Grand jury indicts Coker for injury to a child charge

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

A Pampa man accused of burying his infant son in a San Antonio park, and a woman charged with bilking her boss out of more than $16,000 were among 13 people indicted by a Gray County grand jury Tuesday and today.

Eric Lee Coker, 21, 838 S. Cuyler St., was indicted for injury to a child in connection with a severe beating suffered by his 2-month-old daughter, Terry Ann Wilson, in February.

Also indicted was Walta "Wendy" Wills, 43, now of Mesa, Ariz., who was named in a 16-count theft indictment and a 26-count forgery indictment, both alleging that she stole more than $16,000 from Elmer D. Wilson of Windsor Servicing Co., 1345 S. Hobart St.

The indictment against Coker, who used the alias Mike Wilson while living in Pampa, alleges that he beat the child, bit her ear and scratched her face with a comb. Police said the roof of the child's mouth also had been cut open.

The child has since been turned over to custody of the Texas Department of Human Services and is living in a foster home. Coker's common-law wife, Teresa Campos, also known as Tina Wilson, was previously indicted in connection with the beating for failing to seek medical help for the infant.

After he was arrested in Clarendon last month, Coker apparently confessed to Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan that he had buried his 7-month-old son, Eric Jr., in San Antonio's Kallison Park in January 1987 after he and Campos saw a movie and rode around with the dead child in a public bus for 10 hours.

After the confession, he led San Antonio authorities to the body. Bexar County Assistant Medical Examiner Robert C. Bux ruled the death a homicide.

Although Pampa police said Coker also confessed to beating the child to death before burying him, San Antonio police said today that no charges have been filed in Bexar. See JURY, Page 2

Bush cinches GOP nomination; Dukakis gets another big boost

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — George Bush challenged Michael Dukakis to "fire away" at him on the Iran-Contra affair today and Dukakis did just that after impressive Pennsylvania victories clinched the GOP presidential nomination for Bush and gave Democrat Dukakis another big boost.

Jesse Jackson, a distant second to Dukakis in Tuesday's Pennsylvania primary, said today, "I keep struggling against the odds and I've always struggled against the odds and succeeded. ... This campaign will remain alive and will go right down to the wire."

In television interviews, the vice president and the Massachusetts governor set a combative tone for the summer campaign.

Dukakis said of Bush's involvement in the Iranian arms-for-hostages dealing: "He sat there and did nothing while we engaged in one of the worst and one of the most misguided adventures in the history of American foreign policy."

Bush said he would ask Dukakis in debate what he would do about hostages in the Middle East. "Do you really care when a man like Buckley is being tortured to death?" he said he would ask, a reference to William Buckley, the CIA official who died after being taken hostage in Lebanon.

"Let him fire away," Bush said of Dukakis in an interview on CBS-TV.

Bush, prodding the Democrats on another sensitive issue, said on NBC-TV he might pick up substantial support from blacks if they decide Jackson wasn't given a fair deal by his party.

"If he's not treated fairly, a lot of people are going to be open-minded, and if I campaign properly with the way I feel in my heart about openness and inclusion, we might surprise people there," Bush said.

With the nomination in hand for Bush, President Reagan, free at last drop his neutrality, was meeting with his vice president today.

"I am sure the president will offer his congratulations and discuss how he can help in the campaign," said White House House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

"We're almost getting down to the main event," declared Bush, who got 79 percent of the Pennsylvania popularity vote and also won more than enough delegates to lock in the 1,139 he needed for a GOP convention majority.

With 94 percent of the Pennsylvania vote in, the Democratic vote was:

Dukakis, 944,461, or 67 percent.
Jackson, 395,790, 28 percent.
On the Republican side, with 94 percent of the vote in, it was:

Bush, 631,274, 79 percent.
Dole, 96,346, 12 percent.
Robertson, 73,692, 9 percent.

Ohio, Indiana and the District of Columbia were the next battlegrounds, each holding primaries next Tuesday.

The GOP delegate count was far slower than the popular vote. By the Associated Press delegate count, Bush needed to win at least 58 of the 78 delegates at stake to clinch the 1,139 needed to nominate, and he did early today.

Dukakis won a separate landslide in the election of Democratic delegates, taking 163 to Jackson's 13. Two were uncommitted. That brought Dukakis' national delegate total to 1,264, compared to 851 for Jackson. It takes 2,081 to clinch nomination.

"He's coming in with a head of steam," Ohio Democratic Party chairman James Ruvolo said of Dukakis.

Carruth takes chance to say a few words at last meeting

Commissioner Clyde Carruth attended his last regular City Commission meeting Tuesday night, ending his sixth term of service on the city's governing board.

In honor of the occasion, City Manager Bob Hart presented Carruth with a city of Pampa pen and pencil set on behalf of the city staff.

Hart said he knew the other commissioners would be presenting the retiring commissioner with a plaque of appreciation at a later meeting, but "the staff wanted to beat them to it."

Hart praised Carruth for his years of service to the city and its staff and expressed appreciation for the help he himself had received from Carruth since he became city manager just over three years ago.

"We appreciate everything you've done for us," Hart said. Carruth, who decided not to run for another elected term, was given a standing ovation by the commissioners, staff members and audience.

After the meeting adjourned, Carruth grabbed the microphone and said he would like to say a few words.

"Pampa is my town," Carruth said, adding that he has lived here "most of my 84 years."

Carruth said that because of the feelings he has for his city, "I have a lot of interest in the city and in the commission," adding that he wants to see both the town and the commission "do good in the next few years."

Carruth

Noting that he was speaking from the commissioners' stand "for the last time," Carruth said he had some other things he wanted to say.

He then publicly gave his endorsement to two candidates in the upcoming municipal elections — Duane Harp and Gary Sutherland — saying they were two of the "finest young men I know" and adding that they both have a great understanding of finances because of their careers.

Borger woman dies after auto collision

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

A head-on collision west of Pampa on Texas Highway 152 left a Borger woman dead Tuesday, but a Pampa man virtually walked away from the wreck.

Ola Louise Butcher Shields, 57, of Borger, died at Coronado Hospital about an hour after being pulled from her smashed 1980 Oldsmobile by Pampa firefighters using jaws-of-life equipment. The accident occurred shortly before 4:30 p.m., 2.6 miles west of Pampa.

Coronado spokeswoman Linda Haynes said Mrs. Shields suffered numerous internal injuries, fractures and lacerations.

Injured was Bobby Ray Powell, 53, of 812 Deane Drive, who told ambulance personnel he fell asleep behind the wheel of his 1977 Chevrolet. Powell was treated in the emergency room for abrasions and lacerations and then released, Haynes said.

A report by Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Eddie Aguilar said Mrs. Shields was westbound and Powell was eastbound when Powell veered into Mrs. Shields' lane and the two vehicles collided head on, "left headlight to left headlight."

The wreck left Powell's car upside down in the middle of the highway and Mrs. Shields' car in the ditch, right-side-up but severely damaged.

Chris Wade of Fritch, who was traveling behind Powell when the accident occurred, said Powell's car rolled twice before coming to rest on its roof. Wade said Powell veered into the westbound lane as if trying to pass, and the two vehicles collided.

But DPS Trooper Johnny Carter said Powell probably either blacked out or fell asleep at the wheel. Carter noted that Powell apparently never touched his brakes before the two cars met.

Mrs. Shields did her best to avoid the accident, Carter said.

"His vehicle veered into her lane," he said. "Witnesses said she was trying to slow down — trying to avoid his vehicle. She had two wheels on the dirt already ... She just turned this way, and he just kept coming with her."

Both drivers were conscious when emergency crews arrived at the scene. Several oilfield workers tried in vain to open Mrs. Shields' car door before the Fire Department arrived with jaws of life equipment.

City approves contracts on golf course

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

Pampa city commissioners finally putted the ball into the hole Tuesday night by approving three actions clearing the way for design and construction of the municipal golf course.

In unanimous votes, the commission authorized contracts with Ray Hardy of El Paso for the design and construction supervision of the golf course and with property owners for conveyance of 200 acres of land north of Pampa to the city for use in development of the course.

The commission also appointed an advisory committee to assist in securing donations and coordinating volunteer labor in the construction of the municipal golf course.

Named by the city to the committee are Buddy Epperson, Vic Raymond, Morris Driver, Hurschel Cantwell, Sam Motley, Sonny Moore and Tommy Lowe. In addition, two spots were reserved for appointment by the Gray County commissioners.

In a special presentation, Pampa Chamber of Commerce Manager Bruce Barton gave a summary of the planned economic development campaign under the city's TEXCEL (Texas Cities for Economic Leadership) program.

Barton said the initial program is beginning under a two-year plan, adding that "we're working toward this; it's not something that happens overnight."

He said the chamber, Pampa Industrial Foundation, city and others have been busy in the past year developing the campaign. "In general, I think each of us has been working very hard," he said.

Barton said the program objectives are "to expand permanent job opportunities in the Pampa area."

The strategy for reaching this goal is the establishment of an aggressive program aimed at the most productive facets of permanent job creation. To achieve that, four tactics have been adopted:

■ Identify those industries that fit the Pampa demographics.

■ Effectively contact those targeted industries to initiate an awareness of Pampa's points as an industrial location.

■ Follow up and establish a rapport with those interested industries to expand or relocate and "sell them on Pampa" as their final location.

■ Establish a close working relationship with Pampa's existing industries to address their present and future needs.

Barton said Pampa has several advantages to offer in the demographics area, including a skilled labor force, generally mild weather and a centrally located geographical point in the United States.

The focus is to "show industry why this is a good area for them," he said.

The program also will involve a direct-mail approach to desired types of businesses that would probably be best for Pampa, including textiles, plastics and hardware. Barton said 9,300 industries are being contacted through direct mailings of information about the city.

This will be followed by mailing out more detailed studies concerning the city and its potential as a business and industry location, stressing the city's strengths and "why it's different from other communities."

Barton said a videotape also will be prepared emphasizing the general benefits of the Panhandle area and Pampa specifically.

Through this effort, "we hope to pull the list of 9,300 industries down 'to good, solid prospect leads,'" he said, perhaps a hundred or so.

Barton stressed that the program also will work with industries and businesses presently existing here, noting that "most jobs come from those already here." He said efforts will be made to "give them substantive help in meeting their needs."

"We believe what we have is an aggressive program ... We're going after it, not waiting for them to come to us," Barton said.

He explained that while the initial plan is only for two years, ongoing efforts will continue. "Industrial development has to go on every year," he said.

In other business Tuesday, commissioners:

■ awarded a bid for sealcoating of city streets to Great Plains Paving of Amarillo for $177,225;

■ authorized the staff to pursue application for the creation of Enterprise Zones under a statewide economic development program, offering incentives for new businesses to locate in a community;

■ approved a contract with the city of Groom for animal control services; and

■ approved the list of disbursements.

Arson suspected in house fire

Pampa fire officials suspect arson is the cause of a fire that damaged a vacant house at 448 Pitts early this morning, the second time a fire has been reported at the house this month.

"I'm going to go over this morning and get a good look at it," Pampa Fire Marshall Tom Adams said early today.

"Someone pulled the Sheetrock down this time. They really tried to get it to go," he said. "This is more deliberate."

A fire was reported at the house at 2:05 a.m. today. Adams said the house, worth approximately $15,000, sustained extensive fire damage to the living room and kitchen areas.

Pampa firefighters were first called to the address at 8:51 p.m., April 10, when they found smoke and fire in the attic of the vacant house. Adams said the house had been empty for about three weeks before the first fire.

"The first time they caught the hall closet on fire," he said. "I thought an old wino had been staying there. Somebody had been sleepin' in there. There was a blanket on the floor and a couple of bottles laying around."

Neighbors told fire officials that they heard a car speed away shortly before they discovered the house was on fire, Adams said. "I don't have a description of the vehicle or any leads right now," he added.

Owner of the house was listed as Cleo Worley of Amarillo, he said. However, he does not have a street address and has not been able to notify the owner.

