McPherson discusses DWI policies with police officers

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

The prosecutor responsible for trying virtually all drunken driving cases in Gray County said a meeting Tuesday with police officers might make him look more closely at cases filed in county court.

"A few of their questions and their statements will enable me to rethink my position on some things," County Attorney Bob McPherson said after meeting for about two hours with 17 members of the Pampa Police Officers Association.

The meeting, closed to the public, was prompted by a 12-part series of articles published by The Pampa News in March concerning the prosecution of drunken driving cases in Gray County. The series found that:

■ Roughly half of all drunken driving arrests made in Gray County are either dismissed or never filed in county court;

■ McPherson routinely dismisses cases against driver's with blood-alcohol levels up to .12 if they were cooperative when arrested. The legal intoxication limit in Texas is .10.

■ Other aspects of Texas driving while intoxicated laws aren't being followed in Gray County, including the purchase of videotape equipment for drunken driving arrests and mandatory driver's license suspensions for drivers who refuse to submit to an Intoxilyzer test on request.

■ The small size of the county jail plays a part in the way DWI cases are handled in Gray County.

McPherson and officers attending the meeting said it was a "first step" toward improving communication between the Police Department and the county attorney's office, even though no tangible changes were made.

"He's not going to change what he's doing; we're not going to change what we're doing, but hopefully, we'll have a better understanding of why he's doing what he's doing," Deputy Chief Ken Hall said after the meeting.

Officer Bryan Hedrick, president of the 24-member association, said the meeting should begin to open the lines of communication, and, in time, enable officers and the county prosecutor to work together.

"A lot of us learned a lot of things and Mr. McPherson learned a lot of things," Hedrick said.

Hedrick said concern over McPherson's dismissal of DWI cases above the legal limit prompted him to suggest a reaction test using the Intoxilyzer unit. County officials — including judges and prosecutors — would take a reaction test, then drink until they reached .10 before taking the test again to see how reaction time is dulled, Hedrick explained.

McPherson said after the meeting that he would be willing to participate in such a test.

Pampa Police Chief Robert Eberz said his main concern going into the meeting was that faulty department policies were causing the low prosecution of DWI cases. He said he learned that's not the case, but low prosecution is due to other factors.

Dukakis wins easily in Ohio and Indiana

By The Associated Press

Michael Dukakis, harvesting another pair of landslide primary victories, sounded ever more confident of his claim to the Democratic presidential nomination while Republican George Bush looked ahead to the fall and cautioned his supporters, "We've got a long way to go."

Jesse Jackson scored an expected victory Tuesday in the District of Columbia, but found himself slipping another 120 delegates behind Dukakis, who won handily in Ohio and Indiana.

His latest victories moved Dukakis from fewer than 600 delegates from the 2,081 he needed to clinch the nomination. He also moved more than 600 ahead of his only rival.

But Jackson gave no sign he was ready to end what he called a struggle "for the direction of our party and the soul of our nation." "All the way to California and New Jersey!" he said, referring to the two biggest states holding primaries on June 7.

There were 264 delegates at stake in the three primaries.

The latest Associated Press tally gave Dukakis 1,486 and Jackson 927.

In Ohio, with 99 percent of the precincts reporting, Dukakis had 860,200 or 63 percent, to 378,271 or 27 percent for Jackson.

In Indiana, with 94 percent of the precincts reporting, Dukakis had 414,064 or 70 percent to Jackson's 130,681 or 22 percent.

In the District of Columbia, final unofficial returns showed Jackson had 67,812 votes, or 80 percent, while Dukakis had 14,969, or 17 percent. Jackson captured 13 of the district's 16 Democratic convention delegates. Dukakis won 3.

On the Republican side, Bush had 645,849 or 81 percent of the Republican vote in Ohio with 99 percent of the precincts reporting; 342,573 or 83 percent in Indiana with 94 percent of the precincts reporting; and 5,620 for 89 percent in final unofficial returns in the District of Columbia, where he resides.

Jackson was seeking support today among House Democrats and then holding strategy sessions with aides before flying off to Nebraska, which holds its primary next Tuesday, as does West Virginia.

Democratic Party leaders tempered their euphoria over the latest signal that their nomination marathon was over with concern that Jackson's recent attacks on Dukakis could provide campaign ammunition for the Republicans in the fall.

"I would hope he wouldn't say anything that could be used against Mike in the general election," said Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas.

Riding high after a streak of primary victories that included Connecticut, Wisconsin, New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio, Dukakis said Tuesday night he thought it was "going to be difficult" for Jackson to deny him the nomination.

Concert choirs head to Anaheim

Sixty members of Pampa High School's concert choirs are to fly to Anaheim, Calif., today to compete in the prestigious All-American Choral Festival.

PHS Concert Choir, Concert Men's and Concert Women's are to each perform the three numbers prepared for University Interscholastic League competition in the festival on Saturday, said Fred Mays, PHS choir director. The choir will be given national ratings in the adjudication, he added.

Choral directors from California universities will judge the event, Mays said, including David Thorsen of Fullerton College, who had conducted a clinic for the Texas All-State Choir. At least five states will be represented at the event, he said.

Though competition will be difficult, the choir's trip will not be all work and no play. Also planned for the four-day excursion are visits to Disneyland, Universal Studios and Knott's Berry Farms. In addition, choir members will be bused to Los Angeles to eat at the Hard Rock Cafe there.

Choir members and 15 sponsors will arrive in Anaheim late tonight and will stay at the Howard Johnson's Hotel at Disneyland. They will return to Pampa late Sunday.

Pampa choirs travel to the California choral festival on the heels of bringing home several honors from the Greater Southwest Music Festival in Amarillo last weekend.

PHS's Concert Choir was named Outstanding Sightreading Choir at the Amarillo Festival and the Concert Men's Choir was named Outstanding Men's Choir. These two honors are in addition to the first divisions awarded to the Show Choir, Girls II and Mixed II choirs.

Pampa Middle School's choirs also made a fine showing at the Amarillo festival. PMS Concert Girls were named Outstanding Junior High Sightreading Girls Choir and the PMS Concert Boys Choir was named Outstanding Junior High Boys Choir. First divisions were awarded to Pampa Middle School Girls II, PMS Boys, and PMS Girls I choirs.

Twins head list of top 10 seniors at Pampa High School

A set of twins have emerged as the top two students in the Pampa High School Class of 1988.

Principal Oran Chappell released this year's Top 10 seniors Tuesday.

Donnie and Ronnie Berry, the sons of Ernest and Kathleen Berry, 605 Red Deer St., finished first and second in this year's class of 214.

Graduation is scheduled for 8 p.m., Friday, May 27.

Donnie Berry completed his high school career with a grade point average of 4.01, while his twin brother had a GPA of 3.98.

Chappell said higher rankings given to honors courses at the high school make a GPA of higher than 4.0 possible.

Donnie Berry participated in mixed choir, show choir and concert choir, where he served as bass section leader his senior year. He was also named to All-Region Choir the past three years, All-Area Choir in 1987 and 1988 and All-State Choir this year, earning top rankings at the University Interscholastic League solo and ensemble contest for the past three years. He also is a member of First Assembly of God Church and the National Honor Society and has served in the Student Council.

He plans to major in music education at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

Ronnie Berry also has participated in National Honor Society, concert choir and show choir during high school, and has been named to All-District, All-Region and All-Area choirs. Like his brother, he plans to attend Texas Tech, majoring in business in the field of accounting.

The remainder of the Top 10, in descending order:

Party members say it's a lean campaign ahead for Beau

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Rep. Beau Boulter will be running a mean-but-lean challenge to the deep-pockets campaign of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who has already amassed a formidable war chest and could spend up to $10 million on his quest for a fourth term, officials say.

According to quarterly election reports filed with the Federal Election Commission, Boulter had $17,874 cash on hand at the end of March, compared with $3,653,639 for Bentsen, a Democrat and Texas' senior senator.

Estimates vary on how much Bentsen will spend on his re-election bid, but officials of both parties agree his spending will outdistance Boulter's.

Bentsen, chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, is already far outpacing Boulter in spending and fund-raising with six months to go before the November general election.

According to FEC reports released this week covering the first 15 months of the election cycle, Bentsen spent just over $2 million en route to an easy defeat of primary opponent Joe Sullivan with 85 percent of the vote.

Boulter spent $357,363 to fend off a crowded primary field and wealthy run-off opponent Wes Gilbreath, who poured $770,609 into his campaign, FEC records show.

Bentsen had raised more than $5 million through the end of March, making him the most financially successful candidate for Congress, the FEC records show, while Boulter's campaign has taken in $365,713, putting him in 50th place among Senate hopefuls.

"Boulter will have to run a very smart campaign and do what he can to hang on to the vice president's coattails as he runs for the presidency," said Texas Republican Party Chairman George Strake.

"Bentsen has it to spend — he has unlimited personal wealth and a lot of political action committee support, and Boulter has no personal wealth and will find fund-raising very tough," said Strake, who estimates Bentsen's spending at $11 million to $12 million and Boulter's at $2 million.

Boulter spokesman Joe Fleming agreed the candidate will have to be chary with his campaign funds — a difficult proposition in a huge state with at least 20 separate television and radio markets — and will do his best to cling to the coattails of Republican presidential hopeful George Bush, who calls Houston home.

Boulter campaign manager Greg Graves said his budget is shaping up at around $3.5 million to $4 million, while Bentsen campaign director Jack Martin said he's looking at a budget of $7 million to $10 million.

A $10 million campaign would be twice the $5 million Bentsen spent in 1982 when he defeated James M. Collins with 58.6 percent of the vote, who spent an equal amount.

Tough economic times in Texas make fund-raising more difficult this year, but Bentsen, as an incumbent and chairman of the committee that writes tax law, is on the receiving end of generous PAC contributions, party officials say.

"Bentsen's been in a long time," Strake said. "A lot of the business community is very warm and cozy with him."

According to FEC documents, Bentsen had raked in $80,507 in PAC money in the first three months of 1988, along with $1.38 million in 1987, making him the No. 1 recipient of PAC money among congressional candidates through March 31, the FEC found.

Boulter's Senate campaign has received $10,150 in PAC money this year and had $50,011 in PAC contributions at the end of last year.

