Hijackers force plane from Bangkok to Iran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Arabic-speaking hijackers today commandeered a Kuwaiti Airways jumbo jet with 111 people aboard, forced it to land in Iran and threatened to blow it up.

Kuwait Airways, Kuwait's only flag carrier, said Flight 422 from the Thai capital was carrying 96 passengers and 15 crew members.

The Foreign Office in London said the travelers included 22 Britons.

Airport sources in Bangkok said other passengers included at least one Japanese and about eight Thais.

There were no reports of any Americans aboard.

IRNA, also monitored in Nicosia, had reported that the flight originated in Kuwait.

But Kuwait Airways offices in Kuwait and Bangkok said the plane took off from Bangkok.

IRNA said the aircraft landed in Mashhad at 6:30 a.m. (11 p.m. CDT) and completed refueling three hours later.

IRNA said that while demanding fuel, the hijackers threatened to blow up the aircraft if "any person should attempt to approach it."

Diplomatic relations between Iran and Kuwait have been strained since August.

Moayeri, to Mashhad to "look into the hijack situation," said the broadcast, monitored in Nicosia.

County commissioners swing golf course proposal to city

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

What could be the final drive for a public golf course in Pampa was lofted high by Gray County Commissioners this morning.

Now it's up to County Attorney Bob McPherson and Pampa city commissioners to sink what course proponents hope will be the winning putt.

County commissioners voted 4-1 in favor of donating equipment, manpower and $300,000 to the project, subject to McPherson's approval of a contract with the city.

County Judge Carl Kennedy said he hopes McPherson will have a chance to review the contract today, in time for the City Commission's 6 p.m. meeting.

Commissioner Jim Greene voted against the agreement, fearing it may land the county in a legal sandtrap, a prospect promised by at least one opponent of using tax money for the course.

Under the contract, the city would be responsible for providing water for the course and would help with landscaping.

Members of the Pampa Public Golf Association would donate time and labor to the course, which is to be located north of Pampa along Texas Highway 70.

PPGA President Buddy Epperson said this morning that he expects to be able to raise more money toward the project after construction is under way.

"Once ground is broken, then a lot of people are going to get serious about making contributions to it," Epperson told commissioners.

Commissioners made several minor changes in the contract approved by the city two weeks ago.

right now," Milner said. He added that Price had accepted campaign contributions from Southwestern Public Service Company when he had run for office previously.

Price offered to give a copy of Milner's campaign contribution reports to The Pampa News Monday and, when asked, said he would try to see if his accountant could come up with copies of reports of his own campaign contributions. The Pampa News had received no reports by press time Tuesday.

Milner said he did not believe Price's accusations would have any effect on his campaign. "It might help it some," he commented.

Price said he was continuing with his campaign by preparing an advertising blitz, going to speaking engagements, placing yard signs and handing out brochures as April 12 nears, in addition to having volunteers telephone registered voters asking for votes.

Telecom and Scopes Southwestern Public Service of Kansas City, Mo.

The information came from Milner's report of campaign contributions required by the Federal Election Commission. Political candidates must report all contributions in excess of $1,000. These contributions are included in a monthly report of receipts and disbursements.

"It is not illegal for him to accept these contributions," Price said, "but ethically it is not very wise to accept this money."

Price said he first confronted Milner with the utility companies' contributions during a television interview Monday afternoon. He followed that with a press conference at his Amarillo headquarters at 2 p.m. Monday.

Milner pointed out that Price has accepted a $1,000 contribution from Mesa PAC on March 25, two days after deadline for filing the most recent contribution report.

Milner should return utilities' PAC contributions, Price says

By DEE DEE LARAMORE

Special interest money contributed to the campaign of congressional hopeful Larry Milner has created a conflict of interest, according to his opponent Bob Price in an announcement Monday.

Milner and Price are facing a runoff election April 12 which will determine the Republican candidate for the 13th Congressional District's U.S. representative.

Price said Milner should return contributions made to him by political committees from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico utility companies.

"Accepting this money would obviously create a conflict of interest if a public utility bill were to be brought before the House of Representatives," Price said in a prepared news release called in to The Pampa News' office Monday afternoon.

Milner, however, says he was "proud" to accept contributions from these organizations, terming them as "a recommendation from former employers." Milner was employed with Southwestern Public Service Company for 19 years, where he served as vice president of public affairs.

"PACs (political action committees) are made up of employees," Milner said. "I think they are more democratic than some rich person giving $1,000 to a campaign."

Public utility companies reported by Price to have given Milner campaign contributions include Public Service of New Mexico, Central Southwest Public Service in Dallas, Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company, United

Bivins isn't waiting for opponent's runoff to campaign

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

Teel Bivins, Republican candidate for Texas Senate, plans to implement major changes in the state's constitution if he is elected.

Bivins says he'll sponsor a constitutional amendment banning the state income tax. He proposes that the constitution include a guarantee of a person's right to work. And he says he would like to reinstate a freepoint exemption.

Should the state lose its appeal in Edgewood vs. Kirby, Bivins says he will support a constitutional amendment allowing local school districts control of their finances.

Although the Texas constitution now has more than 500 amendments added to the original document, Bivins says he is not afraid to continue to change it.

"They were drafting a new constitution back in 1974 or '75 when I was just getting out of law school.

It was to be a more general document. I remember the voters rejected it resoundingly," Bivins said, adding that he believed a fear of the unknown contributed to the voters' strong rejection of the new constitution.

"They were playing with the foundation on which the government exists, and that can create massive uncertainty," he said.

"In many ways our constitution is far from perfect, but I'm close enough to that election to see that the voters are not ready for a new one."

"We'll just have to deal with the document we have, imperfect as it may be," he said.

After receiving 70 percent of the votes in the March 8 elections, Bivins is pounding the pavement and pressing palms throughout the 31st District as he rides the peak to November. He says he plans to visit all 29 counties in the district before the runoff elections April 12. He's reached 16 so far.

As he reaches out to voters of this district, Bivins' message remains the same, he says. "Things aren't going to change regardless of who the winner of the Democratic runoff is," he said.

In the November elections, Bivins will face the winner of the Democratic runoff, either Mel Phillips of Amarillo or Bryan Poff of Canyon.

Bivins proposes that state spending be decreased to within the amount of the state's revenues, principally by consolidating state agencies. To put power behind the proposal, Bivins agrees with several other conservative Republicans in initiating an across-the-board cut of state employees if the state overspends.

As mentioned previously, Bivins plans to propose a constitutional ban against a state income tax, a point he plans to make to the Governor's Select Committee on Tax Equity hearing in Amarillo next week.

"We are one of four states that doesn't have a corporate or state income tax. And that sells," he said. "We can talk about economic development, but we have to have a climate that is favorable to businesses."

"I believe that the role of government is to create a more favorable business climate in Texas than anywhere else, and then let free enterprise take care of the rest of it."

An employee's right to work guaranteed by the constitution is another way Texas can make this state attractive to outside businesses, said Bivins, a proclaimed conservative and advocate of the businessman. And he believes re-instituting the freepoint exemption would also help.

"I believe the Texas Supreme Court is one of the biggest deterrents to business growth, specifically contributions given to the justices," he said.

Bivins suggests that contributions be limited, and he is looking at the idea of limiting districts to one judge per district. However, he does not believe supreme court judges should be appointed.

"I believe in accountability," he said.

One of the reasons Bivins decided to run for office stemmed action to avoid a lawsuit.

Greene said he spoke with Mark Brown of the Texas Legislative Council's city and county division, and was told that the county giving money to what would be a city-owned course may be unconstitutional.

"I think we need to get an attorney general's opinion or something before we get started," Greene said. "I'd hate to see us in a lawsuit."

Commissioner Ted Simmons said he, too, fears a lawsuit or an injunction, but Simmons voted for the course anyway.

"How serious they are, I don't know," Simmons said. "We may be facing an injunction."

"We may all be rode out of office next week, but that's part of the job."

Ray Velasquez, 216 W. Craven Ave., a long-time opponent of county participation in the course, said legal attempts to halt construction will be forthcoming.

"This contract as it's drawn up now — unless it's changed drastically — will be challenged legally," Velasquez told commissioners. "You're again rushing to sign an agreement, and you don't even know what you'll be building."

Velasquez also ridiculed Epperson's pledge of more private donations once construction begins.

"If you look at it from a business standpoint," he said, "... you cannot go to the bank with a promise."

Schools to seek at-risk grant

In the hopes of erasing a 33 percent dropout rate at Pampa High School, school trustees voted Monday to seek $35,000 in grant money from the criminal justice division of the governor's office.

The vote came during a special noon meeting of the school board.

Money obtained from the grant would be used to help fund Project SOAR (Save Our At-Risk Students), a computer program specially designed to help students at risk of dropping out of school. The program includes drug and alcohol education and will focus mainly on remedial math and reading programs.

The grant money would pay for one teacher in the computer lab and half of the salary of a counselor hired specifically to work with at-risk students.

At-risk coordinator Sally Griffith said the governor's criminal justice division has funds available because it is concerned about dropout rates in Texas.

"School dropouts are the predominant people in Texas state prisons," making up about 92 percent of the state's prison population, Griffith said.

The district already has received state grant money to buy computer equipment and software for Project SOAR, which Griffith expects to serve about 60 at-risk high school students next year.

School Superintendent Harry Griffith said the grant would be for a five-year period, and would be phased out at the rate of 20 percent per year, to be replaced by local funding if the program continues.

"We can see each year how it's going," he told trustees.

Mrs. Griffith said she also is looking into applying for part of the $24 million in federal grant money earmarked for dropout prevention.

from his feelings that the 31st district has been treated as "an orphan child" by the state government.

