the shrine.

Mexican-American leaders, angered over how Hispanics have been portrayed in descriptions of the 1836 battle, say they will fight to seize control of the Alamo from the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, who have been the site's custodians since 1905.

The League of United Latin American Citizens is critical of the way the DRT has operated the Alamo.

"It may take 100 days or 100 years, ... but we will get legislation to make LULAC the custodians of the Alamo," said Jose De Lara, state LULAC director and a sixth-generation Texan. "After all, we're the ones who built the Alamo. ... We're perfectly capable to be the custodians."

LULAC officials say the planned legislative battle is not only who should run the Alamo, but also which story of the military fight will be told — the popularized, colorful legend, or a more historically accurate account.

The civil rights group claims the Daughters of the Republic, a group of women descended from citizens of the independent Texas nation, have sacrificed historical accuracy for legend in its accounts for the shrine's 2.5 million annual visitors.

Billie Averitte, president-general of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, disagrees.

"The Daughters have the sole responsibility of (the Alamo), the expense, the care of it and everything and they have done a marvelous job, down through the years," she said.

Contributions of at least nine Hispanics who defended the Alamo have been ignored by the DRT, De Lara claims. He said the Mexican Army is depicted as the oppressor and the battle's account as solely between Mexicans and Americans is not accurate.

The DRT was granted rights by the state to run the Alamo after saving much of it from demolition in 1905.

Though historians say the DRT provided a great service to the state, many of them also agree that the organization's stewardship has been flawed.

There's "a willingness to cling to the legend rather than give a balanced account of what it was all about," said Paul Hutton, an Alamo historian and professor at the University of New Mexico.

"For a shrine of such importance, it should be in the hands of the government."

Legends such as the valiant death of Davy Crockett, who went down swinging his rifle, have been generated by popularization of the Alamo battle in 20 films and a television series.

Martha Rash of Rockwall, a past DRT president, said the legends are still important, though DRT officials deny the group sacrifices fact for colorful myth.

"I think everybody needs a hero, especially young people," Ms. Rash said. "These stories were handed down for an awful long time and whether they're true or not, I want to believe them."

For more than 80 years, the DRT has run the Alamo without state support. Money to run the shrine comes from donations and proceeds from the gift shop, although DRT officials declined to disclose their income or the cost of running the Alamo.

A woman wipes away tears Monday during the funeral service for the four Mann children who were slain last week and buried Monday.

Siblings buried next to each other

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Four siblings brutally stabbed to death in their mobile home were buried side-by-side as family members called for a reform of a judicial system they partially blamed for the youths' deaths.

More than 1,000 mourners filed past the caskets of Jennifer Mann, 19; Shannon Mann, 17; Martha Mann, 15; and Ernest Mann, 11, at Mission Park Funeral Chapels. They were buried later at the funeral home burial park.

The four were killed early Friday when an assailant broke into their mobile home and attacked them with steak knives, some of which broke in their bodies because of the strength of the blows, authorities have said.

The children's parents, Ernest and Rebecca Mann, who are separated and were not home at the time of the attack, had to be supported physically by relatives as they walked to the burial site Monday.

Shannon Mann's former boyfriend, Leo Narvaiz Jr., 20, who was arrested shortly after the attack, remained in the Bexar County Jail Monday in lieu of $4.05 million bond on four capital murder charges and a charge of criminal mischief.

Grady Mann Jr., an uncle of the slain youths, told reporters prior to the memorial service that the judicial system was flawed because police did not arrest Narvaiz quickly enough in connection with an earlier threat against the Mann children and their friends.

"Although Ernest and Rebecca Mann and their four children believed enough in the system to allow the police department and the district attorney's office to protect them from threat and harm, the one fact remains what should have happened did not," Grady Mann said.

"It is our hope this tragedy might serve as a catalyst for all of us nationally to personally protest the system that has evolved," he said. "The system protects and shelters the rights of the few and in so doing neglects the needs of the many. The time for change is now, lest another family need go through the agony and torture of loss, whether one or many."

Narvaiz was accused of threatening Shannon Mann's current boyfriend, Ricky Moore, 24, and of damaging Moore's pickup truck during a fight on March 28.

Ailing economy puts pinch on private schools

DALLAS (AP) — Enrollment is dropping at many private elementary and secondary schools as parents, hard-hit by a sluggish economy, find it increasingly difficult to afford the tuition, officials at the schools say.

Jerry Thomas of Dallas, a former economic development director who now is without a job, said he and his wife mulled the possibility of going without a second car, dipping into savings or taking out a loan so they could continue sending their son to East Dallas Christian School.

But it became more difficult, if not impossible, to pay the monthly tuition so their son could attend the private institution, which is supported by three Church of Christ congregations, Thomas told The Dallas Morning News.

Enrollment at East Dallas Christian School is only half what it was two years ago. Letters are being sent to parents this week informing them that the school, which has 30 students in kindergarten through eighth grade, will not reopen in the fall.

At St. Mark's School of Texas, a school for boys

Moore had filed a complaint against Narvaiz and Jennifer and Shannon Moore had given police statements about the incident. Authorities were looking for Narvaiz before the attack occurred.

The friends and family members who attended the memorial service walked past the four identical, gray caskets, on top of which were the victims' pictures.

Hundreds of roses surrounded the closed coffins and pink carnations were placed on top of the girls' coffins and blue carnations on top of the boys'.

Daniel M. Hubbell, assistant pastor of the Salem Sayers Baptist Church of Adkins who presided over the service, said the children loved their family dearly.

"When we face a crisis as we have faced this past weekend, a tragedy that gripped our community, our families and our lives, we know nothing will ever be the same again. We find that we either become very hard or very sensitive or very tender," he said.

He said he talked to the children's mother and she wanted him to give other youths a message.

"She wanted more than anything else for the young people that are here to understand the hurt and the pain so that you too may be prepared for it one day," he said. "...This proves to us today that we live in a sinful and murderous world."

After a 20-minute memorial service, the four coffins were placed in separate vehicles and driven about a mile to the burial place.

After a five-minute prayer service, Ernest Mann got up and screamed.

"I want my boy. I want my boy," he yelled. Then, grabbing a friend, he shouted, "You get him for me. You get him for me." He did not elaborate.

News photographers were kept at a distance at both the memorial and graveside services.

Meanwhile, friends of the Manns have set up two funds to help defray the family's funeral costs, which are expected to total more than $10,000.

Authorities are continuing to analyze a tape in which one of the Mann girls called the 911 emergency exchange and said that her sister's boyfriend was attacking them.

Bexar County District Attorney Fred Rodriguez said it may be two months before a capital murder case is presented to a grand jury.

in grades 1 through 12, seven teachers were laid off after enrollment dropped from 768 students at the beginning of the 1986-87 school year to a current enrollment of 708 students — an 8 percent drop.

Annual tuition at St. Mark's, including books, ranges from $5,790 for the lower grades to $7,370 for the upper grades.

Last fall, Catholic schools in the Dallas diocese lost about 300 students, a 2.6 percent decline from last spring.

Many Dallas area schools that once had waiting lists are considering ways to advertise for more students.

Many schools are offering more financial aid than ever before to help parents pay for a private school education. At Greenhill School, which has 1,140 students, the number of grant applications has quadrupled from 25 two years ago to 100 this year, financial aid director Joe Gonzales said.

Parents are taking out more loans to pay for a private school education than ever before, officials say.

Gonzalez calls for task force to oversee Texas S&Ls cleanup

WASHINGTON (AP) — A special task force is needed to monitor plans by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. to restructure the thrift industry in Texas and surrounding states, U.S. Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez says.

The efforts by the FSLIC to deal with problem thrifts is flawed, Gonzalez said Monday, because the same people who allowed the problems to occur are still in charge.

"The FSLIC approach to date has been to rely on the advice and influence of some of the same good old boys who were perfectly willing to overlook wholesale fraud, look the other way in the face of dangerous practices, and resisted effective regulation," Gonzalez said.

"The industry's leadership circle is nevertheless unchanged and still exercises overwhelming influence," Gonzalez said.

There is a need for Congress to "tighten its oversight reins" on the agency, Gonzalez said.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the federal agency that oversees FSLIC and regulates S&Ls, recently unveiled its Southwest plan to sell or merge 140 of the most deeply troubled thrifts in Texas. The state has 109 insolvent S&Ls among its approximately 280 thrifts.

Gonzalez said the FSLIC's plan is short-sighted because "it is preoccupied with giving some organizations all they need, rather than building a thrift industry that is competitive, well-managed and financially sound."

Gonzalez called on U.S. Rep. Fernand St Germain, chairman of the House Banking Committee, to establish a task force to monitor the restructuring of thrifts in Texas and adjacent states.

Gonzalez released a letter he sent St Germain. "While a thorough house-cleaning is needed to assure the public and reshape the lax attitudes that did so much to create the mess in Texas, it appears that little has changed," Gonzalez wrote.

A spokesman for St Germain said the Rhode Island Democrat had not had a chance to consider Gonzalez' request.

Lawrence J. White, a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said he believes the Southwest Plan will stand up to scrutiny.