"Some elements go in favor of Lloyd Bentsen," said Tom Mason, a spokesman for the National Republican Senatorial Committee. "He's got a lot of money in the bank, sits on the most lucrative committee on the Hill ... you write tax policy — who's interested in tax policy? Everyone. He'll use that to great advantage."

To counter that, Boulter will have to run "a very lean, message-oriented campaign," Mason said. Bentsen will take nothing for granted, although he is probably the best known politician in Texas, party members and campaign officials said.

"It's not like Bentsen has got to raise his name ID," said Bob Slagle, chairman of the Texas Democratic Party. "He is the single most popular figure in the state, and widely respected."

While Martin says "it's not easy for anybody to raise money in Texas right now," he concedes Bentsen probably has it easier than other candidates.

Armed robbery suspects nabbed

WHEELER — Wheeler County grand jury members today are considering the details of an armed robbery near Shamrock, while two men charged in connection with the robbery remain in Wheeler County Jail.

Sheriff's Deputy Rick Walden said today that the robbery occurred Monday at a roadside rest stop 12 to 14 miles east of Shamrock on Interstate 40.

A traveler had gone into the restroom, Walden said, when a black man carrying a blue bag came up behind him and taped his hands and mouth with duct tape. The robber took the man's car keys and wallet containing more than $100 and was about to leave when another traveler entered the restroom, the deputy said.

"(The robber) had him turned against the wall, and the man said he thought he was about to be robbed when another man came in," Walden said. "He (the robber) ran out of the restroom and got into a small white car and left. There was another black man in the car."

A small white car was stopped near Groom by Department of Public Safety Trooper Gary Davis, Walden said. The two men inside were arrested and the vehicle searched, he said. Inside the car, officers found two sawed-off shotguns in blue bags, he said. The keys belonging to the robbery victim were also found in one of the bags, he said.

The two men were taken to Groom and arraigned on robbery charges, Walden said. The robbery victim and a witness were taken to Groom to identify the two men held there. "They successfully identified them as the two men involved in the robbery," Walden said.

The men were brought to Wheeler, where they were arraigned on charges of aggravated robbery and bond set at $25,000 each. They remained in Wheeler County Jail early today in lieu of bond.

Aggravated robbery charges have been filed against Lee Otha

Chavis, 28, no address given, and Anthony O'Neal Pommer, 25, of Norfolk, Va.

Walden said law enforcement officers believe Chavis committed the robbery, with Pommer acting as an accomplice. Chavis had given an address in Los Angeles, he said, "but we know he had been living out of Virginia for some time."

DPS Trooper Greg Eatmon of Groom said the Carson County district attorney will file two prohibited weapon charges against Chavis and Pommer that will be considered by the Carson County grand jury when it next meets. The charges arise from the two sawed-off shotguns found in the vehicle at the time of the arrests, he said.

"The No. 1 problem that surfaced tonight is 'Where are we going to put the drunks?'" Eberz said.

"Surprisingly enough," the chief added, McPherson's goals "are much in line with ours."

McPherson said he hoped the meeting gave officers a better understanding of his job and why he won't take some cases or treats certain defendants leniently.

He said he tried to explain to the officers the differences between an officer's job and that of a prosecutor.

"I don't want them to change their way of operating just because I might not file or prosecute a case," McPherson said.

Hedrick said the association has invited County Judge Carl Kennedy to speak next month to explain his position on DWIs.

Tiny device could help heart attack victims survive

HOUSTON (AP) — A small device used for the first time to save a heart transplant recipient's life will become a common emergency treatment for heart attack victims, a Texas Heart Institute surgeon predicts.

The device, pencil-shaped but smaller than a penny, is known as the Nimbus HEMOPUMP. It will be tested for 18 months and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration will have to authorize its use, officials say.

"I must say it's the most remarkable thing I've seen or experienced," Dr. O.H. Frazier, director of the institute's Cullen Cardiovascular Surgical Research Laboratories, said Tuesday. "A device this small to take over the function of the human heart is really incredible."

In its first human application, the device was inserted April 26 into the heart of a 62-year-old Colorado man. The patient, whose name was undisclosed, underwent a heart transplant earlier but was suffering from rejection and faced certain death, Frazier said.

"He's in the game," Frazier said. "He was out of the game Monday a week ago, totally out, and the only reason he's in it is because of the device. I say that with absolute certainty."

The pump is inserted through the femoral artery in the leg and is passed with a tube until it gets to the left ventricle, the heart's main pumping chamber.

There, spinning at 25,000 revolutions per minute, it can provide 100 percent of the blood flow to the body and enable the heart muscle to rest and heal. "The main thing is all other devices require the chest to be open ... major surgery," Frazier said. "This is placed in a simple incision."

Unlike an intra-aortic balloon pump now used to treat heart patients, the HEMOPUMP does not require a beating heart to function effectively, doctors said.

The device has been in testing for two years and the FDA is allowing testing at Texas Heart Institute for four patients. A second patient given the pump last week died, although Frazier said that patient suffered from complications not related to the pump.

"We think this is a major important adjunct to treatment of patients otherwise dying of heart failure," Frazier said, adding that he was skeptical of its success when he first saw it two years ago.

But he predicted that once testing is completed and the FDA authorizes its use, it will be a common operation for emergency rooms receiving heart attack victims.

"For heart failure, this is going to be the treatment of choice," Frazier said. "It's easily introduced and can be used in any hospital that performs open-heart surgery. I think it has far-reaching implications in the treatment of these patients with acute heart failure."

Frazier, who has been involved in cardiovascular field for 20 years, said one of the chief applications will be for heart attack victims, who have an 80 percent mortality rate. The device will allow doctors to "tap the healing power of the heart," he said.

"If you can just give it a rest, it will heal itself," Frazier said.

In the case of the Colorado man now recovering, the entire operation took 20 minutes, with 1 minute, 8 seconds of that required for the pump to be moved up the artery into the heart. Frazier said the man would not have been able to survive another open-heart operation.

The FDA has allowed its use for up to seven days. In the case of the Colorado man, he used it for two days before his transplanted heart was able to take over again, Frazier said.

Amnesty centers rev up for final day of yearlong application period

EL PASO (AP) — As the yearlong immigration amnesty marathon approaches its finish line at midnight tonight, officials are finding the last few hours uphill all the way.

To keep the queues of last-minute amnesty seekers comfortable Tuesday, entrepreneurs here and in Houston sold refreshments, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service rented three portable toilets to accommodate people camping overnight outside the legalization center.

The Houston legalization center is staying open during the last 24 hours of the amnesty application period to deal with crowds.

The Harlingen office has hired 10 extra workers recently, and the El Paso center is bringing in 10 people from the INS district office to handle crowds on the last day.

All 107 legalization centers nationwide are staying open until midnight, and anyone in line at that time will get a chance to file.

Houston appeared to have the busiest amnesty center in Texas on Tuesday, with an estimated 5,000 people trying to apply during the day, said Richard S. Rios, the center's director.

"Some of the applicants are free-enterprising, selling tacos, Cokes, salad, sandwiches," Rios said, joking that the INS approves of the entrepreneurs "as long as they are reporting that income."

As at the state's other legalization centers, employees in Houston were collecting applications and filing fees, and scheduling interviews in the fall.

"The lines will now move faster with this procedure, whereby we do not interview," said John Armistead, INS spokesman in Dallas.

Still, the long lines kept workers busy. "We really won't be conducting much other business until we regain consciousness next Monday," Rios said.

In Harlingen, a line about three blocks long awaited legalization officers when they opened the center's doors at 8 a.m. Tuesday.

"They were wrapped around the streets behind us," legalization officer Leroy Cranfill said.

A block-long line of campers swathed in blankets was waiting in line at 6 a.m. Tuesday when Tony Tejada opened up his Mini Donut van right in front of the El Paso legalization center. Pedro Reyes, the center's director, said he expected 1,000 people to apply Tuesday and again on Wednesday.

Things weren't nearly as busy in Lubbock, where Don Owens said his staff of nine was faring well. About 300 people were lined up when the office opened Tuesday morning, but less than 50 remained outside by noon, said Owens, the center's director.

He said the Lubbock office processed about 1,000 applications last week and expects to equal or exceed that number by midnight Wednesday.

Thousands of procrastinating amnesty applicants have descended on Texas' legalization centers in the program's last few weeks. Under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, aliens who have lived in the United States continuously since before 1982 are eligible for temporary residency and amnesty from deportation. They can apply for permanent residency with 18 months and eventually apply for citizenship.

The crowds of last-minute applicants spelled good business for food vendors like Tejada, who was selling sandwiches, doughnuts and ice cream from a truck.

"I was skeptical about this location at first, but it's turned out pretty well," Tejada said.

Mini Donut's main competition was Ed's In and Out, where Christina Garcia sold burritos, chips and sodas. She was reluctant to admit business was steady.

After the general amnesty deadline passes and only agricultural workers are applying, Ms. Garcia plans to drive her fast-food truck to the parking lots of clothing factories.

"We'll go to the Levi's factories — factory to factory," she said.

Race heats up in Lubbock on pari-mutuel wagering

LUBBOCK (AP) — The issue of local-option pari-mutuel wagering has gotten hotter than an illegal tip sheet, and residents say the outcome is likely to be a photo finish.

Unusually high absentee voting totals indicate heavy interest in the issue, although for approximately 40,000 Lubbock County voters who don't live in this West Texas city of 190,000, the racing question is the only item on the ballot.

"It's anybody's guess as to how it will go Saturday," said Steven Lemley, president of Lubbock Christian University and a pari-mutuel opponent.

Pari-mutuel proponents promise horseracing will be a boon to the city's economy, while opponents, including a number of ministers and community leaders, say legalized gambling will corrupt residents' morals.

Two counties, Lubbock and Dallas, will hold pari-mutuel local-option elections Saturday. Those two probably will be the last two counties in Texas to decide whether to allow pari-mutuel wagering in their areas, said Ricky Knox, executive director of the Texas Horse Racing Association.

Since Nov. 3, when voters statewide decided in favor of pari-mutuel betting, 51 counties have decided the local-option question, with all but six voting in favor of horseracing.

As the battle lines have been drawn, a number of ministers have urged their congregations to vote against pari-mutuel, and racing supporters have raised $31,000 to aid their effort.