He said a recent report from the State Comptroller Bob Bullock's office showed "our district didn't get its fair share. Ours was the only district to spend more in taxes than we received from Austin."

But Bivins' cure for such inequity is not to bring back more money in state services, but to send less money to Austin.

"That can be done," he said. "It may mean that the working conditions won't be so cushy for those state folks, but then working conditions aren't very cushy here, either."

These are among the issues that Bivins sees as important to the people of the 31st district.

"This is my best reading of what people up here are concerned about, and I agree with them," he said. "There's more political interest in the Panhan-

Most defense contractors slow on supporting Vietnam memorial

DALLAS (AP) — Most major defense contractors have declined to donate money to build a memorial for Texans who died in Vietnam and other wars, organizers of the fund raising drive say. The largest corporate donation from a major defense contractor has been $50,000 from General Dynamics, which has a military aircraft manufacturing facility in Fort Worth, Paul Russell, president of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund of Texas and of Milton B. Levy & Son Mechanical Contractors, said.

"That's been very disappointing for us," Russell said Monday of the lack of response by other defense contractors.

The veterans are about $300,000 short of the approximately $1 million in cash and pledges they say they need before construction on the $1.65 million memorial can begin.

The donations must come within the next few months if the memorial is to be finished in time for a planned dedication on Nov. 11, Veterans Day, Russell said.

In addition to what the veterans believe to be a lack of support from defense contractors, Russell said, Texas' economic downturn has taken a toll on recent donations, requiring fund-raisers to cut their operating budget 75 percent.

The response from Texas defense contractors has been particularly ranking to the veterans group, he said.

"It's been a real kick in the teeth to us. We're trying to show there ought to be some responsible action on the part of defense companies," said B.G. Burkett, treasurer of the memorial fund and a senior vice president of the Dallas brokerage and investment banking firm of Schneider Bernert Hickman.

The veterans are especially critical of Bell Helicopter in Fort Worth, a unit of Rhode Island-based Textron, which manufactured most of the helicopters used in Vietnam.

"Particularly disappointing is the total rejection from Bell Helicopter," Art Ruff, president of Dallas-based Vantage Development Co. and a member of the fund's board of directors, said.

"Their (Bell's) Huey chopper is the most enduring symbol of the war, yet they've failed to donate to our fund."

Ruff said he got a rejection letter from the Textron Charitable Trust in Rhode Island.

Bell spokesman Carl Harris said Textron decided several years ago to contribute funds to the national memorial in Washington, D.C., rather than giving to state memorials.

Textron executive Raymond Caine, chairman of a committee that approves corporate donations, said the committee gave $1,500 to the national memorial in 1982.

Retired Army Maj. Gen. Alexander Bolling, 64, who commanded the 82nd Airborne Division in Vietnam, said his appeals to area defense companies were unsuccessful.

Besides Bell, Rockwell International, Varo and Texas Instruments declined to contribute, Bolling said.

Houston-based Brown & Root, a primary contractor for the port at Cam Ranh Bay, also declined, Bolling said.

Rockwell is directing its donations toward educational and medical research efforts, said Ed Casteel, the company's director of government relations.

TI's charitable foundation decided not to fund the project for similar reasons, said spokesman Stan Victor.

The veterans group asked for $25,000 from LTV Corp., a major aerospace and defense contractor. The fund received $1,000.

Another large Dallas defense contractor, E-Systems, which among other products made the

'It's been a real kick in the teeth to us.'

PRC-25 radios used in Vietnam, donated $3,000, Bolling said.

The fund also received $5,000 from Electrospace Systems in Dallas, he said. Electrospace Systems is now a Chrysler Corp. subsidiary.

Garland-based Varo, a manufacturer of night vision equipment and missile launcher systems, among other products, does not disclose its contributions to charities, said Kevin McAleer, Varo senior vice president.

Brown & Root, a subsidiary of Dallas-based Halliburton Co., had no record of a formal request from the veterans, said spokesman Joe Stevens.

The planned memorial will measure 12,000 square feet and feature four stone tablets inscribed with the names of Texans who died or disappeared in Vietnam.

It will be surrounded by a water park reminiscent of a Vietnamese rice paddy.

City looking for more potholes

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

The Street Department is continuing to repair the damage resulting from the recent winter storms.

It would be helpful if you could take a moment and call the Street Department at 665-1689 and report potholes. While we have most of them identified, we may have overlooked some and it would be helpful to receive a call from you.

Even if we have several calls on the same pothole, it is still better than having us miss one. Crews will respond as soon as possible to repair the damage.

We are continuing the renovation of the Waste Water Treatment Plant. We anticipate the project to be completed by the end of the summer.

The improvements at the plant include improved hydraulic flow, an increase in the number of sludge drying beds and improvements to the aeration system. Some structural repairs and increases in the chlorine contact basin have been done as well.

All of these improvements will enhance the operation and improve the quality of the effluent at our plant.

We will soon have a number of openings on various advisory boards for the city.

Among the boards that will have openings include the Zoning Board of Adjustments, M.K. Brown Memorial Auditorium Board, the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board, and the Planning and Zoning Commission.

If you are interested in serving on one of these boards, please send a letter addressed to the mayor and commission indicating your interest in serving, and mail to: Mayor and Commission, Attn: Bob Hart, P.O. Box 2499, Pampa, Texas 79066-2499. I will forward your letter of interest to the mayor and commission as soon as possible.

Your letter of interest should be submitted by April 20.

And finally, absentee voting will begin soon for the upcoming City Commission elections. Absentee voting this year will begin Monday, April 18, and end Tuesday, May 3.

One major change in the Election Code this year concerning absentee voting is that you do not have to have any particular reason to vote absentee. Consequently, anyone who wishes to vote absentee is eligible to do so.

Absentee voting will be conducted on the third floor of City Hall in the city secretary's office.

Mobeetie play advances to area

MOBEETIE — Mobeetie High School will present its one-act play The Boy Who Stole the Stars in area competition Saturday at Amarillo college. Their performance is to begin at 11 a.m.

Mobeetie's theatrical group was among the two top-ranked plays at the District 2-A UIL contest in Follett in March.

"All our speaking characters won awards," said Belinda Masters, director of the group.

Greg Langley was awarded best actor for the third consecutive year. Beth Wilson and Tammy Harwell were each named to the all-star cast. Jeff Mayfield received honorable mention in all-star cast.

The Boy Who Stole the Stars by Julian Wiles tells of a young boy who visits his grandparents every summer, yet this particular summer the boy, Nicholas, played by Langley, discovers his grandfather, Matthew, has changed. Matthew, played by Mayfield, doesn't tell stories anymore and he is often impatient with his 12-year-old grandson. So Nicholas tries to recapture his grandfather's interest by asking for his help with a school project-counting the stars.

It is during this time that Matthew tells Nicholas about a dragon who guards the star. According to the legend, if the stars should return to earth it would be the beginning of a new paradise. So Nicholas decides to kill the dragon and allow the stars to return to earth, ultimately keeping his grandfather from dying.

But by the end of the play, Nicholas realizes that he is more important to his grandfather than anything else.

Wilson plays Bessie, the grandmother, and Harwell performs as Genevieve, a young girl. DeAnna Smith plays the dragon. Stage crew members are Michael Smith, Jackie May and Steven Morris.

This is Masters' 11th year to direct Mobeetie's one-act play. Three times she has guided this group to regional competition. She says The Boy Who Stole the Stars is a "well-rounded" play and that she hopes all will go well at the area competition Saturday.

"We usually do real well," she said.

Precedent unlikely in libel case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A record $3 million libel award against CBS that the Supreme Court has refused to disturb is not likely to have widespread impact on the news media, says an authority on libel law.

Henry Kaufman of the Libel Defense Resource Center in New York City said the case does not establish a significant precedent because the facts involved are unique.

But Kaufman did say that the case, stemming from a broadcast on a CBS-owned television station in Chicago, changes the psychological landscape.

"This is the first libel award that has broken through the psychological $1 million barrier on appeal, the first that has been able to make it through the process intact," he said.

Kaufman, whose organization is funded by the news media, expressed disappointment along with CBS officials that the Supreme Court on Monday left the libel judgment intact.

News organizations had hoped the case could be used to mount a First Amendment attack against punitive damages in libel cases, Kaufman said. "That opportunity has passed for the time being," he said.

"We're disappointed," said Doug Jacobs, associate general counsel for CBS Inc. "We believed these issues were important enough for review."

The case stems from a suit by Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. of Louisville, Ky., which makes Viceroy cigarettes. It accused CBS and WBBM-TV anchorman Walter Jacobson in Chicago of libeling it in a Nov. 11, 1981, broadcast.

Jacobson, in a nightly feature called Walter Jacobson's Perspective, said there was a Viceroy advertising strategy to attract young people to smoking by relating cigarettes "to pot, wine, beer and sex." He said the idea was to present cigarette smoking as "an initiation into the adult world ... as an illicit pleasure."

A federal jury awarded the cigarette company $5 million. The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld $3 million of the award against CBS and $50,000 against Jacobson.

The $3 million award — plus some $400,000 in interest — is about four times the largest previous damage judgment against a news organization upheld on appeal. Awards upheld on appeal average between $100,000 and $150,000.

die now than there's ever been. What we have to do up here is have everyone get behind the things that they want. They need to pester me and they need to pester other legislators," he said.

Bivins says if he is elected, he plans to form coalitions of areas of the state with less powerful representation but with the same interests in order to bring more strength to the legislative process.

His experience with trying to bring the super collider project to Amarillo taught him that this is possible. "I saw that in a fair competition we could have an influence down state," Bivins said.