"I'm just trying to find out what happened," Adams said. "I can tell more after I look at it this morning."

Cisneros considers business venture

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — With his daughters nearing college age and his ill son facing major surgery, Mayor Henry Cisneros says he is considering a lucrative business venture that would not conflict with his elected post.

The four-term mayor says he has been offered numerous other positions in development companies in the past, but he has turned them down because of time constraints or conflict-of-interest problems.

But the mayor confirmed that he now is considering a partnership in a proposed asset management firm that would include investment banker Robert Rodriguez, president of Southwestern Capital Markets; and advertising executive Lionel Sosa of Sosa and Associates.

The new firm would manage and invest pension funds of large corporations.

Cisneros said he has been looking at business opportunities more seriously recently because his two daughters are nearing college age and his son, John Paul Anthony, who was born with several malformed organs, will face major surgery next year and the city insurance will not cover all the expenses.

Cisneros has supported his family through jobs as a lecturer at Trinity University and the University of Texas at San Antonio and through speeches, writing and consulting work.

It is reported he earns about $100,000 per year, including his academic positions, speaking engagements and his $4,040 annual salary as mayor.

Cisneros said the proposed partnership with Rodriguez and Sosa is attractive because it would allow him to continue as mayor and end the exhausting speaking schedule.

"It does impose very heavy scheduling duties," Cisneros said of the speaking circuit.

"It would be much more helpful to have a job where I could handle much of my work over the telephone so that it doesn't affect my mayoral duties," he said.

Cisneros would be chairman and chief executive officer and would use his national recognition and contacts to attract customers, while Rodriguez would be the company's chief operating officer.

Rodriguez said a fourth possible partner would be Criterion Financial Corp. of Houston, which would join the firm through a joint-venture arrangement.

and would provide the new company with expertise during its early years.

Cisneros, who said he would make up his mind in about six weeks, said the proposed job is "the most solid scenario I have seen in a number of years."

Cisneros, 40, has said he will decide in September whether to run for a fifth term after reiterating he is not interested in a state or national elected or appointed posts.

City Attorney Lloyd Garza is studying Cisneros' proposed business venture to ensure there are no conflict-of-interest problems.

Rodriguez said his current firm now provides financial advisory services on city bonds, but said he would resign from the city contract or sell the company if Cisneros joins the new firm.

"Here would be an opportunity to create what I think would be the first Hispanic-owned asset management firm in the United States," Rodriguez said.

Fish fry scheduled in Miami

MIAMI — Hundreds of pounds of catfish will be on the fry Saturday in Red Deer Park at a fundraising event to benefit Miami's volunteer ambulance service.

Miami Volunteer Emergency Medical Service is supported solely by donations and fundraising events such as the fish fry, said Penny Guerrero, volunteer ambulance member.

"We don't charge for any of our services and we operate on donations and a few fundraising events," she explained.

Proceeds from the fish fry will be used to purchase oxygen equipment and to equip and maintain Miami's first responder unit. The ambulance service is beginning its second year of operation, she said.

Volunteers plan to fry at least 250 pounds of catfish, to be served with cole slaw, beans, sliced onions and pickles, tea and coffee. Picnic tables will be set up both outdoors and indoors, depending on the weather.

To reach Red Deer Park, turn north at the stop light in Miami, cross the railroad tracks and the bridge, turn right at Lyons Street, go up a hill and turn right again at Barnett Street, then go down hill into Red Deer Park.

Advance tickets are $4 per person. Tickets will be $4.50 per person at the door. Children under six eat free. For more information or to order advance tickets, call Guerrero at (806) 868-3631.

Jury

xar County in connection with the case.

Authorities have surmised that after burying the infant, Coker and Campos found their way to Pampa and assumed the names Mike and Tina Wilson. Coker had been wanted in Bexar County for violating probation in connection with a beating Eric Jr. suffered several months before his death.

Coker has been in the Gray County Jail in lieu of $20,000 bond since his arrest. Tuesday, 31st District Judge Grainier McIlhany raised the bond to $40,000.

Campos is free on personal recognizance bond. She has said she didn't seek medical help for the child because she feared her husband.

Injury to a child carries a maximum prison sentence of five to 99 years or life.

The indictments against Wills, formerly of 1540 Hamilton St., allege that she used Windsor Servicing Co. checks to pay her own bills, and altered some of the checks for her personal benefit from November 1981 to August 1984.

Wilson, of Windsor Servicing, said today that discovery of the missing funds came about as the result of an Internal Revenue Service audit of his business.

"We didn't even know it until they discovered it," Wilson said.

He said Wills went to work for him in 1980 and left Pampa for Arizona in 1985, shortly after the Montgomery Ward store, where her husband Terry was an assistant manager, closed. The indictments are limited by a five-year statute of limitations on the theft charges, Wilson said.

Wills also is the subject of a civil lawsuit filed in November by Windsor Servicing and Wilson Properties Inc. against Citizens Bank and Trust of Pampa.

The suit alleges that the bank acted negligently by cashing about $13,000 worth of checks for Wills whenever she made deposits on behalf of Wilson's two firms. Wilson said the civil suit involves mostly royalty checks, not the same checks as involved in the criminal indictment.

According to the suit, Wills would deposit some of the checks and cash others.

Citizens Bank and Trust has denied all allegations in the suit.

Judge McIlhany set Wills' bond at $10,000. He has not yet scheduled arraignments for any of the recent indictments, District Clerk Vickie Walls said today.

Clements: Let legislature fix school financing

AUSTIN (AP) — State legislators — not judges — are the people to determine how to best finance public education in Texas, Gov. Bill Clements says. "We do not want our public school system to get into the hands of our state courts. That's just unacceptable," Clements said.

"The only way we can cure that is to go through the legislative process with a constitutional amendment and keep the responsibility for our public school system in the Legislature where it belongs," he said Tuesday.

State District Judge Harley Clark ruled earlier that the system unconstitutionally shortchanges districts with lower property wealth. The state is appealing.

Clements' comments came as legislative leaders, including Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, were being briefed on a proposal by Comptroller Bob Bullock to help bail the state out of its school financing dilemma.

While Bullock hasn't publically released details, sources say the plan includes a proposal to use some $600 million in bond proceeds to finance new facilities in school districts with low property wealth.

The proposal also calls for guaranteeing a minimum level of state funding for school districts that tax homeowners and businesses at the state average, an idea sources said still would allow wealthier districts to pump more money into their schools if they choose to do so.

The plan also suggests using money from the state Permanent School Fund to purchase construction bonds issued by local school districts, reducing financing costs and making money available for other uses.

Hobby called Bullock's proposals a good starting place for lawmakers and a plan that should meet requirements of Judge Clark's ruling.

"I think he's made an enormous contribution," Hobby said. "I think it's very good thinking ... He's done his usual very fine piece of work."

Clements said Tuesday he hasn't seen Bullock's plan and wouldn't comment on it. The governor's staff was briefed on Monday by Bullock.

During a brief question-and-answer session with news reporters, Clements said he believes the Legislature has sought to continually improve public education and would keep doing so if free of court control.

He said federal court intervention on the state prison system and state mental health system shows the need to keep public school financing under legislative control.

"The Legislature will take those actions, as they have always done, to constantly improve the quality of our school system. But we cannot do that through the judicial process, by keeping our public school system hostage to the court," Clements said.

The governor also said he believes some school financing problems are due to too-low property tax rates in some areas.

"I don't think there's any question about that. Particularly in South Texas, that is a prevailing situation," he said. "They're carrying irrigated land, and citrus, and gardens and in developed property on the tax rolls as $400, $450, $500 an acre when the market value is $4,000 and $5,000 an acre."

Clements said he might call a special session of the Legislature to address school funding problems. However, he said he prefers to wait until the Texas Supreme Court looks at the case, which currently is before the Austin-based 3rd Court of Appeals.

Francisca Rivera de Chavez, 102, is congratulated by her great-grandson Joe Lee Delgado after she received a legal status card from INS officials Tuesday.

Bedridden 102-year-old woman finally gains her legal status

QUEMADO (AP) — With her family by her bedside and cameras recording the historic event, a 102-year-old woman became the second-oldest person in the country to receive legal status under the amnesty program.

Reporters and U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials had to wait for Francisca Rivera de Chavez to wake up from a nap before continuing with the ceremony Tuesday afternoon. Richard Casillas, San Antonio district director for the INS, gave Mrs. Rivera de Chavez a work authorization or green card as reporters and family members converged over the bedridden woman, INS spokesman Mario Ortiz said.

"She is mentally alert, but there are times I have been told that she is more alert," said Ortiz, who accompanied other immigration officials to this border town about 40 miles south of Del Rio and 20 miles north of Eagle Pass.

The woman's family baked her a cake and presented her with a family tree as part of the ceremonies in the three-bedroom home of Dolores Turk, Mrs. Rivera de Chavez' youngest daughter. "I feel this is one of the biggest days of my life and my mother's life because this day she has always wanted to realize," Mrs. Turk said.

"I thought it was her desire to be a citizen of this country and now that there was this opportunity for amnesty I told her, 'Mom, this is the time for you to have your dream,'" Mrs. Turk said.

Ortiz said Mrs. Rivera de Chavez is the second oldest person in the country to receive legal status, behind a 104-year-old man in California who received a green card earlier this year. A 98-year-old woman in Brownsville earlier this year was given legal status and has since become the first amnesty applicant to be granted U.S. citizenship.

Clara Escobedo de Martinez, whose green card was canceled by immigration officials in 1962, has made television commercials for the INS, urging other aliens who qualify for amnesty to apply before the May 4 cutoff date.

Mrs. Rivera de Chavez, who was born in Concepcion del Oro in Jalisco, Mexico, is the widow of Maj. Rafael Chavez, who fought in the army of Francisco Madero.

While her husband fought the forces of Pancho Villa, Mrs. Rivera de Chavez lived in Piedras Negras, across from Eagle Pass.

Her husband received several injuries and died in 1937 in Piedras Negras and after his death, Mrs. Rivera de Chavez crossed into the United States to look for work to support her 12 children.

She worked and traveled through Texas and California and sent money back to her children. She has been living with Mrs. Turk and her husband, James, for the past 10 years.

"She does not really know what is going on about all this," Mrs. Turk said. "She hears her name on the radio or television and laughs. She hears her name and she says, 'That's me' and she laughs."

Rafael Chancey, Mrs. Rivera de Chavez' grandson, said he called immigration officials after Mrs. Turk was concerned about the elderly woman being deported.

Chancey, the manager of the Texas Employment Commission in Eagle Pass, said immigration officials expedited the paperwork for her grandmother and agreed to go to the border town.

"This is a very special occasion. It's very gratifying," Chancey said. "You get that tranquil spirit that this is really happening and I would tell all the families that are wanting to get into the amnesty program they should take advantage of it and not be skeptical about it."

Radio station in Dallas decides to give windfall to area charities

DALLAS (AP) — The $243,000 windfall a Dallas radio station received after an on-the-air solicitation will be distributed to area charities that help the homeless, hungry and abused, according to the man who started the solicitation drive.

"We just found things that made us say, 'Ooh, that's wonderful.' Now the fun part comes and we just start distributing funds," disc jockey Ron Chapman said Tuesday. It was Chapman who asked listeners several weeks ago to send in $20 without telling them why.

Within four days, the station had received $243,120 that it didn't know what to do with.

After days of reviewing numerous suggestions and requests, station officials Tuesday settled on the disbursement.

Recipients and the amount they will receive are the Salvation Army, $100,000; Common Ground Community Economic Development Corporation, $13,000; East Dallas Community School, $14,900; Tarrant County Food Bank, $56,000; and Women's Haven of Tarrant County, $16,000.

The station was deluged by suggestions from various people and organizations who had ideas on how to spend the money.

Hundreds wanted to help station officials figure out what to do with the money, and hundreds more wanted some of the money for themselves.

All kinds of suggestions were considered. Organ-transplant candidates wanted funding for operations. Lawrence Welk fans wanted to rebuild his birthplace in North Dakota.