The local newspaper hesitantly endorsed the measure, while Superintendent of Schools E.C. Leslie and County Judge Rod Shaw came out against pari-mutuel wagering.

A group calling itself Citizens Against Pari-Mutuel Gambling have run quarter-page newspaper ads citing statistics that gambling causes failed marriages and fosters organized crime. Television ads are to run later in the week, said Rev. Gene Glaeser, pastor of Broadway Church of Christ.

"Organized crime is a flea on that dog's back that we don't want," said Rev. Hayes Wicker, pastor of First Baptist Church.

Racing opponents also worry that having a racetrack will soil Lubbock's image as a town with family values.

But the pro-racing forces, calling themselves Lubbock Citizens for Economic Development, say Lubbock needs to build upon an already existing track, sanctioned by the American Quarter Horse Association, and network of horse breeders.

In November's statewide referendum, Lubbock County voted against pari-mutuel.

Company to cancel health insurance of smoking employees

DALLAS (AP) — A company is trying to snuff out its workers' smoking habits — at home and at work — by not paying for health insurance benefits.

Executives of Palm Harbor Homes, which is based here and has 11 plants nationwide, told employees they will lose company-paid health insurance benefits next April 1 if they don't quit smoking.

Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. spokesman Charles Sahner, whose company is Palm Harbor's insurance carrier, said he knew of no other firm that has started such an anti-smoking policy.

Herman said Palm Harbor will refuse to pay for health insurance for any employee who smokes.

Airlines are safer under deregulation

Whenever presidents don't want to take responsibility for hard decisions, they create a creature called the presidential commission. The latest sham, the President's Commission on Aviation Safety, issued its recommendations last month.

Every point on the list was predictable. The commission recommended tougher regulations on safety; more inspectors; surprise inspections; making the Federal Aviation Administration an independent government agency; and the creation of a "safety czar" to oversee the whole mess. Commission Chairman John M. Albertine said the "people want something done."

True enough. We all want safer airlines. But the question is how to do it: through a return to the over-regulated system that existed up until the late 1970s, or through further deregulation and privatization. Unfortunately, the commission opposed privatization. The least it could have done was to call for further study of the issue, because statistics show that our airlines have actually become safer under deregulation.

According to the FAA's Office of Aviation Safety, from 1971 to 1978, the period of regulation, 3,038 people died in commercial aviation accidents; while from 1979 to 1986, only 1,944 people died. That's a sharp 36.9 percent drop. The decline is even sharper when one considers that many more people were flying after deregulation. From 1971 to 1978, the fatality rate was 4.09 deaths per 100,000 flight hours; while from 1979 to 1986, after deregulation, the rate was only 2.08. That's a 49.1 percent drop.

Of course, many other factors contributed to the drop in fatalities. Airplanes are getting safer and airports are installing new equipment, etc. Yet the conclusion remains: Flying an airplane has become much safer during deregulation.

It therefore seems wise, contrary to the Presidential Commission's bad recommendations, to continue privatizing the airline system. Doing so would not only make flying cheaper, because private companies always provide cheaper services than government, but also safer. Here's what should be done.

1. Sell off the air-traffic control system. The current system depends on government financing to update air-tracking and air-control technology. That means political favoritism — pork barrel — dictates what districts get the latest equipment, leaving unfavored districts dangerously inadequate. A private system would rationally allocate new equipment where it's most needed.

2. Allow airports to charge higher fees for the busiest time slots. This would allow the market to determine when planes land, spreading landing times throughout the day. That would unsharpen airport traffic jams, reducing the risk of collision.

3. Put insurance companies in charge of airline safety. These companies must pay out millions of dollars whenever a plane crashes. They'll do a much more thorough job of making planes safe than do government jobholders.

More could be done, but that's a start. Privatized skies will be cheaper and safer skies.

Western culture must stay!

WASHINGTON — Let this be said for big Bill Bennett, the U.S. secretary of education: He never picks on little guys. He fights only in the heavyweight class. On April 18 he took on Stanford University, the Godzilla of higher education, and won by a knockout in the first round.

This was the story. In 1980 Stanford established a required course for freshman called Western Culture. The course was built around a core reading list of 15 significant works in Western philosophy and literature. The course, said Bennett, was "immensely popular with both faculty and students."

But in the spring of 1986, "a small but very vocal group of students" demanded that the course be abolished. Western culture, they charged, was a culture of racism, sexism, imperialism and elitism. Away with it! The administration began to wobble. The faculty named a "task force" to "evaluate" the situation.

Sure enough, the task force brought in a preliminary report recommending that Western Culture be replaced by a new melange called "Cultures, Ideas and Values" (CIV). Some of the 15 classic works of Western thought would be retained, but henceforth freshman would be required to read at least one book a quarter by "women, minorities and persons of color." They must address issues of race, gender and class.

Student and faculty activists at once rallied to the new banner. On Martin Luther King's birthday in 1987, students staged a rally. Jesse Jackson led them in chanting, "Hey, hey, ho, ho, Western Culture's got to go." Last spring, to make their point, members of the "Rainbow Agenda" forcefully occupied the office of President Donald Kennedy for five hours. No one was punished or expelled.

James J. Kilpatrick

Last fall a faculty senate subcommittee met to discuss the issue. Students disrupted the meeting, shouting, "Down with Western Culture, up with diversity." The idea, said a participant, was that the subcommittee "was getting a bit timid and we wanted them to be well aware of the dedication to changing the Western Culture program."

The subcommittee got the message. It forwarded the CIV plan to the senate. Proponents stepped up the pressure. The fight turned ugly. A faculty senate steering committee proposed amendments to CIV that would have restored some of the Western material. On March 31, a crowd of 200 angry supporters of CIV gathered outside the senate's meeting room: The weakening amendments were unacceptable. President Kennedy yielded peacefully, and the senate voted 39-4 to abolish the old and to ring in the new.

Said Bennett: "Stanford's decision was not a product of enlightened debate, but rather an unfortunate capitulation to a campaign of pressure politics and intimidation. ... Does anyone doubt that selecting works based on the ethnicity or gender of their authors trivializes the academic enterprise? Does anyone really doubt the political agenda underlying these provisions?"

Bennett looked ahead. Stanford, he predicted, will win fulsome praise for its "progressive" and "innovative" decision. Other universities, impressed by Stanford's lofty and enlightened example, also will minimize the values of Western culture. Tactics of intimidation, having succeeded so remarkably in Palo Alto, will be duplicated elsewhere. Defenders of the abandoned program will quietly subside. "But they know what they know, and others around the country know it too: that for a moment a great university was brought low by the very forces which modern universities came into being to oppose — ignorance, irrationality and intimidation."

Stanford's President Kennedy, reduced to the sputters and gurgles, has angrily denied Bennett's charges. The secretary, he says, was "either ill-informed or irresponsible." The debate over CIV was not political, he says, nor was it influenced by intimidation. Bennett has used his bully pulpit "to bully rather than engage the issues."

But in his speech at Stanford on April 18, Bennett directly "engaged the issues." He spoke eloquently of the university's role in transmitting the values of Western civilization. We must study and nurture the West, he said, because it is our culture, because it is fundamentally good, because it is a source of incomparable intellectual complexity and diversity in depth, and because of West is under attack.

Other cultures should be studied also — of course they should be studied! — but a thorough grounding in our own civilization has to come first. That's what mighty Stanford used to provide.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, May 4, the 125th day of 1988. There are 241 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On May 4, 1970, Ohio National Guardsmen opened fire on a crowd of anti-war protesters at Kent State University, killing four students and wounding nine others.

On this date: In 1626, Dutch explorer Peter Minuit landed on Manhattan Island, later buying it from Indians for $24 worth of trinkets.

In 1776, Rhode Island declared its freedom from England, two months before the Declaration of Independence was adopted.

In 1886, at Haymarket Square in Chicago, a labor demonstration for an eight-hour work day turned into a riot when a bomb exploded.

In 1916, Germany, responding to a demand from President Woodrow Wilson, agreed to limit its submarine warfare, thereby averting a diplomatic break with Washington.

In 1927, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences was founded.

A good man is hard to find

In the early radio and records era of down-home country music, a very popular song was, "A Good Man Is Hard to Find."

It's getting harder all the time. Recently Attorney General Ed Meese selected as his new deputy, John Shepherd. John Shepherd, a respected attorney in St. Louis, former president of the American Bar Association, had been fully investigated by the FBI in its customary background review. He was squeaky clean.

But then he was subjected to the X-ray eye of the media and nobody — but nobody — looks good in his X-ray.

It was learned that Mr. Shepherd had belonged to an all-male social club and an all-white country club. Immediately he was the target of a diatribe by the self-appointed custodians of "civil rights."

Mr. Shepherd, as other political appointees before him, might willingly have resigned from the clubs in question — but then —

Newshounds sniffing in the media morgue discovered that a former bookkeeper for Shepherd's law firm — when convicted of embezzlement — had claimed Shepherd had

Paul Harvey

"told her to write the checks to herself." She also testified that she'd "had an affair" with Shepherd.

Her accusations were denied; there was no evidence whatever to support them. But — as they say — you can't unring a bell.

Reluctantly, John Shepherd withdrew his name for consideration. He said, "My wife and I were not prepared for the pressures to which someone recommended for this position at this time would be subjected."

Attorney General Meese, withdrawing his nomination, said, "Regrettably, intense media attention on Mr. Shepherd's impending nomination has had a severe impact on him and his family."

The concessions now required of government appointees, including divestiture or delegation of financial holdings, have made it increasingly difficult for our most accomplished men to say yes to public service.

When an appointee's past is examined so hyper-critically that a 20-year-old indiscretion can disqualify a Supreme Court justice — soon nobody will be good enough.

Yet, while we scrutinize confirmable appointments with such due diligence, we continue to elect to public office politicians with jail records.

Nobody seems to notice the double-standard hypocrisy of stringent standards for lesser appointees and lesser scrutiny of elected politicians.

Campaigning politicians, seeking our nation's highest office, challenged about personal character flaws, have been allowed to turn such questions aside with, "Personal matters are not germane to the issue in this campaign."

But they are.

How crack helped a father kill his son

By CHUCK STONE

Angel dust ... cocaine ... crack ... crack ... heroin.