So Bivins continues his "one-on-one campaign to the front porches of the Panhandle" and has found in the process that he has benefited from the experience. Talking with so many people from so many walks of life, Bivins said he has learned about a variety of topics that he had not been familiar with before, such as adult probation and the problems of the appellate courts.

A pleasant surprise came when Bivins and his wife realized that were actually spending more time together than they had when he was a full-time businessman, particularly during the long drives to speaking engagements.

"My family put a lot of thought and prayer in this decision (to run for office) two months this summer," Bivins remembered. "Nancy finally came to me and said, 'If this is something you really want to do, I won't be behind you. I'll be beside you.'"

Trial begins for alleged magazine ad murder contract

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A man indicted in connection with a botched murder-for-hire scheme testified he was hired by another defendant who had placed a "Gun for Hire" advertisement in Soldier of Fortune magazine.

Richard Michael Savage, accused of arranging a murder contract through the ad, went on trial Monday amid tight security in a federal courtroom. Testimony in the case was continuing today.

Prosecutors labeled the 39-year-old Savage "a central figure in a murder ring." Savage was indicted with four other people in October 1986 in connection with the alleged murder-for-hire scheme.

"He said that she wanted a man named Dana Free killed. We discussed the fact that I would be the one to go down and kill Dana Free," testified William Clayton Buckley, one of those named in the indictment.

Buckley testified that the first time he and alleged accomplices tried to bomb

Free's car, the grenades did not blow up.

"We watched the car drive around for a few days with the grenades dangling from underneath the car," Buckley testified.

After that, he said he and the alleged accomplices decided they needed to do more work. One man then crawled back under Free's car and rearmed the grenades.

"On or about July 13, 1985, in response to an advertisement for a Gun for Hire, placed in Soldier of Fortune magazine, by Richard Michael Savage, Alice V. Brado paid Richard Michael Savage $5,000 as a retainer fee to kill Dana Free," the indictment alleged.

The indictment claims that about 11 days later, a man named Ward C. Lambeth paid Savage "$15,000 as additional payment from Alice V. Brado for the murder of Dana Free."

Lambeth testified that he loaned Ms. Brado $25,000 for the purpose of killing Free and the money was allegedly used to hire Savage.

Free testified Monday that Ms. Brado had invested $175,000 to $180,000 in a Colorado company for which he served as president. He said the woman required him to take out a $500,000 life insurance policy, naming her as the beneficiary.

He said he has been receiving death threats for three years, beginning in Nov. 1984, when he said he went to Atlanta, Ga., on vacation.

"When I got ready to return, I was told by my secretary not to return because I would be dead within five seconds," said Free, adding the former vice president of the company also "told me I was a dead man over the phone."

Free said he moved to Smyrna, Ga., and on the morning of Aug. 2, 1985, his car was bombed at his apartment complex.

"I got into the car, and it started," said Free. "It died. I started it again, moved about 15 feet and it exploded."

Stunned, he said, he got out of the car and watched it burn.

Prosecutors accused Savage of hiring two other people to bomb Free's car in the Atlanta, Ga., area. The first attempt failed, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Gary Cobe, and two days later, one of two hand grenades hung on the bottom of Free's car exploded, but Free escaped unharmed.

Savage later sent Buckley and Sherry Lynn Breeden to Houston "with a silenced .45-caliber pistol, a semi-automatic Uzi rifle, 100 rounds of ammunition and two fragmentation grenades, to locate and kill Dana Free," according to the indictment.

Buckley and Ms. Breeden allegedly threw two grenades through the windows of a Pasadena residence where they thought he was staying, but Free was no longer there.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda moved the trial from Houston due to publicity generated by an unrelated civil case against Soldier of Fortune. In that case, a jury awarded $9.4 million to the family of a woman killed in a scheme allegedly arranged through an advertisement in the magazine.

Savage was charged with conspiracy to transport explosives interstate, traveling interstate to facilitate the murder, inducing others to travel interstate to commit murder, sending money orders via wire interstate in the scheme and using a firearm in a crime of violence.

Ms. Brado pleaded guilty to charges stemming from the indictment and died while serving a five-year prison term.

She told investigators Free had absconded with money she invested with him.

Savage is serving a 40-year prison term for arranging the 1985 beating death of former West Palm Beach, Fla., Assistant City Manager Anita Spearman.

The attack was arranged through a Soldier of Fortune advertisement.

Teacher, students both claim they are telling the truth

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Lou Ann Hogan describes herself as a good high school English teacher who got along well with her students, but school administrators say she may have gotten along too well with one of them.

Mrs. Hogan, 24, is fighting for her job after four male students told school administrators they saw her having sex with Chad Cadenhead, a 17-year-old emotionally troubled teen-ager who committed suicide a month after the alleged sex acts took place.

The case has drawn a great deal of local coverage and attracted national attention after Mrs. Hogan was fired from Clark High School on charges of "immorality" and her contract for the next school year was not renewed.

Mrs. Hogan, who has filed a $400,000 lawsuit against the teen-agers, claiming defamation of character, said they are trying to find an answer to the teen-ager's death.

The students claim they don't want to hurt anyone, but simply are compelled to tell the truth.

It's a stalemate so far, but both sides convincingly claim they are telling the truth and want the civil case tried quickly to settle the issue.

"I'm mad, but what do I do?" Mrs. Hogan said. "It will come out that they are not good boys. I just want to stare them in the face. I want to see how they would react."

When that time comes, Taylor Sommer, Scott Autry, Jeff Beckel and Hector Torres, who are named in her suit, said they will tell the truth, that on the nights of Dec. 5 and Dec. 11, they saw Mrs. Hogan and Cadenhead engaged in sex.

Sommer, 16, and Autry and Beckel, both 17, are students at Clark High School and Torres, 19, a former Clark student, now attends the University of Texas at San Antonio.

Rumors about who's telling the truth and who's lying are abundant at Clark High School and throughout the North Side Independent School District.

"We're getting made to look like the bad guys for the telling the truth," Sommer said in an interview. "I'm not mad. It's tough, but I'm telling the truth, so I'm not worried."

The twisted tale began in November when Cadenhead told friends he was having a sexual relationship with Mrs. Hogan, a second-year teacher whose youth allowed her to relate to students.

Sommer, Autry and Beckel did not believe Cadenhead, who according to an autopsy report was an emotional teen-ager with suicidal tendencies who had undergone psychological counseling.

Cadenhead told friends that he would set it up so they could watch, the teen-agers said.

On Saturday, Dec. 5, 1987, Sommer, Beckel and Torres said they went to Cadenhead's house, peeked through a bedroom window and saw Cadenhead and Mrs. Hogan engaged in sex. On Dec. 11, Autry and Beckel said they were spending a night at Cadenhead's home when Mrs. Hogan called and said she was coming over.

Autry and Beckel said they slipped out of the house and stood near Cadenhead's bedroom window. They said Mrs. Hogan arrived, went to Cadenhead's room and she and Cadenhead again had sex.

But Mrs. Hogan said the charges are ludicrous. She and her husband, Mike, said they were together on the nights the alleged acts took place.

"Never would I be stupid enough to go to a kid's house not knowing if his parents were there," Mrs. Hogan said.

The teen-agers said they never talked to Cadenhead much after the acts allegedly occurred.

On Jan. 28, Cadenhead went to his bedroom, put a .410-gauge shotgun in his mouth and pulled the trigger. No suicide note was found, but the teen-agers believe the sexual relationship may have triggered the act.

"I know if it were me, it would bother me a lot," Sommer said.

Sommer said that two weeks after he saw Mrs. Hogan and Cadenhead having sex, he told his sister and after Cadenhead's death she persuaded him to tell adults.

The Sommers told the Cadenheads, who later told school officials. On Feb. 2, the students were summoned to school administrators offices and were asked to write what they saw.

Mrs. Hogan was suspended, and on March 10, the school board fired her. Last week, the board declined to renew her contract for the coming year.

"We are telling the truth. We have no reason to lie," Torres said. "We want to tell our side of the story and we want to tell it all in court. It's upsetting to us to have to hear the opinions of other people who think we are liars."

Clements: Economy on road to recovery

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' economic slump is nearing its end and the state's business leaders should continue efforts to diversify the state's industries, Gov. Bill Clements says.

Clements made the remarks Monday in a speech at a meeting of the Texas Association of Businesses.

The governor said recent decisions by 18 companies to relocate in Texas point to a brighter economic future for the state.

"These are just examples of the strong evidence that the march toward full recovery is under way," Clements said. "Because of your commitment, our economy is picking up steam."

"We're turning the corner, and we want to step on the accelerator, so to speak, gun the engine."

The latest Texas unemployment figures indicate a .3 percent decline from February to March, but the state's 8.1 percent unemployment level was the same this time last year.

Some economic experts have predicted, however, that Texas' recovery will be slow.

The governor also said that the state should be cautious as it rebuilds from the ruins of a collapsed domestic oil market.

"My confidence in Texans and our economy is unshakable," Clements said. "There are no limits on how far we can go or speed limits on how fast we can get there, but getting there won't be easy. But then, Texans haven't come this far by taking it easy."

Clements emphasized that the state must diversify its economy. He cited as examples Ditto Apparel of California's move to Weslaco and Transdata Inc. of Ohio's move to Tyler.

Clements was at the association's meeting to present the 16th annual Texas Business of the Year awards.

Ronald Fancher, chief executive officer of Texas Commerce Bank in Odessa, was the winner in the publicly held category. In the privately held category, the winner was Monroe Mirsky, president of M.P. Industries in Tyler.