Chapman said the donors will be told by letter how the money will be spent and if the donors disagree, their money will be sent back.

The Salvation Army intends to use its share to build a medical clinic at the Carr P. Collins Center.

"This is an answered prayer. It really is," said Maj. Frank Gordon, area coordinator for the Salvation Army services in greater Dallas.

The East Dallas Community School, a school for about 40 underprivileged students with a waiting list of 300, will receive $14,900 to build and equip two new classrooms.

"We are ecstatic. This is the best thing that could have happened," said Terry Ford, founder and director of the school.

The Tarrant County Food Bank will use its money for a new truck to deliver food donations to area food banks, shelters and agencies.

Statesmen say United States commitment strong in Europe

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The United States' commitment to defend Europe remains strong despite an agreement banning U.S. and Soviet short- and medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe, a former British prime minister said at Texas A&M University.

James Callaghan, who served as Britain's last Labor Party prime minister before Conservative Margaret Thatcher took over in 1979, praised the INF treaty signed at the last summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet Premier Mikhail Gorbachev.

Callaghan, along with former Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara and former U.S. Senator John Tower of Texas, spoke with reporters before Wednesday's Wiley Lecture Series symposium on nuclear war.

"I don't believe that it (the INF treaty) means in any sense a decoupling," Callaghan said. "The President has made it quite clear that in his view it does not mean that, and I think most of us in Europe accept his assurance."

"What I think is true is that the center of American interest, and to some extent policy, is bound to move to the Pacific much more than it has done in the past. The lesson that I draw from the situation is that Europe should have a European identity in defense matters, and develop its own defense thinking."

McNamara, who served as defense secretary under Presidents John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, said U.S. interests would be served by a stronger, more coordinated defense policy originating within the Western European countries.

"We used to have what we called the dumbbell analogy in the '60s, in which we talked about two balls of even weight, North America and Western Europe, joined by a bar of common interest," McNamara said. "Europe has not yet reached that stage of unity, but I believe that it's in our common interest to foster that."

McNamara continued that it is "absurd" to believe that the removal of intermediate-range nuclear weapons from Europe means a lessening of the U.S. commitment.

"It's inconceivable to me that the U.S. can serve its own interest by, quote, decoupling, unquote, from Europe," he said. "We have 300,000 troops there. That's what's coupling us."

Tower added that the U.S. decision to join NATO was a "political" decision, not based on any particular military strategy.

"We are in Western Europe because it is in our national interest to be there," Tower said. "We feel a strong moral obligation to participate in the defense of Western Europe, but primarily we're there because it is axiomatic that when you are confronted by a powerful adversary you move your defense perimeter as far from your own shores as possible, and as close to the potential adversary as possible."

Governor wants welfare reform

AUSTIN (AP) — Getting people off welfare and keeping them off is a key goal of a new task force that will recommend ways to overhaul the state's welfare system, the group's chairman says.

"We're going to look particularly at how we can do a better job of not only putting people to work but keeping them there," said Rob Mosbacher of Houston, named to the task force post Tuesday by Gov. Bill Clements.

"A large part of the problem is these people take jobs and in a matter of four to six months are back on welfare. We're going to focus on how you keep them in the workforce. We're interested in moving them off welfare and into the workforce permanently," Mosbacher said.

Clements said the state should help citizens find work.

"We have a moral obligation to help every man and every woman who wants a job to have a job, a good job, a job with a future, a job in the private sector," Clements said.

However, the governor said the current welfare system hasn't worked.

"The fact is the welfare system has not performed to the expectations of anyone — liberal or conservative, recipient or taxpayer, deliverer of the programs or just an observer of the system," he said.

Clements said the task force will make recommendations before the 1989 Legislature goes to work.

Speaking to the Texas Association of Private Industry Councils, Clements said the panel would seek to increase cooperation among state welfare agencies, operate pilot programs designed to reduce the number of people who return to welfare, encourage volunteer groups to support families receiving aid for dependent children and recommend changes in the law to break the jobless cycle.

Clements said the time is right to reform the welfare system because the state's economy is growing. "By the end of 1988, total non-farm employment in Texas is expected to pass 6.688 million. That's an all-time high."

Girl with new heart to celebrate two birthdays

DALLAS (AP) — Shields and Debra Jones said their daughter Kiersten will have two birthday parties every year — one for the day she was born, and one for the day she got a new heart.

Eight-month old Kiersten went home to Flower Mound, a Dallas suburb, Tuesday less than two weeks after she became the first child to receive a heart transplant in a Dallas-area hospital, the Dallas Morning News reported.

Shields Jones said he made his daughter a promise late one night this month in Children Medical Center's intensive care unit.

If she survived to receive a heart transplant — the only hope for the girl, whose heart was deteriorating daily — he'd give her a second birthday party each year.

"I feel like my little girl has been given back to me," Mrs. Jones said as Kiersten, sitting quietly in a frilly pink dress, looked at her mom.

The Joneses learned when their daughter was two months old that the girl suffered from idiopathic cardiomyopathy, a deterioration of the heart muscle for unknown reasons.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

'Peace' proposal should be rejected

The crisis over Palestinian areas held by Israel won't be solved by any quick-fix plan. The millennia-old problems in that beleaguered region require patient, skillful diplomacy, education and freer commerce. Accordingly, Jordon, Syria and Israel have been wise to reject Secretary of State George Shultz's "peace" plan.

Perhaps the Israelis, who don't cotton to Shultz's idea of bringing the Soviets in on the negotiations, are also wary of the horrendous record of American diplomacy during Shultz's tenure in office. Consider just three examples concerning Middle Eastern policy.

In 1983 a State Department directive prohibited U.S. Marines sent on a peace-keeping mission to Lebanon from keeping loaded weapons. As a result, when on Oct. 23 a suicidal driver ran a truck-bomb into a Marine compound, guards couldn't shoot him before he blew up a barracks; 241 Marines were killed.

On Dec. 19, 1983, the investigations subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee found that "policy making authority" in Washington had contributed to the Marines' vulnerability. It had imposed political and diplomatic roles on the Marines that "emphasized visibility," while causing "greater than necessary security risks."

Second, for the past several years Shultz's State Department has delayed American aid to the mujahedeen freedom fighters struggling to liberate their country, Afghanistan, from Soviet invasion forces. Even left-wing congressmen have taken a harder line. Indeed, until Congress voted to overturn the policy, State kept a cloak of secrecy over its aid program, effectively keeping the aid flow to a trickle.

As Karen McKay of the Committee for a Free Afghanistan wrote in September 1985, "The U.S. State Department appears to remain unalterably opposed to any effective, traceable, or visible aid to the Afghans." Now that the mujahedeen is armed with U.S. Stinger missiles, the Soviets appear to be on the run, a salutary development that could, but for Shultz's pandering to Soviet sensibilities, have happened years ago.

Third, as Shultz himself has testified, in 1986 he objected to sales of arms to Iran to get American Mideast hostages released. Shultz could have threatened to resign over the issue. Doing so would have awakened President Reagan to the problem, almost certainly preventing the Iran arms scandal that has paralyzed his administration during its last two years in office.

Israelis and others who truly want peace in the Middle East should be polite to Shultz, but reject his proposal.

Orphan Drug Act renewed

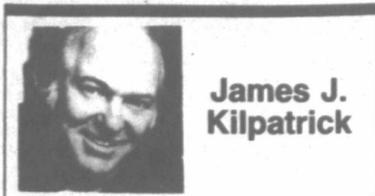

WASHINGTON — Long question: What do a couple of liberal Democratic senators, Howard Metzenbaum and Edward Kennedy, have in common with two conservative Republican senators, Orrin Hatch and Nancy Kassebaum? Short answer: not much.

But hold on. This unlikely quartet teamed up the other day to complete re-enactment of one of the best federal acts of recent years. This is the Orphan Drug Act of 1983. You may be properly grateful if you never heard of it.

A moment's digression: In our business, the news business, we write mostly of the bad things in our society — wars abroad, drug abuse at home, the events that Gibbon termed the crimes, follies and misfortunes of mankind. It was ever thus; and as long as bad is more novel than good, it will stay that way. But the unfortunate result is that good things get crowded out of the news. We feed on controversy and we yawn at serenity. Passage of H.R. 3459 on March 31 didn't make even a ripple in the day's news.

The reauthorization bill, sponsored chiefly in the House by Rep. Henry Waxman of California, continues for three years a modest program of federal grants for orphan drug research. It expands the scope of the program to include research on orphan medical foods and devices.

The whole idea is to encourage development of pharmaceutical products that will benefit those who suffer from afflictions most of us never heard of. Example: postaxonic myoclonus. It is a terrible disease, characterized by uncontrollable jerking and muscle contractions. It is believed that only 2,000 persons in the United States suffer from these fearful spasms. Because of the act, a drug has been developed that

The law provides incentives to drug manufacturers who otherwise would have no reason to interest themselves in such products. Amazingly, medical science has identified an estimated 5,000 rare diseases. By definition, these are diseases that hit no more than 200,000 persons. Roughly 8 million Americans, half of them children, suffer from their effects.

If a manufacturer develops a product useful in their treatment, the company may obtain a seven-year exclusive license for its sale. In addition, the law provides tax credits equal to one-half the cost of clinical testing. The law provides an excellent example of cooperation between the federal government and the private sector. This is the kind of thing the states could not do; without the incentives, it is the kind of thing that private enterprise could not be expected to do. They are not in business to produce profitless products.

When the Orphan Drug Act was passed in 1983, only 34 drugs were on the market for treating these afflictions. Today 183 orphan drugs have been designated for testing and another 24 have been approved for marketing.

An estimated 50,000 paraplegics suffer from kidney infections caused by the constant buildup of ammonia in their urine. A related disease, known professionally as absorptive hypercalciuria, leads to painful kidney stones. Under the orphan drug program, a product was developed from sodium cellulose phosphate that may be useful in certain cases.

Only a handful of persons — perhaps no more than 100 in the nation — suffer from Wilson's disease. This is a genetic disorder that leads to the body's inability to handle dietary copper. Three years ago the Food and Drug Administration approved an orphan drug for its treatment.

Some of the benefits will go to victims of AIDS who are vulnerable to a fatal form of pneumonia. As many as 60 percent of AIDS patients die as a result. An orphan drug may prolong their lives. Other new drugs treat leprosy, rare gallstones, spasticity, neuroblastoma and testicular cancer. A drug called Mazindol has been developed for the treatment of Duchenne muscular dystrophy. Yet another drug will treat anemia associated with end-stage renal disease.

As a general proposition, conservatives are wary of partnership with government. Bureaucracy has a way of suffocating innovation. Drug manufacturers historically have chafed at the long delays and the monumental costs associated with approval of a new drug for widespread prescription.

The quiet and unpretentious program of orphan drugs has provided a heartening exception to the general rule. This program is working exactly as it was intended to work. Let me suggest a round of applause.

And yet the innocent suffer

Corporate capitalism has been criticized as an efficient system but a cold one, inconsiderate of the individual worker.

Recently, a spate of takeovers and mergers has left thousands of workers — including management-level executives — in limbo.

Two years ago there were eight supermarket chains competing for customers in Southern California. Today there are seven. Within months, as Vons swallows Safeway, there will be only six. Next on the block are Ralphs, Lucky Stores and Boys' Markets.

Retailers, involved in or affected by store mergers, are fighting for their own jobs and for those of their employees.

Changes and consolidations create opportunities and unemployment in almost equal proportion.

Unions hate the upheaval; competitors fear it.

No place more than in Southern California is the grocery industry in upheaval, but the resultant problems there parallel problems everywhere.

While I could not presume to "expert" the problems and prospects for this industry, I have had first-hand experience with half a dozen changes in ownership of the broadcasting network that employs me, and I can say with certainty that, inevitable displacements notwithstanding, each new management was an improvement over the one before.

And I believe with each "overhaul" the consumer has been served better.

But again — many innocents suffer in the cross fire of a corporate takeover.

With most unions gelded or eroding, merging American industries are able to maneuver and manipulate with minimal organized resistance.

