Peet defends views in response to letter from opponent Harp

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

A campaign letter mailed to many Pampa residents by his opponent in Saturday's municipal elections has caused incumbent Ward 2 Commissioner Richard Peet to respond to charges made or implied by challenger Duane Harp.

In the campaign letter dated May 2, Harp writes: "I have been in the business world for 13 years, working as a manager in accounting, investments, personnel, etc. I am familiar with the budgets and inner workings of a business situation. My opponent, because he does not understand these things, has created an atmosphere of mistrust in Pampa."

"His allegations," the letter continues, "which sound very noble, are usually based on rumors, partial truths or misunderstandings. They only serve to make us suspicious of city employees."

Peet said he feels such statements in Harp's letter refer to Peet's vote against the adoption of the city's operating budget last fall and his support of a citizen's group's right to ask questions and get answers regarding the budget and other financial operations of the city.

Peet said his questions during budget deliberations and subsequent actions involved many hours of study on his part and arose from his personal concerns over errors in addition, unexplained discrepancies in figures and typographical errors that appeared in the printed copies of budgets he was given for study as a commissioner.

"I understand budgets are a working tool ... a guide for the year," Peet said, and added that he is proud of the awards the city's budgets have been winning in the past few years. But such awards, he said, are given for layout, demonstration of the city's goals and programs, and other similar areas, not necessarily for the complete accuracy of the figures themselves.

Looking at the 1985-1986 budget, Peet said he discovered a $1 million error in the all-funds summary by using his calculator. This, and other errors in the typed figures, caused him to have concerns about the figures not always adding up properly. He said he also found similar problems in the 1986-1987 budget.

"These kinds of errors caused me concerns — not suspicions, but concerns," Peet stated in an interview Thursday afternoon.

Peet said he was "not looking for wrongdoing by any city employee," nor did he really suspect anyone on the staff was trying to hide anything. He said instead he just raised questions about why the figures in the columns didn't always add up.

He said he has also seen similar errors in initial audits and other accountings which then had to be corrected in later editions. He said he understands such errors are likely to occur in initial preparations, but added that the final printed copies should be as completely free of errors as possible.

"I just thought I was doing my job by raising such questions," Peet stated, adding that he feels that's part of his duties as an elected commissioner.

Peet said he feels he has gotten answers and replies now to his questions, though it may have taken awhile for them to come in some areas.

He said he's also satisfied with the attorney general's office investigator's report that has cleared up some of his concerns.

The investigation was requested by Assistant District Attorney Harold Comer in response to some concerns raised by Mary Denman and other unnamed citizens about alleged discrepancies and possible wrongdoings in the city's finances. The report cleared the city of any mismanagement of city funds, with the investigator saying he does not feel any further investigation is needed.

Peet said the remarks in the campaign letter may have been prompted by his questions in City Commission meetings and by the attorney general's investigation.

But he said he doesn't want to degrade anyone or get involved in any disputes. "Harp's a fine man," he said, adding that he was making no reflection on anyone's integrity or personality. He just wanted to clear up some possible misconceptions about his own views or actions.

Contacted this morning, Harp said, "I sure wasn't intending to lie about anything," saying the remarks in the letter present his viewpoints about how he has interpreted Peet's actions.

"I may have drawn some conclusions he didn't appreciate," he added, saying Peet of course has "a right to his own views."

"All I was trying to do was make a point — he has his stated ways of doing things, but I'm sure others have different views," Harp said.

But that's what elections are about, having candidates with different views and beliefs in some areas to give the people a choice, Harp said.

"Just as a general statement, I'd say the letter was to give people things to think about," he said, adding that if it served to get Peet to clarify his views then it served a purpose.

"It was not my intent to rip him apart," Harp said, but added that the remarks were based on his observations and on his conversations he has had with others about Peet's actions and views.

In another area, the letter states: "I feel very strongly that the way for Pampa to get healthy again is to attract new business."

My opponent apparently doesn't see new business efforts as that important, since he voted against our current city budget which encourages economic development."

"I didn't reject the budget," Peet stated. He said he accepted the budget and its figures. He voted against adoption of the budget because of policy statements in it that he disagrees with.

He said he has "strong concerns" about giving authority to one man to move city funds around through departmental transfers without any checks or

Two injured in truck explosion

By DEE DEE LARAMORE

Two men suffered burns early today when a tank truck containing condensate gasoline exploded at the old Phillips 66 Refinery south of Pampa.

Cleo Goff, 55, of Pampa, an employee of Cabot, is listed in serious condition by Coronado Hospital spokesman Linda Haynes with burns over most of his body. Joe Trollinger, 35, of Skellytown is listed in good condition with burns to his face and hands, she said.

Both men were being treated in the hospital's emergency room at press time today, Haynes said, and were to be admitted to the local hospital.

A drip truck transport, containing 15 55-gallon barrels of condensate continued to burn out of control, but was contained at the old plant site about seven miles south of Pampa, near the intersection of Farm Road 749 and Ranch Road 2375 in the Bowers City area, at press time today.

"There is some danger of another explosion," said Steve Vaughn, emergency management coordinator. "We think it has already or exploded or has separated, but we elected to allow the truck to burn itself down for another hour or so before firefighters go in," he said.

Pampa and Lefors firefighters plan to cool down the tanker truck with water at about noon today, allowing Cabot personnel to put out the fire with dry chemicals, Vaughn said.

Pampa's central dispatch was notified of the explosion at 8:38 a.m. today. Two units and five men from Pampa Fire Department and one pumper with five men from Lefors arrived at the scene early today, along with the Lefors ambulance crew.

Goff was reportedly engulfed in flames at the time of the explosion, but dropped to the ground and rolled to extinguish them. Trollinger, whose burns were less serious, took the injured man and met Pampa's Rural Metro Ambulance near the intersection of Texas 273 and Loop 171, according to Gray County Deputy Doug Davis.

All other personnel have been accounted for, Vaughn said. Houses in the immediate area were evacuated, he said, and residents were told they could return in about two hours if nothing else occurred.

"It's really a safety precaution," Vaughn said. "We didn't feel they were in any danger or in the hazardous zone."

School candidates give views to teachers

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

With time running out before Saturday's election, the five Pampa school board candidates made one last pitch for votes Thursday night at a forum sponsored by the Pampa Classroom Teachers Association.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday. School board votes are cast at the Pampa High School Music Building, 111 E. Harvester Ave.

Trustee Colleen Hamilton is opposed in her bid to remain on the board, but races have developed for the two other open seats.

Former school Superintendent Bob Phillips is challenging incumbent board president Joe VanZandt in Place 5 for a full three-year term, while Fred Simmons and Sherry McCavit are vying for a one-year unexpired term in Place 7, where trustee Darville Orr is stepping down.

Each candidate fielded questions drawn up in advance by teachers at Thursday's forum and later expressed their views on several issues in private interviews.

All the candidates cited the school system's staff as a strength of the district and said they would support a tax increase if absolutely necessary to maintain quality education.

"You just can't cut down on the quality of education," McCavit said. "If that takes a tax increase at some time, then I hope we're willing to do that."

Simmons said "I don't want a tax increase just like everybody else doesn't," but one may be necessary.

VanZandt said a shrinking tax base may leave trustees little choice. He noted that he voted for a tax increase a year ago, saying the board needs to take a conservative but progressive stance toward education.

"I wouldn't be running for reelection if I wasn't committed to what I committed myself and our school board to (about) a year ago," VanZandt said.

Phillips said the district needs help from Austin to maintain quality education and competitive salaries, but probably won't get it. He said he could support a small tax increase if necessary but cautioned that the district cannot afford the possibility of a rollback election, which voters can request if taxes are raised more than 8 percent.

"If there was no other way ... I would vote for a tax increase, but it would be my last priority," Phillips said.

Each candidate was asked to name strengths and weaknesses of the district.

Simmons said the district probably could communicate better with the public and could improve facilities, but the greatest problem is the lack of classroom space. He said the district should explore the use of temporary classrooms, unless it is willing to make a long-term, expensive commitment.

"We have to do something," he said. "We have no choice in that matter."

McCavit said she would like to see better staffing, particularly in libraries and among counselors and school nurses. She also said improvements could be made in computer education and special education programs.

McCavit called the classroom shortage a "tightrope situation," but said she favors permanent additions to portable classrooms.

"I don't know what the best solution's going to be," she said. "I really tend to favor a permanent solution."

VanZandt cited the need for better facilities and equipment, but said he still is studying solutions to the classroom shortage problem.

"I'm still in the process of gathering facts and studying and analyzing," he said.

Phillips cited the lack of coordination among elementary schools, a problem he says existed when he was superintendent, and said qualified personnel in the district often are overlooked for promotions. He said he strongly supports using portable classrooms to solve the classroom shortage, saying they are less expensive and more mobile.

POLLING PLACES IN PAMPA

The polls for both the school trustee and city commission elections will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday. Polling places in Pampa are as follows:

School elections — Choir Room, Music Building, Pampa High School.

All voters living within the Pampa Independent School District must vote at this location for the school trustee election.

City elections:
Ward 1: Travis Elementary School.

Ward 2: Austin Elementary School.

Ward 3: Lovett Memorial Library.

Ward 4: Mann Elementary School.

All voters living within the city limits must vote at the location designated for the ward in which they reside. City commissioners are elected at large, so voters may cast ballots in both races.

City Commission elections attract four candidates

Pampa city voters will go to the polls Saturday to choose two city commissioners, with two candidates running for each position.

Incumbent Richard Peet will be seeking re-election to his Ward 2 City Commission post while challenger Duane Harp will be hoping to take over the seat.

In Ward 4, Gary Sutherland and Gene Finney are campaigning for the right to replace Clyde Carruth, who has decided to step down after six two-year terms on the city's governing board.

Peet, 45, was elected last year to serve an unexpired term on the commission. A government instructor at Pampa High School and Clarendon College-Pampa Center, he has taught for 17 years at the high school and 12 years at the college.

"I believe an elected official should be a servant to the community," Peet states. Saying he has taught citizen involvement in government for years, he says he pledges "to listen, be interested in, respect and actively seek answers for any citizen who expresses a question or concern." He says he also desires to continue his work with the commission and the citizens "to keep the important things important."

Peet and his wife Carol have three sons and are active mem-

Candidate indicted for perjury

RAYMONDVILLE (AP) — The sole candidate for district attorney in Willacy County has been indicted on perjury charges alleging he lied about his residency.

Steve Fischer, 37, was indicted Thursday on one count of felony aggravated perjury and a misdemeanor count of perjury.

The felony charge accuses Fischer of making a false statement under oath during a hearing on a temporary injunction District Attorney Lee Price Fernon filed to keep Fischer off the ballot in the South Texas county.

The grand jury determined Fischer lied during the hearing when he said he was only a temporary resident of the West Texas city of Hereford.

School

"The cost is negligible when you consider putting a permanent addition up," Phillips said.