Acupuncture is now popular in treating AIDS sufferers

AUSTIN (AP) — Acupuncture this year has become one of the most popular treatments in Austin among sufferers of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Brian McKenna, an Austin acupuncture expert who initiated the AIDS treatments twice a week at St. Luke's Methodist Church, said his group has had 28 patients so far, with about half attending regularly.

"We're trying to offer the options of traditional Chinese medicine," said McKenna.

"We've been able to address pain and migraine headaches. We've been able to normalize sleep patterns and help with the appetite loss and digestive weakness often found with AIDS and ARC," AIDS-related complex.

"But it's important to recognize that no therapy is going to serve everyone all the time."

Acupuncture is an ancient Chinese art, still used in conjunction with Western medicine in China. It involves the shallow puncturing of the body at specific points with long, fine gold or silver needles to relieve pain and cure disease.

"Its optimal province is the early stages of a disease process," McKenna said. "But it has analgesic effects at any stage."

McKenna, 35, has no medical degree and does not claim to be curing AIDS. But he has studied with acupuncture experts in China and points to hundreds of AIDS patients who indicate that acupuncture helps maintain their health.

"It's way too early to predict how acupuncture is going to shape up as an AIDS treatment," McKenna said. "I do, however, believe it would be remiss on our part not to offer hope."

Acupuncture practitioners are not licensed by the State of Texas, but Austin has attracted about a dozen of them since the early 1980s.

McKenna is licensed to practice in his native New Mexico and by a national association. The needles for AIDS treatments are used only once and then discarded. He and two other acupuncturists who help always wear gloves, he said.

The virus that causes a fatal case of AIDS is primarily transmitted through sexual contact but can also be passed by exchanging blood.

Some Austin physicians who treat AIDS approve of their patients trying acupuncture.

"I have absolutely no objection to it," said Dr. Tom Smith. "I've found that people do better when they take a multiphasic approach. If something is safe, I don't object."

Road could be stalled by cemetery

DUNCANVILLE (AP) — Mayor Russ Kent said the furor over a proposal to cut through a cemetery with a new highway caught him by surprise.

The project was discussed in at least 10 public meetings last year, Kent noted.

"You drive by cemeteries all the time on thoroughfares," Kent said. "It's not unique that a street goes through a cemetery."

A dirt path has been plowed through the Little Bethel Memorial Park cemetery to make way for a road joining Duncanville with Cedar Hill, another Dallas suburb, which is south of Duncanville.

City officials maintain the Joe Wilson Road extension will serve growing traffic needs and improve north-south traffic flow in the southern suburbs.

But further construction of the road could be delayed by petitioners — including relatives of those buried in the 128-year-old cemetery — who claim the road will attract vandals, noise and litter.

On April 15, the 14th State District Court judge in Dallas will consider the petitioners' request for a temporary injunction to stop the bulldozers while they sue city officials on the project.

"They do not want a road through a cemetery," Robin Mote, a Duncanville real estate agent and leader of the petition drive, said of the road opponents.

"They don't want trash thrown on the graves and they're afraid the road will attract vandalism." Others said the two-lane road, which eventually would be expanded to four lanes, would bring noise and disruptions to a tranquil environment.

"When they get through with a four-lane divided thoroughway, the noise and the traffic will be unbearable," said Judy Richards, whose father-in-law is buried just 135 feet from the edge of the developing roadway.

Duncanville public works director Dennis Schwartz said even when the connector is transformed to a four-lane road, the edge of the right of way should remain about 150 feet from any graves.

The city-county project could be completed and open to traffic in about four weeks, Schwartz said.

Attorney Jerry Brownlow, who is representing the opposition, concedes it will be difficult to stop a road that is only four weeks from completion.

"They (city officials) have the right to contract with the county for a road," Brownlow said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Privatization now reasonable option

The process of getting serious consideration for a good idea — particularly one that doesn't involve expanding the scope of government — can be long and tortuous. Once in a while, however, a good idea has a chance for advancement even without heavy support from special interests that stand to benefit directly.

The idea of privatizing our nation's troubled air traffic control system has just taken another step on the tortuous path.

About a year and a half ago, the Reason Foundation of Los Angeles published a careful and detailed proposal for privatizing air traffic control, noting that privatization would be the quickest way to improve both safety and efficiency. Right now a creaking bureaucracy is trying to cope with a rapidly changing environment in the airline industry brought on by deregulation. A private air traffic control company would have more flexibility and ability to incorporate innovations.

The proposal has received consideration behind the scenes in Washington and an occasional nod in public. Now the President's Commission on Privatization has incorporated the essential elements of the plan as one of the 78 recommendations in its 278-page final report.

The game is hardly over, of course. The Reagan administration has seldom really pushed when its proposals encounter any resistance. In its twilight months, the administration seems enfeebled and directionless. So while it was nice that President Reagan put the commission together, we can hardly count on him to do much.

In a way, that's strange, because privatization of government services has emerged as a practical idea, winning adherents worldwide from across the ideological spectrum. The reason is simple.

For the last 50 years or so the attitude in most developed countries was "That's a great idea. Let's let the government do it." A confusing and expensive patchwork of government services and enterprises, accompanied by big budgets and big deficits, has been the result.

Returning some of these services to the private sector is coming to seem like the only practical way either to keep government from growing exponentially or make it politically feasible to propose new ideas. A wave of privatization has occurred in recent years in England, France, Germany, Australia, New Zealand (under a Labor Party government), and even in Third World and Communist countries. It works.

The U.S. under a Reagan administration should have led the way in privatization, but it now trails most developed countries. Still, the ideas are sound and they're starting to get serious consideration. The next administration, of whatever party, will simply have to consider privatization as a live option. The alternative is to drift, trapped in a bureaucratic maze erected by previous decisions, unable to consider or implement new priorities.

The presidential commission's report only formalizes an emerging reality. Privatization is an idea whose time is coming.

"When I grow up, I want to be a member of the California raisins group."

Our middle class is unknown

By JANERIK LARSSON

STOCKHOLM — While U.S. economists argue about the health of the American middle class, many Europeans on both sides of the Iron Curtain are convinced there is no such middle class.

As Reuters news agency reported from Moscow on the eve of the Reagan-Gorbachev Washington summit, "Russians see America as a land of wealth, where greed and lawlessness make life tough for the average citizen."

Asmund Willersrud, Moscow correspondent for a number of prestigious Scandinavian newspapers, makes a similar observation. Soviet citizens, he says, are fed a steady diet of reports about U.S. unemployed and soup kitchens — and are convinced that they're better off than most Americans.

This absurd image of the United States is perhaps not surprising in the Soviet Union, where a state media monopoly makes it easy to paint a propaganda picture. What is surprising is that many Western Europeans share these distorted views.

This spring my book, Bortom Harlem Och 'Dallas' (Beyond Harlem and 'Dallas') will be published in Sweden. Its subtitle is The Unknown Americans.

The unknown Americans are the 200 million-plus Americans who constitute the middle class — America's big secret, and strength. There is nothing "special" about most middle-class families; few journalists would find them worth writing about.

I don't agree. This is the America most Europeans don't know. And it makes the spread of dangerous anti-Americanism more difficult to stop.

If today's Swedish citizen wants to read about Americans, there is no shortage of books about prostitutes, alcoholics, drug addicts or old Swedish emigrants living on Seattle's Skid Row. The middle class is conspicuously absent.

The same is true if you watch television or read most newspapers. TV newscasters talk about super-power politics and soup kitchens (usually using film footage from one of the U.S. networks); entertainment television provides a similar picture: With crime (Hill Street Blues) and greed (Dallas, Dynasty and Falcon Crest) predominating.

This image has been drawn mainly from the U.S. media. When an American audience sees such an image, it presumably can put things in context, because it knows what the everyday world looks like — the world TV doesn't show.

An overseas audience, however, doesn't know about the hundreds of small businesses that line the Pennsylvania Turnpike, or the tens of millions of hard-working Americans who make U.S. society work.

My book includes the results of a major new public opinion survey examining the image of the United States among my fellow Swedes. Commissioned specially for the book, the survey shows that most Swedes have about the same view of America as do most Russians.

Very few Swedes would like to live in the United States. They think Americans are worse off economically than they are. And they think Americans dishonest and criminal. The United States is seen as a country with few winners and many losers. Its mention evokes images of war and soup kitchens.

The poll also asked whether Swedes consider the United States and Soviet Union morally equivalent. More than 80 percent said yes, only 15 percent said no.

It is totally absurd, of course, to suggest that an open democracy and a closed, totalitarian society are morally equivalent. Yet that is what many of my fellow Swedes think, and the concept is even gaining currency in the United States.

This certainly helps explain present-day anti-Americanism.

The middle-class American families I met while working on my book don't know much about the world outside the United States. Most of them haven't traveled abroad.

Unfortunately, the outside world doesn't know much about the American middle class, either. The everyday life of everyday Americans isn't part of the U.S. image abroad. Even America's dearest friends misunderstand her.

NOTE: Janerik Larsson, a Swedish journalist and author, lived in the United States from 1973-1974 and 1985-1987. Now living in Stockholm, Larsson's new book, Bortom Harlem and 'Dallas', will be published later this year. He wrote the article for The Heritage Foundation, Washington, D.C.

How about 'Air Emphysema'?

My friend Rigsby, the entrepreneur, currently is hatching another of his get-rich-quick schemes.

He sounded excited when he told me about his idea over lunch.

"You heard smoking is now banned on all commercial flights in California, didn't you?" he asked.

I said I had. There was a near riot aboard a TWA jet when smokers rebelled against the new anti-smoking law.

"And things are just going to get worse," Rigsby went on. "After April, smokers will not be allowed to light up on any flight anywhere in the country of two hours or less. There are going to be a lot of uncomfortable smokers flying around up there."

