

Dear Editor,

Are Muleshoe and Bailey County residents automatically opposed to change? If not, then why are so many of them opposed to the upcoming election for alcoholic beverage sales in Bailey County Precinct 4? What is so dramatic about this change that is causing so many people to join together in opposition? What changes would these people be in favor of?

Most Bailey County citizens would be in favor of a change that would be beneficial to the community as a whole. Would the legalization of alcoholic beverage sales in Muleshoe be beneficial to all of us? What would the effects be? These questions are difficult to answer because the effects will be in future. However, we can look at other surrounding towns that have legalized the sale of alcoholic beverages and hopefully learn from their experience.

For example, let's look at what the effects have been in Hereford. In 1983, Hereford was a "dry" community. There was, however, access to alcoholic beverages only 10 miles away on the Castro County Line. By 1984, the city had voted to allow the legal sale of alcohol within Hereford itself. Let's look at some facts of their situation since then.

FACT- The population of Hereford in 1983 was 21,000.
The population of Hereford today is 19,000.
This is a decrease of 9.5%.

FACT- In 1983, county court costs were $30,000.
In 1992, county court costs were $100,000.
This is an increase of 333%.

FACT- In 1983, the number of arrests for crimes was 1,500.
In 1992, the number of arrests for crimes was 4,100.
This is an increase of 273%.
75% of these crimes were alcohol related.

FACT- In 1983, the number of probation officers in Deaf Smith County was 3.
In 1992, the number of probation officers was 12, with a need of 2 more reported.
This is an increase of 400%.

FACT- In 1983, the number of arrests for assault was 160.
In 1992, the number of arrests for assault was 470.
This is an increase of 293%.
90% of these assaults were alcohol related.

FACT- The citizens of Hereford are currently trying to reverse their decision of 9 years ago. In an upcoming election, they will attempt to again make the sale of alcoholic beverages in their city illegal.

FACT- In the years between 1983 and 1992, reported cases of family disturbances increased by almost 300%.
Many of these cases are reported to be alcohol related.

Can we afford not to learn from their experience?

A.A.U.W. Names December Girl Of The Month

The American Association of University women is a national organization devoted to advancing the status of women and girls in our society. AAUW is dedicated to promoting equity in education and providing informative programs for its members. The local branch of AAUW meets at 7:00 p.m. the first Monday of each month. (during school months) and welcomes any new member who is a graduate of an accredited university. This organization also offers a scholarship to a deserving young college student each year.

AAUW in the Muleshoe area began a tradition several years ago of honoring deserving young girls for their achievements in academia and service. Each month, an outstanding young lady is chosen from the Muleshoe High School Senior Class as "Girl of the Month", and twice a year, a Senior girl from the Lazbuddie Senior Class is chosen as either the "Fall" or "Spring" outstanding young girl. These young ladies are chosen for their contributions to school, church, and community as well as for academic excellence. The members of AAUW are very proud to be able to recognize these wonderful girls and further honor them with a dinner party in the month of May.

The Muleshoe branch of the American Association of University Women is pleased to announce this year's fourth girl of the month, Miss Mandy Kathleen Shipman.

Mandy is a senior at Muleshoe High School. She has acquired the following achievements during her high school years at Muleshoe. Sizing Up Kids' Nutrition And Fitness

From Food Insight

Sound nutrition and fitness habits developed during childhood have the potential to last a lifetime.

To examine how today's youth measure up in terms of diet and activity, the International Food Information Council Foundation and the Life Sciences Institute-North America recently convened a conference, drawing on experts in pediatrics, nutrition, exercise physiology and education.

In recent decades, public health authorities have stressed the need to modify children's diets to reduce their risk of chronic diseases. But several conference speakers labeled the link between children's diets and chronic illnesses "tenuous" and in need for further study.

According to Rudolph Leibel, M.D., associate professor in the Human Behavior and Metabolism Laboratory at New York's Rockefeller University, the traditional measurements of obesity such as body mass index or skinfold thickness are arbitrary. Such measurements may not be indicative of chronic disease risk because they fail to take into account associated medical consequences, such as high blood pressure or elevated blood cholesterol levels.

Rather than focusing on chronic disease prevention, Ronald Kleinman, M.D., chief of the Pediatric Gastroenterology and Nutrition Unit at Massachusetts General Hospital, stressed the need for diets that support children's optimal growth and development.

"Because the data linking the composition of children's chronic illnesses later in life are preliminary and incomplete, the primary focus of childhood nutrition should be to provide diets that optimally promote growth and development," he said.

