On a hill far away ...

With Good Friday and Easter holidays in the season, a passing motorist stops to meditate below three crosses representing Christ's suffering on Golgotha, his thoughts drifting to that miraculous event in another land and time. But these crosses are not so far away; they're located on a hill overlooking FM 2473 near Kellerville, east of Lefors.

Burglaries, killings on the rise, police claim in the annual department report

Senior Staff Writer

Chances of coming home to find your house burglarized continued to rise in 1987, but most other crimes were on the decrease last year, according to the Pampa Police Department's recentlyreleased annual report

The report, prepared by members of the department and released by Police Chief Robert Eberz, contains crime statistics, comparisons and descriptions of various police services. Also listed are several changes made since Eberz took over as chief in "The most important concept initiated last year was to change the department's approach from an enforcement to a service agencv." Eberz said in releasing the report. "This means that our present and future programs will be developed on the premise that our primary function is to provide assistance to our citizens as opposed to simply enforcing the law.

The report shows that the number of burglaries increased over 1986 and 1985, but the incidence of most other major crimes dropped from the previous year. Police responded to 358 burglaries, compared to 337 in 1986 and 258 in 1985

The report also indicates burglaries were the toughest crimes to solve, with only 15 percent cleared by Pampa police last year

Police found motor vehicles and currency the easiest stolen items to recover, while office equipment, household goods and jewelry were the toughest. Eighty-eight percent of all motor vehicles reported stolen in 1987 were found according to the report, compared to none of the office equipment and only 2.6 percent of household goods

Also on the rise in 1987 were homicides. Three were reported, compared to none in 1986, but only one was solved - the stabbing death of Jaime Barrientes, 22, on March 2. His killer, 17-yearold George Rodriguez, is serving a 20-year sentence for murder. Police continue to search for the killer of Edward Allen Patterson, 37, who was shot to death in his Dovle Street trailer house in September. Also at-large is whoever torched a rent house at 607 Gordon Ave., killing 7-month-old Justin Calfy, who lay inside. Fire Marshal Tom Adams ruled the blaze an arson, but investigation has stalled since the October fire.

Although the number of assaults dropped from 294 in 1986 to 242 last year, assaults became more violent as police reported a included forgery, weapons violations, drunken driving and liquor law violations.

Pampa police handed out 6.392 traffic tickets in 1987, up 23 percent from 1986. More than a fourth were for speeding violations, but the biggest increase was in insurance violations, which jumped from 529 to 954. Safety belt violations also jumped drastically in the first full year of laws requiring safety belt use

With all those tickets, Pampa had no fatal traffic accidents in 1987 and the number of traffic accidents overall dropped from 679 to 515 in 1987. Seventy-five of the accidents in 1987 resulted in injuries. Friday was still the most common day for accidents, while January was the most common month

Close to half of all calls for police service were trafficrelated, according to the report Overall, calls for service dropped from about 20,000 in 1986 to about 17,000 last year. Sunday was the busiest day for officers, and 5 to 6 p.m. was the busiest hour.

Also included in the report are results of a citizen survey conducted in November. Businesses and individuals were asked to rate the department in 24 areas on a scale of one to five. Overall the department earned a 3.7

More troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, expressing concern about the safety of Americans in Panama, has decided to dispatch another 1,300 military personnel to the troubled Central American nation.

Among the units being ordered south is an Army aviation task force that includes helicopter gunships

The Pentagon announced the decision to increase the number of troops in Panama late Friday evening "in view of the growing unrest and tension" in that country. The deployments are to begin Tuesday and be completed by April 8.

The move was recommended by Adm. William Crowe, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and approved by Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci and President Reagan, the Pentagon

Administration officials who demanded anonymity said the State Department had wanted to send even more troops to Panama, but that Carlucci had counseled caution.

The Los Angeles Times reported in Saturday's editions that Secretaru of State George Shultz and his assistant, Elliott Abrams, had proposed a series of stronger actions, including kidnapping Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega to bring him to the United States for trial, landing more than 3,000 troops in Panama in a show of force, and using the CIA to organize a military coup

The newspaper reported that the proposals had been advanced at high-level meetings, and that the kidnapping plan, which startled other officials, had been shelved as unworkable.

But the idea of fomenting a coup remained under consideration, the Times said. The CIA has prepared a draft presidential authorization for limited covert action against Noriega, the newspaper reported.

CBS News also reported Friday night that the administration was 'considering a plan to overthrow" Noriega suggested by the State Department earlier this week. The plan would require the dispatching of two infantry brigades, or 8,000 combat troops, into Panama, the network said. The sources who spoke to The Associated Press refused to say Saturday whether the State Department wanted extra troops in Panama to mount a military operation to topple Noriega, or rather thought there was more of a threat to Americans in the country than defense officials. A State Department spokesman had no comment on the CBS report.

There are already more than 10,000 U.S. troops in Panama

"The instability of the current situation in Panama; the heavy handed tactics of Noriega in dealing with the situation, and the potential for increased threats to U.S. citizens and interests in Panama make this deployment essential at this time to ensure the continued safety of U.S. personnel and facilities," the Pentagon said in a statement.

The deployment should not be read as portending "some kind of military action on the part of the United States," the Pentagon added

The decision to send the extra troops comes just one week after the Defense Department completed a buildup that had already doubled the number of security personnel guarding military bases in Panama. It also comes four days after Panamanian troops marched on a Panama City hotel.

Proposal to merge MHMR

By MARILYN POWERS Lifestyles Editor

A proposal to merge Texas mental health and mental retardation services has met with strong opposition in the Panhandle.

'We like things the way they are," said Ruth Durkee, director of Pampa Sheltered Workshop. "I am adamantly opposed to it," said Richard Browder, director of Amarillo State Center.

"I see no possibility it would be a good combination to work. I think both MH and MR would suffer by a merger," said Bill Postma, president of the advisory board of Pampa Sheltered Workshop and father of one of the workshop's clients

Senate Bill 257, Sec. 5.07, passed during the most recent state legislative session, requires the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation (TDMHMR) to conduct a study to determine the feasibility of consolidating the administration or operation of five state centers and community MHMR centers in the El Paso, Rio Grande, Laredo, Beaumont and Amarillo areas.

In Amarillo, the mental retardation authority is Amarillo State Center; Pampa Sheltered Workshop is one of nine satellites of the center. The Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority (TPMHA) provides area mental health services, with Pampa Family Service Center as its local

The proposed merger would combine both services under one leadership, in hopes of saving state funds through elimination of duplications while providing equal or better service to the clients involved. The bill requires TDMHMR to submit the results of its study to the Town Sunset Commission by Aug. 1. The study must include a specific plan for con-

must also contain an analysis of the positive and negative aspects of the merger The bill further requires that TDMHMR's study solidation of MH and MR entities involved, and include input from at least one parent who has a child with a mental handicap and who is currently using the services in question in the area, and the state senators and representatives of the areas in question. Four possible courses of action have been outlined

 A state center may contract to administer a Community Center.

· A community center may contract to administer a State Center.

• A community center and state center may share some services

• The two centers shall remain as they are. The first local public meeting to discuss the proposed merger was held March 23 in Amarillo. Postma was present at the meeting and participated in the discussion.

"They think they can save $300,000 in Amarillo by joining them. It would eliminate one administrative setup. But they'd have to have two lieutenants, one for each half. There's no possible way to save $300,000 a year by merging," Postma said.

"My sense at this point is that there will not be any saving of dollars to any significant degree. Amarillo State Center and Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority (TPMHA) do not duplicate services at all," said Claire Rigler, executive director of TPMHA in Amarillo.

"I do not think that it will be cost effective, the way we're set up now, and it could very well cost Panhandle citizens more money than it does today. I don't think it will save any money, and it may very well cost the state money," said Browder. He gave several examples to back up his claim that the merger would not be cost effective. "Amarillo State Center is primarily funded and operated through TDMHMR. TPMHA has its own local board of trustees, and although they get a specified amount of state dollars, they're more or less a separate entity. We get food purchased through the central office at $30,000 a year at no cost to this facility," he said.

He explained that if the State Center were to be administered by TPMHA, the $30,000 in food costs would have to be absorbed locally because TPMHA does not have the option of purchasing the food through the state agency.

Problems would also occur if the State Center were to administer TPMHA, Browder said, because of a contract currently between TPMHA and Northwest Texas Hospital to serve indigent mental health patients. "If they merge with Amarillo State Center, the state would have to pick up the costs of this program, which are probably in excess of $1 million a year," he said

Another roadblock to the merger plan concerns motor vehicle insurance. Amarillo State Center currently has approximately 50 vehicles, and because the Center is a state agency, the vehicles are in essence insured by the State of Texas, rather than any private insurance agency. Claims by victims of accidents involving state-owned vehicles are handled by the state attorney general's office, not an insurance company.

'If we merge and go under the local mental health authority, there'd have to be a great amount of insurance to be bought," Browder said.

The answer would not lie in cutting back the number of State Center vehicles because of the number of clients to be serviced in a large geographic area. My responsibilities as mandated cover 22,000 miles in 22 counties of the Texas Panhandle,

Browder said. He also echoed Postma's argument that few See MHMR, Page 3

Sedition trial nears conclusion

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) - A defendant accused of conspiring to overthrow the government by force said Saturday the conspiracy was on the part of the govern-

"These people have been on my tail since early '73,'' Ardie McBrearty told a U.S. District Court jury in his closing argument. "I know that.

McBrearty is among 13 defendants on trial in a case involving three charges. He is one of nine men accused of seditious conspiracy, which is conspiracy to overthrow the government by violence.

McBrearty, who has been what he called a tax protester for two decades, said that he has been in her freezer.

labeled a tax protester, a neo-Nazi, and now a white suprema-

"They can't seen to make up their mind what color to paint me," McBrearty said.

He said there was no conspiracy involving him, nor any conspiracy at all by the defendants. The problem, he said, is in the mind of the government viewing the actions of the defendants in a sinister way.

'If you wallow in the mire of sinisterism, that is the way you're going to view life," he said, telling jurors that when little Bo Peep complained of the loss of sheep, the government's sinister mind would reply ,"I know where they are. Let's look'

He reminded jurors that his relatives include Filipinos and people of Spanish descent, and that witnesses on his behalf included prison friends who are black.

To participate in a white supremacist conspiracy, which the government said he did, "I would have to abandon a big part of my family," McBrearty said. "I would never do that. Defendant Andrew Barnhill, who is serving a 40-year prison sentence for racketeering, for some of the same acts involved in the conspiracy charge, made a ten minute closing argument. "Please don't convict me of these same robberies again," said Barnhill, who contends he's being tried twice for the same events.

Auntie Rose' walks tightrope

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) -Democratic acting Gov. Rose Mofford has walked a tightrope in the nearly two months since Republican Gov. Evan Mecham was impeached, and from all appearances she has enjoyed nearly every minute of it.

She's everyone's Auntie Rose," said state Rep. Cindy Resnick, and there's proof in the way children come up without prompting to hug the tall woman with the white beehive hairdo.

"She may not be the kind of technocrat some people want her to be, but she certainly knows people," says Democratic House Minority Leader Art Hamilton.

She moved quickly to calm Arizona's troubled political waters after Mecham was impeached on Feb. 5 and she, as secretary of state, took his office until he is acquitted or ousted.

Her bipartisan volunteer staff included many who served under Mecham's predecessor, Democratic Gov. Bruce Babbitt.

With Mecham's fate up in the air pending a Senate verdict on the House impeachment allegations, plus an upcoming criminal trial and recall election, Mrs. Mofford has avoided any policy initiatives beyond indicating a willingness to consider tax hikes that Mecham opposes.

Mofford did not seek a place on the ballot in the May 17 recall election, but a draft committee gathered enough petition signatures to put her on anyway and she is the favorite in a seven-way and for the telephone courtesy of police dispatchers. The department was weakest in the area of police capability of solving crime, which ranked just above average, according to the survey

Overall, the report notes that six formal complaints were filed against Pampa police officers in 1987. Two were found to be valid. Among the changes made by Eberz in 1987 were the appointment of a training officer for the department, reorganization of the various divisions in the department, renovation of police headquarters, upgrading of police vehicles and patrolling of school zones more effectively with the radar enhancement program. A new logo also was designed for the department and placed on patrol cars. Eberz listed three major pending projects for 1988 accreditation of the department by the national Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies: development of a reserve officer program; and upgrading of the City Jail and the dispatch office.

A court challenge has been filed arguing that she cannot remain on the ballot unless she files a financial disclosure report. If she files that, she could be considered to be actively campaigning and that, under Arizona law, would mean she would have to resign both as acting governor and as secretary of state.

"God only knows what the future holds for Rose Mofford, but I'm telling you while I'm sitting up there as acting governor I'm there to serve you," she told a luncheon club in one of her many public appearances.

Besides speaking at building dedications, county fairs and countless luncheons and dinners, she has posed for photos with school children, cotton farmers, mayors, basketball players, lawmakers, Annette Funicello and Mickey Mouse.

In her 46 years in state government, many of the roles she's filled have had little substance.

But a statewide poll released by The Phoenix Gazette last week gave Mofford an 81 percent approval rating for her job performance. Mecham is automatically on the ballot unless he is ousted via impeachment in a vote expected this week.

Also on the ballot are another Democrat, two Republicans and two minor candidates.

As secretary of state, Mofford's duties included such noncontroversial functions as keeping the state's Great Seal, attesting to official acts of government and handling government pub-

MOUND CITY (AP) -\Out-ofseason tornadoes damaged residences and other structures in East Texas for the second time in four months, leaving some residents ready to move.

At least one person was injured when tornadoes early Friday evening ripped through Mound City, East Mountain, Gladewater and Union Grove.

"This is a bad area for tornadoes," said Tommie Denson of Mound City. "We're going to move. I'm going to sell my home and leave.

The National Weather Service reported timber damage by the twisters from southwestern Cass County to 7 miles northwest of Mrs. Denson lives three houses from the Mound City Store, which was severely damaged in the tornado.

The tornado, which also damaged four homes, hit in the same vicinity as a twister that one did last Dec. 19. At least four tornadoes hit Anderson County in 1987, killing two people. Three of them hit the southern part of the county, near Mound City.

Trees and outbuildings were destroyed from just northeast of Ore City across the northwestern tip of Harrison County and into western Marion County, the weather service said.

Deanna Holden, owner of the general store, part of which was recently converted into a home. said the family had no warning of the storm

'It just hasn't sunk in yet," Mrs. Holden said. "We just all got underneath the dining room table. If we hadn't gotten my grandbaby out of her crib, she'd be dead because of all the flying

The tornado nearly destroyed Eileen Crawford's home, which was damaged in the December

"I've got nothing left," Mrs. Crawford said, adding she may move. "There is some furniture left and I've got my loved ones, my friends and my life."

Another tornado tore through about 25 homes in East Mountain, a small community 15 miles north of Longview, blowing seven or eight homes off foundations, witnesses said.

"I was on top the mountain watching for tails out of the clouds, when the rain began falling so hard you couldn't even see," said East Mountain Assistant City Marshal Phil Luchau. We knew the storm was getting worse, but it happened so quick. there wasn't time to warn

The storm also damaged three homes in nearby Glenwood Acres, officials said

The city hall, an elementary school and a car dealership suffered heavy damage about 4:45 p.m. at Gladewater, about 20 miles northwest of Longview.

New stamps and new time | Commission votes to rescind bid hit parts of — part of Easter this year

The U.S. Postal Service is celebrating Easter Sunday with higher postage rates.

Effective today, the new rate for first-class postage is 25 cents, up from 22 cents. Pampa Postmaster Richard Wilson said the increase is the first in three years.

"Although no one welcomes an increase in postage, it should be placed in perspective," Wilson said. "For example, in 1932, a first-class postage stamp cost 3 cents. With adjustments for inflation, that same stamp would (now) cost 25.5 cents.

New "E" stamps, costing 25 cents, have been on sale for about 10 days. Wilson said the Post Office also will have an ample supply of 3-cent stamps and other amounts to meet customers' mailing needs. But before you go out to buy yourself some new stamps, don't forget to check your watch or clock.

Easter marks another event

today - the return of daylight savings time.

In case you forgot to do it, set your clock ahead an hour -remember, spring forward!

Most of the nation returned to daylight time at 2 a.m. Sunday, gaining an hour of evening light for cookouts and recreation.

Daylight time will remain in effect until Oct. 30 this year, when that hour of lost sleep will be returned.

Popular DJ found murdered

BIG SPRING (AP) - Authorities sought a woman and two men who were reported to have fled with two vehicles and rifles belonging to a veteran radio disc jockey who was found shot to death at his residence.

Vance Kimble, 61, a radio personality in Big Spring for 37 years, was found dead about 10:45 a.m. Friday from a gunshot wound to the upper chest, Howard County Justice of the Peace William Shankles said.

His body was discovered in his home, on U.S. Highway 87 three miles south of Big Spring, after he failed to show up at KBYG Radio, for his 5 a.m. to 10 a.m. show Friday.

Shankles ordered an autopsy, after which he ruled the death a homicide

Shankles said late Friday that no suspects were in custody to his knowledge.