I agreed, but I wanted to know where all this fits in with Rigsby's new idea.

"An all-smokers airline," he beamed.

"I don't understand," I said.

"It's simple," Rigsby explained, "I'm going to lease some airplanes and start a new airline for smokers only."

"You can smoke all you want on my airline. In fact, I will encourage smoking. Flight attendants will carry cigarettes up and down the aisle like the girls in Vegas. I'll charge five bucks a pack. A smoker who runs out of cigarettes on an airplane is a desperate individual who will pay anything for another pack."

I admitted the idea had some promise.

"What are you going to call your airline?" I asked Rigsby.

"I've got my marketing staff on that now," he said. "We're thinking of something that will really catch the smoking public's attention. 'Black Lung Airlines' was one thought."

"I don't think so," I said.

"Then, how about 'Air Emphysema'?"

"Keep trying."

"OK," said Rigsby, "but let me tell you what else I'm going to offer on my all-smokers airline.

"First we're going to make certain no non-smokers come aboard and make life miserable for our customers. We will check each passenger's teeth and fingers. If they aren't yellow from smoking, they don't get a boarding pass.

"We're not going to fly high enough to need cabin pressurization so our passengers won't have to worry about ever having to use those oxygen masks and not being able to smoke.

"Our flight crew will all be smokers, as well as our flight attendants, mechanics, reservationists and boarding agents."

"But," I asked, "won't all that smoking make it uncomfortable on the plane?"

"Of course not," said Rigsby. "Smokers love smoke, and we're going to issue a miner's hat with the little light on the front so passengers can find the lavatories regardless of how thick the smoke is in the cabin."

"When will your ad campaign begin?" I asked my friend.

"Shortly," he said.

"What's your hook?"

"It's a great one — 'An all-smokers airline, here to serve you just in the nick of teen.'"

Who am I to scoff? They laughed at Wilbur and Orville, too.

The deaf deserve a chance to be heard

By SARAH OVERSTREET

Some of them called it "our Selma."

And to many of us watching, it was. The mass protest and shutting down of Gallaudet University, the nation's only liberal arts university for deaf people, bore many of the same markings as the famous 1965 black march for civil rights.

Deaf students rose up in defiance when the university's board of trustees hired a hearing president who doesn't even know sign language — the same decision the board has made for the last 124 years. It was as abhorrent to those deaf students as the naming of a white president would have been to students at an all-black university. For 124 years.

Oh, the board's choosing of a non-deaf, non-signing president was for many of the right reasons: The members believed Elisabeth Ann Zinser was the best qualified to lead a major university — that she had all the academic qualifications to lead the university into the direction a university should go. What she didn't have was any understanding of deafness.

Zinser does not even know sign language. "I plan to learn," she said on ABC's "Nightline," as if she were planning to take up embroidery to join the church quilting league. She shared the same misconception as many who do not understand sign language. It is the idea that one simply learns a few hand movements, sort of like one picks up the dits and dahs of Morse code, and just becomes faster and more eloquent with practice.

Sign language is not simply Morse code for the fingers. It is not even a series of hand signals that replace English sentence structure, one sign for one word. Sign language is a complex pictorial language. More than that, it is the language of a culture, the reflections of thought patterns developed in a world without sound. It is often as searingly brilliant as hearing speech, but in ways one doesn't understand until one has been a part of the culture from which it arose, or has stood outside but among the culture, a hearing person as handicapped in their world as they are in ours.

Elisabeth Ann Zinser would not understand what it means to be deaf if she spent all her waking hours trying to learn the language and being among the people who speak it. And if she had done what it takes to understand, she would have had no time to administrate.

The comparison with the blacks' struggle for civil rights is appropriate, whether or not you comprehend even some of what it is like to be deaf. Deaf people have been treated like second-class citizens in the same way blacks have, but for a different reason: This time, it is "for their own good." The history of deaf education is of blatant paternalism, of deaf educators kept out of the highest leadership positions because hearing people, with the advantages of ears that work and easy communication with other hearing people, could supposedly help deaf people more than other deaf people could. Many of those hearing educators have had the same attitude as Zinser toward sign language and deaf culture: Give it a cursory, surface learning, so that you never know how little you really know.

Perhaps Zinser finally realized what she didn't know. She stepped down. Deaf actress Marlee Matlin summed it up succinctly on "Nightline." "I can only speak for myself," Zinser began, and Matlin shot back before Zinser could get any further.

"I'm sure you do." Some hearing people claim deaf people need to be shepherded by hearing people because of the failings of deaf education, because deaf people have not been allowed to fall down, get back up and learn from the experience. These hearing people say deaf people are not ready to lead themselves. It was the same excuse white people used to deny blacks leadership positions, and the reason for change is still the same:

If not now, when?

Survey: Computer competence low among students

NEW YORK (AP) — Most U.S. students remain computer illiterates and few schools use computers effectively to teach basics despite a much-heralded "classroom computer revolution," according to a survey released today.

The study of 24,000 third-, seventh- and 11th graders found that access to computers is too limited at school and at home, school curricula haven't changed to make effective use of computers and teachers are inadequately trained.

"Computer Competence: The First National Assessment," by the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP), also found that white students scored 5 percent to 8 percent higher on average than blacks and Hispanics, mainly due to greater access to computers at home and in school.

Marc Tucker, president of the Washington-based National Center on Education and the Economy, called the results disappointing.

"The difference is between knowing a little about the computer, and being able to use it effectively. Few American school children can do the latter," he said.

NAEP is a project established 19 years ago by the U.S. Congress to conduct national surveys of various educational skills. It is administered by the Educational Testing Service in Lawrence Township, N.J.

The testing organization examined grade schoolers across the country during the spring of 1986. It used multiple choice questions to test student knowledge about computers and to gather information about their feelings toward computers.

The study found that most third graders could identify the main parts of a computer, such as the keyboard, floppy disk and joystick. By seventh grade, nearly all could.

But only 32.3 percent of third graders, 34.3 percent of seventh graders, and 46 percent of 11th graders could correctly answer: "What is the main role of a computer program?" (Answer: "To tell the computer what to do.")

And only three of ten 11th graders knew what an algorithm is ("a step by step process for solving a given type of problem.")

Except for word processing, students generally scored poorly on questions dealing with computer applications — making graphics or working with databases, for example — because students said they hardly ever got a chance to practice.

In addition, among 837 school computer coordinators surveyed, NAEP found 32 percent of third-grade coordinators, 23 percent of seventh-grade coordinators, and 10 percent of 11th-grade coordinators did not feel adequately prepared to teach computer science.

Despite their generally poor showing, 91.2 percent of third graders and 86 percent of seventh graders said they liked using computers, and more than half said they wished they used them more.

"Although some schools offer excellent computer curricula, many other schools apparently do not provide effective instruction, at least in computer applications and programming, to a large proportion of pupils," the survey concluded.

The grim assessment suggests that schools have only dented the ignorance most students and teachers have of computers despite the huge purchases of equipment by many schools during the 1980s.

In 1980, 15 percent of elementary schools and 50 percent of high schools offered computer instruction. By 1985, 82 percent of elementary schools and 93 percent of secondary schools did so.

Even so, more than eight of 10 seventh- and 11th-graders said they never used computers to make a database, slightly more than half said they never used them to write letters, stories or reports, and roughly three-quarters said they never used them to make graphs.

Meese having trouble filling top Justice Department jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III is having trouble rebuilding the top echelon of the Justice Department after two top aides resigned in protest, with one planned replacement blocked by the White House and the second openly saying he may not take the job.

James I.K. Knapp, Meese's choice to succeed William Weld as the assistant attorney general in charge of criminal prosecutions, is no longer being considered, a Justice Department source speaking on condition of anonymity said Monday. Knapp, 45, is a deputy assistant attorney general in the department's tax division.

Meese had planned to announce Knapp as his choice to succeed Weld last Friday, Justice Department sources said. But the White House held up Meese's plan, pending completion of FBI background checks on his choices.

Department sources on Monday declined to specify why Knapp's name was being withdrawn.

Meanwhile, Arlin Adams, a Philadelphia lawyer who had been the attorney general's choice to fill the Justice Department's No. 2 post, says he told Meese on Monday that he is "not optimistic" that he will be able to take the job.

In an interview, Adams said colleagues at his law firm "take a very dim view of my leaving at this time" because he is handling an extensive caseload in Philadelphia, including a major anti-trust case, and "I don't want to leave the firm in the lurch."

Adams, who would succeed Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns, pointed out that he resumed private practice just last year after stepping down from the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

"I've not made a decision, but I'm not optimistic and I told the attorney general that today," said Adams.

Burns and Weld resigned out of concern that the 11-month-old criminal investigation of Meese was hurting the Justice Department's operations and image.

Asked whether he had any qualms about serving under Meese, Adams said that "I look at the job as serving the United States government and the Department of Justice" and that the investigation of Meese "is not dominating my decision."

Meese had been prepared on Friday to announce the replacement of Weld and at least one other top Justice Department vacancy, the post held by Associate Attorney General Stephen Trott.

Francis A. Keating II, assistant Treasury secretary for enforcement, is to take the No. 3 department job being vacated by Trott, Justice Department sources said late last week.

Mecham convicted, removed from office in Senate impeachment trial

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Evan Mecham was convicted on impeachment charges and removed as governor in a finale to 15 months of national ridicule that began the week the political outsider took office.

"I feel relieved that this nightmare is over," Republican Sen. Greg Lunn said Monday after Mecham, a first-term Republican, became the first U.S. governor in 59 years to be impeached and stripped of his office.