Phillips also said a morale problem has developed among faculty over the hiring of school Superintendent Harry Griffith's wife, Sally, as the district's at-risk coordinator. He questioned the validity of her figures on dropout rates in the district.

"Who evaluates or appraises her, and is this evaluator himself or herself at risk?" Phillips asked.

Simmons later responded, saying Mrs. Griffith is well-qualified for the position, and the at-risk program is important to solving the dropout problem. VanZandt also praised the state-mandated at-risk program, "even though it's costing us money," saying it has made the district more aware of the dropout problem.

Phillips also criticized the board's recent decision to contract for visits by drug-sniffing dogs to the high school and middle school. He said he foresees several potential problems, including the possibility of a student planting drugs in another student's locker.

"You can't tell me that won't happen," Phillips said. "Can't we control (drugs) in a better way?"

He said he fears too much "overkill" on the drug problem may lead some students to experiment.

VanZandt said his initial interest in the school board was prompted by concern about drugs in school. He said he supports the drug dog program.

"It won't solve the problem, but it, I feel, is at least a positive step," he said.

The key, VanZandt said, is getting elementary-age children to feel good enough about themselves so that they won't experiment with drugs.

McCavit, who works with the anti-drug Impact program at the middle school, said she supports earlier drug education. She said she initially had mixed feelings on drug dogs but is now willing to try them for a year.

Most importantly, she said, Pampa schools must maintain an attitude of caring about students.

"I don't want a police-state situation," she said.

Simmons said he supports the drug dog program, saying it has worked in other school districts. He said he also supports more drug education for students.

balances. He said again he's not questioning anyone's integrity at this point but just has concerns about giving anyone, whoever that might be, such broad authority.

Peet said the budget has "nothing to do with bringing new businesses" to the city except for specifying funds that go to the Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce in joint city-chamber economic development programs. And that's only a very small part of the budgeted expenditures, he said.

Police catch 'Dapper Bandit' suspect

DALLAS (AP) — Police say they finally have caught up with the Dapper Bandit, who they believe has pulled off a string of bank robberies over the past decade, eluding authorities with his smooth style.

Thursday, authorities identified a man who shot himself in the head after he was cornered by police as the mysterious robber.

Mark Ervin Reeves remained in critical condition at Humana Hospital Medical City Thursday night with a wound to his upper neck, said Nursing Supervisor Deb Keck.

Reeves is being held in lieu of $500,000 bond on an aggravated robbery charge stemming from

"I'm all in favor of new business," Peet said. He said he supports TEXCEL, the Main Street Program and other economic development programs, "all those types of things" needed to move Pampa toward economic revitalization. He said he has not voted against any of those programs.

Another part of the letter states: "Another item of concern was his (Peet's) lack of support for the Celanese rally, when they are one of our largest employers and possible sources of related new business."

Peet said he really does not understand what prompted those remarks. He said that as a teacher (he's a government teacher at Pampa High School), he had certain assignments with students for whom he had responsibilities during the rally "and I was with them."

He said he supported the rally, noting that "the enthusiasm of the community is important."

Peet said he's never meant to divide the commission or to develop mistrust of it among the citizens. He said he did support the right of citizens to pursue matters when they felt "they didn't get proper answers here."

the Wednesday hold up of a Bright Banc branch, police Capt. John Holt said.

Holt said Reeves is the Dapper Bandit, the well-dressed, well-groomed robber with a meticulous knowledge of banking procedures. The Dapper Bandit is believed to have donned wigs and phony mustaches to rob 25 area banks.

"We and the FBI naturally are very relieved," Holt said of Reeves' arrest. "First of all, he's very good. Second of all, he's very lucky," Holt said of the Dapper Bandit's ability to elude capture. "He planned well, he executed well and he was well-disguised."

Reeves shot himself after police surrounded his car at a stoplight a half-hour after the Wednesday robbery.

Other state and federal charges are being considered against Reeves because of evidence — including surveillance-camera photographs — linking him to a number of other bank heists, Holt said.

"We have photographs from virtually all of those" 25 robberies over the last decade linking Reeves to the robberies, Holt said.

Police found explosives and several guns in Reeves' posh Dallas apartment linking him to the crimes.

Girl Scout cookies don't clear Japanese customs

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP)—A Brownie troop's hopes of shipping more than 400 boxes of Girl Scout cookies to sailors aboard a U.S. aircraft carrier are crumbling after Japanese customs officials blocked the delivery.

"I don't think it's fair," 8-year-old Nickelle Clark said Thursday after being notified of the problem. "I'm mad."

She sold more than 500 boxes of cookies this year, including some to a sailor aboard the USS Midway who had written to say he missed the annual treat. Troop 807 leader Manchetta White said a $2,000 duty tax prevented the cookies from clearing customs and going to the 35 servicemen who ordered them.

But most of the Brownies do not know their cookies have not reached the sailors, Ms. White said.

"I didn't want to tell the Brownies because I didn't want tears at this week's meeting," she said. "The girls are so excited and waiting for letters back from the men thanking them."

Now American Airlines officials are trying to figure out what to do with 402 boxes of Golden Yangles, Scot Ts, Thin Mints, Savannahs, Jubilees, Classic Cremes, and Hoedowns, piled in the back of their ticket office in Corpus Christi.

The airline offered free passage for the cookies to the crew of the carrier homeported in Atsugi, Japan. They were shipped April 26 and then spent four days in a Japanese customs warehouse before being returned to the airport.

"They just sent me a message with the cookies saying they could not clear customs," said Jean Titus, American Airlines' general manager in Corpus Christi.

Ms. Titus is waiting for a message via teletype from American Airlines officials in Tokyo regarding possible alternatives.

She said she is working with Ret. Adm. James Scott, Homeport Project coordinator, to send the cookies to a naval base in Honolulu or San Francisco where a navy ship or plane could transport the cookies to the USS Midway. It would take eight weeks for the cookies to arrive.

"We didn't mail the cookies originally because we didn't have the money," Ms. White told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

Although Japanese officials at the embassies in Washington and Houston were not available Thursday because of a national Japanese holiday called Children's Day, a representative in the honorary consulate's office in Dallas said a $2,000 duty fee seemed extremely high.

"Any package that has a value of about $45 or $50 is charged a duty fee, however," Trish Hake said.

The relationship between the Beeville Brownies and the U.S. sailors began just before Christmas.

Ms. White and her troop sent Christmas cards to the servicemen aboard the USS Midway last December and 23 men wrote back.

"They wrote real nice letters," said Ms. White, whose son-in-law is aboard the ship.

Correspondence continued and around Valentine's Day, the troop shipped a 34-pound box filled with candies to the ship's commanding officer. It was sent by parcel post for $14 and took eight weeks to get there, she said.

"Once the word got out though, everyone and their dog wanted cookies," said Ms. White, who has been troop leader for seven years. "Before we knew it, we had requests for 402 boxes of cookies."

Lawmaker joins others in presenting plan for solving school finance problem

AUSTIN (AP)—A West Texas legislator has suggested giving the State Board of Education the power to set a state property tax rate as part of the solution to the public school finance problem.

"We are, in fact, giving legislative power, in a sense, to a state agency," Rep. Jack Vowell, R-El Paso, testified Thursday.

But he reminded a subcommittee of the Select Committee on Education that the education board is elected and responsible to the voters.

Vowell described school financing as a "social difficulty (that) doesn't have one and only one direct, correct answer — it may have a number of solutions."

He said Texans have three options if higher courts affirm a ruling by State District Judge Harley Clark of Austin that the current school finance system is unconstitutional.

They can amend the Texas Constitution to keep the present financing system, which Vowell said is inequitable; or they can allow the state to finance public education totally, which would require very high state taxes.

A third option would be trying to find an equitable system which might discard some cherished concepts but would preserve the most central element — equal treatment under the law for students, school districts and taxpayers, Vowell said.

The legislator's plan would direct the education board each biennium to estimate how much revenue would be needed to finance an adequate Foundation School Program, and would authorize the board to establish a state property tax rate to finance at least 25 percent of that program. The remaining 75 percent would come from legislative revenue sources, he said.

Local school districts would collect the state tax money and keep whatever they needed to meet the established per-student allotment.

Surplus collections would be turned over to the state comptroller for redistribution to property-poor school districts that could not raise enough from the uniform tax rate to meet the student allotment.

"Some districts would lose money from the state, (but) most which are having problems would be at least as well off," Vowell said. "Admittedly, this would raise problems for tax-rich school districts."

He also said if districts felt the student allotment was not enough, they could levy additional taxes if local voters approved a referendum.

Vowell said his plan does not address funding for school facilities.

Spouses vie for mayoral job in small town

MELVIN (AP)—The race for mayor of this tiny West Texas community has turned into an in-house affair.

The political contest pits spouse against spouse, with Florence Perez and Nestor Perez both seeking the job in Saturday's mayoral election.

Mrs. Perez, a counselor at Brady High School, says the double sign-up started out as a joke.

The two went to sign up for the election, with Perez intending to run for the City Council.

"Then, when we walked out, he said he had signed up for mayor. There weren't any other candidates for mayor, he said, 'So why should you just walk in and take over?'"

Perez, a resource teacher at Brady's China Elementary School, said he doesn't know why his wife is running against him.

"The women are just ganging up on me, I guess. My wife might whip me if I win," he said.

Mrs. Perez said women are quite capable of doing any sort of job. "In fact, it's easier to do it ourselves than to get the men to do it."

"But I think it is our purpose in life to get behind the men. In fact, I really believe our society is losing ground because women are taking over and letting the men slouch off," she told the San Angelo Standard-Times.

Mrs. Perez and her campaign committee have distributed "Vote Flo" campaign buttons and signs, hoping to reach all 147 registered voters in this community of 202 people.

Perez has distributed handbills describing his campaign platform, noting he is a native of Melvin while his wife "is only a transplant," that he wants to clean up the town, bring jobs, get the trash off the roads and fix up the old houses so people who used to live in Melvin can come back home.

"He would really like to have Melvin revitalized," Mrs. Perez said with a touch of pride in her voice at her husband's goals.

She also noted that most Melvin residents believe the mayor's job includes going out personally to dig up and repair broken water pipes and the like, because most Melvin mayors have been retirees with the time and inclination to do those things.

Birthday party for state's capitol begins

AUSTIN (AP)—The Texas Capitol's 100th anniversary celebration began today with organizers hoping for a high-flying start by some 70 hot air balloons.

The early morning balloon flight was designed, weather permitting, to kick off two days of events.

Giant electric "candles" were in place around the outside of the dome, giving the building the appearance of a huge birthday cake. An enormous chandelier was hanging under the dome in the rotunda, where a $150-per-person, black-tie ball was to be held tonight.

Ann Ramsey, one of those coordinating the event, said Thursday that preparations were going well. She said the weekend's success could depend on the weather.

"I've heard of a possibility of showers, but that we were more likely to have showers on Sunday than Saturday. I like that one better," she said.