But descriptions of three suspects in the case, and vehicles owned by Kimble, were teletyped to area law enforcement officials just after 4 p.m. Friday.

A 21-year-old woman, 22-yearold man and 26-year-old man reportedly were armed with a rifle and shotgun owned by Kimble, according to the alert.

Law officers were searching for a light green 1980 Ford pickup truck, and a 1986 blue and white Chrysler Fifth Avenue. Both vehicles were registered to Kimble and were missing from his home, according to information broadcast to officers on Friday.

Kimble owned a miniature golf course located near his resi-

"He was a Big Spring radio veteran for 37 years," said Larry Napper, 35, night personality for radio station KBYG.

"He had been here in Big Spring for years and years. Back in 1949, he told me, he and Lefty Frizzell had a live program here at KBYG, back before Frizzell started recording his own records, before he had a recording contract, even," Napper said.

We are all saddened and shook up. There are so many things we are trying to figure out. It's hard to believe anyone would do this."

School board to meet Monday

Study into Pampa's classroom shortage will continue Monday when school trustees meet in special session at 12 noon in Carver Educational Center, 321 W.

The board is seeking ways to meet a state requirement limiting the number of students per kindergarten through fourthgrade classrooms to 22.

Trustees have essentially ruled out reclaiming the former Sam Houston elementary campus. now housing Clarendon College-Pampa Center, as a site to relieve overcrowding.

Trustees directed Superintendent Harry Griffith to search out temporary space to rent for next year to give the board time to find a long-term solution. Overcrowding problems are most crucial at Woodrow Wilson and Horace Mann elementary campuses. Also at Monday's meeting.

trustees will consider applying for a $35,000 grant from the criminal justice division of the governor's office to help fund a computer lab designed to help with the dropout problem. Also scheduled is a possible closed session to discuss personnel matters. CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

"It's ironic to me that here we have one of the best systems in the state, and they want to destroy it. I just can't understand Browder said. "Senate Bill 257 speaks of the fact that they're looking at two issues - would a merger be cost effective, and would it decrease the quality and quantity of services? I don't think they're looking at quality and quantity from a legislative, state leadership position. Their emphasis is, 'Where can we save dol-

Two more meetings are scheduled for April 14 and 28 in Amarillo to continue the study. The meetings are open to the public. The April 14 meeting will be from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Texas A&M

After the results of all local studies have been submitted from the various sites to the Central Office Task Force and accepted, they will be submitted to TDMHMR. mayor present, the commission unanimously voted to rescind the bid awarded March 22 to G.W. James Inc. of Pampa for sealcoating of city streets in the annual project.

rescinded the awarding of a seal-coating bid during a special cal-

The action came after another contractor, Great Plains Paving of Amarillo, filed a lawsuit in 223rd District Court on March 25 asking for a temporary injunction against the city for its contract with James Inc.

Great Plains had been the low bidder, but the commission reiected its bid since its bonding company, Pacific Surety, is not licensed to do business in Texas and does not appear on the state attorney general's not-licensedbut-approved list.

The commission then awarded the bid to the next lowest bidder. James Inc.

In its suit, Great Plains claims the commission deliberately awarded the contract to a local concern, violating competitive bidding requirements.

City Manager Bob Hart said

with James Inc. out of concerns about the legality of bidding notifications and lack of proper time for action after the notifications

He said the commission did not feel the Amarillo firm's claim that the city was trying to award the contract to a local concern has any validity.

Hart said the decision to award the bid to James Inc. was made solely because of concerns about the Amarillo firm's out-of-state bonding company.

The commission, following the executive session Friday morning, took four items of action.

In addition to the rescinsion of the contract, the commissioners rejected all bids for the sealcoating project, hired City Attorney Don Lane to represent the city in the litigation with Great Plains and instructed the staff to prepare specifications for rebidding on the project.

All items were passed unanimously, Hart said.

Hart said the one issue the commission was concerned about was Great Plains' claim in its lawsuit that the city had not allowed enough time after it had announced it was seeking bids.

The city manager explained that there are two state statutes regarding bidding procedures.

One, for vehicles, supplies and equipment, requires a published notification that bids are being sought, with another published notification seven days later. The awarding of the bid can be made no earlier than 14 days after the first notification.

The other statute, for public works projects, also requires a first and second published notification, with bids to be opened at least 10 days after the second notice.

"We were following the first statute," Hart said.

He explained that the sealcoating bids had been opened and awarded only eight days after the second notification, two days less than required by law.

The sealcoating bids were rescinded and rejected only on that basis, Hart said, on the lack of proper time between the second notification and the awarding of

A hearing on Great Plains' request for an injunction against the city is scheduled before District Judge Don Cain at 10 a.m. Monday in the 223rd District Court in the Gray County Court-

Liver disease threatens cattle Ranchers said the disease,

FORT STOCKTON (AP) -West Texas ranchers could lose 45 percent of their herds this year to an unpreventable liver disease that has killed more than 80 cattle so far and could destroy 4,000 this spring, officials say

The illness, called hard yellow liver disease, was discovered late last year in an isolated herd near the Pecos River.

The apparently non-contagious disease has since been found in herds containing an estimated 20,000 cattle in Reeves, Pecos, Ector, Ward, Reagan, Crane and Upton counties, said Texas A&M University toxicologist John Reagor.

"We haven't had a whole lot more cattle deaths in the last two months, but we have found more cattle that we know are affected," Reagor said.

"There are a few ranchers who are going to be hurt severely. It's one of those insidious diseases that goes on for a long time before you know your cattle have it." He said researchers are not sure what causes the illness, although they suspect cattle contract it by eating a toxic fungus or plant that sprouts during unusually wet winter months. The disease destroys the animal's liver but not the meat. It manifests itself about 12 to 18 months after the toxin is ing-Hard yellow liver disease traditionally had until recently been found only in sheep that grazed in parts of Reagan County, 60 miles west of San Angelo.

But the recent outbreak among cattle has prompted swift reaction from ranchers, who fear publicity about the area's woes will hurt sales by encouraging buyers to purchase breeding stock elsewhere.

"That cow there is a natural suspect," rancher Vern Stilley said, pointing to an emaciated Brangus whose skin sagged on its bony haunches. "We've already lost about 20 head of cattle to the disease, and we'll probably lose her and others before the year is

"But," he said at the Pecos County ranch where he raises 1,200 cattle, "we've decided to take our death loss and just go on. It's hard enough to make a living in this business without something like this coming along.'

About two months ago, an employee on the 64,000-acre Stilley Ranch south of Fort Stockton discovered one of the herd's cows had died. Blood samples sent to the Texas A&M toxicology lab indicated the cow had died from hard yellow liver disease, Stilley

Highway project contract awarded

AMARILLO - J. Lee Milligan Inc. of Amarillo has been awarded a $1.06 million contract for highway improvement work on 12.1 miles of highway in Gray

The project includes salvaging and replacing existing base, placing lime-treated subgrade and adding asphaltic concrete pavement on Texas Highway 152 from U.S. Highway 60 east to Laketon. Milligan's bid was the lowest of three received by the Texas Highway and Public Transportation Commission in Austin. Highway Department resident engineer Jerry Raines of Pampa, who will supervise the project, said it should take about five months to complete. Funding for the project is from the state's 1988 consolidated rehabilitation positions could be cut even if the two entities were combined and Rigler's contention that there is no duplication of services to eli-

'The number of positions targeted to be cut by the Sunset Commission simply cannot be cut. We will still have to have those people. If we were to merge with the mental health authority, we would only need one chief executive officer. But because they don't provide MR services, we will need a director of those ser-

"There's never been any duplication of services by the two agencies here," Browder said.

'The only time we'd be involved with an MR client is if they showed signs of mental illness. Dr we might work with the state center to get a qualified client of ours into their work center. Most of our people would go into work crews outside," Rigler said. She suggested some ways in which the two agencies could share services and goods in order to save funds

"We are looking at putting in a pharmacy here. We have heavy pharmaceutical needs. We would make this available to the state center.

"They have a large motor pool. We could maybe take advantage of that," Rigler said. Jim King of Austin, assistant deputy commissioner for mental retardation services of

TDMHMR and chairman of the Central Office Task Force which is conducting the merger studies, explained the state's position. "The Sunset Commission itself recommended during the last legislative session that the two entities be merged or consolidated. Rather than passing a bill on the spot, the legislators saw fit to say, 'Let's do a study first to see if it's feasible.' They're trying o look at the facts, talk to the people involved and get advice and comments from people in the Panhandle area.

King, who co-chaired the March 23 meeting in Amarillo with Phyllis Gipson, assistant deputy commissioner for mental health services for TDMHMR. agreed that there seemed to be no duplication of services between the two Amarillo agencies. Any monetary savings from a consolidation would likely come from eliminating some staff members, he said

"What we are trying to do, if possible, is save a little money at the administrative level in Amarillo. The idea is if we had one organization with one administrator, business manager, director, etc., instead of two, we could save money. We will look at it closely to see if money can be saved by consolidation, and we'll also look at if we'll lose money by consolidation," King said.

"I've heard two different stories. One is that we will have an equal quota of mental health and retardation patients. I think this would be very detrimental because mentally retarded people tend to take on behaviors of others in their environment. "Someone else said no, we wouldn't be mixing; we would maintain separate agencies but be under one umbrella," Durkee

"I really don't see that there would be any changes in Pampa that you'd even notice. My idea at this point in time is that she doesn't really have anything to worry about. Even if they consolidated in Amarillo, I doubt if they would drastically change her program," King said of Durkee's ears.

"We have people on the highway crews. Some may be mentally retarded and some may have been in a mental hospital at one time. That doesn't mean they can't pick up trash side by side on the highway.

'There's no way we can really say that they won't be working together at some time. In some cases, that may be the thing to do. We do the same thing as public schools sometimes, also — we mainstream them or integrate them with other types of folks.

'We have clients who go into manufacturing plants to work, and they're the best-behaved in the plant. We can't say we'll forever protect our clients and isolate them from something they may observe and mimic that may be inappropriate," King said. State Rep. Dick Waterfield and State Sen. Bill Sarpaulis pointed to reasons why the two groups of clients were different in their arguments against consolida-

"If you combine the front offices, what would it do to your outreach programs?" Waterfield said. "I think it would tear them up because like it is now, you have a deal with MR and know what you're dealing with. If you combine MH with them, what will it do to them? MH people can get well; MR people aren't going to get well." Waterfield also expressed fears that a merger would cut federal grants for the programs and would also damage volunteer programs currently in place, such as the Leo Program in Amarillo which seeks employment for MR patients,

Joel Brandenburger, an administrative aide to Sarpaulis, who was unavailable for comment, said the state senator also looked askance at combining services for MR and MH clients.

Mental retardation and mental illness are completely separate problems. Mental retardation is a permanent condition. Mental illness is an illness that can be treated and through treatment in many cases can be cured," Brandenburger said. "Personally, he (Sarpaulis)

doesn't feel it should be combined at all based on the evidence that's been brought to him. At the same time, he does not see any harm in the study because he feels it'll show what he and a lot of other that it shouldn't be combined,' Brandenburger said Since there are five agencies

"The TDMHMR will be sensitive to the needs of the local populations. If it turns out that and the people in Amarillo would solidated, my personal feeling is that the department would go and Planning Office by Aug. 1. The legislature will make a decision on the proposed consolidation after the next legislative session begins in January 1989, although Sarpaulis feels the issue may not be decided until the 1991

Some drug testing should be required

We still don't know whether the pilot of a commuter airliner that crashed near Durango, Colo., Jan. 19 and killed nine persons was high on cocaine. But the fact that traces of the drug and its by-products were found in his urine and bloodstream strengthens the case for mandatory drug and alcohol testing of persons in safety-related occupations.

The National Transportation and Safety Board, which is investigating the accident, has not yet determined its cause. The difficulty is ascertaining when the pilot took the drugs or whether he was intoxicated at the time of the crash.

Still, Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley was on target the other day when he said, "This is a tragic reminder that not even commercial aviation is exempt from the drug-abuse problem that plagues "Burley promised to move ahead with a mandatory drug testing regulation for the aviation

Most unfortunately, the likelihood that such a reg-ulation can be applied has been brought into doubt by an incredible 2-1 decision handed down in February by the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals. The court struck down testing of railroad workers involved in serious accidents or suspected of using drugs or alcohol on the job.

The ruling is questionable, given that the Conrail engineer who killed 16 persons when he crashed several locomotives into an Amtrak passenger train last year was found to have traces of marijuana in his bloodstream. Unless this decision is overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court, there could be no testing of train engineers, airline pilots or anyone else whose drug or alcohol impaired job performance could endanger countless lives.

To be sure, mandatory testing for drugs and alcohol constitutes a search and seizure without probable couse under the Fourth Amendment. Nevertheless, the courts have held that, under certain circumstances involving human lives, some searches are reasonable in the absence of probable cause and warrants.

It strikes us as entirely reasonable to monitor the sobriety of persons in whose hands millions of Americans place their lives each day. The public will be waiting with extraordinary interest for the U.S. Supreme Court decision on the 9th Circuit's mystifying ruling that shields railroad workers involved in serious accidents form drug and alcohol

Socialism losing respectability

Feeble signs of a worldwide trend against socialism are turning up here and there. In the Western World the rhetoric is shifting away from government ownership and control; deregulation and privatization are becoming respectable words. Even in avowedly socialist states like Russia, China, Sweden, and some in Africa, people see that socialism has failed to deliver on its promises, and are flirting with capitalism.

While state planning, intervention and control is still the order of the day, socialism has nowhere near the respectability it enjoyed a mere several decades ago.

Ideas indeed have consequences. At the forefront of the modern challenge to the ideas of socialism is the Austrian-born intellectual giant and Nobel Laureate Friedrich A. von Hayek. Hayekian scholars may debate whether his Constitution of Liberty or Individualism and Economic Order or Law, Legislation and Liberty is his greatest work, but I see Hayek's The Road to Serfdom, a simply written book, as his greatest contribution to Mankind.

The Road to Serfdom is an attack on socialism. The attentive reader might be puzzled by the book's dedication which reads, "To the Socialists of All Parties." Hayek means no mockery. He had many socialist friends and colleagues, and saw them as genuinely humane individuals. Hayek didn't see socialists as evil people; he saw them as paving the way for evil

Walter Williams

As Dr. Thomas Sowell says, in his seminal work Conflict of Visions, after socialists, in the pursuit of the mirage of social justice, fatally undermine the principles of equality before the law and constitutional limitations on government power, fascists and communists step in to complete he destruction of freedom.

It was 1944 when Hayek wrote The Road to Serfdom, which is still in print; he was analyzing the tragedy of Germany's Third Reich. Hayek argued that we miss the lesson by looking at Germans as congenitally vicious people or just consider Hitler and his lieutenants as crazed, power-hungry maniacs. Instead we need to "determine the circumstances which ... made possible the progressive growth and the ultimate victory of a particular set of ideas, and why in the end this victory has brought the most vicious elements among them to the top.

Hayek's answer is that the road to Hitler's National Socialism (Naziism) was paved over a 70-year period by German thinkers and activists who, in pursuit of "social justice," were calling for the abandonment of individualism. private property rights and limited govern-

Distinguished German scholars like Hegel, Marx, List, Schmoller, Plenge and Lensch provided the intellectual basis for Hitler's Naziism. Their goals were: economic planning, abolition of free trade, and elimination of laissez-faire. The centralization of government power that resulted made Hitler's ascendancy a cake walk.

Prof. Hayek's warning to the West fell on deaf ears. He was subjected to ridicule and attack. So he founded the Mont Pelerin Society, in 1947, to provide a forum for liberty-minded scholars to exchange ideas and lessen their feelings of isolation. Today, the Mont Pelerin Society has worldwide membership of over 400 (among which this writer is proud to be counted).

While Hayek warned us of the threat of socialism, he was echoing an earlier warning by Alexis de Tocqueville who said, "Democracy extends the sphere of individual freedom; socialism makes each man a mere agent, a mere number ... democracy seeks equality in liberty, socialism seeks equality in restraint and servi-

Prof. Hayek is now 87 years old. I wonder whether he sees Americans, in pursuit of the mirage of social justice, unintentionally paving the way for some future tyrant. If he does, history would be on his side - and I'd agree.

Spend time in Palatka, Fla.

PALATKA, Fla. - What is wrong with too many of us is we never get to spend any time in places like Palatka, Fla., anymore.

I'm not saying I'm ready to pack it up and move to Palatka right now, but I spent a couple of days here recently, and I'm better off for it. Palatka has a population of about 12,000. It sits on the banks of the St. Johns River, wide and blue, 60 miles south of Jacksonville. There's a paper mill and a furniture factory. I made a speech in a place that is a country and western juke joint on the weekends. "Not much to do in Palatka," a man apologized to me I wouldn't say that. Country star John Conlee was due in the juke joint soon, and Palatka calls itself the bass fishing capital of the world. Unless you've been to a country juke joint on a Saturday night or bass-fished with somebody who knows where the glory holes are, your life is miserably incomplete.