"We have encouraged providers of fresh capital to come forward, to make bids on insolvent institutions," White said, adding that FSLIC was examining 150 such proposals, some from existing institutions and others from new investors.

"I don't understand where Mr. Gonzalez ... formed those opinions," White said.

He said FSLIC is concerned about keeping community-based institutions and was examining proposals that would not eliminate local competi-

Portion of Bowie's nose missing

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Authorities expressed shock upon learning that a portion of James Bowie's nose is missing from his carved marble figure on the 60-foot Cenotaph that stands as a shrine to Texas heroes in front of the Alamo.

The disfigured face of Bowie, among the best known of the 189 defenders of the Alamo, was discovered Monday when members of a solemn wreath-bearing procession took part in a Fiesta event known as the Pilgrimage to the Alamo.

Repairs are expected to begin in two weeks after the grandstand is removed from Alamo Plaza, officials say.

Although vandalism is considered a possibility for the damage, officials concerned with repairing Bowie's face also believe that the underlying marble might have flaked off causing the right portion and tip of Bowie's nose to fall off.

"We don't know what happened," Alamo Curator Emeritus Charles J. Long said. "There is no sign of natural breakage and no sign of vandalism. After 50 years, if that's the only damage, that's not too bad."

Long, a sculptor and curator of the Pompeo Coppini-Waldine Tauch Studios, where the Cenotaph was made, first discovered the damage Feb. 12, while walking by the Alamo on his way to eat lunch at a nearby restaurant.

Long quietly kept the damage to himself, only informing key officials in the San Antonio Parks and Recreation Department and current Alamo Curator Steve Beck. "I saw his nose was missing as I walked by, and I looked around and found pieces of it on the ground," Long said.

"I couldn't see what caused the damage. The tip of the nose is in good shape. It just needs to be glued back on," he said.

Long volunteered to repair the damage and received permission to mend Bowie's nose from the Parks and Recreation Department.

Bowie's likeness is on the side of the Cenotaph facing the Alamo, on the north end. He is joined by another larger than life figure, the likeness of James Butler Bonham.

Long said he thinks that the tip of the nose can be glued on using ordinary epoxy cement. The marble dust will be mixed with the cement to fill in gaps.

Craftsmen at the Georgia marble quarry explained to Long that epoxy remains the best technique to use for the repair.

The Cenotaph, which was constructed for $100,000 in the midst of controversy in the late 1930s, still is an object of contention despite standing before the Alamo since 1940.

The City Council is considering whether the Cenotaph should be moved to improve visibility of the Alamo itself.

The Cenotaph, created by Coppini, an Italian immigrant who came to San Antonio in 1901, expresses the spirit of sacrifice that moved the defenders of the Alamo.

Unions combating working at home

If a recent proposal by the Labor Department becomes law, you will be able to sew a tablecloth for hire in your home, but not a shirt. You will be able to make a handkerchief but not a pair of pants. You will be able to fashion buckles and buttons, but not many types of jewelry. That's called progress.

Two years ago, when the Labor Department tried to repeal all laws against working in the home, the labor unions raised all kinds of objections, claiming the loosening of restrictions would lead to "a rebirth of the industrial dark ages." That's how Jay Mazur, president of the 200,000-member International Ladies Garment Workers Union, described it. What he meant was, his union would lose its constituency.

This latest plan is a compromise. It would repeal some of the regulations against commercial garment production and jewelry manufacture by workers in their homes. But it would maintain bans on the production of women's apparel and the manufacture of jewelry requiring the use of hazardous substances.

Nevertheless, Mazur says his union and others will oppose this version as well, calling it a "betrayal of the rights and protections held by American workers for generations." His is an extremely self-serving view.

As it now stands, American workers are denied the right to an occupation of their own choosing. The law prohibits anyone from setting up shop in their own home to manufacture clothing for a per-piece rate, even as the work-at-home option is becoming an increasingly attractive way for parents to avoid the cost of day care and to ease freeway congestion.

Unions argue that per-piece rates often mean workers toil for less than minimum wage. But that artificial value, placed on a laborer's time by a third party, ignores factors such as the convenience of working at home.

Mothers with young children, who otherwise would have to part with a large chunk of their wages for day care, avoid that cost. Both men and women enjoy the convenience of setting their own hours. In most cases, those who want to work harder to earn more can do so without worrying about artificial definitions of "quitting time" or the union seniority that may govern overtime eligibility.

Indeed, as more and more white-collar workers turn to telecommuting, there is no reason a segment of the blue-collar workforce should not enjoy a similar option. Nothing save union officials who do not want to see their power undermined by workers cutting their own deals.

According to Labor Secretary Ann McLaughlin, the proposal "represents a common sense approach to maximizing flexibility in a way that ensures worker protection in the home environment." Her plan is not as beneficial as the earlier proposal to repeal all home-labor laws, but it's certainly better than the status quo.

Berry's World

Sen. Gore is only a spoiler

Al Gore entered the race for president in the hope of moving the Democratic party away from the political left and toward victory in November. Those were worthy purposes, gamely pursued. But it's time he realized he can best advance them by getting out.

However strong a Democratic nominee he would be, the Tennessee senator is no longer a plausible contestant. His high-water mark was set in the March 8 Super Tuesday primaries, where he did less well than he had originally hoped but well enough to sorely complicate the campaign. His showing effectively destroyed Richard Gephardt, hindered Michael Dukakis, and, unintentionally, helped Jesse Jackson.

Unfortunately for Gore, it didn't have the anticipated effect of attracting voters outside his native South. Since then, he has racked up the kind of numbers that should foster humility: 5 percent of the vote in Illinois, 8 percent in Connecticut, 2 percent in Michigan, 3 percent in Colorado. His best showing was 17 percent in the Wisconsin primary, still only good enough for a distant third. Since Super Tuesday, when he won 325 delegates, he's added only 34 to his total.

His last hope is the primary in New York today, where Gore has been attacking Jackson in an attempt to win Jewish support. But he now looks like a man chasing personal ambition at the expense of his own better aims.

No one thinks Gore has a chance of winning in New York. The most recent poll there showed Dukakis with 45 percent of the vote, Jackson with 29 and Gore with 3. If he catches on, he won't steal votes from Jackson. All he has a real chance of doing is hurting Dukakis — who, despite all his flaws and weaknesses, is far closer to Gore's thinking than Jackson.

At this stage, whatever hurts Dukakis helps Jackson, who embodies the most destructive — and self-destructive — traits of the Democratic party. Only the Massachusetts governor has the potential strength to defuse the Jackson threat before the national convention.

The longer Gore stays in, and the better he does, the greater Jackson's leverage will be in Atlanta, and the less likely the Democrats will be to capture the White House. Gore is now a spoiler, not a contender.

The problem with Jackson, as Gore knows, is not his race but his judgment and ideology. Nothing in Jackson's campaign suggests that he has grown beyond the man who shamefully exploited Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination for his own ambitions, who saluted Fidel Castro and Che Guevara, who used crude slurs against Jews and stood shoulder to shoulder with Louis Farrakhan. His economic vision, the centerpiece of his populist oratory, consists of roughly equal parts mythology and misinformation.

Putting Jackson on the ticket would mean disaster for the Democrats. As the presidential nominee, he'd be lucky to do as well as Walter Mondale or George McGovern, whose positions were far more moderate than Jackson's and who each carried just two states. A recent Time magazine poll found that 56 percent of whites say they definitely wouldn't vote for Jackson for president.

Some Democratic insiders fear that nominating Jackson for president would mean losing not just the White House, but the Senate too, and maybe the House of Representatives — for the first time since 1952. The result could be a permanent national realignment in favor of the GOP.

Even giving him the second spot on the ticket would almost certainly doom it: 45 percent of whites say they won't vote Democratic if Jackson is the vice president nominee.

Dukakis' triumph in Wisconsin eased fears of a Jackson upset. But the real test comes in New York. If Dukakis wins a solid victory there, it will be hard to deny him the nomination. But a victory isn't assured. Jackson got 26 percent of the vote in the 1984 primary, and he is bound to do better this time. He could win — if Gore takes enough votes away from Dukakis.

Gore could eliminate the risk by withdrawing. That would virtually assure a Dukakis triumph in New York, which would seal Jackson's defeat and minimize his influence at the convention. Nominating Dukakis won't necessarily lead to victory, but it would assure that the Democrats will do well enough to make the nomination worth something in 1992 or 1996 — when Gore stands a good chance of winning it.

The Democratic party is flirting with catastrophe. It's up to Al Gore to save it.

Just leave before it's too late

A letter from an abused wife was published in this space recently. Other abused women have followed with other letters.

I can't print them all. But I must print the following:

"For a week now I've carried a copy of your 'Abused Wife's Open Letter' column. Each time I read it, I felt more compelled to respond.

"For several years I was an abused wife. I was beaten, stomped, kicked, burned with cigarettes and stabbed.

"My husband threw me into a wall so hard that my head went through the panelling. The man was also a gun fanatic. His favorite game when he was drinking was his version of Russian roulette. His gun, my head.