Mecham, 63, showed no emotion as the Arizona Senate voted 21-9 to convict him of trying to obstruct an investigation of a alleged death threat and 26-4 of misusing $80,000 from the governor's protocol fund. Twenty votes were required for conviction.

Minutes later, Mecham smiled and told reporters, "Well, they don't like my politics, so we finished a political trial; it's as simple as that."

The 30-member Senate defeated, 17-13, a motion to bar Mecham from holding any public office again, making it unclear whether he will be permitted to run in a May 17 recall election to regain the governor's post. There is no precedent and the matter probably will be decided by the courts, said Attorney General Bob Corbin.

Acting Gov. Rose Mofford, a Democrat, became governor with Mecham's conviction.

"Let us purge our hearts of suspicion and hate," she said in a statement. "I did not ask for this burden. But I do not shrink from the job before me."

Mecham faces an April 21 criminal trial on a charge he concealed a $350,000 campaign loan. The Senate dropped a charge on that issue last week.

Mecham said he did not know what he will do next, including whether he will appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. "We'll know in a couple, three days," he said.

Mecham was removed less than a week after his family announced the Mecham Pontiac dealership, which he has owned since 1950, was being sold because of declining sales his son blamed on an "avalanche" of bad publicity.

"Ladies and gentlemen, Governor Mecham has struck out," Democratic Sen. Jesus "Chuy" Higuera said as he voted for conviction on the two counts.

"The only defense that we have heard is ignorance of the law," Higuera said. "The citizens of this state will not tolerate this evil insensitivity to the (Arizona) Constitution and the laws of the state."

The vote ended 15 tumultuous months that shook this staunchly Republican state and brought ridicule and criticism.

Possibility of talks with Nicaragua weighed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high-ranking State Department official will travel to Central America soon for consultations about the possibility of regional security talks in which the United States and Nicaragua would take part, according to administration sources.

U.S. special envoy for Central America Morris Busby will discuss the "timing and appropriateness" of such discussions when he visits Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras later this week, the officials said.

The Reagan administration has avoided participating in any negotiating forum with Nicaragua since early 1985 when it called off a six-month effort to ease differences through direct talks.

At the time, the administration accused the Sandinista government of intransigence and encouraged the Nicaraguans to engage in good-faith negotiations in a regional peace process then under way.

The administration stuck by that position until last November, when President Reagan indicated a new flexibility. He said Secretary of State George P. Shultz would be ready to meet with delegations from Nicaragua and other Central American countries once serious negotiations between the Sandinistas and the Contra rebels were under way.

That condition appears to have been satisfied by the temporary cease-fire agreement reached

March 23 between the two sides.

The Sandinista government, meanwhile, has called repeatedly for a resumption of direct U.S.-Nicaraguan negotiations. Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto wrote last week that the United States "should open bilateral negotiations with Nicaragua to deal with security issues and to normalize relations between our countries."

The U.S. officials, insisting on anonymity, said they do not believe that arrangements for regional negotiations will be completed.

SHOOTING PAINS

If you're a victim of sciatica, you know what "shooting pains" are all about. The sometimes excruciating pain of sciatica frequently affects the hip, thigh and back of the leg. The ankle and foot are sometimes affected, too. But that's not where the problem is.

The sciatic nerve, the largest nerve in the body, extends from the lower spine to the back of the thigh and knee. Then it divides. One nerve goes down the front of the lower leg, and other goes down the back of the leg.

It's the inflammation of the sciatic nerve that causes the pain. This can be triggered by an irritated nerve root. What causes the irritation? The cause may be traced to a misalignment of the spinal column that's putting abnormal pressure on the roots of the sciatic nerves as they pass between the vertebrae.

Through x-rays and other procedures the doctor of chiropractic can locate the misaligned vertebrae. Using a gentle adjustment, he can align it properly again to help eliminate the cause and the pain.

Shultz tries to persuade Hussein to back peace plan

JERUSALEM (AP) — After failing to win an endorsement from Israel's prime minister, Secretary of State George P. Shultz is taking his plan for Mideast negotiations to Jordan, where he faces an uncertain reaction from King Hussein.

With Israel's government divided, Shultz's best hope could be winning over the Arab monarch who several times in the past stepped to the brink of negotiations with his neighbor. Shultz was to arrive in Jordan today.

"We do have a sense of movement," a senior U.S. official told reporters after Shultz met separately on Monday with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

A senior Israeli defense official said, meanwhile, that the government remained deadlocked and the only way to gain acceptance of the plan would be for Shultz to persuade Hussein to accept it. "I feel it can bring about a change," the Israeli official said in a briefing for American reporters, under rules that barred identifying him.

But the U.S. official, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said Hussein might reply that Israel should act first. The divided Israelis "should pull themselves together as a government," he said.

The U.S. plan calls for three years of self-rule, but not statehood, for the 1.5 million Palestinians living in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Negotiations on an overall settlement would open in December.

Although Shultz set a mid-March deadline for a reply, Israel, Jordan and Syria all have held back — neither accepting nor rejecting the U.S. plan.

With the deadline past, the U.S. official said there was still time for Shultz "to get real momentum" toward a Middle East settlement in the Reagan administration's remaining nine months. He said that would give a head start to the next administration, Republican or Democratic.

After Shultz meets with Hussein he will fly to Damascus for a session with President Hafez Assad of Syria.

Shultz returns to Jerusalem on Tuesday night and will report to Israeli leaders on Wednesday and continue his discussions with them.

In an effort to make headway, Shultz sidestepped differences with Shamir on an international peace conference and concentrated on the details of self-rule for the Palestinians and the outline of an overall settlement.

Shultz said he was encouraged that "we have now engaged in this initiative in the important aspects of its content, namely direct face-to-face negotiations."

Meanwhile, in Jordanian capital of Amman, more than 500 Moslem fundamentalist students chanted "Shultz the devil should go home" and burned U.S. and Israeli flags in a protest rally Monday at Jordan University.

There were other demonstrations in the Arab kingdom, where Palestinians are in the majority.

Israel captured the Gaza Strip from Egypt and the West Bank from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war. The occupied territories have been wracked by violent protests for four months.

Shamir's rightist Likud bloc and Peres' left-leaning Labor Party have governed Israel in a fragile coalition since indecisive elections in 1984. The prime minister and his foreign minister differ on a Mideast peace approach.

First of new American troop contingent will arrive today

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A military-run newspaper warned the public to prepare for an invasion after the United States said it was sending 1,300 more soldiers to Panama to safeguard the lives and property of American citizens.

Some of the additional U.S. troops were expected to arrive today in Panama, where a two-week general strike aimed at ousting strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega crumbled on Monday when most businesses opened.

In another development, an offer by the Roman Catholic Church to mediate Panama's crisis appeared doomed when a government official said only hours before the church-imposed midnight Monday deadline that the government had received no official invitation to take part.

The Pentagon said last week it was sending the additional soldiers to guard 10,500 U.S. troops and installations used to protect the Panama Canal.

The decision followed five weeks of unrest and an opposition attempt to oust Noriega. As head of the 15,000-member Panamanian Defense Forces, Noriega is the power behind the civilian government. He is under indictment in the United States on federal drug trafficking charges.

La Republica, a military-run newspaper, told its readers Sunday, "Panamanians must prepare themselves to reject the invasion."

The United States contends the troop buildup is within the bounds of the 1977 treaties that gave the Panama Canal Zone back to Panama in 1979 and will give Panama the canal at the end of 1999.

The United States, which supports the opposition move to oust Noriega, has cut off Panama's flow of dollars, virtually paralyzing the already-bankrupt government and leading to closure of the nation's banks.

The U.S. government said on Monday it does not plan military or further economic actions against Panama.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in Washington that even though it might take more time than anticipated, Noriega will eventually step down.

Opposition leaders insisted on Monday that the strike officially remained in effect, but their call appeared to be generally unheeded by retailers.

Many factories, which are more directly under the control of the strike organizers, remained closed.

Monsignor Marcos Antonio McGrath, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Panama City, had offered to mediate Panama's dispute between Noriega and opposition groups. But government-controlled television stations on Monday quoted unidentified government officials as saying the government never received a formal, written invitation from the church.

Monsignor Oscar Brown, the auxiliary bishop of Panama City, said in an interview on the Channel 2 television station, "We didn't make the invitation in a formal, written fashion to each of the parties involved."

The government held its own "national dialogue" Monday at a downtown convention center, without the presence of either the Catholic Church or the National Civic Crusade, the main opposition alliance.

Mario Rognoni, minister of commerce and industry, told reporters, "The government hopes the church and representatives of the opposition who have not taken part in this dialogue today take part in Wednesday's session."

Money concerns should be discussed before marriage

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Springtime is also wedding time, or at least wedding planning time. Today we will look at two areas related to weddings — discussing money before the wedding and sewing and saving a wedding gown.

DISCUSSING MONEY BEFORE THE WEDDING

Discussing money before the wedding is one of the things that could help make a marriage work over the long haul. Conflict over finances often grows out of differences in attitudes toward money that the partners bring with them into the marriage.

Couples can manage their money with the least conflict when each partner has an equal influence over decisions and the basic decisions are made before marriage. Couples should look at each other's financial situation — income, deductions, obligations and taxes.

Some of the issues couples need to decide before the wedding are:

$$$ Debt Repayment — For example, will pooled resources pay for student loans, or will the person who accumulated the loan pay for it?

$$$ Ownership — If a spouse contributes to car payments, for instance, will he or she share in the title?

$$$ Managing Income — Will income be pooled or kept separate? If it's kept separate, will you pay for which expenses?

$$$ Financial chores — How many bank accounts will there be and who will write the checks and balance the bank statement?