Kleinman, who is also chairman of the American Academy of Pediatric's (AAP) Committee on Nutrition, pointed out how dietary recommendations have changed over the years as scientific understanding has improved. For example, in the 1940's, infants began eating solid foods at six-to-eight weeks of age, whereas, today solids are usually introduced at six months.

"Recommendations that children's diets should be leaner seem reasonable, but we must keep in mind that undernutrition and hunger are significant and growing problems for American children today, many of whom don't get enough food to sustain proper growth and development," Kleinman said. He added that within the context of a balanced diet, no single food should be considered unhealthy regardless of its fat content.

The AAP statement on cholesterol advises that fat in children's diets can be safely limited to approximately 30 percent of calories from fat can be detrimental to proper growth and development.

The conference also examined current evidence on children's physical fitness in relation to weight management and total health.

Some 20 to 40 percent of American youngsters are physically unfit, according to Russell Pate, Ph.D., chairman of the Exercise Science Department at the University of South Carolina.

Surveys indicate only one-third of high school students are physically active on a regular basis. The majority are not involved in organized sports.

Pate said that physical inactivity has been correlated with other poor health behaviors such as low consumption of fruits and vegetables. Schools could encourage more physical activity by reorganizing the school day and involving athletic role models.

Schools also could improve their efforts in nutrition education said Barbara Shannon, Ph.D., R.D., professor of nutrition at the Pennsylvania State University. Currently, only nine states mandate nutrition be taught in schools; 21 schools include it as a required topic in other subjects such as health.

Shannon predicted that, "If we better prepare educators to teach nutrition, they are likely to be more interested in the topic and devote more time to teaching it."

Ten Free Trees From National Arbor Day Foundation

Ten free trees will be given to each person who joins the national Arbor Day Foundation during January 1993.

The free trees are part of the nonprofit Foundation's Trees for America campaign.

The ten trees are the Sugar Maple, White Flowering Dogwood, Pin Oak, White Pine, Red Maple, Birch, American Redbud, Silver Maple, Red Oak, and Colorado Blue Spruce.

"These trees were selected to provide benefits every season of the year: lovely spring flowers, cool summer shade, spectacular autumn colors, and winter berries and nesting sites for songbirds," John Rosenow, the Foundation's executive director, said.

The trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between February 1 and May 31 with enclosed planting instructions. The six to twelve inch trees are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free of charge.

Members also receive a subscription to the Foundation's "Arbor Day" news magazine, the Tree Book with information about tree planting and care, and a membership card.

To become a member of the foundation and to receive the free trees, send a $10 membership contribution to TEN TREES, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, NE 68410, by January 31, 1993.

In Fashion

As women of the 90s dress more casually, at home and work as well as dress-up occasions, one jewelry designer presents a spring collection to compliment this more relaxed lifestyle.

This collection features mix and match earrings, necklaces, pins and bracelets in silver and turquoise and silver and white. Sea-inspired motifs in summer white set in silver give a cool, casual approach to warm days.

Muscular Distrophy Update

The Muscular Distrophy Association's percentage of income allocated to program services is the highest among the nation's largest voluntary health agencies, according to a report released recently by the Chronicle of Philanthropy. MDA is also recognized as one of the country's best managed nonprofit health organizations in Money magazine's "Best Charities" report published in December and in the Nonprofit Times annual "NPT 100" report.

The Chronicle of Philanthropy's annual listing of "The Philanthropy 400", which ranks agencies on the basis of 1991 private support, includes six national health agencies among the top 50 nonprofit organizations. MDA ranks highest of the six, with 81 percent of income expended on program services.

The others are: National Easter Seal Society, 79.7 percent; March of Dimes, 76.7 percent; American Heart Association, 75.6 percent; American Lung Association, 74.8 percent; and American Cancer Society, 71.8 percent.

MDA National Chairman Jerry Lewis said, "I'm gratified that MDA is so cost-efficient in using the public's generous contributions. The 81 percent of 1991 income MDA devoted to its programs is an achievement even greater than our extraordinary 1990 expenditure of 76.6 percent of income on programs." The "NPT 100" report on America's biggest charities shows MDA as first in percentage of total income received from public support." Some 93 percent of MDA's income is from private voluntary contributions. Unlike other nonprofit health organizations, MDA doesn't seek or accept government grants, fees for services or membership dues.

MDA's programs include an array of clinical, orthopedic and other services provided to adults and children affected by 40 neuromuscular diseases. In addition, MDA is the nation's largest private-sector supporter of research seeking treatments and cures for such diseases.