"And always, the children watched. My daughter with tears in her eyes. My sons in silent desperation, little boys with clenched fists and gritted teeth.

"The psychological control this man exercised over me was tremendous. When I tried to leave, he followed and begged me to come back.

"And I always did. I falsely thought that if I loved him enough he would change. But he wouldn't change, and I will wear the scars this man put upon my body forever.

"Unfortunately it didn't stop there.

"On Jan. 21, 1985, my husband hit me for the last time. When I staggered from the blow, he reached for his pistol.

"One of my sons stopped him. My child picked up another gun and fired. The bullet did not kill my husband, but it paralyzed him.

"That child had watched his mother tortured for the last time. After three years of watching helplessly while his mom was degraded, he took matters into his own hands.

"My (now ex) husband will never stomp, kick or hit another woman.

"My nightmare didn't end there with my husband being shot. I found myself caught up in the judicial system.

"I was charged with aggravated assault and aggravated battery. I have been in prison for two years now.

"The man who thrived on my agony testified at my trial from his wheelchair. He said he had never hit me in his life. He cried. He looked pitiful, and I was convicted.

"I still believe our system will work, and I will be cleared. Last year the Georgia Appeals Court overturned my aggravated assault conviction. The aggravated battery charge is in front of the court now, and I'm presently being considered for parole.

"One day soon, I hope to be going home to begin rebuilding my life.

"My message is, seek help. If you are a woman, talk to your family doctor, a minister, a psychologist or a police officer.

"If you are a child and your mother is being abused, talk to your school counselor or minister or police.

"And just leave! Get away from the monster before it's too late."

The author of the letter is an inmate at the Georgia Women's Correctional Institute in Hardwick, Ga.

It's raining on renters — and owners!!

By SARAH OVERSTREET

If there is a heaven, we will all live in condos by the lake where the landlord fixes dripping faucets and a cheerful maid changes sheets, does the dishes and hands out advice to the lovelorn.

(I suspect these tasks will be done by those who didn't quite make it to heaven, but I'm not sure three years in the Methodist Youth Fellowship qualify me as an expert in theology.)

I have in the last two years been both a home-renter and a homeowner (why there is a hyphen in one of those nouns and not in another also escapes me, but four years as a junior-high English teacher doesn't exactly qualify me as a linguist, either). From where I sit right now, I don't know which is worse.

Where I'm sitting right now is a basement living area with a water problem. I own it, along with the peeling paint, the low water pressure (sometimes during a hot shower I think I could spit harder) and the roll-out windows that won't roll out. These are not exactly questions you think to ask when you're in the full bloom of house-hunting. What I'm supposed to go around rolling out the windows and turning on the faucets with the real estate agent standing there? I'm supposed to pitch a pup tent in the basement until the next rain to see if it's dry?

Last year, when I was living in someone else's House of Doom, I thought nothing could be worse. One beautiful summer day, I read my six-page lease so many times I could sing it to the tune of Camptown Races, but I still didn't foresee a spring spent putting plastic sheeting over my furniture as rain came through the leaky roof my landlord couldn't "get the financing" to fix. I signed it. It rained. I suffered. My landlord apologized, long-distance, from his home far away where it was warm and dry. It rained some more. I suffered. I bought more plastic sheeting.

Now I am the proud owner of a house that leaks from the bottom up. The most congenial, conscientious waterproof I could hire has been out four times, without complaining, and has not sent a bill yet. I'd say things could be worse, but I'm not writing this on a night when rain has sent water coursing across my floor, when I've spent all my TV-watching time putting down every towel in the house so the water doesn't get to the TV.

So I still don't know which is worse: homeownership, or weeks spent on the phone with an absent landlord. I've just logged a year as a consumer reporter for a television station, and I've heard landlord stories that make a little water on the rug sound like a receding headline on the Hunchback of Notre Dame. At least when I get all my problems past the crisis stage, I can sell the darn thing to someone else. Leases are harder to get out of.

Funny thing is, I've heard as many horror stories from homeowners as I've heard from home-renters. Some of them would prefer a cardboard box under a viaduct to signing on the dotted line again. They prefer the midnight call to the landlord. All I can say is they must have taken assertiveness classes and made A's in confrontation.

Oh, did I neglect to say I also served a five-year sentence as a landlord? Yes, one expensive April 15 my accountant sold me on the benefits of landlordship. I've lived through tenants leaving the heat off and bursting all the pipes, and the sneaking in of two large gray dogs that scratched off the molding and seven cats who tinkled down through the wall-to-wall carpeting to ruin the wood floor. One tenant vehemently denied her pet would ever deign to piddle indoors. As she spoke, the cursed Dachshund lay on its back, wagged its tail and weeweed on my foot.

In retrospect, I think I'll take owning the financed wreck. As least when I call in the middle of the night, I know the person on the other end gives a rip. And she doesn't own two giant dogs or any kitties.

Meese's second choice says find someone else

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III faces new problems rebuilding a Justice Department rocked by resignations now that his second choice for the No. 2 post has told him to find somebody else.

Meese is looking for a new nominee after former American Bar Association President John Shepherd told the attorney general's aides on Monday to begin searching for a new candidate, Justice Department sources say.

Meese told reporters Monday that he didn't expect to have a final decision from Shepherd until midweek.

But while department sources said Shepherd had not flatly withdrawn, they said he already had informed the department that he probably would do so. The sources, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said Shepherd asked that Meese aides begin looking for other candidates.

Meese's problems in filling the post of deputy attorney general, as well as the position of assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division, stem from the abrupt resignations March 30 of Arnold Burns and criminal division chief William Weld.

They quit out of concern that the nearly year-old criminal investigation of Meese is hurting Justice Department operations, morale and image.

A number of current and former U.S. attorneys have been approached about taking Weld's post, but all have turned it down, department sources have said.

Meese, who testified before a federal grand jury for four hours in the probe Monday, has refused to resign, predicting that he won't be indicted.

In an attempt to recover quickly from the resignations, Meese hurriedly announced the selection of Shepherd for the No. 2 position two weeks ago without customary White House clearance and FBI background checks. President Reagan still has not nominated Shepherd.

Shepherd, 62, a St. Louis attorney, told Meese last Friday that he was giving serious consideration to withdrawing because of stress on his family stemming from his selection.

A former bookkeeper from Shepherd's law firm testified shortly before Meese recommended him for the post that she had an affair with Shepherd. The bookkeeper, who was convicted of embezzlement, claimed Shepherd had told her to write checks to herself. Shepherd denied that he had an affair with her or that he had authorized her to write checks.

The trial testimony and Shepherd's membership in an all-white country club and an all-male social club brought increasing public scrutiny of Shepherd after Meese announced his selection April 5.

Meese's first choice to fill the post of deputy attorney general was former federal judge Arlin Adams, now a Philadelphia lawyer. Adams said he was unable to take the post because he had a heavy caseload and had gone to work at the law firm just last year. Adams said Meese's legal problems were not a major factor in his decision not to take the Justice Department position.

Meanwhile, Meese has gone outside the department in his attempt to fill Weld's old job at the head of the criminal division, other Justice Department sources said.

Stephen A. Saltzburg, a University of Virginia law professor, has been sounded out about possibility of taking the job, said the sources speaking on condition of anonymity.

Reached at his home, Saltzburg said he hadn't been offered the job, but would not comment when asked whether he had been approached about it.

Volatile New York contest ends today

NEW YORK (AP) — After a campaign described by Jesse Jackson as "so divisive and so violent," New Yorkers were voting today in a presidential primary that could anoint Michael Dukakis as the clear front-runner.

The New York vote also could spell the end for Sen. Albert Gore's presidential candidacy. Already deeply in debt, the Tennessee senator needs to show surprising strength to regain credibility as a candidate.

With strong support from the state's large black electorate, Jackson was hoping for an upset that would allow him to claim the status as front-runner.

Pollsters, while saying the Massachusetts governor had a lead of anywhere from 10 to 14 points, also were warning about the volatility of the race.

"We could all be wrong. New York is a killer," said ABC News pollster John Brennan.

Heading into the New York race, Jackson scored a win in Delaware's Democratic caucuses Monday night, beating Dukakis 45 percent to 27 percent. Gore had just 2 percent. But the Delaware contest was dwarfed by the big New York primary, with its prize of 255 Democratic delegates.

Untroubled by any doubts about his grasp on the Republican presidential nomination, Vice President George Bush was expected to sweep the 96 GOP delegates at stake today in New York.

For Dukakis, New York offered an opportunity to break away from his pursuers and finally establish himself as the front-runner as the race moves on to Pennsylvania next Tuesday and Ohio, Indiana and the District of Columbia the week after that.

The latest Associated Press delegate count gave Dukakis 877, Jackson 745, and Gore 417. A total of 2,082 was needed for a convention majority.

The New York campaign was marked by an emphasis on candidate views on the Middle East and by the long shadows of two non-candidates — Gov. Mario Cuomo and Mayor Edward Koch.

Turnout in today's polling was critical, and all three Democratic contenders spent the final hours of campaigning urging their supporters to go to the polls.