About 30,000 people are expected to participate in all parts of the celebration, she said.

Ms. Ramsey said that 550 tickets for the ball had been sold, with the goal now 750. Asked why ticket sales for ball has been slow, she said it might be because it is a one-time event.

"A lot of people know about events that happen every year. This is a one-time event. People are not very familiar with it," she said.

The Capitol was dedicated on May 16, 1888, and in recognition of its importance as a work of American architecture, the building was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1970. In 1986, it was designated a National Historic Landmark.

The first big event scheduled on Saturday is a 10 a.m. parade featuring horse-drawn carriages and wagons and marching bands. The parade will travel south on Congress Avenue from 18th Street north of the Capitol to Ninth Street, then pass in front of the Governor's Mansion and a reviewing stand before ending up adjacent to the Capitol grounds.

At noon, a bugle call will signal the beginning of the centennial ceremony on the front steps of the Capitol. Selected passages from Sen. Temple Houston's 1888 dedication speech will be read, and a 21-gun salute will be the finale.

During the day Saturday, a centennial Mayfair will offer specialty foods and beverages, while living history demonstrations and exhibits on the Capitol grounds will depict the 1880s way of life.

A commemorative, one-day-only postmark produced especially for the event by the U.S. Postal Service will be offered at a special booth Saturday.

Visitors also can view the original Goddess of Liberty statue from the Capitol dome. The statue is being brought out of storage for display on the grounds during the celebration.

About 60 descendants of Govs. Sam Houston and Sul Ross, and of Temple Houston, have accepted invitations to participate in the centennial ceremony, said Rita Clements, chairwoman of the centennial committee. The Capitol was dedicated when Ross was governor.

For college seniors, Texas job market improved but is still highly competitive

LUBBOCK (AP)—The state's tight job market is prompting some college seniors to venture outside the state, college placement counselors say.

But despite the trend to look elsewhere, most schools report that jobs are available in Texas for those who work hard to get them.

"More of our students have been looking out of state and we have been encouraging them in this," said Terry Kepler, director of career placement at Southern Methodist University.

Washington, D.C.; Nashville, Tenn., and Atlanta are popular targets for out-of-state job-seekers, he said.

"If they are willing to leave Texas, their chances improve greatly," said Vincent-Avallone, director of career planning and placement at the University of Texas-San Antonio. "If they want to stay in Texas, they're finding they may have to go out-of-state to get experience and then come back."

But colleges are reporting an improved job picture over the past two years.

"Overall I would see the job market for an '88 grad as competitive but improved over '86 and '87," said David Kraus, director of Texas Tech University's career planning and placement center. "There seem to be a few more companies out seeking college graduates."

Most schools said recruiting activity has gone up this year.

"At Texas A&M there's been a dramatic increase in the past two semesters in recruiting activity," said Lou Van Pelt, the school's director of placement. "We've been full (with recruiters) in the placement center every day."

Almost idle in recruiting for the past two years, oil and gas companies are once again seeking college graduates, although competition is stiff, said career placement counselors. Meanwhile, engineering, education and accounting majors are in strong demand.

At a recent teachers' job fair at Texas Tech, more than 100 school districts came to recruit teachers, the largest number ever, said Kraus.

The demand for teachers has been spurred partly by the state-mandated 1-to-22 teacher-student ratio on the elementary level.

Another hot market is engineering, where Texas Tech seniors have reported starting salary offers slightly above the national average. For example, electrical engineering majors have reported an average offer of almost $30,000 a year, said Kraus.

Van Pelt estimated that starting salaries overall have increased about 3 percent over last spring.

"If you're finding employment, you're finding it at the top end," said Avallone.

For all but the top students, placement counselors say, finding a good job requires hard work but is possible for those who persevere.

"We feel like there are good jobs out there but students have to work harder and longer to find them," SMU's Kepler said.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Thatcher on target by lowering taxes

Although Margaret Thatcher has been a far more decisive and successful leader than Ronald Reagan, in one critical area she has lagged: taxation. Nevertheless, the sweeping tax cuts that her government announced last month finally will bring the supply-side revolution to London. That revolution promises to boost Britain's economy just as it did America's.

The Thatcher plan parallels both the tax cuts of Reagan's first term and the tax reforms of his second. It will reduce the kingdom's top income-tax rate from 60 percent to 40 percent, and the bottom rate from 27 percent to 25 percent — with the ultimate goal of lowering it to 20 percent. It will also close or limit loopholes such as the tax break for personal use of a company car.

Thatcher's Chancellor of the Exchequer, Nigel Lawson, unveiled the package to the House of Commons in a speech that sounded uncannily like those of U.S. supply-siders. "Excessive rates of income tax destroy enterprise, encourage avoidance and drive talent to more hospitable shores overseas," he said. "Far from raising additional revenue, over time they actually raise less. By contrast, a reduction in the top rates of income tax can, over time, result in a higher, not a lower, yield to the Exchequer."

Lawson reminded his colleagues of what has happened since Thatcher's first term, when the top rate was cut from 83 percent to 60 percent. Despite that reduction, "the top 5 percent of taxpayers today contribute a third as much again in real terms as they did in 1978-79," he said.

Reagan's 1981 tax cut, which slashed the top U.S. rate from 70 to 50 percent, had similar effects. The new 28 percent to rate, which went into effect just three months ago, is almost certain to do likewise.

The foes of such policies seem as invincibly ignorant in England as they are here. Opposition legislators disrupted Lawson's speech for 25 minutes with shouts of "shame" and "rich man's budget." But the Conservative majority guarantees that the tax cuts will soon become law. When they do they will bring greater economic opportunity to all classes — rich and poor, workers, and investors — as in every other country that has followed the lower-tax strategy.

Back to government of men

WASHINGTON — One of the most cherished myths of American society is that ours is a government not of men, but of laws. Last week's uproar in the U.S. Supreme Court once more exposed the hollowness of that supposed ideal.

On the surface, this is all that happened: By a vote of 5-4 the court ordered reargument in a pending civil rights case. The order set off an explosion. Before the dust settled, Justice John Paul Stevens was crying that his colleagues had inflicted "a serious and unwise wound" upon the court. His colleagues in the majority were replying blandly that Stevens was hollering before he was hurt.

A great deal more rested beneath the surface. The matter is complicated, but stick with me. The issues are important.

First turn the clock back to the period immediately after the Civil War. In 1866 and again in 1870, Congress enacted sweeping laws, now codified as 42 USCS 1981 and 1982, intended to assure that black persons would have the same civil rights as white persons. The statutes relied upon the 13th Amendment, prohibiting slavery, and on the 14th amendment, prohibiting the states from discriminating against any persons within their jurisdiction.

Time passed. The statutes were pretty well forgotten. Then the case of Jones v. Mayer reached the Supreme Court in 1968. It had to do with a black man's right to purchase a home in St. Louis County, Mo. Relying upon Section 1982, the court upheld that right. In 1969, the case of Sullivan v. Little Hunting Park came along. It involved a black's right to membership in a quasi-private park and playground. Relying upon Section 1981, the court also upheld that right. In 1975 came the case of Johnson v. Railway Express. It involved discrimination in pri-ivate employment. Again the court upheld the applicability of Section 1981.

Finally, in this string of cases, came the 1976 case of Runyon v. McCrary. This is the key case. It involved two black youths, Michael McCrary and Colin Gonzales, who sought admission to two private, all-white schools in northern Virginia. They were turned down solely because of their race. They sued under Section 1981 and won. The court ordered their admission, approved $5,500 in damages for the embarrassment and humiliation they had suffered, and described the schools' conduct as "a classic case" of racial discrimination prohibited by the post-Civil War statute.

Technically speaking, the Runyon case was decided by a vote of 7-2, with Justices William Rehnquist and Byron White dissenting. The decision actually was closer to 5-4. Justice Lewis Powell concurred reluctantly. If the slate were clean, he wrote, he might well have joined the dissenters; he complained that the court had drifted almost accidentally into a "rather extreme interpretation" of the Civil War statutes. Nevertheless, obedient to the doctrine of stare decisis, he went along.

Justice Stevens also was unhappy. He expressed his firm conviction that the string of cases that began with Jones had been wrongly decided. "There is no doubt in my mind," he said, "that the court's construction of the act of 1866 would have amazed the legislators who voted for it." He thought it "quite unrealistic" to assume that Congress in 1866 had intended to outlaw segregation in private schools.

Yet Stevens, like Powell, felt he had to stick with the precedents. The prior decisions may have been bad law, but they reflected a clear understanding of "the mores of today."

Justice White, joined by Rehnquist, roundly dissented. Section 1981, he agreed, gave blacks the same rights as whites. But neither whites nor blacks have a right to enter into a contract with an unwilling person. The majority's position to the contrary, he said, was "singularly unpersuasive."

There we stand. By ordering re-examination of the Runyon case of 1976, the court has outraged liberals and comforted conservatives. A clear inference can be drawn that Chief Justice Rehnquist, accompanied by Justice White, O'Connor, Scalia and Kennedy, will overrule the cases from Jones through Runyon. If so, litigants who claim violation of civil rights will still have the basic Civil Rights Act of 1964 to depend on. It would not be a calamitous situation.

But to return to the point of beginning: When it comes to jurisprudence, ours emphatically is a government of men, not laws. Back in 1896 eight men upheld the doctrine of "separate but equal" racial segregation. A string of cases followed, all of them obeying that precedent.

In 1954, nine men threw that doctrine on the scrap heap. The Constitution hadn't changed, but the judges had changed. Today we will see a "re-examination" of Runyon. Why? Because Justice Anthony Kennedy, newcomer to the court, voted that way.

Maybe they will listen now!

Parents, critical of amplified rock music, have threatened: "It will ruin your ears!" Now, there is more than enough clinical evidence that sustained loud music does, indeed, impair hearing.

Some critics of "heavy-metal" music have insisted: "It will turn this whole generation of kids into zombies!"

For that there was no empirical evidence — until now.

Gervasia M. Schreckenberg, neurologist at Georgian Court College in Lakewood, N.J., and Harvey H. Bird, a physicist at Fairleigh Dickinson University, Rutherford, N.J., devised an experiment to determine the physiological effects of different kinds of music.

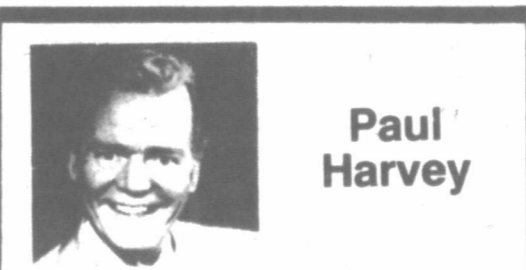

Their two-year study has sent shock waves through two disciplines.

They divided laboratory mice into three groups. One group was exposed day and night for eight weeks to the dulcet strains of Strauss waltzes.

A second group was raised in silence. The third group was exposed to disharmonic sounds — incessant drumbeats at low volume.