But time and again, experience has demonstrated that excesses, inevitably, are their own undoing. Industry's "robber-barons" of two generations ago misled us to the brink of anarchy until they were themselves fettered by restrictive legislation.

An old automobile after enough years and enough miles isn't worth repairing anymore.

Automobile factories also outlive their usefulness. But when General Motors elected to phase out 68-year-old factories and build new ones — sufficiently efficient to compete in the world marketplace — GM calculatedly offered retraining, relocation and/or early retirement to long-term hourly workers.

In closing the Norwood, Ohio, assembly plant the corporation set aside $100 million in supplemental unemployment benefits for displaced workers.

A more specific example: GM shut down the Janesville, Wis., pickup truck plant because the factory was antiquated and the imperfect product was not selling.

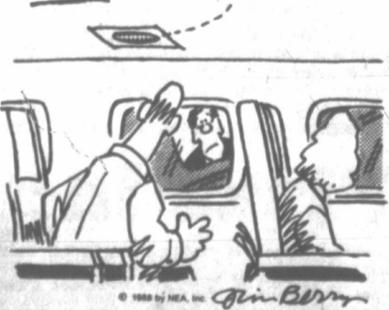

The entire force was offered 2 million hours of training for employment at the new truck plant in Fort Wayne, Ind. There the same people are now producing what most industry analysts acclaim as "the best pickup truck in the world." The product of the new plant is already sold out for the entire year.

This demonstrates an "enlightened selfishness," if you will.

Our nation's corporate leaders now have an opportunity to demonstrate magnanimity or callousness — and history says they will reap whichever they sow.

Berry's World

IF YOU LOOK OUT THE LEFT SIDE OF THE PLANE, YOU CAN SEE ... OOPS ... WELL, IN A SECOND YOU SHOULD BE ABLE TO SEE ...

They're falling asleep at nuclear switch

By ROBERT WALTERS

PEACH BOTTOM, Pa. (NEA) — Nobody ever said working in this rural community was exciting. Indeed, the only commercial enterprise for miles around is a garage that appears to specialize in collecting wrecked and rusted autos.

The sole road into town cuts through a desolate, heavily wooded ravine. The rolling farm land throughout surrounding southeastern Pennsylvania induces a sense of tranquility among residents and visitors alike.

But that bucolic setting doesn't justify falling asleep on the job — especially among those working in the control room of a nuclear power plant.

That's exactly what was happening, however, at the generating station here, where a pair of nuclear reactors each produces slightly more than 1,000 megawatts of electricity.

According to the Institute of Nuclear Power Operations, an industry-sponsored safety organization, there were occasions when only one person was in the control room. At other times, the control room was more adequately staffed — but everybody present was asleep.

Dozing on the 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift was especially common, as were rubber band fights, magazine reading and other distractions.

In unprecedented criticism of a nuclear power plant, INPO earlier this year said Peach Bottom was "an embarrassment to the industry and to the nation." The "grossly unprofessional behavior by a wide range of shift personnel," said INPO, "reflects a major breakdown in the management of a nuclear facility."

Both units at the power plant were ordered closed early last spring by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. But neither the NRC nor INPO appears inclined to examine the broader question of employee dereliction of duty in an industry where workers' failings can have terrible consequences.

The problem is not confined to Peach Bottom. The Critical Mass Energy project of Public Citizen, a

Washington, D.C. public interest group, has identified dozens of similar situations. Among them:

- In 1987, a shift supervisor (the person in charge of the entire plant) was found asleep in his office at the Davis-Besse nuclear power plant in Ohio. Two years earlier, a pipe leak at the same facility went undetected because the person assigned to monitor the cooling system was asleep.

- In 1980, two control room operators were found asleep at the Dresden plant in Illinois. Security guards have been found sleeping at nuclear power plants in Florida, Arkansas, Mississippi, Minnesota and Pennsylvania.

- Scores of nuclear power plant employees in North Carolina, California, Arizona, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Mississippi, Oregon, Virginia, New Jersey and other states have been arrested by state or local law enforcement officials on charges relating to the possession, use or sale of drugs.

- During construction of the Seabrook plant in New Hampshire, almost 300 workers have been fired for drug and alcohol abuse.

Last month, 17 Peach Bottom employees were discharged or suspended because they allegedly were using drugs. Last autumn, six Peach Bottom workers were indicted on drug dealing charges. In subsequent trials, two were acquitted but the other four were convicted or pleaded guilty.

Dealing with those problems has been difficult for Peach Bottom's 3,000 employees and for the Philadelphia Electric Co., which operates the facility. Shift superintendents, operations supervisors, control room operators and plant managers all have been reassigned, disciplined or dismissed. Earlier this year, Philadelphia Electric's chairman and president both announced their resignations.

Notwithstanding those dramatic actions, the Peach Bottom plant remains closed more than a year after it was shut down by federal regulators — and the industry remains beset by the intractable problem of dealing with wayward workers.

INS deadline prompts surge in applications for amnesty

By LARRY RYCKMAN
Associated Press Writer

Thousands of aliens are jamming U.S. immigration centers as the amnesty program's deadline loomed a week from today, and officials warned immigrants not to count on an extension of the cutoff date.

In Houston, there was standing room only Tuesday inside the Immigration and Naturalization Service office, Texas' busiest, and a line of applicants snaked around the building throughout the day.

Officials processed about 1,600 applications Monday and another 1,600 Tuesday. About 100,000 people were expected to apply for amnesty through the Houston office by May 4, twice the number initially predicted.

"There's too much people standing in line," said Marco Canamar, an applicant standing in line. "I don't think they have enough time to process all the people."

Immigration officials likened the filing frenzy by aliens seeking legal status to the mad rush by last-minute tax filers on April 15.

"These applicants are just like anyone else when it comes to procrastinating, just like you and I on tax day," said John Roark, an INS spokesman in Dallas.

Nationwide, officials originally projected up to 4 million undocumented aliens would apply. That estimate fell to 2 million. So far, the INS has received 1.2 million general amnesty applications and 400,000 applications under the more liberal seasonal agricultural worker program. Under provisions of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, illegal immigrants must prove they have lived in the United States continuously since before Jan. 1, 1982, in order to be eligible for legal residency status.

The U.S. House of Representatives has passed a measure to extend the cutoff date from midnight May 4 to Nov. 30, but the bill faces strong opposition in the Senate and a possible presidential veto. INS officials oppose an extension of the year-long program.

"It would be sending the wrong signal, that would encourage people not now in the country to enter the country," Roark said. "We would see another big surge in November if the deadline is approved."

Democratic presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson on Tuesday urged Congress to support an extension.

"Surely our great nation can find it in our hearts and souls to give six months more for freedom," Jackson said. "Lincoln is watching. Martin Luther King is watching. Give freedom a chance."

Until recent weeks, INS officials had been disappointed by the low number of applicants, and launched a media blitz to promote the program.

The number of applicants jumped as the deadline approached, prompting immigration offices nationwide to extend their hours and stay open on weekends.

In Boston, 352 illegal aliens applied for amnesty during the week of April 10 and 400 applied last week.

"Those were both record weeks for us," said Roger Nye, director of the INS amnesty program in Boston. So far, 7,583 people have applied for amnesty, and the office has recommended approving more than 95 percent of them.

Immigrants from more than 100 countries requested amnesty in Boston, with about half Hispanic, a fifth Haitian and a sixth Chinese, he said, adding that the list included 101 Irish nationals, 166 Nigerians, 110 Liberians and 100 Poles.

In recent weeks the number of applicants has doubled in the INS western district, comprised of California, Arizona, Nevada, Hawaii and Guam.

On April 18, the western region processed 3,521 new applications for legalization. On Monday, it received 6,802 applications, said Joyce Leonard, INS acting assistant director for immigration reform in Los Angeles.

Meese: Drug tests of everyone arrested

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III says everyone who is arrested should be tested for drugs and then should be subject to follow-up tests before trial.

"I would like to see the day where every person arrested is subjected to a urine test" to determine suitability for pre-trial release, Meese told mayors and police chiefs Tuesday at the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

He said once defendants are back on the street, they should be subject to random drug testing to dissuade them from committing crimes while awaiting trial. Meese added he would like to see mandatory drug testing results taken into account in sentencing by judges.

Meese later told a reporter a proposal embracing such an approach is "a part of our user accountability system" being developed at the present time by the National Drug Policy Board, a Cabinet-level panel which Meese chairs.

If the proposal is adopted, it would take legislation to implement the plan, said Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten.

Meese also said mandatory drug tests ought to be administered to users in drug treatment programs "to make them accountable."

Meese said such approaches are part of the Reagan administration's philosophy of "recognizing that the user is not a victim as some would suggest but rather that the user is a vital participant in drug trafficking."

Meese claimed that the proposals don't present constitutional problems, but didn't elaborate. Civil liberties groups vehemently disagree, saying that under the Constitution defendants are supposed to be presumed innocent until proven guilty.

A constitutional challenge to pre-trial testing of criminal suspects in the District of Columbia is before a U.S. District Court in Washington.

Ira Glasser, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union, denounced Meese's comments in a telephone interview from his New York City home Tuesday night.

"All of Meese's statements over the years are designed to sound tough on crime but are not tough on crime. . . ." Glasser said. "He should understand as well as anybody that being a suspect you're not guilty of anything."

Regarding the proposal for workplace drug testing, Glasser said, "These proposals threaten the innocent more than they do the guilty."

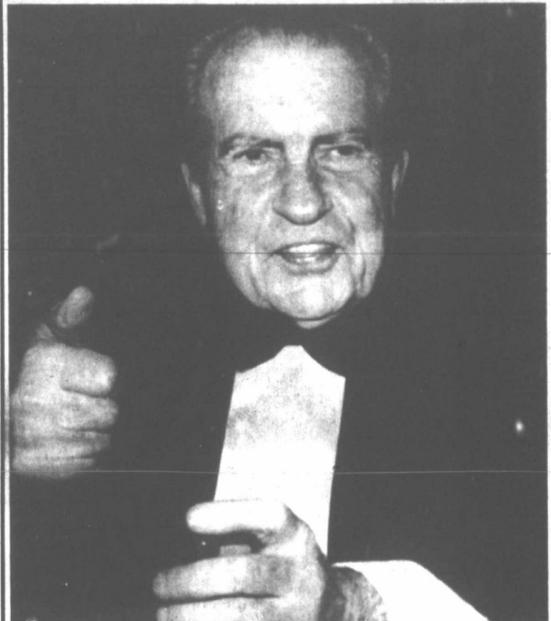

Despite his tough talk, Meese came under sharp questioning from several Democratic mayors who questioned whether he is doing an adequate job of directing the nation's war on drugs.

The mayors and police chiefs say more federal aid for drug education and law enforcement is needed to combat trafficking and that the United States should stop sending foreign aid to countries that continue to allow drugs to flow from their nations to the United States.

Meese responded that the Reagan administration is working on drug eradication and interdiction programs with governments in several South American countries in an attempt to cut the supply of cocaine into the United States by up to 50 percent over three years.

Meese said Justice Department officials "will be glad" to meet with the mayors and city police chiefs "as often as you want" to discuss drug-fighting strategies.

State Department loses hundreds of checks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department kept millions of dollars worth of travelers checks in unlocked cabinets and piled on floors in an operation so lax that more than $59,000 was embezzled and $307,780 cannot be accounted for, the department's inspector general reports.

And congressional investigators said State Department controls on travel advances were so disorganized that $15 million in such payments are delinquent.

"The department just can't seem to get its act together on these very basic financial management functions," said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, chairman of a House Government Operations panel which convenes hearings today to explore the situation.

"In testimony before the subcommittee in October 1985, the State Department admitted that its travel operations were a mess and promised prompt corrective behavior," Brooks said. "Now it is two and a half years later and things are still out of hand."

The inspector general's report said that although operations have improved, procedures still are not in place to fully protect an inventory of some $3 million in travelers checks.