There's a Holiday Inn in Palatka. It has one of those satellite dishes that enables first-run movies to be shown in the rooms for a price. I stayed in the Holiday Inn and ordered a Nick Nolte movie called Weeds. Next to Kiss of the

Spider Woman, it was the worst movie I'd ever

But that's the only bad thing that happened to me in Palatka

My first morning, I went to the Holiday Inn restaurant and ordered my eggs the same way I always order them: "over medium well."

That means the yellow doesn't run out of the egg, it merely crawls.

Rarely do I ever get my eggs cooked correctly. In Palatka I did. Plus, when the waitress served my eggs she smiled and said, "If these aren't cooked the way you like them, just tell me and I'll get 'em done over for you.

There is a place in heaven for smiling cooperative waitresses

I played golf in Palatka at the Municipal Course, the only one in town. It was packed.

"It's the Yankees." a local explained to me. "They come down this time of year. We get the poor ones. The rich ones go on down to Ft. Lauderdale or Palm Beach.

The course was charming. So was my partner, who at one point in the match made five straight birdies.

"They take golf real seriously in Palatka," the pro was saying.

Perhaps it was the sunshine that got to me. It was the first time I'd had off from winter for a

Or maybe it was the people I met. There was a warmth to them. too. Throw in the eggs and the smiling waitress and how gorgeous the river looked in the morning, and I started getting all those back-home thoughts again.

So many of us sprang from origins like Palatka, only to be gobbled by the urban monster. But you can go back. And I will someday. To my Palatka.

I'm not certain where that is just yet, but the thing is, I've started looking. For that, I thank

Cable monopolies should be unplugged

INFAMOUS

Name the following city. Its officials revere the Constitution even as they ignore the First Amendment. They limit entry into the news business, tell a major media company what to broadcast, and shake down that firm for revenue and other

The city's name? Pick one of several thousand, because that's how many have awarded monopoly franchise in cable

Not only do these cities keep all but one cable company out of town, they require that certain channels be reserved for civic affairs and so-called public access, and then collect various forms of tribute for granting the company the "privilege" to exercise its First Amendment rights.

Fortunately, the writing is on the wall: Courts are waking up to the fact that Jefferson and Madison would have looked askance at these arrangements

A few weeks ago, the U.S. Supreme Court let stand a lower-court decision drastically limiting the power of cities to regulate cable television. U.S. District Court Judge Eugene Lynch had ruled that Palo Alto, Calif., could not require a cable company to provide public access channels, to wire the entire community, or to use stateof-the-art equipment.

The case never made it to a jury. Lynch declared the provisions unconstitutional on their face.

Nor was that the first case to embarrass the cause of cable monopoly. In Sacramento last year, a jury inspected the argument that cable is a "natural" monopoly and as such could be regulated much like an electric

Among the questions put to the jurors: "Was 'natural monopoly' a sham used by defendants to promote the making of cash payments and provi-sion of in-kind services by the company?"

Answer: "Yes." Professor Thomas Hazlett of the University of California at Davis aptly summed up the case: "For the first time an American jury has been convened to look at the cable franchising process in light of the First Amendment. They found the monopoly award odious. It is a 'sham."

Strong words, but accurate. To understand why, imagine a parallel case involving newspapers. Imagine city officials concluding that a newspaper is a "natural monopoly" (a plausible view, given the number of one-paper towns) and hence deciding to issue a newspaper franchise.

Now imagine those officials requiring, as a condition for the franchise, that the winning publisher supply them with a large number of free newspapers; reserve at least one page each day for uncritical coverage of city business, a second page for the affairs of non-profit groups and churches, and a third for "community access," filled by free-lance writers on a first-come, first-served basis.

In addition, the paper must offer loans to minority entrepreneurs to start local newsletters; put a specified number of news boxes in every neighborhood no matter what the actual demand; hire and train local, unskilled workers; and contribute a small fortune to the city treasury.

Imagine, finally, that officials permit no other paper to be delivered within municipal borders.

But wait, you're probably thinking: They can't do that. It's unconstitutional to control newspapers in that Precisely the point. And it should be equally unconstitutional to do the same to cable television, a major competing source of news and political commentary.

In America's rush to enjoy a new technology, city after city neglected a fundamental freedom. They put the First Amendment up for auction. Now, at long last, the courts may be poised to catch up with the miscreants. © 1988, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

Did you know that as one of AARP's (American Association of Retired Persons) more than 30 million members, you're part of the largest private, non-profit, non-partisan membership organization in the world? Your participation contributes to AARP's ability to represent and serve the needs of all older Americans.

When retired educator Dr. Ethel Percy Andrus founded AARP in 1958, she selected the motto "To serve, not to be served" and set forth four goals:

 To enhance the quality of life for older persons;

- To promote independence, dignity and purpose for older persons; To lead in determining the role and place of older persons in society; And to improve the image of aging.

It is this motto and these goals that guide AARP.

The collective efforts of thousands of volunteers and a staff of over 1,200 result in a myriad of benefits — educational programs, legislative activities, informative publications, opportunities for involvement, as well as special membership services and discounts.

If you are 50 and above, you are eligible for membership!

Our local chapter is holding a Membership Rally on Monday, April 11, in the Senior Citizens Center at 1 p.m. Tom Reid, legislative committeeman from Amarillo, will be our speaker and a country band will furnish live music! Everyone is invited! Join us, and you too can know the meaning of the word, Value! Bill Cox

Drunken drivers aren't criminals

After reading some of the articles concerning DWI convictions in Gray County, I felt I had to speak up and I thank you for permitting me to

First of all, I don't approve of drunken driving. But just because a person takes a drink and drives sober doesn't mean he should be arrested, handcuffed, pushed around and treated like an escaped convict, then thrown in jail overnight with real criminals.

I think a very interesting survey for The Pampa News would be to check the rate of convictions, arrests or even being stopped of people who do their drinking at the Pampa Country Club. Why should they be treated differently than the working class? Does drinking not affect them as it does everyone else?

If law enforcement personnel want respect, let them start earning it by treating everyone the same.

Area students also compete in sports

To the editor:

This letter is concerning an article in your March 13 sports column. It refers to the Lady Harvesters winning the Panhandle Track Meet.

I realize Pampa girls have a great track team and I congratulate them on winning the meet at Panhandle. But whoever wrote the article failed to recognize the other outstanding girls at that meet.

There were 17 teams at that meet, and Pampa girls were the only ones mentioned in the article, besides a small paragraph saying Dalhart received second and Panhandle received third. Who did the top five places go to in the 400 before Pampa got sixth? There were several events that Pampa did not place in the top three, but you failed to tell us who did win those events.

Our girls from small towns and their parents like to see their names in your paper also. When I was in high school, your paper was how we kept up with the times and distances of girls in our district.

There are a lot of small towns around Pampa that take your paper. I'm very disappointed in whoever wrote the article, and I feel they owe the girls who did place from the other towns an apology, for they are also outstanding athletes.

Say no to drugs - but look around

To the editor:

The heavy news of having our children say no to drugs and hopefully other related activities is fine. But if we look at ourselves and admit the truth, we are leaving something out.

While you are reading this, look around the room. How many open packs of cigarettes do you see, and ashtrays full of long-enough cigarette butts that are tempting to the kids when you go back to the kitchen for a cup of

The child grabs a handful and runs down to his little friend's house to share his treasure. His mom and dad has gone to the store, and there is plenty of time to light up and smoke.

Next time while you are at the local beer joint playing pool, the neighbor kid returns the favor. He found a carton of cigarettes in mom's cabinet, and they have two full packs to share. This is where it all starts.

All you can say is, "What the hell, they are going to smoke anyway.

I've seen people holding a little baby while smoking so heavily they can't see the baby for the smoke. The kid doesn't stand a chance. This is child abuse, I don't care who it is. By the time the child is 9 years old, his lungs are that of a seasoned smoker and he is looking for something more advanced and exciting.

In the news we constantly learn of cities where the police, sheriff's departments and even lawyers accept money bribes just to turn their heads. There needs to be a way to get an honest investigating committee to check out and reveal these for what they are

Since drugs are causing deaths daily, I am in favor of the death penalty for those heavy

What we at home need to do is, in front of our children, destroy the cigarettes and alcohol we have, turn to these children, give them a hug and say, "Look, I have been wrong for a long time and realize I am leading you down the wrong path. Now let's together join hands and say kNOw to drugs, cigarettes and

Congress destroys Biblical freedoms

To the editor:

Congressmen are destroying our freedoms through their tightening down of the screws on American individualism and accomplishments through the wrecking of constitutional common laws of Biblical origin.

On May 26, 1987, justices of the Supreme Court informed the nation that "we are now living in a police state." It is quite a political revelation to read in detail the Supreme Court opinions on that May 26th preventative detention case. I say opinions because there were three of them: the Majority Opinion endorsing preventative detention (representing the view of six justices), and two separate dissenting opinions opposing it (representing the views of the other three justices).

Although the massive stone lettering above the entrance to the Supreme Court says "equal justice under law," justice is, in fact, becoming increasingly uncommon in such high locations

The preventative detention case called into question the constitutionality of the 1984 Bail Reform Act (18U.S.C.3141 et seq) which passed the U.S. Senate by an overwhelming 96 to 1 vote. Since its passage, approximately 7,000 individuals have been held without bail under the preventative detention sections of the act because the government claimed they represented a future danger to society.

This number is likely to grow; and so is pleabargaining, because (for tactical reasons) overworked prosecutors are using the threat of no bail against arrestees to gain their "cooperation." The message is that trial is an insignificant afterthought. Arrest is given the weight of irrefutable evidence and conviction under this corrupt scheme.

What this means is that those the government claims as "future threats" to society (i.e., patriotic Christians, so-called "tax protesters," so-called "right-wing extremists," etc.) are to be held without bail and, in many cases, held without common law trial when they refuse to enter a guilty plea.

So anyone detained in a county jail must enter a "guilty" or "not guilty" of his own accord. To we citizens, it sounds like the Supreme Court is right in calling the U.S. a "police

Recently, the Boston Globe reported in area newspapers of the FBI conducting a campaign of infiltration and surveillance against hundreds of U.S. political and religious groups opposed to Reagan administration policies in Central America. The FBI is supposed to catch criminals, not political or Christian activists.

I believe all congressmen, whether active or positional inactive, must be defeated in the coming elections. They are not worthy of the trust and honor that we have placed upon them

DWI offenders will pay — later

This letter is to the police and DPS troopers who get to thinking their jobs are depressing. In reference to Paul Pinkham's articles about DWI offenders getting off too easy, if they will wait for some time, the ones who get a light sentence will pay later, much later.

I got one in 1963 and was turned down twice in the last year and once today (March 31, 1988) for a truck-driving job — for one DWI 25 years ago. I was a little overbearing with the officer,

But to save my soul, why do they let a pot-smoking judge on the bench and offer him a justice seat instead of making a homeless case

Disagrees with Dub

I disagree with W.A. Morgan on the importance of having a county treasurer.

I believe in checks and balances and separation of powers. I want our county business to be kept in our county, not eventually in Austin. I believe in continuity, not part-time help that could not be as efficient nor result in any appreciable savings.

A visit to that office will verify the volume of work there, including some evenings and

Does media have double standard?

To the editor:

Is there a double standard being applied in some parts of the media? Is it fair or wise?

The media seems to get all tensed up and incensed when certain public personalities commit adultery. The bird dogs of print and TV are sent in hot pursuit to expose every little detail which will help sell beer, peanut butter and wine coolers to a public seemingly obsessed with "knowing all."

This indicates that media moguls might possibly believe there is something wrong with adultery and fornication. Applause, please, for the righteous guardians of public morality.

Don't clap too loudly, yet. While the media aims at the Bakkers, Swaggarts and Harts and booms away for all they are worth, why is a blind eye and a deaf ear fornication and erotic suggestion which flows through the tubes every day, night and inbetween. Are adultery and fornication somehow "acceptable" if portrayed on prime time by beautiful people"? Will the media ever recogturned toward the swollen river of adultery, nize the iniquity in its own back yard and vigorously expose the "daily sin" it spews out in ever greater amounts, calling it art and entertainment? Double standards somehow end up in confusion or the garbage bin of history. There is a single standard which will survive and eventually triumph. Hey, media, this is a good one to expose and give your best shot! Moses brought it down from the mount. You can clean up the sleaze with it! L.M. Cole

Aquino foe escapes his prison custody

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The young officer who led an August coup attempt that nearly toppled President Corazon Aquino's government fled a prison ship early Saturday aided by his elite navy guards, the military said. The statement said former Lt. Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan escaped into Manila Bay about 2:30 a.m. aboard two rubber boats along with 13 of his guards from the navy's Special Warfare

Chief of Staff Gen. Renato de Villa ordered a massive search for the 39-year-old Honasan. The charismatic former colonel had been detained on the ship since his December arrest in a Manila suburb. Bay area resdents said they heard gunshots early Saturday but were unsure whether the shooting was created at the escape Col. Oscar Floendo, chief military spokesman, said a reserve lieutenant who was frustrated over his inability to obtain a regular commission had sided in the getaway

He said the boats used in the escape had been sent to increase security after the military learned of a plot to free Honasan.

Florendo described the escape as "very unfortunate" for the faction-ridden armed forces and warned Honasan may try to organize a new bid to topple Mrs. Aquino.

Defense Secretary Fidel V. Ramos called the escape a propaganda coup for Honasan and said the military was "taking every possible action to bring him back and to minimize or neutralize any further damage that he can make.

Honasan, former Defense Ministry chief of security, played a key role in the Feb. 22, 1986, mutiny that with a popular uprising toppled President Ferdinand Marcos

But he became disillusioned with Mrs. Aquino, accusing her of "weak and inept" leadership that fortified the 19-year-old communist insurgency.

On Aug. 28, Honasan led a force of 2,000 men who attacked the presidential palace and seized several media and military installations in the capital before they were driven off by pro-

ampan to compete in world gymnastics meet

By LARRY HOLLIS Managing Editor

He stands on the carpeted floor, bends his knees slightly. His arms at his sides, he squats down a bit and then pushes upward, throwing his legs up in the air as he performs a backwards flip, landing standing up on his feet, a smile on his face.

And it all seems so effort-

But for Andrew McCall, 13, it's the result of many years of hard work. Andrew, a seventh-grade student at Pampa Middle School, is getting ready for world competition in acrogymnastics next month in Lubbock.

He hopes to bring home some more gold to go with the national first-place medals he has already won.

"I want to get a first in tumbling," Andrew says, adding that he also would accept a first in other events. 'But I like tumbling best.'

The young man admitted he would "probably go crazy" if he does win a first in the world event for young gymnasts, adding that he would hang the award up on the wall after he shows it to everybody.

"It will pay off for the last eight or nine years, for what I've been doing," he states. And he's been doing a lot, quite a bit, in fact, for such a young man. Andrew has spent the past three years competing in acro-gymnastics — power tumbling, regular trampoline, synchronized trampoline and double-mini trampoline - along with some floor events. But he was training in gymnastics for "about five years" before that.

He started his gymnastics training in Pampa. But for the past three years he's been taking classes in Amarillo with All-American Gymnastics. And that involves a lot of commuting.

"It's been real rough at times getting him up there, said his mother, Nancy

She said it's been especially difficult at times since November - that's when the Hoechst Celanese Chemical Co. Pampa Facility exploded. Her husband and Andrew's father, John McCall, works there, and he's been busy with work at the plant since then.

Mrs. McCall recalled that her husband was supposed to have been working at the plant on that Saturday, but he had traded shifts with another employee so he could take Andrew to Amarillo.

The couple had traded off times for driving their son to Amarillo, but since the explosion, most of that has fallen on her. "I'm just wating for Andrew to get his driver's license," she laughed.

Andrew goes to Amarillo after school from two to four days a week, and sometimes on Saturdays. Even he says that the constant traveling can be a bit much at times, leaving Pampa around 3:30 to 4 p.m. and not getting back home until after 8 p.m.

But he uses the travel time to do his homework, or he gets up early in the mornings to do it before going to school. The travel doesn't seem to have hurt his school ing much, though - he's an honor student at the middle school, currently taking all the honors classes available in the seventh grade

The travel and training, though, have already paid

In June 1986 he attended national competition at Mobile, Ala., returning with a first-place in the doublemini — a double trampoline with a horizontal and a slanted surface; second in synchronized trampoline and a fourth in power tumbling.

"The top six (places) is good," Andrew says, "... but first is even better, of

He then competed at a Junior Olympics meet in Oklahoma, coming home

Wearing his blue gymnastics uniform, Andrew shows some of the many medals he has won.

with a first in double-mini and synchronized trampoline

Last year Andrew competed at nationals again, this time in Rockford, Ill. He came back with a first in the double-mini, a second in regular trampoline, a third in power tumbling, and a fifth in synchronized trampoline.

With regional, state and national competition, "I've got so many (medals), I've never had time to keep them organized." He says he tried to keep them displayed in his room but that became too much of a problem. "If I get anything at world, I'll probably frame it," he says, smiling.