That fetid five are all part of a multi-billion dollar industrial dung-hill that murders buyers, enriches sellers and terrorizes our peace.

Recently, the dung-hill defiled my life with a number. Kenneth Sawyer, 53, became the 53rd murder suspect to surrender to me to be turned over to the police.

I've acted as an intermediary since October 1977, when a murder suspect, fearing brutality by Philadelphia's then infamous police force, turned himself in to me. So it wasn't an unusual step to take for Sawyer, who was wanted as a suspect in the murder of his drug-ravaged 29-year-old son, Michael.

Over the weekend, Sawyer had stayed with friends. On Monday morning, he walked into my office, accompanied by a security guard, and sat down.

His mild, almost meek, manner belied one's usual image of a murderer. A short, balding man with a graying mustache that seemed to beg for its life, he walked with an apologetic stoop. He could pass for a brown-skinned Mr. Peepers.

For years, he was a successful chef and caterer. But after four heart attacks and several seizures, Sawyer, who has a steel plate in his head from a Korean War wound, retired. He raised seven children. One became a junkie and turned his father's life into a nightmare.

"I'm ... I'm tired of running ... Absolute tired of running ... It's been going on so long ... I spent so much money getting that boy out of jail ... I tried to do everything for that boy ... I loved the hell out of him ... gave him money ... lost my car ... But he kept on asking for more money to buy drugs ... He was always smokin' cocaine in a pipe and drinkin' beer and wine with it ... I tried to avoid ..."

Sawyer's voice trailed off, uncertain what he had tried to avoid.

His live-in friend, Annette Jackson, a handsome, round-faced woman with soft caramel-colored skin, nodded.

Together, they described months of being terrorized by Michael.

"He would come in the house and demand money," the father, Kenneth, recalled in a sad voice. "He was always saying he would kill me, blow up his mother's house."

The threats were real. Michael already had served three and a half years in jail for armed robbery and harassing neighbors by shooting out their windows.

"We'd called the cops four and five times a day, and they would come and say there was nothing they could do," a bitter Annette recalled.

Easter Sunday, a day of resurrection, seemed an appropriate day for families to find peace among themselves.

"Annette asked me to let him have dinner with us," Sawyer said.

"I made an Easter bunny rabbit out of potato salad," a proud Annette boasted.

"Look where she got it from," shot back ex-chef Sawyer with a half chuckle. It was the first time he smiled that morning.

The truce only lasted two weeks, according to Sawyer's account:

During a pajama party that Annette gave for Sawyer's 12-year-old godchild and four of her schoolmates, a drug-crazed Michael forced his way into the house.

He began molesting the little girls, telling them in explicitly obscene words what he planned to do with them. He weaved erratically, then grabbed at a couple of them. Both began screaming hysterically.

Sawyer angrily confronted his son and demanded that he leave. Words and pushes were exchanged. A gun went off. Michael collapsed to the floor, dead.

Two days later, in my office, a detective handcuffed Sawyer. As Sawyer was leaving, he cradled Annette's face in his handcuffed hands and kissed her.

Tears glistened in her eyes. "I'll be all right," he said softly, then sighed as if he were heaving a big boulder off his chest. "I'm just relieved it's all over."

Who killed Michael Sawyer? The same No. 2 murderer of young black men. Drugs.

First lady won't give up interest in astrology

WASHINGTON (AP) — Disclosures that President Reagan and his wife consult astrologers have opened them to taunts from Congress and criticism from scientists, but the first lady isn't about to drop her longtime interest in stargazing, an aide says.

"She doesn't think that there's anything wrong with it. It doesn't control policy and it doesn't control their lives," Elaine Crispin, the first lady's press secretary, said Tuesday.

For the Reagans, it was the latest bit of gossip about their private lives to emerge from a recent spate of kiss-and-tell books. Former chief of staff Donald Reagan, forced from his job last year after clashing repeatedly with the first lady over the president's schedule, has reportedly written that Mrs. Reagan consulted astrologers to help arrange the president's activities.

The president's reaction to the uproar was quick.

"No policy or decision in my mind has ever been influenced by astrology," the president said Tuesday.

Reagan did not deny consulting astrologers, who make forecasts based on the belief that the heavenly bodies form patterns that can reveal a person's character or future.

Asked if astrology played a part in shaping his schedule, Reagan quipped, "You know I'm still looking for the fellows that tell me every day what I'm going to be doing."

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, after acknowledging the first couple's interest in astrology, said he believes his own horoscope "when it says I am destined to meet a beautiful woman and fall madly in love and get rich."

"It's all so silly," Mrs. Crispin said of the barrage of queries that inundated her desk. "Don't you read your horoscope?"

In response to reporters' queries, Fitzwater acknowledged Mrs. Reagan has had an interest in astrology "for some time," and that it was heightened by the March 30, 1981, assassination attempt against her husband.

"She was very concerned for her husband's welfare, and astrology has been a part of her concern in terms of his activities," he said.

Both he and Mrs. Crispin said the first lady had dealt with a friend involved in astrology who "was helpful to her" after the attempt on the president's life, but neither would reveal the friend's name.

The spokesman said that as far as he knew, Reagan's interest in astrology is limited to reading his horoscope.

Mrs. Crispin said the first lady "has talked to this person about his (Reagan's) safety and travel, but I don't know of any particular incident or example of schedule change made because of this."

"They both feel it's unfortunate and a distraction and hardly relevant to the business of government," Fitzwater said. However, Mrs. Crispin said Mrs. Reagan has "not lost her humor" now that her secret had been revealed.

Fitzwater said he expected the nation's astrologers to make extraordinary claims about their influence on the Reagans, and one — Joyce Jillson of Los Angeles — immediately spoke up. She claimed she had spent a lot of time at the White House and had played a role earlier in the selection of George Bush as vice president.

The White House said the Reagans did not know her. And Bush's office said, "We're not aware of anyone hiring this woman."

One group of scientists said it was dismayed that the president and his wife have an interest in what they termed "medieval superstition."

The Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal said dozens of tests in recent years have found "little, if any, evidence for astrological claims. Horoscopes have been shown under the most rigorous scientific analysis to fail completely in predicting future events."

On Capitol Hill, House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, was asked what he thought about the Reagans using astrologists. He replied with a grin: "It's all right with me. I'm glad he consults somebody."

Methodists use firmer terms

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A revised United Methodist hymnal includes portrayals of God as a feminine figure and casts mankind out in favor of people, but leaves a few old favorites unchanged.

The nation's second-largest Protestant denomination on Tuesday also adopted a new, conservative summary of doctrine that underscores the primacy of Scripture.

Delegates to the 9.6 million member denomination's governing conference overwhelmingly adopted the new hymnal that generally shifts to inclusive language for humans, such as using "All" for "men" and "people" for "mankind."

But members decided to retain masculine pronouns for God in the book's psalms, denying the request of several delegates to use gender-neutral nouns such as "God's" rather than "His."

The new hymnbook was extensively updated with nearly half its 625 songs fresh for Methodists — new compositions, ethnic folk hymns, spirituals and gospel songs, or imports from other denominations.

But old favorites and classics of their 18th century, hymn-writing founder, John Wesley, still occupy a prominent place, with "O For a Thousand Tongues to Sing" by his brother, Charles, leading off the hymn section.

The legislative body, whose 11-day meeting ends Friday, meets every four years to set the church's course for the next quadrennium.

Delegates overwhelmingly supported the new doctrinal summary, which replaces a 1972 version. It was described as reflecting a general swing to conservatism, attempting to stabilize beliefs against counter influences.

"Pluralism," or divergence, a hallmark of the previous, more flexible statement of doctrine, has been stricken from the new document.

"It gives us a clearer definition of who we are," said the Rev. Thomas A. Langford, a Duke University theologian. "It puts into sharper relief the marrow of our convictions."

Every home will receive AIDS pamphlet

WASHINGTON (AP) — An eight-page government AIDS pamphlet being mailed to every U.S. household is a straight-talking attempt to educate Americans about the deadly disease, including the role condoms can play in preventing its spread, the nation's health chief said today.

"The brochure lays out the facts of what everyone needs to know," Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen said in an interview.

"It's written in plain, easy, straightforward language that is at about the 12-to-13-year-old reading level," said Bowen. "It doesn't mince words, yet it is in good taste. It stresses proper behavior and it stresses values and responsibilities."

He said the letter-size booklet that will begin appearing in mailboxes May 26 seeks to emphasize how AIDS is and is not transmitted and "to get the message out that it is behavior that puts one at risk."

He added that the material was prepared under the guidance of a variety of federal officials, including Surgeon General C. Everett Koop.

Koop has been the administration's most visible spokesman on AIDS, or acquired immunity de-ciency syndrome, since issuing his initial 36-page report on the disease in October 1986 at President Reagan's request.

He has often run into opposition from administration officials outside the health department for his persistence in calling for the use of condoms by sexually active people not in monogamous relationships.

The main avenues of spreading the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, are through sexual contact, needles or syringes shared by drug abusers, infected blood or blood products, and from infected pregnant women to their offspring.

The chief victims of AIDS have been homosexual men and intravenous drug abusers. Health officials estimate that heterosexual contact is responsible for 4 percent of cases and that between 1 million and 1.5 million Americans have been exposed to the virus.

As of Jan. 25, 1988, AIDS had been diagnosed in 51,916 Americans, of whom more than half, or 28,965, have died since 1979, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control. No one is known to have recovered from AIDS.

Winooski tax heats up air war

WINOOSKI, Vt. (AP) — This innovative Yankee town, which once considered building a dome over itself to keep out the harsh Vermont winter, is trying to tax neighboring Burlington for its noisy use of Winooski's airspace.

The western Vermont town of about 6,300 people sits at the end of Burlington International Airport's runway, and its downtown is just off the airport's main approach.

Residents say the noise from helicopters, Vermont National Guard fighters and jets flying in and out of Vermont's largest city can be unbearable.

"They go right over our building," Alice Levesque said recently. "It's really an awful thing. They wouldn't do that to a herd of cows."

Winooski officials, saying the planes were invading their airspace, decided to tax Burlington. Burlington balked.

Winooski, contending that Burlington hadn't paid the taxes, then filed suit in Chittenden County Superior Court to collect on a bill of $90,000, plus interest.