MDA Senior Vice-President and Executive Director Robert Ross said, "Since its beginnings more than four decades ago, MDA has been firmly committed to devoting as much of its resources as possible to its programs of worldwide research and comprehensive patient services nationwide."

MDA is a national voluntary health agency working to defeat 40 neuromuscular diseases through programs of worldwide research, comprehensive patient and community services, and far reaching professional and public health education. The Association's programs are funded almost entirely by individual private contributors.

The Army Is Still Recruiting

Army recruiters continue to put young men and women in the Army, even as the Army goes through the process of decreasing in size, according to Lt. Col. Brad M. Beasley, commander of Army recruiting in New Mexico and West Texas.

During 1993, Army recruiters expect to enlist 83,000 active soldiers and 44,000 reserve soldiers nationwide. While these numbers are down considerably from the 1980's, there are still many opportunities for young people who want to join the Army.

"Most of today's recruits will serve only one term and then return to civilian life, rather than make it a career," said Beasley. "Keeping the Army strong requires continued recruiting of young soldiers to fill the beginning ranks of the small units that make up the greatest part of the Army's strength."

To maintain high quality, the Army continues to offer young Americans a wide range of benefits, including guaranteed training in one of over 250 skills and the G.I. Bill plus Army college Fund with educational benefits up to $25,200.

Ten Tips For The Tire Buyer

Courtesy: Pat Lazzaro
Bridgestone Tires

At some point, your tires will have to be replaced. Reputable tire dealerships have extensive training programs for their employees so that they understand the features and benefits of the tires they carry. That makes your dealer a pretty knowledgeable person. Just remember that he's not there to baffle you, he's there to help. The only thing you have to do is help him help you.

When you're ready to shop for tires, remember, your dealer is standing by to help you. But first, he'll need to ask you some questions to identify your needs. You'll have the answers ready and waiting if you ask yourself these questions before you go shopping.

1). What is the make, model and year of your car?

This information gives the dealer an idea of what type of tire will perform best and look the best on your car.

2). What is the brand name, model, size, and type of your current tires?

Just look at the side of your tires. If your current tires did not come with the car when it was new, be sure to check all four tires and make sure they are the same. The previous owner may have been less knowledgeable about tires than you.

3). Do you like your current tires?

Do you like the way your current tires make your car feel and sound? Or how they make your car look? What would you like to change? Make a list of the things you like and dislike about your current tires. This will help guide your dealer to the tire that best meets your needs.

4). What do you want from your tires when you are driving?

Do you want a soft, comfortable ride, or do you want a tire that has been built to harness your sports car's capabilities? You may want both, but that is difficult to achieve. A tire that is designed for ride comfort will not handle as crisply as a performance tire, and a performance tire will not ride as comfortable as a tire designed for comfort.

5). What weather conditions do you normally drive in all year round?

Are the roads mostly dry

(summer tires), or are they wet (all season tires)? Do you ever drive in snow? If so, is it deep (snow tires) or just light snow (all season tires)?

6). Where do you do your driving?

Do you drive mostly around town? When you probably don't need to spend extra money for a speed-rated tire (unless your car came fitted with them). Do you drive frequently on gravel? then there are certain tread designs you should avoid. The answer to this question can point your tire dealer to the most appropriate and cost-effective tire for your needs.

7). At what speeds do you normally drive?

If you travel at higher speeds, or own a sports car, you may need a speed-rated tire. However, if you always drive at moderate speeds, you probably do not need to go to the expense of buying a speed rated tire. On the other hand, if your car came from the factory with speed-rated tires, it may be in your best interest to replace them with the same speed-rating. This will give your car the same handling characteristics that you're accustomed to.

8). How do you want your car to look?

There are several "cosmetic" options for tires. Blackwall tires look good on modern and more performance-oriented cars. Whitewalls look good on many cars. Raised white letters and outline white letters are two more options. The profile of a tire is also a cosmetic consideration.

9). What kind of warranties do you want, or are available?

Many manufacturers offer limited warranties which cover you from faulty workmanship and product defects. Many tire dealers also offer "road hazard warranties" for a small additional cost. This warranty covers your tire if a foreign object cuts or punctures it.

10). How much do you want to spend?

Once you know the answers to the first nine questions, you're ready to consider price. Your dealer will be able to show various price options for tires that meet your driving needs. You should also shop around. Prices on the same tire can vary from store to store.