All of the mice went through standard maze training.

The group which had been exposed to the atonal, disrhythmic sounds could not find their way through the maze to their food. They wandered off with no sense of direction.

Paul Harvey

The other two groups of mice promptly found their food with no problem.

Obviously the cacophonous music had left group three disoriented. Even weeks after the "music" had stopped!

The final phase of the Schreckenberg-Bird study involved examination of the brain tissue of the mice, to determine whether there had been a substantive alteration in the hippocampus of the disoriented mice.

The hippocampus, near the brain stem, is associated with alertness, memory and learning.

There had been unusual neuron growth — an abnormal "branching and sprouting" of the neurons — as well as disruptions in the normal amounts of RNA, a chemical crucial to the storage of memories.

In their report to Insight these researchers concluded that "as a result of exposure to a constant bombardment of disharmonic noise, there was less capacity for memory in the exposed mice."

How is it that certain types of music disturb and distort brain cells? The researchers suspect that the culprit is the music's "rhythm."

Everything in life — ideally — goes on in harmony, in rhythm. The human heartbeat. Eating and sleeping. Each biological function. And brain waves are measurably rhythmic.

Even the life of a single cell has a biological rhythm.

If that harmony is disrupted by some kind of disharmony, the effects are detrimental. We have seen the effects of disharmonious music on mammalian brains. Human have mammalian brains.

If the evidence, is not yet conclusive, it is adequate — that disharmonious music jeopardizes mental health.

CBS keeps a liberal eye on its staffs

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

As the 1988 election approaches, it occurs to me that my readers might appreciate a rundown of the political backgrounds of some of the key figures in the major media on which we will all be forced to rely for information.

Thanks to the painstaking Lichter-Rothman report of 1981, we know that upward of 80 percent of a random sampling of key media elite voted for the Democratic presidential candidate in every presidential election from 1964 to the beginning of the Reagan era, and there is certainly no reason to assume that these journalistic leopards have changed their spots since then.

But knowing such things in a general way is no substitute for information about particular individuals. In a recent column, therefore, I named a slew of people in key jobs at ABC News who were publicly active in leftist or liberal operations before turning their energies to the field of journalism. Today we shall take a similar look at CBS.

Please remember that what follows is in no sense a list of all the liberals at CBS. This is merely the tip of the iceberg — the handful of individuals whose public records of left or liberal activism have been traced by Washington's Media Research Center. Also, as in the case of ABC, there's one token Republican: Diane Sawyer of "60 Minutes," who was a staffer in the Nixon White House.

At CBS the bias in favor of liberal policies starts high. No less than two members of the CBS board were ranking officials of Democratic administrations: Newton Minow, who was chairman of the Federal Communications Commission under both John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson; and Harold Brown, who was Jimmy Carter's defense secretary. No former Republican Cabinet members or agency chairmen need apply.

Zeroing in on political affairs, the "political editor" of CBS News is Doty Lynch. Lynch's long record of Democratic political activism stressed polling, which she conducted for George McGovern's presidential campaign in 1972, for Ted Kennedy in 1980, for the Democratic National Committee in 1981-82, and for first Gary Hart and then Walter Mondale in 1984.

(Her immediate predecessor as political editor of CBS News, by the way, was the versatile Wally Chalmers, who came to the job from the Nuclear Freeze Foundation and the Fund for a Democratic Majority and left it in 1986 to become executive director of the Democratic National Committee.)

Roaming Washington with the broad-gauged title "national affairs correspondent of CBS News" is Lesley Stahl, who cut her political teeth in the 1960s as an aide to New York City's ultimate liberal, Mayor John Lindsay.

Stahl is perhaps best known as the host of CBS's "Face The Nation." That program's producer in 1985-86, interestingly, was Mary Field, who honed her own political skills as press secretary to Gov. Michael Dukakis in 1974-75 and press officer on Jimmy Carter's campaign plane in 1976. Field was succeeded as the show's producer in 1986-87 by Jeanne Edmunds, who was a staffer on Jimmy Carter's transition team in 1980.

If you enjoy CBS's popular "60 Minutes," you will probably be interested to know that its producer is Lowell Bergman, one of the founders, back in the mid-1970s, of an ultra-left rag called Mother Jones. And if you're an insomniac and happen to watch CBS's "Nightwatch," you have fallen into the busy hands of yet another of Mother Jones' upwardly mobile founders, executive producer Deborah Johnson.

Finally there's Robert Krulwich, "economics reporter" for the CBS Morning News. In the mid-1970s he was a reporter for Pacifica Radio, a California chain slanted far to the left even by San Francisco standards.

So keep an eye on that eye that symbolizes CBS. There's a wicked gleam in it.

Lawyers reviewing Meese interference allegation

WASHINGTON (AP)—Government lawyers are reviewing allegations of impropriety by Attorney General Edwin Meese III and possible perjury by other officials in the case of a company that says it was pushed into bankruptcy by the Justice Department.

One of the issues is whether Meese interceded with INSLAW Inc.'s law firm and whether that had anything to do with the subsequent dismissal of the lawyer representing the company.

The Justice Department's public integrity section also is reviewing conflicts in the sworn testimony of two former federal bankruptcy trustees and two Justice Department officials during bankruptcy court proceedings involving INSLAW, according to sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The testimony dealt with INSLAW's allegations that Justice Department officials sought to put the company out of business by trying, unsuccessfully, to convert its bankruptcy reorganization to an outright liquidation.

Independent counsel James C. McKay, who is conducting a criminal investigation of Meese in several areas, is not probing the INSLAW case but did refer information about it to the public integrity section.

"We are not conducting an investigation with respect to the INSLAW matter," said Carol Bruce, McKay's deputy. "Any information we have received relating to it we have referred to the Justice Department's public integrity section."

But the section, after reviewing the material, could return it to McKay's office for a fuller investigation of the Meese allegation, according to a source familiar with the case.

INSLAW attorneys told McKay that the company's original lawyer, Leigh Ratiner, was fired from his Washington law firm after Meese discussed the case with Leonard Garment, a politically connected partner in the same firm.

The Justice Department acknowledged to INSLAW in pre-trial discovery that Meese recalled talking to Garment about the case in the fall of 1986.

Ratiner was soon asked to leave the law firm of Dickstein, Shapiro & Morin. INSLAW says in court papers that Ratiner was told Garment was instrumental in the decision to ask him to leave.

Garment called the allegation "pure baloney" but acknowledged that he was questioned about it two months ago by public-integrity investigators. The current status of the Meese investigation could not immediately be determined.

The perjury investigation involves sworn depositions or courtroom testimony given by witnesses in connection with INSLAW's allegation that the Justice Department tried to force INSLAW into a liquidation proceeding in bankruptcy court.

INSLAW alleged that Justice Department officials deliberately withheld $1.77 million in payments on a $10 million contract the company had signed in 1982 to computerize 94 U.S. attorneys' offices.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge George F. Bason Jr. found in INSLAW's favor and ordered the Justice Department to pay the company $6.8 million after ruling that government officials engaged in "trickery, fraud and deceit" to steal the company's software. The department is appealing.

Conversion of the case from a Chapter 11 reorganization to a Chapter 7 liquidation would have put INSLAW out of business. Under Chapter 11 protection from creditors, INSLAW has been able to reorganize and build up clients while arranging to pay off its debts.

Cornelius Blackshear, a federal bankruptcy judge in New York City, gave a sworn deposition last year that when he was a U.S. trustee in 1985 he was asked to help liquidate INSLAW by Thomas J. Stanton, head of the Justice Department's Executive Office of U.S. Trustees.

But a day after he was deposed, Blackshear signed an affidavit recanting the testimony, saying he had confused INSLAW with another bankruptcy matter.

Blackshear then gave a second deposition that was consistent with the affidavit.

In his ruling last year, Bason expressed disbelief about Blackshear's recantation, although he called it "an honest mistake."

"I believe that Judge Blackshear's original testimony is accurate and his recanted testimony is inaccurate," Bason said.

The judge noted that Blackshear changed his initial testimony after receiving telephone calls from William C. White, then U.S. bankruptcy trustee in Alexandria, Va.

White denied allegations that the Justice Department pressured him to file a motion to liquidate INSLAW, to which Bason said that "people do have a capacity to forget things when it is painful for them to remember—or maybe even inconvenient for them to remember."

Bason said White's testimony was "contrary to other credible evidence."

Neither Blackshear, Stanton nor White returned a reporter's telephone messages.

Authorities helpless to search for six missing as refinery smolders

NORCO, La. (AP)—Authorities waited today for the smoldering wreckage of a refinery to cool so they could begin searching for six men missing since the predawn explosion that shattered plate glass windows 30 miles away.

"That was one tremendous explosion," said Ikey Lucas, director of St. Charles Emergency Operations. "I've never seen so much damage in Norco, even when hurricanes have hit."

At least one Shell Oil Co. employee died and 42 other people were injured in the explosion in a catalytic cracker around 3:30 a.m. Thursday, which broke windows in New Orleans's Garden District, 30 miles down the Mississippi River.

Police today patrolled virtually windowless Norco to protect the town's bank, furniture store and other businesses. The local co-op lost most of a wall facing the plant when the devastating explosion cut loose.

"It went 'Boom!' and then 'Boom!' again," said Adam Mashia, 65, who lives less than a mile from the plant. "It knocked me to the floor and as I was getting up, it knocked me down again."

People in Slidell, 45 miles distant, said they also felt the blast. And 42 people, including 17 Shell employees, were treated at hospitals.

The fire that broke out in the refinery forced the evacuation of about 2,500 residents until it was brought under control about 5½ hours later.

Authorities said they were waiting for the plant's remains to cool down today before searching for the missing men, also Shell employees.

Fred Foster, manager of Shell's Norco complex, said Shell has established a claims center for victims.

He also said a special team of company investigators, joined by state and federal authorities would begin looking for the cause of the blast once the plant cooled down.

Alan Migliore, who lives about three blocks from the refinery complex, said: "I was sleeping in the kitchen and it knocked me to the floor. From there, I looked up and could see that the whole area to the Shell was on fire. ... It blew both of the front doors in, and the deadbolts took the frames out."

Damage at the refinery complex alone was expected to run into the millions of dollars, said Shell spokesman Phil Schwin. The accident ruptured the catalytic cracker, which converts crude oil to gasoline, and seriously damaged control rooms and other facilities.

Residents of this town on the heavily industrialized, 75-mile petrochemical corridor said they are fed up over recurring emergencies that have forced them to evacuate their homes eight times in 12 years.

"People were literally frightened out of their minds," said New Orleans attorney J.T. Hill, who filed a $25 billion lawsuit within hours of the explosion.

"I didn't know what happened," said another resident, Paul Dauzat, 55. "I went to look out the window and my wife said, 'Why are you looking out the window? The door is off.'"

The dead man was identified by company officials as Shell employee Lloyd Gregoire, 39, of Paulina.