Gore campaigned with Koch, whose attacks on Jackson often got more attention than the sparring between the candidates.

During the campaign, the mayor said Jews and other supporters of Israel "would have to be crazy" to vote for Jackson. Koch also said the former civil rights activist lied under pressure and would lead the Democrats to their worst defeat since 1972, when Republican Richard M. Nixon carried 49 states.

Koch was asked repeatedly about his weekend comments criticizing Jackson. "I'm not saying he's a liar. I'm saying he can't stand stress, and then he lies under stress," he said.

Jackson tried to avoid being drawn into a running battle with Koch, but said at a news conference Monday that "we have received more death threats in this campaign than in all the other combined because the climate has been so divisive and so violent."

"The name-calling and the accusations and the attempts of a provocation by the mayor have not been good for the city or the campaign," Jackson said.

Cuomo, who praised all three contenders but endorsed none, said that Koch's tactic of "attacking Jesse Jackson's character" might boomerang. Cuomo said he felt Gore's chances had been hurt in New York because the Tennessee senator "has been obscured by negative smoke going up from attacks on others."

Pollsters said Jackson was a sure bet to receive massive support from black voters and that Jews were strongly backing Dukakis.

Panel: Permanent airline inspection needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government must step up its inspection of the nation's airlines if safety is to be maintained and establish a "permanent program of in-depth" examinations of air carriers, a presidential commission says.

The findings were released Monday amid the Federal Aviation Administration's detailed inspection effort aimed at two of the country's largest airlines — Continental and Eastern — and a broad review of safety among the country's commuter airlines.

The presidential panel called on the FAA to hire additional inspectors and resort more frequently to surprise inspections of airlines as well as giving priority to airlines that are undergoing major changes.

"These changes to the inspection program are critical to maintaining safety," said John Albertine, chairman of the President's Commission on Aviation Safety.

Last year the FAA had just over 2,000 inspectors, an increase of about 500 over the last five years, the commission said.

The panel released its report after a nine-month study of airline safety and recommended:

- The FAA be separated from the Transportation Department under an independent authority funded through aviation taxes.
- Creation of a top-ranking official in the new FAA who would assume the job of "aviation safety czar" and have broad regulatory powers.
- Safety requirements for commuter airlines be gradually tightened to put them on the same level as the major air carriers.
- Requiring small, private planes flying near "hub" airports to have equipment that tells controllers altitude information. The FAA already has proposed regulations that would require such equipment on an even broader scale.

The commission concluded that while commercial aviation remains safe, the government may lose its ability to keep the skies safe without "major structural overhaul" of the way the airline industry is regulated.

"The nation's air transportation system is safe, for now," said Albertine. "However, that safety is being maintained to an increasing extent through delays and through what I can only characterize as heroic efforts of air traffic controllers, airways facilities technicians, safety inspectors and other FAA personnel."

The commission rejected suggestions by some industry groups that the FAA be taken out of the government and be made a semi-private agency. It also said it was not in favor of spinning off air traffic control functions into a private function as has been suggested by Transportation Secretary James Burnley.

"The regulatory process must remain governmental in character and not be taken out of the federal government or removed from public accountability," said Albertine.

Initial reaction to the report was favorable, although both industry and congressional sources expressed skepticism that Congress would go along with creation of an "aviation safety czar."

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky.,

chairman of the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation subcommittee on aviation, said the commission's proposal to remove the agency from the Transportation Department is a "much-needed change."

Ford is sponsoring a bill that would make the FAA an independent agency, a proposal endorsed Monday by several industry organizations.

Gabriel Phillips, executive vice president of the Air Transport Association, which represents the nation's airlines, said reorganization of the FAA "is the only way to solve" personnel, purchasing and other problems.

John O'Brien, a safety official of the Air Line Pilots Association and John Thornton, national coordinator for the National Air Traffic Controllers Association, said the commission's findings are likely to give a boost to legislation calling for an independent FAA within the government.

On Olson's death, Robert Allen must prove mettle as chairman

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert E. Allen will have a chance Wednesday to convince AT&T's shareholders that the communications giant remains on track despite the death of Chairman James E. Olson.

Olson's death from cancer Monday at age 62 came just two days before the annual shareholders' meeting in Denver. It shocked the company, coming just one month after the vigorous, tough-talking executive was reported ill with flu.

Allen, 53, who will field questions at the annual meeting, is the president and chief operating officer of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and is serving as acting chairman.

Analysts say Allen was being groomed to succeed Olson as chairman, although no one expected the transition to come so quickly. He is the odds-on favorite to be named chairman by the board of directors, which might make a decision this week.

Like Olson, Allen rose in AT&T through the local telephone operating companies that once belonged to the Bell System. He also is a career AT&T executive. But in contrast to the blunt, gregarious Olson, Allen is described as quiet and thoughtful, though determined.

"He's a very bright and very direct kind of guy and very low-key. If you lived in a nice neighborhood, he'd be one of the nicer neighbors," said Peter Bernstein, senior analyst at Probe Research Inc. in Cedar Knolls, N.J.

Olson became AT&T chairman in September 1986, when the company still was adrift after the 1984 breakup of the Bell System. He cut costs, oversaw the painful cutting of 27,000 jobs and gave the company a sense of direction.

"Olson was the one guy who was hard-nosed enough that he would push and get his way, and drive people who may not feel the same pressure under the new chairman," said Fulton Holmes, an analyst for Thomson McKinnon Securities.

In contrast to Olson, whose first job with AT&T was cleaning salt out of manholes in North Dakota in 1943, Allen started in management at Indiana Bell upon graduation from Wabash College.

Allen worked his way up through Indiana Bell, Bell of Pennsylvania, Illinois Bell and the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Cos. He was slated to become a president in Philadelphia-based Bell Atlantic at the time of the AT&T breakup, but was called to serve as executive vice president and chief financial officer of AT&T in July 1983.

Allen took charge of corporate administration and finance in 1984 and was promoted to chairman and chief executive of AT&T Information Systems in 1985. He was named president and chief operating officer in 1986.

In a sign of Allen's standing, he shared the spotlight with Olson in the introduction to the company's latest annual report, which featured a question-and-answer session with the two.

"What he (Olson) forged together may start to slip apart a little bit," said Thomson McKinnon's Holmes.

But Jack Grubman, an analyst for PaineWebber Inc., said Allen is Olson's hand-picked successor. And he said, "Jim (Olson) is not the type of guy to groom someone if he did not feel that person would carry forward his plans."

On the New York Stock Exchange, AT&T stock fell 25 cents to 26.37 1/2 on Monday.

Allen and his wife, Elizabeth, have five children and live in Short Hills, N.J., Olson's hometown.

Court: Demjanjuk killed people with his hands

JERUSALEM (AP) — One of three Israeli judges who convicted John Demjanjuk of Nazi war crimes said the death camp guard killed many people with his own hands and often exceeded the atrocities ordered by his superiors.

"He took part in the murders ... and did so willingly, enthusiastically," Judge Dov Levine said of the former Ohio autoworker during the 12-hour reading of the 450-page judgment Monday.

Applause broke out in the courtroom when the court ruled that Demjanjuk was "Ivan the Terrible," a guard who operated gas chambers that killed 850,000 Jews at the Treblinka death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland in 1942 and 1943.

The three-judge court convicted Demjanjuk of war crimes, crimes against the Jewish people, crimes against humanity and crimes against persecuted people. Demjanjuk, 68, will be sentenced April 25 and could receive the death penalty.

He was the second person to be convicted of Nazi war crimes in Israel. Adolf Eichmann, architect of the Holocaust, was convicted and hanged in 1962.

"I'm an innocent man. I will appeal and I'm sure I'll win," Demjanjuk told reporters as he walked slowly from the courthouse to a police van, his head bowed and his arms clasped.

Demjanjuk maintained his innocence through the 14-month trial, saying he was a victim of mistaken identity.

Demjanjuk's lawyers and relatives accused the judges of bias.

"As far as I'm concerned, this was nothing more than a Soviet show trial," said Demjanjuk's son, John Jr. 22.

Holocaust survivor Eliyahu Rosenberg hugged a prosecution assistant after the verdict and exclaimed, "I feel better now," said the assistant, who would not give his name. Rosenberg was one of five Treblinka survivors who identified Demjanjuk.

In the judgment, Levine said Demjanjuk wasn't an ordinary guard, but "fulfilled a central position" at Treblinka. "With his own hands, he took part in the murders of masses of human beings ... showing initiative beyond what his superiors demanded of him," Levine said.

Treblinka survivors have said "Ivan" would stand near gas chambers and strike prisoners with a metal bar or bayonet as they went to their deaths.

Survivor Pinchas Epstein was helped from the courtroom in tears after judges quoting from his testimony said Ivan "would gloat at the crushed faces, the blood flowing after he brutalized people."

Levine said the court gave great weight to the testimony of the five survivors and rejected defense claims that the witnesses were unreliable and suffered memory lapses.

The court also rejected the defense claim that the Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk was a German prisoner of war in 1942 and 1943.