Though he's done well in the trampoline events, he says they're not his favorites. He likes the tumbling events best. And now he's looking forward to the world competition May 17-22 in Lubbock. Competitors generally have to qualify in other events to make the various levels of competition, accumulating scores from prior meets. Andrew now is ranked first on the floor and second on the double-mini and regular trampoline in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma. His past accomplishments have easily qualified him for the world meet.

"We had promised him two years ago that wherever it would be, we'd take him to world," his mother said. "So here it is in Lubbock.'

Andrew says that past world events had been held in France, Japan, Korea, Africa and other nations. While he's not so excited about the location this year, at least it's the world event, he

The meet will be held at the Lubbock Civic Center, with the Grand March scheduled for Wednesday, May 18. He's hoping some of his friends will be able to come down and see him.

Andrew says he has enjoyed being able to travel to other places for competition. "You get to go places and meet new people. It's kind of neat to meet new people," he says, discussing some of the friends he has made.

But he has also made some friends in the classes at Amarillo. His friend Jeb Harris, 12, of Canyon has been his partner in the synchronized trampoline events.

"He's better than me on the trampoline," Andrew says. "But I'm better on tumbling. We're about the same on double-minis.

He says there's little jealousy among the competitors. "Everyone encourages everybody," he states.

But it's not being able to do much with his friends at home that has Andrew debating whether he'll continue with his gymnastics training after the world competition.

All the travel to Amarillo and to various competitions has kept him from being able to do much with his friends here, he says. And it's also cut into some of his other in terests, he notes

"I do a bit of everything," he says - golf, baseball, soccer, and the high jump in track at Pampa Middle School. But with his emphasis on gymnastics, "I don't really have much time for them now," he says.

Still, he enjoys gymnastics. "It's different, I guess," he says. "It's pretty easy. It has been easy. For him, anyway He credits a lot of his success to his coach, Tim Hall.

"I've got a really neat coach, that's one thing,' Andrew says, adding that Coach Hall has trained in gymnastics for most of his life. "He knows about all the problems you've got,' Andrews says, explaining that Hall takes care "to show you everything. ... He's always there, watching and guiding you. ... He just doesn't toss you out there and let you learn by yourself.

A member of the Texas Acro-Gymnastics Association and the United States Acro-Gymnastics Federation, Andrew still hasn't made up his mind whether to continue with gymnastics. For one thing, it might help him to get a scholarship to attend college after high school.

Andrew wants to be a marine biologist, with hopes of attending college in Florida. He admits having a gymnastics scholarship would be helpful in paying his way through college.

"I think he's very mature for his age," Mrs. McCall said. "There's not many his age who can go to meets and compete before so many people and keep their composure" whether they win or

"There's not too many of those now even at the meets," Andrew says, referring to the way he has seen some of his fellow competitors react when they've lost.

Of course, he's not sure how he'll react at the world meet if he should win anything, he admits. "I'll probably go crazy" if he wins a first place, he says,

Miller, along with law enforcement officers from the Texas Department of Public Safety auto theft division. Texas Rangers and Wise County authorities have been investigating for some months an auto theft ring that allegedly stems from Fort Worth to Wheeler.

However, a Wise County grand jury in Decatur last week failed to hand down any indictments in connection with the theft ring, leaving officers to continue with the investigation.

"No indictments were issued, but we are continuing an investigation on the whole theft ring,' commented Patrick Morris, Wise County district attorney.

Months of investigative work had gone before the grand jury, including information received following the arrest of J.T. Johnson of Wheeler on charges of "theft by exercising control."

Johnson's arrest by Wheeler County Sheriff's Department resulted in the recovery of a stolen 1986 Chevrolet 4-ton four-wheel drive truck.

Sandinistas, Contras take 60-day truce

LA VIGIA, Nicaragua (AP) - A group of Contra rebels, armed and uniformed, huddled in front of a wooden shack in an isolated mountain village. Nearby, Sandinista troops meandered down winding dirt roads.

Warily, they greeted the 60-day cease-fire that began Friday.

"We are waiting," said a rebel leader known as Comandante Ernesto. "We want a truce. This cease-fire is the first step toward peace.

Ernesto chatted with a group of Contras at the edge of a small hamlet nestled in Nuevo Segovia province along the winding Coco River, which farther north serves as the border with Honduras.

Several children in tattered rags chased each other. The rich smell of coffee brewing on a wooden fire wafted in the damp morning air.

"We want to work, to live in peace," Ernesto said.

His bodyguards, armed with rifles and grenades and wearing U.S.-made camouflage uniforms. appeared jittery, a bit nervous.

The unexpected cease-fire agreement was reached March 23 at the end of a three-day meeting between Sandinista and Contra leaders. It seeks to end more than six years of war.

The heaviest fighting has been around here in La Vigia, about 120 miles northeast of Managua, and in other parts of the mountainous north.

The agreement came as a surprise," said Ernesto, 24. "We heard about it by radio.'

The warring factions put a truce into place on March 21, the first day of the talks. But there were several violations reported by dissident Contras oppposed to the cease-fire.

Ernesto repeated comments from other rebels that they will not lay down their arms. "Never," the rebel leader said.

"That's all we have." The agreement does not mention the laying down of arms. It calls on the rebels to move into still-to-be determined zones during the next two weeks. Talks between the leaders are to continue until June 1 in an attempt to forge a lasting peace. Ernesto said he joined the Contras six years ago, fleeing from his home in San Rafael de Norte, about 100 miles north of Managua.

"It was because of the lies the Sandinistas told," he said. "We still don't believe them, but we want democracy.

About a mile down the road and throughout the countryside. heavily armed Sandinista troops roamed. One soldier, toting a Soviet grenadelauncher, said the area had been quiet for the past few days

Several troop trucks rambled along the bumpy, rock-strewn roads. Atop several knolls, 122mm cannons and anti-aircraft guns rested at makeshift posts in the north.

Along the winding Pan American Highway, scores of villagers walked in Easter processions Friday, praying for peace.

A Defense Ministry spokesman in Managua said there were no reports of truce violations.

Banks, government offices, stores and most restaurants are closed until Monday for the long Easter weekend. Managua's three newspapers stopped publishing over Easter.

With most offices closed for Good Friday in predominantly Roman Catholic Nicaragua, there was no comment from the government on President Reagan's signing into law of a $48 million, non-lethal aid package for the Contras.

It will probably be two or more weeks before the rebels begin receiving supplies under the new legislation

Israel strengthens security for Holy Week observance

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops opened fire Saturday on Palestinians who attacked them with rocks, bottles, knives and metal bars in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, and four protesters were killed, the army said.

Two Israeli soldiers were in-

The bloodshed broke out as Jews celebrated the first day of Passover, the weeklong festival celebrating the exodus of the Jews from Egypt, and a day after Christians marked Good Friday.

In Gaza City, protesters hurled knives and metal rods at patrolling troops and tried to seize their weapons, an army spokesman said. Soldiers opened fire on the attackers, killing three, he said.

One soldier suffered stab wounds and was taken to a nearby hospital, the army spokesman said. His condition was not described as serious. Another soldier was slightly injured, the military official said, speaking on condition of anonymity in keeping with army regulations.

There were conflicting reports on the number of wounded protesters. The army said two protesters were wounded by gunfire, but Palestinian journalists set the number as high as 13.

Officials at Gaza City's Ahli Arab and Shifa hospitals said they admitted three Palestinians with gunshot wounds, and Arab reports said another was transferred to an Israeli hospital.

Palestinian reporters identified the dead men as Jamil Rashad al Kourdy, 55, Ahmed Samir al Kourdy, 40, and Hassan al Kourdy, 21.

In the biblical West Bank town of Bethlehem, troops fired at hundreds of protesters who attacked them with rocks and empty bottles in the town's main market, and one Arab was killed, the army said.

Salim Hallas El Shaer, 23, was dead on arrival at nearby Bet Jalla hospital from a gunshot wound to the head, according to doctors

An army spokesman confirmed the death but said troops only fired at the man when he approached them with an object that resembled a firebomb.

According to U.N. figures, the killings brought the Palestinian death toll to 131 since unrest broke out Dec. 8 in the West Bank 'Make the Choice TODAY and Gaza Strip. One Israeli soldier has died.

With fewer Holy Week visitors than usual because of the Arab uprising in its occupied lands, Israel sought to ensure the safety of thousands of Christians who had come for Easter Sunday observances.

The violence came on the day before Secretary of State George P. Shultz was scheduled to arrive for talks in Jerusalem as he pushes a Middle East peace plan.

Shultz was in Vatican City Saturday and received Pope John Paul II's blessing on the eve of his peace mission. The pontiff stressed any accord must respect the 'legitimate rights'' of both Israel and the Palestinians.

Police and troops were reinforced in and around Jerusalem's holy sites to protect participants at Easter ceremonies by Christians celebrating their belief that Christ was resurrected two days after dying on a cross.

Disturbances took an early toll on the holiday weekend Friday, as Israeli troops killed two Arabs and wounded at least 13.

Friday was stained by bloodshed as Christians commemorated Good Friday, Jews began the start of the week-long Passover festival and angry Moslems rioted as they left mosques after morning prayers.

On Friday, the army and other sources reported deaths and injuries in bloody confrontations.

Independent counsel may criticize Meese

WASHINGTON (AP) - Independent counsel James C. McKay has not found sufficient evidence to indict Attorney General Edwin Meese III but could issue a sharply critical report about Meese's conduct, according to a source familiar with the case.

McKay announced Friday that he would not seek indictments of Meese in connection with the attorney general's efforts to help promoters of a proposed Middle East oil pipeline or his investments in telephone company stock "based on the evidence developed to date.'

If a final decision is made not to bring charges in a month or so, McKay said he will issue a report "covering all the matters which have been under investigation."

McKay's staff is debating whether the report would state that he had probable cause to bring charges but dropped the case because it did not meet the Justice Department standard for probability of conviction, said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Any report would detail what evidence McKay had gathered during the 11-month probe and point out what the investigation had not been able to learn, the Meese, meanwhile, hailed the prosecutor's announcement. saving he was "gratified by the action and the statement,' adding that he had no plans to resign despite pressure from Congress following the departure this week of two top Justice Department officials.

Meese, in an interview Friday on ABC-TV's 20-20 program, said he did not feel he was hurting the president, but that if he thought he was, he would resign. He said much of the clamor for his resignation was coming from a 'lynch mob'' that included the

The grand jury is expected to question Meese, his wife, Ursula, and U.S. Circuit Judge Douglas H. Ginsburg, who was head of the Justice Department's antitrust division during the breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Meese's ownership of $14,000 worth of stock in regional Bell system companies at a time he formulated department policy on the AT&T divestiture raised conflict-of-interest issues

The Washington Post reported

Saturday that the Justice Department's internal watchdog agency, the Office of Professional Responsibility, was preparing to reopen its investigation of Meese. The Post said files on the investigation into Meese's dealings with Wallach were moved to the OPM offices Friday.

McKay said his decision to issue Friday's announcement was made "without outside consultation" but acknowledged that Meese's lawyers had requested a public statement "quite re-

A source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Meese's lawyers argued that McKay should tell the public because we know it and you know it."

McKay declined to say if his investigation had been hampered because he couldn't force the grand jury testimony of San Francisco lawyer E. Robert Wallach, Meese's former financial adviser Franklyn Chinn, and Dr. Kent London, a business associate of Wallach and Chinn.

All four are under indictment in New York City in connection with their efforts to help Wedtech Corp. get government contracts.

In December, McKay announced there was insufficient evidence to prosecute Meese for his efforts to help Wedtech Corp. get lucrative defense contracts.

"The refusals of Mr. Wallach and Mr. Chinn and Mr. London are based upon the fact that they said they would invoke their Fifth Amendment privilege," McKay

The pipeline probe involved whether Meese conspired with Swiss businessman Bruce Rappaport, Wallach and others to violate the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act in connection with a plan to pay the Israeli government and that nation's Labor Party to protect the proposed pipeline from military attack.

Wallach, who was legal counsel to Rappaport, wrote a memo to Mese saying that $700 million from the pipeline, which was never built, would be paid to the Labor Party of then-Israel Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

Meese claimed he did not read that part of the memo and Peres says he was never offered money. Rappaport also denies there was such a plan.

Meese received other good news on Friday when Solicitor General Charles Fried announced he would not leave

RI marketing its new heavy-duty vehicle

IRI International Inc. of Pampa has designed and manufactured a new line of low-entry, heavy-duty transport vehicles for marketing.

The new vehicles are designed to offer greater vehicle and fleet operating efficiencies, improved safety and less fatigue for the driver and cab crew, and reduced maintenance costs and vehicle

Built to handle the special requirements of commercial and residential solid-waste collection, transportation and disposal operations in the United States and Canada, these fleet-tested vehicles can be equipped with all types of compaction bodies: side, front, rear and roll-off loaders for both private-owner and municipal service

IRI, an affiliate of Ingersoll-Rand Co. and Dresser Industries Inc., has had its new vehicle being tested in the field by the city of Pampa for solid-waste collection operations since last fall. With the cab's first step just 18 inches from the ground, low entry equates to time saved, with less effort, fatigue and risk of injury in bad weather.

Wall-to-wall windows give the driver a much better chance of avoiding children, animals and hazardous objects in the alley and at the landfill

A wide choice of engine sizes, transmissions, front and rear axle combinations, and either straight-rail or drop-frame chassis allows these vehicles to be tailored to the widest range of service specifications for greater flexibility and efficiency when compared to production-line

Major component systems are complemented with the industry's usual choice of options.

Rolled structural-steel frame rails are fabricated from 110,000 pounds per square inch minimum-yield, heat-treated material. All daily and routine fluid maintenance is performed at stand-up height without tilting the cab forward.

IRI, in addition to its heavyduty vehicle lines, designs and manufactures a complete line of oil and gas drilling and workover rigs, together with related equipment and accessories.

Through its Specialty Steels Division, the company produces a wide array of alloy steel forgings and bar stock for use in industries ranging from aerospace to nuclear energy.

Hispanic women challenge hiring, promotion practices

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Ten Hispanic women who claim they were unfairly passed over for promotions have challenged San Antonio's hiring and promotions practices.

Sam Alvarado, national vice president of the National Association of Government Employees, said he expects the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to issue a ruling this week.

City Manager Lou Fox said he could not comment until he sees the allegations.

"I would be glad to look at it and have our people look at it," he said

Alvarado said the commission's review is part of the preparation for the class action lawsuit his group will sponsor, based on complaints that Hispanic professional women were passed over for promotions on several occasions in favor of men or Anglo women who they believe were _____ less qualified.

Most of these women are professionals," Alvarado said of the employees filing the complaint, 'not regular run-of-the-mill employees with a high school degree; some of them have bachelor's and master's degrees.

He said the salaries of the women range between about $18,000 and $22,000 a year, some in supervisory positions.

Alvarado said the names of the women will remain confidential during the early stages of the legal process for fear of retaliation.

One woman employee close to the issue said the specific cases to be included in the lawsuit are

"It's going to blow their (city officials) minds," she said.

Alvarado also said the union decided to take its case to the federal commission because it has no confidence in the city's equal employment office.

Kevin Pritchard hit a short jumper for Kansas, and Quin Snyder answered with a Duke basket that made it 57-54 with 2:29 to play. Manning followed with a tip-in that made the score 59-54. Then, with Kansas ahead 61-55, Manning rejected a layup attempt by Ferry for his sixth block of the game.

Pampa's Tanya Lidy eyes Olympics

Star trackster also trying for third state 200 title

By L.D. STRATE Sports Editor

When retracing the remarkable track career of Pampa senior Tanya Lidy, one has to take a trip back to the wide-open spaces of the playground at Lamar Elementary School. That's when Lidy, currently the Class 4A two-time defending champion in the 200-meter dash, learned to run and jump better than the rest.

"It seems like we were always playing chase, around and around the schoolyard," recalled Lidy, who was honored in January as the 1987 track athlete of the year by the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame.

The chases became more competitive at the middle school level when Lidy went out for the seventh-grade track team. As expected, she won her first 200-meter race. That first win started an astounding string of victories that lasted until she was a high school freshman at the state track meet in Austin. Lidy finished second in the finals. After a loss to Dalhart's Sharon Hudson during the '86 season, she has since gone unbeaten and has won the 200 her last two trips to the state meet. However, Lidy still strives for perfection. She wants to make it three in a row at state.

"I'd like to get my 200 time down to 23.5 before I graduate," Lidy said. "If I had a little more competition, it would help a lot.' Lidy wins most of her meets in going-away fashion, widening the gap between her and the rest of the field with each smooth, silk-like stride. "I always try and get as comfortable as I can when I'm in the blocks and then I concentrate on getting a good start," Lidy said. Lidy's personal best in the 200 is 23.9, which is not only the school record, but the best in the state so far this season. She's not far off the state mark

While Lidy's favorite event is the 200, she's also had noteworthy accomplishments in the long jump and triple jump. Her 20-11/4 leap in the long jump at the Borger Relays this year broke her own school record.

She's set four meet records in the long jump and two meet records in the triple jump this season.

Lidy is a natural athlete who wants to keep excelling, sais assistant coach Mike Lopez, who has tutored Lidy in the jumps the last four years.