"By flying that low, they have essentially confiscated the land that is below that air," said Dominique Casavant, a physics professor and former Winooski selectman. The airport noise depresses land values, Casavant said.

"Yes, it is unusual ... (but) this is not the first time Winooski has set precedent," Casavant said.

In 1979, a dome to cover the town was proposed to save energy and ward off winter. The proposal was the subject of an international symposium and federal money was requested to study it, but the project never got out of the planning stages.

Officials argue that they aren't taxing the planes, but the space they use when they land and take off.

"Property taxes are not novel," said Winooski City Manager Brendan Keleher. "Property taxes are our business."

Burlington has dismissed the airspace tax, although Bernard Sanders, the city's outspoken Socialist mayor, applauded Winooski for its imagination.

"As somebody who is interested in alternatives to the property tax, I have to congratulate our friends in the city of Winooski," Sanders said. "It's an interesting concept, but not terribly practical."

Landowners have sued over airspace rights in the past, but experts said they cannot recall a case where one city sued another to collect taxes for airspace.

Walter Hellerstein, a University of Georgia law professor and tax expert, said he had not seen the suit but called the idea behind it "bizarre."

"It seems to me, it would be as if the state of Iowa were trying to tax the city of San Francisco," Hellerstein said, explaining that a plane might fly over the Midwestern state on its way to the West Coast.

But Peter Teachout, a professor at Vermont Law School in South Royalton, said the lawsuit is not so far-fetched, even if it presents some practical problems.

Teachout said the city faces the difficulty of placing a monetary value on the airspace.

Pd. Pol. Adv. by Dr. Fred H. Simmons, 1820 Fir, Pampa, Texas, 79065.

I HIGHLY RECOMMEND JOE VANZANDT for re-election to place 5, PAMPA ISD.

Joe is a hard worker, of high moral character and a good thinker.

Recently, Joe headed up a group that traveled to Austin to meet with the Texas Education Agency in the interest of our School District to obtain a grant to offset our problems caused by the Celanese explosion.

This meeting has been successful and will save the tax payers of PISD 2 million dollars, and will avoid a large tax increase to raise that amount of additional local tax dollars.

Joe knows how to effectively communicate with elected officials on matters concerning progressive educational programs for our community.

He understands the needs of PISD, yet realizes the difficulties of getting bad legislation changed and state mandates funded by the state. Joe has expressed his views on numerous occasions.

Church intellectuals will mediate Polish strikes

GDANSK, Poland (AP)—Communist authorities agreed to let Catholic intellectuals mediate in two major strikes, a Solidarity activist said today after Lech Walesa warned of "a bloody revolution" if workers don't get a say in reform.

At the huge Lenin shipyard where Solidarity was born in 1980, workers in the third day of an occupation strike backed down from a demand that the outlawed independent labor federation be legalized nationwide.

Walesa, a Solidarity founder, said strike leaders decided to limit the demand to Solidarity's shipyard branch because they felt they had a greater chance of success.

"There will be many different strikes around the country, even if they crush the shipyard, we will do it," Walesa told strikers after returning to the shipyard today. "The only reason the entire country is not on strike is that it is too early."

In Warsaw, Solidarity activist Henryk Wujec said authorities had agreed to permit a mediation role for five independent intellectuals linked with the Roman Catholic Church, which claims 94 percent of Poles as followers.

He said the five had split into two groups, one leaving for the Lenin steelworks in the Krakow suburb of Nowa Huta, the other for the 12,000-worker shipyard in this Baltic port.

The five included Andrzej Stelmachowski, chairman of the Warsaw Catholic Intellectuals Club. His wife said he left today at the request of church authorities for the Nowa Huta steelworks, now in the ninth day of a strike.

At church headquarters in Warsaw, a secretary said a meeting was in progress and no one could comment, but there would be an announcement later.

The mood was subdued in Gdansk this morning. There was no heavy police presence as had been the case Tuesday night.

About 3,000 workers spent the night in the yard and during the day their numbers rose to 7,000, said strike committee chairman Alojzy Szablewski.

Like the shipyard workers, the 15,000 striking steelworkers in Nowa Huta are demanding higher wages, an independent union, reinstatement of fired union activists and release of political prisoners.

Chief government spokesman Jerzy Urban told a Warsaw news conference Tuesday that legalizing Solidarity "is not a question that can be an object of negotiations ... It is not negotiable." Communist authorities crushed the movement with martial law in December 1981.

However, the 44-year-old electrician also said Zdzislaw Sadowski, the deputy prime minister and architect of the government's reform program, "is trying to do something. Let him talk to us and we can do it together."

Police: Israeli soldiers storm guerrillas near Syrian positions

RASHAYA, Lebanon (AP)—Israeli troops led by tanks and backed by heavy artillery fire stormed pro-Iranian guerrilla bases close to Syrian lines in southeast Lebanon early today, police reported.

A Lebanese police spokesman said fighters of the radical Shiite Moslem Hezbollah and militants of the Syrian-backed Shiite Amal movement fired "several rocket-propelled grenades at the advancing Israeli tanks, but no hits were independently reported." No casualties were immediately reported.

The clash was the first reported since the Israelis crossed north of their self-designated border "security zone" Monday night to search for guerrillas who have staged 12 raids into Israel since November. Two Israeli soldiers and five Arab guerrillas were killed in the last two infiltrations last week.

There were no reports of Israeli soldiers closing in on any Syrian positions in the Bekaa Valley. But a Syrian officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said today: "We're ready to confront them any time. Syrian forces in the Bekaa have been on maximum alert since yesterday."

An Israeli soldier patrols the road leading to the Lebanese village of Ein-Ata Tuesday.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel said on Tuesday he did not expect the operation to provoke a confrontation with Syria, Israel's staunchest enemy. The Israeli operation in Lebanon is its largest in two years.

Israeli howitzer batteries pounded bases of Hezbollah, or Party of God, as tanks and armored personnel carriers moved into the hills overlooking Maydoun and Ein-el-Tineh. The two villages are 10 miles north of Marjayoun, headquarters of Israel's militia ally, the South Lebanon Army.

Security sources in south Lebanon reported that the Israelis sent two more mechanized battalions into the area during the night, doubling the size of the Israeli invading force to about 2,500 troops.

Israeli officials have said they sent only a few hundred soldiers north of its security zone, a six- to 10-mile-wide strip of land in south Lebanon. Maydoun and Ein-el-Tineh are nine miles west of four villages the Israelis sealed off on Tuesday with helicopter-borne troops in a dragnet for Palestinian guerrillas and their allies.

Police said the Israelis fired "hells" at a rate of 13 a minute" as their tanks stormed Hezbollah bases in the hills, only four miles west of Syrian lines in the Bekaa Valley town of Mashghara.

Timor Goksel, spokesman for the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, said Israeli gunners fired more than 1,000 shells during the night. Most of the shelling was by artillery batteries around Marjayoun.

The Lebanese police spokesman, who cannot be identified under standing regulations, said Hezbollah fighters withdrew from the hills to Maydoun and Ein-el-Tineh after the Israelis stormed their positions at 4:30 a.m. (10:30 p.m. EDT Tuesday).

Security sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, earlier reported that an Israeli helicopter gunship clashed with a group of gunmen near Maydoun on Tuesday. They gave no details.

Israeli officials on Tuesday stressed that the operation was limited and likely to be completed by tonight.

One Israeli Cabinet minister said the operation was aimed at showing Palestinians in the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank that their 5-month-old uprising has not impaired the army's ability to act in other areas.

At least 180 Arabs have been killed since the unrest began there on Dec. 8. An Israeli soldier and a Jewish teen-age settler also have been slain. The Arab death toll includes three Palestinians shot Tuesday in clashes with the army.

A general strike today shut down the occupied lands and east Jerusalem.

Security sources in Lebanon said that one of the battalions sent in by the Israelis during the night moved up a highway toward the Christian town of Jezzine, the northern tip of a position held by the South Lebanon Army that juts into south Lebanon from the Israeli security zone.

The sources said the other battalion headed for the Bekaa, east of Jezzine.

Shortly after today's advance, 500 Israeli soldiers began withdrawing from five Bekaa villages sealed off Tuesday and searched for Palestinian guerrillas.

Marcos can't return for mother's funeral

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—The mother of Ferdinand Marcos died today but President Corason Aquino said the exiled president will not be allowed to return for the funeral because he remains a threat to national security.

In Hawaii, Marcos issued a statement saying he was shocked at the death of his mother. Marcos spokesman Gemmo Trinidad told reporters that Marcos said he will keep trying to return to the Philippines "but won't violate any laws to go back."

Marcos said in his statement that he would "exhaust all possibilities that may be available to us to return to our motherland, to help save her from the threatened communist takeover or a possible civil war."

Dr. Sergio Brillantes, director of Veterans Memorial Medical Center, said 95-year-old Josefa Edralin-Marcos suffered cardiac arrest at noon (midnight Tuesday EDT) and was pronounced dead 20 minutes later.

In a nationally televised address, Mrs. Aquino expressed condolences to the Marcos family, but said: "After careful assessment in consultation with the leadership of both chambers of Congress and the Cabinet committee, I regret that considerations of national welfare, which are above the individual interest, forbid us from allowing the former president to return."

Mrs. Aquino said respect for parents was an important value in Filipino society. But she added, "There are other values involving national stability and the common good of our people, whose primacy I am duty-bound to uphold."

Hundreds of Marcos supporters, many of them weeping, gathered outside the hospital where Mrs. Edralin-Marcos died. Many of them shouted anti-Aquino slogans and called for a revolution.

Mrs. Edralin-Marcos died as Mrs. Aquino met with Cabinet members to consider a request by Mrs. Edralin-Marcos, made in a letter delivered to the presidential palace Tuesday, to allow her son to return for a final visit.

The meeting broke up after Mrs. Edralin-Marcos died. National Security adviser Emmanuel Soriano, who attended the meeting, said Mrs. Aquino consulted congressional

Pending legislation would ban any U.S. investment in South Africa

WASHINGTON (AP)—Legislation to end all U.S. investment in white-dominated South Africa and impose a near-total embargo on exports and imports is heading for a partisan battle on the House floor.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee gave its approval to the disinvestment bill on Tuesday, voting 27-14. Action by the full House is expected to be scheduled soon.