"If these deficiencies cannot be corrected the risk of loss to the department is so high that travelers check operations should be discontinued," the report said.

Reporting on a surprise audit of the State Department's principal cashier's office conducted last Aug. 21, the inspector general's office found "an almost total lack of internal control."

The report, a copy of which was made available to The Associated Press, said inspectors found there was no inventory of travelers checks, no written operating procedures, no controlled custody of funds, minimal physical security in the cashier's office and improperly trained and supervised personnel.

The cashier's operation was so disorganized that State Department records could not be used to determine how much money had been embezzled, the report said.

Instead, investigators had to rely on the records of Citicorp, the issuer of the checks.

"As of Aug. 21 no documented procedures for cashing operations existed," the report said. "There were no procedures for end-of-day closing and funds reconciliation, sequential issuance of travelers checks, accounting for funds or even the handling of all funds — all of which are rudimentary requirements for the most basic controls."

"Eventually the lack of controls permitted an employee to embezzle funds," it said.

"On Aug. 21, we observed travelers checks stored in an unlocked supply cabinet and on the floor in the cashier's office," the report said.

"All of the boxes of travelers checks (20 or more boxes) had been opened and checks had been issued randomly out of the boxes rather than a first-in, first-out system for issuance," it said.

The Aug. 21 audit, the inspector general's report said, showed $87,320 was missing and cashed, of which at least $59,000 was found to be embezzled.

It said the remaining $28,320 cannot be located because of State Department processing errors and is still under investigation.

TV-like eyeglasses to be developed for low-vision patients

BALTIMORE (AP) — Scientists announced plans today to develop eyeglasses with tiny color TV screens instead of lenses that may help an estimated 2.5 million people whose vision can't be improved by conventional treatment.

The device will not restore sight to the blind, or improve nearsightedness, farsightedness or astigmatism, but will enhance what vision is left in people who suffer from degenerative eye disease, researchers at Johns Hopkins' Wilmer Eye Institute said Tuesday.

Wilmer and NASA's National Space Technology Laboratories will spend $5 million in the next five years to develop and manufacture the system, said Robert Massof, a Hopkins ophthalmology professor working on the project.

The device would resemble wrap-around sunglasses with small lenses at the upper outer corners, connected by optical fibers to a battery-powered computer at the waist, Massof said.

The lenses would capture the field of vision, and images would be conveyed to miniature solid-state television cameras in the waist pack, he said. The images are processed by the computer and displayed on the television screens where the lenses would be.

The result would be a clearer and more defined vision than can be produced by conventional eye treatment.

"The same world will be on TV screens," Massof said. "For a long time the only thing that's been done for people with low vision is provide them with a magnifier. With the technology (available), we (believed) we could do more than simply enlarge it."

Israel deports more Arabs; U.S. criticizes tactics

JERUSALEM (AP) — A 14-year-old Palestinian girl today died of wounds she received when Israeli troops opened fire on Arab protesters in a village in the occupied West Bank, a hospital official and Arab reports said.

The Israeli military command said it was checking the report.

In another development, three Arab guerrillas and two Israeli soldiers died Tuesday when the guerrillas infiltrated northern Israel and ambushed the troops, the army said. Two soldiers were wounded in the clash.

Also Tuesday, Israel expelled six Palestinian guerrillas, and the U.S. ambassador said deportations and the demolition of Arab homes in the occupied lands will backfire by fueling Arab extremism.

"This in turn raises such ominous specters that Israel has felt it had to employ methods which we believe are themselves outside the standards of human rights," Israel radio quoted Ambassador Thomas Pickering as saying.

Israel declined to give the names or destination of six PLO guerrillas expelled Tuesday, but most likely they were left in neighboring Lebanon, as has been done with other deportees.

The army said the six were among 50 guerrillas of the Palestine Liberation Organization's mainstream Fatah branch captured Feb. 7, 1987 aboard the Maria R, a Honguran-flagged ship seized sailing to Lebanon from Larnaca, Cyprus.

Arab reports identified the dead Arab girl as Arish Ismail Daoud Adik.

The reports said two dozen soldiers in five jeeps on Tuesday entered the village of Kufr Dik, 20 miles southwest of Nablus, to break up a demonstration by teen-agers who blocked roads with stones and hung outlawed Palestinian flags from utility poles.

Troops chased the teen-agers to the yard of the village mosque and opened fire and Miss Adik was struck by a bullet to the head, the reports said.

An emergency ward doctor at Al Ittihad Hospital in Nablus, who would identify herself only as Dr. Nayla, confirmed the reports in a telephone interview and said the girl died of her wounds this morning.

The death brought to 174 the number of Arabs killed in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war. Two Israelis also have died since the rioting began Dec. 8. The army has detained 4,900 Arabs and had deported 20 alleged agitators before Tuesday.

In another development, Israel on Tuesday suspended the press credentials of two correspondents for U.S. news organizations and said the journalists reported that Israel carried out the assassination of PLO military commander Khalil Wazir without first clearing their stories with military censors.

Glenn Frankel of the Washington Post and Martin Fletcher of NBC News were ordered to turn over their press cards and will no longer be permitted to talk with Israeli officials.

Yoram Ettinger, head of the Government Press Office, said their credentials would be suspended until an investigation was completed.

Under Israeli law, journalists must submit reports relating to security matters to military censors. The government has not clearly defined "security matters," and leaves the submission of reports to reporters' discretion.

The government has refused comment on reports that Israeli agents killed Wazir at his home in Tunisia on April 16.

Officials for NBC News and the Washington Post said they will protest the action against their reporters to the Israeli government.

Proposal to cut production could raise crude oil prices

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — If seven independent oil-producing nations and OPEC adopt a proposal to cut their exports by 5 percent, they could reverse the recent decline in oil prices caused by excess supplies, an analyst said.

"If they agreed to it, it would be very positive" for the oil market, said Paul Mlotok, an analyst for the investment firm Salomon Brothers Inc., who was in Vienna to observe talks between the two groups.

The proposal was made Tuesday. If it is adopted, it will be the first such accord with outside oil producers in OPEC's 28-year history.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange on Tuesday, contracts for June delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed 20 cents higher at $18.60 per barrel, partly in reaction to reports of the proposal.

Mexico's oil minister, Fernando Hiriart, said he conveyed the offer to representatives of the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on behalf of Mexico and six other independent oil producers — Egypt, China, Colombia, Malaysia, Oman and Angola.

Speaking through an interpreter, Hiriart told reporters the suggested cutbacks would be for May and June only. He added that the basis for calculating the reductions would be the average oil export level of each country over the past six months.

Hiriart said his government "shares OPEC's objective" of driving prices back up to the cartel's official target of $18 per barrel. Most OPEC oil currently is selling for $14 to $15 a barrel.

Rilwanu Lukman of Nigeria, the president of OPEC, called the offer "a good beginning."

The independent producers presented their offer at a meeting with six OPEC members. The two groups were scheduled to meet again this afternoon for a final day of closed-door deliberations.

Venezuela's oil minister, Arturo Hernandez Grisanti, told reporters the six OPEC officials were not authorized to make any decisions on the non-OPEC offer. He said details of the proposal would be passed on to all OPEC countries at a meeting in Vienna on Thursday.

Hiriart declined to say what Mexico or the other independent producers would do if OPEC did not agree to the offer.

"We are ready to implement these measures when we find the adequate proportional response from OPEC," Hiriart said, adding that this meant a "volume cut equivalent to 5 percent of its exports."

He said a 5 percent cut by the non-OPEC group would amount to about 200,000 barrels a day. He added it was unclear exactly what the 5 percent reduction for OPEC would amount to in barrels per day.

OPEC exports about 14 million barrels of its collective oil production of between 17.5 million and 18 million barrels a day. A 5 percent cut would appear to mean an export reduction of 700,000 barrels daily.

OPEC itself is sharply divided about whether to reduce its production, although it has long welcomed collaborative efforts by independent oil producers.

One of the main obstacles to an OPEC agreement on reducing its oil output is Iraq's refusal to cooperate.

Police capture three of six gunmen in bank siege

LOS MOCHIS, Mexico (AP) — Police said they captured three of the six gunmen who held 42 people hostages for a day inside a bank they were caught robbing in this northwestern coastal city last week.

Five people were killed and 15 wounded in the botched holdup.

The three suspects were arrested without incident at dawn Tuesday at the home of a relative of one suspect, said Arturo Moreno, commander of the local federal police.

Moreno identified the three as Mario Valdez Soto, 26, and Ramon Terrazas Torres of Los Mochis, and Ivan Camarena Acosta, 21, of Navojoa, Sonora state.

Terrazas Torres was found seriously wounded and taken to a local hospital, said Ramiro Guerrero, news editor at the newspaper Noroeste.

Governing party loses control of parliament in South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition candidates stunned the governing party in a national election by stripping it of a parliamentary majority for the first time in South Korea's 40-year history.

President Roh Tae-woo said the outcome of Tuesday's balloting "has left many things for us to think deeply about but I would humbly accept the outcome and do my best to fulfill my promise to the people."

The voting for National Assembly was marred by violent protests by demonstrators alleging vote fraud. But the strong opposition showing prompted dissidents and students to call off planned demonstrations.

Roh said his Democratic Justice Party's failure to win a majority in the assembly would make it difficult for him to govern.

He defeated two rival opposition leaders in the presidential election in December, despite receiving just 36 percent of the vote. The two, Kim Dae-jung and Kim Young-sam, both won National Assembly seats.

Kim Dae-jung, whose party emerged as the strongest opposition force in the legislature, said lawmakers should consider releasing all political prisoners and demand a probe into the bloody suppression of the 1980 Kwangju protest.

Final official returns released today indicated that 166 candidates from three opposition parties were assured of seats in the 299-member assembly. Independents won 10 seats, and Roh's party won 123 seats.

The outgoing National Assembly had 276 seats, 160 held by the governing party against 87 by the three main opposition parties.

Officials of the governing party said it was considering ways to absorb or align with "some independent members or moderate opposition members."

"Rough sailing is expected in the National Assembly with the emergence of a strong opposition," said Park Sung-bum of the KBS state television network.

Under the nation's new constitution, the assembly has an expanded role in governing. It is now empowered to investigate state affairs and the president can no longer dissolve it.

After the election results were announced, the composite stock price index on the South Korean market fell a record 24.58 points to 620.1. The previous record drop was 21.69 points on Feb. 26.

Kim Dae-jung's Party for Peace and Democracy won the most seats among opposition parties. He said the results showed people perceive his party as the best qualified to challenge Roh's administration. Kim, 62, was often imprisoned by past regimes for his political activity.

"Our party will not be a party always opposed to the government policy," he said, adding that it will cooperate in the interests of political stability if the Roh government delivers promised democratic reforms.

He also pledged to "fully cooperate" to make the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul a success.

There are 299 seats in the assembly, 224 of which were up for election from single-member districts. The other 75 were allotted according to the proportion of votes each party received. Winners will serve four-year terms.

The Party for Peace and Democracy ended up with 73 seats, Kim Young-sam's opposition Reunification Democratic Party received 58.

Bomb explodes in Kabul, three reported dead

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — A bomb exploded today along the Kabul River in the center of the capital, shattering windows in a two-square-block area. At least three people were killed, a witness said.

The vehicle in which the bomb was planted was destroyed, but it appeared to have been a truck or a small bus. Three buses and two taxis also were damaged.

Ambulance crews took away at least two men with serious wounds after the explosion at 12:40 p.m. (4:10 a.m. EDT) in the Pamira district. One Western reporter said he saw three bodies carried from the scene, and that witnesses had told him at least eight other people had been injured.

Foreign journalists were visiting Kabul for the 10th anniversary of Afghanistan's Marxist revolution, which was observed Tuesday with a massive military parade.

Police refused to tell foreign reporters who arrived on the scene about 10 minutes after the blast if there had been deaths.

It was not clear whether the vehicles were occupied when the explosion occurred.

The explosion was likely the work of anti-communist rebels fighting the pro-Moscow government of President Najib.