'Someone like Tanya rarely comes around," Lopez says. "She never missed a workout. That in itself says a lot."

During Lidy's prep career, the Lady Harvesters have won 28 of 35 meets, including the state championship in 1986, the state runnerup trophy in '87, and three consecutive regional titles. In Lidy's freshman and sophomore years, the Pam-

The Lady Harvesters have a young squad this season, but Lidy believes they have a good chance at going back to the state meet.

'We're a little younger this season than we have been, but I feel we can at least make it to the regionals, if no further," she stated.

College coaches have had their eye on Lidy since she was burning up the cinders as a freshman. After reviewing hundreds of scholarship offers, Lidy has narrowed her choices to Oklahoma University and Nebraska University

"Both of those places just seemed like home to me," Lidy explained. "They're both big places, but there is just something about them that seems

Lidy not only has her sights set on competing in college, but she hopes to qualify for the U.S. Olympic team, not in 1992, but this year at Seoul, South Korea

"One of my goals was to run in the '92 Olympics, but I'm hoping I can make it this year," she said. "It depends on how hard she's willing to work," said Lopez about Lidy's Olympic quest. "She does realize she has to work hard to accomplish that goal. And she's gone out time after time and proven herself.

Tanya Lidy strives to excel.

Our morning meeting of the Mutual Radio Network Affilliates Council had adjourned for lunch. There was time to dash to the room at the Las Vegas Hilton and catch the opening ceremonies of the new baseball season. My wife, Peg, flipped on the NBC TV station right at the top of the hour. The colorful peacock came on, followed immediately by a blackbordered picture of Dick Risenhoover, under which were the dates "1927-1978". Risenhoover, radio voice of the Texas Rangers, had died that day of cancer.

It wasn't unexpected. The Rangers' front office people had told me several months earlier that my longtime broadcast partner was a very sick man and would be unable to work the upcoming season. But it was still a sad shock. We had worked together, lived Sports Forum

Dick had been a fine athlete at Childress HS. He played tennis, baseball and basketball, getting to the state tournament one season with the Bobcats. But baseball was his love. Following a freshman season of basketball at UT-Austin he entered the service, and returned to the Austin school to play baseball. The true story there is that his senior year, 1950, he slipped rounding third base and crawled across home plate on hands and knees with the run that won the College World Series for the Longhorns.

He returned to coach at Childress in 1950, becoming head basketball coach in 1954 and playing the Pampa Harvesters of Clifton McNeely several times in that job, where we first met. Three years later he quit to pursue his dream of becoming a major league radio broadcaster, and found a job at KGNC in Amarillo from which to start.

In 1970 he left for a sports TV anchor post with the NBC outlet in Dallas, gambling that major league baseball would come to the Metroplex soon, and he could get on the broadcast crew. It happened, and the rest is history. Five years he spent in the Major Leagues, before that fateful Open Day announcement. But he did attain his dream, just like many nervous and scared rookies today as they look forward to this week's first game in the big time.

(Staff Photo

Being in Las Vegas when Dick's death came brought back another memory of a weekend in El Paso, where the Buffs made an annual trek to play football, either with UTEP or New Mexico State. We'd normally spend Friday night eating dinner at the La Fiesta Dinner Club in Juarez, where some outstanding entertainment always accompanied the meal. Earl Grant, the Mills Brothers, always something. But this particular weekend was virtually an open date. we were doing, and plans and dreams for the future, among other things. Dick related his hopes for a major league broadcasting career. He saw that dream fullfiled. HOUSTON - Houston pitcher Mike Scott thinks the Astros have a chance to win the National League's Western Division this

But based on Scott's previous pre-season thoughts, that could spell trouble for the Astros.

He was pessimistic about 1986, but the Astros won the division crown by 10 games. He felt good about repeating last season when the Astros went into a late-season tailspin and finished third.

Now, despite last season's swoon, Scott has a good feeling about 1988

"If we all pitch well and we can start scoring some runs, there's no reason we can't win the division," Scott said.

The Astros had one of the strongest pitching staffs in the major leagues last season, but a lack of timely hitting cost them

Kirk Gibson, Jack Clark and Lee Smith signal a year of familiar faces in new places while spring's high hopes turn to reality Monday when Roger Clemens throws the first pitch of the 1988 baseball season.

The Los Angeles Dodgers, New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles all made major changes during the winter with Bob Welch, Brett Butler and Danny Jackson among those others who switched leagues

The Minnesota Twins, trying to become the first World Series champion to repeat since the 1977-78 Yankees, stood pat. The only changes they made came in the financial department - they now have seven million-dollar players, the most in the major leagues

In Boston, Clemens could become the first pitcher to win three straight Cy Young awards. He will begin that effort Monday at 1:05 p.m. EDT when Detroit and Jack Morris face the youthful Red Sox at Fenway Park in the first game of the year.

'We're probably a better ballclub than we were in 1986,' Boston manager John McNamara said, referring to the Red Sox team that came within one strike of winning the World Series

The acquisition of Smith, a top reliever from the Chicago Cubs, was one of the changes made in the offseason.

Detroit, wiped out by Minnesota in the American League playoffs, will try to squeeze another year out of its veterans, now minus Gibson, who signed a free-agent contract with Los Angeles. The Tigers, as usual, had the worst record in the AL during spring training while looking at lots of youngsters.

Mario Soto, back from two years of injuries, will start for host Cincinnati an hour later against St. Louis in the traditional National League

Soto was not expected to make the Reds roster when spring training began, but pitched himself into the opening-day assignment. Joe Magrane will start for the NL champion Cardinals, the only team to reach the World Series

Astros may soar to top in 1988

There's nothing I like doing better this time of year than to poll myself on the Major League divisional races and then see how things end up when the last pitch is thrown Very few years have I printed my guesses in the newspaper. I usually end up embarrassing myself. Most of the time I just jot down my first-place picks on a piece of paper and stick it in a folder somewhere. Oftentimes, as October draws near, my memory starts fading and I conveniently forget where I put the folder. Mainly because I knew I didn't come close to picking the Only one time, as I recall, was I ever correct in picking the World Series champion. It was back in the early 1970s when the 'Big Red Machine' of Cincinnati went against the New York Yankees. I went with the Reds because Johnhy Bench was from my native Oklahoma, which was a pretty good reason since the Binger ballplayer was considered a cinch hall of famer.

Well, here goes in 1988, but don't take my picks too seriously. In the American League East, I look for the Toronto Blue Jays to finally slip up and win the title. The Jays came very close last year, but late-season injuries spoiled their chances. The outfield of George Bell Jesse Barfield and Lloyd Moseby is the best in baseball and their productive hitting will hold up a questionable mound staff. In the American League West, my guess goes to the Kansas City Royals, who have an outstanding pitching staff to go with George Brett, Steve Balboni, Bo Jackson

Rangers face Indians in season opener

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON - A year ago, the Texas Rangers were favored to win the American League Western Division and crashed hard into last place.

They open the 1988 season against the Cleveland Indians in Arlington Stadium Monday night with nobody giving them

There's hope last year's scenario can be reversed.

"Nobody picked Minnesota last year and they won the world title," said Rangers General Manager Tom Grieve. "Something unusual usually happens in our division. I just hope we are the ones who will make it happen

Hough to start

When veteran Charlie Hough takes the mound against the Indians, the Rangers, who finished 10 games behind the World Series champion Twins, will be wrapped in question marks.

The Rangers have questionable pitching and defense, the two things that started them off poorly last year. They never could recover from a miserable nine-game losing streak

Texas finished 11th in the AL with a 4.63 earned run average, the second-highest singleseason figure in club history, behind the 4.64 from 1973.

The Rangers led the majors with 760 walks and 55 hit batters. They also topped the AL with 1,103 strikeouts, but had a league-record 26 balks. They allowed a club record 199 home

Texas' relievers compiled a 4.04 ERA with 27 saves in 329 appearances, and the team led the AL in a bad statistic for relievers — 240 walks.

Stanley question mark

The bright spot was Texas club-record 194 homers.

In the catching department, the arm of Mike Stanley is a question mark. He's a .300 hitter, but his defense must improve. Stanley was better in spring training as he worked on a quicker release.

The starting pitching staff will revolve around Hough and Jose Guzman, although Guzman had an inconsistent

Bobby Witt and Paul Kilgus must have strong seasons for the Rangers to be legitimate contenders. Witt had a sixinning no-hitter in spring training while Kilgus was rocked hard in one start. Bullpen under gun

Edwin Correa still is suffering from arm trouble and will open the season in the minors. Mitch Williams and Jeff Russell are under the gun to provide Manager Bobby Valentine with confidence in his bullpen. Also, Jose Cecena, who has been in the minor leagues. could be the stopper Texas needs until Dale Mohorcic is healthy again. Mohorcic had an elbow operation to remove bone chips and won't be back until at least May Cecena was nothing short of sensational as he earned his first ticket to the big leagues.

"It's time for our young pitching staff to start producing," Grieve said. "We can't use the excuse that they are young any more. Cecena has been a nice surprise and we just hope he can stand the big league heat. Kilgus has to come through for us on the left

The Rangers were hurt when they had to dismiss lefty Steve Howe in the off-season because he violated the chemical dependency provisions in his contract.

Lineup set

The team is set with Steve Buechele at third base, Scott Fletcher at shortstop, Jerry Browne at second, Pete O'Brien at first, Pete Incaviglia in left field, Ruben Sierra in right, and Bobby Brower and Oddibe McDowell fighting it out for the center spot.

McDowell will open in center and be returned to the leadoff spot. Brower will play against left-handed pitching. Larry Parrish will be the right-handed designated hitter and veteran Steve Kemp will be the left-handed DH.

"Oakland has to be the favorite in our division because of all the off-season deals they made," Grieve said. "Of course, you can't ever discount the defending world champions. We have a very, very tough division, the toughest in baseball."

NOTE: Baseball's current defending champion, the Minnesota Twins, had the worst regular-season winning percentage (.525) of any team ever to win the World Series. "Sweet Seasons: Baseball's Top Teams Since 1920," by Howard Siner (Pharos Books), profiles the leading clubs of the home-run era. This excerpt covers one of the best of recent years — the 1975 Cincinnati Reds (108-54, .667).

Sparky Anderson called it the best hunch he ever had. The manager of the Cincinnati Reds felt his team couldn't win the National League pennant in 1975 without a solid third baseman. So, he asked Pete Rose to do the

The '75 Reds rolled to victory behind the hitting of NL MVP Joe Morgan, Johnny Bench and Tony Perez, as well as Rose and Foster. Relying heavily on a strong bullpen, Cincinnati finished 20 games ahead of runner-up Los Angeles in the NL West. The Reds swept Pittsburgh, 3-0, in the League Championship Series. Then Cincinnati, reaching the top for the first time since 1940, beat the Boston Red Sox in a dramatic seven-game World Series. It was the best season in the 99-year history of baseball's oldest franchise.

Third base was the right place for a talkative, fiery guy called "Charley Hustle." At third, Rose found time to talk to pitchers, umpires, baserunners and coaches. He adjusted to his new spot by fielding 400 ground balls a day and doggedly turned himself into a decent fielder.

At age 32, Morgan (17, 94, .327) was six-time All-Star. Morgan led the NL in walks (132) and finished second in steals (67)

The ace of the staff, 24-year-old Don Gullett (15-4, 2.42), had eight complete games in 1975, but he contributed nothing to the mid-season runaway by the Reds. A hard-throwing lefty, Gullett missed two months when he was struck by a ball that broke the thumb on his pitching hand.

Six of Cincinnati's pitchers, including Gullett, won in double figures. The other five were: Gary Nolan (15-9, 3.16), a veteran who had been sidelined for two years with a shoulder injury; Jack Billingham (15-10, 4.11); Fred Norman (12-4, 3.73); Pat Darcy (11-5, 3.57); and Clay Kirby (10-6, 4.70)

But it was Anderson's superb manipulation of his bullpen that turned out to be crucial. The top relievers were right-hander Rawly Eastwick (5-3, 2.60, with 22 saves), a 24-year-old rookie, and left-hander Will McEnaney (5-2, 2.47, 15 saves), a 23-year-

In mid May - soon after Rose's shift to third - Cincinnati caught fire. By June 7, the Reds moved into first place to stay. They won 43 of the next 53 games (a winning percentage of .811). By the end of August, Cincinnati was at 90-45 with an 181/2-game lead over number two Los Angeles. On Sept. 7, the Reds clinched the NL West flag - the earliest title victory in National League history.

After sweeping Pittsburgh in the playoffs to win the NL pennant, the Reds squared off to face the AL Boston Red Sox (95-65, .594) in a rain-

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) -Sandy Lyle surged past struggling Jeff Sluman and took a three-stroke lead Saturday after three rounds of the $1 million Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

"I don't think I could have squeezed much more out of the round," said Lyle, a former British Open champion who is seeking his second victory of the year on the American Tour.

Sluman, who led through the first two rounds, slipped to a 73. He takes a 202 total into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $180,000 first prize.

'I didn't play bad. It was just a day when the putts lipped out and the drives trickled into the rough in funny places," said the slight, slender Sluman who has yet to win in five seasons of Tour activity

Ken Green moved into third place at 204 after a 69. Scott Hoch was next at 72-206.

Dr. Gil Morgan and Donnie Hammond were at 207, eight shots off the pace.

"Ridiculous" was the word Bright used for the play-calling. To this day, Bright has yet to praise former Texas Longhorn Landry, saying that if the coach is OK with Schramm then he's ing champion, was denied a chance to repeat as the NCAA women's basketball champion, but the Southeastern Conference will have another representative in the finals.

It'll be third-ranked Auburn, appearing in the Final Four for the first time, and fifth-rated Louisiana Tech, winner of the first NCAA women's championship in 1982, in the 1988 title game Sunday in the Tacoma Dome.

Louisiana Tech, 31-2, reached the finals Friday night by knocking off top-ranked Tennessee 68-59 in the first semifinal game and Auburn, 32-2, stopped Long Beach State's running game 68-55 in the semifinal nightcap. Tennessee had a 22-game winning streak broken and Long Beach State had a 20-game victory string snapped.

'I wasn't surprised Louisiana Tech beat Tennessee," Auburn Coach Joe Ciampi said. "Any time Leon (Louisiana Tech Coach Leon Barmore) has time to prepare for one game, he's got a good shot at beating you. I hope he doesn't have enough time to prepare for us.'

Barmore's Lady Techsters avenged a 67-44 loss to Tennessee in last year's NCAA title game in Austin, Texas.

"If you would have been kicked like we were a year ago, it's hard not to be inspired." said Barmore. "We wanted to give a good account of ourselves and show we could play. That was our motivation.

Bullets knock down Mavs

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — As a player for 13 years, Wes Unseld took pride in his professionalism. In his first year as a head coach, the Hall-of-Famer expects the same thing from his Washington Bullets. "I don't do much to motivate them," Unseld said Friday night. "If we're not ready to play at this stage it's too late to worry about it." The Bullets are locked in a tight struggle with Philadelphia and New York for what could be the final playoff berth in the Eastern Conference, and they helped themselves Friday with a 118-103 victory over the Dallas Mavericks. By defeating the Mavericks, the Bullets were able to pull within a half game of Philadelphia, which lost to Atlanta, 105-93 Friday. "We shouldn't expect any help, and we don't deserve any," Unseld said. "Other teams are raising their play, and that's what we need to do. We have to rise to the occasion. Hopefully tonight is a start."

The Bullets had been flat in losing Wednesday to Cleveland, a team that is only a game-and-a-half ahead of them. "I don't know what will happen night to night with this team," Unseld said. "Tonight I couldn't read how we'd come out. Quite honestly, that's not indicative of a good The Bullets looked like a good club against Dallas. Washington shot ntique lovers will get to indulge themselves next weekend when Twentieth Century Cotillion Study Club holds its 26th annual antique show and sale, April 8-10 at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

The show will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

day. Tickets are $2 in advance and $3 at the door. Proceeds from the event will go to Opportunity Plan, Inc., a student loan program based in Canyon which assists students in continuing their education past high school. There are currently 88 students from the Panhandle area receiving aid through Twentieth Century Cotillion's division of OPI. Because it is a loan program rather than a scholarship program, students repay the loans and the money is used over and over by many people.

At present, OPI's repayment record is 98 percent. From a capital fund of $59,946.31, the fund has loaned a total of $297,579.80, which means the money has turned over five times, according to Janyth Bowers of Twentieth Century Cotillion Study Club.

"If you attended the first antique show and sale, your money is still working," she said.

Dealers from six states are slated to participate in this year's event. Items on display will include cut glass, art, glass, china, early Americana, nautical, Oriental rugs, sterling, silver plate, coins, collectibles and fine furniture.

Chairman of this year's show is Sue Cree. Cochairman is Betty White. Bowers is in charge of publicity.

Alpha Delta Pi alumnae of Pampa have placed collection boxes at McDonald's and in the teachers' lounges at Pampa public schools for Scott Paper Company proofs of purchase, which will go to raise funds for the Ronald McDonald House in Amarillo.