Be sure you know what you're getting for the price. It should include the price of the tire, tax, mounting, and balancing. Most warehouse clubs do not offer the services of a dealer. You may have to go elsewhere to have your tires properly mounted and checked. At the very least, you will probably have to pay extra for these services.

Organize A Home Filing System

Courtesy: Joy Best
NM Extension Home Economist

An organized filing system is essential to good record keeping. Haven't we all experienced the frustration of not being able to find some important paper?

Stuffing papers in the kitchen drawer or hall closet can be classified as record keeping, but obviously it is not the best system. The amount of time spent developing an orderly system of keeping your personal and financial records will be well spent and need not be difficult. Consider it a creative task.

* There are many benefits to an organized filing system.

* Other family members can find documents.

* Records are available for income tax preparation.

* It saves time and money in processing insurance claims.

* Records may be needed in legal matters such as divorces, law suits, estate settlements, or tax audits.

* Records may be needed on short notice in case of an accident, illness, or other emergency.

* Systematic record keeping aids in financial planning for matters such as preparation of wills, net worth statements, investments and retirement plans.

Some suggested categories and headings for filing systems are listed below. It is not intended to be a complete list. You may not want a separate file folder for all items listed. This list is intended as a guideline that you can adapt to your needs. You may wish to consolidate some of the suggested items, use different headings or groupings, and include other items.

For example, you may want to file insurance papers under separate headings of "auto" or "health".

HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN - The buck stops in the oval office, but policy on the buck will begin with the tall silver-haired U.S. Senator from Texas, Lloyd Bentsen.

Capitol eyes turned to Little Rock last week to watch President-elect Bill Clinton name Bentsen as his U.S. Secretary of the Treasury.

Speculation continued that Clinton would select another Texan, former San Antonio mayor Henry Cisneros, to head the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Meanwhile, in Austin Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock told the incoming class of state lawmakers he planned to get a budget bill passed early in next month's regular legislative session.

No New Taxes

Bullock advised the freshmen legislators he plans to balance the state budget without new taxes: "There will be no tax bill for you to vote on," he said. "And no tax bill for you to run your campaign against."

"I'm not going to even give you a shot at my income tax," Bullock told the bi-partisan group.

Since tax bills originate in the House, Bullock's remarks were a warning to House members not to draft one, and not to get greedy with pork barrel budget items.

Who's Got Momentum?

For the moment, it's uncertain which political party enjoys an edge, or has momentum.

Although Clinton took the White House, he didn't carry Texas and Republicans made gains in the Legislature and local offices.

At this uncertain and critical time, Bullock wants a session free grandchildren. In order for our graduates to have the opportunity to live and work in Muleshoe, jobs must be available for them.

New job opportunities will add value to the property tax base, which will reduce the need for property tax increases in the long run. The new jobs will include new payroll dollars to be spent with the local retailers.

This will increase their opportunities to expand their business, while at the same time rating additional sales tax which can be used to improve the overall level of service and quality of life in Muleshoe.

According to Messenger, if Muleshoe does not have dollars dedicated to economic development, other cities that have this tax are going to get the jobs.

of turnovers; no more fumbles like the recent special session which produced zilch.

First Exam: School Finance

If Texas Democrats can avoid handing over the issues, they can use the White House on down to leverage their programs, and get voters seeing things their way.

The slipperiest issue is school finance reform, and it awaits the Democratic leadership next month.

They have failed four times; now, with a state district judge threatening to close all schools if they fail again, the stakes are enormously high.

Thumbs Up, Thumbs Down

Voters will tilt the scales for Democrats or Republicans in a special election for Bentsen's Senate seat after he resigns next month.

A coup in this election will set the stage for political party dominance in Texas for the remainder of the decade and into the next century.

For the Republicans, it's a rare opportunity to hold both U.S. Senate slots.

For Democrats, it's a calculated risk, handing the GOP a shot at a vacated seat they could never win from Bentsen.

Although the connection between Bentsen's seat and school finance seems far drawn, both will surface at about the same time before the public eye, where perception is all important.

Bentsen's Successor

The scenario calls for Bentsen to resign after being sworn in as treasury secretary within the next few weeks.

Gov. Ann Richards then must call a special election (no primary) to elect someone to serve out the unexpired term; she also will name an interim senator to serve until the election is concluded.

The governor said she plans to appoint a Democrat who can make a strong campaign to retain the seat. Historically, these short-period elections attract numerous candidates from both parties.

Ethics Panel Proposal

The Texas Ethics Commission last week unveiled a proposal that would limit the amount individuals may contribute to any one political candidate.