The judges upheld a key piece of prosecution evidence, Demjanjuk's alleged Nazi identity card, which the Soviet Union supplied.

Defense attorneys said the card is a Soviet forgery to punish Demjanjuk for fighting in an anti-communist unit the Nazis formed at the end of World War II.

Defense attorney John Gill called the trial unfair.

"My God in heaven, according to those judges we didn't do anything right," Gill told The Associated Press. "They ruled against us on every single point, no matter how big or small. Justice was not done."

Jewish leaders praised the verdict. Rabbi Marvin Hier, dean of the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles, said in a statement distributed in Jerusalem:

"There is a bitter sense of irony in that this death camp guard determined to kill off any trace of Jewish life ... must now end his life in the Jewish state, watching from the window the interrupted growth of Jewish civilization."

The trial began Feb. 16, 1987, a year after Demjanjuk was extradited to Israel from suburban Cleveland. He was stripped of his U.S. citizenship for lying on his immigration application.

Two more Arabs killed despite tough Israeli army restrictions

JERUSALEM (AP) — Soldiers fired tear gas to disperse 300 mourners who shouted anti-Israeli slogans at a funeral for a woman who reportedly was killed while trying to shield her children from a clash in the Gaza Strip.

The 30-year-old mother of six, Aidah Othman Totah, was one of two Arabs killed in clashes in Gaza on Monday. Elsewhere, army curfews and strikes to protest the killing of a PLO leader paralyzed the occupied lands.

At least 167 Palestinians have been slain since riots began Dec. 8 in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war. An Israeli soldier and civilian also have been killed.

In the West Bank city of Nablus, the Israeli-appointed mayor on Monday told the army he planned to resign because of pressure from Palestinian activists, Israeli radio and Arab sources said.

Also Monday, Israel ordered the closure of Al Awdah, Jerusalem's only English-language magazine owned by Palestinians, alleging it is financed and directed by terrorist organizations. The magazine was given until May 1 to appeal, said managing editor Elias Zananiri, who denied the allegation.

In Jerusalem, Hebrew University authorities summoned police on Monday to break up a fistfight between Jewish and Israeli Arab students. The scuffle began after Arab students tried to hold a memorial service for Khalil al-Wazir, the second-in-command of PLO chief Yasser Arafat.

Al-Wazir, also known as Abu Jihad (Father of the Holy War), was gunned down by assassins on Saturday at his home in a Tunis, Tunisia suburb. Tunisian investigators said on Monday that he was killed by Israeli commandos.

Israeli sources have charged the assassination was the work of the intelligence service Mossad, the navy and an elite commando unit. Government officials have refused to comment on the reports.

News of al-Wazir's death led to riots in the West Bank and Gaza on Saturday in which 17 Palestinians were killed and more than 100 wounded. It was the bloodiest day in the territories since the rebellion began.

In Gaza City, Mrs. Totah was shot to death as she tried to gather her children indoors because Israeli soldiers and Arab youths were fighting nearby, the woman's mother-in-law said.

"We heard screams outside," Aridah Nimer Dib, 65, told The Associated Press. "We saw soldiers beating one of the kids ... I heard some shooting and told Aidah 'Let's go inside the house and take the kids with us.'"

Mrs. Totah managed to bring in three of her children before she was shot.

The woman was later buried at a funeral attended by about 300 mourners shouting, "Stones are as strong as guns!" Arab witnesses said. Soldiers dispersed them with tear gas.

The army denied responsibility for her death. A military spokesman said soldiers had not fired live ammunition in the area.

In Rafah, at the southern tip of the Gaza Strip, Israeli troops on Monday killed a 20-year-old Palestinian after stone-throwing protesters attacked them, an army spokesman said on condition of anonymity.

More than 6 million hit by blackout

MONTREAL (AP) — Officials restored power to most of Quebec today after an outage affected its 6 million residents and extended to parts of New Brunswick province and scattered areas of Maine and Vermont, a utility spokesman said.

In Montreal, the outage trapped thousands of people in subways, prompted looting and delayed a National Hockey League playoff game.

Hydro Quebec, the provincial power utility, said it was not known what caused the blackout, which began at 8:09 p.m. EDT.

Jean-Guy Ouinet, a Hydro Quebec spokesman, said in a telephone interview today that power was restored to most of the 6 million residents of Quebec customers about six hours after the blackout started. Ouinet said he did not know how many people were affected outside the province.

The blackout terminated television coverage of the Adams Division final hockey game between the Montreal Canadiens and the Boston Bruins. The game at the Montreal Forum was interrupted in the first period but then continued with the use of emergency lights. Montreal won 5-2.

A Hydro Quebec spokesman, Jean-Guy Ouimet, said the breakdown began on a power line between Churchill Falls, Labrador, and the Arnaud generating station near Sept-Îles, Quebec. Power was being restored slowly.

In downtown Montreal, looters smashed windows at a few stores, but police Sgt. Alain Bousquet said looting was not widespread. There were no arrests and no deaths immediately attributed to the blackout.

Only black faculty member rehired

CRANE (AP) — Members of the Crane school board have voted to renew the contract of the only black faculty member at Crane High School.

But Marian Bennett, 34, says she is still considering legal action against some board members despite Monday night's action to renew her contract.

The school board had singled her out for individual review last week when the school automatically renewed all other teaching contracts.

School Board President Charles Barrett called a meeting for Monday to vote on the matter again.

The board voted 5-2 to keep Bennett as a study skills teacher and 4-3 to keep her as a coach, Barrett said. He would not name the board members who voted against Bennett.

Bennett could not be reached Monday night. Her telephone was busy for more than three hours after the meeting, the El Paso Times reported.

Bennett told reporter Vanessa Tatum of KMID-TV in Midland that although it would be hard for her to stay in Crane after recently receiving threatening phone calls, she would fulfill the one-year contract.

She said she was working with an adviser from the Texas State Teachers Association to consider what legal action, if any, to take.

The teacher said her decision to complete the new contract was made in part because of all the support she had received from teachers, parents and students.

More than 100 people from the community of 3,000 about 30 miles south of Odessa showed up at the meeting to support Bennett.

The contract was renewed without discussion by the board and when members of the audience attempted to question board members, Barrett said discussion of the problem was not on the board's agenda.

Barrett said discussion of the problem was not on the agenda. But people went to the microphone anyway. Most of those who spoke told the board they would not stand for racial discrimination by the board.

Board member Bill Harkins, who had asked that Bennett's contract be considered individually, refused to answer questions after the meeting.

But when pressed, Harkins told reporters it involved a personality conflict.

Pressed further and asked to clarify that it was a personal rather than professional problem that prompted him to single out Bennett, Harkins said, "I would rather not answer that question."

Bennett told the El Paso Times in a telephone interview Sunday that she received anonymous phone calls Saturday night by a man and two women, who urged her to get out of Crane.

Supreme Court leaves intact key regulation on natural gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday left intact a key federal regulation designed to foster competition within the natural gas industry.

The justices, without comment, rejected appeals by pipeline companies that claim the rule places them in an unfair economic bind.

The justices also refused to hear arguments by natural gas producers who support giving federal officials broader power to regulate the pipelines.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission adopted sweeping new regulations in 1985 to change the way the natural gas industry operates.

The key change — called the open-access rule — is aimed at giving consumers the benefits of competition among natural gas suppliers.

The rule requires pipeline companies, under certain conditions, to transport gas sold by other producers and traders. Thus, the pipeline companies would carry gas that is in competition with their own supplies.

The commission adopted the rule to end what it said was a practice that unnecessarily inflates the price of some gas supplies.

Potentially billions of dollars in proceeds from gas sales are at stake in the dispute.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here substantially upheld the commission's new regulations last year, stating that the pipeline companies apparently were trying to stifle competition.

"Their attack on the (commission rule) is precisely that it may disable them from passing on to customers gas purchase costs that they incur under contracts entered into years ago under premises now obsolete," the appeals court said. "In other words, enforcement (of the rule) will expose them to competition that their discriminatory practices enable them to avoid."

The commission said the pipelines had been practicing unfair discrimination by generally declining to transport gas in competition with their own sales, thus denying consumers access to gas at the lowest reasonable rates.

The commission said the problem was aggravated by the phasing out of price controls in recent years.

In the appeal acted on today, the pipeline companies said the open-access rule is causing a dramatic decline in gas sales and a drop in drilling for gas reserves. The regulation "has raised questions as to the security of the nation's gas supply and has threatened the financial and operational base of the pipeline industry," the companies said.

The appeals court here stopped short of upholding all of the commission's 1985 regulations.

The appeals court ordered the commission to come up with an adequate explanation of its decision not to amend so-called take-or-pay provisions in gas supply contracts.

A take-or-pay provision requires a pipeline to pay a producer for some specified percentage of deliverable gas, for example 75 percent, even if the pipeline took less.

The pipeline companies say such provisions became particularly onerous by committing them to high gas costs in what by 1982 became a time of falling prices.