This is the third consecutive year that Scott Paper Company has helped raise money for the Amarillo Ronald McDonald House as part of a continuing nationwide campaign to raise more than $1 million for Ronald McDonald Houses and Ronald McDonald Children's Charities (RMCC).

"Scott hopes to surpass last year's fund-raising performance with the help of consumers nationwide," said Scott Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Philip E. Lippincott. "Together we can join Ronald McDonald House and Ronald McDonald Children's Charities in providing

Major Scott paper products will carry a special package design during the fund-raising which tells the Ronald McDonald House/RMCC story. A portion of each purchase will be contributed to Ronald McDonald House and RMCC.

Locally, a portion of the funds collected will be donated directly to the Ronald McDonald House in Amarillo in the names of the participating retailers. Amarillo retailers included in the drive are Affiliated Foods member grocery stores, Furr's, Safeway and United.

According to local Scott representative Carroll Jones, the first two years of the program garnered about $6,000 for the Amarillo Ronald House.

The Amarillo Ronald McDonald House is a "home away from home" for families of children receiving treatment for serious illnesses at nearby hospitals and treatment centers. One of more than 100 Houses in the U.S. and five other countries, it has been a residence for more than 750 families of critically ill children throughout the tri-state area since opening its doors in 1983.

The Amarillo House is a project of the Children's Oncology Services of the Texas Panhandle (a non-profit organization) and part of the cornerstone program of Ronald McDonald Children's Charities (RMCC), which was established in 1984 in memory of Ray A. Kroc, McDonald's founder, to provide grants to organizations that directly benefit chil-

"We are so grateful for the retailers who will take an active part in the effort to inform consumers about our endeavors to benefit children," said Pat Cathcart, executive director of the Amarillo Ronald McDonald House. "Literally hundreds of children and families from the Tri-State region will receive caring support because of these retailers' commitment to telling the Ronald McDonald House/ RMCC story in their markets."

Proof-of-purchase seals (UPC symbols) from Scott products may be turned in at the Pampa collection points by Pampa buyers. The UPC symbols will be sent to Scott Paper Company, which will donate an additional five cents per seal to the Ronald House, according to Cathcart. The UPC symbols will be collected through the month of May and mailed to Scott Paper in June for redemption.

Consumers may also send the seals direct to Scott Paper, according to Cathcart. Details for redemption are on specially marked packages of Scott Paper products.

Also a part of the Scott Paper Company national effort is a donation of a year's supply of paper goods to every Ronald House in the United States. According to Jones, the Amarillo Ronald House was to receive its shipment of paper goods in March

Scott products included in the fund-raising promotion are Scot-Towels, Viva towels and Job Squad towels; ScotTissue, Family Scott, Cottonelle and Soft 'N' Pretty bathroom tissue; Scott Family Napkins and Viva Napkins; Scotties facial tissue; Baby Fresh and Wash-a-bye baby wipes and Sofkins cleansing wipes.

THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST All four of the writers of the life of the word which Jesus had said." Christ upon this earth record the events surrounding His resurrec-tion from the dead (Matthew 28; Mark 16; Luke 24; John 20.) Beyond question, the raising of the dead has to rank as one of the greatest of miracles. The Bible records that many have been miraculously raised from the dead, eve in ancient times (I Kings 17:19-21; 2 Kings 4:32-27.) Jesus raised people from the dead (Matthew 9:18-26; John 11:17-44) as did the apostles, Peter and Paul (Acts 9:36-41; Acts 20:9-10.) The resurrection of Jesus,

Also, in Luke 24:46: "And He said unto them, Thus it is written, that the Christ should suffer and rise again from the dead the third day."

The resurrection of Jesus from the dead was proof of God's approv-al of Him (Romans 1:4.) While many may have considered that God's allowing Jesus to be crucified and killed meant that God disfied and killed meant that God disapproved of Jesus, in reality it provided the opportunity for God to show His approval of His Son in raising Him from the dead.

Paul says the resurrection of Jesus from the dead was further proven in His appearance to as many as five hundred brethren at one time (I Corinthians 15:1-11.) Today, many are reminded of His re-day, many are reminded of His re-surrection once a year when they celebrate the man-made observ-ance known as "Easter Sunday". However, we do not find in the Scriptures where Jesus or His apostles ever authorized such an observance. True worshippers of God remember His life, His death, His burial in the tomb and His resurrection from the dead in partaking of the Lord's Supper upon the first day of every week (Acts 20:7.)

The musical, based on the comic strip by Charles Shultz, will feature several newcomers to ACT I, along with a familiar face or

Mike Kneisl, program director for KGRO/KOMX radio, is playing the role of Charlie Brown. Kneisl has lived in Pampa for five vears and had his acting debut with ACT I in the season opener The Good Doctor. He came to Pampa from Minnesota and is a graduate of the 1986 Leadership Pampa course. His hobbies include all kinds of music and all sports.

Playing the role of Lucy is Cindy Judson. She and her husband, the Rev. Dr. John Judson, recently moved to Pampa. Rev. Judson is the new pastor of First Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Judson says she has always loved the theatre and the fact that Pampa has a community theatre was a strong factor in their decision to move here. No stranger to the stage, her favorite roles include Miss Prism in The Importance of Being Earnest and Rose Alvarez in Bye Bye Birdie.

The role of Snoopy will be played by Leah Maple. Originally from Miami, Leah played the role of Elvira in ACT I's 1985 production of Blithe Spirit. During her high school drama days, Maple won several state and regional acting and speaking awards. Her acting credits include roles from Evita, Mousetrap and Romeo and Juliet. She is married to Kenneth Maple and is employed at The Hollywood

Danny Cowan is no stranger to ACT I, having played in Witness for the Prosecution, Appointment

With Death, A Thurber Carnival and as the window washer in Our Hearts Were Young and Gay. He will play the role of Linus, complete with security blanket.

Cowan is classified display manager at The Pampa News. His hobbies include writing music and poetry, telling bad jokes and staying active in the National Guard. He and wife Leanna have two children. Raeann and Gabriel.

Billy Roberts will be making his stage debut in the role of Scroeder. Roberts is a sophomore at Pampa High School. He is the son of Danny Parkerson, manager of M.K. Brown Auditorium. Roberts is also a member of the new Top O' Texas Revue, a young singing troupe managed by Parkerson.

Providing the music accompaniment for the production is Heidi Rapstine, a Pampa native. She is married to Philip Rapstine and teaches violin, cello and Rapstine plays seven instruments and has won an award for outstanding recital performance at Amarillo College. She is currently on the board of the Community Concert Association and has served on the board of Pampa Fine Arts Association

She has one son, Mica, who is 9 years old.

Katrina Hildebrandt will assist with music and special sound effects for the show. She is employed at St. Matthews Day School. She is an accomplished flutist and has performed for various organizations in Pampa.

She is married to Bill Hildebrandt, who is employed by the City of Pampa Parks and Recreation Department. They have a pet Chow dog named Kaiser.

The dinner theatre production will be presented in the M.K. Brown Room of Pampa Community Building. In keeping with the youthful flavor of this production, the evening fare will include a build-your-own-hamburger bar and a special dessert.

The Sunday matinee is being billed as a "popcorn performance;" no dinner will be served.

Begin in childhood to avoid sun damage

SKILLMAN, N.J. (AP) - A half million Americans will get skin cancer this year, according to The American Academy of Dermatology, and one in seven Americans will get skin cancer in his or her lifetime Most people receive 80 percent of their sun exposure by age 20. Because youngsters spend so much time outdoors and because sun exposure and resultant skin damage are cumulative. pediatricians and dermatologists are pointing to childhood as the best time to prevent skin damage, including severe sunburn, skin cancer and premature skin aging that begins to appear decades later.

Experts urge that protective efforts should start while a child is young. In newborns, the protective mechanism of the body's natural sun-screening pigment is

Regular use of a sunblock with a Sun Protection Factor (SPF) of 15 during childhood and adolescence can reduce a lifetime risk of developing skin cancer by up to 80 percent, according to Dr. Carl W. Ehmann, Ehmann, a dermatologist, is Research and Development vice president for Johnson

& Johnson Baby Products Co., which recently introduced Baby Sunblock

"Parents often think their children only need sun protection in the summer while at the beach. Ehmann said, "but they should recognize the year-round risk from sun exposure. Children spend more time in the sun walking to and from school than adults spend outside all week. Then they go out to play for several hours

Spring, Flowers, Bees & STINGS

One of my favorite times of the year, Spring, has all the things we think of as to the reminder that life goes on ... green grass again, flowers coming out every-where, and then, those pesky critters called insects including, bees, ants, spiders, wasps, etc. This can be a trying time for pets, many of them young and inexperienced in the ways of insects. If you have a pet who decides to get too close and ends up getting stung you should have a re-medy on hand. There is swelling which will take place in the area of the sting and in hypersensitive animals, this can be in hypersensitive animals, this can be throughout its' body. This reaction, including hives, difficult breathing and shock, can be life-threatening in some pets. I usually recommend "Benadryl", an over-the-counter (non-prescription) preparation. It is available in either limited or counter from the limit of the state of the limit of the state of the limit of the limi quid or capsule form, but I usually re-commend the liquid. Dosage is based on the weight of the dog or cat, starting with 1/4 tsp for a 2 fb. pup to 1 tsp for a 30 lb dog. This should be given 2-3 times/day, until the swelling which accompanies the sting goes away. For the immediate area of the sting, household ammonia on a small cotton swab will often help relieved. the swelling and pain. Fleas and ticks are coming out of dormancy now. If you notice your pet scratching, check first for signs of fleas, esp. around the base of the tail. Little red spots, accompanied by small "pepper-like" droppings, are sure signs of fleas. Ticks usually are easily seen, esp. in the "arm-pits", and behind the ears. Your veterinarian can help you set up a program to rid your pet and premises of these parasites.

Pampa was a hub of business activity the last two Saturdays as Pampa and area people flocked to shopping centers for Easter buying. Downtown parking spaces were bordering on being premiums. That's the upbeat news we all like to hear.

Proud grandmother and former Pampan Patsy Kirby of Hays, Kan. visited her new grandson, Dustin Ray Kuhn, and his parents, Lynn and Steve. Belated congratulations to all!

Pauline and Jack Vaughn, Gerry and Clint Caylor hosted a spaghetti dinner for 16 members and spouses of the Preceptor Chi chapter of Beta Sigma Phi in the Vaughn home. Of course, they had a good time!

Everyone wants to know why Pauline Carlson is wearing a neck brace. No, it isn't intended to balance the gizmo on her knee. Pauline and Milo, Minelle and Paul Turner were cruising along the Canyon E-way and became involved in a five-car pileup.

Checking the charts

By BEAR MILLS KOMX Morning Personality

First things first - Happy

Easter! If you're reading this early in the morning, why don't we all get together later this morning and sing our little country hearts out in church on Easter Sunday. On with the business at hand: The most oft-asked question in show business is "Whatever happened to ... ?" Perhaps we can answer a few of your questions about bygone stars of country

One of the biggest "fallen stars" is Ray Price. No, he's not dead ... just dead in the water. Price is still recording, albeit only for records marketed exclusively on television.

Well-known as one of the strongest voices in the business, Price eventually grew tired of the petty politics of radio and has basically told the business to go jump off a cliff.

He now records on the independent Step One label, and you can occasionally find his newer works in larger record stores. Price lives in East Texas but keeps the town a secret to maintain his privacy.

During the '70s a number of stars had brief shots at success that were promptly squelched by the Urban Cowboy movement. Perhaps the most remote was La Costa. After a couple of hits, it became a long string of misses. Last I heard, La Costa was "doing clubs" in California. There's no sign of a comeback.

A group I predict will again return to the forefront is the Kendalls. After great success in the '70s and early '80s, the group seemed to have lost the support of their label, MCA. Their last few songs were typical Kendalls but fell flat due to no promotion.

They are also on the Step One label now, but could make a big comeback if the hunger for traditional product continues with country fans.

Someone once told me that Step One Records, often referred to as SOR, was where old country acts went to die. That may be true in the next case.

Hank Thompson was a premier honky-tonker in his day. Thompson spent almost as much time drinking beer as he did singing about it, however. That caused his stage show to become at times pitiful.

Unlike George Jones, who has a strong entourage to carry him over rough times with the bottle, Thompson is pretty well left to fend for himself. He occasionally shows up at the Grand Ol' Opry and still handles himself on records. And, when he is sober enough to remember the words to his songs, he's not too bad in con-

Another victim of the Urban Cowboy fad was Razzy Bailey. Bailey is one of my personal favorites. As the Urban Cowboy stage passed, Bailey predicted the next 'big thing" would be countryrock. He was a little ahead of his time, and country fans balked at his overt references to ZZ Top and his roaring guitar licks.

Now Hank Williams Jr. has monster hits following the same formula — but it did in Bailey and his star status

Bailey currently records on the SOA (Sound of America) label. He has also gone back to the Razzy Bailey sound that produced hits like "Anywhere There's a Juke-" "9,999,999 Tears" and "If Love Had a Face." Depending on the politics of Nashville, Bailey eventually could make a comeback. I hope so.

Other names from the past that bear recognition: Susie Allanson, Rex Allen Jr., Bill Anderson, Hoyt Axton and Eddy Arnold are all still alive. Anderson hosts a musical game show on the Nashville Network. Axton is the voice of Busch Beer and does some acting in movies and television. Arnold is retired and living the life of a reclusive millionaire.

Still recording and struggling for new notoriety are Atlanta, Jimmy Buffet, Stonewall Jackson, Del Reeves, Porter Waggoner, Jerry Jeff Walker and Rusty

Hopefully that answers your questions about stars of days goneby ... there are so many that we did not include that a followup column on the subject may be in the works. If you have a favorite oldies act you wonder about,

Jazz artist views success as whirlwind

By MARY CAMPBELL AP Newsfeatures Writer

Diane Schuur won the "best female jazz vocal performance' Grammy this year. Carmen McRae, Janis Siegel of Manhattan Transfer, Sarah Vaughan and Ella Fitzgerald were her com-

The Seattle resident, whose last name is Dutch and whose nickname is Deedles, also won it last year. Last year, her winning album, on GRP, was Timeless. This year it was Diane Schuur and the Count Basie Orchestra, also GRP. Arranger Frank Foster also won this year's "best instrumental arrangement accompanying vocal" for "Deedles" Blues" a track on Diane Schuur and the Count Basie Orchestra.

'Deedles' Blues" is one of her tracks on GRP Super in Concert, a new two-LP set that includes Lee Ritenour, Dave Grusin, Tom Scott and Chick Corea's Elektric Band. These artists went to Japan for a seven-city tour last fall. They cut the record in Tokyo.

Also, Schuur, who sings on Barry Manilow's Swing Street Arista album, was a guest on his TV special that paid homage to jazz and big bands. Their "Summertime" duet was a show-stopper.

"He sent me flowers," she says. "Nobody ever sent me flowers. I cried my eyes out." The singer is becoming better known - and appreciated. She made Deedles and Schuur Thing for GRP before the two Grammy winners. In 1987, she went to Japan twice and Europe

'It is just incredible; it's just like a whirlwind," she says. "I'd rather be busy than bored, that's for sure. It is never easy in the beginning. I wasn't sure how far rhythm 'n' blues kind of thing. I would love for Billy Joel to write a song for me. And Stevie Wonder. I'd like to do a duet with Michael Jackson. He writes so well, too. But no matter what happens, it is not going to change the way I am basically. I'm always going to be Deedles, always, always, always. I've got a wonderful support system, good family, good friends, people that I value. That's what makes everything so much fun."

She made up her own nickname. "When I was about 5 I'd say, 'Deedle, deedle,' It stayed with me ever since.'

She was born in Takoma, Wash., grew up in nearby Auburn, and now lives in an apartment near Seattle she calls "the Deedle pad." She says, "I started playing organ when I was 3, graduated to the piano. My greataunt had an old huge Hammond organ. You had to turn a lot of switches on.

"I always had perfect pitch. Somebody would strike an E flat and say, 'It's a G.' I'd say, 'It's an E flat.' They couldn't fool me at all. I took some lessons when I was about 8. I got out of that and continued to play by ear. Once I got the fingering techniques down, then it was easy.

She continues, "I went to the School for the Blind in Vancouver, Wash. During that time, I started performing in the Northwest. I wasn't born blind. It was a hospital mishap right after I was born, too much oxygen in the incubator. It was during the time they were experimenting with that kind of thing. So be it. Her twin brother, to whom she is close, escaped the oxygen and now is a airline pilot. "His name is David. I call him Pilot. We have a sister a year and a half younger, rate with somebody.

Elizabeth. We call her Buzzy. She takes care of my business. She and her husband make sure that everything is cool. They're wonderful people. Their son and daughter I love a lot. They love their aunt Dee.

"Our father is a retired police captain. Our mother died of cancer in 1967 when I was 13. She was 31. Adolescence was not the easiest thing to go through. But I made it. Music helped. I kept on performing and stuff. After I graduated from high school I went at it even more. I got into jazz in the mid-1970s. I decided that's what I would pursue, for a while anyway.