The Democratic-controlled committee acted after voting down repeated attempts by Republicans to dilute the measure's impact.

The panel also approved by voice vote separate legislation urging and authorizing President Reagan to impose economic sanctions against the government of Ethiopia for alleged widespread and serious human rights violations, including the diversion of international starvation relief to the Ethiopian armed forces.

Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., chairman of the panel's African affairs subcommittee, said ending U.S. investment in South Africa and imposing a two-way embargo on most trade will not cause South Africa's white minority government to end its apartheid policies of racial separation.

"Sanctions will not of themselves bring down apartheid," Wolpe said.

But he said they will raise the cost to the white minority regime of maintaining South Africa as "one vast slave plantation" in which whites profit from the exploitation of blacks.

"This bill is the only non-violent means at our disposal, the least costly means of averting a terrible tragedy in South Africa," Wolpe said.

Opponents of the legislation said it will hurt the black South Africans it is designed to help. They predicted the loss of thousands of jobs not only for blacks in South Africa but also for Americans whose companies are hurt by the impact of the sanctions.

"This is not a policy, this is scorched earth," said Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., contending the bill will cost 2 million jobs for South African blacks by the year 2000.

Supporters of sanctions acknowledged that some American jobs might well be lost but said that is of secondary importance in the battle against apartheid.

Three posters, two by students of Grandview-Hopkins Elementary and another from Austin Elementary, were chosen from 520 local entries to compete in the regional Conservation Poster Contest in Temple.

Seven elementary schools from this area, 520 students and 31 classrooms, competed at a district level in the annual poster contest. Three district winners are as follows: 1st place - Ken Weinheimer, Grandview-Hopkins, 4th grade; 2nd place - Marissa Grabato, Austin Elementary, 5th grade; and 3rd place - Lora Carlisle, Grandview-Hopkins, 6th grade.

Study: Prisoners spend less time behind bars

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Murderers, rapists and other criminals received lighter sentences and served less time behind bars in 1987, according to a study by the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles.

The average amount of time served by 32,508 inmates who were released last year from the Texas Department of Corrections was one year, seven months and 17 days, according to the board's study obtained by the Houston Chronicle.

"This parole release program is making a mockery of the criminal justice system," said Lisette McSoud, executive director of Associated Texans Against Crime. "We are letting these criminals out at record rates. It has reached a point where you can commit a crime in Texas and not get the punishment you deserve."

Another study shows that in 1987 the parole approval rate reached an all-time high of 80 percent last September. The rate for February, the most recent month for which figures were available, was 70 percent.

Those inmates released in 1987 after serving time for homicide convictions had an average prison stay of four years and six months, while on the other end of the scale those inmates serving felony traffic convictions spent an average of seven months behind bars.

Other crimes and the average amount of prison time include: kidnapping, three years, four months; sexual assault, three years, seven months; robbery, three years, four months; assault, one year, four months; burglary, one year, six months; vehicle theft, one year, one month; forgery, one year, one month; fraud, 11 months; drug crimes, one year; and weapon offenses, one year, three months.

"I'm mortified that anyone who committed rape would be paroled," Ms. McSoud said. "But I'm even more mortified that a rapist on the average will serve less than four years in prison. That's really scary."

Ms. McSoud said Gov. Bill Clements and the Legislature should be accountable for the state's prison problems.

Clements' general counsel and corrections adviser, Rider Scott, said: "These numbers don't surprise me. It has reached a point where a two-year sentence usually means three months in prison and a five-year sentence is really seven months."

The parole study also indicates that the average sentence assessed all convicted felons in 1987 was seven years and two months, down from an average of nine years and two months in 1985.

The lighter sentences and shorter prison stays are occurring despite Clements' 1986 campaign promises to keep convicted felons locked up longer and to modify early-release laws.

Attorney General: Student government is not subject to open meetings law

AUSTIN (AP) — Student government groups do not fall under the Texas Open Meetings Act, the state attorney general's office has determined.

State Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, had sought an opinion on behalf of Pan American University at Edinburg's student newspaper.

The weekly The Pan American has been at odds with the Student Government Association over closed "executive sessions" and the advance posting of agendas.

The Open Meetings Act requires governmental bodies to post advance notice of meetings, list topics to be discussed and limits the circumstances under which closed sessions may be held. Jennifer Riggs of the attorney general's office said a new ruling is not needed because the question was covered in a 1976 opinion concerning the Texas Tech University Athletic Council, a faculty group.

Hinojosa, however, said the attorney general's office did not address the question of student government. He said he is considering sponsoring legislation to bring student governments under the state law.

The Pan American editor Cindie Powell said the paper will lobby for the legislation.

Incoming student government president Robert Alvarez said, "I'm glad we don't fall under it, but we do plan to follow as closely as possible with the spirit of the act."

Food

Orange, plum, lime and nectarine slices, grapes and bite-size pieces of pineapple are combined with scoops of honeydew and cantaloupe for a cooling summer salad.

Anise, fruit flavors harmonize in salad

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

I love the light licorice taste of anise in cookies and bread. With this recipe, reader Cyndi Veth introduced me to anise with fruit. It's a match made in heaven.

To make the spice bag, cut an 8-inch square from several layers of cheesecloth. Place the aniseed in the center. Bring the edges together and tie with string. By steeping the anise bag in the syrup as you would a tea bag, you get the delicate, aromatic flavor without seeds to mar the look of the fruit bowl.

MARINATED FRUIT BOWL

- 2 tablespoons aniseed
- 1 cup water
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1/2 of a small pineapple
- 1/2 of a small honeydew melon
- 1/2 of a small cantaloupe
- 1 orange, peeled, sliced, and quartered
- 1 nectarine, cut into thin wedges
- 1 plum, cut into thin wedges

- 1/2 cup seedless red or green grapes
- 1/2 of a lime, sliced

Tie aniseed in a bag made of several layers of cheesecloth. For marinade, in a small saucepan combine the aniseed bag, water, sugar and lemon juice. Bring to boiling, stirring until sugar dissolves. Cook, uncovered, over medium heat for 5 to 7 minutes or until golden and the consistency of a thin syrup (should have about 1 cup syrup). Do not remove bag. Cool syrup slightly.

Wash and peel pineapple; remove eyes and core. Cut fruit into bite-size pieces. With a melon baller, scoop balls from honeydew melon and cantaloupe.

In a 3- or 4-quart bowl combine fruits (should have about 9 cups total). Add syrup; toss until fruit is well coated. Marinate, covered, in the refrigerator several hours or overnight, stirring occasionally. Remove aniseed bag. Serve on lettuce-lined plates or in sherbet dishes. Makes 10 servings.

Fix baked potatoes in microwave oven

By NANCY BYAL

Food Editor

Baked potatoes are one of the hottest foods around. America's favorite toppings are margarine or butter, sour cream and cheese. This recipe gives them to you all at once.

To cook the potatoes in your microwave, scrub and prick potatoes but do not rub with shortening. Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) 17 to 20 minutes or until tender, rearranging once.

- ### BAKED POTATOES WITH CHEF'S CHEESE SAUCE
- 5 or 6 large baking potatoes
 - Shortening (optional)
 - 1 cup shredded sharp process American cheese

- (4 ounces)
- 1/2 cup dairy sour cream
- 1/4 cup margarine or butter, softened

2 tablespoons sliced green onion

Scrub potatoes with a brush. For soft skins, rub potatoes with shortening. Prick potatoes with a fork. Bake in a 425-degree oven 40 to 60 minutes or until tender.

For sauce, combine cheese, sour cream, margarine and onion. Dollop on warm potatoes. Makes 5 or 6 servings.

Heed these safety tips for storing dairy foods

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

GRADE-A QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT DAIRY FOOD SAFETY

As the temperature rises, so does concern about handling foods safely. Here are some dos and don'ts for storing milk, cheese and other dairy products.

- What should I do with the chunk of Parmesan cheese I just found in the back of my refrigerator? It's been there at least two months.

Start grating and serve the cheese with pasta for dinner tonight. Very hard cheeses such as Parmesan or Romano keep in the refrigerator almost indefinitely if they are very tightly wrapped. Hard cheese (cheddar, Monterey Jack and Swiss) will keep under these conditions for a month or more. But keep a closer eye on soft cheeses such as cream or Brie; they should be kept for only two to three weeks.

- What about a piece of cheese with a little mold on it? The cheese is perfectly safe. In fact, the mold you see is probably the same type of "good mold" used to make your cheese in the first place. Just trim off a half inch of cheese on all sides of the mold before you use it.
- Can I use sour cream with little dots of mold on it? Throw it away. On a hard surface, as on most cheeses, a little mold can be easily cut away. But in cartons of soft dairy foods such as sour cream, yogurt, and cottage cheese, little spots of mold on the top usually mean there is mold present throughout the food. Sour cream will keep three to four weeks when properly stored in a 40-degree refrigerator.

- Can I leave butter out at room temperature? Store tightly wrapped butter, margarine and blends in the refrigerator for two to four weeks. Because they are high in fat, they're susceptible to oxidation, which causes spoilage. Refrigeration slows oxidation. If you leave butter out overnight, it should be safe, but its shelf life will be shorter.
- When I opened a carton of milk this morning, it had a funny, sour smell. Is it OK? Check the top of your milk carton for the "Sell by" date. Most milk cartons are stamped with this date, which indicates to your grocer how long the milk can safely stay in the dairy case. If the milk smells sour and is beyond the "Sell by" date, pour it down the drain. If the milk smells sour before that date, it may have picked up odors in the refrigerator or have been allowed to stand on the table too long at mealtime. Use your best judgment on whether or not to use the milk. A distinctly sour smell means that the milk is bad and should be thrown out.

- The electricity in my house went off during the night, leaving my refrigerator without power. Are the dairy foods inside still safe? Normally, dairy foods are safe inside an unopened refrigerator for four to six hours in a power failure. If the electricity was off for eight hours or more it's best to toss the foods. If there's a delay in getting the power back on, you can add block ice to the refrigerator to keep it cool. Don't open the door unless absolutely necessary or the cool air will escape.

Pasta dish tastes like a chili dog

This easy-to-assemble main dish tastes like a chili dog, but the pasta takes the place of the hot dog bun. There's no need to pre-cook the pasta shells.