Four die in North Florida tornado

MADISON, Fla. (AP) — A tornado blasted through this North Florida city before dawn today, destroying homes and a library, blowing off rooftops, flipping cars and leaving at least four people dead and 12 injured, officials said.

The tornado touched down at 4:30 a.m. just west of Madison, about 50 miles east of Tallahassee, and cut a 12-mile swath of destruction, authorities said.

At least four people were killed north of town and at least a dozen people with injuries were at Madison Memorial Hospital, said Madison County Sheriff Joe Peavy.

"I've been here 32 years and I've never seen anything like this," Peavy said. "This is the first tornado that has hit Madison that I can recall."

The twister blew several homes away, destroyed the library, took the roofs off the auditorium at North Florida Junior College and a nearby church, damaged a shopping center, overturned cars and knocked down trees, Peavy said.

By early morning, power was still out all over Madison, Peavy said.

Court leaves intact leukemia case award

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday left intact a $2.08 million award to the family of a Texas cowboy who died of leukemia after a medicine for cattle and horses seeped into his cuts and bruises.

The court, without comment, rejected an appeal by the medicine manufacturer ordered to pay the damages.

Clois Osburn, who worked as a cowboy in the Texas panhandle, began in 1982 to administer to sick calves an antibiotic drug called veterinary chloramphenicol.

Osburn would pour the drug from its original bottle into another bottle that had a rubber lid into which a needle could be inserted.

He said the medicine frequently leaked from the rubber-topped container and got into scratches and cuts on his arm.

Osburn was 42 when he was diagnosed in February 1984 as having leukemia. He died in July 1987.

Osburn and his wife, Anita, sued Anchor Laboratories Inc. and Rachelle Laboratories Inc., manufacturers of the drug. They said the companies failed to warn users of the medicine's dangers, and that such a failure violated a Texas law protecting against personal injuries.

Anchor Labs agreed to a settlement, paying the Osburns $225,000. A federal jury awarded the Osburns $2.5 million against Rachelle Labs, a sum later reduced to $2.08 million by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Rachelle Labs said the verdict is unfair because its warning label on the drug was approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration.

The company said it could not comply with the FDA labeling regulations and at the same time use a label that would fulfill its obligations to comply with Texas law.

But the 5th Circuit court said the FDA regulations "did not prevent Rachelle from adding to its label warnings of the dangers of fatal blood diseases associated with exposure to chloramphenicol."

The appeals court also said there had been enough evidence for the jury to decide that Osburn's leukemia was caused by the drug.

The case is Rachelle Laboratories vs. Anita Osburn, 87-1496.

Relax, take a walk — is 97-year-old's advice

By RICK SMITH
Sherman Democrat

SHERMAN (AP) — Willie Whibbey takes care of himself.

Patiently, he urges an old wire shopping cart over a railroad crossing as if he were driving a stubborn mule.

"Come on, now, come on," he mutters, working the worn rubber wheels over the track.

A wheel hangs on a steel rail.

He gives the troublesome wheel a dead-solid kick with his big brown boot.

The cart springs free.

"Can't be stopping to rest on railroad tracks," he explains.

Willie Whibbey, 97, may be Sherman's oldest regular walker.

At least twice a week — sometimes more — he walks the four blocks from his Music Street home to Reid's Grocery on Brockett.

"I've been here six years, and he's been coming at least that long," said Kathy Williamson, store manager.

More like 16 years, Whibbey said.

"I do lots of walking. Something I run out of, I just walk down and get it."

He shops for a neighbor, too. Never uses a list. Whibbey's memory is as good as his legs. Eggs, bacon, butter. He thoughtfully pushes his cart — always clockwise — around the small market.

Pays for his purchases from a worn leather billfold that's chained to his belt.

Pushes the stained brown fedora down low over his forehead as he leaves the store, points the shopping cart west on Brockett.

Willie Whibbey can quote you his life, every chapter and verse.

Want the names of every man he has ever worked for as a farmer and concrete mason and oil mill hand? They're right here, under the brown fedora: Blackie Campbell, Charlie Miller, fellow by the name of McDonald. The list goes on and on.

Want dates and places? He was born in Sherman

97 years ago on an August 21. Moved to Oklahoma in 1919. Moved back to Texas in 1940.

"No, wait a minute," Whibbey says, braking the basket, pausing in mid-step to think.

"No, I want to get this right. It was 1945."

Now the Test. Listen to Whibbey run through the list of his 13 children in one long breath: "Let's see, there's Minnie Whibbey; Willie Mae Boyd, deceased; Willie Pat Whibbey, deceased; A.C. Whibbey, deceased; Ernestine Kemp, deceased; Donnie McDonald; Ola Mae Jordan; Beatrice Johnson, deceased; B.C. Whibbey; Martha Pete; Archie Whibbey; Fannie Lee Love and Jessie Lee Whibbey; deceased."

And, oh yes, 48 grandchildren, 81 great-grandchildren and 48 great-great-grandchildren.

A granddaughter who lives in Sherman and a daughter in Colbert, Okla. keep close tabs on him.

He visits the rest regularly.

Willie Whibbey turns suddenly stern and serious when a young neighbor gently joshes him about his age.

"Mr. Willie, when I get to be your age..." the young man begins.

"You won't live this long," Whibbey says, cutting him off.

"You young guys, you don't take care of yourselves. You stay up too late. Drink too much whiskey. Run around too much. Live too fast."

"You want to live? You got to take care of yourself, man."

Willie Whibbey drops off a brown paper sack full of groceries at a neighbor's on Pacific, then rounds the corner and parks his rusty shopping cart under a tree.

Two cats — Mother and Daughter he calls them — wander up to brush the legs of his old pin-striped suit.

Whibbey lives alone in a small place, a ramshackle house piled up with the leftovers of life: carpet scraps and banged up buckets, wormy scrap lumber and old leather straps, bottles and jars and on and on.

He doesn't have much. That doesn't worry him.

Hussein, Mota capture Boston Marathon titles

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON — They began running in the scenic countryside west of Boston. They found themselves, 26 miles and 385 yards later, a single stride apart amid the city's skyscrapers.

Just 100 yards from the end of their punishing journey through eight cities and towns, Ibrahim Hussein and Juma Ikangaa were close enough to touch each other. The two East Africans were so close that both thought they could win.

But more than two hours after he began the Boston Marathon on a rainy Monday, Hussein took off down the stretch, a long-distance survivor with the kick of a sprinter.

Under a gloomy sky, Hussein fashioned one of the most sparkling finishes in the 92 Boston Marathons starting with the first running in 1897, when John J. McDermott won by 6 minutes, 52 seconds.

Hussein won by one second.

"I like to make history," said Hussein, who bolted past Ikangaa with 100 yards left. "It's great to be the first African to win the Boston Marathon."

The native of Kenya made history in another way. His margin of victory was the smallest ever in Boston, surpassing the two-second victories of Bill Rodgers over Jeff Wells in 1978 and Alberto Salazar over Dick Beardsley in 1982.

"I wanted to concentrate on relaxing and letting Ikangaa do the work" by setting the pace until it was time to pull ahead, Hussein said.

"I thought that I had won the race" until Hussein whizzed past his right shoulder, and then "It was impossible (to catch up) because it was too late," Ikangaa said.

Although Hussein had won his three previous marathons, skeptics questioned his ability. He had never run in a top-flight field like Boston's and he had never run a marathon faster than 2 hours, 11 minutes, 1 second.

On Monday, he won in 2:08:43, the second fastest time in Boston to Rob de Castella's 2:07:51 in 1986. He was within two minutes of the world record of 2:06:50 set by Ethiopia's Belayneh Dinsamo in Sunday's Rotterdam Marathon.

Thousands of runners leave the starting line at the Boston Marathon.

Rangers bow to Red Sox

BOSTON (AP) — A strange thing happened to Lee Smith en route to his first American League victory.

The big right-hander was all set to accept congratulations on his fifth save for the Boston Red Sox.

But catcher Rick Cerone, a 13-year veteran making just his second start for Boston, let a pitch get by him for a passed ball with two out in the ninth inning.

Instead of being within one strike of a save against Texas, Smith found himself in a tie game with the Rangers Monday.

The Red Sox rebounded quickly, though, taking Cerone off the hook on a walk, a double by Jim Rice and a sacrifice fly by Mike Greenwell in their half of the ninth, edging the Rangers 4-3 while completing a 5-2 home stand.

"On the way into the clubhouse, Rick said to me, 'Thanks for picking me up,'" Rice said. "He felt bad about what happened, but we won the game and that's all that counts."

With runners on first and third and the count 1-2 on Larry Parrish with two out in the Texas ninth, Smith's pitch glanced off Cerone's glove for a passed ball, permitting Scott Fletcher to score. Parrish then struck out to end the inning.

Mitch Williams, 0-1, became the third Texas pitcher in the last of the ninth. Wade Boggs walked on a 3-2 pitch to start the inning and Rice followed by lining a 3-1 pitch into the left-field corner for a double. Greenwell then hit a sacrifice fly to center, scoring Boggs.