Schuur says the two people who influenced her the most when she was growing up were Sarah Vaughan and Dinah Washington.

In 1975, Schuur sang at the Monterey, Calif., Jazz Festival with Ed Shaughnessy's big band She lived for a time in Tucson. then returned to the Pacific Northwest, "because I love it."

Back at Monterey in 1979, saxophonist Stan Getz heard her. She says, "Things started changing. My career was no longer just floundering. About a year later, I performed a couple of dates with him in San Francisco." In 1982, Getz put her on an In Performance at the White House concert with himself. Chick Corea. Dizzy Gillespie and Jon Faddis.

She had made a first record, Pilot of My Destiny, for a company in Seattle that is now out of business. She says, "The master was destroyed in a flood. I wrote the title song to symbolize my growing independence and identity." She hasn't composed since but says, "Maybe one of these days my creative juices will flow. Maybe I can collabo-

NEW YORK (AP) - At the age of 19, reggae artist Ziggy Marley has seen enough of the world to know he wants to change it.

"I am not blind," Marley says. 'Even in Jamaica, injustice happened. It happened all over the world. It means something all over the world."

On the Melody Makers' new album, Conscious Party, Marley sings of oppression, bigotry and hope for a better world.

For anyone who follows reggae music, Marley's political consciousness should come as no surprise. The late Bob Marley, Ziggy's father, was reggae's most celebrated artist and famous for such protest songs as "Get Up, Stand Up" and "I Shot the Sheriff.

Marley was born on October 17, 1968, in Trenchtown, an impoverished section of Kingston in Jamaica. When he was 11, he formed the Melody Makers along with his brother. Stevie, and sisters, Cedella and Sharon. The Melody Makers' first song, Children Playing in the Streets," was written by their father. In 1985, they released their first album. Plant the Game Right, which received a Grammy nomination for best reggae record. In 1986, they released the album Hey World.

"We're brothers and sisters," Marley said. "Doing music was part of being a family. Hey World contained such overtly political songs as the antiapartheid "666," and on the new album, he continues to confront injustice with songs such as

'Tomorrow People," the first single to be released. "Tomorrow People, think of your past," he sings, attacking those who think only of the future and their indifference to humanity

"The original idea was from robots, like the movie Robocop people becoming androids. Marley said. "Scientists are making dangerous things."

Although Conscious Party is only Marley's third album, he is already attracting the attention of some of the music industry's most highly acclaimed artists. Talking Heads members Chris Frantz and Tina Weymouth produced the record and Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richards plays on the song "Lee and Molly.

The Melody Makers started touring in 1975 and have appeared at shows with Stevie Wonder, The Clash, the late Peter Tosh and Jimmy Cliff. They performed at Reggae Sunsplash last August in Jamaica. Marley has a worldwide tour scheduled to begin in April.

It's time of year for funnels

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD Associated Press Writer

Six months and hundreds of miles apart last year, nature's destructive fury reminded Texans that tornadoes don't necessarily stick to a season.

Weather experts note that in Texas, as in other Tornado Alley states, a twister can strike anywhere, any time. But the rumbling thunderstorms of spring announce the beginning of the unofficial tornado season that runs from April through June.

Forecasters say every thunderstorm has the potential to produce a twister. From 1951 through 1986, there have been an average of 118 tornadoes in Texas per year, according to the state climatologist's office in College Station.

More than 60 percent of those occur between April and June, records show. In April and June an average of about 18 to 19 tornadoes occur each month, but in May, when weather conditions are the most unstable, that average increases to about 36, or roughly more than one per day

"People should have plans of what they'll do in tornadoes. If they wait until it gets there, it's going to be too late," said Buddy McIntyre, a forecaster with the National Weather Service.

In Texas, the natural collision between cold, dry air barreling down the Great Plains and warm, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico occurs almost daily in the spring and sometimes produces violent consequences.

Like battling armies, the cold and warm air masses swirl around each other. When weather conditions are ripe, a funnel will drop down and begin its march, some with wind speeds in excess of 250 mph that can drive a soda straw through a tree trunk. Last year, on May 22, a killer storm flattened the small West Texas town of Saragosa, leaving 30 dead and 162 injured. In mid-November, 11 East Texans died when a series of tornadoes thrashed towns from Cherokee County to the Gulf Coast. "A tornado is such a devastating kind of storm.

No matter how much preparation you do there is some property damage and some loss of life. But there are some things you can do to protect your-self and property,'' said Laureen Chernow, a spokeswoman for the governor's division of emergency management.

When weather conditions indicate that a tornado could develop, the weather service issues a tornado watch. Weather experts advise that during a watch, keep a careful lookout for the development of a funnel cloud and listen to weather broadcasts on the radio. Make sure you are near a safe shelter.

A tornado warning means that one has been spotted. Take cover immediately and don't go outside, except if you are in a car or mobile home, in which case it will be safer taking cover in the nearest ditch or depression.

If you are at home, the best place to stay is a basement or underground storm shelter. If no such shelter is available, go inside a closet in the center of the house or bathroom or lie flat under a heavy

James R. McDonald, director of the Institute for Disaster Research at Texas Tech University, says many persons try to outrun tornadoes in their cars. Recalling the 1979 Wichita Falls tornado that killed 53, McDonald said, "people jumped in their cars and drove down Main Street at 90 mph.' Twenty-six people died trying to outrun the

McIntyre noted that most fatalities in a tornado are from flying debris, so "we tell people to squat down, cover their heads and present a low profile."

Another misconception, weather experts said, is about opening windows. It was once believed windows needed to be open to equalize air pressure between the storm and the inside of the house to prevent the house from exploding.

McIntyre said there are enough natural openings in a house to equalize air pressure, and "if that tornado wants to open your windows, it'll do that

HOUSTON (AP) - A Houston firefighter, recently exposed to an attack of Africanized bees during a fact-finding trip to Venezuela, says wild swarms must be eliminated and strict controls placed on domestic bees to prevent attacks on people when the violent insects invade Texas

Mike Warnke said he does not advocate a ban on raising bees in the city, but officials should consider this option.

Warnke and a group of Houston-area beekeepers spent several days in Venezuela earlier this month. During a visit to a commercial apiary they came under heavy attack and several, including Warnke, were stung despite their protective suits, metal veils and heavy gloves.

Fire Chief Robert Clayton said he supports Warnke's main recommendation that the public be educated about the bees. He also suggested area beekeepers should address the issue of Africanized bees before the politicians do

Warnke recommended that the city begin preparing for the arrival of the bees, expected in about three years, by developing a public education campaign and acquiring special equipment and training for firemen who may have to rescue people from the

Louisiana and Alabama. One suspected swarm in Houston was killed several months ago and another Tuesday The bees found Tuesday were at the Port of Houston near a cargo of coiled steel from Brazil. Department of Agriculture officials killed the bees and sent samples Africanized bees are similar in appearance to European bees but are far more aggressive in defending their hives.

Efforts to halt the bees have been unsuccessful.

Houston beekeeper Darrell Lister, who organized the Venezuela trip, said domesticated hives can be maintained if the beekeepers regularly introduce new, mated queens into the hives. Otherwise, the naturally produced queens will mate with African or hybrid drones and produce fresh generations of Africanized bees.

Despite these management techniques, Warnke says every wild hive in Houston will have to be removed or destroyed.

ALL DAY!

HUH!

WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Department scientists are hopeful that one of the costliest crop pests of farmers and home gardeners may one day be curbed by a natural enemy, a microscopic killer worm that searches the soil for the corn rootworm.

The tiny worm, or nematode, is called Steinernema feltiae. After infecting the rootworm, the nematode releases a bacterium that kills the pest. Then, said USDA entomologist Jan J. Jackson, the nematode uses the larva's body as a place to reproduce while it feasts on bacteria and larva

About 10 days later, hundreds of new nematodes emerge and start searching for more root-

"That gives you an advantage over chemical controls," he said Monday in a report by the department's Agricultural Research Service. "A chemical just sits there and waits for the rootworm to come to it. The nematode doesn't wait."

But Jackson found that the nematodes don't persist in the ground long enough to eliminate a rootworm infestation. In one field trial where he works at the department's Northern Grain Insects Reseach Laboratory, Brookings, S.D., Jackson applied 100,000 nematodes to the base of each of several corn plants, reducing rootworm damage 11 percent

Jackson said that is not an acceptable level of control, but he expects further research could lead to protection as good as from chemical insecticides. A separate test with a chemical reduced root damage 44 percent.

Affects of Russian wheat aphid, center, and wheat streak mosiac virus, right, as compared with healthy wheat, left.

Heavy infestations of insects in several area wheat fields

WHEAT INSECTS

Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension enover last Monday, and we surveyed some wheat fields for inand wheat curl mites. We are seeing several old patches of volunteer wheat that has about died out this spring. I remember last fall that some of this volunteer wheat started looking real bad around December 1. although I did not check any of it for insects at that time. I think that these volunteer wheat fields were heavily infested with wheat curl mites and some may have had Russian aphids in them last fall. One or both of these insect infestations is what is in all probability causing this volunteer wheat to die.

The virus, wheat streak mosaic, can be transmitted only by the wheat curl mite as it feeds on one infected plant and then travels in the wind to infect new plants, generally traveling less than 200 feet at a time.

Volunteer wheat is not the only source of infected wheat curl mites - they can also oversummer in some grasses, like western wheat grass, that may stay green all summer, such as along roadsides

I think Extension personnel have repeatedly advised wheat producers to not leave volunteer wheat anywhere close to newly planted wheat fields. Yet it takes the hard experience of maybe losing part of a wheat crop for a person to realize how damaging some of these insects can be and the importance of following recommendations.

Now let's consider our options as of early April and see what the alternatives are. First, every wheat farmer needs to continue to closely monitor his wheat fields to determine what degree of infestation you have. It is my prediction that sometime during April every wheat field in our area will have some degree of infestation of Russian wheat aphids. You will have to determine how much and when. Right now past experience has indicated that the time to spray Russian wheat aphids is when 10 percent of the plants show symptoms of infection. These symptoms are: leaves purplish in color, often with longitudinal white streaks and curled up like soda straws. The stems will be more prostrate than upright, often laying close to the ground. The Russian wheat aphids inject powerful toxins as they feed that can greatly reduce yields or even kill wheat plants.

Systemic insecticides are tomologist from Amarillo, came needed because the aphids are inside the curl leaves and protected from contact insecticides. sects. We found that in several Dimethoate (Cygon, Dimethoate locations there were heavy infec- 267, Dimate) or disulfoton (Di- control WSM virus is at wheat tions of Russian Wheat aphids syston) are recommended insecticides. You can expect three to four weeks control. Therefore you may need to spray twice for the Russian Wheat aphids. Plants can outgrow the toxin from the Russian wheat aphids when they are killed at an early stage of development.

However, with the wheat streak mosaic virus, the wheat plants remain infected with the virus for the life of the wheat plant. In the past very little benefit has been noted when the wheat curl mites have been sprayed with insecticides.

Wheat plants infected with the wheat streak mosaic virus are going to have reduced yields. The amount of yield reduction depends on when or how early the plants became infected with the WSM virus. Fall infected plants will most likely die before harvest time. In fact, that is what is probably causing all of these old volunteer wheat fields to die this

Wheat plants infected with WSM virus this spring may make a little wheat. However, these plants will be stunted and have a more yellow color. Leaf mosaic begins in younger leaves as light green to yellow dashes which enlarge to give a streaked appearance to the leaf. Finally the whole leaf blade turns yellow.

As the growing season progresses, the plants turn more yellow and may die before harvest, depending on when they become infected with WSM virus.

"Nothing Runs Like

If you happen to have infection of wheat fields by WSM virus rather than the Russian wheat aphids there may not be much you can do to help your situation now. Remember that the time to planting time. Have cleam tilled areas or borders adjacent to newly planted wheat fields.

AGRICULTURAL MARKETING

SEMINAR FOR WOMEN Women in agriculture across Texas will have a unique opportunity on April 13-14.

A specially prepared two-day marketing seminar for Texas women in agriculture is scheduled for the San Antonio Marriott Hotel North, near the airport. The seminar is designed for women who want to learn the basics of commodity marketing. Topics covered will be how to develop a marketing plan, understanding marketing alternatives, and how to utilize the government programs along with marketing tools. Marketing has been identified as a critical issue by Texas agricultural producers.

Some questions that will be answered include: "What are futures? What is hedging? and What is basis?" Seminar speakers will include women in agriculture that are helping make marketing decisions. Specialists from the Chicago Board of Trade and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service also will conduct parts of the seminar.

States vie for trendy veggie dominance fruits and vegetables would not WASHINGTON (AP) - California is in a broccoli race with other parts of the country where farmers seek crops more profitable than the traditional harvests of wheat, corn, cotton and soybeans

An Agriculture Department report by Roberta Cook of the University of California, Davis, says cauliflower has joined broccoli as a favorite among the veggie expansionists.

"Between 1978 and 1986, harvested acreage of broccoli increased by 90 percent, while the number of states producing for the fresh market grew from the traditional four (California, Texas, Oregon and Arizona) to include new producers such as Maine, North and South Carolina, New York, Illinois, Virginia, Oklahoma and Colorado," she

The expansion is explained by the rapidly growing popularity of fresh vegetables in the American diet and by the declining profitability of food and feed grains in the 1980s.

"Unfortunately, the capacity of the fruit and vegetable industry to absorb the additional acreage is limited," Ms. Cook

That is because there are more than 200 million acres in the United States used to produce grain, compared with only about 5 million acres of fruit and vegetables.

'Consequently, while shifting 2.5 percent of grain acreage into solve the excess supply problem in grains, it would double fruit and vegetable acreage and devastate prices," she said. "At the same time, other regions of the world, particularly Mexico and the Caribbean Basin Initiative countries are expanding vegetable exports to the United States."

California remains the dominant broccoli producer, with its area increasing to 106,400 acres in 1986 from 64,400 in 1978. However. California's share of the total U.S. broccoli acreage declined from a high of 96 percent in 1979 to 82 percent in 1986.

The California market share of broccoli production also dropped during the 1978-86 period from 96 percent to 91 percent.

There has also been a rise in cauliflower production, with the harvested area rising 65 percent between 1978 and 1986, Ms. Cook said. Fresh market cauliflower production increased even more, to more than 5.9 million hundredweight in 1986 from 1.85 million in California's market share of fresh market cauliflower increased to 79 percent of the total in 1986 from 74 percent in 1978.

Although California has a climatic advantage during portions of the year, the competition in other states during the summer and fall has become signifi-

"The combined fall broccoli area in the Midwest, South and East amounts to an estimated 10,000 acres, compared with 28,000 acres in California," Ms. Cook said. "Hence, this new broccoli acreage compares to 35 percent of California acreage when viewed on a seasonal basis.'

Mexico is the leading source of fresh broccoli imports, and Canada is the largest provider of imported cauliflower.

rganist shortage: Who will play weddings, funerals?

By ROBERT BARR Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - At any one time, Ardyth Lohuis is trying to match 20 to 25 churches who want to hire an organist with two or three musicians who are looking for jobs.

"Some churches call me month after month saying, 'Don't you have someone?" said Lohuis, a professor of organ and church music at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond and director of a referral service for state chapters of the American Guild of

What the churches want, typically, is someone to play one or two services a week, plus a choir rehearsal, and often one full week of revival services.

"They're hoping to get someone to do this for $4,500, which is not even minimum wage," she said.

It's getting harder to find takers. According to the National Association of Schools of Music, the number of undergraduate organ majors fell from 673 in the 1982-83 school year to 469 in 1984-85, and the number of schools offering majors declined from 194 to 160.

At Oberlin College in Ohio, there are now fewer than 20 undergraduate organ students, compared to perhaps 50 a quarter-century ago, said David Bow, dean of the college's Conservatory of Music.

"I would say that the quality of the students we have now is as high as I can remember. They are extraordinarily committed," he said.

However, Bow noted, "We see a high school pool out there that is a quarter or a fifth the size it was 15 years ago."

In contrast, the number of applications for other instrumental programs at Oberlin is up 21.8 percent this year.

Charles Krusenstjerna, director of admissions at the Eastman School of Music at Rochester University in New York, says the drop is partly a demographic phenomenon. The number of entering freshmen in the United States has fallen from a peak of 2.6 million in 1981 to 2.3 million in 1985, according to the U.S. Department of Education.

Krusenstjerna said the school expects to have about 40 applications from organ students this year, down from an all-time high of 60 several years ago. Daniel Nelson Colburn II, executive director of the 25,000-member American Guild of Organists, and John Walker, chairman of the AGO's Task Force on the New Organist, suggested in a recent interview that several factors are Mainline churches, which attach more importance to elaborate liturgy set to classical music, are not growing rapidly, if at all.

"People simply don't go to church as much," Colburn said. "It is no longer automatically to be assumed that a sort of middle-American person has been exposed to this music at all." More women are going to work, leaving fewer of the talented housewives who have filled many an organ job for token compensation. Fewer students are willing to enter a profession in which $25,000 is a princely salary and only a handful of positions

pay $50,000. "One of the basic problems ... is the residual sense of a lot of church members throughout the country that whatever you do for the church needs to be done voluntarily," said Walker, organist at New York's Riverside Church and chairman of the organ department at the Manhattan School of Music.