Damage was sustained on both sides of the mile-wide Mississippi River, and Shell Oil said people needing repair materials could charge them to the company's account at lumber yards on the river's east and west banks.

In Baton Rouge, Gov. Buddy Roemer said he didn't plan to ask for federal disaster assistance because of Shell's willingness to accept responsibility for the damages.

Just inside the gates of the Shell complex was a sign with the familiar Shell logo, saying "Complex Safe Days 616." As the fire continued, workers took the sign down.

Arab-American resistance leader is ordered deported

JERUSALEM (AP) — Police arrested an Arab-American leader of the Palestinian civil disobedience movement and ordered him deported, Israeli officials said today. A government spokesman accused him of advocating violence.

A Jewish settler shot and killed a Palestinian shepherd Thursday and wounded another in the eye. Israel radio also reported that troops shot and wounded a 15-year-old Arab boy in the Gaza Strip town of Khan Yunis.

Sources who demanded anonymity said U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering would protest the ordered deportation of Murbarak Awad, who was arrested at his Jerusalem home at midnight (6 p.m. EDT Thursday). U.S. Embassy officials said they had no information on such a protest.

In 1985 Awad established the Center for Non-Violent Studies in Jerusalem, which calls on Palestinians to peacefully resist the Israeli occupation of Arab lands captured during the 1967 Middle East war.

Leaders of the 5-month-old Palestinian uprising have adopted many elements of Awad's non-violence strategy. Awad also provided tours and information to foreign journalists covering the unrest.

Avi Pazner, spokesman for Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, said Awad was ordered deported because he had gone beyond his calls for non-violent protest and was responsible for leaflets that urged Palestinians to throw gasoline bombs and stones.

"This is preaching violence," Pazner said.

The move to deport Awad followed a crackdown on leaders of the uprising, 20 of whom have been deported into Lebanon.

Israel has also jailed 21 Arab journalists, including one Thursday, in an effort to stifle news coverage of the protests.

Benjamin Yaari, deputy legal adviser of the Interior Ministry, said Awad was given the deportation order Thursday and that he has three days to appeal to Israel's supreme court.

Awad, 44, who also has a home in Wapakoneta, Ohio, was in Israel under a tourist visa that expired last November, and he refused an order to leave the country. Awad was allowed to remain following strong U.S. pressure against the previous expulsion order.

Awad was taken to the Jerusalem jail Thursday.

"He called me later and said: 'Nancy call the lawyer, I have the (deportation) paper,'" said Awad's wife, Nancy Nye. "The telephone connection was then cut off."

Authorities on Thursday arrested Elias M. Zananiri, managing editor of the Arab weekly Al Awdah and of the Palestine Press Service. The authorities have closed the Arab-run press service and Al Awdah, which also has an English edition.

Police spokesman Rafi Levy said Zananiri would be held for at least 48 hours for investigation on charges of incitement to riot.

The Palestinian death toll in the uprising that began Dec. 8 rose to 184 Thursday after a confrontation near the West Bank village of Turmus Aiyah, 17 miles northeast of Jerusalem.

Israel radio said the clash started when a Jewish woman spotted several Palestinian shepherds in a field. The woman panicked and called for help, and armed settlers as well as Arab villagers rushed to the scene.

It said the Arabs began to throw stones and a settler "opened fire, apparently at the stonethrowers, killing one and wounding another."

An Arab reporter from east Jerusalem's Al Quds newspaper said Jude Abdallah Awad, 28, was shot in the head and killed when the settlers tried to drive away

Palestinians working in their fields.

Rizik Abu Naim, 29, was wounded in the right eye when he tried to rescue Awad, said the reporter, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Strike reported still on in Nowa Huta

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Police ringed the strikebound Lenin shipyard early today and workers inside said they expected an assault. Workers at a huge southern steel mill said a raid by riot troops had not ended their stoppage.

Shortly before midnight, police convoys moved about this Baltic port in a show of force. Inside the Lenin shipyard, Solidarity leader Lech Walesa circulated among tense young strikers, trying to keep up spirits.

He vowed to be "the last to leave" the yard, where the now-outlawed free trade union movement was born.

Opposition activists said at least 32 strikers, including a man whose legs were broken, had to be treated for beatings suffered when security forces stormed the Nowa Huta steelworks outside Krakow on Thursday.

The government denied anyone was injured in the pre-dawn raid.

Most leaders of the 10-day occupation strike in Nowa Huta were among 38 people arrested after being stunned awake with deafening percussion grenades. Six of the strike committee's 16 members escaped, according to a statement issued in their name that called on workers to stay home.

The state-run news agency PAP reported absenteeism of up to 40 percent at the steel mill, Poland's largest. Workers leaving the combine during a shift change Thursday said many employees were showing up but refusing to work.

PAP said some departments resumed work and others remained idle.

Actor George Rose dies in car crash

PUERTO PLATA, Dominican Republic (AP) — British actor George Rose, who won Broadway's Tony award for "My Fair Lady" and "Drood," died when his car swerved into a ditch and flipped over in this Caribbean resort, police said.

He was 68. Police said the accident occurred about 10:30 p.m. Wednesday less than a mile east of Puerto Plata, but authorities were not aware of it until the vehicle was found at 6 a.m. Thursday.

Police officer Jose Nunez said Rose apparently was alone and that the car was traveling at high speed when it swerved off the road and into a ditch, rolling over several times. He said Rose died instantly.

Nunez said Rose was traveling west from the seaside town of Sosua, where he had a home, to nearby Puerto Plata on the north coast of the Dominican Republic 160 miles northwest of the capital, Santo Domingo. He was taken to the Ricardo Limardo Hospital in Puerto Plata.

Rose, considered an archetype of the British character actor, had lived in New York City since 1961. He won Broadway's coveted Antoinette Perry award in 1976 as best actor in a musical for his performance in a revival of "My Fair Lady." In 1986, he won a second Tony for his star role in "Drood."

The resourceful, inventive Rose was equally at home in drama, comedy and musicals. He attributed his versatility to "an interest that ranges widely over a number of things" and to "a solid belief in technique."

George Walter Rose was born on Feb. 19, 1920, in Bicester, England, about 12 miles north of Oxford. He was the only child of Eva Sarah Rose and Walter John Alfred Rose, a butcher and farmer.

He attended classes at Trinity College of Music in London and later studied for the stage at the Central School of Speech and Drama.

From a school bulletin board notice, he secured a part-time position as an offstage singer in Tyrone Guthrie's "Peer Gynt." From then on, he learned his craft mostly in the Old Vic Company and other English classical repertory companies.

He served three years in the British military during World War II and was discharged for medical reasons.

Rose made his American debut with the Old Vic in 1946 in the role of Petio in a production of "Henry IV," but first attracted national attention in 1961 for his portrayal of the Common Man in "A Man for All Seasons."

Rose had scores of film and television roles to his credit, but was in his element before a live audience.

He was quoted as telling The New York Times in an interview in 1983: "When I have a stage to go on, it's like putting a fish in water."

Wright tells Sandinistas to ease demands

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright is warning Nicaragua's Sandinista leaders that Congress will condemn any attempt to take advantage of the peace process to snuff out remaining opposition from the Contra rebels.

Wright, along with the Reagan administration, expressed concern Thursday that the rebels may be winding up on the losing side of an unbalanced equation in talks aimed at reaching a long-term cease fire in their seven-year war.

"The message will be given to the ... Sandinista government that the majority in the Congress would not look with favor at all on any return or resort to military engagement," Wright, D-Texas, told reporters.

Representatives from the rebels' political directorate, the Nicaraguan Resistance, were in Washington this week arguing their case before State Department officials, members of Congress and the news media. They accused the leftist government of dragging its feet in the peace talks in order to stall U.S. "humanitarian" aid for the rebels.

Adolfo Calero, leader of the Contra directorate, said the $48 million aid package passed a month ago was intended to keep the rebels alive as a fighting force inside Nicaragua during a 60-day truce, while negotiations went forward on a longer-term cease fire.

"That is being thwarted by the Sandinistas," he said. "It's broken down. In Nicaragua, there are no steps being taken at present toward reconciliation."

Wright said he had asked State Department officials at a meeting earlier in the day to expedite aid money to the rebels, including at least part of $10 million earmarked to pay the expenses of a verification commission to oversee the peace process.

Without aid soon, he said, "the pressure would be entirely on the Contras, they would wither on the vine and there would be no incentive for the Sandinistas to negotiate in good faith."

But he said Congress wants equally to avoid giving the rebels the "false impression that we want (them) to rev up the war again," and admonished the Contra leaders to continue peace efforts.

"A near miracle happened at Esquipulas," the town in Guatemala where the original regional peace accord was signed last Aug. 7, the House leader said. "A near miracle happened March 23 at Sapoa," when the two sides agreed to a 60-day cease-fire. "Let's work for the third miracle."

"We assured him we would continue to make it work," said Enrique Bermudez, the rebel military commander, who joined the directorate in a meeting with Wright. "We will make an effort to continue negotiating."

Discussions on a long-term cease fire have bogged down, and the situation has been complicated by a dispute in Contra ranks over negotiating strategy and who is to provide military leadership.

Tornado victims still putting lives back together

By EDMUND S. TIJERINA
Bay City Tribune

VAN VLECK (AP) — Virginia Cervantes leaves her driveway on Texas 35 and makes a sign of the cross as she turns to look at the twisted wreckage of a trailer house.

A killer tornado devastated this town on the day before last Thanksgiving and residents are still picking up the pieces of their shattered lives.

The debris scattered throughout this tiny Matagorda hamlet is a constant reminder of an event most residents would rather forget.

Miguel Pinagua lost his wife and daughter in the Nov. 25 storm when his mobile home overturned, trapping them inside.

"I'll tear it (the trailer) down," Pinagua says through an interpreter. "I have lots of friends to help me out."

Pinagua, an unemployed welder, says he has cleaned up some debris around the trailer.

"It's hard to be there," he says. "The memories are still there. It's hard but I will get it done."

Pinagua has three other children, whom he sent to live with his mother in Guanajuato, Mexico.

Friends of the family say the mother who died, Janie, took care of a lot of family business for her husband, children, father and grandmother.

"She was incredible," says Celeste Garza, who attended school with Janie until the latter dropped out of school in the eighth grade to marry Miguel.

"She took care of everybody."

Elida Garza, a volunteer with the Red Cross and a friend of the family, says Pinagua received offers to have the trailer knocked down, but refuses to part with it.

"He just can't let it go," Garza says. "He's been offered a new trailer as soon as he clears away the old one. Bue he can't. They never found Janie's rings. That's probably at least part of the reason."

Garza says Pinagua was approached by people who tried to have him sue the manufacturer of the trailer.

"Some investigators came in from Corpus," Garza says.

"These people follow disasters to make a buck. Miguel came to me because he didn't know how to tell them to leave him alone."