The commission is expected to vote on the proposal next month, and any recommendations would have to be approved by the Texas Legislature before they take effect.

The proposal would limit annual campaign contributions from individuals to $5,000 for candidates for statewide office; $3,000 for candidates for Texas Senate or appellate courts; $1,000 for candidates who are running for district or county courts or justice of the peace.

In Texas, there is no cap on the amount individuals may contribute to political campaigns. The commission's staff noted that 28 states have adopted restrictions on contributions from individuals.

Bonner to Summit

Cathy Bonner, executive director of the Texas Department of Commerce, has been invited to a two-day summit organized to advise President-elect Bill Clinton on economic matters.

More than 100 business leaders, economists and government of-officials are expected to attend the Dec. 14-15 meeting in Little Rock.

Participants in the televised conference will discuss long-term and short-term remedies for the ailing U.S. economy.

Other Highlights

■ Driven by low interest rates, Texas banks showed a healthy third quarter profit, according to banking regulators: $469 million in profits, up 67 percent from the '91 third quarter, fourth behind California, New York and Pennsylvania.

■ Land Commission Garry Mauro has mailed letters to about 600 Gulf Coast oil facilities notifying them his office will step up inspections of their oil spill contingency plans.

■ Texas and Louisiana officials last week discussed a bullet train link between Houston and New Orleans, part of a larger concept to link cities in the South by high-speed rail.

Money Talk

By Charles Carlson
Dow Theory Forecasts

There aren't many free lunches in the financial markets, so beware when something sounds like a "can't miss" investment.

There are investments being sold that guarantee that investors can't lose money over a 10-year period. Well, the fact is that you can lose plenty in the form of lost interest earned and other opportunity costs.

The "guaranteed" investment approach does provide an interesting investment opportunity for more speculative investors. For example, let's say you have $100,000 to invest, and you want to be on the aggressive side. You can guarantee yourself $100,000 at the end of around 10 years by taking half of the money and investing it in a 10-year zero coupon bond yielding 7%. After ten years, that $50,000 would have grown to $100,000. With the other $50,000, you may try buying stock options and other aggressive investments.

Even if you lose all $50,000, you will still have $100,000 at the end of 10 years.

January, one of two months added to the calendar (then ten months) before the birth of Christ, is the first month of the year of the Gregorian Calendar. This calendar dates from Pope Gregory XIII in 1582.

January is the first full month of winter, often the coldest month of the year (if February isn't). In America it's the month of football bowl games.

The 1st is New Year's Day and also Emancipation Day-- dating from 1863. (Lincoln didn't free slaves in Union states on that day, only theoretically in Confederate states, where his proclamation often had little effect.)

Washington won an important victory at Princeton, N.J., on the 3rd in 1777.

The first boat traversed the Panama Canal on the 7th in 1914.

Millard Filmore, born at Locke, New York, on the 7th in 1798, became the thirteenth president of the United States. The 8th is Jackson Day in Louisiana--in remembrance of the 1812 battle when Andrew Jackson defeat-

No Mexican Screwworm Cases Reported Since Sept. 30

It's been two months since the last screwworm case was found in Mexico, and eradication program officials have their fingers crossed that the deadly pest has been wiped out once again.

No other screwworm cases can be found for another four months, however, before the country can be declared free of the insects.

The last case in Mexico was reported in the state of Tamaulipas, more than 100 miles south of Brownsville, on Sept. 30, said Tom Galvin, an associate regional director for screwworm eradication with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (USDA-APHIS) in Mexico City.

In the southeastern part of the country, in such states as Chiapas, Tabasco, and Vera Cruz, no cases have been reported for more than two months, he said.

"We've gone eight weeks (in Tamaulipas) without a case," said Dr. Cliff Hoelscher of College Station, entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "Things are looking favorable." The screwworm case found closest to Texas was reported near Sota la Marina in Tamaulipas, 121 miles south of Brownsville.

Sixty-one screwworm cases have been reported in Mexico since the first ones were detected on Jan. 17, 1992. The outbreak, believed caused by the importation of screwworm infested cattle from countries south of Mexico, ended the country's 11 years of screwworm-free status.

More than 60 million sterile flies per week are being dropped from airplanes in the parts of Mexico where the screwworms were found. The sterile flies disrupt the reproduction cycle of the insect, leading to a gradual die-out.

"Program officials are still concerned there may be some lingering infestations in wildlife," Hoelscher said.

The screwworm and its flesh-eating larvae have plagued the livestock industry for generations, accounting for $250 million in annual losses in the United States during the 1950's and 1960's.