Afghan soldiers and police prevented the foreign journalists from getting closer than 100 feet to the bombed vehicle, whose charred chassis lay on the river bank, then drove them away.

Afghan shopkeepers spent the afternoon sweeping broken glass and rubble from buildings.

Hadley, Finley a pleasant guy

By The Associated Press

Folks in Waterloo, Iowa, said Steven Hadley had been a trustworthy guy, a churchgoing family man.

Neighbors in Friendswood, Texas, said Richard Finley was much the same. A pleasant man who would never be suspected of doing anything wrong.

On Monday, Hadley and Finley turned out to be the same man. A man wanted by federal authorities for walking out the back door of the John Deere employees credit union in Waterloo in 1983 carrying cardboard boxes stuffed with $1.1 million — money that belonged to the credit union.

"Steve was a great guy," Ross Randall said. "Very reliable. Very dependable. Last person in the world you would expect to do this."

Randall, now general counsel for the credit union, was an attorney for the business when Hadley, a credit union branch office manager for three years, and the $1.1 million disappeared July 21, 1983.

John Hughes lived around the corner from Finley in Friendswood, a town of about 22,000 just south of Houston.

"He didn't say a lot," Hughes said. "Friendly, a very pleasant person. You would never have suspected him of anything."

And no one had connected Finley and Hadley until police Lt. Gary Edwards opened his mail Monday and an FBI flier popped out with Hadley's picture on it. Edwards recognized the pictured man as Finley, who Edwards had been watching because he spent large sums of cash without any apparent income.

Finley paid $70,000 cash for a home in Friendswood in 1984. He also paid cash for Ferrari and Alfa Romeo sports cars and did a lot of traveling.

"People do not have that type of money to do the things he did without being employed," Houston FBI spokesman Johnie Joyce said.

"I always wondered what he did for a living, but I never really asked," Hughes said. "He had told some other neighbors he had injured his back."

Hadley left a wife and three children in Iowa when he disappeared. That wife, Kathryn, divorced him shortly after he left.

Someone answering the phone at her parents' home at Washburn said Hadley's former wife was aware of the arrest but had no comment.

Now he has left another wife in Friendswood, one who is "more or less angry with him," Edwards said. "This has ruined her life temporarily." She also was not available to talk.

A segment of the NBC-TV show "Unexplained Mysteries" scheduled for next week prompted the FBI to put out a new flier on Hadley in hopes a viewer would recognize him and contact police wherever he had gone, FBI agent Jerry Wall in Omaha said.

"It's not routine that we do that," Wall said. "It just hit at the right time. Sometimes you just get a break."

Wall said broadcasts such as the NBC program and a similar one on the Fox network can be valuable by circulating pictures of fugitives.

"I think they're a lot of help, really," he said.

Credit union workers in Waterloo cheered Monday when they were alerted to Hadley's capture by officials sending messages to their computer terminals.

"As it went out, a big cheer went up throughout the credit union," Randall said.

Toni Slifka, a credit union teller, had helped Hadley open a branch office in 1981.

"I felt the same way about Steve that everyone else did. He seemed to be an ordinary and friendly man," she said. "I'm just glad it's over."

Ray Fischels, who lived less than two miles from Hadley and saw him weekly at Immaculate Conception Church in Gilbertville, said Hadley had not been forgotten.

"His name was brought up every once in a while," Fischels said. "We wondered what happened to him or when he was going to be caught."

"Everybody was shocked when it happened," Fischels said.

Massaging feet of opposite sex now legal in El Paso

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — It was a ticklish problem, but the El Paso City Council resolved it by approving an amendment that allows members of the opposite sex to massage feet of the other sex.

The problem came up when Denise Sewell opened the Foot Rub Inn, figuring that she could turn a buck by rubbing some of this West Texas city's million feet.

But she learned that because of a city ordinance regulation massage parlors and Turkish baths, she could rub women's feet but not men's without a doctor's prescription.

The City Council Tuesday chopped the ordinance off at the ankles, making it legal to charge for a massage below that joint.

The original ordinance, aimed at banning massage parlors with a penchant for providing illicit pleasures on the side, prohibited a woman from giving a man a rubdown for pay and vice versa.

So the council members decided that they didn't want to go on record favoring digital discrimination.

Not every council member was wholeheartedly in favor of the amendment, at least not without some clarification.

Officials: Compliance with inhalant abuse law sparse

AUSTIN (AP) — Retailers are being urged to comply with a law requiring a license to sell spray paint and glue that can be abused as inhalants, state officials said.

The law that took effect March 1 covers up to as many as 20,000 retailers, but only about 4,000 of them have applied for and received licenses to sell the products, Texas Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein told a Tuesday news conference. The products can be abused through inhaling fumes.

"I don't think the importance of regulating the sale of inhalants can be overstated," Bernstein said.

"Whereas the so-called hard drugs, cocaine and heroin, may be the drugs of choice among the adult abuser, inhalants could be called the drugs of availability to youngsters," he said.

Inhalant abuse mostly involves young people, officials said. Bernstein said the abuser usually is between the ages of 11 and 17, and some have been as young as 5.

Consequences of abuse include permanent respiratory disorders, heart attacks, brain damage and death, Bernstein said.

"It is a cheap high, and the reason it goes down into the younger ages is because it is inexpensive and relatively available. The product's in the home, and the kids can come home after school and get high. It's in all classes of society," said Rep. Bill Blackwood, R-Mesquite, who sponsored the measure.

Blackwood said many retailers are not complying with the law, because they do not know about it.

The law passed by the 1987 Legislature requires people selling the products to display their licenses and to post conspicuous, bilingual signs warning that spray paint and glue with harmful vapors must not be sold to those under age 18.

A retailer who sells the products without a license faces a class B misdemeanor charge for the first offense, and a third-degree felony charge for the second offense, Blackwood said.

The state license, which must be renewed each year, costs $25, Bernstein said. Money from the licenses is to be used for inhalant abuse programs.

Among the programs being considered by the board of the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse are projects for high-risk people, such as children of substance abusers, and packages providing information on inhalants for businesses.

A committee headed by Blackwood is to examine the inhalant abuse problem and make recommendations to the 1989 Legislature. The committee has planned public hearings in Austin, San Antonio and Dallas.

"Hopefully the Legislature next time around will put more money into drug and alcohol abuse. This problem is taking us down as a society," Blackwood said.

Thread fish and vegetables on skewers for a fresh-tasting seafood kabob dinner.

Deep-sea kabobs have Middle Eastern origin

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Kabobs, say food historians, originated in the Middle East, but most of us learned about cooking on a stick by fixing wieners and marshmallows. Put your stick-cooking skills to work to prepare an easy, fresh-tasting kabob dinner. Precook the carrots and green peppers slightly so they'll cook in the same time as the fish.

DEEP-SEA KABOBS

- 6 ounces fresh or frozen skinless, boneless swordfish, salmon or halibut steaks or fillets, cut 1/2-inch thick
- 1 large pink grapefruit
- One 8-ounce can pineapple chunks (juice pack)
- 1/2 teaspoon dried dillweed
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 small green pepper, cut into 1/4-inch pieces
- 1/2 of a 10-ounce package frozen Parisienne carrots, thawed (3/4 cup)

Thaw fish, if frozen. Cut into 1/2-inch-wide strips. Finely shred 1 teaspoon peel from grapefruit. Remove and discard remaining peel. Section grapefruit over a bowl to catch juice. Reserve and chill sections.

Drain pineapple into grapefruit juice. Cover and chill pineapple chunks until needed. In a shallow bowl combine grapefruit and pineapple juices, shredded grapefruit peel, dillweed, salt and pepper. Add fish. Cover and marinate in refrigerator for 2 hours, stirring occasionally. At serving time, drain fish, reserving marinade. In a 1-quart saucepan cook green pepper and carrots in a small amount of boiling water 5 minutes or until vegetables are crisp-tender. Drain.

On four 12-inch metal skewers thread fish accordian-style. On 4 more metal skewers alternately thread green pepper and carrots. Place kabobs on unheated rack of broiler pan. Brush with some reserved marinade. Broil 4 inches from heat 5 minutes. Turn kabobs over. Brush with marinade. Broil about 4 minutes more or until fish just flakes with a fork. To serve, arrange grapefruit sections, pineapple and kabobs on 2 lettuce-lined dinner plates. Makes 2 servings.

Strawberries jazz up old-fashioned brownies

Dress up a packaged brownie mix with strawberries and a banana and you'll have a super spring dessert. Because of the cream cheese frosting, the brownies must be stored in the refrigerator.

STRAWBERRY BROWNIES

- 12 medium strawberries
- 1 ripe medium banana
- 2 beaten eggs
- One 20 1/2-ounce package walnut brownie mix
- 1/3 cup water
- 1/4 cup cooking oil
- One 8-ounce container soft-style cream cheese with strawberry
- 1 1/2 cups sifted powdered sugar

Remove stems and hulls from strawberries. Mash together strawberries and banana; set aside. In a large mixing bowl stir together eggs, brownie mix, water and oil just until moistened. Stir in strawberry mixture. Pour into a lightly greased 13- by 9- by 2-inch pan. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until brownie springs back when lightly touched. Cool.

For frosting, in a small mixer bowl beat cream cheese and powdered sugar until smooth (frosting will be soft). Spread over brownies. To serve, cut into bars. Store, covered, in the refrigerator. Makes 40 bars.

How about a change from tomato-based pasta sauces? Here's a creamy ham sauce to cook in your microwave while the pasta cooks in a saucepan on the range. To keep the pasta and sauce hot for second helpings, use a heated serving platter.

CREAMY PASTA AND HAM

- 6 ounces linguine or spaghetti
- 2 medium carrots, sliced
- 2 tablespoons margarine or butter
- One 4-ounce can sliced mushrooms, drained
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 1/2 teaspoon dried basil, crushed
- 1 cup milk
- 6 ounces sliced fully cooked ham, cut into bite-size strips
- 1/2 cup shredded Gruyere or Swiss cheese (2 ounces)

Cook the pasta according to the package directions. Drain.

Meanwhile, for sauce, in a 1 1/2-quart microwave-safe casserole combine carrots and margarine. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) 4 to 5 minutes or until carrots are crisp-tender. Stir in mushrooms, flour and basil. Stir in milk. Cook, uncovered, on high 3 to 5 minutes or until thickened and bubbly, stirring every minute. Stir in ham and cheese. Cook, covered, on high 2 to 3 minutes more or until cheese is melted. Place pasta in platter. Add sauce and toss to coat. Makes 4 servings.

Fine Arts Association names Steele '88-89 Artist of Year

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

Richard Steele, a teacher at Baker Elementary School, has been named 1988-89 Artist of the Year by Pampa Fine Arts Association.

Steele's selection was announced Monday night at the PFAA annual membership meeting, held at Pampa Country Club.

As Artist of the Year, Steele will be featured in an exhibition of his art works next spring during a show to be sponsored by PFAA.

In making the announcement, outgoing PFAA President Larry Franklin noted that Steele is "both blessed with talents and has advanced the arts here in Pampa."

Selection of the Artist of the Year is made by a committee comprised of former Artists of the Year, with the association's board of trustees then approving the choice.

Franklin said criteria for the honor include being a resident of Pampa or the surrounding area and making contributions to the arts, in addition to having the talents. The Artist of the Year need not be a member of the PFAA, Franklin noted.

Also recognized at the banquet meeting was Cile Taylor, who has served as PFAA Artist of the Year for 1987-88.

Noting her achievements, Franklin said "very few have exceeded her ability" and none has exceeded her in her contributions and dedication to the association.

In his final comments as president, Franklin delivered brief remarks he entitled "A Cowboy Looks at Art."

Saying preachers often tell us to do what's right because it's right, Franklin stated, "Pampa Fine Arts would like you to do art because you like art."

He said great artists never seem to tire of their ability to gain pleasure from art and suggested others also can enjoy art in the same manner.

One of the reasons to support the arts, "besides the enjoyment and pleasure," is because "art attracts business to the community," Franklin said. He said many major corporations and other businesses assess the educational and cultural opportunities in a community that would benefit their employees.