Credit — If both partners have credit cards, how many will be kept and how will they be used?

One of the most useful things a young couple can do is make a financial plan for their first six months of marriage. They should discuss their spending and saving habits, including when and for what each is most likely to overspend.

Homemakers' News

The plan should include money for every imaginable expense, including personal expenses, car tags, insurance, gifts, clothes, utilities, medical costs, rent savings, church and charitable contributions. Making a spending and saving plan gives couples the chance to discuss their short-term and long-term goals and lifestyles.

Discussing finances before marriage should make the shift from "his and hers" to "ours" much easier and may help prevent conflict later.

SEWING AND SAVING A WEDDING GOWN

Like traditional weddings, home-sewn wedding gowns are back in style.

Home-sewing a wedding gown has always been a way to hold down expenses, but that isn't the only motivation. The home-sewn wedding dress has grown in appeal because it offers the opportunity to have something unique and to create a family heirloom.

However, if you are not an experienced seamstress, or if your skills are rusty, you will probably be better off using the services of a professional dressmaker.

If you are a seamstress who decides to take on the task, here are a few suggestions:

* Allow plenty of time, typically four to six months, so that you are finished at least a week before the wedding.

* Keep pattern pieces, lace and the dress-in-progress in plastic wraps to avoid dust, dirt and spills.

* Baste or pin major pieces and fit them to the bride before sewing any finished seams.

* Use clean, sharp scissors or a rotary-wheel cutter for fabrics.

* Pin fine fabrics with silk dressmaker pins to avoid making holes. Also check your sewing machine needle and replace it with a new one in the appropriate size for the fabric.

* To assure sewing smooth seams in silky fabrics, prevent puckering by holding the fabric.

* Keep your hands clean and use hand cream if they are rough to avoid pulls on fine fabrics. Since creams can stain, allow plenty of time for it to be absorbed into your skin.

* Test everything, including the stitch length, tread compatibility and tension on a scrap of fabric to make sure it will work perfectly.

To preserve your family heirloom, have it cleaned immediately after the wedding and stored using one of two methods:

• Hang the dress on a padded hanger, with waist loops running from the inside waist seam to the hanger to take stress off the shoulder seams. Also stuff the sleeves with tissue paper. Then wrap the gown in freshly washed cotton fabric, such as an all-cotton sheet.

• The other option is to fold the dress carefully and wrap it in the all-cotton fabric. Then store flat inside an acid-free box, which is available from some commercial cleaners.

On the right fashion track

This trio of tots is set for spring in a collection of polyester and cotton seersucker dress-ups, all in blue and white. Left, a four-piece suspender suit, very grown-up. Center, a shorts set with shirt and bow tie. Right, a little lady wears a high-waisted dress accessorized with hat tied round with red and white polka dots. (All from Good Lad.)

Diners want their leftovers bagged without too much ado

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I both work downtown and live in the suburbs, so we often eat dinner together downtown after work. We are usually served more than we can eat, so we ask for a "doggie" bag to take home the leftovers.

We tried a new place, and when we asked our waiter if we could take our leftovers home, he came back with a pint-sized carton with a little wire handle — the kind you get when you buy ice cream to carry home. We felt embarrassed putting our leftovers, like so much "garbage," into this carton in plain view of everybody. In other restaurants, they transfer your leftovers into a doggie bag in the kitchen and give it to you at the end of the meal.

Please print this so we can mail it to the guilty restaurateur. Thank you.

DINERS

DEAR DINERS: The "guilty restaurateur" may not feel so guilty after all. Read on for a letter I received the same day yours arrived, and file them both under: "Damned if you do, and damned if you don't."

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are both 75 years old and we go out to eat two or three times a week. We usually order two meals and take home what is left.

Last Sunday we went to a nice place and the food was not cheap. We both ordered prime rib steak. We shared my plate, and my wife ate a small piece of her steak, and asked the waiter to wrap up the remainder to take home.

When we were ready to leave, we asked the waiter for our check and the leftover meat. He came back and told us that the meat had already been thrown out, so I told him to bring us another piece of beef!

He returned with a piece of meat, saying he was able to retrieve it before they threw it in the garbage. We looked at the meat, and it wasn't ours. We were sure it wasn't, because it had some rice on it and we didn't order rice! (Evidently he took it out of the garbage can.) We were outraged, and told him to bring us a new piece of beef — which he did.

From now on, if we have food to take home, we always ask the waiter to bring the container to our table!

DEAR ABBY: You were right on in your response to "Life Must Go On" — the 31-year-old widow whose in-laws thought she should wait a while before starting to date again. She had two children, 7 and 3, and had gone through grief counseling, and after six months she felt ready to get on with her life.

Thanks for saying that no one can presume to make rules that will apply to everyone following the death of a beloved spouse.

BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: It's only natural for the in-laws of the young widow to think she should wait a while before starting to date again. They are probably afraid that she will remarry and make a new life for herself and they will lose contact with their precious grandchildren, which is all they have left of their son.

I would hope that if and when this young mother remarries, she will stay close to her first in-laws and assure them that they have not lost their grandchildren — that there's room in her heart for them, too.

Jayhawks win NCAA crown

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The ball caromed off the glass backboard as time ran out, and it fell, fittingly, into the hands of Danny Manning. They were the hands that built Kansas' first national basketball championship in 33 years.

Kansas beat fifth-ranked Oklahoma 83-79 Monday night in the 50th NCAA final, and the so-called one-man team was the nation's No. 1 team.

When Manning rolled the ball onto the hardwood floor at Kemper Arena, the Jayhawks had won the national title with the most losses of any team in NCAA history. And Coach Larry Brown had turned a team in disarray into team of champions.

The game was the last collegiately for the senior Manning, and some wondered if it would be the last at Kansas for the vagabond coach Brown.

"I'm trying to be part of a national championship team here," Brown said. "I can't talk about that now."

The Jayhawks took control of the game from Oklahoma with about 10 minutes left, slowing the tempo and sending coach Billy Tubbs' run-and-gun Sooners home with only their fourth loss of the season against 35 victories.

Oklahoma was a team that admitted it liked to beat people bad. And this was a bad way to end a super season.

"It's a bitter defeat," Tubbs said. "We thought we could win, and we didn't. We're still proud."

Kansas, meanwhile, had lost 11, but its 27th victory gave the Jayhawks their first national title since 1952. That's also the last time a Big Eight team won the championship.

"I just wanted to tell all the people who said it couldn't be done: The national champions are No. 1, and how do you like us now?" Manning said as the postgame news conference ended.

Manning scored 31 points, had 18 rebounds and helped Kansas control not only the tempo but also Oklahoma's two big men, Stacey King and Harvey Grant. King had 17 points, five below his average, and Grant 14, seven below his. Manning and Chris Piper held them to four apiece in the second half.

"Like I said yesterday, I knew Danny Manning wanted it bad, and he came out and proved it today," King said.

Like Villanova in 1985 and North Carolina State in 1983, both of which had 10 losses, Kansas had struggled from mediocrity to the top during the course of the season. Brown had lost starters Archie Marshall to injury and Marvin Branch to academics, and the Jayhawks were 12-8 after 20 games.

The responsibility fell to Manning, the 6-foot-10 two-time All-American, who was expected to carry the team. He got them into the NCAA tournament, where they advanced with victories over Xavier, Murray State, Vanderbilt and Kansas State to win the Midwest Regional.

The Jayhawks upset No. 5 Duke 66-59 in the semifinals behind Manning's 25 points and advanced against Oklahoma, which was an eight-point favorite and had twice beaten Kansas during the Big Eight season.

"When you have a fine defensive club and a great player like Danny, you always have a chance," Brown said.

The first half ended in a 50-50 tie. Manning had 14 points, and Milt Newton scored 12 of his 15 before intermission. Still, it was evident that if the pace continued, the Sooners would run Kansas into submission.

"There were four or five up-and-down possessions there in the first half, and I got tired from that," Kansas guard Kevin Pritchard said.

Manning is MVP

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A year ago, Kansas All-American Danny Manning had a choice to make. Either he would take the NBA's offer of instant wealth or he would take another year of listening to Larry Brown, the coach he once called "a little man with a big mouth."

Manning chose the mouth instead of the money, and because he did Brown and Kansas are the NCAA champions today.

The 6-foot-10 senior carried the Jayhawks to an 83-79 victory over Oklahoma Monday night in a virtuoso MVP performance that was a microcosm of his four years at Kansas.

His line in the box score tells the story: 31 points, 18 rebounds, five steals, two assists, two blocks.

Any questions? Well, as a matter of fact, there was one. Twice in the last few minutes, he threw up low-percentage shots that missed badly and kept Oklahoma alive. On the bench, Brown and assistant coach Ed Manning, Danny's dad, cringed.

"We told him during a timeout that's not the kind of shots we want at that time," Coach Manning said. "At that time we wanted to take time off the clock."

"I was excited and maybe I tried to do too much at that point," his son said.

It was the only smudge on an otherwise spotless performance by Manning, who punctuated his night by dropping in four crucial free throws in the final 14 seconds to seal the victory.

What was he thinking as he stepped to the foul line? "It's over," he said.

And that was before he shot the free throws.

The fact of the matter is it was over, and after Manning converted the shots, he made sure of that by grabbing one last rebound.

Rangers win opener

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)—Charlie Hough's jinx over the Cleveland Indians also includes off nights.

The Indians hit three homers off Hough on Monday night but he still survived for his 13th consecutive victory over them, 4-3, as the Texas Rangers gave 37,613 fans a happy home opener.

"Who can explain it?" Hough asked. "I know about my record over them and I know I haven't pitched well against them. I just never had a gem pitched against me and something good always seems to happen."