One of his doctoral students recently found a job outside the city paying $20,000 a year. "This means years and years of study to get there, and he's thrilled to death," Walker said.

"The people who do this profession, in my generalized view, still love what they do," Colburn said. "To the extent they are aware of these problems, they are frustrated. ... But I don't see a lot of people leaving.

He just sees fewer people entering. The AGO, with a touch of exaggeration, has been asking: "Will we worship with music in the year 2000?" In fact, Colburn said, there is almost a glut of highly trained organists with advanced degrees competing for the best jobs. The shortage affects the smaller chur-

The guild's strategy is to seek publicity, through promotions such as "Organ Week" which it will launch next year, and to seek out and encourage promising high school musicians.

In Sioux Falls, S.D., the AGO chapter last fall awarded five $100 scholarships - enough to pay for 10 lessons - to aspiring organists, including one in eighth grade.

"Substitutes are very hard to find," said Richard Collman, secretarytreasurer of the 50-member state chapter. "I know of only one or two people in the high school age category studying the pipe organ now."

Collman looks at youngsters with at least five years of piano lessons, which is a good start toward mastering the two, three or more keyboards of a pipe

Still, they have to learn a different "touch," they have to learn to play yet another keyboard with their feet and to adjust tonal colors by drawing on combinations of pipes. The best jobs often require the organist to direct a choir as

"My guess is that as organists continue to be scarce, the churches that want live music will realize they will have to pay more," Bow said.

However, the volunteer ethic isn't

Mexican masks evidence rich folk heritage

By JULIO LOZANO The Brownsville Herald

BROWNSVILLE (AP) -Perhaps the most eerie thing about some Mexican folk art masks is the way they don't stare back at you. One's own mind adds the Slip on a jaguar mask and you may find yourself imitating the deadly cat. Put on a devil mask and

"Once a dancer puts on a mask, anything can happen. It becomes very serious business," says Dr. Tony Zavaleta, an anthropologist at Texas Southmost College.

"The mask is a very important part of any mythology or belief system of a culture. When a wearer puts on the mask, in effect, that person changes his or her being and ... hides behind the mask .. and becomes, what the mask represents in the dance, ceremony or celebration. That person takes on that character.

Zavaleta has been collecting Mexican masks for seven years. A selection of them will be on display through the end of April at the Brownsville Historical

Sometimes the masks are faces from another world, or a slight distortion of the everyday world we know, the anthropologist said. Zavaleta has collected the majority of his 300 masks while traveling and doing research. Others were given to him by

"You don't find these masks, for the most parts, in the cities and shops," Zavaleta said. "The best part of it is knowing where a particular mask is used and knowing where it's made and how it's made and maybe even who the artisan is.'

Zavaleta's quest for masks has drawn him into every region in Mexico - from remote jungle villages, to sparsely populated deserts - because "Just about every region ... has its mask variations" with the exception of the north-northeast area bordering Texas.

"Our area, as a matter of fact, is devoid of any sort of mask heritage. There are really no surviving native mask heritages in Tamaulipas, Coahuila, Nuevo Leon," Zavaleta said. "Since the native traditions did not survive, the masks didn't either.

"The nearest place where one can find a mask being used in the Huasteca culture would be Veracruz," he added.

Makers of the masks use local materials. In densely wooded areas the majority of the masks are naturally made of different types of wood. Some have horse hair or animal skin to add to the authenticity of whatever character is being represented on the Most masks are very light. Some are made of leather, wire mesh, paper mache, animal skin, balsam wood, tortoise or armadillo shells.

Regardless of the materials used, the symbolism in the masks represents important elements of Satan is prominent in Zavaleta's collection because the devil plays an important role in some of the native beliefs. Devil masks with lizards, snakes or frogs on them indicate the supernatural symbols natives once heavily believed in, he said. A "viejitos" mask signifies age, while a jaguar mask means

"A very important theme in Mexico is the jaguar," Zavaleta said. "It was a military rank and a God. The jaguar in Chiapas, for example, is portrayed in a dance that is done where the people dress up like a deer and a jaguar and the jaguar chases the deer around the plaza - giving the chase symbolic meanings. The deer is also an important animal in the zoomorphology of Mexico.

'The Huichole Indians from Nayaruit, for example, consider the deer to be also a deity. Part of the ritual includes ingesting peyote and they consider the deer to be another manifestation of the deity," he said.

Another more common symbol is "la muerte," or death.

In Mexico, death is a very important symbol and not only in the modern religious observance of "Dia de los muertos," or day of the dead in November.

Death was a symbol for more ancient cultures that has been discovered in Monte Alba in Oaxaca; in Teotihuacan, the face of death appears over and over.

The Indians have melded very nicely together the Pre-Columbian traditions with the Christian traditions and so "la muerte" is used in dances ... it is a motif that is very common,' Zavaleta said.

Zavaleta says the maskmaking tradition is far from dead in modern Mexico.

Northeast slips to least populated region

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time, the to surpass New York by 1995 wide-open spaces of the American West contain more people than the densely-packed Northeast, and the rapid Western growth will continue, the Census Bureau says.

The bureau predicts that between now and the year 2000 more than half of all national population growth will occur in just three states — California, Florida and Texas.

The study adds that Texas is on the verge of crowding past New York as the nation's second most populous state. The projections call for Texas

The Empire State now leads Texas 17.7 million to 17.2 million. But by 1995, Texas is expected to have just over 19 million people, with New York at only 17.9 million.

That transition is symbolic of the slippage in the Northeast, which has become the nation's least populated region, falling behind the West for the Bureau demographer Signe Wetrogen explained that the projections are based on assumptions about trends in births, deaths, immigration and movement within the country.

Five candidates competing against Salinas de Gortari

With 59 years of experience in winning all major elections, the ruling party, known as the PRI, is all but guaranteed victory again on July 6 - and another six years in the nation's top office.

But opposition candidates, spurred by a more vulnerable than usual target in PRI candidate Carlos Salinas de Gortari and more competition among themselves, are trying new tactics.

Conservative National Action Party candidate Manuel Clouthier, for example, admittedly has 'shadowed" the PRI candidate, showing up in some of the same places, particularly National Action strongholds. Such things just weren't done in the past and likely wouldn't have been tolerated.

Heberto Castillo of the Mexican Socialist Party, which includes most of the left, staged land takeovers with campesinos, some of the several incidents of civil disobedience by candidates.

And Cuauhtemoc Cardenas of the National Democratic Front coalition drew a crowd rivaling the government's on the 50th anniversary of his father's expropriation of foreign oil holdings.

Candidates have pressured openly for more radio and television time from the PRI-dominated media and complained that spots have been refused and stations have failed to broadcast inter-

"Inhibitions have been broken and, as in '68, we face a parting of the waters in the history of Mexico," Castillo said on a recent campaign stop.

A university professor, Castillo was a leader of the 1968 Mexican student movement. He was jailed for 2 1-2 years for his activities

Running a second time for the small, radical Revolutionary Workers' Party is Rosario Ibarra de Piedra, a congresswoman and leader of a human rights movement. She founded the group and became politically active after her son disappeared following his arrest in 1975.

Gumersindo Magana, a lawyer, is candidate of the Mexican Democratic Party, successor to the conservative Catholic Sinarquista movement.

Helping ignite the campaign was Cardenas, who led a dissident movement in the massive PRI in a fight to have members select candidates and bring other reforms. Effectively barred from the race by the party hierarchy, the lanky, quiet-spoken former state governor accepted the candidacy of the Authentic Party of the Mexican Revolution, originally a PRI spinoff, and two small leftist parties. With the Current, they form the National Democratic Front

He is aided by the image of his late father, Lazaro Cardenas, one of the country's most revered presidents and probably the last one whom blue collar workers and campesinos thought they

He appeals to some who for years have felt there was little choice and election results a foregone conclusion.

For months the left struggled to unify behind one candidate, failing in part because the Socialist Party had chosen Castillo in the country's first presidential primary.

While the opposition field generally is stronger than in the past, Salinas de Gortari has the disadvantage of being identified with the country's economic crisis. As budget secretary until he became the PRI candidate, he was the economic architect during a time when prices outpaced wages, putting workers ever farther behind.

He lacks the charisma that could make up for it, but in PRI tradition, is campaigning extensively throughout the country.

Through a far-reaching grassroots structure, longtime monopoly on politics and, at times, what's called "alchemy," the local term for stuffing ballot boxes or otherwise manipulating results, the PRI has swept every presidential eelction since its founding in 1929. It's also taken all governorships and senate seats and most of the congressional and local races.

Lorenzo Meyer, academic director of the Colegio de Mexico, a graduate school and think tank, says some may still see fraud as the answer.

"The temptation to resort to alchemy to keep the country is present," he said in an interview with the weekly Punto. "There will be not a few PRI leaders who feel threatened by the presence of other parties in the legislatures and even in some governments.'

But "for the victory to be recognized and therefore legitimate, it will have to be realistic," he

National Action congressional leader Jesus Gonzalez Schmal said recently that a voter registration list the Interior Department gave the party last September was padded with fake names by

The Socialist Party has called for the opposition act together "with operational and practical means against electoral fraud.'

Police chief launches inquiry in ticket fixing

FORT WORTH (AP) - Allegations that police fixed traffic tickets and some officers were taught to do so in academy training sessions has prompted the city's police chief to launch an investigation

Juan Blanco Jr., an assistant city attorney, denied allegations from an officer's sworn testimony that he instructed police trainees to fix tickets by telling court clerks and prosecutors they "forgot" details of traffic cases.

"That's totally false," Blanco said. "There's no way that was a part of the program."

But Police Chief Thomas Windham said he was taking the charges seriously. He said up to 20 percent of his officers are "malingerers and malcontents" and that he planned a tougher approach in uprooting corruption and misconduct.

'Far too great a number (of officers) lack integrity, both personal and professional," the chief

Windham has formed a committee to look into ticket-fixing allegations, which surfaced Wednesday during an administrative hearing for an officer who was appealing his termination from the

Steve Weaver was accused of fixing three traffic tickets he issued to a plumber who did work at Weaver's house.

Blanco said he has no idea why officer Maurice Buchholz testified at the hearing that the lawyer's classroom instruction at the academy included lessons on how to fix traffic tickets for friends, relatives and others.

Buchholz and two other officers testified that Fort Worth police routinely fix traffic tickets for acquaintances by stating falsely to court officials that they did not remember details of the traffic Officers testified they got instruction at the training academy on how to fix tickets in that way. Windham denied that officers were under a quota system to write tickets.

Two officers told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that another officer was recently disciplined for failing to write any tickets on one day. But Windham said ticket writing is only one of several factors used to rate an officer's productivity.

Calls placed Friday to the chief, City Attorney Wade Adkins and City Manager Doug Harman by The Associated Press were not immediately re-

Names in news

NEW YORK (AP) Actor Michael J. Fox says he's taking things easier these days, enjoying life with Tracy Pollan, the actress who portrayed his college sweetheart on NBC's Public Notice Family Ties.

Fox denies reports that they'll marry in May, but he and Miss Pollan have bought a Vermont homestead together, US magazine reports in its April 18

"I was goofing around at that point in my life. I was a little more prone to stay out late and drive fast and work hard," said Fox. "I hope I wasn't a jerk. But if I was, I have a sneaking suspicion not many people were going to tell me

One of the exceptions, he said, was Miss Pollan. "We got along really well, but if I was a jerk, she just went, 'That was a really particularly stupid thing to do.' And I just went, 'Wow! That's great!""

Hussein of Jordan may hold key to Mideast peace success

By BARRY SCHWEID AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel is the most visible target of U.S. diplomacy in the Middle East, but the key to success or failure just as easily could be King Hussein of Jordan. The U.S. plan for Mideast peace talks poses dilemmas for both leaders. Shamir's problems draw most of the attention. But Hussein is facing some tough decisions, too.

First of all, he has to decide whether to agree to negotiate with Israel, and in a framework that gives no direct role to the Palestine Liberation Organiza-

Hussein has come close several times, but backed off.

He lost the West Bank by joining Egypt and Syria in the 1967 Six-Day war with Israel. Now he is trying to decide whether he should enter negotiations without a guarantee he can get most or all of it back.

Or should he defer to the PLO, which claims the land and which all Arab countries including Jordan have recognized as the only legitimate representative of the Palestinian people who make up about 96 percent of the West Bank's population?

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, writing in "Years of Upheaval," described Hussein in 1967 as "caught between the passions of his Arab brethren and his own realism, for which he paid the price of several radical attempts on his life." Kissinger went on: "He was trapped in the paradox that he was the Arab leader most ready to make peace, yet of all the territories it had conquered, Israel was most reluctant to relinquish the Jordanian portion, which it most intimately connected with its own tradition.'

Israel, as it turned out in 1979, was willing to relinquish Sinai. This willingness, combined with the daring initiative of the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, produced a peace treaty with the largest Arab country.

Hussein will not know, until and unless he holds the talks, whether Jordan will recover any or all of the West Bank.

The U.S. plan calls for Palestinians participating in a joint delegation with Jordan. The Palestinians would need the blessing of the PLO. But Yasser Arafat's organization would be shut

Modifying the 1978 Camp David agreement, Shultz would establish self-rule but not statehood for the Palestinians for three years. Negotiations on an overall settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict would begin in December. Shultz will make another attempt next week to get the two sides together. On his last trip, Shultz spent more time with the Israeli prime minister and in Jerusalem than he did with Hussein or in Jordan. On this trip, though, Shultz will spend about as much time in Jordan as in Israel.

designer onions has industry all but crying

By JOEL WILLIAMS Associated Press Writer

McALLEN, Texas (AP) - It may sound like a childhood nightmare come true: people buying specially wrapped gift boxes of onions.

But this is the age of the designer onion, and industry officials say the lower Rio Grande Valley's grapefruit-size variety known as the Texas 1015 SuperSweet has onion enthusiasts crying for

At least eight packers are shipping gift boxes from the Valley at prices amounting to a dollar or more per onion.

"They'll put them in there with some of this Easter-type grass and ship them UPS (United Parcel Service)," said Dr. Leonard Pike, a Texas A&M University horticultural scientist who developed the 1015.

Since 1974, Valley growers have helped fund $1 million in research grants for the continuing project Pike leads in the quest for a sweeter, milder onion

He released his Texas Grano 1015 — named for the optimum planting date of Oct. 15 — in 1983, providing increasing competition for sweet onions such as the sweet Vidalia from Georgia, Hawaii's Maui Maui and California's Imperial Valley. 'Grano' in the 1015's name means it is a round variety, as opposed to flatter, ovular, "Granex' onions.

"It's helped us because it's got a lot more people eating onions that didn't eat them before," said Dale DeBerry, owner of Progreso Produce Co. "You can see that by the number of tourists who come by here asking for 1015s.'

On a recent afternoon, a steady stream of winter Texans drove up to his company near the border town of Progreso, but the round, yellow 1015s weren't in yet.

The sweet spring onions are only available for a six-week period beginning in mid-April. DeBerry's company and others have started labeling the 1015s with individual stickers to help consumers who ask for them by name. "Right now there's a national obsession for sweet onions, and I know that sounds strange, said Paula Fouchek, executive director of the Harlingen-based Texas Fresh Promotional Board, which is waging an aggressive national marketing campaign for the state's designer onions. There's a lot of people who are really fanatical about them," she said.

About 80 percent of Texas' onion crop is the sweet spring variety, said Erv Sandlin, a promotional marketing coordinator with the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Onions last year brought $77.8 million to onion producers in Texas, making it the top moneymaker among fresh vegetables, said Doug Bierstedt, with the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service.

Statewide onion acreage this year is nearly 19,000 acres, of which 14,000 is for the spring crop, Bierstedt said. About 3,500 Texas acres are planted in the 1015.

Texas' niche in the national market is that its South Texas spring crop hits the market early, growers say

"We come off at a time of a year when the old onions are about gone and spring begins," said Othal Brand Sr., whose McAllen-based Griffin & Brand Inc. is the states's largest onion producer.

Until the spring onions hit the market, consumers are eating the more pungent winter storage onions grown in many states.

On an early spring afternoon, Brand, who is mayor of McAllen, tromped through a muddy field to show off some of his earliest crop.

"Isn't that beatiful?" Brand asked after pulling two of the bulbs up. "The only thing prettier than that is money in the bank."

Other Texas onions usually begin hitting the market before the 1015s are ready. The drawback from the spring crop grown in the short days of winter is that they do not last long in storage, grow-

Pike said he is working on ways to store the spring onions longer.

He also is researching just what makes the 1015. mild, and said it mainly is because of a low level of a substance known as pyruvic acid, which reacts with sulfur compounds to cause the things that give the vegetable a bad image.

"Very rarely will you get one that will bring tears to your eyes," Pike said.

The 1015 also causes fewer stomach and breath problems, said Pike, who thinks that is why many people who do not eat onions will eat the mild ones of the spring season.

Most of the 1015s weigh more than a pound, and some have been reported at three pounds, Pike