Peggy Mote, executive director of the local Red Cross, says the national Red Cross supplied Pinagua with $7,200 worth of assistance for clothing, groceries, other essentials, and found Pinagua a rental home and supplied him with the first month's rent.

Garza says the children received donated toys from local residents, but had to pay duty on them at the border.

Pete Cervantes and his daughter-in-law, Olivia, sit inside Cervantes' home behind the battered trailer and reflect on the event.

"It's a sad reminder," says Olivia. "Io's always there. Especially her (Janie), we (treated) her as part of the family. We know it's hard on him (Miguel) too."

"I haven't talked much to him since it happened," says Pete. "I was the first one there when it happened. I tried to clean it up. But I can't do it all by myself."

Morris Roberts and his wife, Mysterious, were in the house when the tornado hit. The front wall of the house was ripped off by the winds, but they escaped unharmed. The front robm and the roofs were repaired, and their son fixed their front porch.

The two adjacent houses owned by Roberts were completely destroyed by the storm.

Both Morris and Mysterious were thankful to the Sugar Valley

Church for assistance.

"I don't know what we would have done without their help," says Morris. "It was a miracle."

Morris, a retired longshoreman, says he has been disabled for the past 15 years. He also was hospitalized this spring following a heart attack.

"Ain't been able to do nothing since the heart attack hit me," says Morris. "I would like for the house to be straight for my wife."

Although they are grateful the storm spared their lives, they have no way of rebuilding the damage that relief efforts do not cover.

"There's nothing we can do and that's the truth," says Morris. "Just wait for the Lord to help us."

Newspapers top business info choice

NEW YORK (AP) — Where do people turn for financial information?

According to a recent survey reported by Financial Services Week, newspapers were the main source of information for 47 percent of persons surveyed, while 37 percent cited magazines as giving them important financial information.

The publication, a financial planners' journal, also reported that only 13 percent said they consulted their bankers and tax preparers; 23 percent their accountants; 24 percent family and friends. Thirteen percent said they kept their own counsel and had not had any financial advice from anyone during the previous year.

ALL Beef Producers: May 10th Determines Your Future

In this year of elections, the last thing you need is someone else talking to you about politics or your responsibility to other beef producers. It's a busy time of the year, and you've got your mind on your operation, not on going to town.

But, on Tuesday, May 10th, if you don't stop for a few minutes, go to your County Extension Office and vote, you'll miss the referendum that decides the fate of the Beef Checkoff Program.

Just a couple of years ago, our industry was being beaten up, and we were backing up . . . taking it.

But we got our backs up and did something.

We drew a line in the dust.

We began to fight back. And you know what . . . it's working.

Many people are eating beef more often, and the newspaper headlines read that beef is coming back.

Now, we're not telling you how to vote. That's your business. But, on Tuesday, May 10th, the National Beef Checkoff Program is going to continue, or it's going to stop dead in its tracks.

It's totally up to you. So take a trip to your County Extension Office and vote.

You'll be glad you did.

California memorial depicts scenes from Vietnam

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — The names of the dead encircle scenes of what life was like then, much like the memories of the dead swirl around those who fought in the Vietnam War and lived.

The California Vietnam Veterans Memorial has the names marching in an orderly circle, carved in granite, quiet testimony to sacrifice and duty and the death of young people on the field of battle.

But inside, there is a young man reading a letter from home. There is a scene of a Marine taking a bath in a pond, while wearing a flak jacket and a helmet. There are nurses caring for the wounded.

There are young men playing cards and eating Army food. There are young men in combat.

"This is for guys who are parents now. So they can show this to their kids and say, 'This is what your Dad did. That's the way things were and that's the way we did things,'" said B.T. Collins quietly, as his left hand fingered the stainless steel hook where his right hand should be.

Collins and the other members of the memorial commission were taking a tour of the Nordhamer Foundry in Oakland in a residential neighborhood near Lake Merritt.

These were people, all of them veterans of Vietnam, who had conceived, planned and tried to fund the memorial to those who fought in America's last war.

They were seeing various pieces of the memorial for the first time, seeing in form what had only been drawings during months and months of painstaking fund-raising work that still remains substantially short of its goal.

Amid the controlled clutter of the foundry, several plates had been laid on the floor, showing scenes forged in bronze, based on photographs taken in Vietnam.

In another room, a mannequin was arranged in the pose of what will be the memorial's central figure — a soldier, sitting without helmet, weapon at rest against his knee, looking up from a letter.

"It's a real personal memorial," said Michael Larson, co-designer, who served with the U.S. Marine Corps in Chu Lai. "I think the Vietnam veterans who go to it will like it a lot. By and large I think there is going to be a wonderful shock of recognition, a feeling of 'At last, here's one about us.'"

Not much competition for this construction job

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Clarence Hughes has carved himself a giant market niche with his midget stature.

At 60, he is a construction worker who goes where few others can: inside small water, drainage and irrigation pipes, sealing joints and trouble-shooting.

"I have worked in pipe as small as 16 inches," Hughes said. "That was when they flew me in for a job in North Carolina — they needed a leak fixed."

The 4-foot-tall Tempe resident grins as he acknowledges that his unique services always seem to be in demand.

"Me, I don't have to worry about work," he said. "Word of mouth's always been the best advertising for me."

He has been called in as a trouble-shooter on construction projects in four states but prefers to work close to home.

"I love it," Hughes said. "With construction, every day is different. You get to work in different surroundings all the time. It's not the same old grind every day, so it keeps everything interesting."

When he goes into a pipe, Hughes wears a headlamp similar to those worn by miners. He carries a trowel and wet cement to band the seam where the spigot of one pipe fits into the bell end of another.

Most pipe banders have to stoop to work inside a 60-inch pipe, but Hughes has to strain to reach the entire seam.

"The 60-inch pipe is as big as I can go," he said, adding that he can almost stand up inside a 42-inch pipe but has to stoop to work in a 36-incher.

His specialty, though, is small pipes.

At a road-improvement project in Chandler, he was called on to crawl into an 18-inch irrigation line to repair a leak deep below an intersection of streets.

"It really rumbles in there when the cars go by over you," he said, "but the sound doesn't bother me."

Neither, obviously, do cramped quarters.

"I can turn over in 18-inch pipe," he said. "I can't turn around in there, but I just back out. I've seen some guys get in a tight spot, panic, and start hollering. Not me. If you have claustrophobia, this isn't the job for you."

Hughes discovered his unusual calling 30 years ago when a friend overheard his contractor boss muttering that he wished someone could crawl inside a 24-inch pipe to repair a problem.

"When I was about 8 or 9, I used to think I was handicapped, that I was the only guy in the whole world like this," he said. "But then I realized that what really matters is believing in yourself. If you don't have self-confidence, it's no good."

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

MOTHER

It is so important that a child feel secure and loved the first weeks and months of its life. Our foremost authorities say that if a child's spiritual and emotional welfare is neglected in the early weeks of life, there is a great chance of permanent damage to its personality growth.

Therefore, on this day, we honor not only the beloved mothers of our adults and youth, but the very young mother who has both the tremendous responsibility and the precious opportunity to mold the life and character of the very young child. May she seek early God's help, who in the person of the Son, said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Coleman Adv. Ser.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Surely goodness and love will follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever. (Psalm 23:6 NIV)

I'll never forget the day I turned twenty.

I had given birth to my first baby two weeks earlier; I had everything I had always wanted: a husband, a beautiful baby girl, a comfortable home and reasonable financial security. However, my 20th birthday found me feeling like I was a hundred years old and never going to feel young again. I was a regular Sarah Heartburn!

Of course, the depression went away and I go on with my life. However, I spent my twenties focused on the ticks of the clock that marked my passing youth.

During the time, I had two more babies, and I added a new worry. I loved having babies in the house, and I sincerely believed I'd never be happy again when the girls were no longer babies. Thank goodness God knew better than to let me forever have a baby in the house!

Sometime during my early thirties, I realized that while I was no longer sixteen, neither was I dead. I learned to enjoy all life's stages and life has been beautiful ever since.

I have enjoyed watching my daughters grow up (with the exception of potty training). I have even liked their teen years (with the exception of teaching them to drive). And now their leaving the nest has the sweetness and ripeness of mutual fulfillment.

And I've enjoyed the changes in my own life and the maturing of my marriage which gets better with the passing years.

Now my hair gets whiter by the minute. New wrinkles and sags look back at me from my mirror. For no reason at all (couldn't be that I eat too much), extra pounds fill out the pleats in my slacks. And, yet, life is still delicious.

However, several recent events in the lives of some older friends had left me apprehensive about the unknown factors of the coming years of senescence. But something beautiful happened to give me an attitude adjustment.

The senior citizens club of my church sang at a Sunday evening worship service. Many of the participants have endured crushing losses and most have suffered health reversals. Yet they sang with God's glory shining in their faces!

What a high! They reminded me God's goodness and love doesn't dwindle as our bodies wind down. He blesses us all the days of our lives; and that's just the beginning!

NASHVILLE (AP) — Southern Baptist membership grew to 14,727,770 in 1987, up 109,203, or about .7 percent, but it was the smallest annual growth since 1936.

Baptisms also declined to 338,495, down 24,629 or 6.8 percent from the year before and the lowest total since 1949.

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — With political campaigns rolling, United Methodist churches and other organizations have been warned that either supporting or opposing a particular candidate could mean loss of federal tax exemption.

Craig R. Hoskins, staff attorney of the denomination's council on finance, says nothing prohibits individual participation in campaigns, but church organizations "risk losing their tax-exempt status" if they get involved.

The seminar, which continues Saturday and Sunday, is offered free of charge to the public, with no collections to be taken up. Free handout materials on the seminar topics also will be available.

Speaker for all six sessions is Dr. Bert Thompson, former professor of veterinary public health, College of Veterinary Medicine, Texas A&M University. He is currently professor of Bible and science at Alabama Christian School of Religion at Montgomery, Ala.

Topic for tonight's session is "The Creation/Evolution Controversy of the 1980s."

Saturday sessions are: 10 a.m., "Creation or Evolution—Which? Part 1, dealing with dinosaurs, etc."; 2 p.m., "Creation or Evolution—Which, Part 2, dealing with fossils, etc."; and 7:30 p.m., "The Scientific Case for Creation."

Sunday sessions are: 9:30 a.m., "Scientific Evidence for the Bible's Inspiration" and 10:30 a.m., "The Effect of Evolution on the Home, Church and Nation."

Buddhist temple offers meditation space

By LAYLAN COPELIN
Austin American-Statesman

LEANDER (AP) — The Rev. Thich Tri-Hue sits cross-legged on a floor pillow, instructing his visitors on the physical and mental benefits of meditation.

In the corner of the sanctuary, a worshiper lights candles, kneels and prays. A white cat, a gift to this Buddhist temple, strolls the almost-empty room, looking for attention. He rubs up against the monk's brown robe, and Tri-Hue responds with gentle strokes as he tries to explain Buddhist teachings first handed down about 2,500 years ago.