Texas has not had an active screwworm case since August 1982.

Screwworm officials are returning their attention to other Central American countries, where "We're making very good progress," Galvin said. The goal of the program is to eradicate the insect north of the Isthmus of Panama in the next several years.

Belize has not had an active case since October 1991, but a final declaration that the pest has been eradicated will have to wait until its neighbor, Guatemala, is declared screwworm-free. The latter country is making much progress, with only one case being reported (not imported from another country) since May 10, 1992, Galvin said.

In El Salvador, inspection activities are going well with the number of cases going from a high 280 each week to 18 and 19 per week recently, he said. Sterile fly drops continue there as well.

Western Honduras has had only one case reported in the last four weeks, but just to the south, Nicaragua, is still reporting about 400 cases a week. The eradication effort there is still in its infancy and few roads exist, Galvin said, so inspection teams must travel on donkeys and motorcycles.

Cold weather arrests the development of the adult screwworm, but all livestock owners in the United States still are urged to inspect animals carefully for the presence of blow fly larvae and to send samples for positive identification, Hoelscher said. A total of 431 blow fly samples have been sent to the USDA-APHIS laboratory in Mission this year, he said, adding that all have tested negative for screwworms.

Texas ranchers are urged to treat all wounded animals, he said.

Mailing kits for sending in samples of suspected larvae for laboratory identification are available from most county Extension Service agents. All samples should be sent to the USDA-APHIS Veterinary Services Screwworm Identification Lab, Box 969, Mission, Tx. 78572, telephone (512) 580-7360.

Best Home Investment Is Foundation Care

One of the best investments a homeowner can make is to buy a water hose and spend a little time using it around the home.

"Most home shoppers are usually impressed by the artistic and functional features of a house, but it's what's underneath--the foundation--that is far more important," said Dr. Susan Quiring, housing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "If the foundation doesn't receive proper moisture, it can crack, causing the value of the house to drop drastically."

"A house with a cracked foundation decreases in value to about two-thirds--sometimes overnight," said Charles J. Godwin, architect, structural engineer and senior lecturer in the construction science department at Texas A&M University. "It's like a big broken cookie, and the pieces have little resistance to external forces. Once a foundation cracks, it's virtually impossible to recover its integrity to resist further movement in the bearing soil."

"While the foundation itself may have considered structural integrity, if it bears on expansive soil, which is prevalent in Texas, it can easily fail if simple maintenance and preventative measures are not exercised," he said. "These measures basically consist of keeping the moisture content of the soil constant under the footprint of the house year round, which is usually not a problem during the rainy seasons."

According to Godwin, a number of state-of-the-art automatic irrigation and sub-surface moisture stabilization systems are on the market.

However, "most homeowners can easily perform needed watering by monitoring the site, looking for identifiable signs such as grass and plantings with poor color or growth and soil shrinkage around the building," he said. "These warnings indicate the need for watering areas adjacent to the foundation--including porches, patios, driveways and even walks."

The high incidence of foundation problems found in Texas homes has consumers looking for as many ways as possible to combat these difficulties. The Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the College of Architecture at Texas A&M University have produced three publications with basic information on foundations to assist homeowners, potential homebuyers and homebuilders.

Maintenance of Existing Foundations on Expansive Clay Soils-- includes information on foundation construction on clay soils, with watering, landscaping and drainage tips for newly constructed or older homes.

What Prospective Custom Homebuyers Should Know About foundations--discusses foundation problems that may arise in areas that have expanding clay soils and offers tips for avoiding pitfalls with sites, builders and maintenance.

Homebuilder Recommendations for Slab-on-Grade Foundations--outlines technical details involved with slab-on-grade foundation systems; provides information on site work, concrete curing and alternate foundation systems.

"These articles warn the homeowner, buyer and potential builder to upgrade the design, construction and maintenance of foundations so that they will have a better chance of avoiding frequently experienced problems," Godwin said.

"Some Texas areas are free of foundation problems," Quiring said. "Unfortunately, much of the state has clay soil which expands with enormous pressure due to moisture penetration and shrinks when it dries out. This causes portions of foundations to rise or settle resulting in cracking, buckling in the middle or even moving laterally."

Distress cracks in brick veneer exteriors and gypsum board interior wall surfaces are usually the first indicators that foundation movement is occurring, Quiring said. Signs inside the house include cracked floors, walls and ceilings, doors and windows jamming and many other problems.

As indicated in the publications, clay soil is not the only culprit of foundation problems. Newer methods of construction also contribute to the woes of homeowners.