"Pampa Fine Arts goes a very long way in fulfilling this need in the community," he said.

Franklin noted that the PFAA is more than just a Pampa organization, attracting membership from surrounding communities and rural areas in Gray County and even from outside the county.

The association works to bring various artists and/or their exhibits to Pampa, sponsors shows and concerts for various performing artists, provides the fun and entertainment available at the annual Labor Day Chautauqua event and otherwise promotes the arts in the city, he said.

Franklin thanked the members for their contributions, adding that it had been "a great pleasure and a source of pride personally" to have served as president during the past year.

Receiving the gavel from Franklin was Lilith Brainard, who will take over the reins of the association as its new president.

Brainard thanked Franklin for his efforts and success in serving as president. "There's no way I could do the things Larry has done this past year" in guiding the association's projects, Brainard said, presenting Franklin a plaque of appreciation for his service.

She invited PFAA members to "get acquainted with the board of trustees, talk to them and let them know your ideas."

Other officers elected Monday night by acclamation at the meeting are Betty Hallerberg, vice president and president-elect for 1989-90; Duane Harp, treasurer; Betty Fletcher, secretary; and Bob Campbell, membership chairman.

Elected to three-year terms as members of the board of trustees were Barbara Benyshek, Fletcher, Linda Haynes and Loyd Waters. Elected as committee chairmen were Waters, Arts and Crafts Festival; Jim Brown, Visual Arts; Susie Wilson, Musical Arts; Faustina Curry, Junior Fine Arts; and Michael Hartssock, Miscellaneous Arts.

To serve on the 1989 Nominating Committee are Howard Graham, Muri Reeves, Harp, Fletcher and Campbell.

Special entertainment was a performance of a scene from the upcoming ACT I theater production of You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown. Cast members came over from their rehearsal to present the selection. The play will be presented Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon in Pampa Community Building under the direction of Kayla Pursley.

Very large closet needed to hold all secret bisexuals

DEAR ABBY: I saw you on the Phil Donahue show recently and was delighted when you said, "There is far more bisexuality around than anyone suspects."

I am a male, 64, and have been married for more than 40 years. I was a pilot in World War II, had a few flings with women, married shortly after the war and fathered several fine children.

When I was 27, my employer sent me and another male employee, whom I admired, to a one-week training program in another city. We shared a motel room with twin beds. This man had also been in the Air Corps and had a lovely wife and one child, as did I at the time. On the third night, we had no homework, so we went to a topless bar, had a few drinks and went back to our motel. Amid a little horseplay and rib-poking, we kind of fell on one of the beds together. That was the beginning of a very long bisexual relationship. He died two years ago and I have grieved ever since.

Not once in all those years was there any indication that there was anything between us either at work or in the presence of our families.

I loved that man and he loved me. Our relationship lasted for 40 years, and neither of us took anything away from our families. It was far more than a sexual attraction—we were best friends, closer than brothers. His children called me "Uncle."

I know that bisexuality is frowned upon by others. But I have no regrets.

IN THE CLOSET

DEAR IN: Yours is a very large closet. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am surprised that you were surprised by the number of bisexuals who surfaced in your survey. I am a male bisexual. The mental health professionals probably include us in the 10 percent labeled "gays." True, the majority of bisexuals use the gays for same-sex relations.

You are correct to question percentages, Abby. We bisexuals are so closeted we don't even know each other. We are in your heterosexual world—usually "happily" married, helping to rear our children with the same moral, ethical, caring values as you. We may be pillars of the community and part of that lovely family down the street. We cross all ethnic and financial lines. Most of you know one of us and consider us your close heterosexual friend, working buddy or acquaintance. Although this letter has little chance of reaching your readers, in order to protect my job, wife, children, heterosexual and bisexual friends, I must sign myself ...

NO NAME, NO TOWN

DEAR NO NAME: After my survey, I read an illuminating book titled "The Bisexual Spouse." It contains interviews with bisexual couples, married and divorced. It also includes enlightening comments by Dr. Judd Marmor, past president of the American Psychiatric Association, and past president of the American Academy of Psychoanalysis. The book is edited by Ivan Hill, published by Barlina Books Inc., P.O. Box 7425, McLean, Va. 22106, and sells for $16.95. It is especially timely in this age of AIDS.

DEAR ABBY: I am going to be married next summer. My fiancé and I have lived away from our respective homes for several years and have almost everything we need to set up housekeeping. We are now trying to come up with some way to inform our friends that we have already selected a color TV, microwave oven and VCR at a certain store, so if they want to give us a gift, they should go to that store and put their money toward one of those gifts.

I hope I don't sound terrible saying this, but we really don't want anyone to spend their money on some junky little gift that we can't use. We would rather have them put their money toward something important.

How should I word a message of this kind to send along in our wedding invitations?

PLANNING AHEAD

DEAR PLANNING: To enclose with your wedding invitations a suggestion concerning a gift would be very poor taste. The only acceptable way to convey your suggestions would be for a close friend to inform other friends. But don't be disappointed if some people prefer to make their own selections.

Keep furs cool during hot months

NEW YORK (AP) — Furs should be stored for the summer in a cool, dry environment, advises Sandy Blye, executive vice president of the American Fur Industry.

"A fur left hanging in a hot closet all summer can be devastated by heat, and heat will greatly affect a fur's longevity," she warns, offering these guidelines for proper care and storage of furs:

- Never store the fur in a plastic bag. Plastic prevents air from circulating and can dry out the leather.

- Ideal storage temperature for furs is 45° F. with a 55 percent humidity level, commonly known as "cold storage," which is usually available from local furriers.

- Never mothproof furs with chemical sprays. Have your furs cleaned annually by a fur specialist. Professional cleaning removes dirt, keeps leather soft and brings back the fur's original luster.

- Check your insurance policy before sending your furs to storage to make sure they are covered when stored off premises. Photo-document your furs before storing as a precaution in the event of a loss or mixup.

- Examine your fur before storing and have any small rips or tears repaired immediately.

- Always hang your fur garment on a broad-shouldered hanger, giving it enough room in a closet so that the fur isn't crushed.

Orioles' Larry Sheets backs away after being hit by a pitch.

Orioles foiled again!

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Baltimore Orioles keep coming closer to a victory. They also keep coming closer to the American League record for consecutive losses.

The winless Orioles actually led the world champion Minnesota Twins 2-0 in the bottom of the sixth inning Tuesday night. But, as usual, they trailed after nine.

The 4-2 setback extended the Orioles' imperfect start to 0-19. They have long since surpassed the major-league record for a start-of-the-season losing streak and can tie the overall AL mark of 20 straight by losing tonight in Minnesota. The major-league mark is 23.

"We've been in a lot of games like this with an opportunity right at the end," designated hitter Larry Sheets said.

And what an opportunity it was. Minnesota relief ace Jeff Reardon walked the first two batters in the ninth but pinch hitter Joe Orsulak's line drive was caught by shortstop Greg Gagne, who started a rally-killing double play. Fred Lynn, who homered off winner Frank Viola to start the game, then fouled out to end it.

"We can't stand here and think, 'What if we'd done this or done that,'" Manager Frank Robinson said. "It was nice to get out to that early lead, but I knew we'd need more runs to win."

In other AL games, it was Detroit 6, California 0; Cleveland 12, Seattle 6; Oakland 6, Toronto 1; New York 5, Kansas City 4, and Texas 3, Milwaukee 1. The Boston-Chicago game was rained out.

The Twins — and Kent Hrbek, in particular — were the latest beneficiaries as the Orioles continued to spread more good cheer than Santa Claus. Hrbek, who hit 34 home runs last season, hit his first of 1988 to tie the score in the sixth inning — a two-run shot that spoiled Mike Morgan's shutout bid — and two outs later Randy Bush. Hrbek added a solo homer off Dave Schmidt in the eighth. Tigers 6, Angels 0

Gary Pettis drove in three runs in his first game against his old club to back Jeff Robinson's six-hit pitching. Pettis, traded to Detroit last winter for pitcher Dan Petry, drove in two runs with a single in the third inning and singled home another in the Tigers' four-run fifth.

Indians 12, Mariners 6

Joe Carter continued his torrid hitting with two homers and five RBI and Jay Bell and Brook Jacoby drove in three runs apiece.

Astros make things happen

HOUSTON (AP) — Making things happen and catching all the right breaks are just two ingredients that have given the Houston Astros a winning April.

The Astros stole five bases, benefitted from two Mike Schmidt errors, and used a combined four hitter from Mike Scott and Dave Smith to cruise past the Philadelphia Phillies 3-1 Tuesday night to snap a three-game losing streak.

When it comes to making things happen for the Astros, no one can do it better Gerald Young.

Young, who stole 26 bases last year as a rookie after joining the club on July 8, swiped three bases and scored two runs.

"It was good to have a good night and pick up the team," Young said.

Young's rookie totals were impressive, but he isn't thinking about records at this point in his career. Young is concentrating more on improving his skills.

"I really haven't set any goals as far as steals," Young said. "Speed helps, but I'm getting accustomed to reading the pitchers the more I see them."

With Billy Hatcher, who stole 53 bases in 1987, and Young at the top of the order, Houston manager Hal Lanier can't help but be excited. "When Gerald and Bill get on base," Lanier said, "the other team has to make pitches they don't want to make. They can make things happen."

Lanier is projecting a great year for Young. "He can steal between 45 and 55 bases," said Lanier. "He's just getting better."

Young, who finished fifth in the NL rookie of the year balloting, went 3-4 to pace Houston's six-hit attack and finished the game with stolen bases nine, ten and eleven.

The Astros capitalized on all three Young steals and used Hatcher's sixth to get all the runs Scott and Smith would need.

Trailing 1-0, Young led off the Astros first with an infield single to second, stole second, and was sacrificed to third by Hatcher. Phillies starter Shane Rawley, 0-4, threw a wild pitch to tie the score 1-1.

Harvesters host Estacado

Hereford continued its dominance of District 1-4A teams with a 10-1 win over Borger Tuesday afternoon.

In other district games Tuesday, Canyon downed Dumas 4-1, Levelland outslugged Frenship 24-16, and Lubbock Estacado defeated Lubbock Dunbar 7-3.

Pampa, idle Tuesday, hosts Lubbock Estacado at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Houston starter Scott, 4-0, then took over and retired eight straight hitters from the second to fifth innings including seven strikeouts to keep the Phillies under wraps. Young's speed scored the Astros winning run in the fifth. Young led off with a single, stole second and third and scored when Glenn Davis' hard-hit grounder went past Schmidt for an error.

Houston took practically the same route to score its final run in the seventh, when Hatcher reached on a fielders choice, stole second and made it 3-1 when Schmidt committed his second error on another hard hit grounder by Davis.

"Those balls were hit hard, real hard," said Schmidt, a 10-time gold glove winner at third base.

Harvesters in peak condition

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

With their conditioning at peak level, Willie Jacobs, Michael Shklar, David Duke and Derek Ryan are practicing on the rudiments of their respective events this week in preparation for the Class 4A regional track meet.

The Pampa High foursome qualified for regionals at the District 1-4A meet two weeks ago.

"We're real excited about it (the regionals). The kids are at peak condition now and they're refining their forms this week," said Pampa coach Mike Shklar.

Jacobs, a two-time defending district champion in the 3200, will be going to regionals in the 1600 this year after winning the event at district. Shklar came in first in the 110 hurdles while Duke won the high jump and Ryan placed second in the long jump.

Jacobs has been concentrating on the last two-thirds of the 1600 this week, Shklar said. "That's his weak area. We're placing emphasis on the last six to seven 220 meters," Shklar added.

Jacobs, a senior, has won the 1600 twice and finished second three times in eight meets this season.

(Michael) Shklar, who has been nursing an ankle injury, has lost only once this season in the 110 high hurdles, placing second at the Plainview Invitational.

"His ankle has been doing pretty well," coach Shklar said. "We're taping it as a precaution, so he'll have an opportunity to be at full tilt for the regionals."