MEXICAN MANICOTTI

- 10 frankfurters (1 pound)
- 10 manicotti shells
- 1/2 cup boiling water
- Two 15-ounce cans chili with beans
- 1 cup taco sauce
- 1 cup shredded Monterey Jack or cheddar cheese (4 ounces)

Place 1 frankfurter in each uncooked manicotti shell. Place the filled shells, so they are not touching, in a 12-by-7 1/2-by-2-inch baking dish. Slowly pour boiling water into the dish around the entire inside edge. Stir together chili and taco sauce. Spoon on top of the filled shells. Sprinkle with cheese. Cover tightly with foil. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 60 to 65 minutes or until shells are done. Let stand, covered, for 10 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Supper sandwich loaf is easy meal to make

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Summer days are for loafing. Here's a supper sandwich loaf that feeds the gang but lets you take it easy, too. You can use a 12 1/2-ounce can of boneless skinless pink salmon instead of the chicken, if you like. Be sure to fill only every other pocket with the filling mixture so the sandwiches cut apart neatly.

CHICKEN-SALAD SANDWICH LOAF

- Two 6 1/2-ounce cans chunk-style chicken
- 1/3 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
- 1/4 cup bacon and tomato or sour cream and bacon salad dressing
- One 6-ounce package shredded Swiss cheese (1 1/2 cups)
- 1 small tomato, chopped

- One 1-pound loaf unsliced pumpernickel or rye bread
- Leaf lettuce

Drain and flake chicken. In a medium mixing bowl stir together mayonnaise and salad dressing. Add chicken, cheese and tomato. Toss lightly to mix.

To assemble, cut bread into 1/2-inch-thick slices by cutting from the top to, but not through, the bottom, forming pockets. Line the first pocket with lettuce; then line every other pocket. Spoon chicken into lettuce-lined pockets. To serve, cut into sandwiches by cutting apart unfilled pockets. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Ostomy association provides members courage, support

DEAR ABBY: In a recent letter dealing with people who have a hearing problem but refuse to wear a hearing aid, you wrote: "A physical impairment of any kind is nothing to be ashamed of." That message should be communicated to the hundreds of thousands of people who are not members of the United Ostomy Association where they can get support and information about the problems they face. There are persons — of all ages — who have a "stoma" (artificial opening) to eliminate the waste products of the body. The surgical procedure is called "colostomy" or "ileostomy."

There are an estimated 1 1/2 million "ostomates" in the United States, but only 50,000 are members of the United Ostomy Association. Why? Because most people who have had that kind of surgery are too embarrassed to discuss it.

Abby, meeting with others who share a common problem can give encouragement and support. Bearing it alone isolates, and makes for self-pity.

B.W. HOLMES,
ESCONDIDO, CALIF.

DEAR B.W.: Right on! I have friends of all ages who are members of this wonderful organization. I recommend it highly. Those interested may write to the United Ostomy Association, 36 Executive Park, Suite 120, Irvine, Calif. 92714. This is a non-profit organization, so please send a self-addressed, stamped (25 cents) envelope.

DEAR ABBY: A short time ago you suggested that people take old, unused clothing to the Goodwill after cleaning out their closets. May I make another suggestion? If the clothing is really old, you might consider calling your local community theater group. Old, donated clothing forms the basis of its costume department.

According to Mary Alden, volunteer costumer for the Lakeshore Theater in White Bear Lake, Minn., the types of things they really need are formal wear, men's suits, uniforms, boots and hats. Also costume jewelry, and accessories such as parasols, fans, feather boas, lace and other types of trim, a any old apparel in good condition that dates back 40 years or more.

Those lonely people who write to you might also consider their community theaters when donating their talents. There are hundreds of jobs that need to be done other than acting, and never enough hands at most theaters to do them. Any retired carpenters? Painters? Artists?

Most people associated with the theater are relaxed, friendly, congenial and great fun.

MARGARET FOX,
WHITE BEAR LAKE, MINN.

DEAR MARGARET: What a great idea. There's no business like show business. (Unless it's monkey business.)

DEAR ABBY: You have had several letters recently from people who are fed up with receiving overdue notices and nasty letters from service companies. You say that most billings these days are handled by computers, which are sorely lacking in common sense.

My trash collecting service uses computer billing, and what its computer lacks in common sense, it makes up in a sense of humor. After I missed one payment, my second bill read: "Hello. I am a computer. Your account is past due. If you don't pay soon, I will tell a human."

That kind of message will get better results than one that puts me on the defensive.

Snoring may be caused by sleep apnea

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Tired of staying up all night listening to your spouse snore?

That snore may signal a condition that's more than just annoying, according to researchers at the National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine here. He or she may be one of the 2 million Americans suffering from sleep apnea, which often goes unrecognized.

People with this disorder may repeatedly stop breathing during sleep for up to a minute. This interruption of restful sleep results in excessive sleepiness, which could cause a disruption in personal life, loss of a job and can even put the victim at risk of injury.

Typical sleep apnea victims are middle-aged, overweight men. However, people of any sex or weight group may be afflicted.

Mavs take lead over Rockets

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The Dallas Mavericks ended one streak and kept another streak alive all in one game of their NBA first round playoff series against the Houston Rockets.

Roy Tarpley scored 17 points, six in the critical final 3:45 of the game, leading the Mavericks to a 93-92 victory and a 2-1 lead Tuesday night in their best-of-five game first round series.

The victory ended Dallas' string of five consecutive road losses in the playoffs and gave the Mavericks their third straight victory on Houston's home court dating back to the regular season.

Tarpley led the charge in the tense closing minutes, hitting the basket that put the Mavericks ahead to stay with 3:45 to play. He contributed a game-high 13 rebounds.

"I never thought I'd be playing as well as I've played," Tarpley said. "I hang out with (teammate Mark) Aguirre and he tells me he needs a power forward to take the pressure off him. That's what I try to do."

The Mavericks, who fizzled in the first round last season against Seattle, could wrap up the series Thursday night in The Summit. Tip-off is at 7 p.m. CDT.

A fifth game, if necessary, would return to Dallas Saturday.

"We feel we have the momentum now," Tarpley said. "We didn't make the big plays Saturday (when Houston won 119-108) but we did today. The pressure is on them."

The Rockets rallied behind the 35 points and 12 rebounds by Akeem Olajuwon, who took the final shot of the game that bounced off the rim.

The Rockets trailed 53-45 at the half but rallied in the third period and led 77-73 going into the final quarter.

The Mavericks tied the score four times in the fourth quarter and then took the lead for good on Tarpley's tip in with 3:45 left in the game.

"We're not in control of anything, we still have a difficult game to play," Mavericks coach John MacLeod said. "This only means we are up 2-1."

The Rockets got the shot they wanted in the closing seconds when Rodney McCray grabbed the ball from Rolando Blackman and the Rockets called a time out with 12 seconds to play.

Olajuwon took a 15-foot jumper for the final shot of the game.

"Time was running out and it was a pressure shot," Olajuwon said. "I've made that shot before. I just missed it."

Tarpley's defense also played a part in the final score. He was guarding Olajuwon for the final shot. "I just wanted to jump as high as I could and contest it," Tarpley said.

Houston guard Sleepy Floyd scored 42 points in Houston's victory on Saturday but the Mavericks shut him down with 10 points.

"We just didn't make the outside shots tonight," Rockets coach Bill Fitch said. "They really plugged up the driving lanes."

Mark Aguirre, far off his regular-season scoring average of 25.1 in the first two games, scored 12 of his 14 points in the first half for the Mavericks.

Aguirre was on the bench for the final crucial moments. MacLeod elected to go with a big lineup of Tarpley, Sam Perkins and James Donaldson.

"Their awesome rebounding caused us to make some substitutions," MacLeod said. "Our concern at the time was to counter their offensive rebounding."

Lakers eliminate Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — For a few seconds, it seemed as if the Los Angeles Lakers' playoff streak was in jeopardy. Going into Tuesday night's playoff game with the San Antonio Spurs, the Lakers had won 14 straight in the opening NBA playoff rounds.

The Spurs played the Lakers tough throughout the game and were on the verge of sending the game into overtime before San Antonio's Johnny Dawkins missed a layup with four seconds remaining to give the Lakers a 109-107 victory, and the best-of-five series.

Chalk up No. 15 in a row in the opening rounds for the Lakers, who will face the winner of the Portland-Utah series in the second round.

"We tried to play better defense, but we couldn't contain them," said Lakers' center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. "They really hung in with us, but it's really no surprise because all three games were closely fought."

Lakers coach Pat Riley said he was not surprised by the Spurs' spunky play in the series.

"They really fought us," Riley said. "They ran, played dog-fight defense and really made us dig deep to win.

"I fully expected this kind of a game," Riley said. "I want to take my hat off to San Antonio. I am very glad we don't have to play them in a game four."

Spurs coach Bob Weiss said Dawkins or John Sundvold could have taken the final shot.

"I was hoping Sunny would be open at the end but J.D. took a great shot," Weiss said. "It just didn't fall for us. This has got to be one of my toughest losses. It's a trauma when the season ends."

The Lakers were led by Magic Johnson, who scored 25 points and by Mychal Thompson, a former Spurs forward, who added 23.

"They make you work for everything and that makes you play that much better," Johnson said. "When it's only a couple of points, you always feel you're in it. I give them credit for battling."

Thompson said he was impressed by Weiss' coaching ability.

"Weiss has got this team on the right track. They are going to be tough," Thompson said. "The only personal satisfaction I got was winning the series. Now we can kick back and watch everybody else pound each other."

Walter Berry came off the Spurs bench to lead all scorers with 27, while Frank Brickowski added 22.

"I missed those 13-footers at the end," said Brickowski, who was 8-16 from the field. "It's disappointing to end the season this way."

The Spurs had the lead at the beginning of the final period, 91-89, but the Lakers came back and Thompson scored with 8:16 left to knot the score at 97.

Brickowski scored with 7:34 left to give the Spurs a 99-97 lead before Michael Cooper hit a 3-pointer to put the Lakers ahead 100-99 with 6:41 left.

"The 3-pointer by Cooper hurt us, but I thought we could come back," Weiss said. "He has been struggling the last part of the season, but he put it together against us."

Johnson then hit two free throws before Berry tied the score at 102 when he made a shot, was fouled and followed through with the free throw with 4:37 left.