The passed ball also cost unbeaten Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd his third victory. Boyd allowed only three hits in seven innings, but two were Pete O'Brien's third and fourth homers of the season.

"Naturally, it's a disappointment not to get a win, but that's the way it goes," Boyd said. "That's part of the game."

"In the past, I might've been a little more high strung about not getting the win. Now I just think of going out there and doing what I want to do."

Smith, acquired from the Chicago Cubs in a surprising deal last December, shrugged off the victory, happy that the team had bounced back from two losses to Texas to take the third and fourth game of the series.

"It's nice to win a couple of games right before you go out on the road," Smith said. "It puts you in a good frame of mind for the trip."

Before the passed ball, Smith had struck out O'Brien for the second out of the inning. That brought up Parrish, who is gripped in a nightmarish slump with just three hits in 35 times at bat this year.

"We have to start hitting better," Texas Manager Bobby Valentine said. "We haven't had a lot of base runners and we just can't afford to leave them on base."

Ellis Burks triggered a three-run first inning with a leadoff homer and the Red Sox made the lead stand up until the passed ball.

"The runner (Steve Kemp) on first broke for second, but there are no excuses," Cerone said. "It was a stupid thing. I catch that pitch 99 times out of 100. The pitch kind of took off on me, but you catch balls with one eye on the runner and one on the ball. I'm just glad it didn't cost us the ball game."

"As a free-swinger, I was just looking for a pitch I could drive and I got it," Rice said of his big hit. "Once I got ahead of him 3-0, I was able to sit and wait on him."

Baseball challenge is May 8

A baseball challenge, sponsored by the Pampa High School baseball program, will be held Sunday, May 8 at Harvester Field.

Events consist of hitting, bunting, fielding, throwing and pitching for 11 different age groups, starting with the eight-year-old level on up. There will be a men's division for persons 18 and older.

Pre-registration cost is $3. Starting time is 1 p.m. and the entry fee is $5 on the day of the competition. Interested persons can register at any home varsity game or by calling Rod Porter at 669-7122 or Steve Porter at 669-9347.

Participants must supply their own glove and bat, but baseballs and batting helmets will be provided.

Trophies will be awarded in each age group.

Proceeds will be used to buy equipment for the high school baseball program.

Harvesters' game moved to Thursday

Pampa's District 1-4A baseball today with Canyon has been moved to Thursday because of wet grounds.

Gametime is 4:30 p.m. at Harvester Field.

The Harvesters have won their last two games, raising their record to 9-8.

"We've got some tough ballgames ahead, but four of our last six games are at home," said Pampa coach Rod Porter. "We're starting to turn the corners in a lot of things and laying some good foundation for the years to come."

Porter pointed out that the Harvesters are ahead of last year's pace.

"Last year, the Harvesters won only nine games with 13 seniors on the team. This year, with very little experience on the team, we've already won nine," Porter said.

James Bybee or James Ward would probably start on the mound against Canyon, Porter said.

1-4A standings
(overall record in brackets)

Hereford 9-1 (16-1)	Dumas 4-5 (7-9)
Dunbar 7-3 (12-8)	Pampa 4-6 (9-8)
Canyon 6-3 (11-7)	Borger 2-8 (7-13)
Estacado 6-4 (11-8)	Frenship 1-8 (1-9)
Levelland 5-5 (8-11)

Canadian tracksters qualify for regionals

WELLINGTON — The Canadian Wildcats have qualified four individuals for the Class 2A regional track meet. Scott Walker qualified in two events for the Wildcats, placing second in both the 110 hurdles (15.09) and the 300 hurdles (41.57) at the District 2-2A meet last weekend in Wellington.

Brandon Wheeler won the discus with a 141-4½ heave and Tony Meraz came in first in the 1600 (4:51.42).

Randy Heinze won the 800 with a time of 2:06.38. Wellington won the team title with 139½ points while Canadian came in second with 108½.

In the girls' division, Canadian qualified three individuals and the mile relay team for regionals.

Kim McIntire claimed victory in the 800 with a time of 2:21.84. Kristi Sparks came in second in the high jump (4-10) and Kari Burns placed second in the 400 (62.36).

The mile relay team of Burns, McIntire, Sonja Hoggatt and Kim Bivins came in first with a time of 4:14.66.

The top two individuals in each event advance to regionals.

Canadian girls came in fourth in the team standings with 86 points. Clarendon compiled 150 points to win the meet.

Giants win over Reds in extra innings

CINCINNATI (AP) — As he sat on the San Francisco bench and watched Cincinnati reliever John Franco warm up, Giants reliever Craig Lefferts made a private challenge.

"I said to myself, 'OK, it's you and me. Whoever is going to be the best is going to win tonight,'" Lefferts said.

Franco was more efficient, but Lefferts came out the winner in the Giants' 6-3 12-inning victory Monday night over the Reds.

Lefferts, 1-0, allowed two hits and two walks in three innings during his first appearance in a week. He pitched out of trouble in the 11th, getting Bo Diaz to ground out with runners on first and third.

That was the turning point, as it turned out. Although Franco pitched two perfect innings, fanning three, his successor, Pat Perry, quickly fell into trouble.

Perry, 1-2, gave up a lead-off single in the 12th to Jose Uribe and threw a wild pitch to let him take second. After Mike Aldrete popped out, Brett Butler hit a grounder that confused second baseman Jeff Treadway, who started the wrong way and couldn't recover in time to make the play as Uribe took third.

Kevin Mitchell then snapped a 3-3 tie with a sacrifice fly. Will Clark doubled home Butler and Jeff Leonard completed the rally with an RBI single.

Joe Price retired three of the four batters he faced in the bottom of the 12th to get his first save and end a 4-hour, 2-minute game in which the Reds had 11 hits, stole seven bases and stranded 16 runners.

"You've got to keep grinding at them, keep battling them," Giants manager Roger Craig said. "The difference was our relief pitching was better than theirs."

The Giants also were able to convert opportunities when they had them, something the Reds failed to do throughout the game.

"We got good enough relief pitching to win the game," Reds manager Pete Rose said. "You've just got to bear down a little harder and make things happen in games like this."

The Reds were 7-for-7 in stolen base attempts, including Eric Davis' three steals. But Cincinnati stranded eight runners in scoring position, four of them on third base, to fall to 2-3 in extra-inning games this season.

Lefferts said the key was not to get unsettled by the Reds' speed on the bases.

Tanya Lidy signs with Cornhuskers

Record-setting senior Tanya Lidy of Pampa has signed a letter of intent to attend the University of Nebraska on a track scholarship.

Lidy, who has won the 200-meter dash her last two trips to the Class 4A state meet, had received hundreds of offers, before narrowing her final two choices to Nebraska and the University of Oklahoma.

Lidy had visited the two Big Eight schools in addition to Houston, Texas and Texas A&M.

"Nebraska has one of the top women's track teams in the nation. She made a good choice," said Pampa coach Gary Cornelsen.

Nebraska has won eight straight Big Eight Conference championships and six tracksters have qualified for the U.S. Olympic track tryouts.

Lidy, who qualified for the maximum five events at last year's state meet, long

Practice self-control to avoid abusing your children

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

This is a story for parents who have or are preparing for small children:

Remember the peddler in the story "Caps For Sale," whose caps are stolen by mischievous monkeys? When he wakes, the monkeys have climbed a tree, refusing to return the caps.

The angry peddler shakes his fingers at the monkeys, but they only shake theirs back. He stamps his feet and they stamp theirs.

In disgust, the peddler throws his only cap down into the dirt. To his surprise, the monkeys throw down their caps too!

Disciplining a child can be more successful by remembering that they, like monkeys, learn by imitating our behavior. Dr. Morris Massey, a leading psychologist and sociologist, points out that between ages 0 and 7 a child is in the imprinting or observing stage of value development. Children observe adults during this time to determine what is appropriate adult behavior.

These observations are programmed into a child's system of values, which affect the way we act all our life. The National Association for the Education of Young Children emphasizes the need for self-control by adults working with children.

April is Child Abuse Prevention Month and a time for all of us to reflect on how we might eliminate this problem. According to the Children's Trust Fund of Texas, over 75,000 Texas children were abused or neglected last year. That's more than it would take to fill the Cotton Bowl! And those were just reported cases. All of us have a stake in preventing the needless tragedy of child abuse. Often, abused children grow up to become abusive youths and adults, continuing a pattern of violence that can touch anyone.

Help a child feel secure by setting a good example. Selfishness is common in toddlers, and forced sharing only promotes more selfish behavior. A child who has things taken from him learns to take from others, and mistrusts his world. Be generous. Building self-control in a child also involves teaching confidence. Allowing a child to choose between two options, such as a pear or a banana for a snack, instills pride. The goal in child discipline is not to just stop bad behavior, but to teach the value of rules and self-worth.

Homemakers' News

Donna Brauchi

We must recognize that under certain circumstances almost any parent is capable of physical or emotionally harming his or her child. Again, the answer is self-control.

You don't have to lift a hand to hurt your child. Words hit as hard as a fist. The National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse offers some alternatives for parents who want to avoid lashing out at their children.