"Difficulties with residential foundations have plagued Texans for years, but problems associated with foundation movements have intensified since the introduction of the slab-on-grade foundation in the 1940's," Godwin said.

Today most builders in the state have accepted this foundation, designed to support heavy brick exterior walls and resist movement, he said. However, some slab-on-grade foundations are built to minimal standards only, regardless of the size or cost of the house.

In areas with expansive clay soil, this can result in problems for the homeowner long after the builder has finished and warranties, if any, have expired.

"Meeting the minimum building codes is not enough," Godwin said. "If we do nothing else, we need to upgrade the codes to require better preparation of the site and make the foundation, itself, sufficiently stiff with good construction to better resist inherent soil movements."

The foundation publications can be ordered through the local Extension county office. The cost of the publications range from $1 to $2 each.

Somalia & U.S.

The United States acted from humanitarian motives in going to the aid of starving Somalis. Intervention there is so far a huge success story, a heart-warming one.

The comic part of the gratifying story is that played by the media, which dramatized the "landing" of U.S. troops as if they were returning to the Philippines, or assaulting Normandy shores under General Eisenhower!

The larger question is when U.S. forces will be able to leave that country and whether we should repeat this humanitarian effort in other countries in Africa and Asia. And--should we have placed equal priority on helping the Russian people and those suffering tragically in the Balkans?

One suspects President Clinton will find it difficult to pull U.S. forces out of Somalia any time soon. We are still in western Europe--forty eight years after World War II ended.

Texas Unemployment Takes An Unexpected Jump

"The supply of jobs in Texas cannot keep up with the demand, and that imbalance has pushed the state's unemployment rate even higher at a time when we had hoped unemployment would go down," Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers said today as the state's jobless statistics were released by the Texas Employment Commission. November's unemployment rate was 7.7 percent, up 0.9 percent from last month's 6.8 percent rate as well as from November 1991's rate of 6.8 percent.

Texas has 167,600 more people trying to find work this year compared to November 1991. "It appears that based on reports of an economic recovery, more Texans and others who have migrated to the state have entered the job market. That has driven the rate up again," Nabers said. "The problem is that as more new workers entered the work force in November, Texas employers were not yet ready to hire. Employers approached the holiday season with very cautious optimism, and that may have contributed to an unexpected increase in unemployment."

"Employers were obviously waiting to see what the mood of the buying public was going to be before increasing their work forces," she said. "Employers have had some disappointment in the last few years, and this year they may have wanted to watch sales more closely before committing to extra payroll expenses."

The number of jobless Texans increased by 77,600 in November. "Having that many unemployed people in our labor force in November brought the state's total unemployment up to 670,700. That is a 13 percent increase from the previous month, which is not good," Nabers said. "This is not the scenario we wanted for this time of year, but I predict that favorable December numbers will more than make up for the decrease."

"Wholesale and retail trade experienced a 0.9 percent increase, which was actually better than last year at this time. But, we saw only moderate growth in other sectors," Nabers said.

Construction was the only industry that lost jobs from October to November with a slight increase of 700 jobs.

Each of the 27 Metropolitan Statistical Areas (MSAs) followed the statewide trend with October to November increases ranging from the highest increase of 1.7 percent in Beaumont-Port Arthur, to the lowest increase of 0.6 percent in Abilene, Bryan College Station, Lubbock and San Antonio.

MSAs with the highest unemployment rates in November included McAllen-Edinburg-Mission at 17 percent, Brownsville - Harlingen at 12.4 percent, El Paso at 11 percent and Odessa at 10.3 percent.

Lowest unemployment rates were recorded in Bryan-College Station, with a 4 percent rate; Austin, with a 5.2 percent rate; Amarillo, with a 5.7 percent rate; and San Angelo, with a 6.1 percent rate.

Unemployment in Dallas rose by 0.8 percent to 7.1 percent in November. The number of jobless individuals in Dallas jumped to 102,900 compared to October's total of 91,500. Job growth was moderate with a few gains in retail trade, and the transportation, communications and utility industries. Overall 4,100 jobs were created in the city from October to November.

The Houston MSA's 7.6 percent rate was just slightly lower than the state's 7.7 percent rate, but was significantly higher than last month's 6.7 percent rate. The total number of unemployment was recorded at 135,500 individuals, 15,500 more than in October. Shifts in job growth and job loss were moderate.