"This team has always given us lots of problems," Lakers forward Kurt Rambis said. "We know we are in a fight when we have to play them, especially here."

Astros shut out Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Is Bob Knepper priming himself for a comeback of the year award?

After establishing himself in 1986, as one of the NL's best pitchers, Knepper struggled last year, losing 17 games with an ERA of 5.27.

That came after winning 17, throwing five shutouts, pitching 258 innings, and compiling a 3.14 ERA in 1986.

So far this season, Knepper looks like his old self.

The left-hander, who will be 34, May 25, boosted his record to 3-0 Tuesday with a 4-0 shutout of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Knepper in 28 innings has allowed just 2 earned runs, for an 0.64 ERA, best in the major leagues.

And he's done it with a pain-racked pitching shoulder. He's been working since spring training with tendinitis in the left shoulder.

He missed his last start and pitched for the first time since April 21.

He says the pain has made him a more patient pitcher.

"Boiled down, I know it's sore so I don't overthrow," said Knepper after his first shutout since he blanked the Atlanta Braves Aug. 15, 1986.

Knepper said he felt pain until the fourth inning.

"The other day in Houston the shoulder felt great," he said. Yesterday (Monday) and today (Tuesday) it was sore all day.

"But after the fourth inning, it got loose and the pain disappeared."

Knepper, who allowed seven hits, struck out seven and walked only one, credited his control, a soft sinker and the ability to change speeds for his third victory without a loss.

He had the Phillies beating the ball into the ground. Only two outs were made by outfielders.

He explained that he's pitching with the pain because the Houston trainer told him that was the thing to do in this case.

"He (the trainer) said it would disappear and I believe him," Knepper said.

"I have real confidence in my stuff. I realize that I don't have to throw a strike all the time. I can go off the plate because my ball is moving."

Knepper has always had problems with the Phillies in Philadelphia.

Demons nip Harvesters

DUMAS — For the second game in a row, the seventh inning proved fatal for the Pampa Harvesters, who dropped a 4-3 decision to Dumas in District 1-4A baseball action Tuesday afternoon.

With Dumas ahead, 4-2, the Harvesters rallied to close the gap to 4-3 in the seventh on Troy Owens' RBI single with one away. With James Bybee on third, David Doucette lifted a flyball to right field which Dumas' Jeff Baker caught and then threw out Bybee trying to score.

Bybee, a sophomore, was a hard-luck victim on the mound. He yielded just four hits in the losing effort while striking out four and walking six. Two of Dumas' runs came in the sixth to break a 2-2 tie game with Dallas Smith and Dave Venouth each knocking in runs with base hits.

After three Pampa errors led to Dumas' first run in the second inning, the Demons added another run in the third on a single by Casey Cain.

Pampa closed to one in the bottom of the third when Torrey Gardner singled to left to drive in Bybee, who had reached base on a single.

In the fifth, Pampa tied things up when James Ward smashed a solo homer over the right field fence.

Bybee and Gardner had two hits each to lead Pampa's eighth-inning attack.

"Our youth and experience cost us the game, but we're learning," said Pampa coach Rod Porter. "We've still got a chance to finish at .500."

In a Monday game, Lubbock Estacado scored three runs in the seventh to edge Pampa 5-4.

The loss dropped Pampa to 10-11 for the season with two games to play. The Harvesters travel to Levelland for a 1 p.m. game Saturday before closing the season Tuesday at home against Lubbock Dunbar.

Dunlap wins mound duel

Dunlap Industrial nipped Dean's Pharmacy, 4-1, in an 11-12 year old Bambino baseball game Tuesday night.

The game was a pitcher's duel between Andy Elsheimer of Dunlap and Gregg Moore of Dean's.

Elsheimer gave up four hits, struck out eleven and walked only three in picking up the win. Gregg Moore took a tough loss on the mound for Dean's as he gave up only three hits and struck out 15, but walked six.

Elsheimer was a perfect two for two at the plate, driving in two runs for Dunlap. Duane Nickleberry also singled in a run. Greg McDaniel and Justin Long contributed with fine base running as Long stole three bases and McDaniel two.

Moore, Jeremy Morris, Jeremy Downs and Brad Baldrige got hits for Dean's.

Defensively, Ryan Morris and Brandon Kitchens turned in sterling plays to help boost Dunlap to victory in the season opener.

Rebels down Pampa in soccer contest

Pampa was defeated by Tascosa 6-1 in a high school soccer match played Tuesday.

Eight minutes into the first half, Chris Wilson scored Pampa's only goal.

Pampa ends the season Friday at Caprock with the match starting at 5:30 p.m.

Roughriders; salutatorian is outstanding wrestler ROBERT JACKSON...Speaking of Cal Farley's marvelous facility at Old Tascosa, Ranch assistant superintendent RUTH HOLLADAY, who's husband Otis coached football at White Deer and Pampa, was planning to retire at the end of this school year. But she decided to stay on when offered the challenge of campus administrator at the Borger Girls Town campus, recently taken under the wing of Boys Ranch...Plans are underway for a Continental Basketball Association team in Amarillo to start the 1989 season, possibly as early as next fall... "He's been working on that for a long while," said former Cowboy teammate DREW PEARSON when I told him DUANE THOMAS was in the area last week gathering information for his forthcoming book.

It was a tough ex-professional football coach who first said "Winning isn't everything, it's the only thing." But no, it wasn't VINCE LOMBARDI. It was The Duke, JOHN WAYNE, playing the role of a pro coach, who said it in the 1953 movie "Trouble Along the Way". Asked by DONNA REED, "Is winning everything to you?" Wayne replied, "No ma'am. Winning isn't everything, it's the only thing."...Born in the town in which they are managing are the two shortest names in the majors, LEE ELIA at Philadelphia and PETE ROSE, at Cincinnati (at least will be in 28 more days)...How come Sammons Communication's basic service fee is higher than Amarillo, but provides half the service? Maybe it's the same folks who own the gasoline stations...The Chicago Bears selection of Oklahoma reserve lineman CAESAR RENTIE was surprising unless you know the young man has overcome major obstacles in his life already, with two deaf mute parents, and you also remember that Heisman Trophy winner JIM PLUNKETT (1970) who qb'd the Raiders to two Super Bowl crowns, had two blind parents.

Dorsett prepares for all-out effort as 'Pokes open camp

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Tony Dorsett says the odds favor him wearing a Dallas Cowboys uniform this season although he asked to be traded after he began spending more time on the bench in 1987.

"I'd say the odds of my being traded are 50-50, but it's stronger that I will be here," Dorsett said Tuesday during the opening session of the Cowboys' three-day mini-camp. "If the Cowboys don't trade me, I certainly wouldn't ask to be released. There's no way on God's green Earth I'd ask to be released."

Dorsett says he will continue to give the Cowboys his all even in a backup role to Herschel Walker. "I always go 100 percent," said the 34-year-old Dorsett, who still has two years left on his contract. "However, I don't see how valuable I can be to the Cowboys sitting on the bench."

The Cowboys deserve credit for trying to trade him, Dorsett says. "Nobody wants to take a shot at my salary," Dorsett said. "It's not talent — it's economics."

Dorsett's salary is $800,000 with the Cowboys in 1988, and the Cowboys will be funding his annuity.

"I thought something could be worked out with Denver during

Softball tourney slated in Pampa

The Pampa Softball Players Association has scheduled its eighth annual tournament for May 13-15.

Early entry fee has been set at $90 if paid by today and $100 if paid between May 5-11.

Two divisions of men's play and one division for women are planned.

The Players Association is offering the opportunity to any Pampa businesses of having flyers, coupons, etc. inserted in the team packets if they desire.

For more information on entering the tournament or for businesses to participate on a no-charge basis, contact Hahn at 665-5361 (days) or 669-2380 (evenings) or Drew Watson at 665-4409 (evenings only).

the draft but it just didn't happen," Dorsett said. "I'm disappointed, but I have to be realistic. You have to look at the total picture, and I certainly would if I was the owner of a franchise. I was hoping something would happen during the draft but it just didn't. I wasn't surprised."

Dorsett showed up at training camp, he said, because "it's business as usual. I'm ready to rip and tear in 1988 no matter where I am. I hope I get to rip and tear for another team. But I'll be ready in

Fans want to buy Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) — Several thousand Dallas Cowboys fans told a newspaper they are ready to invest $100 to keep the team Texas-owned, but their collective effort would be less than 1 percent of the asking price.

Cowboys owner H.R. "Bum" Bright has been looking for a buyer because of financial losses from last October's stock market plunge and Texas' soft economy. But team officials deny that any deal for the team's sale is imminent.

After a Dallas Times Herald sports columnist asked Monday how many readers would put up August." Cowboys officials, who say they are still trying to trade him but are finding no takers, welcomed Dorsett's apparent change in attitude.

"We want to do what's best for Tony and the Dallas Cowboys," said Club President Tex Schramm.

All the Cowboys' free-agent players showed up for the workout Tuesday, including free safety Michael Downs, who missed workouts a month ago.

Jones to retire

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

WELLESLEY, Mass. — The child's game of "Perfection" lay on the floor of K.C. Jones' family room.

Wind the timer and try to fit all 25 variously shaped plastic pieces into their proper holes before time expired and the pieces popped out.

Earlier Tuesday, Jones said he would step down as coach of the Boston Celtics after this NBA season, his fifth in the job. He had achieved all the sporting success he needed, wanted to spend more time with his family and had a close friend and qualified successor — assistant coach Jimmy Rodgers — ready to take over.

The pieces were in place. The time was right. "It's good for me. It's good for the family. It's good for Jimmy," Jones said. "Why sit around and wait another three or four years?"

Jones, 56, won eight NBA championships in nine years as a Celtic player and two in four years as their head coach. A third is possible this year.

The Celtics can clinch their best-of-five first-round series tonight in New York. They lead the Knicks 2-0. In the past 24 seasons as a player, head coach and assistant coach in the NBA, Jones won 12 titles and reached the finals three other times. What more was there to achieve?

"Not being ambitious ... and wanting to win another nine titles," he said, adding he was ready for his move into the front office as a club vice president and director of player personnel.

"I'll still be with the Celtics," he said. "It's a love affair with the Celtics."