Two Indian errors in the bottom of the seventh paved the way for the Rangers to tie the score 3-3.

In the bottom of the eighth, Pete O'Brien hit his second homer to give Hough the victory.

Hough wasn't around at the end. He walked leadoff batter Joe Carter in the ninth inning. Reliever Mitch Williams promptly picked Carter off base then struck out the next two batters before the fourth largest home opener in the Rangers' history.

"I had a rough night and really didn't have my best stuff," said Hough, who won 18 games last year. "It was an incredible job by Mitch. He was great and the pick-off really did it."

Williams said "It was great to win one for the old man. He gives it his all when he is out there and it makes you want to save the game for him."

Hough is 16-4 lifetime against Cleveland.

Sherrill's Aggies under investigation.

NCAA probes Aggies

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M plans to move quickly to answer NCAA allegations of 31 rules violations and 7 procedural infractions, Coach Jackie Sherrill says.

"We've gone through the process before," Sherrill said Monday after releasing a letter from the NCAA outlining its charges. "We have an outside firm that will go out and interview people."

Sherrill said the school has until the end of June to prepare its answer to the charges but the school would not take that long to respond.

No academic violations were cited in the 38-point letter. Names of players and coaches also were withheld.

Investigators concluded that the nature of the violations "demonstrate a lack of appropriate institutional control and monitoring in the administration of the institution's intercollegiate football program."

Sherrill said the procedural violations outlined by the NCAA were not major problems.

"We take them all seriously but there are questions where you may not have followed procedures," Sherrill said. "Most of them (probes of other schools) have that part in there."

Sherrill said the NCAA did not want the allegations revealed but that A&M insisted on making them public.

"They asked us not to release it but because of the circumstances and how long it's been going on and because of the media process, we had to do it," Sherrill said.

The NCAA cited an unnamed coach who acted unethically and showed a "knowing and willful effort" to operate the football program contrary to NCAA requirements.

It also said that during interviews with NCAA enforcement officials on June 12, 1985, and Dec. 16, 1987, that coach gave false and misleading information about his involvement in and knowledge of an alleged violation.

"We'd like to thank the NCAA for expediting the processing of the official inquiry so that we can put this matter behind us. It's been hanging over our heads for a long time," A&M President Frank Vandiver said.

"I am pleased to note that no academic allegations are involved."

News of the accusations became public as the Aggies football team went through a spring practice.

"Myself, it will be easy to put in the back of my mind," senior fullback Matt Gurley said. "If we got put on probation, it would be on the down side."

"But you can't look at it like that because you have to think about playing next year."

Texas A&M released an 850-page report last year that told of players selling complimentary tickets in violation of NCAA rules.

Harvesters lose to Levelland

Pampa hosts Dumas today on home field

Pampa outhit Levelland in a District 1-4A baseball game Monday, but the Lobos delivered their hits in a more timely fashion to post a 6-3 win.

The victory left Levelland deadlocked with Hereford for the district lead, both with 5-1 records. Pampa is 2-4 in league play and 7-6 overall.

One of Levelland's hits was a solo homer by Isarel Diaz that broke a 1-1 tie and gave Levelland a 2-1 lead after four innings. Another timely hit was a two-run single by Paxton Payton in the sixth inning to give Levelland a 6-1 bulge.

A bases-loaded walk gave Levelland its first run in the third inning, but Pampa rallied to knot the score in the bottom of the first on an RBI-single by Chris Martinez.

After Diaz' homer, the Lobos plated two more runs in the fifth and two more in the sixth.

Pampa rallied in the sixth to score two runs on a double steal, with Brandon Knutson scoring, and a fielder's choice grounder by Matt Brock.

In the final inning, however, Levelland hurler Teddy Latham retired the side, striking out the first two Harvester hitters.

The Harvesters had seven hits, including a pair of singles by Knutson. Kerry Brown added a double while Troy Owens, Torrey Gardner, James Ward and Chris Martinez had one base hit each.

Levelland had two hits, including a double and single by Payton.

Ward started for the Harvesters and pitched five innings, giving up five hits while striking out six and walking eight. Brown struck out four and walked two in pitching the last two innings.

Ward took the loss in his first start as a varsity player.

Latham went the distance for the Lobos, giving up seven hits while striking out seven and walking four.

Pampa was charged with four errors while Levelland had six.

The Harvesters host Dumas at 4:30 p.m. today in another district contest. Dumas comes in with a 1-4 district mark.

In other district games Monday, Hereford topped Canyon 14-1 and Lubbock Dunbar won over Borger 10-1.

Anyone got a McGwire?

Baseball card collecting more popular than ever

DALLAS (AP)—With the opening of the 1988 major league baseball season, many sports fans believe collecting baseball cards is as irresistible as a promising rookie.

Baseball card sales for this season are breaking last year's record, astonishing even the hobby's most informed enthusiasts.

"Every year we expect the thing is going to level off, and every year we see significant gains," Richard White, vice president of Major League Baseball Properties, told the Dallas Times Herald.

White's company, based in New York City, licenses the official cards bought by 250,000 collectors nationwide.

Sales up 10 percent

Industry estimates place sales of pocket-size baseball cards at $250 million a year, up about 10 percent from the 1987 season.

Breaking into the majors in the 1988 season with a sleek new baseball card, a rookie card maker in the Dallas area is squaring off for a share of the 7 billion-plus cards sold every year in a market dominated by old-timers such as Fleer, Donruss and Topps Co.

"The big reason we got into this was because demand was not being satisfied," says Ann Flavin, owner of Optographics Corp., whose modern, high-tech plant in Grand Prairie can't print its Score cards fast enough to keep pace with orders.

Score has edge

Score has gained an edge among kids with its high-tech graphics as much as its attention to meticulous detail in the information on the back of each card. Action photographs of players are each bordered in one of six glossy colors. Quotes from each player's manager supplement lifetime player stats, features that only Score offers.

Topps — the market's largest and longest-established competitor — uses posed photographs, and its stats are less complete, enthusiasts say.

"Score's done so well this year because they've really done a quality product," says Dan Bird, whose new Dallas store, Baseball Cards Etc., was teeming with boys on pre-season Saturday.

Like major league owners buying and selling players in the off season, the kids who gathered were trading the rookie cards of their favorite players — the Athletics' Mark McGwire, and the Yankees' Don Mattingly.

Collections of Topps cards — team sets, all-star sets, all-time great players, the combinations are endless — date back to 1951. As a record of the history of America's favorite game, Topps has an appeal to serious collectors that newer players in the baseball card market can't rival.

Topps, which has made cards since after World War II, had no competition until Donruss and Fleer began card production in the early 1980s, after a U.S. Supreme Court decision opened the market to other manufacturers.

"I'm a Topps man," says Lloyd Sheffield, 50, a baseball card collector whose love for baseball extends to his black heritage and his favorite all-time player, Jackie Robinson. Robinson became the first black major league player when he signed on with the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1948.

For Sheffield, baseball card collecting "is a trip down nostalgia road." You remember all the people," he said.

For some aficionados, Score also represents a change in the hobby of baseball card collection — from a fun pastime to a profitable venture.

An autographed 1987 Mark McGwire card is valued at $14, and a Don Mattingly card in the 1984 Donruss collection can be bought for $90.

Mantle worth $6,500

Are the cards worth that kind of money? Card shop owner Bird regrets throwing out his 1952 Mickey Mantle card. Collectors widely believe that Topps' Mantle card — if one can be found — is worth $6,500.

Optimist signups continue

Nicklaus still a contender

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—It will be interesting to see who steps forward Thursday when the announcer on the first tee at the Augusta National Golf Club introduces Jack Nicklaus.

It could be the real Jack Nicklaus. Or it could be "some other guy, a guy I don't know," Nicklaus said before a practice round for the 52nd Masters.

"I enjoy playing golf like Jack Nicklaus," the 48-year-old Nicklaus said. "I do not enjoy playing golf like that other guy has for the last couple of years."

The other Nicklaus emerged as a result of what he called "a phasing back," reduction of his playing schedule to 10 events, perhaps less.

He calls himself "a ceremonial golfer," and chuckles at references to a new nickname, "Olden Bear."

But he bristles at suggestions he is no longer capable of winning.

"When you play golf 40 percent of the time and you're 48 years old and you've got a bunch of kids 25 playing 100 percent of time, you're not going to win much. That is just being very practical about it."

"I love playing golf. I'm not going to quit playing golf. I'll be part of the scene."

"And occasionally I'll be competitive. Like the '86 Masters. I remembered real quick what I needed to do when I got myself in contention. I'm not going to forget that."

"When I get to the major championships, when I step on the first tee, I'll be ready to give it a run," Nicklaus said.

"But that's not the number one priority in my career. My interests now lie basically with my golf course design business. I enjoy that."

The major championships — the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA, the big four tournaments around which he has built his unmatched record — still intrigue him.

But age and competing interests have reduced his capacity to add to his record collection of 18 titles in those four tournaments.

"That's just being realistic as relates to my abilities, my age, my desire to want to work at it," said Nicklaus, who has missed the cut in two of three tournaments this year and hasn't won since his nostalgic triumph in the 1986 Masters.

"I like nothing better than to walk out and win Masters or the U.S. Open. I try to have my body in shape to be able to do that. But my body will not take abuse for the length of time necessary for the practice I need."

"My mind won't take it either. My mind isn't interested in going to the practice tee. And you've got to do that," he said.

"I have to accept that my preparations will not allow me to play well all the time. But I can play well occasionally."

Despite all the negatives — age, lack of competition, relative lack of preparation, lack of victories over 24 months — two facts can't be ignored: this is the Masters and he is Jack Nicklaus.