- Put your hands over your mouth. Count to 10. Or better yet, 20.
- Stop in your tracks. Press your lips together and breathe deeply.
- Phone a friend.
- Phone the time or weather.
- Say the alphabet out loud.
- If someone can watch the children, go outside and take a leisurely walk.

- Take a hot bath or splash cold water on your face.
  - Pick up a pencil and write down your thoughts.
  - Close your eyes and imagine you're hearing what your child hears.
  - Turn on the radio or TV.
  - Hug a pillow.
  - Write for prevention information: National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse, Box 2866, Chicago, Illinois 60690.
- The key is to take time out. Don't take it out on your kid. For more information on child development and guidance, contact your Gray County Extension Service.

ing with their lawn or turf. His presentation will cover such items as weed control, watering, fertilizing and mowing.

As the "grass" season is upon us, this is an excellent opportunity to brush up on how to properly manage and take care of grass this growing season.

GROWING VEGETABLES WITH FEW PESTICIDES
Many people prefer to grow vegetables by using as few pesticides as possible.

In Texas, it is almost impossible to grow vegetables without pesticides unless one uses unusual methods of protecting them from weeds and pests.

The hoe is the most common tool used for weed control, but this is time consuming and one of the less enjoyable gardening tasks.

Due to costs of preventing weeds with pesticides, commercial vegetable farmers have already adapted ground mats to place over the seedbed or transplant row.

These mats, or weed barriers, prevent weeds, conserve moisture, stop compaction due to cultivation and can change soil temperature by making it warmer or cooler. Dark mats make the soil warmer, while lighter mats make the soil cooler.

These weed barriers are now available to home gardeners from local nurseries and garden centers.

The mats come in various sizes, such as 3 feet wide and 25 feet long. The mats allow air and water to enter the ground and the proper gas exchange to take place from the roots to the plant.

By using weed barriers, a person can come close to organic gardening.

Some foods, prescription drugs don't mix

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you published a list of foods that people who are taking certain prescription drugs should avoid. At the time I was perfectly healthy, so I paid no attention to it. However, now my husband is taking three different prescribed drugs, and I am taking two, and it occurs to me that there may be certain foods in our regular diet that could change the action of the drugs we are taking.

Abby, you would be doing all of your readers, especially the senior citizens, a big favor if you reprint that information.

DEAR L.J.L.: Here it is: The Food and Drug Administration, in cooperation with the National Council on Patient Information and Education, has embarked on a program to inform and educate people about the medications they use.

Most people are unaware that there can be an interaction between the prescribed drugs they are taking and certain

Dear Abby

foods they eat. This interaction can cause some drugs to work faster or slower, or to become totally ineffective.

For example, people who are taking certain prescribed drugs for severe depression or high blood pressure should avoid aged cheese, Chianti wine, pickled herring, yogurt, chicken liver, bananas, avocados, sour cream, and all foods prepared with meat tenderizers.

Persons taking anti-coagulants (blood thinners) should avoid liver and large amounts of leafy vegetables because the vitamin K in those foods tends to promote blood clotting.

People on thyroid medication should avoid brussels sprouts, turnips, cabbage, soybeans and kale.

Dairy products should not be eaten by a person who is taking a specific kind of antibiotic.

Alcohol and even aspirin should not be combined with certain other drugs. Mixing alcohol with a high dosage of Valium or Darvon can be fatal.

The next time you are given a prescription, don't hesitate to ask your physician, or your pharmacist, the following questions:

1. What is the name of the drug, and what is it supposed to do? (Write it down so you won't forget.)
2. When do I take it, and for how long? (Does "three times a day" mean morning, noon and night? Should it be taken before meals, with meals or after meals? If the instructions say "every four hours," should I get up during the night to take it? Should I keep taking it until it's all gone?)

3. Are there any foods, beverages, medications or activities I should avoid while taking this drug? (Is alcohol allowed? How about aspirin and antacids? Please be aware that there is alcohol in beer, liquor and wine.)

4. Are there any side effects? And what should I do if they do occur?

5. Is there any written information you can give me about the drug?

6. Is there an approved generic version of this drug? Readers, for a free brochure about prescription drugs, write to: RX Drugs, Consumer Information Center, Department DA, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Talks begin

Chrysler Motors Chairman Gerald Greenwald, right, and the company's top negotiator, Anthony St. John, sit across the bargaining table from the United Auto Workers negotiating team Monday morning as the two sides opened contract talks at Chrysler headquarters in Highland Park, Mich.

Inspections of Continental Airlines aircraft begins

HOUSTON (AP) — As inspectors fanned out to inspect all the aircraft flown by Continental and Eastern airlines, federal aviation officials denied they were picking on parent Texas Air Corp.

"We're not out on a witch hunt," T. Allan McArthur, administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, said Monday in Washington. "We're trying to provide confidence both to ourselves and Texas Air and the public."

Late Monday afternoon, FAA officials could not provide a figure for the number of Continental planes checked. As of Sunday, about 200 of Eastern's 267 aircraft had been inspected, and 19 of them temporarily grounded.

Last Wednesday, the FAA announced it would inspect all Eastern's aircraft as part of an investigation into Texas Air to see whether the parent company's management was "fit, willing and able" to fly.

On Sunday, during an appearance on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," Transportation Secretary James Burnley announced an expansion of the probe to include Continental.

No significant inspection-related flight delays were reported Monday in the 351-plane Continental system, said company spokesman Bruce Hicks. And in Miami, Eastern spokeswoman Karen Cerniak said she had not heard of any major problems with that carrier.

Burnley said the Continental and Eastern inspections would be very similar.

"We'll have people who'll be walking around the planes and through them and talking to the maintenance personnel and the folks in the cockpit and making sure that anything that can be readily identified is correct," Burnley said.

Also on Monday, about $1.3 billion of Texas Air and Continental Airlines debt was put on credit-watch by analysts because of recent financial losses and the Transportation Department investigation, among other things.

Texas Air had record losses of $466 million last year, including $241 million at Eastern. Texas Air Chairman Frank Lorenzo has been seeking major cost concessions from Eastern's unions, but the unions so far have resisted.

Lorenzo said on "Meet The Press" that the company has been trying to adjust to the marketplace rigors of deregulation, and has said Eastern's unions are "out just to tear the airline down."

He said Continental would cooperate with the inspection, just as Eastern has done.

Standard & Poor's placed Texas Air and Continental Airlines debt on its special creditwatch Monday. Standard & Poor's said financial losses, recent court rulings, and the federal investigation may hinder Texas Air's ability to win wage concessions from Eastern employees.

At the end of 1987, Texas Air and its operating units held about $850 million in cash and marketable securities, and were not expected to have trouble meeting debt maturities this year, Standard & Poor's said.

While Texas Air's corporate structure insulates the parent company somewhat from financial problems at its subsidiaries, further delays in resolving Eastern's labor problems or continued financial losses at Continental could affect Texas Air's long-term ability to compete, Standard & Poor's said.

"We are trying to present the situation as accurately as we can," said Philip Baggaley, spokesman for Standard & Poor's.

Continental officials downplayed the news. "The financial resources of Texas Air are substantial," Hicks said. "I think the question of financial health will be laid to rest as people look closely."

So far, Eastern has been slapped with $823,000 in fines for violating safety regulations. On Sunday, Burnley said the Transportation Department found nearly $1 million in violations by Continental during a review of the carrier's files.

Burnley said Continental had been notified of the penalties, and the airline was considering whether to pay them voluntarily, Burnley said. Hicks said the proposed fines were not unusual.

"At any given time, at any airline, there are any number of fines in the pipeline," Hicks said.

In addition to Continental and Eastern, Texas Air owns Rocky Mountain Airways, Britt Airways, Bar Harbor Airlines and Provincetown-Boston Airlines.

Names in the News

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor James Garner has been hospitalized in preparation for surgery to clear an obstruction restricting the flow of blood from his heart, a spokeswoman said.

"He's feeling fine," said Garner's assistant, Maryann Rea, adding the aneurysm was discovered during a regular checkup. "He wasn't sick and had no pain. Yes, it was a surprise."

Garner checked into Cedars-Sinai Medical Center on Monday. Surgery was scheduled for Thursday.

During the three-hour operation, doctors will use a balloon to compress the aneurysm formed on the wall of the aorta, which takes blood from the left ventricle of the heart to the body.

Garner, 60, was expected to be hospitalized about 10 days.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Authorities declined to press drug charges against actor Jan-Michael Vincent after tests revealed the pills police found on him were caffeine tablets and not illegal amphetamines.

The district attorney's office on Monday declined to charge Vincent with felony possession of an amphetamine, as alleged by the Sheriff's Department, said spokesman Andy Reynolds.

Deputies in Agoura Hills on Wednesday stopped a car driven by Vincent's wife because its registration had expired, authorities said. Vincent, 42, a passenger, was arrested on suspicion of drug possession after the 12 white tablets were found.

Vincent, who played a tough helicopter pilot in the canceled CBS-TV series "Airwolf" and won a Golden Globe nomination for his role in the film "Going Home," lives in Malibu.