Dominating this scene is a smiling golden statue of Buddha — so bulky that it took 10 men to install it on its lofty altar — sitting in front of a replica of a bodhi tree. Five rings of light — orange, white, red, yellow and blue — encircle Buddha's head.

The lights are neon. The bodhi tree, where legend says Buddha was sitting when he became enlightened, is made of spray-painted newspaper, chicken wire and artificial leaves. The scenic mountain and river backdrop was bought at retail.

East meets West in Leander. Once an agricultural community, the 2,000 inhabitants have seen their lives change as Austin's northwesterly sprawl reshaped this country with subdivisions and new neighbors.

The Buddhist temple is a bright yellow structure with a fiery red roof. It sits on a curve in Ranch Road 2243, three miles west of Leander.

For the past four years, Austin Buddhists have traveled to this sanctuary to worship, to meditate or to seek Tri-Hue's counsel. They come, usually one or two at a time, from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. any day of the week.

Five or six times a year, as many as 200 to 300 worshipers gather for special ceremonies such as Buddha's birthday.

Most of the worshipers, like Nhieu Ong, are Vietnamese. Ong acts as English interpreter for Tri-Hue, who speaks French and Vietnamese. Ong also is one of the 35 temple founders who has watched it grow out of an Austin duplex into the colorful Leander structure.

Ong said the Leander site was not chosen for its peaceful, rural setting. The prospect of cheap land, four acres for $17,000, tempted the temple founders, with their shoe-string budget, to leave Austin, Ong said.

"But I feel sorry for the people who have to drive an hour one way from South Austin," he said. "We would have preferred to stay in Austin."

Despite the commute for worshipers, the temple has flourished. A contractor built the shell of a large house and the temple founders finished the inside themselves. Two years later, a second, larger sanctuary was added.

The temple's greatest drawing card is Tri-Hue, a Vietnamese who left his job as a mechanical engineer in 1979 to pursue Buddhism full time. He is an ordained priest with the Linh-Son Temple,

Vision drives Texas oilman to spread Christ's message

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Midland Reporter-Telegram

MIDLAND (AP) — Midland oilman Thomas I. Coleman is driven by a vision. That vision: to use the resources of the oil industry to spread the gospel of Jesus Christ.

An independent landman and oil investor, Coleman was recently elected as national president of the 400-member Christian Oilmen's Association. The fledgling industry-religious organization already has chapters in oil centers such as Midland, Tulsa and Oklahoma City and Monroe, La., and plans to take its goals international.

hot meal daily to those in need. Other aims of the oilmen's group are to minister to Christian oilmen as a spiritual support system and provide a forum for fellowship among Christian oilmen. Says Coleman, "The oil business is a tough business and Christian oilmen need the prayers and support of other Christians — especially in times like these."

While the organization is charismatic in nature, Coleman, a lifelong Methodist, says it is open to Christians of all persuasions. "We believe and practice all the gifts of the Holy Spirit, but our members come from many different denominations."

Coleman, a member of the First United Methodist Church of Midland, says he will be on the road most of the year, organizing new chapters for the seven-year-old organization: "It is my intention to facilitate the vision of the Rev. Harold Bredesen."

The Christian Oilmen's Association was co-founded in 1981 by Bredesen, then a Lutheran minister, and the Rev. Stephen Barham, a Catholic priest. Bredesen claims that God spoke to him in a vision and told him that he would "release the oil riches to spread the gospel of the Kingdom to the ends of the earth."

To identify and support needy Christian ministries is one of the primary aims of the group. One of the projects being supported by the West Texas chapter, founded by Coleman, is Permian Basin Soup Kitchen, a facility on Midland's south side that provides a

A graduate of Southern Methodist University, Coleman has racked up a long and distinguished career in the oil industry, after getting off to a false start as a sportswriter for The Dallas Morning News in the late 1940s. "I got hungry," explains Coleman, who found the salary of a landman trainee for Cities Service decidedly more satisfying than that of a young journalist. After training in Dallas, he was sent to Roswell, N.M., where he served a three-year tour before joining Atlantic Richfield and moving to Midland where he has lived for the past 35 years.

Prior to forming his own independent oil company with his son, Kelly, two years ago, he was head landman for Midland-based Wagner & Brown for 10 years.

Coleman says after a lifetime of church-going he became a born-again Christian in 1970 after becoming involved in a Methodist Lay Witness Mission. "It changed my life," he says.

He says he hopes the Christian oilmen's group will also be instrumental in changing lives. "I think as oilmen we can reach other oilmen that the church probably could not reach," he said.

GENEVA (AP) — The number of Lutherans worldwide increased slightly last year from 58.5 million to 59.7 million, reports the Lutheran World Federation.

NEW YORK (AP) — Reform Judaism for years had opposed full-time Jewish schools but they now are flourishing in that movement across America, a survey finds.

The survey by Rabbi Julian I. Cook of Temple Sinai, Miami, Fla., finds 2,146 elementary school students in 10 Reform grade schools in that many cities.

Only in 1985 had the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, representing Reform Judaism, reversed its long standing-policy against Jewish day schools to encourage their development.

Other aims of the oilmen's group are to minister to Christian oilmen as a spiritual support system and provide a forum for fellowship among Christian oilmen. Says Coleman, "The oil business is a tough business and Christian oilmen need the prayers and support of other Christians — especially in times like these."

known — said a person must have the right views, intention, speech, action, livelihood, effort, mindfulness and concentration.

That pathway to enlightenment, with an emphasis on meditation and an inner journey to bliss, would seem to crash head-on with the pursuit of the American dream.

"In Western countries, people are looking for a luxury life, careers, self-esteem," said Tri-Hue. "Those things are impermanent. Sooner or later, they want to stop."

But Ong said Buddhism has not made him give up a typical American lifestyle.

"It makes you aware of not doing anything to harm yourself or others," he said. "It makes you do things good for your spirit, to be aware of the cause-and-effect of your actions."

Ong said there are other viewpoints among the local worshipers who span all ages and income levels. He said many, particular the elderly, worship Buddha as God and pray for divine intervention in their lives.

Whatever their belief, the Buddhists come, bringing flowers, fruit, incense and candles to decorate the altar. Tri-Hue leads them in chants, keeping beat with a wooden bell.

Others stroll the meditation garden that is being built on the side of the temple.

"They need a place to dump their sorrows," Ong said.

The temple also is a depository for language and culture.

Off to the side of the sanctuary is a room dedicated to a Vietnamese tradition. Photographs of dead relatives adorn an altar in a small prayer room.

Ultimately, Ong said the Leander temple will provide a youth program similar to one at a sister temple in Houston.

"The Buddhist youth group is a lot like the Boy Scouts," Ong said. "They have uniforms and go camping. On Sundays they get simple Buddhist teachings in Vietnamese."

But Ong said the temple is not just for Vietnamese. He said Buddhist worshipers from China, Sri Lanka, South Korea and Cambodia frequently attend.

Christians also are welcome, and may enroll in free classes on meditation.

Quaker center in Arizona faces problem of survival

By GENE VARN
The Arizona Republic

McNEAL, Ariz. (AP) — Beside U.S. 666 in the high desert flatland of the Sulphur Spring Valley is a small, inconspicuous sign that says "Friends Southwest Center."

Just beyond that sign on the outskirts of this community, a dot in the vast empty valley 30 miles north of Douglas and the border with Mexico, is another, smaller sign that says, "Quaker Way."

Within is what the residents call "a dream coming true on 68 acres."

That dream, begun 15 years ago, was to create "a saner, more economical place to live among humane, kindred spirits," regardless of whether they be members of the Religious Society of Friends, commonly called Quakers, according to a pamphlet put out by the center.

The only qualifications demanded of those pursuing that dream, according to Elizabeth Campuzano, 79, president of the corporation that owns the center, are adherence to the "Quaker principles of peace, non-violence, equality, simple living."

That formula has worked, creating a self-sustaining community that has never numbered more than 15 people, according to Jane Scott, 81, one of the founders.

But now the dream is growing old.

Most of the six who began constructing the center on farmland in the middle of nowhere in 1973 were in their 60s and 70s, still energetic and driven by their dream.

Now, near the hodgepodge of mobile homes and houses that make up the center is a small cemetery, a stark reminder of the problem confronting the community: survival.

"We've struggled with this for years," said Ms. Scott, who retired in the mid-1970s as a teacher at a now-defunct Tucson girls school.

The newest full-time resident, Elizabeth Ann Piercey, 72, a retired teacher from Michigan who came to the center two years ago, said her main concern was that so many of those who lived there were elderly.

These days, residents don't rush out as often to take part in their social and political causes, which have included picketing the now-closed Phelps Dodge Corp. copper smelter in Douglas and the Palo Verde Nuclear Power Station west of Phoenix.

Over the years, the residents have been supporters of the sanctuary movement that aids refugees from the strife in Central America, have established an American Civil Liberties Union chapter in Bisbee and a National Organization for Women chapter in Douglas.

But whatever their political and social causes, the residents always have focused their attention on the simple life they have created at the center, a quiet life of solitude and reflection. Gazing at the sunset as it reflects off the Swisshelm Mountains to the east and the Mule Mountains to the west can be a high point of the day.

"We live independently here, and a person needs a good deal of inner resources," Ms. Campuzano said.

A few who have tried living at the center over the years have moved on because "they were clearly urban persons, people who have to have concerts, museums, things going on all over town," she said.

Another problem for a few is the governing of the center, which is done in the Quaker tradition of consensus, meaning that all must agree on any action.

New book aids in Tennessee research

Often the missing link in genealogical research is land ownership, and deed abstractions can be time consuming. JOYCE MARTIN MURRAY, 2921 Daniels, Dallas, 75205, has recently released the hard cover book, Sumner County, Tennessee Deed Abstracts 1793-1805.

Murray is to be commended for her efforts and courthouse work. She does an excellent job and is very thorough from beginning to finish, including the index.

In 1790, Sumner County included the present-day counties of Sumner, Pickett, Jackson, Smith, Cannon, Macon, Fentress, Trousdale, Putnam, De Kalb, Clay, Overton, Wilson and Rutherford.

Murray notes that although the deed books are marked beginning 1793, a very large number were executed in the 1770s and 1780s.

The abstractions list the sellers, purchasers, date, witnesses, acreage and price, and give a location of the land by the names of the neighbors or nearby rivers and roads. Many times the present and former residents are listed.

Gena on Genealogy

Gena Walls

Included are slave sales which often state relationships, powers of attorney, wills, bills of sale and deeds of gift.

The book has three full indexes: surname and Christian name, slaves and places. Purchase price for Texans (including postage, handling and tax) is $28.75 and can be ordered from Murray.

Others books of the same fine quality by Joyce Martin Murray are Deed Abstracts of Warren County, Kentucky 1797-1812; Deed Abstracts of Warren County, Kentucky 1812-1821; and three in an Early Texas Series, Red River County, Texas Deed Abstracts, Vol. 1 (To Statehood, 19 Feb. 1846); Washington County, Texas Deed Abstracts 1823-1841; and Austin County, Texas Deed Abstracts 1837-1852.