Shklar, a junior, had his best time of 14.57 at Lubbock's district meet.

"His times have been fairly good, even though he hasn't had a healed ankle for several weeks," coach Shklar said.

Duke and Ryan, both juniors, are working on their forms in the jumps.

"The main thing with Ryan is getting him to explode off the board with a full extension and follow-through. Duke has had some problems getting his steps down," said Shklar. "His plant foot has been a little off and he needs to get that corrected to increase his explosion level. Duke needs to jump 6-6 or 6-8 to get out of regionals and I know he's capable because he's already done it."

Duke, who joined the team late, won two high jump events during the season. Ryan claimed the long jump while placing second in three other meets.

"I feel very fortunate and very pleased to be able to send four individuals from Pampa to regionals. There was enormous talent and a high level of competition in our district," Shklar said. "Looking back at the season I feel real satisfied with the way they performed, even if they don't make it to state. I'll know they did their best."

The Harvesters tuned up for the regionals Friday and Saturday at Brownwood in a regional qualifiers meet last weekend at Gruver.

Ryan won the long jump with a 20-9 leap while Jacobs captured the 1600 with a time of 4:36.03.

"It was a small area meet, but they both did good, especially Jacobs. He was geared up for it and did outstanding. Jacobs is capable of breaking the 4:30 mark and I believe he can, he has an excellent opportunity of going to state," Shklar stated. "If Ryan works his drills just right and gets his jump up to 22-6, he's got a chance of getting out of regionals."

The top two qualifiers in each event advances to the state meet May 13 in Austin.

"If we can get to state that would be fantastic," Shklar said. "If we do our best we'll be in the running. We might not win, but we'll be pushing people."

Wheeler girls lead golf meet

Wheeler girls claimed a commanding first-round lead in the Region 1-A golf meet Tuesday in Levelland.

Wheeler's 406 leads Sundown by 20 strokes. Lisa Jones led the Lady Mustangs with a 99, good for second place in the medalist race.

Other Wheeler scores were DeeDee Dorman, 101; Marcie Smith, 102; Shelly McCasland, 104, and Mandy Smith, 108.

McLean is in a ninth-place tie with Anton at 505.

Misti Magee leads McLean with a 103. Other scores were Dolly Haynes, 118; Wendy Smith and Kim Beaver, both 142.

In the boys' division, Fort Davis is in the lead after first-round action with a 348.

McLean is in 11th place at 405. Robert Sanderson had a first-round score of 90 to lead the Tigers. Other McLean scores were Johnny Mann, 100; Sid Brass, 107; Kyle Wood, 108, and Tony Hambricht, 113.

Pampa drops soccer tilt to Palo Duro

Palo Duro defeated Pampa 7-1 Tuesday in a high school soccer match at Harvester Field.

Carey Phillips scored the only goal for Pampa in the first half. Pampa plays at Amarillo High Friday in a 5:30 p.m. match.

DUSTIN MILLER, Harvester basketball whiz, has been elected president of the PHS student body for next school year. He has also announced he will not play football... Now we know why they call Baltimore's American League entry the "O's". Maybe 0-fer-162?... The "post-concussion syndrome" which affects coordination, created a strange final week of the NBA season for the 76ers MAURICE CHEEKS. Accidentally slugged in the face by PATRICK EWING, Cheeks spent the night in the hospital, and suffered the "post" syndrome the rest of the season, committing 26 turnovers one game, then hitting 7 for 7 field goals and 2 for 2 free throws the next... If the pheasants feeding along the highway between Kingsmill and White Deer is any indication, it should be a good season for hunters... To settle the discussion between Lefors faculty members, DAVE COWENS coached the Boston Celtics the final 68 games (27-41) of the 1978-79 season, taking over from teammate SATCH SANDERS, who inherited the job from teammate TOM HEINSOHN midway through the previous season.

A feature film on the story of former Houston Astros fireballer J.R. RICHARD is being planned. Richard was 30 when he suffered a stroke and collapsed on the field in 1980 after being labeled a "malingerer" by the Houston press... Texas high school teams have been fortunate enough to play in many of the college football stadia in the state (as well as Texas Stadium and the Astro-dome) for schoolboy playoffs. Now, North Carolina and North Carolina State have offered their facilities, FREE, for the title game this fall. Wake Forest, a private school, has also offered its facility but says it must charge about $10,000 for the use, a fee local business firms have offered to pay... Here's a great idea. While many college grid coaches' contracts call for bonuses based on wins, attendance, bowl bids received, Pittsburgh coach MIKE GOTTFRIED just signed a new long-term pact uniquely paying a bonus based on the graduation rate of his players... The US Supreme Court ruled unanimously last week that states may limit gasoline prices and profits, powers relinquished by the federal government in 1981.

Texas HS Coaches Association president BOB MCQUEEN of Temple reports his group held public hearings in March on four items, including whether in-season athletics should prevail over off-season athletics! Ridiculous!!! That's the major problem in Texas high schools today. Off-season football conditioning prevails over in-season sports, as coaches self-serve rather than give the kids what THEY want... The Tri-State Seniors Golf Association board will meet in Pampa May 20 to wrap-up final details on this summer's event at the Pampa Country Club. Included will be discussion concerning possible inclusion of a Super Seniors Flight for just that super group... Former PHS athletic director WELDON "Birdog" TRICE is sending word to all WTSU lettermen that annual senior athletic cookout will be held on campus at 5:30 pm May 5. Those letterman desiring more information may call Trice at 656-2311. In light of all the troubles at the Canyon Div. II institution, someone suggests WTSU stands for Whatsamatta U.

Bruins advance in NHL playoffs

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Hockey Writer

The long-suffering Boston Bruins made short work of the Montreal Canadiens in the Stanley Cup playoffs. Ending 45 years of frustration against Montreal, the Bruins knocked the highly regarded Canadiens out of the playoffs with a 4-1 decision Tuesday night in the Adams Division final. That wrapped up the series in five games and lifted a burden from the Bruins, who had lost 18 straight playoff series against Montreal dating back to 1943. The Bruins overall have only beaten the Canadiens three times in 23 Stanley Cup matchups. "I've spent so much time losing in this building," said Steve Kasper, who scored two goals along with Cam Neely at the Montreal Forum to key the Boston attack. The Bruins will play the winner of the Patrick Division final between the New Jersey Devils and

Washington Capitals. The Devils took a 3-2 lead in that series with a 3-1 victory Tuesday night. The playoffs continue tonight with St. Louis visiting Detroit in the Norris Division final. The winner of that series will play in the Campbell Conference final against Edmonton, which won the Smythe in four straight over Calgary. Boston took a 2-0 first-period lead on goals by Kasper and Neely, and with goaltender Rejean Lemelin turning aside 28 shots, the Bruins never faltered. It was the first time that Montreal had made such an early exit in a best-of-seven series since 1963. Kasper delivered a crushing blow with a goal that stretched the margin to 3-0 at the midway mark of the second period. When John Kordic scored just over four minutes later for Montreal, it produced a frenzied attack by the Canadiens. But Lemelin, who yielded only five goals in the last four games of the series, weathered the storm. Neely, with his fifth playoff goal, gave the Bruins some added breathing room at 4:06 of the third period, when he lifted the puck high over fallen Montreal goaltender Patrick Roy. "I'm not too worried about history," Neely said. "We didn't even think about such a thing as a jinx in the dressing room. It was just the press that got us tired of hearing about it because they constantly reminded us." Montreal Ryan Walter gave full marks to the Bruins. "They played solid hockey in all five games," he said. Devils 3, Capitals 1 At Landover, Md., Kirk Muller scored two goals and Bob Sauve stopped 28 shots to lead New Jersey's victory over Washington. The Devils can wrap up the Patrick title with a victory at home in Game 6 on Thursday night. Sauve recorded his second playoff victory.

Opener crucial for Rockets, Mavs

DALLAS (AP) — If Robert Reid is right, Thursday night's NBA playoff clash between his Houston Rockets and the Dallas Mavericks has got to be one of the most important games either team will play this season. "It all comes down to Game 1," the Houston guard said. "If you can win that one, you've got the other team on the run." The two teams have met six times during the regular season with the Mavericks holding a 4-2 advantage. Dallas even broke a seven-game losing streak at Houston's Summit, where they have now won two consecutive games. Dallas coach John MacLeod says defense and rebounding kept the Mavericks in the thick of the NBA's Midwest Division race until the final week of the season. "I don't know how many times our defense and our rebounding bailed us out," MacLeod said. "There were a lot of times when if we didn't get that kind of effort, we would have lost." "We did an excellent job with our defense for most of the season until the last month or so, but I can see us getting back to that level of play in the playoffs," MacLeod said. The Mavericks have a distinct advantage in the series because they hold the home-court advantage, meaning if the series is extended to five games, three of them will be at Reunion Arena, where they were 33-8 for the season. One of those losses, however, was a 108-92 loss to Houston back on Jan. 30. Houston's Reid is quick to point out that this series is special since it matches two Texas teams. "It's going to be heated because now you're playing for (Texas) bragging rights," Reid said. The series is only the third ever between Texas teams in the NBA. In 1981, Houston defeated the San Antonio Spurs, 3-1, and in 1980, the Rockets won the mini-series from San Antonio, 2-1. And, Reid says, the team that wins the series will meet the Los Angeles Lakers for the Western Division championship. "That's automatic," he said. Despite their quick exit from the playoffs last year when they lost to Seattle in the first round, the Mavericks are beginning to establish themselves as regulars in the playoffs. They are among only eight teams in the NBA who have qualified for the playoffs in each of the past five seasons. The others are the Los Angeles Lakers, Boston, Milwaukee, Denver, Portland, Detroit and Washington.

Truce sought in NBA

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK — Labor peace is being declared in the NBA.

"It's better to make peace than to make war," Commissioner David Stern said Tuesday after a six-year collective bargaining was signed between the NBA and its players. "This deal was made because it's good for the league, good for the players and good for the fans."

In addition to bringing an end to NBA antitrust litigation, the agreement grants many players unrestricted free agency between now and 1994, continues the salary cap system and reduces the college draft to two rounds after this year.

Both sides had expressed confidence in winning the brewing court battles that now will not occur, but Stern said, "Whatever side's legal position was right, it's better that we settled this now."

The union had asked for unrestricted free agency and the abolition of the salary cap and the college draft. It got partial, but not complete, satisfaction on all three.

"Both sides made compromises from their original positions in order to reach agreement," Stern said. "The NBA owners and players once again demonstrated their willingness to work together."

Before next season, seven-year NBA veterans with expired contracts will have complete freedom to sign with any team, and his original team will no longer have the right to match an offer and keep him, as it does under the current right-of-first-refusal system.

Among the veterans who could benefit immediately from this provision will be Moses Malone of Washington, Sidney Moncrief of Milwaukee and Tom Chambers of Seattle.

"This is the first time in professional basketball that a player will be able to play with any team he chooses," said Larry Fleisher, executive director of the players association.

After the 1988-89 season, the free-agency provision will apply to five-year veterans, and in the last year of the agreement, 1993-94, a four-year veteran will have unrestricted free agency provided he is not in his first NBA contract.

In order to retain the right-of-first refusal for players who do not have enough years of service or who have just completed their first contract, a team must offer a player a new contract that is worth 125 percent of his previous yearly salary. Teams also are not allowed to match an offer and then trade a player.

Baseball challenge

A baseball challenge will be held Sunday, May 8 at Harvester Field. Events consist of hitting, bunting, fielding, throwing and pitching for 11 different age groups, starting with eight years old and up. There will be two different age groups in the 18 and older division. "Pre-registration cost is $3.

Starting time is 1 p.m. and the entry fee is $5 on the day of the competition. Interested persons may register at any home varsity game or by calling Rod Porter at 669-7122 or Steve Porter at 669-9347.

Participants must supply their own glove and bat, but baseballs and batting helmets will be provided.

Trophies will be awarded in each age group.

Proceeds will be used to purchase equipment for the high school baseball program.