San Antonio's unemployment rate for November was 6.6 percent, a good deal less than the national average of 7.7 percent, and 0.6 percent higher than last month's San Antonio rate of 6.0 percent. Retail trade accounted for a large portion of the city's good fortune with 2,300 new jobs over October. A sizeable gain was also recorded in the government sector with 1400 new jobs.

Austin maintained its strong placement among the largest Texas cities with a low unemployment rate of 5.2 percent. However, the figure is higher than Austin's October rate of 4.5 percent. Nearly 1,700 jobs were created in Austin since October, most of which were centered in the retail trade and service sectors.

Health Tips By: Family Medicine Clinic

Millions of Americans need to lower the amount of fat in their bloodstreams to reduce their risk for cardiovascular disease.

Most people who suffer from high cholesterol or triglyceride levels or other lipid disorders respond to standard diet, exercise and medication therapies. Some, however, require treatment more specialized than most physicians are trained to provide.

A training center in the DeBakey Heart Center of Baylor College of Medicine and The Methodist Hospital in Houston is teaching these physicians to provide this specialized care in their communities.

The Heart Center is the site of one six American Heart Association/ Bristol-Myers Squibb Lipid Disorders Training Centers established in 1990. More than 300 health care professionals attended the center's 1991 and 1992 training sessions, and another 150 can be accommodated for the four courses scheduled in 1993.

Currently, patients needing specialized care for problems with high levels of blood fats who do not respond to conventional treatments are referred to regional lipid clinics.

"The capacity of these clinics is being taxed," said Dr. Peter Jones, Baylor assistant professor of medicine. "So, we can fill a great need by training doctors to provide this care in their own communities."

Jones directs the Heart Center's training program for physicians in Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida.

LOUISA'S LETTER

I have a younger sister who I have sent to school and taken care of since my parents died.

Since she graduated she has married. She and her husband asked me to loan them enough money to start building a home but I refused as this is money I have saved for my old age.

They resented my refusal very much and I haven't heard from them since. Do you think I should have loaned them the money?

LE-Ariz.

Answer:

We can spoil people by giving too much and not seeing that they accept their responsibilities.

It is very selfish of your sister to ask for your savings-in fact she should be trying to repay you for all of the effort and money that you have spent on her during these past years.

-Louisa.

Restrictions On Legal Sale Of Alcoholic Beverages

Sec. 109.33. Sales Near School, Church, or Hospital. (a) The commissioners court of a county may enact regulations applicable in areas in the county outside an incorporated city or town, and the governing board of an incorporated city or town may enact regulations applicable in the city or town, prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages by a dealer whose place of business is within 300 feet of a church, public school, or public hospital.

(b) The measurement of the distance between the place of business where alcoholic beverages are sold and the church or public hospital shall be along the property lines of the street fronts and from front door to front door, and in direct line across intersections. The measurement of the distance between the place of business where alcoholic beverages are sold and the public school shall be from the nearest property line of the public school to the nearest doorway by which the public may enter the place of business, along street lines and in direct line across intersections. For any permit or license covering a premise where minors are prohibited from entering the premises under Section 109.53, the measurement of the distance between the premises and a public school shall be along the property lines of the street fronts and from front door to front door, and in a direct line across intersections.

(c) Every applicant for an original alcoholic beverage license or permit for a location with a door by which the public may enter the place of business of the applicant that is within 1,000 feet of the nearest property line of a public school, measured along street lines and directly across intersections, must give written notice of the application to officials of the public school before filing the application with the commission. A copy of the notice must be submitted to the commission with the application. This Subsection (c) does not apply to a permit or license covering a premise where minors are prohibited from entering the premises under Section 109.53.

(d) As to any dealer who held a license or permit on September 1, 1983, in a location where a regulation under this section was in effect on that date, for purposes of Subsection (a), but not Subsection (c), of this section, the measurement of the distance between the place of business of the dealer and a public school shall be along the property lines of the street fronts and from front door to front door, and in direct line across intersections. This subsection applies only as long as the place of business is continuously in operation from that date, whether or not under the same license or permit.

(e) The commissioners court of a county or the governing board of a city or town that has enacted a regulation under Subsection (a) of this section may also allow variances to the regulation if the commissioners court or governing body determines that enforcement of the regulation in a particular instance is not in the best interest of the public, constitutes waste or inefficient use of land or other resources, creates an undue hardship on an applicant for a license or permit, does not serve its intended purpose, is not effective or necessary, or for any other reason the court or governing board, after consideration of the health, safety, and welfare of the public and the equities of the situation, determines is in the best interest of the community. (See Exhibits 5, 6, 7 and 8)