Any of these books may save you time and a trip to the county courthouse. Also, if you locate the record via the book, you will know exactly what copies to request from the county clerk.

Man's AIDS is bitter legacy for widow

DEAR ABBY: I am a 59-year-old, college-educated, retired professional woman. My husband — a professional man — died of AIDS three years ago. He was not in a high-risk group. Because he was a family man, and because AIDS was unknown in our area, the doctors never thought to test him for the virus until about a week before he died. The results were positive, but these did not come back until after his funeral, and more important for me, after the death certificate was signed. So the certificate bore no stigma, and there was no publicity.

Because not much was known at the time (at least around here) about how AIDS is transmitted, our adult children were tested for the virus at the same time I was. Now, of course, we know that testing the kids was unnecessary because they neither had sex nor shared needles with my husband, and had no contact with his blood. Naturally, their tests were negative. I, on the other hand, tested positive, and was tested again to make certain there was no mistake. Positive again.

I want to make it absolutely clear that there was no anal intercourse — only normal penile-vaginal (missionary) intercourse in my case. I was told that the odds of a straight, monogamous, drug-free person getting this disease is about 5 million-to-1, but that doesn't help if you're the one in 5 million!

So far, I am still healthy but I have the virus — the virus I got

Dear Abby

from "normal" intercourse. Abby, I implore you to alert your reading audience to my message. If this happened to me, it can happen to any straight, monogamous woman.

There may be many, perhaps thousands, of women like me. There are no records on us because as I understand it, only full-blown AIDS, and perhaps AIDS-related complex cases, are reported to the CDC. Carriers are not reported. And if these women are like me, they are telling NO ONE.

Of course, I am not sexually active. But those who are must inform their partners, and insist on the use of a condom, which may still carry some risks, but is considerably safer. To do otherwise is tantamount to murder.

ANONYMOUS WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: You are courageous to have written, and I thank you for wanting to warn other women. The message here is: A sexually active monogamous woman can be at risk from "normal" intercourse if her partner is infected with the AIDS virus.

DEAR ABBY: I have some good news for the 60-year-old Ohio farmer who, though married, had not experienced marital relations for many years.

The last 12 years of a previous 35-year marriage were also void of all marital relations. As a healthy male, this caused me considerable frustration. At 53, I wondered if I had become impotent.

At age 65, my sexless marriage was terminated when my wife died. Shortly after, I ran into a former high school sweetheart whose marriage had been terminated (unknown to me) 12 years earlier! Our romance resumed and we were married on Valentine's Day.

Abby, I have no idea how old one must be when the bells stop ringing, but at 65, they rang again for me, and life was every bit as exciting (romantically speaking) as it had been 40 years ago.

It takes the right partner to return love and affection in the same manner it is given. Thank God for my lovely bride!

I am signing my name, and you may use it.

WILLIAM HUFFMAN,
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

DEAR MR. HUFFMAN: And thank you for giving me permission to publish your wonderful letter.

Man collects cigarette packs

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The saying that one man's trash is another man's treasure could be true.

Consider C.J. Simpson. He collects empty cigarette wrappers. He began doing so after high school football games. Today, the retired policeman has a rare collection of 7,000 different cigarette packs and 20,000 cigar bands. Simpson is one of the more than 230 members of the Cigarette Pack Collector Association.

"There's a nostalgia and an art value to cigarette packs," says association executive director Dick Elliot. "No one knows exactly how many cigarette brands have been introduced, but we think it's somewhere between 30,000 and 50,000 since the late 1800s."

Get help fast for heart attack

NEW YORK (AP) — The importance of getting to a hospital early at the first sign of a heart attack is being stressed by the American Heart Association (AHA), which says that of the more than a half-million Americans who suffer fatal heart attacks each year, two-thirds die before ever reaching a hospital. Although most Americans could recognize signs of a heart attack, according to a recent national survey sponsored by Genentech Inc., most heart attack victims wait an average of three hours or more before seeking medical help, AHA adds.

Early treatment is particularly important with the availability now of new therapies that can stop a heart attack in progress.

Mavericks eliminate Rockets

HOUSTON (AP) — Dallas guard Mark Aguirre's sleep walk through the NBA first-round playoffs against Houston has ended.

Aguirre scored 38 points, including a club-record 27 points in the third quarter, as the Mavericks eliminated Houston from the NBA playoffs with a 107-97 victory Thursday night.

"He was sort of a sleeping giant in the playoffs and he woke up for the last game," Houston forward Jim Petersen said. "He played a great game."

Aguirre, held to a 15-point average through the first three games of the playoffs, stunned the Rockets by hitting 9 of 10 shots in the third quarter and six straight from the free throw line.

It was a knockout punch for the Rockets, who once again were led by Akeem Olatunji with 40 points, 15 rebounds and little supporting cast.

The Mavericks won the best-of-five game first round series 3-1.

"The guy just had the shots and there was no stopping him, I just didn't do my part," said Rodney McCray, who had to defend Aguirre. "He was just a better player tonight. He hasn't had a great series, but he had a great game."

The Mavericks took a 46-44 halftime lead, aided by five Houston turnovers in the final 1:47.

Optimist basketball roundup

Celanese broke open a pitching duel between Tracy Peet and Hank Gindorf in the bottom of the fifth to defeat Celanese 12-2 Thursday night in a Major League Bambino game.

Peet yielded just one hit in five innings while striking out eight and walking seven for Cabot. The game was called after five innings due to the 10-run rule.

Celanese's only hit was a double by Gindorf, who pitched well until the fifth when Cabot rallied from a 2-1 deficit.

Josh Gafford led off the fifth with a walk, Lanny Schale reached base on a throwing error and Chris Gilbert doubled in both runners. Chad Parks highlighted the big inning with a 3-run homer.

Others with hits for Cabot were Michael Foote, a double and single, and Andy Sutton with a double and two RBI, and Kyle Parnell, a single.

Gindorf gave up seven hits while striking out eight and walking four. The Optimist baseball program will have its opening day festivities May 14 with a barbeque and several games scheduled at Optimist Park.

Public Notice

Notice to KINGSMILL COMMUNITY WATER SUPPLY CORPORATION Customers:
 The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has adopted requirements that all public water systems notify their customers about lead exposure. This notification is intended to educate and inform consumers on this issue in light of the fact that your drinking water may be a potential source of lead exposure. This is being done even though your water system is not in violation of the current standard. There are also other potential sources of lead contamination in the environment.

The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of .050 parts per billion (ppb). Based on new health information, the EPA is likely to lower this standard significantly.

Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard. The EPA and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women.

Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest:

1. if your home or water system has lead pipes, or
2. if your home has copper pipes with lead solder, and
3. if your home is less than five years old, or
4. if you have soft or acidic water, or
5. if water sits in the pipes for several hours.

Ways to avoid potential lead exposure are to "flush" faucets before use and to use cold water for drinking and cooking. You may wish to have your home tap water tested for lead content by a competent laboratory. The EPA estimates that a test should cost between $20.00 and $75.00. You

Gramm-Rudman law needed in high school athletics

SADLY, AND FRIGHTENINGLY, many incumbents and seekers of seats in the United States Congress do not understand the necessity of the Gramm-Rudman law or President Reagan's constant seeking of a line-item veto. Or if they do understand, they are too ego-oriented to want what's best for the general public.

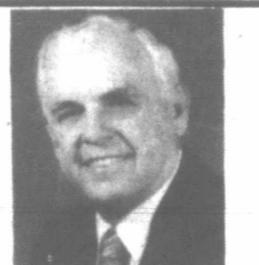

What does this have to do with sports? Simply that many of the school administrations, school boards and athletic directors in the state have the same problem. The great necessity for such legislation is that those who have the authority — the congress and athletic administrators alike — do not have the necessary self-control.

That was brought back into clear focus again this week with arrival of The Leaguer, official publication of the University Interscholastic League, governing body of extra-curricular activity among Texas' public schools. A front-page item, marked for further special emphasis, tells of a recent joint meeting of two statewide groups concerned about problems, primarily within the athletic community in the area of off-season and out-of-season participation. As the result of the two-day session, the League staff was mandated to produce three model rules for presentation later this month to the committees for review. The three models must offer varying options, from highly restrictive control of out-of-season participation by students, to one moderately restrictive, to one totally non-restrictive. Whatever is ultimately decided it must still progress through several committees before becoming part of the League's Constitution and Contest Rules book.

The problem, of course, is multiple. Why can golfers not play in a summer tournament and accept awards, but band and choir members can perform outside the school system and get paid for services. Why can't athletes accept certain awards, but persons who compete in office skills competition can use those same skills to earn money? Those general eligibility rules are being looked at closely, in an effort to close the gap. And athletics has its own separate problems concerning participation during and outside the school year. The final decision is expected to come down to a split of programs into two groups: individual and team activities.

Sports Forum

By Warren Hasse

But the main concern of alert and involved administrators has to do with the out-of-season weightlifting and practice sessions. If the correct and proper decision is made, it will appear anti-football rather than pro-student (for whom the programs are financed by the taxpayers). And since most athletic directors are also currently active or one-time football coaches, they are expected to fight hard to protect their weight programs, which are generally injurious to other boys sports programs.

That's why a Gramm-Rudman type law forcing self-control of school athletic activities, is needed in the UIL books, one stronger than currently in place. Hopefully it will occur...but don't hold your breath, because first consideration is NOT the students in many, if not most, programs.

One can understand why Algebra I is a prerequisite for Algebra II, or Latin I for Latin II, or Typing I for Typing II. But it is totally impossible to understand why, or accept any reasoning for, participation in football being mandatory before it is permissible to play middle school basketball or track; or why weight lifting is a pre-requisite for boys baseball or track, using up valuable and needed skills development time for those sports in an attempt to build muscles and skills for football the year round.

UIL Director of Athletics Dr. Bill Farney knows it's a problem. We've talked about it several times,

WIN AT '88 HONDA PRELUDE

Take the Clara Johnson Challenge, and the next Honda you start could be a 1988 Honda Prelude!

The Clara Johnson Test is the final quality check of every Honda lawn mower. If Clara pulls and it starts... it's a Honda!

Now, we're challenging you to try the same test at the participating Honda lawn mower dealer nearest you. See for yourself how Honda has engineered exceptional reliability and performance into every mower we sell.

And, just for taking the Clara Johnson Challenge, we'll register you for a chance to win an exciting new 1988 Honda Prelude Sports Coupe!

But hurry! Registration ends May 21st.

No purchase necessary. Open to licensed drivers 18 and older. See your participating lawn mower dealer for additional details and official rules.

For optimum performance and safety, we recommend you read the owner's manual before operating your Honda Power Equipment. © 1988 American Honda Motor Co., Inc.
